With hindsight the most important French contribution of this decade was however the Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie. This was the world’s first society journal, and appeared regularly for a long time. The first number came out in October 1875, i.e. not even a full year after the founding of the Society. The planned quarterly publication was kept up almost completely until 1886 (numbers 1 - 44), but after that publication became more irregular. Only in 1892 were the full four numbers (53 - 56) actually issued, more commonly only two numbers a year appeared, and the last issue (71) appeared in July 1896. However, of these nominal 71 issues in five volumes, ten that should have gone into volumes 4 & 5 were never actually published⁽⁴⁹⁾. The Bulletin reported the Society meetings, gave valuable articles on philately and also published the bibliography of French philatelic literature compiled by Ph. de Bosredon, which was subsequently published as a separate volume in 1878⁽⁵⁰⁾. Above all it contained the Society catalogue produced de facto by Dr. Legrand, which unfortunately came to an end with Number 48 of December 1888⁽⁵¹⁾.

In Germany too, philately was not exactly in full flower during the 1870’s, but there are a few titles worth mentioning from these years. In October 1870, G. Schaubek (actually Bauschke) and A. Zschiesche founded the Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung, the first to carry this name. It lasted till June 1873, with three volumes containing 33 (actually 31) numbers⁽⁵²⁾. The editor for the first volume was Alfred Moschkau, but in July 1871 he brought his own magazine(s) out⁽⁵³⁾, but none of these publications was of much importance. The same applies basically to the Schweizerische Briefmarken-Zeitung which appeared for the first time in October 1875. This only got as far as nine issues, but is nevertheless the oldest periodical publication in Switzerland. In July 1879 a paper was put out by the firm of R. Deyhle in Bern under a very similar name Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung, and this met with better success, publishing 87 issues till 1887. From volume 2 (1880) onwards, the title used was Schweizer Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung⁽⁵⁴⁾.

However, the later 1870's saw a whole series of other noteworthy publications, such as the Union, published by the then president of the Dresden International Society Alwin Nieske from the 1st January 1877 onwards. The end came after 50 issues in June 1881, since Nieske was unmasked as a forger and expelled from the Dresden Society, which meant the end of the Union as well⁽⁵⁵⁾. On the 15th January 1876 the Viennese stamp dealer S. Friedl brought out the first number of his Wiener Illustrierten Briefmarken-Zeitung, which became Weltpost in 1880. This was the first representative specialist paper during the Hapsburg Monarchy, and all the leading Austrian philatelists were represented in it, in particular Fer. Meyer (died 1882), and V. Suppantschitsch; the editorship was in the hands of Sigmund Friedl, but from 1881/82 Dr. A. Moschkau also played a great part in running the journal. From 1885 Weltpost generally appeared 5 - 6 times a year, and finally closed down in the year 1897⁽⁵⁶⁾.

Sigmund Friedl was certainly a philatelist of note; but his business interests as a stamp dealer gave rise to objections, though his services to philately certainly outweighed his shortcomings in other directions. With the best will in the world it is impossible to say much good about the master forger Geoges Fouré, but he was for some years the editor of a distinguished magazine. From October 1878 he issued the Berliner Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung, which he renamed the Berliner Illustrierte Philatelisten-Zeitung in January 1881 (No.28), and then Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung in January 1882 (No.40). It went on until November 1887, a total of 106 numbers. Fouré was a genuine expert, and the articles he published were worth reading, but at the same time he used his paper to launch his forgeries, not as contributions from himself, but as "reports" from third parties, i.e. unsuspecting collectors on whom he had planted his material⁽⁵⁷⁾. Two months before the Berliner Philatelisten-klub von 1888 was founded, and whilst it was still under discussion, Fouré came to the end of his criminal career as an editor: however the exposure of his machinations could not be long delayed.

Some of the Society journals from the 1870's also deserve a mention, though none is the equal of the Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie. They include not so much the Philatelistischen Blätter published for six months in Leipzig in 1874 by "Ein Verein von Philatelisten", as the Society in this case was certainly not one in the real meaning of the word, as above all the Vereinsnachrichten des Vereins Schlesischer Briefmarken-Sammler. This appeared in Breslau, monthly from April 1876 to October 1879, with a total of 41 issues, which were however not properly printed but issued in autographic or hectographic form⁽⁵⁸⁾. Probably the Allgemeine Briefmarken-Anzeiger should also be included here. It changed its title twice during its troubled life (it was the Dresdner Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal from Volume 11 1881, and Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung from Volume 13 1883) and appeared only very irregularly in a few numbers from 1887 onwards⁽⁵⁹⁾. However in the 1870's it was often looked on as the organ of reputable societies, such as the Hamburg Philatelic Club (1873, 1877), and the Dresden Philatelic Club (1878), though it was never a society journal in the sense that the club was responsible for the paper, which was always primarily an advertising sheet.

With hindsight, the most important publication on the German periodical market was definitely Senf's Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal which along with its supplement Organ für die Gesamt-Interessen der Briefmarken-Kunde appeared for the first time on January 1st 1874 and did not have to cease publication for almost 70 years, during the war year 1943 (Volume 70, No.1537/1538, January 1943). In 1948 the firm of Senf Bros. hoped that the Journal would shortly be able to appear again, but the Communist authorities in the Soviet Zone placed obstacles in the way. Hence it remains to the present day the most long-lived periodical in the German language. Its history to the year 1891 has been clearly described by the then editor Th. Haas⁽⁶⁰⁾. In the years before the First World War the Journal had the largest circulation of any in the German language, and probably of any in the world.

Figure 310: The most popular German magazine before the First World War was Senf's *Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal whose circulation of up to 17,500 per issue was unrivaled in Europe at the time and was only surpassed in the USA by Mekeel's Weekly.

It was aimed particularly at the small or intermediate collector, but the advanced collector with scientific interests was not forgotten: the Beiträge zur Postwertzeichen-Kunde (Subtitled "Special Supplement to Senf's Illustrated Postage Stamp Journal for Advanced Collectors".) was designed for him. Between 1890 - 1905 a total of 67 numbers, collected into 5 volumes, were issued at irregular intervals⁽⁶¹⁾. However, these could not be bought separately, one had to subscribe to the Journal. Naturally, this also had the regulation change of format, twice in this case. Volumes 5 - 10 (1878 -1883) were in a bigger format than previously, then from Volume 11 (1884) onwards it was put into the handy small, octavo format, which was retained from then on and used for the Beiträge as well. From Volume 11 onwards it appeared fortnightly (24 issues a year) and not monthly as before.

This suspicious interference with the format and presentation was not carried out without risk: the number of subscribers fell from over 500 in about 1880 to 300 at the beginning of the year 1883. The restructuring of the paper under the editorship of Dr. A. Moschkau, who had already been managing it from 1874 - 1880, created an unexpected upturn: the number of subscriptions rose in the course of the year 1884 to 7,000 (!), and had even reached 17,500 by 1891, a number not reached by any other specialist paper in the world. In Germany, the circulation of the Journal exceeded that of all the other German periodicals put together. The trade crisis at the turn of the century affected the Journal as well: the circulation of 20,000 reached in 1891 was never attained again, but even in 1904 there were still 12,500 subscribers. The editorship had meanwhile been taken over in January 1890 by Theodor Haas - Moschkau had retired on the grounds of ill-health in July 1887 - and he retained it, along with that of the Beiträge which he started, until his death in 1908. The Moschkau-Haas era was the high point of the Journal, which quickly lost its leading place after the First World War. In 1891, at the height of its circulation, it was the official Society organ for no fewer than 27 societies, including those in Basle, Graz, Kristiania (Oslo), Leghorn, Santiago, Staten Island (USA) and Stockholm⁽⁶²⁾. Even though it was not a "scientific" paper, no magazine before 1900 had such a wide circulation as the Senf Bros'. *Illustriertes Briefmarken Journal. (Figure 45, p.352).

The decade from 1870-1879 was not very productive in the USA either, although no fewer than 109 new philatelic magazines were started within this space of time, only 13 were still in existence on the 1st January 1880, including those already going in the 1860's⁽⁶¹⁾. Apart from the American Journal of Philately which has already been described in detail, the most worthy of mention amongst the new magazines of the 1870's was The Philatelic Monthly started by L. W. Durbin in Philadelphia in February 1875. From January 1892 it became The Philatelic Monthly and World with R. R. Bogert as co-editor, and it ran until May 1901 with a total of 302 issues in 26 volumes. Apart from this, F Trifet's *Monthly (Stamp) Circular from Boston over the years 1874 - 1881 had a good reputation⁽⁶⁴⁾. These are however the only journals of the decade worth remembering, and the same applies to Canada, where no magazine of importance appeared during the period concerned. Perhaps the most noteworthy development in the magazine field during the 1870's is the appearance of papers in languages other than German, English or French. This trend began in 1867 and 1869 with papers in Danish and Dutch⁽⁶⁵⁾, but they remained isolated examples. Spanish and Italian titles finally appeared in the 1870's. The oldest journal in Spanish is El Coleccionista de Sellos, four issues of which appeared in Madrid in February - March 1871. What is reputed to be the oldest Spanish journal El Indicador de los Sellos, a single issue of which appeared in July 1870, can probably be looked on at best as a trial run for the launching of a journal.

The foremost Italian journal is Posta Mondiale issued for an entire year from July 1873 to July 1874 by the dealer P. R. de Torres in Leghorn. The Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo, which appeared from July 1876 to December 1880 in Bologna should also be mentioned. In Trieste, i.e. within the territory of the Hapsburg Monarchy, Th. v. Mayer published his Corriere dei Francobolli, from March 1875 to April 1879. He was later politically active as an Italian nationalist, and occasionally made political statements in this paper as well, which led to some of the 1878 issues being suppressed, a unique case for the nineteenth century⁽⁶⁷⁾.

Above all, philatelic literature now spread as far as South America. After an attempt in the year 1874 in Argentina that miscarried, the German-descended Chilean E. C. Eberhardt issued his Guia del Coleccionista de Sellos de Correos on the 1st January 1878, and he carried it on at some personal sacrifice for seven years and 84 issues⁽⁶⁸⁾. Finally, the word spread also to the fifth continent: the oldest Australian philatelic journals appeared simultaneously in November 1879 in Adelaide, South Australia and Sydney, New South Wales, in the form of the Australian Stamp Collectors' Journal and the New South Wales Stamp Collectors' Magazine⁽⁶⁹⁾.

The following survey is an attempt to show the introduction of philatelic journals in the most important countries or languages in tabular form: it differs from a similar one published by Suppanschitsch⁽⁷⁰⁾ partly because it only includes journals of which at least three issues were published, and partly by the inclusion of the years 1890-1914. I have also used a slightly different assessment of countries, thus for example I have not listed the first publications in the Sandwich Islands or Santo Domingo, but have put in the oldest magazines in Polish or Czech, though these were not independent countries before the First World War. It should also be noted that the oldest journal from particular country is not necessarily the best: quotation of a name is in no case related to an estimate of the quality, especially since many of the journals given here are to be classed as "ephemera", and are philatelically of no value at all. Thus, Table I only has evidential force when used in conjunction with Tables II and III.

Table I

(An asterisk in front of a number means that there have been one or two issues of an earlier magazine with the same name.)

	Title	Date of First issue	Country	Language	Remarks
1	The Monthly Advertiser	15/12/1862	UK	English	Title changed often
2	Le Timbre-Poste	15/2/1863	Belgium	French	Appeared till 1900
3	Das Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler	1/5/1863	Germany (Saxony)	German
4	The Stamp Collector's Record	15/12/1864	Canada /USA	English	Oldest scientific journal in N. America. See p.782, Note 29
5	Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste	15/7/1864	France	French

6	The Stamp Collector's Monthly Gazette	6/1865	New Brunswick	English
7	Nordisk Frimærketidende	26/7/1867	Denmark	Danish	Oldest Scandinavian scientific journal
8	The Continental Philatelic Magazine	15/2/1869	Netherlands	English
*9	Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler	(?)/1869	Austro-Hungarian	German	Six numbers, month not indicated
10	Timbrophilist	7/1869	Netherlands	Dutch
*11	El Coleccionista de Sellos	15/2/1871	Spain	Spanish	Oldest scientific journal in the Iberian peninsula
12	La Posta Mondiale	7/1875	Italian	Italian
13	Schweizerische Briefmarken-Zeitung	1/10/1875	Switzerland	German
14	El Guia del Coleccionista de Sellos de Correos	1/1/1878	Chile	Spanish	Oldest S. American scientific journal. See above, p.794, note 68
15	The Australian Stamp Collectors' Journal	1/11/1879	Australia (South Australia)	English	Nos.15-16 are the oldest Australian scientific journals
16	The New South Wales Stamp Collectors' Magazine	11/1879	Australia (New South Wales)	English
17	Timbrophilo	1/1/1881	Romania	Romanian/French	Oldest scientific journal from the Balkans
*18	The Philatelic Times	4/1881	New Zealand	English
19	O Brazil Filatelico	15/1/1882	Brazil	Portuguese
20	Ecuador Filatelico	1/1886	Ecuador	Spanish
21	Le Timbre Levantan	25/5/1886	Turkey	French	Oldest scientific journal from Asia Minor
22	Nordisk Frimærkeblad	31/7/1886	Norway	Norwegian
23	El Mercurio	15/10/1886	Peru	Spanish
24	Tidning för Frimarksamlare	1/12/1886	Sweden	Swedish
25	O Philatelista	4/1887	Portugal	Portuguese
26	Barry's Philatelic Monthly	11/1887	Australia (Victoria)	English
27	Boletin de la Sociedad Filatélica Nacional	1/3/1889	Mexico	Spanish	Oldest scientific journal from Central America

28	Hermès	3/1891	Greece	Greek/ French
*29	Die Internationale Post	7/1891	Argentina	German	See Note 68.
30	La Timbrologie Égyptienne	15/10/1891	Egypt	French	Oldest scientific journal in Africa
31	Anunciador Filatélico de Venezuela	1/1892	Venezuela	Spanish
32	El Filatelista Sud- Americano	1/1/1893	Argentina	Spanish
33	Le Philatéliste Africain	9/1893	Tripolis	French
34	“Glass”	10/1893	Bulgaria	Bulgarian	Oldest scientific journal in Cyrillic
35	Polski Filatelista	4/1894	Austro/ Hungary	Polish
36	The Indian Philatelist	1/5/1894	India	English	Oldest scientific journal in Asia
37	The Hong Kong Philatelic Journal	1/1895	Hong Kong	English	Oldest scientific journal in China
38	The South African Philatelist	1/11/1895	Transvaal (South Africa)	English
39	Ceský Filatelista	25/2/1896	Austro/ Hungary	Czech
40	“Marki”	12/3/1896	Russia	Russian	Oldest scientific journal in the Russian language
41	Poul Medjmonassi	3/1897	Turkey	Turkish	Oldest scientific journal in the Turkish language
42	Posta-Érték Gyűjtők Hirdetési Lapja	10/4/1898	Austrian	Hungarian
*43	El Anunciador	4/1904	Columbia	Spanish	See Note 68
44	Yuraku	7/1914	Japan	Japanese	Oldest scientific journal in Japanese. See Note 148

It is very plain from this Table where the centres of philately are: in Central Europe and North America. Great Britain has extended philately over the entire world via its “Empire”, and has undoubtedly done most for its propagation. The French influence has been felt mainly in North Africa and the Far East. Philately in South America was largely introduced by German immigrants, and it penetrated the Slav peoples mainly under German influence: it is not just an accident that the two most important collectors in Imperial Russia before 1914 were called F. Breitfuss and Th. Notthafft.

I will give another very informative table here also. It shows the number of philatelic journals published in various countries up to the year 1906, with special emphasis on those still appearing at that date.

TABLE II

Country	Titles appearing up to 1906	Titles still appearing	Remarks
USA	942 (1,196)	6 (32)	Number in brackets from Turner, Trends , p.143.
Great Britain	337	14
Germany	221	22
France	127	12
Canada	82	1
Austro-Hungary	71	6	Includes magazines in Italian, Polish, Czech and Hungarian
Italy	65	1
Belgium	55	2
Spain	44	3
Switzerland	43	4
Netherlands	33	7	26 of the journals were in French
Brazil	28	0
Argentina	24	1
Romania	23	0
Portugal	22	0
Columbia	19	0	2 in French & 1 in German
Denmark	15	0
Australia	13	1
Chile	12	0
India	10	1
Mexico	10	0	1 in German
Sweden	8	2
Norway	7	0
Egypt	7	0
Russia	5	1
Total	2,238	84	7 in French & 4 in German

I have based this on the data given by E. D. Bacon in the Crawford Catalogue⁽⁷²⁾. The numbers are too high throughout, since Bacon included small variations in title and trivial items such as festschrift, commercial newspapers, etc. are included in the count and finally, he also added the only partly-philatelic papers. Since he keeps to the same principle for all countries, the relationships are maintained and only on this basis does the absolute number depend. However, it would not stand critical examination since the time required would not be worthwhile.

Now, we can take the Bacon numbers as being unreliable as we choose: it cannot be denied that they do give an impression of philatelic activity in the various countries. If the statistics are carried on to the year 1985, the positions of the four front runners would certainly be no different: Austria might have dropped back a few places but that would be the major change in the first ten: the Czechoslovak Republic, Poland, Hungary and Yugoslavia would be newcomers at the back of the field, and South Africa, Turkey and perhaps even Israel must be mentioned. However, of the states not mentioned in Table II, only Japan has become a philatelic "Great Power" in the interval, and might claim a place in the leading ranks. Also, the enormous discrepancy between the total number of journals available and the number still available from the year 1906 should be noted: it is only 3.8%.

This discrepancy is particularly startling in the case of the USA, where the proportion of papers still appearing is only 0.6% according to Bacon, or at least 2.8% according to Turner. For the case of the USA, where the extremely high number of journals catches the attention, we are in the happy position of being able to check Bacon's results by a more recent supplementary study by Turner. Turner has studied the US journals up to the year 1945, and came to the following conclusion⁽⁷³⁾: of 2,412 journals that appeared in the USA to this date, only 80, i.e. 3.3% have published 100 or more issues, whereas 1,914, i.e. 79.4% have published less than 25 issues. These 1,914 can certainly be classified with those that Turner refused to rank because of “insufficient data”, since it was unthinkable to class journals of which no further details were available simply as “ephemeral”⁽⁷⁴⁾. This means however that more than 85% of all the philatelic journals that have appeared in the USA have published less than 25 issues. Indeed, 489 have only managed a single issue (25.5% of the 1,914 mentioned) and 232 have published only two (12%). Thus, just about 30% of all the 2,412 journals published in the USA should really not be classed as such according to the criteria set out above.

We might be tempted to assume that the enormously high number of philatelic magazines before the First World War - it would still be enormous if the 20-30% classed as “ephemeral” were taken out - meant a particular flowering of philately in that period. I tend rather to the opposite viewpoint: the innumerable journals most of which did not last, points rather to uncertainty and immaturity. Too many people thought of becoming publishers or editors, not with a view to advancing philately, but simply to make money. Suppantshitsch estimated as early as 1892 that the total periodical literature was roughly 900 different papers with 12-15,000 issues. Seldom has the old adage that less often means more been so overlooked as in the case of the philatelic magazines⁽⁷⁶⁾. This still applies to some extent at the present day, though a certain trend towards consolidation is still detectable. Chester M. Smith in his bibliography of “American Philatelic Periodicals” to 1978 gives the particulars of 3,355 journals, though with the limitation that slight changes in title are immediately given a new number. It hardly need be said that no other country comes anywhere near this number. If a corresponding bibliography for Great Britain or Germany was compiled on the basis of Smith's criteria, the number of 1,000 would barely be reached.

Table I shows the gradual extension of philatelic journals to individual countries and parts of the world till 1914, which frees me from the need to quote the names of journals whose sole merit is that they were the first in their particular country. In view of the alarming rise in publications since the 1880's, the following survey up to the First World War will be based on a rigorous selection. I shall begin as usual with Great Britain, which was of outstanding importance during this period.

The 1880's were not however especially productive as regards the appearance of new titles, this was the period of the absolute dominance of the Philatelic Record, to which Stamp News (1882-1895) fell a sacrifice when its publisher Theodor Buhl took over the Philatelic Record in 1891. This really leaves only the Eastern Philatelist, which ran from December 1887 - September 1901, as a respectable monthly journal. This was founded by the then 17 year old William H. Goodwin, who was snatched away by an early death in 1894. Another one worth a mention is Ewen's Weekly Stamp News, the normal-format successor from 30 September 1899 to the year 1922 of L'Estrange Ewen's Weekly Circular, which began in 1897. This reached 1,029 issues and was the first successful weekly in Europe⁽⁷⁷⁾.

Figures 311-312: Two Monthly Journals from the years 1894 and 1925.

However, the great period for the founding of new titles that continued to our own day was the early years of the 1890's. It began with the decision of Charles Phillips to bring out a house journal in the name of Stanley Gibbons Ltd., the Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal. Its first number appeared in July 1890, and in no time at all it became one of the most-read journals for the aspiring collector. From July 1905 onwards Stanley Gibbons Ltd. also published Gibbons Stamp Weekly under the control of E. J. Nankivell, and aimed more at the broad mass of collectors. From July 1908 onwards the Monthly Journal was absorbed into the Weekly, but failed to come up to its publishers' expectations and was thus terminated at the end of 1910. The Monthly reappeared in January 1911 and went on till August 1914. After the war, from September 1919 onwards, people had to be satisfied with a small-size Monthly Circular, but the Monthly Journal began to appear again in October 1923 under the editorship of L. W. Fulcher and Stanley Phillips. The name was changed in October 1927 to Gibbons' Stamp Monthly and at the same time a step was taken towards popularising the magazine more widely. This trend was intensified in the following years and culminated in the year 1970 when the magazine became formally independent. Since then it has been the Stamp Monthly (without the Gibbons), a "Stanley Gibbons Publication" with a new volume numbering. Since then it has taken outside advertisements as well, and may be numbered with the philatelic "mass circulation" journals.

The editor of the Monthly Journal from 1891-1914 (or the Stamp Weekly from 1908-1910) was one of the most outstanding philatelists of the decades before the First World War, Major Edward B. Evans. Along with Moens/Hanciau, Dr. A. Legrand, A. Moschkau, who have all been mentioned in another place⁽⁷⁹⁾, and Pierre Mahé, Dr. Ch. Viner and Overy Taylor who are mentioned above⁽⁸⁰⁾, E. B. Evans and Fred Melville, who has yet to be mentioned, belong to the great names of philatelic publicity, though his efforts were by no means restricted to that sector. He was a prominent editor of catalogues and a distinguished researcher in philately - very much more so than Melville, for example, and though he might equally well have been mentioned in Chapters 17 or 20, in my view his most important contribution to philately lay in his work as editor of the Monthly Journal, and so his life will be dealt with here⁽⁸¹⁾.

Figure 313: Major Edward B. Evans (1846-1922) was one of the leading British philatelists of the years before 1914. He excelled both as a catalog editor and researcher and as a magazine editor. (A photograph from the early 1880's)

Edward B. Evans was born in Norwich on the 3rd November 1846. As usual, he first began collecting when he was at school, which he left in December 1862. He chose the life of an Army Officer, and was commissioned as a lieutenant in the Artillery in 1867. His first command was at Malta, where he met Lieutenant Speranza, who later acted as the Secretary of the London Philatelic Society. This certainly did a great deal to strengthen his interest in philately. Moreover he learned Italian in Malta, which enabled him later to translate the book by Dr. Emilio Diena on the stamps of Sicily into English⁽⁸²⁾. His military ambitions were obviously never keen, since in 1876 he transferred to a battery that had been ordered to Mauritius, with a definite intention of going there to study the stamps of that island. Indeed, the essay on the stamps of Mauritius that he sent in to the 1878 Congr s des Timbrophiles in Paris gained the award of their highest distinction, a vermeil medal, from the Soci t  Fran aise de Timbrologie. However by that time he was no longer an unknown in philately, since in 1875 he became a member of the London Philatelic Society, and in 1876 of the Soci t  Fran aise de Timbrologie. In 1873 he was stationed in Plymouth after his return from Malta, and there made the acquaintance of the slightly older E. Stanley Gibbons.

The 1880's was a fruitful philatelic period for him. Promoted to Captain, he took part in the suppression of the Zulu uprising in Natal in 1879, but this was memorable to him not so much because of military glory as because he discovered in the Post Office some sheets of the rare Transvaal provisionals, 1d on 6d, red overprint. In 1880 he was posted as Adjutant to an artillery school in Ireland, which left him enough spare time for his philatelic studies. These years led to his catalogue work, which was a model for the time: on top of this, during 1880/81 he published an expanded English version of his Mauritius paper in the Philatelic Record⁽⁸⁴⁾. He sold his outstanding Mauritius collection to Th. K. Tapling in 1885; the bulk of it being in the British Museum today. In 1891 he left the Service with the rank of Major, and henceforth devoted himself entirely to philately.

