

Hootstein postmark forgeries – a checklist

Rob May FRICS

On 26 February 2010 at Southampton Crown Court Robert George, aged 67, agreed to plead guilty to fraud perpetrated by the production of metal cancellers to produce fake cancellations and overprints on stamps for sale to philatelic dealers and collectors. The RPSL provided an expert to give specialist evidence for the prosecution. Robert George had been convicted of a similar fraud in 1988 and in 2010 he was sentenced to 21 months in prison. A forfeiture order was made covering “printing dies, postage cancels and other equipment seized by the police” and all the forfeited material has been entrusted to the Royal Philatelic Society London. He had been selling to dealers and through the internet, trading as Hootstein. The fraud would not have come to a successful prosecution but for the integrity and tenacity of a dealer in Leicester, assisted by others in the trade and by collectors. In 2008 British West Indies Study Circle members had noticed forged postmarks of Dominica, Montserrat and Leeward Islands for sale on Ebay by Hootstein and Charles Freeland wrote an article in the BWISC Bulletin no 217 of June 2008. By then, Hootstein had already withdrawn from Ebay following Charles Freeland’s successful claim for a refund from him.

I volunteer for the RPSL collections team at its library in London and, during 2025, I found that this collection deposited by the Police had not, until now, been catalogued into the RPSL’s archives. I have spent the past few months cataloguing it, now listed under archive reference 530009 in the RPSL’s records, in order to record his activities. The archive includes his unsold stock of forgeries which is safely in escrow, but I have collated a checklist of his forged postmarks, published here, to alert members to the probable resale of forgeries that had already escaped into the market. The listing cannot be assumed to be complete and many of his forgeries are deliberately struck off centre to give a partial cancellation without a fully identifiable place and date, so it is very likely that there will be unidentified Hootstein forgeries in many collections.

Mr George’s modus operandi is clear from these materials. He took good quality photocopy images from various reference books, notably the Robson Lowe encyclopaedias, Proud’s postal history handbooks and Stefan Heijtz’ catalogue of the Falkland Islands. To disguise those sources, he modified the cancels by changing date slugs so that his fake cancels would not exactly match those reference sources. He sent cards with a group of postmarks to the printers (Figure 1), having changed the date slugs by sticking on a tiny extra handwritten piece of card over part or parts of the original dates. It is sometimes possible to identify his fake postmarks on “used” stamps because the handwritten element of the date slug is visually different from the rest.

Charles Freeland (Ref. 2) thought that the Hootstein fakes were created on a laser printer but this RPSL archive proves that they were each struck from a Zinco plate using an ink pad, to more closely replicate the use of genuine steel cancellers (by “photozincography”). The plates were created by a Liverpool maker, who assisted with the prosecution when it became known that these were being used in a criminal enterprise. Robert George had sent his modified postmark images in groups on cards (Figure 1) to the firm which used each of those cards to make a Zinco metal plate. Those were photographed to produce a negative image on a transparent film (Figure 2). By a chemical etching process that was used to create a negative on a zinc metal plate (Figure 3) of the same size which was then acid etched so that the postmark or overprint details were raised by about a millimetre (Figure 4).

The same process was used to create plates of SPECIMEN and CANCELLED overprints and a wide range of the 1944-45 French Liberation local overprints. For this publication I am listing only the postmarks and I hope to write about the fake overprints in future.

A word of warning. The RPSL archive includes the cards Robert George sent to the printers, his proof sheets of first strikes from the Zincos for all the postmarks listed, and also his stock of stamps for sale at the time of his arrest, but some of the postmark Zincos are not in the RPSL archive. Robert George or another forger could still be using them.

I have created a checklist of these fake postmarks in territory order by place name, with the diameter or largest dimension of the postmark. There are many different styles of circular date stamps and also a few dumb ovals of bars with and without numbers. A copy of this article and the complete checklist in alphabetical order by territory can be found at www.rpsl.org.uk/catalogue

Acknowledgments

Thanks are due to Ian Harvey of RPSL Experts, who was the expert witness in the Police case, and also to Damian Devoy of RPSL Collections, both of whom helped me to find this collection at 15, Abchurch Lane.