His principal occupation was the editorship of the Monthly Journal, to which he made substantial contributions in the shape of articles on the Native States of India, the Confederate States, etc. Bacon mentioned in his obituary the great care which Evans always applied to editing the lists of new issues: this showed the former catalogue editor in his element. Moreover Evans managed to get all the important philatelists writing in English - and not only these - to contribute to the Monthly Journal, so that this was beyond question one of the leading philatelic journals in more places than Great Britain. Moreover, in 1891 at the suggestion of Ch. Phillips he wrote A Description of the Mulready-Envelope and of Various Imitations and Caricatures of its Design, which was the start of a new wave of interest in these covers, and was distinguished by the award of a vermeil medal in Paris in 1892. His own outstanding collection was acquired by King George V in 1917, whilst his fine collection of the Confederate States was bought in 1914 by the American dealer J. A. Klemann. In 1894 he wrote an introduction to philately, Stamps and Stamp Collecting, which enjoyed great popularity and had gone to four editions by 1913. Whilst he was working for the firm of Stanley Gibbons Ltd., Evans also found time for honorary posts in organised philately; he belonged to the Council of the London (later Royal) Philatelic Society: along with E. D. Bacon and M. P. Castle he was a member of their first Expert Committee. In 1890, 1897 and 1906 he acted as juror for the International Exhibitions held in London in those years. His work was given international recognition by the award of the Lindenberg Medal in the year 1908. The years up to 1914 were quiet ones for him. Naturally, he was amongst the first forty people to sign the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists in 1921, but he did not live to see the return of his beloved Monthly Journal: he died on the 21st March 1922 in his 76th year.

Excepting for the years of the First World War, the firm of Stanley Gibbons has always published a magazine since 1890. Until 1970 it was expressly a house journal. However, there were so many changes in title, format and especially the type of reader aimed at, that is not possible to postulate continuity of the Monthly Journal from 1890 to the present day. This continuity can however be claimed by another English journal of this period, The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, founded by William Brown in Salisbury. Its first number appeared in February 1891. In 1900 the magazine passed into the ownership of P. L. Pemberton, the son of the great E. L. Pemberton. The Pemberton family edited the Journal till 1956, when Robson Lowe took it over along with the family firm. For many decades the Journal dealt with the entire range of philatelic problems, but with No.1 of Volume 76 (March 1966) the make-up of the magazine was fundamentally altered, the title changed to PJGB, and its range of interest narrowed to the philately of Great Britain. It went on for another 16 years as a specialised journal, then in 1981 it was merged with The Philatelist to become The Philatelist and PJGB.

Figure 314: The London Philatelist has been Britain's leading philatelic specialist publication since 1892.

Scarcely a year after the Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, the then London Philatelic Society published in January 1892 the first issue of its London Philatelist, which is far and away the undisputed, oldest Society journal in Europe still appearing regularly today⁽⁸⁸⁾. Originally there were 12 numbers per year, but from Volume 61 (1952), the July-August numbers were put out as one issue, and from Volume 85 (1976), the number of issues had to be cut down to six a year. However, the monthly numbering was retained, so that each issue covers two numbers. The London Philatelist is meant exclusively for advanced philatelists and contains almost exclusively research articles of the highest quality: it can with full right be designated as the world's leading philatelic journal. All the great British philatelists have published their research results here, notably such men as E. D. Bacon and M. P. Castle, but the leading researchers of other nations also found the columns of the London Philatelist open to them if they were members of the Royal. Obviously, the magazine deals with the entire range of philately, but in the nature of things the stamps of Great Britain and the Commonwealth are at the centre of its interests. The London Philatelist has had only seven editors in the ninety years of its existence: M. P. Castle (1892-1917), T. W. Hall (1917-1937), Col. H. Wood (1937-1940) Rev. A. C. Larmour (1940-1945), H. R. Holmes (1946-1954), A. M. Strange (1955-1974), and S. Rossiter (since 1975)⁽⁸⁹⁾.

However, this by no means exhausts the list of important journals. The Stamp Collectors' Fortnightly began its active life in 1894, and lasted until the year 1958, i.e. well over 60 years. It even kept up the fortnightly rate of appearance, which was really extraordinary for the 1890's in Europe. The editor up to about the First World War was Percy C. Bishop, who played a leading part in the philatelic life of England during those years. Fred Melville acted as editor in later years. The Fortnightly belongs amongst the "independent" journals, and has an honourable place amongst them. Obviously it was intended for a different circle of readers than something like the London Philatelist, but nevertheless it is not to be classed with certain mass-circulation papers of our own day.

The West End Philatelist, issued by the dealer David Field retained its readers favour almost as long as the Fortnightly, from 1904 to 1963. This was due not least to its solid articles and the information it supplied to the interested reader, thanks to the expert guidance (from March 1911) of such an important philatelist as Alexander J. Sefi (1889-1934). A thick paper Stamp Collecting was founded by Douglas B. Armstrong in 1913 and celebrated its 70th birthday in 1983, but it was merged with Stamp News in the following year. About 3,600 issues were published up to the year 1984, a number exceeded only by two American weeklies which will be mentioned later. A weekly cannot and will not be an outlet for research, but Stamp Collecting managed to keep up its standards and is still one of the best-liked philatelic periodicals in Great Britain today. Its founder, Douglas B. Armstrong (1888-1969) edited the journal till 1914 and then again from 1929 (1933)-1948 and was the first philatelic journalist to sign the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists in the year 1959⁽⁹¹⁾. [No – the first was Percy C. Bishop. BJB] 1908 saw the birth of the Stamp Lover, the Journal of Britains' largest society, the National Philatelic Society. This was founded as the Junior Philatelic Society by Fred. Melville in annoyance when the London Philatelic Society turned him down on the grounds of age. The editor of the Stamp Lover was naturally Melville until shortly before his death, and after that the Williams brothers took over for several years. It still appears today, but its original monthly publication has now become quarterly. The Stamp Lover never had the distinctly scientific character that marked out the London Philatelist: but such was never Melville's intention. He wanted to produce something with more appeal to the general public, and from this point of view the Stamp Lover even outdid many of the papers from the big commercial houses, not least the Monthly Journal from Stanley Gibbons Ltd.

This brings us on to a brief account of Fred. J. Melville (1882-1940), who did more than most to popularise philately over the decades 1900-1940⁽⁹²⁾. His talents lay within the realm of publicity, not research. A man like E. B. Evans was streets ahead of him in this respect. Amongst our "Heroes of the Past" he is probably best compared with Dr. A. Moschkau, though he lacked the sensitivity of the latter. Nothing that can really be called a valuable contribution to research will be found in his 64-page bibliography, except perhaps Postage Stamps in the Making, published by Stanley Gibbons Limited in 1916, a second extended and revised edition of which was published under the by-line John Easton in 1949, or his Phantom Philately of 1923. However he had to a high degree the gift of translating other people's research results into simple terms and presenting them in an agreeable way (Figure 61). He had a nimble pen and was extraordinarily productive, to the point where he occasionally used the pseudonym Miss Fitte, he wrote two slim volumes on The World's Stamp Errors under this name. Apart from The Stamp Lover his favourite, he edited - sometimes side by side with his own house journal The Postage Stamp (1907-1929), Melville's main occupation for many years was that of stamp dealer - The Stamp Collector's Fortnightly and The British Philatelist. After his failure as a dealer, writing became his main occupation, and it was occasionally noted that his work was carried out very quickly and he counted the lines. During the 1920's and 1930's he frequently sat on the jury of international exhibitions, he signed the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists in 1921, though he was then still a dealer and not principally a journalist like D. B. Armstrong who was mentioned above.

This gives all the most important British journals of the period concerned, and they are found to include a surprising number that still enjoy a good reputation today. Of the mass of journals that still deserve at least a mention, three are still of particular value to the bibliophile. The exclusive Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society - only 100 of each issue were printed - probably the best philatelic journal of all time (1908-1918) will be dealt with in another place. Also exclusive, but less important, is The Record of the Philatelic Students' Fellowship. This was a free association of a number of serious philatelists in South London, founded in May 1908. They held scientific meetings at irregular intervals, the proceedings of which were published in three small issues printed on hand-made paper and amounting to only 57 pages in all. (No. 1: 1908, No. 2: 1909, No. 3: 1910-11). Today these are a bibliophilic rarity of the first importance⁽⁹³⁾.

The valuable journal from the London dealer Hugo Griebert was in no way meant to be exclusive, but nevertheless it is a great rarity today. Griebert was without doubt one of the most learned of philatelists, but also a leading dealer of the years 1890-1920⁽⁹⁴⁾. Between 1908 and 1921 he published six volumes of Griebert's Philatelic Notes and Offers, which offered a wealth of valuable philatelic information as well as his commercial offers, and now make a handsome price at auction (£300 in 1981). The numbers to the outbreak of the First World War (Volume 1: 1908-11, Volume 2: 1912-13) were bilingual in English and German, since Griebert was of German origin and had many customers in his old homeland. Finally, a magazine should be mentioned which lasted for not much more than one volume from November 1908 - July 1910, but still managed to gain an excellent reputation: The Philatelic World which numbered the then Prince of Wales amongst subscribers. It was designed as the philatelic research organ of an exclusive "Hobby Club" which in fact never got set up. The editor was the same Alexander J. Séfi mentioned above, who took over as editor of the West End Philatelist after the failure of the Philatelic World⁽⁹⁴⁾. Before we go on to the French Journals, a few words should be said about the British Commonwealth, in those days still called the Empire. The first to be mentioned here should be The Philatelic Journal of India, which was published in India for almost 70 years (1897-1964) but was by no means restricted to Indian philately. It should rather be looked on as a journal for philately in India. Its contributors were principally, and for the first volumes exclusively, English since they were the ones who introduced philately to India. In the years up to the Second World War this magazine could be classed as one of the leading English-language journals. After a short interruption from May 1964 it began to appear again under Indian editorship, and since then has declined to become a journal of a purely provincial nature⁽⁹⁵⁾.

In Australia too there were several long-lived journals which began before the First World War and were therefore important for the development of Australian philately. The oldest by a number of years was Vindin's Philatelic Monthly, which ran from 1887-1894; its successor was the Australian Philatelist published by the dealer Fred Hagen regularly for a good 30 years, from December 1893-October 1924. The Australian Stamp Journal had a still longer life, since it went on for over 40 years, from 1910 -1951⁽⁹⁶⁾.

The French-language periodical literature of the years before the First World War is just as abundant, but does not contain so many "First-magnitude stars" as the British. Chronologically and practically the first place is taken by the Écho de la Timbrologie published by the firm of Yvert & Tellier from November 1887. Since then there have been over 1,550 issues, since from 1893 the Écho appeared fortnightly and only returned to a monthly pattern, which it has retained ever since, in August 1939⁽⁹⁷⁾. It is aimed at a wide circle of readers and tends to be popular in tone, but many worthy contributions to research will also be found in the Écho. Another important magazine was La Revue Philatélique (Française) founded in April 1890 as the organ of the Society of the same name. In 1896 it also became the mouthpiece for the Société Française de Timbrologie after this had amalgamated with the Société Philatélique Française. The Revue lasted till 1921 with an interruption during the First World War, and came to more than 300 numbers.

Not exactly first-class, but still outstanding, was the Bulletin de la maison Théodore Champion - later: ancienne maison. This still appears today, but has for several decades been no more than a new-issues and supplements list to the Yvert & Tellier catalogue. It no longer publishes articles and is thus only mentioned here with reservation. Another long-lived journal was the Échangiste Universel, founded in 1907. In 1927 this was combined with another one also founded in 1907 by Georges Brunel under the title Timbre-Poste and much higher in quality than Échangiste. The title then became L'Échangiste Universel et le Timbre-Poste. This survived the Second World War as well, changed its name (but not its numbering) to Le Philatéliste Universel in 1979, but the end came with the June-July issue for 1980 (No. 953). In that year it was absorbed by the French society journal La Philatélie Française which since then has retained the tradition of the older journal in its title.

Much older than the two last-named journals was Le Courier des Timbres-Poste, which existed from (1891-1901). Only about a year younger was the house journal of the well-known dealer Th. Lemaire. Le Philatéliste Française, who started it in 1892. This kept up a respectable level when it appeared as Le Journal des Philatélistes from 1902-1919, though the volume numbering was not altered⁽⁹⁹⁾. 1892 saw the surprising reappearance on the scene of the old pioneer Pierre Mahé, with his little-known monthly Le Questionneur Timbrophilique. As its name suggests, Mahé used it to deal with philatelic problems of general interest in question and answer form. This notable publication deserved more success than was actually obtained by the 43 issues published up to its closure in the year 1895⁽¹⁰⁰⁾. In Belgium, Moens' Le Timbre-Poste was the undisputed leader until December 1900. December 1896 saw the first appearance of the Bulletin Mensuel de la Société 'Les Échangistes Réunis', which was renamed La Revue Postale with No.45 (January 1901). Since 1937 it has been published by the Union Royale Philatélique de Bruxelles: despite some interruptions and irregular appearances over a number of years it is by far the longest lived Belgian periodical, and in more recent years it has tried to relate with fresh vigour to its old traditions⁽¹⁰¹⁾. From 1890-1909 the stamp firm of Armand Dethier -it also holds auctions - published L'Annonce Timbrologique, but this was an advertising sheet in the first place, as its name suggests. Another dealer, Maurice Belin, published the Revue Philatélique Belge from 1894 to 1903, this was principally to report on new issues, but gave little information about them, and was no serious competition to the Timbre-Poste so long as that existed. The same applies to Le Timbrophile Belge, which only came into the field when the end of Le Timbre-Poste was already in sight. It appeared for only eight years (1898-1905), and in that way at least was comparable with its great French namesake⁽¹⁰²⁾. Thus the balance for the years 1880-1914 in Belgium is somewhat meagre, despite the 55 titles listed by Bacon in the Crawford Catalogue.

As a transition to the German-speaking countries we will now look at the Netherlands, which issued a whole series of substantial journals over the years concerned. The top place is taken by the Nederlandsch Tijdschrift voor Postzegelkunde. This was published from August 1884 by the oldest philatelic society in Holland, which had only been founded four months earlier, and quickly took a leading place amongst European specialist papers, due not least to the efforts of J. B. Robert, who was co-editor from Volume 10 (1893) and solo editor from Volume 13 (1896/97). It was his editorial work in the first place which led the Berlin club to honour him in 1930 with the award of the Lindenberg Medal. The journal went on for 38 volumes with 446 issues, and did not close until 1921⁽¹⁰³⁾. A still longer life, though not nearly the same level of importance, was attained by Het Postzegelnieuws from the dealer J. A. C. Reinon-Kingma, who kept it going for exactly fifty years (1900-1949), undeterred by the fact that it was banned during World War 2, which hampered the achievement of publishing all 50 volumes but troubled the publisher not at all. Another magazine that did not last nearly so long but is nevertheless worthy of esteem was another trade journal De Nederlandsche Philatelist published by Leon De Raay from 1904-1911⁽¹⁰⁴⁾. Finally mention should be made of the Philatelistisch Maandblad, published in Breda from 1912-1921 to act as the mouthpiece for several societies, and was a precursor of the Nederlandsch Maandblad to be described later⁽¹⁰⁵⁾.

In Germany the decades before the First World War were particularly fruitful. In the first place I will mention the best-known Society journal of that period, Der Philatelist, from the Dresden International Society, which proceeded to found its own journal after the departure of Nieske. It was started on the 1st June 1880, and Ernst Petritz, whose private stamp museum we have already mentioned, initially acted as owner and editor, but from Volume IV, i.e. from the 1st January 1883, the Society itself appeared as owner and publisher, whilst H. Schwaneberger acted as editor⁽¹⁰⁶⁾. Der Philatelist was aimed at the members of the Society, not at a wide public, but Suppantschitsch was wrong when he said that the Dresden Society was the first to put out a magazine totally independent of all dealers and other commercial interests⁽¹⁰⁷⁾. This is certainly true for Germany, but definitely not for philately as a whole. Still, Der Philatelist far exceeded the Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie in its scope, regularity and duration of its appearance, and very soon also in the quality of its contributions. It was a victim of inflation: its appearance ceased with No.9 of the year 1922; an attempt to revive it in 1924 met with only transitory success: No.12 of the 48th volume (1927) marked its final appearance⁽¹⁰⁸⁾.

A journal with a good reputation was the Universum, founded by the Frankfurt dealer H. J. Dauth in December 1881. From January 1886 to August 1893, it was called Illustrierte Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung mit Inseratenteil 'Universum' [Illustrated Frankfurt Postage Stamp Journal with 'Universum' Advertising Section], but after that it was generally called Universum again. It was well regarded as an advertising sheet, but also offered a "scientific" section, the editor of which was A. E. Glasewald throughout. The magazine lasted for 16 years and 149 issues, and finished in December 1896. A brief mention should also be made of the General-Anzeiger für Philatelie, a purely advertising organ which began on the 10th April 1883 and appeared every week for over 50 years. However it had no philatelic section, and so has no research interest and does not appear in Table III. On the 1st January 1888, Ernst Heitmann of Leipzig, already known as an album publisher and author, published a new magazine under the title Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung. Organ für die gesamte Postwerthzeichenkunde. The likeness to the title of the Senf Journal is obvious, and certainly not accidental. The editor was again H. Schwaneberger, then from No.7 onwards principally Dr. Alfred Moschkau. The Zeitung, like the Journal, appeared 24 times a year, and again like the Journal it acted as the organ of a number of societies. Even the physical make-up was similar. Only its publishing life did not coincide with that of the Journal: it closed in the year 1900⁽¹⁰⁹⁾.

During the 80s there was a plethora of Mitteilungen, Vereinsnachrichten, Vereinsberichte, etc. from numerous German or German-speaking societies. It would be impossible to mention them all here, and in any case their philatelic importance is generally slight. Most of them were not proper journals like Der Philatelist, but were usually quite ephemeral, often only hectographed, and their contents were aimed at the society members and were of interest only to them - if at all. I only mention this obscure species of literature at all because it is widely found throughout the German-speaking world.

A specially early example is the Vereins-nachrichten des Vereins Schlesischer Briefmarkensammler [Society Record of the Union of Silesian Stamp Collectors], which was mentioned earlier. This had a relatively long life, from 1876-1879⁽¹¹⁰⁾. One praiseworthy exception is the Vereinsmittheilungen des Berliner Philatelistenclub [Society Communications of the Berlin Philatelists' Club], which has appeared since the 1st April 1888 and is thus without question the oldest society magazine still being published in Europe. However its circulation is restricted to members, and since its revival as Mitteilungen Neue Folge in the year 1951, its appearance has been very irregular⁽¹¹¹⁾. A publication that is a curiosity because of its make-up was the Vertrauliche Korrespondenzblatt philatelistischer Vereine [Confidential Correspondence Sheet for Philatelic Societies], originally published by the Strasbourg Union. It was the organ of their civil war against the Berlin club: a comparison of the two magazines speaks volumes.

Two valuable journals both appeared for the first time in the year 1890. In January the energetic Anselm Larisch founded Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde in Munich, in conjunction with the advertising sheet Vereinigte Erdball-Merkur. This was followed on the 18th October by the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung and the Illustrierte Zeitschrift für Postwerthzeichenkunde, published by Dr. Hans Brendicke in Berlin. Both these were aimed at the advanced philatelist and surpassed anything previously available in Germany in this time. It was bad luck for Anselm Larisch that only nine months after his Postwerthzeichen-Kunde a magazine appeared which was a whole class above his. Thus, right from its beginning, Postwerthzeichen-Kunde was in the shadow of a better paper, which certainly contributed to the fact that it only lasted eight years, and had to be closed down at the end of 1897.

Figure 315: While it can be a nice souvenir as a commemorative volume for the club's anniversary - and a historical document in later years - as a cover page it seems intrusive and tasteless, which is not surprising given these publishers.

Figure 316: The most important philatelic magazine in German that ever appeared was the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung by Dr. H. Brendicke, which passed into the hands of Hugo Krötzsch in 1896.

The DBZ on the other hand - this is the generally accepted abbreviation of its title - has had a really long life. Its final hour came during the inflation - regretted by many: its appearance finished in 1923 with No.4 of the 34th volume. The editor from No.10 in 1896 was Hugo Krötzsch, and he handed over to Fr. Junghans with No.8 of Volume 30 (1919)⁽¹¹⁴⁾. The DBZ was to some extent the Lindenberg house journal, as long as Dr. H. Brendicke had any say in it. He was concerned to meet Lindenberg's every wish, whereas H. Krötzsch had reservations about the commercial aspect, so that co-operation from Lindenberg was not so lively in later years as earlier. The DBZ was undoubtedly the leading journal in the German language, and has remained so to the present day. Even as early as 1900 it was awarded a gold medal at the Paris exhibition along with the American Journal of Philately. In the years since 1900 it has been classed along with Gibbons Monthly Journal and the London Philatelist as one of the three leading philatelic research journals of the world. These three titles fully illustrate the extraordinary progress made by the philatelic press in the 1890's.

The third new production of the year 1890, Der Briefmarken-Sammler, issued by A. Marbes, a dealer in Bremen, ranks well behind the DBZ and Postwerthzeichen, even though it went on for 28 years in all and did not cease publication till 1917. Still greater success was achieved by the magazine Die Post published in Leipzig by Baumbach & Co. initially and later by C. F. Lucke. This reached a level well above that of Der Briefmarken-Sammler. In the early years of its existence L. Senf was one of its most ardent contributors. The first issue of Der Post appeared in January 1894, and it came to a stop in its fiftieth year in 1943, when practically all the philatelic journals in Germany were refused an allocation of paper. Another very popular magazine was the Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung, from A. E. Glasewald in Gossnitz, which appeared from July 1892 and changed its name to Philatelisten-Zeitung from January 1905 onwards. It too would doubtless have reached its 50th anniversary, had it not become the official organ of the Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbands Gossnitz, which was "brought into line" in 1935/36, which also meant the end of Philatelisten-Zeitung.

Another advertising journal deserves a mention because of its long life, namely the Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt, published by C. G. Vogel in Possneck from January 1892 until well into its 30th year - later under the title Internationaler Postwertzeichen-Markt. Like the General-Anzeiger, it was a weekly, and well over 1,500 numbers appeared⁽¹¹⁶⁾. Something quite different of course were the Germania-Berichte, published by the Germania Ring from November 1897, initially at irregular intervals. From 1905 however monthly publication was the rule - the first regular volume for 1905/06 is a great rarity-. However, as happened to the Philatelisten-Zeitung happened to Germania-Berichte. In the year 1935 the Ring dissolved itself "voluntarily" and Germania-Berichte came to an end with No.11 of this year (December 1935). Finally, the last 1890's journal to be mentioned is Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, published by Robert Karst in 1893-1899, on roughly the same level as the Briefmarken-Sammler⁽¹¹⁷⁾.

Figure 317: Of all of the "house journals" that have appeared in Germany, Kosack's Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung [Berlin Stamp News] takes the palm. In its best years it did not need to fear comparison with Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal.

After the great upsurge in the years after 1888/90, the years 1900-1914 also brought a few noteworthy new titles. Chronologically and scientifically the first place is taken by the Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung. This was published by the best-known German dealer Philipp Kosack from April 1905 onwards, taking over the name of R. Karst's paper that had folded six years before. The Kosack paper was scientifically the German counterpart to Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal: it was of very high quality and without doubt the best house journal ever put out in the German language. A doctor, P. Kloss, acted as editor from time to time, but the Berliner went on appearing into the 1920's. Originally it did not appear in a regular pattern, but from 1908 it settled into a fortnightly appearance. The Berliner maintained its high standards of publication until its 30th year (1934), and then it was converted into a purely advertising sheet and then was closed down in 1943 along with all of the other philatelic magazines in Germany⁽¹¹⁸⁾.

In the year 1906 another dealer, Albert Friedemann, began to issue his Philatelistischen Berichte, which he later re-christened Friedemanns Berichte für Briefmarkensammler. It is very difficult to get hold of the early Berichte up to 1915, since Friedemann sent them out free and ad lib to his customers, and did not accept subscriptions. Not until 1915 did they appear with a certain regularity and get collected into volumes (10 Volumes to 1930). The strong point of the Berichte was not unexpectedly the stamps of the German colonies. Again, a year later in 1907 Gustav Freyse started a magazine called Der Deutsche Philatelist which enjoyed a good reputation and was popular with collectors. It passed into the ownership of K. Maier in Berlin from No.7 of 1912 onwards, and in 1926 Ernst Stock acquired it. When he went bankrupt in 1931, the end of the magazine also seemed to be within sight, but H. A. Bock revived it in 1932 until the final closure came in 1936.

There are only a few publications of importance from Austria and Switzerland during this period of time, the oldest scientific journals in the Polish and Czech languages, Polski Filatelista (1894-1900) and Cesky Filatelista (1896-1944) have already been dealt with above. The latter, being the organ of the oldest Czech society in Prague, later the Czechoslovak Philatelic Union⁽¹⁹⁾, had a lasting influence on the philatelic life of its country. Two of the German-language journals deserve special mention, the Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung from Heinrich Koch, which lasted the eleven years from 1880-1890, and was planned as a successor to the Wiener Illustrierten Briefmarken-Zeitung of Siegmund Friedl. Shorter-lived, but of a higher quality, was Austria-Philatelist published by A. Eckert in Prague. It only actually appeared from 1893-1899, but must be reckoned without doubt as the best philatelic journal that had appeared till then in the Habsburg monarchy⁽¹²⁰⁾.

The first place in Switzerland is occupied by the Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal published by Hans Kirchhofer in Lausanne. It published six volumes from November 1888 - December 1893, and from the third on was the official mouthpiece for the societies in Basle, Berne, Lausanne, St. Gallen and Winterthur. From the 1st January 1893 the Journal became the official Society organ of the Schweizer Philatelistenvereine, which it remains to the present day. The change of title to Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung on January 1st 1894 had no effect on the numbering of the volumes (1894: Volume 7). From 1930 editorial control of the magazine passed to the Swiss Union: from then on the contents were produced by the Societies in Basle, Geneva, Lausanne and Berne in rotation⁽¹²¹⁾. The magazine is officially trilingual, but German predominates.

A very well-written magazine was put out in French, the Revue Philatélique Suisse, but unfortunately it had only a short life. It appeared in Geneva from 1891-1893 and was the official organ of the Lausanne society. Finally mention should be made of the Schweizerischen Philatelistischen Nachrichten which was published from 1909-1914 by the firm of Zumstein in Berne, and led directly to the Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung published since 1915 and still popular today. From 1923 it took the six volumes of the Nachrichten over into its own volume numbering. The early years of the BBZ were not much more than reports of new issues and offers, but it became quite different a long time ago: today the Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung contains many articles worth reading and is amongst the leading Swiss philatelic journals.

Scandinavia did not originate very much in the years 1880-1914, but some of the journals were valuable. The oldest is the Tidning för Frimärksamlare which appeared from December 1886-December 1893. Its direct successor from January 1894 was the Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift which initially appeared in Stockholm and after many changes landed up in Copenhagen. Originally it was planned as a fortnightly, but became a monthly from 1902. It is the oldest Scandinavian philatelic journal still available, and was for a long time the official organ of the Danish philatelic union. In Sweden this function was performed from the 1st January 1900 - and still is today - by the Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift, which naturally was originally a society journal⁽¹²⁴⁾. Finland, which belonged to Russia up to 1918, made no contribution to the philatelic literature of Scandinavia apart from a “Journal” which went to one issue, and one issue only.

The periodical literature of Italy and Spain was not exactly abundant up to 1880, and the situation did not alter much in the period up to the First World War. However it is worth mentioning a few names, which also gained attention outside the boundaries of these countries. The 19th century in Italy produced only a single journal of note: Il Francobollo published by G. Gussoni in Milan from 1893-January 1900 in the name of the Societa Filatelica Lombardy. This is one of the first journals to concern itself with postal history⁽¹²⁵⁾. In December 1910 appeared the first number of the Bollettino Filatelico later edited by R. Palmieri in Florence. This was not the best Italian philatelic journal, but it was the longest-lived, since it did not stop until 1973, and is thus amongst the journals that have survived for over 60 years. From 1959 onwards it was called Il Bollettino Filatelico d'Italia since it merged in that year with the Rivista Filatelica d'Italia, which the Genoese merchant Ezio Ghiglione had published in his native city since 1914. The Bollettino Filatelico was a monthly, which ran to a total of 728 issues in 63 volumes⁽¹²⁶⁾.

Miguel Galvez was a well-known Madrid dealer and catalogue publisher, and also the father of the distinguished expert and international juror Manuel Galvez. From January 1897 onwards, Galvez senior published a house journal Madrid Filatelico, which has continued to appear ever since, apart from a break during the Spanish Civil War when Galvez fled to Belgium and did not return to Spain until 1945. However, the journal has now fallen far below its original level, and is basically only an offers and new issues paper. It appears monthly and has now exceeded a total of 900 issues⁽¹²⁷⁾. El Filatelico Espanol, which appeared from October 1900 - ca.1934/35 in Barcelona also had a good reputation, but failed to survive the Spanish Civil War. For simplicity I will deal here also with the few titles from South America worthy of a mention. Most South American magazines do not deserve one, as they are usually too short-lived and paltry in content. For example, no Brazilian journal of the 19th century managed to last longer than two years - most of them far less. There are however two exceptions: the Anales de la Sociedad Filatelica Santiago, from Santiago de Chile, which to a certain extent carried on the traditions of Guia del Coleccionista, but only appeared as a regular volume from 1897-1903⁽¹²⁹⁾.

A much greater success was enjoyed by the Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina which has appeared uninterruptedly from November 1894 to the present day. Originally a monthly, it changed to quarterly publication from 1957. In the years up to 1918 it published in the main the research results of Dr. J. Marco De Pont, and thus gained a reputation and is to be numbered amongst the oldest philatelic journals in the world. It is without question the doyen of the South American philatelic publications, and definitely the best known magazine in the Spanish language⁽¹³⁰⁾. By publishing the fundamental work of Marco Del Pont - he never put out a book on a philatelic subject, all his publications appeared simply as reprints from the Revista - it made a basic contribution to the promotion of philately in South America, and to the international recognition of South American philatelic research. The Revista does not always speak with the same weight today, but this is probably because a Marco Del Pont is not born in every decade - apart from Alvaro Bonilla Lara, undoubtedly the most eminent philatelist that South America has yet produced.

No country produced such a colossal number of new philatelic journals in the period up to 1914 as the USA. According to George Turner's survey, no fewer than 1227 magazines came into life between 1880 and 1914. They divide up as follows:

1880 - 1890	:	383
1891 - 1900	:	491	(88 in 1896 alone)
1901 - 1914	:	353	(only 12 in 1907)

According to the principles set out above, this number can be reduced by a good 30%, as these titles only published one or two numbers, this leaves some 860 journals overall, which is still a very considerable number⁽¹³¹⁾. However, these base figures need further expansion, as can be seen from another of Turner's statistics. He counted the number of journals still appearing on January 1st of each year. This total jumps from 14 in the year 1880 to 69 in the 1890, reaches a peak on 1st January 1897 with 86, sinks to only 30 in 1908, reaches a secondary peak of 64 in 1912, then drops back to 50 by 1st January 1914⁽¹³²⁾. The yearly count of journals still in existence - which will include some from the 1870's - is not so exorbitantly high as one might expect from the number of new publications. Nevertheless, during this period the USA was the most magazine-rich country in the world, a state of affairs which did not alter in the future.

Since we are only dealing here with the journals of real quality, the number of titles to be dealt with is limited. First come two journals actually founded in the year 1880: The Philatelic World from R. R. Bogert in Brooklyn (1880-1891), which was fused with L. W. Durbin's Philatelic Monthly from the 1st January 1892 to form The Philatelic Monthly and World. This retained the volume numbering of the older Monthly, and survived until May 1901⁽¹³³⁾. Not quite so important was The Stamp World brought out by Clinton Collins and F. L. Mills 1880-1887 in Cincinnati, Ohio. On more or less the same level was The Philatelic Tribune, from F. J. Stanton in Smyrna, N.Y., from 1885-1899, The Quaker City Philatelist from 1886/1894 in Philadelphia, Pa. and The Philatelic Era that appeared in Portland, Me. from 1889-1904. From 1894 its title was The Weekly Philatelic Era, and it produced a total of 566 numbers in 18 volumes⁽¹³⁴⁾. Finally, mention should be made of the Eastern Philatelist which appeared in Fitchburg, Ma., under that name from December 1887 to May 1899, from June 1899 - March 1902 as The Philatelic Bulletin and Eastern Philatelist in Salem, Ma., and went to 15 Volumes with a total of 169 issues. It was in this magazine that Ch. E. Severn published a noteworthy article on the reasons for the flood of journals that had overwhelmed the USA since the mid 1880's; this sober analysis remains a most informative document for the period⁽¹³⁶⁾.

Mekeel and Scott were fierce competitors in the fields of Catalogues, Albums and Periodicals.

Figure 318: J. W. Scott in the years of his rivalry with Ch. H. Mekeel.

Figure 319: Charles Haviland Mekeel (1864-1921) the great rival of J. W. Scott in the years before the First World War.

However, the two most important journals founded in the 1870s were The Philatelic Journal of America and The American Philatelist. The Journal ran from 1885-1895 and was produced in St. Louis, Mo. the publisher was the indefatigable Ch. H Mekeel, a genius with the flare for big business as Turner put it⁽¹³⁷⁾. In these years he had a fierce competitor in J. W. Scott, both as an album producer and as a magazine and catalogue publisher. After a six-year interruption, Mekeel's Stamp Collector followed from December 1901 - June 1905. Unlike the Journal, this was a weekly and its standard was much lower, but it carried on the volume numbering but not the issue numbering of the Journal. From July 1905 - March 1917 the old name was resumed and it again became a monthly, though only 63 issues appeared in the twelve volumes. The "real" Philatelic Journal of America is thus the first one, that ran from March 1885 to November 1895 with a total of 127 issues⁽¹³⁸⁾.

More important however than the Journal is The American Philatelist, the journal of the American Philatelic Society. In November-December 1886 two numbers of an Official Circular were published, and these can be looked on as a sort of forerunner. In January 1887 the series of American Philatelist began the run that is still unbroken today. It is thus the oldest philatelic journal in the world that is still being published today. The American Philatelist began as a monthly, but during the years 1894-1908 it was published only as The American Philatelist and Year Book of the American Philatelic Association: although it only appeared once a year each volume was reckoned as having six numbers. From November 1909 onwards it appeared quarterly, from 1915-1918 even fortnightly, and then finally returned to its present day customary monthly publication. In May 1984 it reached its thousandth issue in Volume 98, and its centenary is not now far off. The most outstanding editor of this magazine was Col. Ralph A. Kimble (1893-1974), who put out the American Philatelist from 1936-1957. Turner characterises it as the leading serious philatelic monthly and the outstanding society organ⁽¹³⁹⁾.

In April 1890 J. W. Scott again put a journal of his own on the market, since his American Journal of Philately, then in its "Second Series" had been taken over by the rival firm of Scott Stamp & Coin Co. His Metropolitan Philatelist was thoroughly successful, but only survived its founder by a few months. 38 volumes containing a total of 800 issues were published between 1890 and 1919. However this twice-monthly never reached the same level as the American Journal⁽¹⁴⁰⁾. On the 1st January 1891 the starter's pistol went for what has been the most successful philatelic weekly of all times. Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News, which to date has reached the absolutely unbelievable number of over 4,750 issues, an unmatched record by any stamp magazine in the world as Turner wrote in 1945, since when it has lasted for another 40 years. The Weekly never had the ambition to be a pioneering journal, and it would be fruitless to seek in it for research, but its volumes do reveal the path that philately has taken over the last 90 years. The Weekly is firmly linked with the name of Charles E. Severn (1872-1929), who guided it with a firm hand from 1897-1926 as owner and chief editor. He was also amongst the chosen selected to sign the "Roll" in 1921. Unfortunately the Weekly has suffered a quite considerable loss of substance in the years after the Second World War, and now operates purely on a provincial level⁽¹⁴¹⁾.

Surprisingly, the 1890's were on the whole poor in good journals. Only after the turn of the century are there again journals worth noting, such as Redfields' Stamp Weekly, a serious rival to Mekeel's Weekly from 1907-1913. However the chief one is The Stamp Journal, which actually had only a relatively short life, ca.1908-1916, but absorbed a number of good periodicals in that time and embodied a high standard. The same is also true of the Philatelic Gazette from J. M. Bartels (1910-1918), which was originally a monthly, but became a semi-monthly from March 1911 onwards. It published outstanding articles, some in German in the earlier volumes⁽¹⁴²⁾. In 1913 the editor changed to J. A. Klemann (Fig. 206), who edited the volumes to December 1918. 1910 also saw the first appearance of The Philadelphia Stamp News, which never approached the level of the Gazette, but did manage to produce many useful articles in the six years of its existence (1910-1915). The same applies to the Albemarle Stamp Collector, from C. H. Mekeel, which ran to ten volumes from 1914-1913; however only the Gazette earned the judgement from Turner that it contributed greatly to the further advancement of philately⁽¹⁴³⁾.

Some commercial firms published their own journals, principally of course with the aim of promoting their own wares, but which did also contain useful philatelic essays and reports, etc. The chief one to mention here is the New England Stamp Monthly of Boston (1911-1932), but it can be accompanied by the United Stamp Company Herald of Chicago (1912-1931), and finally the Economist Bulletin of New York (1939-1939): each of these journals lasted for over 200 issues⁽¹⁴⁴⁾. Warren H. Colson offered something special to his customers. His old firm, the New England Stamp Company began publishing in 1911 with their Monthly, but Colson had supplied his Postage Stamps for Advanced Collectors since 1906 in a very limited edition to his circle of reader-collectors. This was not however merely a magazine: from nine to twelve months a year Colson sent out a monthly calendar with a photograph of a rare stamp. This was accompanied by a sheet of folded cardboard containing either the stamp depicted, a description of the country concerned, or perhaps only the market position, etc. There were over 300 of these folders up to 1943, and they are a great philatelic rarity; not even George Turner had a complete set⁽¹⁴⁵⁾.

To conclude our account of the periodical literature before the First World War, a brief account will be given of Japan, which philatelically played no part before 1914, but still deserves at least a mention. According to Suppantschitsch there was a magazine, Philatelic (sic) of Japan, by J. T. Hosojima, as early as 1897, but nobody in Japan itself knows anything about it. The second title is also disputed: Tsushin Kokan Zasshi [The Correspondence Magazine] is supposed to have been published in three numbers August-October 1910, and two languages, English and Japanese, but nobody has ever yet seen it. Moreover the title seems to fit an exchange medium rather than a true philatelic journal⁽¹⁴⁷⁾. The first confirmed periodical was not devoted exclusively to philately, but dealt with it along with its main topic: Dai Nippon Kosen Koyuken Zasshi [The Numismatic and Philatelic Journal of Japan] was published in Yokohama from January 1913 to April 1915 by H. A. Ramsden, an Englishman who had settled there and married a Japanese. When he died in January 1915 he left material for only three more issues. This magazine was also in two languages throughout. It was generally called simply The Ramsden Magazine. These few paltry journals give no indication of the future importance of Japan in philately. The first truly philatelic magazine, was Yuraku, published in Tokyo from July 1914 as the journal of the Yuraku Kai founded in June 1912. This had a remarkably long life. The last number appeared in February 1930, only a few months before the dissolution of the society in July 1930⁽¹⁴⁸⁾.

Again, the time has come to stop. I have already pointed out time and time again that this or that journal is still appearing today, or had an especially long life. Precisely because there has been so much ephemera amongst the philatelic magazines, those that were long-lived deserve our special attention. My researches, which stopped at a life of at least 50 years, were surprisingly fruitful, although I excluded certain categories from the outset, such as dealers' circulars (the A.S.D.A. Bulletin has appeared since 1915!), Post-Office publications (the Archiv für Post und Telegraphie lasted from 1870-1944, but was a supplement to the official Gazette of the German State Post), or purely advertising organs without an actual philatelic section (the General-Anzeiger für Philatelie was issued for a full 70 years interrupted only in the years 1944-1946). However even with these limitations the yield was still unexpectedly numerous.

Table III & Table IV

[Notes to the Tables]

Note 1: From 1888-1893 the title was Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung with Lausanne as the place of publication: the first volume of the Zeitung was thus numbered as 7. The magazine appears in three languages: German-French- Italian, with German predominating.

Note 2: The journal was published in Stockholm originally, but the place of publication altered several times, and has been Copenhagen since about 1925, See Note 124. The magazine is now the organ of the Copenhagen Philatelists' Club.

Note 3: From 1896-1900 the magazine was called Bulletin mensuel de la Société "Les Echangistes Reunis": the name was changed to La Revue Postale at No.45 (January 1901). It did not appear 1914-1919 and 1940-1945. 1954 saw the appearance of “New Series” No.1, and No.113 in this series has now been reached. Its appearance was very irregular from 1974, but since 1983 it has again come out four times a year.

Note 4: Appeared only sporadically from 1867-1874 (ten issues): prolonged interruption during the Second World War (1942-1947): has appeared at irregular intervals since the 1960’s.

Note 5: From 1923 the six volumes of the Schweizerischen Philatelistischen Nachrichten 1909-1914 were suddenly counted in: thus 1985 is the 77th volume. The Berner Zeitung appears in French and German, but here again German predominates.

Note 6: The volumes of the Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung are counted in from 1926, since even then it had the sub-title Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde. Hence 1985 is the 60th volume.

Note 7: The Orient Philatelique appeared in French initially, but this was very soon replaced by English, but Arabic has become steadily more predominant since the 1950’s. Only about 130 numbers have appeared during this magazine’s more than 50 years of life: its appearance has been very irregular during the last 10 years especially. I know nothing of its official closure.

Note 8: Title change in 1941 to Kitte Bunka, then back to Kitte Shumi in 1951. The magazine did not appear in 1944-1947 and 1948-1950 because of political conditions: thus it did not reach Volume 94 until 1982 (2 Volumes per year). Its predecessor in the same format and make-up ran from 1922: although the edition started again with Volume 1 in 1930, this first volume contained the twelfth part of an important article from the previous magazine Sutampu Korekuta.

Note 9: The original title read Mitteilungen über das Gebiet der Luftpostklebezettel [Communications in the field of Air Mail labels]; the change of name to Die Luftpost took place in January 1937. Only a few numbers appeared between the years 1944-1946. A complete set appears to exist only in the Deutsche Bucherei in Leipzig: the publishers themselves no longer have one.

These Tables call for some explanation. The most surprising thing may be that eight magazines on special topics such as entires, air mail, postal history, cancellations, and what are called “Bureau Issues” (i.e. the output of the US Bureau of Engraving and Printing since 1894), etc. have managed to reach their jubilee. For the rest, the leading part played by the Anglo-American press naturally appears again: 24 of the 54 journals listed appeared or appear in English: 11 in the USA, 9 in England, 1 each in Australia, India, New Zealand and South Africa (this today only partly in English: also the American Journal of the Russian Society was originally in Russian, and still publishes occasional papers in Russian today). In addition, I find 8 periodicals in German: 6 in Germany and 2 in Switzerland (both the latter have French, and occasionally also Italian contributions); 7 in French: 5 from France and 2 from Belgium; and 4 in Spanish. The magazines in German, English, French and Spanish make up almost exactly 80% of the publications mentioned here. About 44.5% are in English, 14.6% in German, 13% in French and 7.4% in Spanish, which makes the difference obvious.

If we attempt to break them down into the categories used at the beginning, there are today 27, i.e. exactly 50%, that can be classed as society or association journals (Nos.1, 3, 6-10, 12, 19, 24, 26-28, 30, 32-33, 37, 39-40, 45-47, 49-53). 15 are “house journals” (Nos.2, 4-5, 11, 13-14, 16-17, 22, 25, 31, 35-26, 42, 48), and 12 are “independent” (Nos.15, 18, 20-21, 23, 29, 34, 38, 41, 43-44, 54). The “house journals” also include some belonging to firms no longer in business today, such as Nos.2, 4, 25, or are formally independent such as for example No.35 since 1970. Finally, it should hardly need saying that a long life is no guarantee of high quality. There are outstanding journals such as Nos.6 and 27 - not by chance the society organs for the world’s two leading clubs, and magazines which embody or embodied a high level of philately, such as for example Nos.1, 3, 5, 7-10, 15, 19, 24, 26, 29, and there are others designed for the average collector which still managed to keep high rates of issue. These are the weeklies in particular (Nos.21, 38, 43-44; No.4 is almost entirely an advertising sheet today), but also include Nos.2, 13-14, 18, 23, 25, 34-36, 42, etc. Along with them there are publications which achieved neither a high circulation nor any special quality such as - at least for their time - Nos.10-11, 40 and 45. On the whole though it must be recorded as noteworthy that there have been at least 54 journals devoted to the history of philately - Table III makes no claim to absolute completeness though the gaps will certainly not be numerous - which have achieved a publishing life of 50 years and more, and it is conceivable that in only two years we shall be celebrating the first hundred-year jubilees on this and the other side of the Atlantic.

The physical make-up of the philatelic journals varies very sharply, not only between the various journals but even sometimes within the same one. For example, the Philatelic Gossip began as a monthly, went to fortnightly and at last to weekly issue. These are the most usual forms of issue, with the weeklies being restricted almost exclusively to the Anglo-Saxon world. They also emerged relatively late. After Scott’s experiment failed in the year 1870, the era of successful weeklies did not begin until 1891, with Mekeel’s Weekly Stamp News. It is worth noting that five weeklies still appear amongst the 54 journals in Table III⁽¹⁵⁰⁾.

It was Mekeel also who tried the venture of philatelic daily and kept it up for a whole year: The Daily Stamp Item published 285 four-page issues between the 1st January and 31st December 1896: No. 285 had eight pages they were bound up into four volumes, and are a bibliophilic rarity today. The philatelic world was naturally small, and Mekeel admitted to friends that his little joke had cost him a loss of $5,000. The Daily Philatelic World did not last nearly so long, only about five months from the 5th October 1908 to the 1st March 1909. Its 116 issues afforded the serious philatelist just as little as the Daily Stamp Item. On the other hand, one of the most popular weeklies, the Stamp Collector, at that time when it was still called The Western Stamp Collector appeared twice a week for several years with the result that it reached no. 4,650 in Summer 1985, and now lies scarcely 300 issues behind Mekeel’s Weekly which it might well overtake one day.

However frequencies like these were the great exception: on the continent of Europe even fortnightly like the DZB are rare, and the monthly magazine dominates the field. This is especially true for what are called the mass-circulation journals, whereas those for the specialist generally appear quarterly or at least two monthly.

It is unusual for a journal aimed at the run-of-the-mill collector such as the Minkus Stamp and Coin Journal to be a quarterly. On the other hand, a magazine like the London Philatelist had to change from monthly to bimonthly publication on cost grounds. Many house journals do not willingly confine themselves to the procrustean bed of a fixed day of appearance, and come out “from time to time”. This is only possible however when there is no obligation to subscribers and the magazine is sent out as far as possible free to customers, as was the case with Selection, or the Mercury Stamp Journal.

On this connection a quick word should be said about the numbering of volumes and issues of the journals. Usually one volume covers one complete year of the journal or - if this would be too much - half or even quarter of a year. This last applies in particular to the weeklies. There are exceptions however, as we have seen : The 7th volume of the American Journal of Philately follows directly from the 5th, whilst Volume 6 covers only the short period in which the Journal was a weekly, and follows chronologically from Volume 3. The first year of Écho de la Timbrologie consisted of only two issues, so that the second year could coincide with the calendar year. The same thing happened with the DBZ. Its sixth volume, in 1895, consisted of only three issues (October-December) for the reason quoted. Examples could be multiplied, to the secret joy of the collector of literature⁽¹⁵²⁾. It is equally dramatic when a magazine has to suspend publication for a while because of such acts of Providence as inflation, revolution, etc., or possibly just because of a shortage of ready money. Now, do the missing years get counted in as if nothing had happened, or are they left out of the numbering? This could go in a quiz: name six examples of each alternative. No problem, they could be collected.

Editors have more problems when it comes to numbering the individual issues. It is boring of editors to start every year afresh with No.1, since practically everyone knows his multiplication tables and this form of numbering is pretty well idiot-proof: 4 + 1 is ultimately no problem, whereas at 378 + 1 we can easily get lost in a fog of large numbers. However these are minor matters. It really does become hard when the rate of appearance changes, e.g. from twelve to six times a year as in the case of the London Philatelist. The same problem arises as with the missing years in volume numbering. The London Philatelist solved it by retaining the monthly numbering, so that every issue has two numbers. The same thing happened to Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina, which went from a monthly to a quarterly issue⁽¹⁵³⁾. There are again countless other examples. This way of counting may naturally also lead to gross errors, as can be seen from the 1860's and 1870's of the previous century. One particularly blatant example is given by Suppantchitsch : the Philatelic Journal of Ohio (1887-1892) managed to put out a single issue with the numbers 2-9, so that the entire year consisted de facto of 5 issues⁽¹⁵⁴⁾. On the other hand, the high numbers of the weeklies such as Mekeel's, Linn's, Stamp Collector, etc. are all genuine.

Volumes could be written about the format of the journals. It seems to be the firm belief of philatelic publishers that a change in format is the same as a root and branch reform, otherwise it is difficult to account for the ritual changes in format of even serious papers. A magazine that has gone on for 20 or 30 years in the same format is a rare bird. It is quite understandable that Moens should have gone wrong in his choice of format in 1863: he first decided on the standard newspaper format, but quickly recognised his mistake and stuck to the octavo format once he had adopted it. Since Moens however it has simply been good form to change the format of a journal at least once - to the lasting joy of all librarians who have to shelve one and the same journal in two or more places - but it seems pointless to expect consistency here. A well-known journal such as Écho de la Timbrologie has changed its format at least four times (1893, 1942, 1946 & 1974).

Certain formats predominate according to the type of journal. Specialist journals appearing in a relatively small edition generally choose the octavo format, the more popular ones aimed at a wider readership take the large quarto format of illustrated magazines. Formats smaller than octavo are practically non-existent, and would be rather absurd. However it may be mentioned as a curiosity that The American Collector, six numbers of which appeared in New Chester, Pa. in 1890 had the ridiculous format of 8 x 5 cm: The magazine ... gave the impression of a literary joke as Suppantchitsch very rightly remarked⁽¹⁵⁵⁾. The large format of a daily paper is met with slightly more often, unsuitable though this also may have been for philatelic purposes. Moens began this, and he had a whole series of imitators. There was some sense in it perhaps for weeklies such as the Stamp Collector or Linn's Stamp News, which were printed in the 43.5 x 28 cm size. The record is held by The Curiosity World, which ran to 30 numbers in the 51 x 34 cm format during 1886-1888, though its contents were only partly philatelic⁽¹⁵⁶⁾.

(For comparison, the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung measures 51 x 40 cm).

Now let us turn again to the new journals that appeared in the various countries, this time in the period 1914-1945, and once again we will deal with all the English-language journals together. There are not many titles from Great Britain since most of the great names in the English periodical literature go back to the period before the First World War. In the war year 1915 A. H. Harris started The Philatelic Magazine, an expansion of the Philatelic Circular which he started in 1911, which absorbed the old Monthly Circular of Alfred Smith. Up to 1984 it was the monthly companion of Stamp Collecting which belonged to the same publishing group. The Stamp Magazine, founded in 1934 by T. Todd and published today by Link House, is one of the best-loved English monthlies⁽¹⁵⁷⁾. However the most important newcomer of the inter-war years was beyond doubt the Raconteur, launched by Robson Lowe in 1934, re-titled The Raconteur and Philatelist in the following year, and then The Philatelist and Raconteur the year after that. When R. Lowe acquired the rights to the old Philatelist (1866-1876), he called his magazine simply The Philatelist from October 1937 onwards. In 1966 came the 100-year jubilee, but this was of course a fiction: to be more exact, it was the jubilee of a title. All the same, The Philatelist which numbered some of the finest philatelists in Great Britain amongst its contributors, itself managed to clock up nearly a fifty-year tradition, since it united with the PJGB in 1981 in a shotgun marriage to become The Philatelist and PJGB⁽¹⁵⁸⁾.

The 1930's saw the foundation of a series of other journals of quality as well as The Philatelist, but they have it in common that they all closed down again at the beginning of the Second World War. Thus, from 1933-1939 the well-known firm of Frank Godden produced a quality house journal Godden's Gazette, which was put an end to by the Second World War. The same happened to The Stamp Review, which went to only three volumes (1937-1939), and the Illustrated Philatelic Record, which was conceived "for the serious student of Philately", and only survived for five numbers in 1939-1940. The Philatelic Adviser was started in 1932 by the firm of Alcock Ltd. in Cheltenham, and was originally designed to cover philately world wide. Like so many other journals, the Adviser had to close with Volume 8 of 1940: on its rebirth (Volume 9: 1945/46), it was reoriented towards British cancellations and postal history, so that it had to be reclassified as a specialist journal. Its final closure unfortunately came after 134 issues, with Volume 17 of 1954.

The Empire too produced only a few significant new publications. Foremost amongst them comes the South African Philatelist - the title was used as early as 1895/96 for a short-lived journal in what was then the Transvaal - which has appeared continuously since 1923. Originally this journal was published practically entirely in English, but from the 60s onwards it has gone over more and more to Afrikaans and in 1973 the title was changed to SA-Philatelist, which is correct in both languages. The Australian Stamp Monthly has come from Australia since 1930 and is not exactly a leading journal but has proved to be the longest-lived item from the 5th continent⁽¹⁶⁰⁾.

From Canada came two long-lived journals, one of which did not sound very reliable to a European ear : the Emco Monthly Journal appeared under various names in Toronto from 1919-1966 and got as far as 453 issues. However the Postmark that appeared in Ottawa from 1930-1969 is more important⁽¹⁶¹⁾. Another important journal that has appeared regularly since 1919 is the New Zealand Stamp Collector, the organ of the New Zealand Royal. The well-known Indian philatelist Jal Cooper has published India's Stamp Journal in Bombay since 1937 - the first volume was actually called The Philatelic Orient Stamp News, but in spite of his sincere efforts the magazine has been overshadowed by the Philatelic Journal of India for many years.

In the USA on the other hand the years 1914-1945 were extraordinarily fruitful in the production of outstanding philatelic magazines. It began in 1915 with The Philatelic Gossip which was initially a monthly, then fused with the Hobby Rider (1920-1922), appeared fortnightly for a short time, then from April 1922 settled down as the Weekly Philatelic Gossip until its closure in November 1961. It has contributed greatly to this century's periodical literature opined George Turner about this magazine⁽¹⁶²⁾. Since 1920 it has hardly been possible to think of the philatelic life of America without Scott's Monthly Stamp Journal. Roughly comparable to the Michel-Rundschau in Germany and now in its 63rd year, it has continued to publish details of new issues and substantial articles of general interest. From August 1971 to November 1975 it was called Scott's Monthly Journal, to give the bibliographers a treat⁽¹⁶³⁾.

The Collectors Club Philatelist, whose first issue appeared in January 1922, soon ranked amongst the leading philatelic journals of the USA. Originally a quarterly, it went over to six times a year in 1950. The Philatelist is unquestionably the most representative journal in the USA, even though its circulation is restricted to the number of members of the New York Collectors Club, and is thus not very high. It even published a cumulative index after volume 50, and this item belongs amongst the philatelic rarities, as is well known⁽¹⁶⁴⁾. This magazine retained the same format for 60 years, and then in 1983 a new publisher had the brilliant idea of enlarging the format: by a full 2 cm! The level of articles is high by any standards, and they are not restricted to the USA, but are international in nature. Amongst the members of the Board of Editors have been such famous philatelists as Harry L. Lindquist (1922-1939), Walter McCoy, Franklin R. Bruns, Henry M. Goodkind (1948-1970), etc. The Collectors Club Philatelist ranks after the London Philatelist as one of the world's best scientific journals devoted to general philately.

Figure 320: The Collectors Club Philatelist assumed a leading place amongst the New World's philatelic journals from its first appearance in the year 1922.

Between 1924 and 1939, four new journals were issued in succession by one of the leading American philatelists and prominent experts on the postal history of the Confederate States August Dietz (1870-1963), holder of the Lindenberg (1938) and Lichtenstein (1955) medals. These journals were : The Southern Philatelist (1924-1929), The New Southern Philatelist (1929-1933), then, with a new volume numbering, Stamp and Cover Collecting (1933-1936), and finally The Stamp and Cover Collectors Review (1936-1939), a total of 12 volumes with 156 issues⁽¹⁶⁵⁾. They were all printed by his own press in Richmond, Va. Dietz was a pioneer of postal history, as revealed by his classic work The Postal Service of the Confederate States of America of 1929. The Southern Philatelist also was concerned mainly with the philately of the Confederate States, whereas the titles of the later ones point to a new direction.

Three weeklies came onto the market between 1928 and 1932. All three are still appearing today and enjoy unchanged popularity. Like August Dietz, George W. Linn (1894-1966) came from the printing trade, and published six philatelic journal between 1901-1916, none of which had any particular success⁽¹⁶⁶⁾. He did not achieve a breakthrough until the 1st November 1928 with the first appearance of Linn's Weekly Stamp News, of which about 2,900 issues have appeared so far. When the magazine was bought by the Amos Press Inc. in 1969, the title was shortened to Linn's Stamp News, but the numbering was carried on unaltered⁽¹⁶⁷⁾. Amos Press published Linn's World Stamp Almanac for the first time in 1977. Its 4th edition in 1982 ran to 756 pages, and has proved to be a valuable reference work, though a thorough revision would certainly make it still more useful.

Like Linn's Stamp News, the Western Stamp Collector has appeared since 1931 in the large format of daily papers, and unfortunately on the same type of paper. It was so successful that after some years it was able to appear twice weekly, so that the total number of issues published has now reached 4,650, and it has reached the second place behind Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News, though started a good 40 years later. Here too the purchase of the Van Dahl Publishing Co. by James A Macgruder in 1976 led to the title being shortened to The Stamp Collector⁽¹⁶⁸⁾. However, the most popular weekly was and is Stamps, the first number of which appeared on the 17th September 1932 and has published about 2,600 numbers to date. The editor was Harry L. Lindquist (1884-1978), who played a great part in the philatelic life of America, and even gave the impetus for the formation of an American national union in 1952. Lindquist was the recipient of the Luff Award (1948) and the Lichtenstein Medal (1957), signed the "Roll" in 1947, and was placed in the APS Hall of Fame in 1979.

After these deservedly popular weeklies, amongst which Stamps must take the palm, there is still a whole series of important journals which deserve at least a mention, though there is not room for a full discussion. They are:- Chambers Stamp Journal, which appeared in 45 volumes and 928 issues from 1934-1957, Don Houseworth's International Stamp Review (1938-1946, 286 issues), Philatelic Press (1935-1946, some 146 numbers), Kaw Chief (Stamp) Journal (1932-1945, ca.350 issues), Rice's (Weekly) Postal News (1934-1939, 226 issues), and last but not least the SPA Journal, the official organ of the Society of Philatelic Americans (1939-1984). One especially valuable, research-oriented paper was Pat Paragraphs, from Elliott Perry (1884-1972), which however only published 58 issues between 1931 and 1958, i.e. about 2 per year⁽¹⁷⁰⁾. These are the most important of the great number of publications.

Before we go on to deal with the German-language magazines of the period 1914-1945, a brief mention should be made of a few Scandinavian titles, such as the Danske Filatelist, which was published in Copenhagen from 1924-1952, and maintained a high philatelic level. Also worth mentioning are the Dansk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift (since 1934) and the Norsk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift (since 1938), the official organs of the Danish and Norwegian societies⁽¹⁷¹⁾. The more popularly-directed Nordisk Filateli has been published since 1936 in Stockholm.

The Netherlands also deserve a mention because of the Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie, which has now been appearing for 60 years. Since 1970 it has been called simply Philatelie, retaining its old name as a sub-title. It is the magazine of the Netherlands Philatelic Society⁽¹⁷²⁾. Another society organ is De Postzegel, published in Bruges since 1938 by the Vlaamse Bond von Postzegelverzamelaars, and thus belonging to Belgium. It had reached its 48th volume by 1985. Finally, a quick look at the Balkans, where Philotelia - note the neohellenic "o" - has appeared in Athens since 1924, and thus must be reckoned as the oldest philatelic magazine still appearing in South-Eastern Europe⁽¹⁷³⁾.

In Germany and Austria the period between the two World Wars was a very fruitful one. Sammler-Woche was founded in 1918, and quickly attained an honoured place in the philatelic life of Germany. In 1926 it merged with the year-younger Die Postmarke, whose editor was Edwin Mueller. He led this internationally-acclaimed journal until 1938, but Die Postmarke closed when he emigrated to the USA. It was revived in Vienna from 1946-1948, but unfortunately without success, whereas Sammler-Woche had to close in 1943 like practically all of the philatelic journals in Germany, and unfortunately could never be revived after the war. Not quite on the same level, but still most estimable were Die Main-Post (1922-1941), and Die Sammler Post (1926-1941), which both fell sacrifice to the war economy as early as 1941, whereas Die Donau-Post (1918-1942) did at least manage to survive for 25 years.

The best-known current German journal, the Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde (DZB), uses the abbreviation DBZ, which was however, also the abbreviation for the old Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung (1890-1923). The present one began its career in 1925 as the Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung, published by the dealers and auctioneers S. W. Hess in Frankfurt-am-Main. From No.9 in 1926 it carried Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde as a sub-title, and then this became the main title with No.4 of the year 1930. After the usual interruption from 1943-1949, the DZB went through a crisis in the 1970s which was reflected in the circulation figures. However this crisis has been satisfactorily overcome since L. Trondle took over the editorship. The DZB publishes beyond question the major proportion of all German-language advertisements, which contributes not a little to its popularity. Originally it was only obtainable on subscription, but has recently become available in railway kiosks, etc. Something that deserves at least a brief mention is Sieger-Post, probably the house organ with the world's largest circulation, which started in 1927, was called Deutsche Briefmarken-und-Flugpost-Zeitung from 1937-1944, but reverted to the old name in 1950⁽¹⁷⁴⁾.

A magazine that was good to begin with was G und M. Zeitung, which however was unfortunately then misused by R. Siegel to promote his forgeries, and failed in 1923 after only two years of existence⁽¹⁷⁵⁾. Another that only lasted for two years was Baseler Taube, put out by the Basle stamp firm of E. Müller in 1928-29. The paper of the highest quality had the ill luck to be started just before the great crash of 1929, and did not survive the subsequent depression. H. Kohler also brought out a publication of his own in 1925, but Kohlers Philatelistisches Magazin only managed to bring out eleven numbers from 1925-1936, and appeared at very irregular intervals. Finally mention should be made of two German language philatelic journals that appeared in Czechoslovakia: Die Briefmark in Teplitz, 1921-1931, and Der Philatelist in Haida, 1926-1939⁽¹⁷⁶⁾.

The years 1914-1945 were not a time of blossoming in the Latin countries, although there are some noteworthy names to be mentioned. Two important specialised periodicals appeared in France, but hardly any general-interest magazines were started during this period. There was really no need for them in view of the unbroken publication of the Écho, the Collectionneur, the Echangiste, the Timbre-Poste, etc. As mentioned before, Timbre-Poste became the Echangiste Universelle with et le Timbre-Poste added to the title. Mention is also due to the short-lived Messenger Philatélique, (1928-1929), sponsored by the Académie de Philatélie. This dealt with aerophilately, cancellations and pre-philately, and it must be regretted that it only ran for a year. A change of name to Le Moniteur Philatélique at the beginning of its second year (March 1929) brought about no change and there was only the one number under the new title.

I shall also include here a magazine that has actually been published in Cairo from 1929, but was almost exclusively in French during its early years. This is L'Orient Philatélique. Later, English and Arabic predominated, and 130 issues appeared up to 1979, but in recent years the Orient has appeared very irregularly (usually only 1-2 numbers a year) and now seems to have ceased. There is not much more to report from Belgium, but as well as the Flemish magazine already listed, there are at least two in French: Le Philatliste Belge, for over half a century (1920-1974), was the organ of the Belgian society, and maintained a high level for many years. The Balasse Magazine has been the house journal of the Willy Balasse dealer and auction firm, and will shortly celebrate its half-century. As well as its own unavoidable adverts, the Magazine publishes excellent articles and is beyond question one of Europe's best house journals.

1919 saw the first appearance in Italy of the Corriere Filatelico, published in Milan by Leopoldo Rivolta, to which Dr. Emilio Diena contributed numerous articles. It was the first Italian journal to achieve international recognition: only the Second World War put an end to it in 1943. After the Corriere, the Filatelica published by G. Tedeschi in Turin deserves notice. It appeared from 1917-1930, published articles in foreign languages as well, and always gave a French summary at the end of every article⁽¹⁷⁷⁾. No new journals of worth are to be reported from Spain, but South America can supply three names. Uruguay Filatelico appeared for the first time in Uruguay in 1928 as the house organ of the Montevideo Club, and Chile Filatelico began in Chile in 1929. Today these are the second- and third- longest-lived periodicals in South America, even though they appeared about 35 years after the Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina. In 1932 came Brazil Filatelico, the organ of the Clube Filatelico de Brasil of Rio de Janeiro. This is the fourth of the four great South American journals by which South American philately is distinguished today⁽¹⁷⁸⁾.

A look at Japan for the period 1914-1945 cannot be omitted. The first purely philatelic magazine in Japan, Yuraku, has already been mentioned. Many others followed, but one above all deserves prominence : the Japanese dealer Ichiro Yoshida, whom we met earlier as a leading catalogue publisher, began in 1922 to publish an unpretentious little magazine Sutampu Korekuta, which gained stature with the years, so that Yoshida was induced to publish from 1928 onwards an overseas edition as well, on better paper and with two pages of text in German or English. This developed into a new journal Kitto Shumi, which began to appear from January 1930: in July 1941 this was renamed Kitte Bunka with the old volume numbering retained. It finished with the April 1944 issue. Yoshida did indeed manage to revive Kitte Bunka in January 1947, but in July 1948 he had to capitulate to inflationary pressures. His son Riichi Yoshida published a special number in honour of his father in April 1950, and in May 1951 he revived the magazine under its old name of Kitte Shumi. This is the only present day Japanese journal that reaches back to the years before the Second World War⁽¹⁷⁹⁾.

This concludes our survey of the philatelic periodical literature of the epoch 1914-1945. Obviously it has had to be restricted to those countries and languages in which philately is found, which involves the risk that some valuable journal or other published in a more exotic language has escaped my attention. The same criteria must now be applied to the last period to be dealt with, the one since 1945. I shall begin as usual with the English-language journals. First of all, two house journals that both reach a high philatelic level: The Strand Stamp Journal (1949-1962) from the firm of Wingfield & Co., which came to an end when Wingfield & Co. were bought by Stanley Gibbons Ltd., and Saunders' Philatelic Journal (1955-1964, 115 issues). The Philatelist and PJGB might be included as well, since the merger of these two in 1981 produced, in practice, a new journal. Also in 1981, appeared the first issue of Stamps (and Postal History) News, which has now gone into its fifth volume and incorporated the old traditional papers Stamp Collecting and Philatelic Magazine in 1984. The editor is Irwin Margolis. The Commonwealth has again not produced many new titles. One very good one with numerous valuable scientific contributions is Philately from Australia, the organ of the "Royal" of Victoria (from 1949), whilst Stamp News (from 1954) has a more popular outlook⁽¹⁸⁰⁾. The official organ of the "Royal" of Canada is The Canadian Philatelist (from March 1950), which has also built up a good reputation for itself.

There has been rather more in the USA. From 1947-1962 Edwin Mueller published a total of 62 issues of the Mercury Stamp Journal. Advertising was kept to a minimum in this house journal, and Mueller wrote every issue himself from the first line to the last. His judgements were often personal but always competent, and his profound philatelic knowledge made the Journal one of the best philatelic magazines that has ever appeared⁽¹⁸¹⁾. Far less important was The Stamp World, though it went from 1944-1964 in 21 volumes with 110 numbers. This is a popular title: after another Stamp World from Brooklyn (1961-1963) - the former one was published in Missouri - Linn's put a popular monthly on the market under this name in May 1981, this has survived to the present day under various names. Another one with a popular tone is Minkus Stamp Journal, which has appeared quarterly since 1966 and has been called Minkus Stamp and Coin Journal since 1980. Finally we should also mention Stamp Show

News (from 1975), which has been known as Stamp Show News and Philatelic Review since 1979 and corresponds in level roughly to Scott's Monthly.

Figure 321: The Mercury Stamp Journal was produced by Edwin Mueller alone from the first line to the last.

Before we go on to deal with Germany, let us again take a quick look at Scandinavia. Two news names appear alongside the old-established ones. The Finnish Philatelic Society has published Philatelica Fennica since 1951 in Finnish and Swedish. It has now reached its 34th volume. Frimaerkesamleren (The Danish Stamp Collector) is aimed much more definitely at the collector: it is now in its 42nd year of publication in Ballerup. On the other hand, Frimærker som Hobby has only been appearing for a few years in Oslo: its title indicates its popular slant.

Apart from the DBZ, only a few journals, mostly house organs, survived the Second World War. It is thus not surprising to find a relatively high number of publications since 1945, most of them naturally after the currency reform of 1948. One exception is the Sammler-Lupe which began in 1946. In 1948 it passed into the ownership of Dr. W. Ploenes, who ran it until his early death in the year 1964. His successor was E. Mewes, who maintained the high level of the journal, but it had to close down on the 31st December 1974 in spite of all his efforts because of a shortage of adverts. This is so often the fate of an independent journal: quality is not enough, there must be adverts as well. The Sammler-Dienst has appeared regularly every fortnight since 1949 and has managed to retain a solid core of subscribers to the present day. The originally small format was changed to the customary quarto in 1983, and since then it has adopted a modern layout with colour not forgotten. In its new form (from Volume 35) the Sammler-Dienst is one of the most carefully turned out periodicals in the German-speaking world. It is of course aimed principally at the hobby collector.

From 1957 onwards the firm of Schwanenberger-Verlag has extended its monthly supplement to the Michel catalogue, the Michel-Rundschau into a proper magazine on the lines of Scott's Monthly. Naturally, the emphasis is still on new issues. A positive response was obtained in 1961 by the Briefmarken-Spiegel, the only philatelic magazine in Germany to be sold principally at news-stands. Finally, the firm of Borek decided to convert their then publication Borek-Berichte, which contained mainly offers and was somewhat similar to Sieger-Post, into a new journal called Briefmarken-Welt, which is consciously intended to be a specialist periodical. Naturally, with its high circulation it is designed in the main to promote philately as a hobby, like all the others just mentioned is not specifically research-oriented, and really cannot be so at all. Only Philatelie the organ of the BDPh, has regularly published a supplement since 1966, Philatelie und Postgeschichte, which contains truly scientific contributions and is financed by the Foundation⁽¹⁸³⁾.

The Swiss firm of Rapp-Verlag published a magazine for the first time in 1983, Rapport Das Freizeitmagazin für echte Sammler. This was supposed to cater for all collecting hobbies, but the content was at least 60% philatelic. It was well edited and very well produced, but ceased to appear in 1985. The Jahrbuch der Philatelie published 1982/84 in Stuttgart was not a true periodical, but its ca.100 pages made room for current problems along with many adverts. In May 1984 it also changed to a bimonthly under the title of Briefmarken-Magazin. Naturally, it tends predominantly towards the popular Freizeit-Philatelie.

Figure 322: To celebrate its 30th anniversary Le Monde des Philatélistes produced this vignette. The engraver was one of the best-known French stamp engravers – Decaris.

Some important new journals have appeared since 1945 in France and Italy. The important French daily Le Monde, has been publishing the monthly journal Le Monde des Philatélistes since October 1951. It has now reached more than 375 numbers and enjoys great popularity, although it is printed on ordinary newspaper. The Paris dealer Leon Miro has published his own house journal Selection since March 1950, and Maurice Burrus has written some interesting articles for it. 23 issues have appeared at irregular intervals from 1950-1958. Finally, the French Federation has issued its own magazine since 1952: La Philatélie Française, now in its 31st year. It is not sent automatically to all members of the Federation, but has to be specially ordered, so that its circulation is well below the number of members of the French society⁽¹⁸⁵⁾. A high-circulating newcomer that has just appeared on the market is the brightly-written Timbroscopie (No.1: March 1984), which features numerous coloured illustrations, is aimed chiefly at the average collector but does include the classics in its reporting. The editor is Georges Bartoli. Another one, not nearly so carefully produced, is the Belgian journal Revue du Timbre, which has appeared since the 1950's.

Figure 323: In its heyday (around 1962-1974), Filatelìa was one of the greatest philatelic magazines ever published.

Figure 324: The Nuovo Corriere Filatelico continues the great tradition of the Corriere in a worthy manner and is today probably the leading philatelic magazine in Italy.

The post-war years were much more productive in Italy than in France. From 1944-1950, Luigi Raybaudi Massilia edited Italia Filatelica. This was taken over by the firm of Bolaffi from Volume 7 1951, and merged with their own house journal Il Collezionista. This was founded in 1948, when its title was La Settimanale Filatelica. The combined journal is called Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica. It is popular in tone, comes out 12 times a year at present and has thus reached No.720 by 1985⁽¹⁸⁶⁾. The Notiziario A.S.I.F di Storia Postale appeared from 1960-1980, and published 188 issues. This was the organ of the Associazione Sanitari Italiani Filatelici i.e. a society of philatelists in the sanitary engineering field. As the name suggests, this valuable journal, published throughout by Silvano Sorani in Milan, was devoted mainly to classical philately and postal history.

Luigi Raybaudi Massilia, who was mentioned above, started in Rome in 1963 one of the best produced and at the same time best edited philatelic journals of all time. Filatelìa – the most technical and deluxe magazine ever devoted to philately in the judgement of so competent an expert as Vito Salierno⁽¹⁸⁷⁾. Originally it was designed to have six issues a year, then in 1965 it went over to monthly publication (11 issues a year), then there were only 10 in 1974 it returned to its original pattern but after 1978 it ceased to appear regularly. The great period of Filatelìa extended to about 1975/76: from 1974 it was edited by Aldo Ausilio in Padua. It lost much of its old brilliance in later years, since it lacked major articles and quite superfluously started dealing with numismatics, which damaged the homogeneity of the journal very considerably. It now seems to have stopped altogether: No.167 was dated May 1980, No.168 August 1980, and since then nothing more has been heard of it. Still, nothing can alter the fact that Filatelìa must be ranked as one of the most magnificent philatelic journals ever to appear not just in Italy but in the entire world.

However it was not the only high-class publication published in Italy since the 1960's. Cronaca Filatelica appeared in a limited edition in Turin from 1971: in 1976 it was transferred to the firm of Eder (P. De Rosa) in Naples, who in a very short time made it into the highest-circulation philatelic magazine in Italy. It is carefully produced and brightly written, deals with numismatics as well to some extent, is sold on bookstalls, and like Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica appeals mainly to the hobby collector. The same was true of Francobolli, published from 1970 as the house journal of the firm of Sassone, and naturally included monthly catalogue supplements. It ceased to appear in 1984. The name Francobolli is now used by Il Collezionista as a sub-title in place of Italia Filatelica. The Vito Salierno who has already been mentioned several times has published the Nuovo Corriere Filatelico in Florence since 1975. This is a bimonthly aimed at the advanced philatelist and oriented chiefly towards postal history, though it is open to all branches of philately and by no means only that of Italy. When it comes to the philatelic weight of the publications, the Nuovo Corriere is definitely in the forefront of Italian journals today. Whilst Cronaca Filatelica appears monthly - so does the Tribuna del Collezionista now in its 11th year - the Nuovo Corriere is restricted to six issues a year.

However since 1981, the Nuovo Corriere has had some very keen competition from the Cursores previously mentioned, the organ of the A. I. S. P. and the Swiss Society of Old Letter and Special Collectors (SASV). Although it is really a specialist magazine for postal history. This multilingual paper carefully edited by Paolo Vollmeier covers practically the entire spectrum of traditional, classical, and pre-philately, including the study of cancellations. Unfortunately it has not appeared for a full two years, which is most regrettable, since in its two years of existence Cursores proved to be one of the best philatelic journals to appear in recent years.

El Eco Filatélico (y Numismatico) has appeared fortnightly at Pamplona in Spain since 1945. It is obviously popular, but produced with little care and aimed at the average collector. Of much more interest was the Informacion de Filatelia y Historia postal. Sección Filatélica published in Baral from 1973-76 in a total of 6 parts with 262 pages. It reached a high standard, but unfortunately was very short-lived. A newer journal is the Revista de Filatelia, known as RF for short, produced by the well-known catalogue firm of Edifil in Madrid. This has now reached its 18th year (185 issues), is very carefully produced and is also rather popular in tone. FESOFI, the organ of the Spanish Philatelic Society founded in 1964, appears three times a year, whereas Cronica Filatelica has reached a high circulation since 1983.

In Japan too a lively philatelic life was soon resumed after 1945, and naturally gave rise to a number of periodicals, but this is not the place to describe them, since they all deal practically exclusively with the philately of Japan, i.e. are really specialist journals. Only one will be mentioned, since it does now and then publish articles on non-Japanese subjects such as the old German states(!) I mean the Kitte Kenkyu (literally: Philatelic Research, but the English title is Monthly Bulletin of the Institute of Philately, Japan), which has been the official organ of Kitte Kenkyu Kai the Institute of Philately since August 1950, founded by Baron Takaharu Mitsui, (Society for Philatelic Research; the official English name is Institute of Philately, Japan) is published regularly to this day. Baron Takaharu Mitsui (*1900), who incidentally lived for many years in Germany and has a fine old Germany collection. He is, even ahead of Dr. Ichida, the undisputed Nestor of Japanese philately and has published countless articles and books on philatelic questions. He has also founded a number of societies and periodicals, and was a juror in New York, 1936. It is of course questionable whether Kitte Kenkyu will survive its founder⁽¹⁸⁸⁾.

The most important items in the philatelic journal literature of the post-war period have now been listed, except for the specialist magazines which will be dealt with separately. Naturally, philatelic journals have also been published in the Eastern block countries, and they do contain relevant articles now and then, but for the most part they are filled with political propaganda and indoctrination, unfortunately. Since every detail is to be controlled by the goodness and wisdom of Big Brother, the philatelic journals are generally restricted to one per country: anybody who is interested in the names can find them in Linn's Almanac. Only in the DDR is there slightly more diversity: in addition to Sammler-Express, the Luftpost-Nachrichten appears to be a specialist journal.

Before we go on finally to the specialist journals, a few more remarks should be given about the level of circulation of philatelic journals. This has fluctuated very sharply over the decades, and still does fluctuate. I pointed out earlier that the circulation level of a journal must be seen in conjunction with its purpose: as matters stand a society journal can not compete with what were characterised at the outset as mass-circulation papers. There are also differences in chronology: on the whole, the magazines had a much lower circulation before the Second World War than they did later. Unfortunately there are usually few concrete data, especially for the pre-1914 journals.

Most of the small papers of the 1860's and 1870's had to be content with a circulation of a few hundreds. Even the best-known publications of those years, such as the Stamp Collector's Magazine or Le Timbre-Poste could hardly reach 1,000, or at best 2,000, and this is a generous estimate. The Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal from the Senf Bros. had 500 subscribers in the 1870's, and this was looked on as highly satisfactory. In the early 1880's, the number sank to only 300. Then began a steep rise which took it to more than 7,000 by the end of 1884, 10,000 in the year 1886, and 17,500 in 1891 - a number which its competitors in Europe could only dream about⁽¹⁹⁰⁾. A circulation of 7,000 was looked on as absolutely the limit in Great Britain at that time.

It should also be borne in mind that the circulation was not necessarily the same throughout the year. To stay with the example of the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal, the first number of its 13th year (1886) ran to 25,000(!) copies, Nos.2 and 3, 8,000 and after that the circulation stayed at the 10,000 mentioned above. Obviously the first number for the year 1886 was used for an advertising campaign, which explains the excessive size of the issue. This shows however how misleading it can sometimes be to draw conclusions about the regular circulation of a journal from the print run for a single issue. This is how we should treat the report that Mekeel managed to sell 125,000 copies of a single issue of his Weekly in 1893 or 1896: this has no connection with the real circulation of the paper⁽¹⁹¹⁾.

On the whole, even the more popular journals had quite a limited circulation. When Gibbons' Stamp Monthly first appeared under its new name in 1927, the circulation was 7,000⁽¹⁹²⁾ and this was looked on as outstanding. Lindquist's famous Stamps Magazine started in 1932 with a circulation of 10,000, and only five years later had reached 35,000, which was truly sensational for that period. Even as late as 1945 George Turner described it as having perhaps the widest circulation and popularity that any philatelic magazine had ever managed to reach⁽¹⁹³⁾. This is not still true by present-day standards, but it does show the order of size that people thought in up to the end of the Second World War. A change has taken place in the meantime, and the number of current journals whose circulation exceeds 20,000 must be at least two dozen.

However, then and now a circulation of 1,000,000 remains an unattainable dream in philately. Certainly the Sieger-Post has sometimes reached, and even exceeded, this dream limit, but we must not forget that this is a trade paper issued almost exclusively gratis. The 65,000 level of Philatelie, the organ of the BDPh must be seen from this point of view as well: this journal goes out free to all the members. The leaders in the group of purchasable journals print between 40 and 60,000 copies, and we must bear in mind the difference between numbers printed and numbers sold: the latter are always a few thousand lower. Amongst these leaders are, in Germany⁽¹⁹⁴⁾ the Michel-Rundschau, which however owes its high circulation in the first place to the supplements to the Michel catalogue that it contains, and also the DZB. In France there are Le Monde des Philatélistes, L'Écho de la Timbrologie and Timbroscopie, in Great Britain Stamp Monthly and The Stamp Magazine. It is entirely possible that a Japanese journal belongs in this category, but unfortunately I have no figures. In the USA we must of course mention The American Philatelist with a circulation of over 50,000, though here again receipt of the journal depends on membership of the American Philatelic Society. Linn's Stamp Weekly, with a weekly circulation of ca. 60,000 stands alone amongst the commercial papers.

In a second group with a circulation of 20-40,000 I would put S-D, Briefmarken-Welt, and Briefmarken-Spiegel in Germany, La Philatélie Française in France, Stamp Collecting and The Philatelic Magazine in Great Britain (up to 1984), Cronaca Filatelica and Il Collezionista-Francobolli in Italy, Philatelie in the Netherlands, and Stamps Magazine, The Stamp Collector, Scotts' Monthly Stamp Journal and perhaps also the Minkus Stamp and Coin Journal in the USA. One or other paper that ought to be included in this category may very well be missing, since I have not been able to get figures from Belgium, Spain, Switzerland, Canada, Japan, etc., etc., but even so I have made no attempt at completeness⁽¹⁹⁵⁾. All I have tried to do is make it plain what is meant by a "mass-circulation" philatelic paper as described at the outset.

I shall deliberately not try to list all the ccc

References

CHAPTER 20

For the Scientific Collector: Monographs and Handbooks

Now that I have dealt with catalogues and journals in two previous chapters, it remains to deal with the 'actual' literature that reaches the reader in book form. Obviously this method of spreading philatelic knowledge is of more recent date than the oldest catalogues and periodicals, especially as the literature on forgeries will not be discussed again here (i). However it is equally obvious that philatelic literature in the form of monographs and specialised handbooks will appeal to a minority, i.e. research philatelists.

This gives me the opportunity to return once more to the question of 'research in philately', though I will treat it only very briefly, as I have already dealt with it in another place ~ By research I mean that form of mental activity which strives to obtain fresh results by the application of a scientific method. Two points are important in this connection; one, the use of a scientific method, not necessarily the historical one, and two, the production of fresh results. The simple combination of well-known facts - and by this I do not mean the barefaced plagiarism which has been so widespread in philately - may have its own value but it is definitely not research, and the same applies to clever attempts at classification; an 'expert' is not necessarily a 'scientist'; an expert is a connoisseur, and that is something quite different <3>. We now ask how much philatelic research is appreciated, and the answer is; very little. Of course the word is in every mouth; it is common currency amongst those who do not 'research' at all. Nobody talks about being 'interested' in a subject, no-one is just 'seeking information'; no, they must all be 'researching', as if it were a disgrace to work over facts, including familiar ones. This undisciplined use of the word has the most damaging results for philately in its relationship to neighbouring disciplines, since the advocates of this type of 'research' naturally get laughed at as a rule; at least one of the reasons why philately has not found a place in the universities - and is not likely to do so in the foreseeable future - is that in more than a hundred years philatelists have still not learned to distinguish the simple collection of facts, such as is the daily bread of a journalist for example, from true research. 'Changing labels is simply not a gentlemanly crime.'

From what has already been said, it should be obvious that philatelic research is not and will never be a mass recreation. If research is to be seriously undertaken it is - and will always be - restricted to a small circle or people. There is hardly any statement more silly than the one so often heard at all sorts of philatelic meetings; 'More needs to be written', as if some kind of mystic transformation will suddenly convert quantity into quality. Really, the sad fact is that much too much gets written. One carefully planned handbook, one really exhaustive monograph per year performs a better service for philately than hundreds upon hundreds of the little tracts that swamp us every year. No, we do not need more writing, we need better writing - and this will call for intelligence.

I don't know what he means, do you? - perhaps changing labels - forgery.

P887-908 + 909-923

2

Does this mean that philatelic research is to be a monopoly of academics, perhaps even of professors? Obviously not, and by no means only because philately is just not a University discipline. Even in purely academic subjects such as archaeology, physics, mathematics etc where research is in fact practically a monopoly of academics and even professors, there have often been outsiders who have made essential contributions to the research. Anyone seriously interested, who is willing to acquire the necessary methodical fundamentals, can make his own contribution. The prerequisite is respect for the basic rules of scientific work in general, and of historical study in particular.

However these are sinned against all the time. I will not speak of the shameless copying that sometimes goes on for page after page - without quotation marks of course - every honourable person would avoid this as a matter of course even if he did not understand the basic rules of science, otherwise he would be very much in the wrong. We begin with the rules for quotation and end by knowing the literature relating to the chosen subject. None of these are 'arcana' accessible only to the initiated: anyone can pick up this knowledge. However, anyone who thinks he can disregard the rules of scientific work and still 'do research' must not be surprised to find himself dubbed as a plagiarist and charlatan. The blame then lies with himself, and himself alone.

The outcries against non-serious 'pseudo-research' to coin a term, have been world-wide. In 1966 Robert L. D. DAVIDSON spoke out sharply against the 'degeneration' of philatelic research, and people agreed with him cap. In the following year, Carl H. SCHEELE was more specific, and tried to lay down some practical guidelines like those used in training historians (5). SCHEELE was then the curator of the philatelic section of the 'SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION' and certainly no fool; he was a leading historian, and his advice contained nothing that should have been unfamiliar to the specialist. However, he let himself be trounced by a man of the 3rd rank, or he would have proved that ""24 historians can hold a conclave on the point of a needle""⁽⁶⁾. Thus the incentive to try and raise the level was lost.

On the other side, Henry M. GOODKIND (1904-1970), then editor of the 'Collectors Club Philatelist', and moreover an aerophilatelist, not a classical philatelist, wrote in 1954 that: In our opinion, philately deserves censure because of its almost total neglect of its scholarship and scholars... 'He suggested the foundation of a 'Fellowship' - a type of scholarship - for philatelic research, though of course nothing came of this, and believed strongly that the neglect of philatelic research had to stop, and that the few researchers ('scholars') in philately were being misused ('). This described the position really accurately, but obviously nothing has changed.

The reader is probably inclined to see a contradiction between GOODKIND'S statement that there were only a few scholars, and the meaning that 'research' has in most people's mouths, but the contradiction is only seemingly so. GOODKIND'S suggestion as to the lack of serious research was as correct in 1954 as it still is today; but the accent is on 'serious'. This has in no way prevented the need for research being testified at dozens of meetings, or the passing of resolutions, framing of projects etc etc. What society has not begun its activities with the resolve to publish a

Again, don't quite see what point is being made here, this is more or less literal.

P887-908 + 909-923

3

Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

handbook - generally multivolume. Only, it came to carrying out all these beautiful resolutions, and then people found to their real or pretended astonishment that there was simply nobody capable of actually writing such a handbook. Real researchers, i.e. not just transcribers and blind followers of what is already perfectly familiar, are in fact in short supply.

What I have already said may give the layman the impression that nothing is dearer than research to the heart of philatelists. The opposite is the truth. For at least 90% of philatelists in the "BD Ph - the proportion may be still higher - the subjects of research and literature are 'hooked to' the purchase of the latest catalogue (s)

. However this is not just a typical German trait, the same applies all over the world, as can be seen from GOODKIND'S statement. Moreover it is not a new development, it really is 'old hat', at the 17th German Philatelic Day at Regensburg in 1905, Dr. Ludwig KONIG said in his talk on 'Philatelic Literature' that 'The topic enjoyed no popularity in wide philatelic circles' (9).

Not only the actual research, but interest in the results of this research, remains confined in the same way to a narrow circle of experts and amateurs. Carl BECK wrote in 1925 - he was then Chairman of the Literature Section of the 'League of German Philatelic Societies' - as follows:

'It is usual to speak of literature as the stepchild of philately, but not accurate, since it has caring parents, but this product of high intellect has not succeeded in winning itself a large circle of friends, so that it would be more correct to call collectors an ungrateful set of people. And that is what they are, since try as one might, one always wants to have at least a tiny bit of recognition in return' (⁰). From which we may conclude that if not the stepchild, philatelic literature is at least the sickly child of philately.

Under these conditions it is no wonder that the number of really significant monographs is not even fairly great. It is the same old story when all is said and done: there is an endless amount of writing which swells the bibliographies out to monstrous volumes, but anything substantial and permanent occurs seldom. This leads on to the question of what is worthy of being put into a philatelic library.

This is not to break into the subject of 'libraries', which deserve a chapter to themselves⁽ⁱⁱ⁾; nor do I intend to lay down rules as to what belongs in a philatelic library. I merely intended to give a few basic thoughts on the collection of philatelic literature.

One may collect philatelic literature as a bibliophile (which would more or less exclude the purchase of reprints, and would tend more towards rare or expensive books without regard for their philatelic content); we can try to build up a private library which will be for practical use in the first place, perhaps aiming to have at least one standard monograph from every country issuing stamps before the First World War, and finally, we can collect literature simply from the point of view of our own research⁽¹²⁾. In this connection' Dr. Norgler' (alias Dr. H. BRENDICKE) remarked as early as 1895 that 'most philatelic literature is not worth collecting as far as its contents go'⁽¹³⁾

This means there are a large number of bibliophilic treasures, perhaps surviving today in only two or three examples, or perhaps even in only a single one, which are totally meaningless as far as their contents are concerned, and are thus worthless to the research philatelist. We may recall here the numerous journals of which only one or two issues appeared: no doubt they are great rarities, but one could hardly think of anything less important than these little magazines. We can say that purely from the standpoint of the modern researcher the entire literature of the 19th century, with an insignificant number of exceptions, can be looked on as waste paper. Objective rarity is thus a very doubtful criterion in the field of philatelic literature, although even important works often had very small print runs.

Society of German Philatelists.

P887-908 4 - 909-923

4

After these general remarks on the subject of 'Research and Literature', it is now finally time to get down to the actual subject of this chapter, i.e. the literature itself. A few more preliminary remarks may be permitted: what follows will not and cannot be bibliography, which to be complete would have to be five or six times as long; not even the bibliographies could be dealt with exhaustively here. . Hence I must give a selection, on the correctness of which there can of course be different opinions thus, the specialist may miss one book or other which deserved to be included and was not necessarily left out because the writer did not know about it. In particular I have had, though reluctantly, to break off my systematic study about the year 1950, because after that time the literature becomes so extensive and so hard to digest that a survey could only degenerate into a very incomplete bibliography, which is what I wanted to avoid. I shall thus limit myself to a general appreciation of the modern literature at the end of the chapter, where I shall also discuss some of the recent trends in research.

To economize on space, I shall not deal in any great detail with anything already discussed in another place; moreover the next chapter will deal with ten outstanding research personalities, whose philatelic work I will naturally not go into again in this chapter (14). Further, I shall only describe books outstanding because of their range as well as the importance of their subjects. Thin pamphlets on all-too-familiar subjects were thus not to be included. Also, the literature included is restricted essentially to the five international languages German, English, French, Italian and Spanish, since I have as little command of the Slavic languages as of those of the Near East or Asia, and so cannot give my own personal opinion of the quality of any works in these languages. The main weight of the survey is moreover on 'classic' philately and postal history. Literature on forgeries, as mentioned at the beginning, will not be dealt with again; aerophilately has given rise to only a few basic monographs in addition to its excellent catalogues and these have mostly appeared since 1950; however I have given a rapid description of them in a sort of appendix to this work. Motif philately has also been excluded, since there has been no really satisfactory literature in this field as yet ^(is)

. It should also be kept in mind that the following papers are meant as a historical survey and not as a reference work. Hence works have often been included which to the modern researcher would contain little or nothing new, but which were fine performances in their own day. Our survey begins with the late 1870s, since the older monographs have already been dealt with in another place ⁽¹⁶⁾

. The greatest problem for the early philatelists was to get hold of the literature they knew about. It was the great merit of John Kerr TIFFANY, to remove this state of distress in 1874 with the publication of what was then a trailblazing work; 'The Philatelic Library. A Catalogue of Stamp Publications'. Since TIFFANY was very wealthy, he could afford to have his book (112 quarto pages) privately printed in an edition of 150 copies and give them away to his friends. MOSCHKAU noted with special pride that he belonged to the fortunate few to whom the author dedicated his work. Later, TIFFANY planned a sort of 2nd edition; 'The Stamp Collector's Library Companion. A Chronological Catalogue of all Publications wholly or chiefly in the interests of Stamp Collecting Brought up to January 1st 1889'. However, all that appeared was 'Part 1 : United States - Periodicals, Chicago 1889' in a work of 24 pages, to which a six-page 'Addenda' was added in the following year ⁽¹⁷⁾

P887-908 ! 909-923

5

Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

. TIFFANY'S book of 1874 was the first attempt at a worldwide survey of philatelic literature. The attempt came very early, and was incomplete 37 years after TIFFANY, in the year 1911, Edward Denny BACON published the second, and so far the last attempt at a complete bibliography, the famous catalogue of Lord CRAWFORD'S library. Although this was meant to be a library catalogue - and will be described as such later on ⁽¹⁸⁾ - this not to be too highly rated work has entirely the character of a bibliography, since BACON was sensible enough to include works known to him but not in the library as 'Wanted'. Thus, the entire philatelic literature of the world up to the year 1908 is included in this unique work, with a few quite trifling exceptions ⁽¹⁹⁾. I do not know of any other bibliography covering the entire world: the 'Mondial' supplement of Fritz BILLIG may have had this ambition, but was very far from carrying it out ⁽²⁰⁾

. On the other hand, a number of bibliographies of a country or a given language have been produced. The oldest is the one by Privy Councillor Philippe de BOSREDON, which dates from 1878. It gives a more or less complete bibliography of the French-language literature (i.e. including Belgium), and was originally published in 'Bulletin del la Society Fran~aise de Timbrologie' ⁽²¹⁾ (Bulletin of the French Society of Stamp Collectors). It is however - like many other bibliographies from the period before 1900 - totally outclassed by the Crawford Catalogue, and only of historical interest now. This does not apply to the bibliography published by Emmanuel BLANC in 1949; this also covers the entire philatelic literature in the French language, but unfortunately the treatment is very superficial. Its greatest defect is the failure to cover periodicals, which were obviously too much trouble for the author. The book was published by : 'Editors Berger-Levrault', the firm whose founder published one of the oldest philatelic works in the world ⁽²²⁾. On the other hand, the bibliography published in 1972 by the 'Academie de Philatelie de Belgique' has proved of great value ⁽²³⁾. Naturally it is restricted to Belgium alone, but does include works in the Flemish language. More than a decade older, and much more detailed, is the 'Bibliografia della Posta e Filatelia italiane' (Bibliography of Italian Posts and Philately), carefully edited by Count Luigi PILONI, and an indispensable aid for anyone dealing with topics relating to Italy ⁽²⁴⁾

. A model work for its period was produced by Viktor SUPPANTSCHITSCH, but even this is quite overshadowed by the Crawford Catalogue: nevertheless anyone who does not possess a copy should try to borrow one, as the 'Suppantisch' is very hard to come by second-hand, and is still valuable today from the historical angle (25). The same is true of the slim volume he published ten years later, 'The Origin and Development of Philatelic Literature in the Second Half of the XIX Century', in which he pursued the subject of 1892 with riper judgement and better understanding of the material (26)

P887-908 + 909-923

6

In 1916/18 Max THON published a 'Handbook to the German philatelic literature', which has only on drawback, namely that it appeared too soon after the Crawford Catalogue (27). Unfortunately, no bibliography exists of the German-language philatelic literature of the more recent period, and this is an urgent need for research. The 'Literatur-Nachrichten' (Literature Reports) published every year since 1951 by the literature section of the BD Ph (28) is a very valuable aid, but still cannot replace a proper bibliography. It should be noted in particular that 'Literatur-Nachrichten' does cover numerous journals, including foreign ones, whereas bibliographies do not include journals in the majority of cases. A bibliography of the German-language literature covering, say, the period 1863-1983 and evaluating all the journals, is likely to remain forever a beautiful dream.

Philatelic bibliographies are however most numerous - not surprisingly - in the English speaking world. As early as 1911, i.e. the same year as The Crawford Catalogue appeared, The 'American Philatelic Society' published a 'Philatelic Index'. Being an alphabetically-arranged subject-index of articles and notes contained in philatelic periodicals published in English with the addition of two French papers from 1863 to 1910 (29). The compiler was William RICKETTS in collaboration with Clifford W. KISSINGER. The complicated title conceals a philatelic accomplishment that was unfortunately never completed, since only Vol. I, covering A-G was published. In this case an effort was made to do what I said above was most exceptional, i.e. to include articles published in the philatelic journals grouped by subject, but unfortunately the absolutely necessary author index is not there. What the Crawford Catalogue was 'per definitionem' unable to do was carried out here, even though only for English-language periodicals. The difficulty, I might even say the hopelessness, of the task is obvious from the fact that it was never finished.

In 1925 a committee from the 'Philatelic Congress of Great Britain' chaired by W. Doming BECKTON also published a 'Philatelic Index' to the contents of 23 British journals to the end of 1924; it also covered the monographs that had appeared since the Crawford Catalogue (30). Since its aim was limited, it was finished relatively quickly; as it is complete in itself, it is generally more useful than the more widely planned but unfortunately incomplete work of RICKETTS. A two-volume 'Cumulative Index' by Arthur J. BROWN appeared in London in 1964. It was restricted to the years 1950-1963 and is only in the form of a duplicated typescript, in spite of which however it is thoroughly useful (31)

The 'Standard Index' by Arthur H. HARRIS and I. A. BAKER is often cited; it covers the years 1879-1925 and contains some 20,000 bibliographic entries from all over the world (32). The various editions of the 'Guide' published by F. Hugh VALLANCEY during the 20s and 30s were equally well known (33). However neither of these is really a bibliography as is often assumed, but price lists, as both HARRIS and VALLANCEY were literature dealers (34). It is interesting to compare the last edition of VALLANCEY'S 'guide' (1939) and the 1971 catalogue from the American firm of 'HJMR & Co' (35), which shows what extraordinary literary rarities were still available for a few shillings in 1939 and now cost a multiple of pounds at auction, whereas the 'HJMR' catalogue contains hardly any 'old literature' is on offer from the period before the Second World War.

P887-908 + 909-923

7

After these 'pseudobibliographies', we will conclude by mentioning some real bibliographies which have appeared more recently. First come the outstanding bibliographies of the philatelic literature of Canada from the pen of Cimon MORIN, in two volumes, and that for Finland by Juhani OLAMO (36); they were joined a short time ago by a special bibliography of the work of J. -B MOENS, which holds a special position amongst all the others quoted here in virtue of relating to the work of only a single author, which must be extremely rare. Alongside MELVILLE and more recently J.R.W. PURVES, this has happened only to MOENS as far as I know. The special feature of this bibliography is that it ranks the various works of MOENS by rarity (not their actual commercial value) ⁽³⁷⁾. In 1984 the Spanish Postal Museum published a valuable bibliography on philately and postal history from the pen of S. NATHAN and Norman GAHL %). This is enough about the bibliographies. Further information will be found in the catalogues of the major philatelic libraries, so far as they have been published ⁽³⁹⁾.

Now what is there to say about a 'philatelic literature'. If we ignore on the one hand the catalogues and price lists which have been dealt with above, and the various treatises about forgeries, which have also been described, then there is no doubt that the little volumes by 'Dr. Magnus', alias Dr. A. LEGRAND, on watermarks (1867) and the stamps of Moldavia-Wallachia (1869) will rank as the oldest philatelic monographs ⁽⁴⁰⁾. Moreover, both had the aesthetic defect of appearing earlier as a series of articles, so that they are recorded on the title page '2nd editions'. The oldest monographs that had not previously appeared in magazine must thus be Dr. MOSCHKAUS works on watermarks (1871), and particularly his 'Handbook of the Trials Collector' (1875) ⁽⁴¹⁾. Only the latter was of independent value.

Still all these were simply the famous 'swallows' that did not make a summer'. A true philatelic literature worthy of the name did not appear de facto till the later 70s of last century, and its founder was J. -B. MOENS. It is well-known that MOENS' S authorship of the numerous volumes that appeared under his name is more than questionable: it is very likely that the real author was LOUIS HANCIAU (42), but this does not alter the fact that it was MOENS who brought to life the 'Stamp-Lover's Library' and took the risk of publication. 16 monographs appeared between 1877 and 1887 - three of them in two volumes each - which need not be set out again in detail here (43). The first volumes were all still declared to be '2nd editions', since they, as then usual, first appeared as a series of articles in 'Timbre-Poste'. The first independent monograph was that of Saxony; it dates from 1879 ⁽⁴⁴⁾.

Not one of this works has any relevance today: they are all of purely historical interest. However, it is hard to realize what their appearance meant for philately in the years 1878/81. In almost every case the monograph published by MOENS was absolutely the first of its kind (45), and it is thus easy to point out the numerous errors that these volumes contained. It could hardly have been otherwise in the nature of things. If we bear in mind that each individual book - they ranged in size from 56 pages (Naples - Sicily 1877) to 318 pages (Argentina, 1882) - was a 'first', then these monographs become noteworthy, even sometimes meritorious performances which laid the foundation for scientific philately.

In the year 1881 a high official in the Spanish postal service, Antonia FERNANDEZ DURO, published a 250 - page book on the postage stamps of Spain (46). To send it out he was granted exemption from postal charges, a privilege that was not seldom granted to literati in Spain at that time. However, it was the highest degree unusual to have a special stamp printed for the purpose as Signor DURO did ⁽⁴⁷⁾. However in hindsight the most important event of the year 1881 was the publication of the book by Frederick A. PHILBRICK and William A. S. WESTOBY on the postage and telegraph stamps of Great Britain ⁽⁴⁸⁾. This magnificent volume of 384 pages was published under the auspices of the 'Philatelic Society, London', and put everything else that had appeared to that date into the shadow. It far surpassed the volumes of the 'Stamp Lover's Library' and was distinguished by the award of the highest honour - a silver medal for the 'Société Française de Timbrologie'.

P887-908 + 909-923

8

The 'Philatelic Society, London' (later the 'Royal') had already brought out a slender catalogue on the stamps of Spain in 1879 (49). However, their real series of publications did not begin till 1887, and was exclusively devoted to the stamps and entires of the British Empire, after PHILBRICK and WESTOBY 1881 had dealt with those of the Motherland in 1881. Most of these works appeared anonymously under the name of the 'Philatelic Society, London' ⁽⁵⁶⁾, but in 1899 the planned 2nd edition of 'Philbrick' was replaced by a new book on the stamps of Great Britain, and the authors, Hastings E. WRIGHT and Anthony B. CREEK were mentioned by name. A.F. Basset HULL (1862-1945) also published his works on Tasmania and New South Wales under his own name (51). The volumes devoted to the British Empire alone (without the Motherland) ran to over 2,000 pages with 175 plates on large octavo! All the books published by the 'Philatelic Society of London' were of the highest quality and are still valuable for research today. More cannot be said in their praise.

However the firm of Stanley Gibbons Ltd also published a series of 'Philatelic Handbooks' from 1893 on, written by prominent philatelists. We will mention only Edward D BACON, Dr. Emilio DIENA, Francis J.H. NAPIER (1850-1929), Charles J. PHILLIPS etc; these volumes too, not devoted exclusively to the philately of Great Britain, reached the highest philatelic level. Stanley Gibbons also published the notable work of Leslie L.F. HAUSBURG on the stamps of British India for the 'Philatelic Society of India'. Finally, at least half (Vol. II) of the first major British work on cancellations, that of John G. HANDY on British postal cancellations from the beginning to 1876 was published by Stanley Gibbons (1905/09) ^{x52}. Not in the series of 'Handbooks', but still published by the firm of Stanley Gibbons, was Edward B. EVANS'S well-known book 'A Description of the Mulready Envelope and of various Imitations and Caricatures of its Design', which was reprinted as late as 1970⁽⁵³⁾.

The 'Rest of the World' has little to put up against such a wealth of first-class work. Everything before 1914 in Italy boils down to the name of Dr. Emilio DIENA, whose work will be evaluated in the next section along with that of Sir Edward D. BACON and Carl LINDENBERG (54). Louis HANCIAU published several noteworthy studies under his own name in Belgium in the years after 1900, but these have already been dealt with above (55). At least two works from Scandinavia deserve a mention; the solidly-done book by D. KOEFOED on the Danish stamps from 1851-1901, i.e. a jubilee volume (56), and the memorial volume from the 50-year jubilee of Swedish postage stamps put out by the Swedish Philatelic Society of Stockholm, written by ⁽⁵⁷⁾ Rudolf KRASEMANN and Hilmer DfURLING and translated into German .

P887-908 + 909-923

9

Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

There is nothing to report from Spain apart from the 'History of the Postage and Telegraph Stamps of Spain' by the editor of 'Madrid Filatelico', Miguel ALANA y FERNANDEZ. This appeared as a supplement to 'Madrid Filatelico' during 1901-1904 (No. 49-77). It only goes to 1889 and is far from reaching the level of the leading works of the period. Not a single separate monograph of quality was published in South America, since the outstanding works of a Dr. J. MARCO del PONT were all published in essay form, and appeared as offprints for private use only⁽⁵⁹⁾.

Asia of course is also silent. However, the official handbook of the Japanese government, 'Dai Nippon Teikoku yubin kitte enkakushi' may be mentioned as a curiosity; it is not actually a philatelic work but does include all the stamps and entires of Japan to 1894; the text is Japanese-English, and the edition ran to 300 copies. Today the work commands a high collectors' price because of the originals it contains; but in the year of its appearance, 1896, there was a pirated edition from Kotoro WADA, which contained only forgeries ⁽⁶⁰⁾.

It is amazing how little France contributed to the literature before 1914, apart from Dr. A. LEGRAND and Arthur MAURY already mentioned (61). To make up for this, however, the most expensive and also the best philatelic work from the period before the First World war was published in Paris: 'Swiss Postage Stamps, 1843-1862', by Paul MIRABAUD and Axel de REUTHERSKIOLD. Of a total edition of 500 copies, 200 were in French, and 150 each in German and English (62). The work contains a detailed bibliography of 18 pages, and, about a third of the text deals with cancellations on the stamps of these years! The author of the text was Baron REUTHERSKIOLD; MIRABAUD places his immense collection and his wide knowledge to the service of the enterprise, but did no writing himself (63). Because of the steep price of 120 Reichmarks in Germany, its publication was only made possible by a contribution of 50,000 gold francs provided by the banker MIRABAUD from his own resources. The volume was a masterpiece such as only comes along in Jubilee years; the quality of the colour plates (!) exceeded anything seen before, in fact they were the first colour plates to appear in a philatelic work. The critics agreed without reservation that this book was a landmark ⁽⁶⁴⁾. In it for the first time a publication from the field of philately managed to satisfy the highest scientific and publishing standards.

In the years before the First World War, the USA was distinguished by an exorbitant number of new magazines; a notable world catalogue also appeared (65), but major monographs remained scarce. In 1887, John KTIFFANY wrote a 'History of the Postage Stamps of the United States of America', which managed to go to a 2nd edition (66), but it cannot bear comparison with the leading English publications of the period. The first major survey of rank was provided by John N. LUFF: 'The Postage Stamps of the United States', which has become a classic of the philatelic literature. The work contains 23 plates which are not mentioned at all in the text. These had to be purchased separately because of American law, and were printed outside the United States. The 'Standard edition' had no illustrations ^(6g)

Thus, it was actually only the German-speaking world which could keep level with the English output to any extent. The fine connoisseur Ferdinand MAYER (1849-

Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

1882) published his studies on Afghanistan as early as 1879, and this was translated into French two years later ⁽⁶⁹⁾. Arthur E. GLASEWALD, who sometimes wrote under the pseudonym 'A. Erdmann' published a concise study of 'The Postage Stamps of Greece' in 1885, and this reached eleven editions by 1896, though it had more the character of a catalogue. His work on the cancellations of Thurn and Taxis (1893), and Baden (1898) was much more weighty, and in 1926 a sort of 2nd edition of the 1893 volume appeared in the form of a comprehensive work on 'Thurn and Taxis in History and Philately', this can still be consulted with profit today. On the other hand, the millwheel cancellation of Bavaria was first treated in a monograph by Carl BECK and Carl HOLZSCHUIER in 1911 ⁽⁷⁰⁾. We shall not forget Dr. jur. Otto ROMMEL, who published numerous articles from 1890 onwards on the postage stamps of Bergerdorf, Liibeck, Morocco, Peru etc. most of which are also available as separates. Moreover we have him to thank for the first special study of the 'red three-pfenning' of Saxony ⁽⁷¹⁾

It must astonish us that both the old German states and the German colonies were so late in getting their accomplishments down on paper. Dr. Paul KLOSS did manage to write a 'History of the Postage Stamps of the Kingdom of Saxony' in 1882 (72), but Hugo KROTZSCH attempted to produce a 'Permanent Handbook of Philately. First Part: German States' in 15 'sections' which appeared from 1893-1897. This was a long-awaited, and for four decades the only comprehensive survey from the pen of a leading connoisseur, though unfortunately it remained only a torso ⁽⁷³⁾. It is shaming to admit that some sections have not been replaced even yet by an up-to-date compilation. The Colonial collector even had to wait till 1908, before Albert FRIEDEMANN (1867-1933) published his handbook, which has now grown into a three-volume work ⁽⁷⁴⁾. The industrious Professor Dr. Hans KROPF should not go without a mention, as his works on the stamps and cancellations of the Royal and Imperial Monarchy (Austria) were creditable efforts in their own day ⁽⁷⁵⁾

Along with Carl LINDENBERG and Dr. Herbert MUNK, Dr. Franz KALCKHOFF is the best-known philatelic researcher in the German tongue. In view of his close collaboration with LINDENBERG, some of his works will be dealt with in the next chapter. Reference will be made here in particular to his 'Illustrated Catalogue of all known new Editors of State Postage Stamps, with details of their distinguishing features'. This appeared in 1892 and was quickly superseded (E. D. BACON 1899, P. OHRT 1907) but it was the first serviceable work on this topic. KALCKHOFF shared with LINDENBERG a predilection of entires. Thus, we have him to thank for a paper on the origin of the postcard (1911) and an earlier one on postcards from the German possessions (1902), amongst other works to be dealt with in the next chapter. However he is best known as the historian of the Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888 ⁽⁷⁶⁾.

A controversial character was the later Major Paul OHRT. From a wealthy family, and till the inflation period materially totally independent, he never bothered to tone down his remarks, and expressed his opinions unadorned, sometimes in a really wounding manner. This made him many enemies and landed him with lawsuits, none of which bothered him in the least. A characteristic production is his eight-page polemic against KOSACK of the year 1908:

'Are the stamps from the German possessions philatelic rubbish?' On his literary work as well he sometimes adopts a high-and-mighty officers' mess manner, which is quite out of place in the context. However this does not alter the fact that OHRT'S work deserves the closest attention. He was a collaborator on the Krotzsch handbook, and produced the sections on Oldenburg and Prussia. His book on the cancellations of Oldenburg has not been superseded to date ⁽⁷⁷⁾. His monumental editorial (reprint) work in four volumes is also unsurpassed ⁽⁷⁸⁾

P887-908 + 909-923 1 1 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

This' covered the most important names. Mention should also be made of the description of the stamps of Spain from the pen of Rudolf FRIEDRICH, and the book on Russia by E. von BOCHMANN ⁽⁷⁹⁾. Postal history was also current, even though as a purely historical discipline completely independent of philately, and intent on not being confused with it. One laudable exception to this which ought to be pointed out is the 'Postal History of German States for half a millennium' by Carl DIECKMANN, the subtitle of which reads 'Including the introduction of Postage Stamps', and then in prominent large type 'Specially for experts (sic) and stamp collectors' ⁽⁸⁰⁾. However, this was the well-known rara avis. The Guild of Postal and Commercial Historians (an academic discipline!) would not have any relationship with 'stamp collectors' at any price.

As can be seen, German philatelic research has nothing to be ashamed of in the years 1879-1914. Even if it did not quite reach the level of the contemporary English research, it took at least second place in the world. If asked which were the most important philatelic works of the years 1880-1914, I would answer: The British Empire series from the (Royal) Philatelic Society of London (1887-1913), the Mulready book by E. B. EVANS (1891), C. LINDENBERG'S work on old German entires (1892/95), Dr. E. DIENA' S monographs on Modena and Sicily (1894/1905, 1904), the unique Swiss volume by P. MIRABAUD and A. de REUTERSKIOLD (1899) and finally, 'The Postal Stamps of the United States' by J. N. LUFF (1904).

The epoch 1914-1950 is distinguished by two World Wars, inflations, world economic crises etc, which must have had an effect on literary production. This is why the 20s saw the great 'material battles' between LICHTENSTEIN and a HIND at the 'Internationals', to name these alone. It is not surprising that the 20s and 30s have the reputation of not being very favourable to literature, which had the result internationally that literature never at any time had such shabby and belittling treatment at the major exhibitions as during those years. It made no difference that some outstanding works were published. We have had a reliable indicator since 1920 in the shape of the Crawford Medal, awarded yearly to the author of an important philatelic work, which according to the regulations must not be more than two year old. The award is not restricted to English-language writings, thus ensuring that the medal never goes to any but really outstanding work. I will start with the literature in English, since even yet this is without doubt the most important.

The 'Royal Philatelic Society, London' has always made one of its principal tasks the publication of high-grade philatelic literature. Their activities in this direction, which began as we have seen as early as 1880, has not been even approximately matched by any other society or national union in the world. Unfortunately they were not able to publish two of the most important philatelic works on the early stamps of Great Britain. These were the two volumes by E. D. BACON on the steel-engraved issues of G.B. printed by Perkins, Bacon & Co., (1920), and the book by NISSEN on the plates for the 'penny black' (1922). Both these were published by Ch. NISSEN, and both were distinguished by the award of the Crawford Medal ⁽⁸¹⁾.

P887-908 + 909-923 12 Phil Trans 57 G
Chapter 20,

It was all the more praiseworthy for the 'Royal' to bring out a not too costly handbook on the stamps of Great Britain which was nevertheless compiled by one of the leading experts. In 1930, A. F. Bassett HULL continued the pre-war Empire series with his work on Queensland (g2), and in 1934/7 appeared the first two volumes of 'The Stamps of Great Britain' from the pen of J. B. SEYMOUR (died 1950). The initial impression was 3,000 copies; two more volumes followed after the Second World War ^(g3), and they all met with great success and went through several editions ^(g4)

. The first volume was actually only an English adaptation and amendment of MUNK'S work on Great Britain in The Kohl Handbook (1931), though he in his turn based his work on material in the collection of J. B. SEYMOUR.

Obviously, studies on Great Britain were not restricted to this handbook. In 1926 D. F. Denby MARSHALL (1872-1945) produced a valuable history of the British 'Post Office' at a time when expression like 'postal history' had not got into current use, and it speaks well for the farsightedness of the 'Royal' that they awarded this work by a historian the Crawford Medal in 1928 ⁽⁸⁵⁾. MARSHALL was however at the same time an avid philatelist, and as such a specialist on the blue twopenny stamp ⁽⁸⁶⁾. However in this field he was outdone by Dr. H. OSBOURNE, who continued NISSEN'S work on the 'penny black' for the 'twopenny blue' for which the 'Royal' awarded him the Crawford Medal in 1939 ⁽⁸⁷⁾. The 'Guidelines to the Penny Black' published in 1949 from the pen of P. C. LITCHFIELD, of which many editions are extant, is however aimed not so much at the researcher as at the collector of plates (engravings). A high point in the literary activities of these years was without doubt the appearance of the beautifully bound and printed catalogue of the collection of King George V. by Sir John WILSON, Bart., in the year 1952 ⁽⁸⁸⁾. This imposing folio volume, which cost the horrendous price of ^60 (in the year 1952!) contains not only a minutely detailed catalogue of the 'Royal Collection', but also a highly readable introduction with a history of its production, the collecting habit of George V etc, in fact a piece of philatelic history. In 1940 R.C.AL000K and F.C.HOLLAND finally produced their long overdue handbook of cancellations to which supplements are still appearing ^(g9)

. In spite of this or that supplements special study this remains the comprehensive standard work to the present day, and makes a price of ^200 or so at auction at the moment.

Study of the issues from the 'Empire' also continued to progress. Bassett HULL'S book on Queensland has already been mentioned; two years earlier a group of four authors published an excellent work on the stamps, cancellations and postal history of Jamaica, and, in the same year as Bassett HULL, D. R. MARTIN and E. A. SMYTHIES published an important study of the 4-anna lithographed Indian stamps of 1854/55 ¹⁹⁰¹, but research interest was focussed above all on South Africa. Since 1930 Gilbert J. ALLIS has published his still valuable work on the stamps and postal history of the Cape of Good Hope, which was awarded the Crawford Medal by the 'Royal' in 1931 (91). Ten years later appeared the fine monograph on the stamps of the Transvaal from the pen of J. H. CURLE and A. E. BASDEN, which also won the Crawford Medal (92). Finally, in 1943 Adrian Albert JURGENS published his fundamental work on cancellations, following it two years later with a no less soundly based study of Bechuanaland ^(9s)

The first of these books did not appear in London, but in Cape Town; this was probably because of the war, but also points to a new self-confidence on the part of the dominion. Thus, after the first drafts in the year 1923/26, Fred JARRETT finally brought out his catalogue-handbook of the stamps of British North America in Toronto in 1929. Alfred St. DEAVILLE published his work on the postal system of the colonial period in British Columbia and its stamps as early as 1928 in Victoria /B.C., and Jal COOPER his 'Stamps of India' in 1942 in Bombay ⁽⁹⁴⁾. However, what time has proved to be the most important publication outside Great Britain was without question the monumental six-volume work on the stamps and postal history of New Zealand. It is true that most of it only appeared after the Second World War, but the first volume, by Ray J. G. COLLINS and H. T. M. FATHERS, appeared in 1938, and the second in 1949. This work of over 3,600 pages is the most comprehensive to be devoted so far to an individual member of the 'Commonwealth'⁹⁵⁾

Although British researchers have shown very little interest in Continental European subjects (96), they have always shown a lively concern for the philately of South America and the Spanish homeland. Thus, the first book to be honoured with the Crawford Medal in 1920 was the one by Hugo GRIEBERT on the first Spanish issues ⁽⁹⁷⁾. Between 1923 and 1931 appeared five works, every one of which still ranks as definitive or at least essential for the topic concerned: G. S. F. NAPIER on the Brazilian 'bullseye' (1923) ⁽⁹⁸⁾, W. J. COCHRANE and H. A. SPOWART on the Argentinean Rivadavia issues (1923), F. J. PEPLOW on the stamps of Buenos Aires (1925) (99), Samuel CHAPMAN (1859-1943) on the Mexican issues of 1858-1868 (1926) ('00), and Emanuel J. LEE on Uruguay (1931) (ioi). Interests in the stamps of the Far East is documented in A. M. Tracy WOODWARD' S book on Japan, which was the standard work in this field until the appearance of the much more detailed researches of Dr. S. ICHIDA ('021. The same is true of Adolf PASSER'S monograph on the stamps of Turkey, issued by the 'Royal' in 1938 (103).

A great step forward was taken during the period we are considering by philatelic science in the USA. In the period before 1914, J. LUFF is the only name worth mentioning, but in the succeeding period the authors of notable monographs increased rapidly in number. The fundamental work of one Dr. Carroll CHASE and a Stanley ASHBROOK will be discussed later. Both made a single stamp the subject of their study, thus starting a fresh trend in philatelic research. August DIETZ and Lester G. BROOKMAN, on the other hand, stuck to the traditional form; the first with his 1929 history of the postal service of the Confederate States which has not been superseded to the present day, and L. G. BROOKMAN in 1947 with the most comprehensive monograph to that date on American stamps of the 19th century. This went to a second edition in 1966/67 ^{"04)}. In 1937 the aged John LUFF published a neat summary of the then state of research on temporary postmasters, and Clarence W. BARZER (1880-1956) published a fundamental work on the trials (essays) and test printing of American Stamps in 1941.

Finally F. K. BASH, F. R. HARRIS, H. A. MAYER and W. J. DAVEY published their fundamental work on the postal history and issues of Hawaii in 1948 ("").

In contrast to the works just mentioned, which were all devoted to classical U. S. philately, the interest of Max JOHL (1901-1957) was directed above all to U.S. stamps of the twentieth century, on which he wrote a four-volume monograph with a total of 1,235 pages. It should be noted, though, that the fourth and last volume appeared in 1938, so that the four volumes do not quite cover a full four decades (io6)

. In 1926 Le Roy R. HAFEN published a trailblazing historical study of the 'Overland Mail', and in 1933/35 Delf NORONA put together a sort of encyclopedia on postal history and cancellation research. An important monograph on Boston cancellations up to 1890 was published by Maurice C. BLAKE and Wilbur W. DAVIS (io7)

, Subjects outside the USA were dealt with by Charles Lathrop PACK in his famous book on the first issues from Victoria (Australia), which made him to be the first non-Briton to be awarded the Crawford Medal, in 1923 (1°s), and by Stephen G. RICH (1890-1958) who wrote the philatelic history of the Boer War in 1943 (io9).

The French-language literature is more abundant for the period 1914-50 than for the earlier one, but there are no truly pioneering works. One that deserves a mention is the major work by Louis HANCIAU on the Belgian cancellations of 1814-1914: This was the work of an eighty-year old and appeared posthumously in 1929 ("°). The leading Belgian philatelist Andr  de COCK (1880-1964), the founder of the Belgian postal museum, published many papers, but two in particular gained him a reputation as a philatelic author. They were on the cancellations of the Belgian Congo and the Belgian number cancellations (1°). Another Belgian who lived in France, Fernande SERRANE (t1933) made a special name as an expert on forgeries, but was also the author of notable studies on the classical issues of France and the Netherlands (ii2)

. The most productive Belgian researcher of these years however was without doubt Paul de SMETH (1859-1940), in whose honour the 'Paul del Smeth Prize for Philatelic Literary Merit' was founded in Belgium in the year 1950 (Fig, 216). Time has shown his most detailed work to be one he published in conjunction with the Marquis de FAYOLLE, on the early Mexican issues of 1856-1874, but he also issued numerous smaller studies on such diverse topics as Greece, The Transvaal, Serbia, and, last but not least, Belgium (iss). Rend PONCELET, who died in 1944, is better known for his innumerable articles in magazines than for any longer studies (Fig, 215-216). A study published by P. GROSFILS-BERGER in 1947 was devoted to the first Finnish issues eila>.

Obviously there was no lack of useful contributions in France itself, but none of them is specially outstanding. This even applies to the six-volume 'Memorial Philatelique' by Gustave BERTRAND (u5), which did not noticeably advance research. There is a predominance of studies on cancellations, solid but not particularly original. The medical man Dr. P. BOUVET published a series of fine studies of ships' post, French colonies and the classical French issues, none of which ran to more than 48 pages (ii6)

. One exception is provided by George BRUNEL (1860-1951) who in the manner of a MELVILLE published an endless series of pamphlets and tracts on philatelic subjects over many decades until the 40s: he only twice produced substantial works on the classical philately of France in 1896 and 1929 (1°7). On the whole, BRUNEL' S publications paid little or no attention to new issues; but rather went in for building up legends. It was BRUNEL who launched on the world the foolish idea that the inscription 'Post Office' on the first Mauritius issue was a 'mistake' on the part of the engraver (lls). Like MELVILLE, BRUNEL was the editor of a respected journal, which like Melville's was interested in the fashionable aerophilately, but neither in the breadth of his writing nor the skill of his presentation was he the equal of the much more travelled and urbane MELVILLE, his quarrelsome nature being another point of difference. His spiteful and ugly attacks on the unfortunate FERRARY have already been mentioned above. Hence BRUNEL was never able to exert the broad influence that his contemporary MELVILLE enjoyed.

P887-908 + 909-923 15 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

Prominent amongst the researchers of the time was Maurice LANGLOIS (1860-1948) who along with Dr. Emilio DIENA was one of the best-known and most highly regarded judges before and after the First World War. LANGLOIS devoted himself principally to the cancellations of France and its colonies, and did outstanding work in this field; most of his papers were published in collaboration with Victor BOURSELET (1881-1940) ("°), though

Louis FRANCOIS (1882-1941), Gilbert GERARD and Eugene VENEZIANI also served as his co-authors ⁽¹²⁰⁾. Louis FRANCOIS was himself the author of a book on the Persian Balloon post ⁽¹²¹⁾ (Figs. 213-217). Another high-grade researcher on cancellations was Stephane STROWSKI, who published significant work on French cancellations of the 20th century ⁽¹²²⁾

Along with these should also be mentioned Gaston TOURNIER (1893-1937), the founder of the Academie de Philatelie, who produced a work on the French post in Italy (1792-1815) and a noteworthy study of the military cancellations of Morocco ⁽¹²³⁾. Eugene VAILLE, for many years the librarian of the French Postal Museum, was also an important historian of the French Postal Service ⁽¹²⁴⁾. The work of the great airmail expert Jacques LE PILEUR (1880-1969) will be dealt with later. Finally, the postal-historical study of the Paris 'Commune' of 1871 from the pen of Benoit LAURENT should be mentioned in this connection ⁽¹²⁵⁾

As a rule, works on postal history in the French language have come from Switzerland. Between 1905 and 1934, Marc HENRDIOD published numerous studies on the 'post in the Fribourg, Vaud, Geneva and Neuchatel districts, and on the postal connections between Switzerland and France ⁽¹²⁶⁾, whilst the great Swiss expert Dr. Georges FULPIUS published two slim volumes on the history of the post in Geneva up to 1851 ⁽¹²⁷⁾. The two following works are also in French, though by Greek authors; N. S. NICOLAIDIS produced a history of Greek postage stamps in 1923 ⁽¹²¹⁾, whilst the 'Societe Philatelique Hellenique' published the standard two-volume work on the classical issues of the country, from the pen of Tr. CONSTANTINIDIS, in 1933/37 ⁽¹²⁹⁾. Unfortunately, there is again no major activity to report from Italy: in 1932 the indefatigable Dr. Emilio DIENA published his; 'magnum opus' on the stamps of Naples, which was distinguished by the Crawford Medal in 1934, and in 1935 Alberto BOLAFFI published his book on Sardinia, translated into English in 1948 and still valuable today. Leopoldo RIVOLTA, whose son Achille (Fig. 86) has been one of the leading Italian philatelists in the decades since 1945, published a few short studies around 1920 which are hardly worth the trouble of quoting today ⁽¹³⁰⁾. the only work still of any value is that by Cesare MATTEOLI-BRADZKI and Em. SOGNO on the stamps and cancellations of the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, and the 'Catalogo prefilatelico' (prephilatelic catalogue) by Alfredo BANCI ⁽¹³¹⁾: but that is more or less all. Italy did not become prominent in research till 1950.

P887-908 + 909-923 16 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

A fundamental study on Spain was published in that country by Antonio de GUEZALA AYRIVE (t1956) on the eve of the Civil War. This concentrated particularly on plate defects etc, and also dealt with cancellations, but unfortunately did not go into the actual use of them ⁽¹³²⁾. In the previous year, Dr. Arturo TORT NICOLAU (1878-1950) published the first volume of his comprehensive 'Guia del coleccionista de sellos de correos de Espana' (Guide for the collector of Spanish postage stamps), the continuation of which was hindered by the Civil War, so that it only came to an end with volume 3 in 1950. This fundamental treatment of the Spanish stamps of 1850-1900 was distinguished by the award of the Crawford Medal in 1948 ⁽¹³³⁾. Good research came out of Argentina, where Ram6n de CASTRO ESTEVES published a two-volume postal history of Argentina up to 1810 on commission from the post office authorities ^(13a), and Antonio DELUCA published another two-volume history of Argentine Postal and Telegraph Stamps ^{P135}, thus providing the first broadly-based work on the philately and postal history of a South American state in the Spanish language.

Before we come on to speak of the German literature of the years 1914-1950, a brief account should be given of the Dutch and Scandinavian literature of this period. The undisputed leader here is the work of Justus ANDERSSSEN and Henrik DETHLOFF on the Norwegian stamps of 1855-1924, which was the first non-English book to win the Crawford Medal, in 1925 ⁽¹³⁶⁾. In Stockholm Hugo J. OLSSON and Nils STANDELL published a valuable monograph on the Ist Swedish issue, what is called the Skilling-Banco-Series ⁽¹³⁷⁾ whilst Nils FORSSELL published a two-volume postal history with the support of the Swedish Post Office ⁽¹³⁸⁾. An honourable mention is due to the Danish researcher G. A. HAGEMANN, who authorised a number of valuable studies on the philately of Denmark between 1930 and 1951 ⁽¹³⁹⁾. From Holland, special attention should be paid in particular to the solid work on cancellations by O. M. VELLINGA from the year 1931¹⁴⁰, whilst J. H. BEER van DINGSTEE published an important work on the postal history of the Netherlands Indies in 1935 ⁽¹⁴¹⁾

We can now come back to the German-language literature of this period; it is not by any means so extensive as the English language literature, but comes close to it in importance. The first place would naturally belong to the monumental Kohl handbook from the pen of Dr. Herbert MUNK, had this not already been dealt with extensively in the chapter on catalogues ⁽¹⁴²⁾. Hence I will limit myself here to a simple mention of this work, the equal of which was not to be found in any other country at that time. Another work, not nearly of the same importance, but still handy, useful and of general interest was the Philatelic Lexicon compiled by Alexander BUNGERZ, who also published catalogues; his Lexicon remained without competition for a long time ⁽¹⁴³⁾ (Fig. 358).

We saw earlier that old Germany was under-represented in the philatelic literature in spite of its philatelic importance and its popularity with collectors. The first general survey of the philately of the old German states did not appear till the mid-30s, from the pen of Ewald MULLER-MARK under the title 'Old Germany under the Microscope', which went to a total of five editions ~14a>. Written in a lively and easily-readable style, but full of information with something for the experienced philatelist on every page, this work was an outstanding achievement for its time and fully deserved its success. Unfortunately, MULLER-MARK'S business dealings - he was an inspector and certified expert - did not conform to what was the accepted practice, which brought him into conflict with the law around 1960 (however I should stress particularly that he was not convicted because of forgeries); this of course had no effect on his high degree of learning and fine style, which was still on display in his 'Reflexions (sic) on Philately' published during the Second World War ⁽¹⁴⁸⁾. This can be recommended to every beginner as an introduction to the higher philately.

P887-908 + 909-923 17

Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

There are also many studies on individual old German states worth a mention. Siegfried SIMON, the leading BADEN specialist, was able to publish two volumes on the philately of Baden, which were a permanent inspiration to later workers ⁽¹⁴⁶⁾ before the race theories of the '3rd Reich' interrupted his work. Only a few years later, Consul H. E. SIEGER brought out the work left behind by the famous WURTTENBERG specialist Carl KOHLER ⁽¹⁴⁷⁾ who was the first person to make a philatelic-critical study of the stamps of Wurttemberg, one which has not lost its value to the present day. Unfortunately KOHLER failed to cover cancellations in his survey. The Third South German State, Bavaria, has nothing to show on the same level as the work of SIMON and KOHLER, but the little book by Carl BECK on the Bavarian 'cross' (Kreuzer) stamps in a useful 'mise au point' for the then state of research ⁽¹⁴⁸⁾.

GLASEWALD'S 1926 monograph on Thurn and Taxis has already been mentioned above. One very useful work was the two-volume study by 1st Lieutenant D K. MARBACH on the Prussian re~istration and number cancellations ⁽¹⁴⁹⁾, which was the first - necessarily incomplete - attempt at listing the well over 10,000 known registration cancellations.

Postal history was also encouraged in the German-speaking world, though still in the unphilatelic style that had distinguished the publications previous to the First World War. A 'Classic' in this field was the 'History of the Prussian Post' from the year 1859 by Heinrich (v.) STEPHAN, who was later Secretary of State (Minister of the Reich) and at that time Postal Councillor Its°. Karl SAUTER who was Secretary of State in the Reich Ministry of Posts re-edited 'Stephan' in 1928 and took it to the end of the Prussian Post (1867). In later years he had the leisure to produce two further volumes and take the story to the end of the Reich post in the year 1945 ^{x151}). A very useful series of monographs for the research philatelist was put out during the years 1935-1939 by the then Reich Ministry for Posts, on the historical aspects of various branches of the postal service ⁽¹⁵²⁾. The author is given as Konrad SCHWARZ. A three-volume 'German Postal History' occasionally quoted in foreign bibliographies is however the result of a confusion with the journals of the same name⁽¹⁵³⁾

Many works on non-German topics were also published in the German language during the period concerned. W. v. RACHMANOV (t 1979), the well-known Polish jurist of the pre-war years, and W. POLANSKI dealt with Polish postmarks of the 18th and 19th centuries ⁽¹⁵⁴⁾. Edwin MUELLER'S trailblazing work on cancellations deserves at least a preliminary mention here ⁽¹⁵⁵⁾. A topic almost forgotten today, but Don't quite know what this means? The German word can mean - problem, task, advice, business, mission, registration, etc. etc. - Take your pick.

P887-908 + 909-923 18 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

extremely popular before the First World War and still being pursued in the 20s and 30s, was that of the Russian zemstro or provincial stamps, to the collection and classification of which a great deal of effort was devoted. Only such names as S. KOPROWSKI (1875), H. LUBKERT (1882) and W. HERRICK (1896) need be recalled here ⁽¹⁵⁶⁾. However, the basic study was written by Carl SCHMIDT, who completed two volumes on this topic, in conjunction with Agathon FABERGE, before the First World War ⁽¹⁵⁷⁾, and returned to his favourite subject in the 30s, for which the 'Royal' honoured him with the Crawford Medal in 1935 (lss)

The very useful book 'New Letters on Old Ones' by A. v. KUMPF-MIKULI has already been mentioned in the previous chapter. Two publications on the history of airmail should also be mentioned 'The History of the Air Mail' by H. W. GEWANDE and 'The German Air Mail' by Dr. Herbert GLITSCH (¹⁵⁹). To conclude, we ought to take a quick look at Switzerland. Dr Herbert MUNK, who chose Switzerland as his new home in 1936, devoted his attention from then on principally to classical issues of his host country, and published several studies of them ⁽¹⁶⁰⁾. An important work on cancellations was published by F. X. ANDRES and Hans EMMENEGGER: this covered all Swiss cancellations for the period 1843-1882; a new edition after the war was made the occasion for a revision and especially the extension of the work to cover 1843-1907 ⁽¹⁶¹⁾. This should end the description of the German-language literature for the period 1914-1950.

If we now ask which are the most important works from these years we find the answer much harder to arrive at than for the previous period; moreover it is no longer enough to mention six or seven names; the competition has become stiffer. With all the reservations that must apply to a necessarily subjective judgement, I would pick the following; E. D. BACON'S two-volume investigation of 'The Line-Engraved Postage Stamps of Great Britain' (1920), Ch. L. PACK'S book on 'Victoria: The Half-Length Portraits and the Twopence Queen Enthroned' (1923), 'Norges Frimerker' (Stamps of Norway) by J. ANDERSEN and H. DETHLOFF (1924), S. CHAPMAN'S book on Mexico (1926), Dr. H. MUNK'S five volumes of Kohl Handbook (1926-1936), E. MUELLER'S work on cancellations (1927-1930), A. M. Tracy WOODWARD'S Japan volume (1928); 'The Postal Service of the Confederate States of America' by A. DIETZ (1929), the monograph by Dr. C. CHASE on the American 3-cent stamp of 1851-57 (1942²), the book on Naples by Dr. E. DIENA (1932), the three-volume 'Guia del collezionista' (Collectors guide) by Dr. A. TORT NICOLAU (1935-1950), the catalogue of the 'Royal Collection' by Sir John WILSON (1952), and the monumental six-volume work on 'The Postage Stamps of New Zealand' (1938-1978). It is true that the bulk of this (Vols III-VI) only appeared after 1950, but the foundations were laid as early as the 30s and 40s. Of these, the books by PACK and WOODARD have now been superseded, but that alters neither their trailblazing character at the time they appeared, nor the amount of research that went into them. The period after 1950 was characterized by an unexpected 'boom' in the philatelic literature since the 50s: This quickly became obvious in the great attention paid to literature at the international exhibitions. It suddenly became once more possible for gold medals, even several in a row, to be awarded in the literature class: philatelic literature appeared in the international exhibitions of the 70s, and the year 1982 saw the first independent international exhibition of literature in Milan under the auspices of the FIR The rise in the esteem paid to literature goes hand in hand with an increasing interest in it on the part of serious philatelists. I personally have no doubt that the modern trend towards the study of postal history has contributed very much to the 'literature wane' of the last three decades.

P887-908 t 909-923 19 Phi l'Frans 57 G Chapter 20

However, I must be excused from giving detailed descriptions of this literature here: otherwise the slightly bibliographical nature of this chapter would degenerate into pure bibliography, which I want to avoid. I would like to make an exception, for well-founded reasons, in the case of the literature on aerophilately. This is not because this literature is particularly abundant, or unusually high in quality - neither is unfortunately the case - but because it gives me the opportunity for some reflections of a general nature that I have particularly at heart.

Before I come on to give my reasons for this, something should be said about the present. The number of aerophilatelic monographs in the period 1914-1950 was very small. This may be in order for the first years of this period, but is much less understandable for the 30s and 40s.

It looks as if all the information went into catalogues, with nothing left over for detailed monographs; everything tended to be in the form of brief articles, and even when a writer got round to dealing with a subject in monograph form, the limit was 50, or at most 100 pages, and this magic number was hardly ever exceeded by anything worth mentioning. To deal with these pamphlets - they are generally nothing more - in detail would be to ignore the rigid criteria used in selecting for this chapter, and so I shall not do it.

Amongst the few titles I have quoted are two that both deal with the balloon post during the Siege of Paris, 1870/71 (162). This is not an accident. Not the first 'hops' of the 90s, nor the first crossing of the English Channel, not even the universally amazing flights of the 'airship' Graf ZEPPELIN has captured the imagination and roused the curiosity of researchers as did the balloon flights during the 'siege' of 1870/71. In fact they were simply an emergency method of getting the post out of Paris: the actual forwarding was by the quite reliable method of railway, coach or ship.

Over a hundred years later, the 'balloos montes' are still an object of affection to collectors and researchers; and it amazes the interested layman, as the author notes himself, how little use they make of the reports of participants and other contemporaries, though these are available in large numbers (163). And when we are speaking of the literature from the 70s of last century, we must not forget Dr. Heinrich STEPHAN' S 1874 contribution on 'World Post and Airship Travel', in which he even predicted the future use of rockets (164).

However, back to modern research on the balloon post of 1870/71. After the fundamental work by J. LE PILEUR in 1943 and 1953, Paul MAINCENT returned to the question of the development of the balloon post (165), whilst Wilhelm HOFINGER tried to describe the events of those days for the German reader (166). The centenary of 1971 gave rise to a good many publications, amongst the lively monographs of Gunter HEYD on the zinc-ball post in the Seine stands out, though it is written rather in the style of an eye-witness (167). The detailed account by the American Reuben R. THOMAS unfortunately sacrifices quality to quantity, a thing which cannot be said of the book published a year later by the Frenchman Louis A. CHAINTRIER (1ss). Another scene, what are called the 'butterflies of Metz' has been treated in detail by a third American, the postal historian Ernst M. COHN, who also contributed to an excellent monograph on what was perhaps the most important balloon flight, that of the 'Ville d'Orleans' (169). This covers the most important recent literature on the oldest subject in airmail history.

P887-908 -, 909-923 20 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

Naturally, the aerophilatelic literature of the years since 1950 has not been entirely devoted to the studies of the Siege of Paris, but my findings mentioned above for the 1914-1950 period that such literature was (a) scanty and (b) rather inadequate, are unfortunately still valid. Individual flights of particular airships, for example, are dealt with in detail (17°), first flights collected, questions relating to forgeries discussed ⁽¹⁷¹⁾, etc etc. Monographs such as that of Joseph L. EISENDRATH on flights that ended in disaster, or that by LONDONO - GEBAUER on 50 years of airmail in Colombia are exceptions, as they run to over 200 and 300 pages ⁽¹⁷²⁾. The same is true of the excellent history of the Scandinavian airmail by Orjan LLTING ⁽¹⁷³⁾, which was the first work on aerophilately to receive the Crawford Medal in 1978, and the valuable contribution by Leonhard H. SMITH on the first English - Australia flight by (Sir) ROSS SMITH; the important monograph by R. E. DALWICH and C. H. C. HARMER on the Newfoundland airmail service also deserves an approving mention ⁽¹⁷⁴⁾ But, - aerophilatelists must forgive me - the broad sweep is still missing.

It is surely no accident that such outstanding researchers as Henry M. GOODKIND or Dr. Max KRONSTEIN have never written a bigger book: and the same is true of Frank MULLER, Jean SILOMBRA or Francis FIELD, to name only the last representatives of the pioneer generation still alive today: they have all produced catalogues, some of them outstanding, and remain on the whole the masters of the 'small size', i.e. they write short articles and pamphlets on restricted subjects, like H. M. GOODKIND, who died far too young ⁽¹⁷⁵⁾. In the case of Dr. Max KRONSTEIN, born at Karlsruhe and resident in the USA since 1938, Juror at the first international airmail exhibitions in 1930 and 1932, the Paris E. I. P. A. and the Danzig LU-POSTA, the 'American Air Mail Society' has decided at least to make a collection of his articles ⁽¹⁷⁶⁾, and I would like to suggest the same thing for the work of Henry M. GOODKIND and other leading aerophilatelists.

In conclusion, let us turn again to the question asked above, of why the literature of aerophilately is relatively scanty compared with that for the classics or postal history? Obviously there are many reasons, but I would like to put two in particular up for debate, one objective and one subjective. The objective reason is that airmail issues produced on the most up-to-date printing machines, simply do not show the numberless variations in colour and printing, and the wide range of uses (over many years) that the classic issues do, and so there is simply not as much to be said about them. All official - and semi-official - airmail stamps have been printed in the 20th century. Thus variant colour, printing errors etc, if not completely absent - see the 24 cent 'Inverted Center' from the USA - are at least very rare, and the different flights with their postmarks are best dealt with in catalogue form.

The second reason is of a subjective nature, relating to the aerophilatelists themselves. My personal impression from reading aerophilatelic literature (the impression of a well-intentioned outsider) is frequently that the technical-historical aspect outweighs the purely philatelic in this field. Thus, the type of aircraft with all technical details, the weather conditions before and during the flight, the time of starting, the duration of the flight with any delays, the number of passengers, intermediate stops etc are all recorded with the greatest precision, though from the philatelic point of view all this is totally irrelevant. One can appreciate the technical enthusiasm, the joy in flying etc, so long as philately does not get overlooked, since that is what we are dealing with, and not, to quote Horst AISSLINGER, 'the colour of the pilot's underpants'. When aerophilatelists have got round to centering their interests on actual philately and not technology, then I think the day will not be far off when aerophilatelists too will get the monographs and handbooks they so badly need.

P887-908 + 909-923 21 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20

Now let us try to give a survey of the present state of philatelic research in a brief 'Tour d'horizon'. It is still true for the period after 1950 that the Anglo-Saxon world remains in the forefront of philatelic science, and its dominance is not merely numerical. However, there are fresh developments here as well. It is hardly accidental that the leading personality in philatelic research over the years 1950-1980 has been neither a Briton nor an American, but the Australian J. R. W. PURVES⁽⁷⁷⁾. Naturally this does not mean that the centre of gravity in research has suddenly shifted from Great Britain and the USA to Australia, but it does show that the former Dominions have taken work on their philatelic heritage into their own hands to a large extent - let us recall one more in this connection, the great six-volume work put out by the 'Royal Philatelic Society of New Zealand' (178) - and have long ago changed from learners to masters. Otherwise the publication of the 'Royal' the 'American Philatelic Society' the 'Collectors Club' the 'Philatelic Foundation' etc etc have lost none of their quality or importance for philately as a whole, and now as formerly the English-language literature leads the way.

I close my evaluation of the German-language literature by saying that it has maintained its second place with difficulty. This is partly because a Dr. H. VIUNK or an Edwin MUELLER is not born every day, and partly because we must not ignore the fact that other nations have caught us up. This is not to imply there has been any fall in quality: since as before, there have been praiseworthy, even important, publications in the German language, but one could wish they were rather more numerous by comparison with the publications from other countries. German-speaking philatelists are lucky in that they have two organizations to promote their researches: the Swiss 'Fonds zur Forderung der Philatelie' (Fund for the Promotion of Philately) and the German 'Stiftung zur Forderung der Philatelie and Postgeschichte' (Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History) (179), which do good work overall, but are generally limited by their statutes to promoting already-completed work,

In France too there has been in general no decline from the high level of publications. I might even speak of a rise by comparison with the earlier period, since such fundamental work as that by Raymond SALLES or the 'Paris Academy' or the 1st French issues did not appear in earlier years (180). The greatest advance however has unquestionably been made by Italy, which has produced a whole series of outstanding authors over the last decades; since the German-Swiss Paolo VOLLMEIER also usually published in Italian. The Italian-language literature is one of the leading groups today Philatelic literature has also made progress in the Iberian ('sa)

Peninsula, and can call on a whole range of noteworthy investigations .

P887-908 + 909-923 22 Phil Trans 57 G
Chapter 20 -

Of the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Greece etc one may say that they keep up valiantly, without having produced anything really outstanding during the last twenty or thirty years (183). This is not true however of Czechoslovakia and Hungary, where multi-volume works have appeared which I cannot evaluate myself because of not knowing the language, but which in the view of competent judges are to be ranked as definitive standard works (184). Little is heard from the other countries of the Eastern bloc, but I do not know of any major monographs.

If we now turn our eyes to countries outside Europe and North America, we have already mentioned the outstanding contributions made by Australian and New Zealand researchers. Africa remains more or less a blank spot on the map of philately, with the natural exception of South Africa, which has produced excellent work before and after our deadline. The Near East too has practically dropped out of any significant philatelic activity simply because of political conditions, with Israel forming a modest exception. In the Far East, Indian philatelists have tilled their native soil with success since the days of one Jal COOPER, however their publications are in English almost without exception, and so come under the English-language literature already discussed.

Japan has developed into a philatelic 'Great Power' in the decades since the end of the Second World War: This has affected the literature as well, as revealed particularly by the work of Dr. S. ICHIDA (185). China on the other hand is still in the development stage, the occasional publication from Taiwan notwithstanding philatelic science has also shown noteworthy advances in South and Middle America in the years since 1950, and has found in A. BONILLA LARA a representative who has gained universal respect. This concludes our 'Tour d'horizon', which has deliberately tended to avoid names. I have also deliberately not listed what are in my view the most important publications. Instead, I will give a list of the works that have been awarded the Crawford Medal since 1950. Although the continental observer may have other views and detect a certain leaning towards English-literature publications on the part of the awarding body, there can be no doubt that all the works mentioned are typical examples of the high level of philatelic research in the post-war period x186>.

- 1950: L. E. DAWSON: The One Anna and Two Annas Postal Stamps of India 1854-55.
1951: D. ALAN STEVENSON: The Triangular Stamps of Cape of Good Hope.
1952: J. SCHMIDT-ANDERSEN: The Postage Stamps of Denmark 1851-1951.
1953: Sir John WILSON, Bart: The Royal Philatelic Collection.
1954: J. R. W. PURVES: The Half Lengths of Victoria. 1955:
1956: The Postage Stamps of New Zealand, Vol. III.
1958: John EASTON: The De La Rue History of British and Foreign Postage Stamps 1855-1901.
1959: R. FORRESTER WOOD: The Stamps and Postal History of Sarawak.
1960: S. D. TCHILINGHIRIAN - W. S. STEPHEN: Stamps of the Russian Empire used Abroad, 6 Teile.
1961: Dr. Mohamed DADKHAH: The Lion Stamps of Persia.
1962: N. ARGENTI: The Postage Stamps of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.
1963: Dr. W. R. D. WIGGINS: The Postage Stamps of Great Britain, Part II.
P887-908 + 909-923 23 Phil Trans 57 G Chapter 20
1964: Dr. J. SCHATZKES: The Cancellations of Mexico 1856-74.
1965: Joaquin GALVEZ: Les primeros sellos de Chile, 1853 to 1867. (The first stamps of Chile).
1966: Dr. S. ICHIDA: The Cherry Blossom Issues of Japan 1872-1876.
1967: A Magyar Belyagek Monografiaja, Bde. I-II and V. (Monograph on the stamps of Hungary, Vol. I-II & V).
1968:
1969: R. A. GOODMAN: Guatemala Postal History and Stamps of Mid 1902, Vol. I.
1970: 1971: 1972: G. E. HARGEST: History of Letter Post Communication between the United States of America and Europe, 1845-1875.
1973: Raymond SALLES: Encyclopédie de la poste maritime Française. Historique et Catalogue, 8 Bde. (Encyclopaedia of the French maritime post. History and Catalogue, 8 vols.)
1974 Robson LOWE: Encyclopaedia of the British Empire Postage Stamps, Vol. V. 1975
Dr. G. C. van BALEN BLANKEN - B. BUURMAN: The Netherlands - Plating of the 1852 5 cent and 10 cent Values.
1976: A. G. M. BATTEN: The Orange Free State - Its Postal Offices and their Markings 1868-1910.
1977:
1978: A. R. BUTLER: The Departmental Stamps of South Australia.
1979: Orjan LUNING: Luftpostens Historia i Norden. (History of airmail post in Scandinavia).
1980: W. H. FISHER: The Plating of the Penny, vol. 1-IV.
1981: M. SAMUEL - A. HUGGINS Specimen Stamps and Stationery of Great Britain.
1982: S. RINGSTROM - H. E. TESTER: The Private Ship Letter Stamps of the World, vol. 1 - 11.
1983: Dr. A. JERGER: Monographie der Frankaturen 1850 - 1867, vol. 1 - 11. (Monograph on cancellations).
1985: A. M. O. VIEIRA: Selos clasicos de relevo de Portugal. (Classical Stamps of Portugal).

In no field does the future seem so hopeful to me as in that of philatelic literature, not only because of the steep rise in the number of works published, which is not necessarily a positive criterion, but because of the overall notable high level of these publications. Philatelic research has really taken a great step forward under the fruitful influence of the historical method, even though I cannot yet speak of a scientific discipline in the full meaning of the word. One factor lacking for this is a university connection, which is still quite remote, at least in Continental Europe, as I have pointed out in other places; if it ever came to be considered seriously, I would only propose the topic of 'postal history', of which philately would be one branch.

However, I cannot refrain from one critical comment on philatelic research to round off this chapter. I mean the universally spreading tendency towards 'provincialism' which, avoiding the easily-misunderstood term 'nationalism', I use to mean the trend towards studying exclusively the stamps, postmarks and history of one's own country. Of course this is not in itself a bad thing, as it is the most obvious: one cannot expect an Iclander to produce the definitive work on the postal routes of Sicily. I do not at all want to be taken as meaning that the philatelist should only concern himself with the stamps or postal history of foreign countries - that would be a total misunderstanding. What I do condemn is the exclusive attitude that makes at least 90% of research philatelists devote themselves only to the stamps of their own country. This holds good for simple collecting, very much so for special collecting, perhaps even more than for literary concern with one given region. I would like to see a stronger internationalism in research, greater openness towards the postal history of other countries. The philatelic culture of a country, if such a term be permissible, is expressed not least in this degree of openness. It is certainly no accident that monographs on the stamps or postal history of foreign countries appear almost exclusively in the English or German tongues.

P887-908 + 909-923 24

Phil Trans 57 6 Chapter 20

TRANS 57 p.909

Study of the issues from the "Empire" also continued to progress. Bassett HULL's book on Queensland has already been mentioned: two years earlier a group of four authors published an excellent work on the stamps, cancellations and postal history of Jamaica and in the same year as Bassett HULL, D. R. MARTIN and E. A. SMYTHIES published an important study of the 4-anna lithographed Indian stamps of 1854/55⁽⁹⁰⁾, but research interest was focussed above all on South Africa. Since 1930 Gilbert J. ALLIS has published his still valuable work on the stamps and postal history of the Cape of Good Hope, which was awarded the Crawford medal by the "Royal" in 1931⁽⁹¹⁾. Ten years later appeared the fine monograph on the stamps of the Transvaal from the pen of J. H. CURLE and A. E. BASDEN, which also won the Crawford medal⁽⁹²⁾. Finally, in 1943 Adrian Albert JURGENS published his fundamental work on cancellations, following it two years later with a no less soundly based study of Bechuanaland⁽⁹³⁾.

The first of these books did not appear in London, but in Cape Town; this probably because of the war, but also points to a new self-confidence on the part of the dominion. Thus, after the first drafts in the years 1923/26, Fred JARRETT finally brought out his catalogue-handbook of the stamps of British North America in Toronto in 1929. Alfred St. DEAVILLE published his work on the postal system of the colonial period in British Columbia and its stamps as early as 1928 in Victoria/B.C., and Jal COOPER his "Stamps of India" in 1942 in Bombay⁽⁹⁴⁾. However, what time has proved to be the most important publication outside Great Britain was without question the monumental six-volume work on the stamps and postal history of New Zealand. It is true that most of it only appeared after the Second world war, but the first volume by Ray J. G. COLLINS and H. T. M. FATHERS appeared in 1938, and the second in 1949. This work of over 3,600 pages is the most comprehensive to be devoted so far to an individual member of the "Commonwealth"⁽⁹⁵⁾.

Although British researchers have shown very little interest in Continental European subjects⁽⁹⁶⁾, they have always shown a lively concern for the philately of South America and the Spanish homeland. Thus, the first book to be honoured with the Crawford medal in 1920 was the one of Hugo GRIEBERT on the first Spanish issues⁽⁹⁷⁾. Between 1923 and 1931 appeared five works, every one of which still ranks as definitive or at least essential for the topic concerned: G. S. F. NAPIER on the Brazilian “bullseye” (1923)⁽⁹⁸⁾, W. J. COCHRANE and H. A. SPOWART on the Argentinian Rivadavia issues (1923), F. J. PELOW on the stamps of Buenos Aires (1925)⁽⁹⁹⁾, Samuel CHAPMAN (1859-1943) on the Mexican issues of 1858-1868 (1926)⁽¹⁰⁰⁾, and Emanuel J. LEE on Uruguay (1931)⁽¹⁰¹⁾. Interest in the stamps of the Far East is documented in A. M. Tracy WOODWARD’s book on Japan, which was the standard work in this field until the appearance of the much more detailed researches of Dr. S. ICHIDA⁽¹⁰²⁾. The same is true of Adolf PASSER’s monograph on the stamps of Turkey issued by the “Royal” in 1938⁽¹⁰³⁾.

A great step forward was taken during the period we are considering by philatelic science in the USA. In the period before 1914, J. LUFF is the only name worth mentioning, but in the succeeding period the authors of notable monographs increased rapidly in number. The fundamental work of one Dr. Carroll CHASE and a Stanley ASHBROOK will be discussed later. Both made a single stamp the object of their study, thus starting a fresh trend in philatelic research. August DIETZ and Lester G. BROOKMAN on the other hand stuck to the traditional form: the first with his 1919 history of the postal services of the Confederate States which has not been superseded to the present day, and L. G. BROOKMAN in 1947 with the most comprehensive monograph to that date on American stamps of the 19th century. This went to a second edition in 1966/67⁽¹⁰⁴⁾. In 1937 the aged John LUFF published a neat summary of the then state of research on temporary postmasters, and Clarence W. BRAZER (1880-1956) published a fundamental work on the trials essays and test printings of American stamps in 1941. Finally J. K. BACH, F. R. HARRIS, H. A. MEYER and W. J. DAVEY published their fundamental work on the postal history and issues of Hawaii in 1948.

In contrast to the works just mentioned, which were all devoted to classical U.S. philately, the interest of Max JOHL (1901-1957) was directed above all to U.S. stamps of the twentieth century, on which he wrote a four-volume monograph with a total of 1,235 pages. It should be noted, though, that the fourth and last volume appeared in 1938, so that the four volumes do not quite cover a full four decades⁽¹⁰⁶⁾. In 1926, Le Roy R. HAFEN published a trailblazing historical study of the “Overland Mail”, and in 1933/35 Delf NORONA put together a sort of encyclopædia on postal history and cancellation research. An important monograph on Boston cancellations up to 1890 was published by Maurice C. BLAKE and Wilbur W. DAVIS⁽¹⁰⁷⁾. Subjects outside the USA were dealt with by Charles Lathrop PACK in his famous book on the first issues from Victoria (Australia), which made him the first non-Briton to be awarded the Crawford medal in 1923⁽¹⁰⁸⁾, and by STEPHEN G. RICH (1890-1958) who wrote the philatelic history of the Boer War in 1943⁽¹⁰⁹⁾.

The French-language literature is more abundant for the period 1914-50 than for the earlier one, but there are no truly pioneering works. One that deserves a mention is the major work by Louis HANCIAU on the Belgian cancellations of 1814-1914: this was the work of an eighty year old and appeared posthumously in 1929⁽¹¹⁰⁾. The leading Belgian philatelist André de COCK (1880-1964), the founder of the Belgian postal museum, published many papers but two in particular gained him a reputation as a philatelic author. They were on the cancellations of the Belgian Congo and the Belgian number cancellations⁽¹¹¹⁾. Another Belgian who lived in France, Fernande SERRANE († 1933) made a special name as an expert on forgeries but was also the author of notable studies on the classical issues of France and The Netherlands⁽¹¹²⁾.

The most productive Belgian researcher of these years however was without doubt Paul de SMETH (1859-1940), in whose honour the “Paul de Smeth prize for Philatelic Literary Merit” was founded in Belgium in the year 1950 (Fig. 216). Time has shown his most detailed work to be one of he published in conjunction with the Marquis de FAYOLLE on the early Mexican issues of 1856-1874, but he also issued numerous smaller studies on such diverse topics as Greece, the Transvaal, Serbia and, last but not least, Belgium⁽¹¹⁵⁾. Rene PONCELET, who died in 1944 is better known for his innumerable articles in magazines than for any longer studies (Figs. 215-216). A study published by P. GROSFILS-BERGER in 1947 was devoted to the first Finnish issues⁽¹¹⁴⁾.

Obviously there was no lack of useful contributions in France itself, but none of them is specially outstanding. This even applies to the six-volume “Memorial Philatélique” by Gustave BERTRAND⁽¹¹⁵⁾, which did not noticeably advance research. There is a predominance of studies on cancellations, solid but not particularly original. The medical man Dr. P. BOUVET published a series of fine studies of ships’ post, French colonies and the classical French issues, none of which ran to more than 48 pages⁽¹¹⁶⁾. One exception is provided by Georges BRUNEL (1860-1951) who in the manner of a MELVILLE published an endless series of pamphlets and tracts on philatelic subjects over many decades until the 1940s: he only twice produced substantial works on the classical philately of France – in 1896 and 1929⁽¹¹⁷⁾. On the whole, BRUNEL’s publications paid little or no attention to new issues; but rather went in for building up legends. It was BRUNEL who launched on the world the foolish idea that the inscription “Post Office” on the first Mauritius issue was a “mistake” on the part of the engraver⁽¹¹⁸⁾. Like MELVILLE, BRUNEL was the editor of a respected journal, which like Melville’s was interested in the fashionable aerophilately, but neither in the breadth of his writing nor the skill of his presentation was he the equal of the much more travelled and urbane MELVILLE, his quarrelsome nature being another point of difference. His spiteful and ugly attacks on the unfortunate FERRARY have already been mentioned above. Hence BRUNEL was never able to exert the broad influence that his contemporary MELVILLE enjoyed.

Prominent amongst the researchers of the time was Maurice LANGLOIS (1860-1948) who along with Dr. Emilio DIENA was one of the best-known and most highly regarded judges before and after the First World War. LANGLOIS devoted himself principally to the cancellations of France and its colonies, and did outstanding work in this field: most of his papers were published in collaboration with Victor BOURSELET (1881-1940)⁽¹¹⁹⁾, though Louis FRANCOIS (1882-1941), Gilbert GERARD and Euphemia VÉNEZIANI also served as his co-authors⁽¹²⁰⁾. Louis FRANCOIS was himself the author of a book on the Parisian balloon post⁽¹²¹⁾ (Figs. 213-217). Another high-grade researcher on cancellations was Stéphane STROWSKI, who published significant work on French cancellations of the 20th century⁽¹²²⁾.

Along with these, should also be mentioned Gaston TOURNIER († 1937), the founder of the “Académie de Philatélie”, who produced a work on the French post in Italy (1792-1815) and a noteworthy study of the military cancellations of Morocco⁽¹²³⁾. Eugene VAILLÉ, for many years the librarian of the French postal museum, was also an important historian of the French postal service⁽¹²⁴⁾. The work of the great airmail expert Jacques LE PILEUR (1880-1969) will be dealt with later. Finally, the postal-historical study of the Paris “Commune” of 1871 from the pen of Benoit LAURENT should be mentioned in this connection⁽¹²⁵⁾.

As a rule, works on postal history in the French language have come from Switzerland. Between 1905 and 1934, Marc HENRIOD published numerous studies on the post in the Fribourg, Vaud, Geneva and Neuchâtel districts, and on the postal connections between Switzerland and France⁽¹²⁶⁾ whilst the great Swiss expert Dr. Georges FULPIUS published two slim volumes on the history of the post in Geneva up to 1851⁽¹²⁷⁾. The two following works are also in French, though by Greek authors: N. S. NICOLAIDES produced a history of Greek postage stamps in 1923⁽¹²⁸⁾, whilst the “Société Philatélique Hellenique” published the standard two-volume work on the classical issues of the country, from the pen of Tr. CONSTANTINIDIS in 1933/37⁽¹²⁹⁾.

Unfortunately, there is again no major activity to report from Italy: in 1932 the indefatigable

Dr. Emilio DIENA published his “magnum opus” on the stamps of Naples which was distinguished by the Crawford medal in 1934, and in 1935 Alberto DOLAFFI published his book on Sardinia, translated into English in 1948 and still valuable today. Leopoldo RIVOLTA, whose son Achille (fig. 86) has been one of the leading Italian philatelists in the decades since 1945, published a few short studies around 1920 which are hardly worth the trouble of quoting today⁽¹³⁰⁾: the only work still of any value is that by Cesare MATTEOLI-BRADZSKI and Em. SOGNO on the stamps and cancellations of the Grand Duchy of Tuscany, and the “Catalogo prefilatelico” (prephilatelic catalogue) by Alfredo BANCI⁽¹³¹⁾ but that is more or less all. Italy did not become prominent in research till 1950.

A fundamental study on Spain was published in that country by Antonio de GUEZALA AYRIVE († 1956) on the eve of the Civil War. This concentrated particularly on plate defects etc., and also dealt with cancellations but unfortunately did not go into the actual use of them⁽¹³²⁾. In the previous year Dr. Arturo TORT NICOLAU (1878-1950) published the first volume of his comprehensive “Guia del coleccionista de sellos de correos de España” (Guide for the collector of Spanish postage stamps), the continuation of which was hindered by the Civil War, so that it only came to an end with Volume 3 in 1950. This fundamental treatment of the Spanish stamps of 1850-1900 was distinguished by the award of the Crawford medal in 1948⁽¹³³⁾. Good research came out of Argentina, where Ramon de CASTRO ESTEVES published a two-volume postal history of Argentina up to 1810 on commission from the post office authorities⁽¹³⁴⁾, and Antonio DELUCA published another two-volume history of Argentina postal and telegraph stamps⁽¹³⁵⁾, thus providing the first broadly-based work on the philately and postal history of a South American state in the Spanish language.

Before we come on to speak of the German literature of the years 1914-1950, a brief account should be given of the Dutch and Scandinavian literature of this period. The undisputed leader here is the work of Justus ANDERSEN and Henrik DETHLOFF on the Norwegian stamps of 1855-1924, which was the first non-English book to win the Crawford medal in 1925⁽¹³⁶⁾. In Stockholm Hugo J. OLSSON and Nils STRANDELL published a valuable monograph on the first Swedish issue, what is called the Skilling-Banco series⁽¹³⁷⁾, whilst Nils FORSSELL published a two-volume postal history with the support of the Swedish Post Office⁽¹³⁸⁾. An honourable mention is due to the Danish researcher S. A. HAGEMANN, who authored a number of valuable studies on the philately of Denmark between 1930 and 1951⁽¹³⁹⁾. From Holland, special attention should be paid in particular to the solid work on cancellations by O. M. VELLINGA from the year ⁽¹⁴⁰⁾, whilst J. H. BEER van GINGSTEE published an important work on the postal history of the Netherlands Indies in 1935⁽¹⁴¹⁾.

We can now come back to the German-language literature of this period: it is not by any means so extensive as the English-language literature, but comes close to it in importance. The first place would naturally belong to the monumental Kohl handbook from the pen of Dr. Herbert MUNK, had this not already been dealt with extensively in the chapter on catalogues⁽¹⁴²⁾. Hence I will limit myself here to a simple mention of this work, the equal of which was not to be found in any other country at that time. Another work, not nearly of the same importance, but still handy, useful and of general interest was the Philatelic Lexicon compiled by Alexander BUNGERZ, who also published catalogues: his Lexicon remained without competition for a long time⁽¹⁴³⁾ (Fig. 358).

We saw earlier that old Germany was under-represented in the philatelic literature in spite of its philatelic importance and its popularity with collectors. The first general survey of the philately of the old German states did not appear till the mid-30s, from the pen of Ewald MULLER-MARK under the title “Old Germany under the Microscope” which went to a total of five editions⁽¹⁴⁴⁾. Written in a lively and easily-readable style, but full of information with something for the experienced philatelist on every page, this work was an outstanding achievement for its time and fully deserved its success. Unfortunately, MULLER-MARK's business dealings – he was inspector and certified expert – did not conform to what was then accepted practice, which brought him into conflict with the law around 1960 (however I should stress particularly that he was not convicted because of forgeries): this, of course, had no effect on his high degree of learning and fine style, which were still on display in his “Reflexions (sic) on Philately” published during the Second World War⁽¹⁴⁵⁾. This can be recommended to every beginner as an introduction to the higher philately.

There are also many studies on individual old German states worth a mention. Siegfried SIMON, the leading BADEN specialist, was able to publish two volumes on the philately of Baden which were a permanent inspiration to later workers⁽¹⁴⁶⁾ before the race theories of the “3rd Reich” interrupted his work. Only a few years later Consul H. E. SIEGER brought out the work left behind by the famous WURTTENBERG specialist Carl KOHLER⁽¹⁴⁷⁾ who was the first person to make a philatelic critical study of the stamps of Wurttemberg, one which has not lost its value to the present day. Unfortunately KOHLER failed to cover cancellations in his survey. The third South German state, Bavaria, has nothing to show on the same level as the work of SIMON and KOHLER but the little book by Carl Beck on the Bavarian “cross” (Kreuzer) stamps is a useful “mise au point” for the then state of research⁽¹⁴⁸⁾. GLASEWALD's 1926 monograph on Thurn and Taxis has already been mentioned above. One very useful work was the two-volume study by 1st Lieutenant D. K. MARBACH on the Prussian registration and number cancellations⁽¹⁴⁹⁾, which was the first – necessarily incomplete – attempt at listing the well over 10,000 known registration cancellations.

Postal history was also encouraged in the German-speaking world, though still in the unphilatelic style that had distinguished the publications previous to the First World War. A “classic” in this field was the “History of the Prussian post” from the year 1859 by Heinrich (v) STEPHAN, who was later Secretary of State (Minister of the Reich) and at that time Postal Councillor⁽¹⁵⁰⁾. Karl SAUTER, who was Secretary of State in the Reich Ministry of Posts re-edited “Stephan” in 1928 and took it to the end of the Prussian post (1867). In later years he had the leisure to produce two further volumes and take the story to the end of the Reich post in the year 1945⁽¹⁵¹⁾. A very useful series of monographs for the research philatelist was put out during the years 1935-1939 by the then Reich Ministry for Posts on the historical aspects of various branches of the postal service⁽¹⁵²⁾. The author is given as Konrad SCHWARZ. A three-volume “German Postal History” occasionally quoted in foreign bibliographies is however the result of a confusion with the journal of the same name⁽¹⁵³⁾.

Many works on non-German topics were also published in the German language during the period concerned. W. V. RACHMANOV († 1979), the well-known Polish jurist of the pre-war years, and W. POLANSKI dealt with Polish postmarks of the 18th and 19th centuries⁽¹⁵⁴⁾. Edwin MUELLER's trail-blazing work on cancellations deserves at least a preliminary mention here⁽¹⁵⁵⁾. A topic almost forgotten today, but extremely popular before the First World War and still being pursued in the 20s and 30s was that of the Russian zemstvo or provincial stamps, to the collection and classification of which a great deal of effort was devoted. Only such names as S. KOPROWSKI (1875), H. LÜBKERT (1992) and W. HERRICK (1896) need be recalled here⁽¹⁵⁶⁾. However, the basic study was written by Carl SCHMIDT, who completed two volumes on this topic in conjunction with Agathon FABERGÉ before the First World war, and returned to his favourite subject in the 30s, for which the “Royal” honoured him with the Crawford medal in 1935⁽¹⁵⁸⁾.

The very useful book “New Letters on Old Ones” by A. V. KUMPF-MIKULLI has already been mentioned in the previous chapter. Two publications on the history of airmail should also be mentioned: the “History of the air Mail” by H. W. GEWANDE and “The German Air Mail” by Dr. Herbert GLITSCH⁽¹⁵⁹⁾. To conclude, we ought to take a quick look at Switzerland. Dr. Herbert MUNK, who chose Switzerland as his new home in 1936, devoted his attention from then on principally to the classical issues of his host country and published several studies of them⁽¹⁶⁰⁾. An important work on cancellations was published by F. X. ANDRES and Hans EMMENEGGER: this covered all Swiss cancellations for the period 1843-1882: a new edition after the war was made the occasion for a revision and especially the extension of the work to cover 1843-1907⁽¹⁶¹⁾. This should end the description of the German-language literature for the period 1914-1950.

If we now ask which are the most important works from these years, we find the answer much harder to arrive at than for the previous period; moreover it is no longer enough to mention six or seven names; the competition has become stiffer. With all the reservations that must apply to a necessarily subjective judgement, I would pick the following: E. D. BASON’s two-volume investigation of “The Line-Engraved Postage Stamps of Great Britain” (1920), Ch. L. PACK’s book on “Victoria: the Half-Length Portraits and the Twopence Queen Enthroned” (1923), “Norges Frimerker” (Stamps of Norway) by J. ANDERSEN and H. DETHLOFF (1924), S. CHAPMAN’s book on Mexico (1926), Dr. H. MUNK’s five volumes of the Kohl handbook (1926-1936), E. MUELLER’s work on cancellations (1927-1930), A. H. Tracy WOODWARD’s Japan volume (1928); “The Postal Service of the Confederate States of America” by A. KIETZ (1929), the monograph by Dr. C. CHASE on the American 3-cent stamp of 1851-57 (1942²), the book on Naples by Dr. E. DIENA (1932), the three-volume “Guia del coleccionista” (Collector’s guide) by Dr. A. TORT NICOLAU (1935-1950), the catalogue of the “Royal Collection” by Sir John Wilson (1952), and the monumental six-volume work on “The Postage Stamps of New Zealand” (1938-1978). It is true that the bulk of this (Vols. III-VI) only appeared after 1950, but the foundations were laid as early as the 30s and 40s. Of these, the books by PACK and WOODWARD have now been superseded, but that alters neither their trail-blazing character at the time they appeared, nor the amount of research that went into them.

The period after 1950 was characterized by an unexpected “boom” in the philatelic literature since the 50s: this quickly became obvious in the greater attention paid to literature at the international exhibitions. It suddenly became once more possible for gold medals, even several in a row, to be awarded in the Literature class: philatelic literature appeared in the international exhibitions of the 70s, and the year 1982 saw the first independent international exhibition of literature in Milan under the auspices of the FIP. The rise in the esteem paid to literature goes hand in hand with an increasing interest in it on the part of serious philatelists. I personally have no doubt that the modern trend towards the study of postal history has contributed very much to the “literature wave” of the last three decades.

However, I must be excused from giving detailed descriptions of this literature here: otherwise the slightly bibliographical nature of the chapter would degenerate into pure bibliography, which I want to avoid. I would like to make an exception, for well-founded reasons, in the case of the literature on aerophilately. This is not because this literature is particularly abundant, or unusually high in quality – neither is unfortunately the case – but because it gives me the opportunity for some reflections of a general nature that I have particularly at heart.

Before I come on to give my reasons for this, something should be said about the present. The number of aerophilatelic monographs in the period 1914-1950 was very small. This may be in order for the first years of the period, but is much less understandable for the 30s and 40s. It looks as if all the information went into catalogues with nothing left over for detailed monographs: everything tended to be in the form of brief articles and, even when a writer got round to dealing with a subject in monograph form, the limit was 50 or at most 100 pages, and this magic number was hardly ever exceeded by anything worth mentioning. To deal with these pamphlets – they are generally nothing more – in detail would be to ignore the rigid criteria used in selecting for this chapter, and so I shall not do it.

Amongst the few titles I have quoted are two that both deal with the balloon post during the Siege of Paris, 1870-71⁽¹⁶²⁾. This is not an accident. Not the first “hops” of the 90s, nor the first crossing of the English Channel, not even the universally amazing flights of the “airship” Graf ZEPPELIN has captured the imagination and roused the curiosity of researchers as did the balloon flights during the “siege” of 1870-71. In fact they were simply an emergency method of getting the post out of Paris: the actual forwarding was by the quite reliable methods of railway, coach or ship. Over a hundred years later, the “ballons moutés” are still an object of affection to collectors and researchers; and it amazes the interested layman, as the author rates himself, how little use they make of the reports of participants and other contemporaries, though these are available in large numbers⁽¹⁶³⁾. And when we are speaking of the literature from the 70s of last century, we must not forget Dr. Heinrich STEPHAN’s 1874 contribution on “World Post and Airship Travel” in which he even predicted the future use of rockets⁽¹⁶¹⁾.

However, back to modern research on the balloon post of 1870-71. After the fundamental work by J. LE PILEUR in 1943 and 1953, Paul MAINCENT returned to the question of the development of the balloon post⁽¹⁶⁵⁾, whilst Wilhelm HOFINGER tried to describe the events of those days for the German reader⁽¹⁶⁶⁾. The centenary of 1971 gave rise to a good many publications, amongst the lively monograph of Gunther HEYD on the zinc-ball post in the Seine stands out, though it is written rather in the style of an eye-witness⁽¹⁶⁷⁾. The detailed account by the American Reuben R. THOMPSON unfortunately sacrifices quality to quantity, a thing which cannot be said of the book published a year later by the Frenchman Louis A. Chaintrier⁽¹⁶⁸⁾. Another scene, what are called the “butterflies of Metz” has been treated in detail by a third American, the postal historian Ernst M. COHN who also contributed to an excellent monograph on what was perhaps the most important balloon flight, that of the “Ville d’Orleans”⁽¹⁶⁹⁾. This covers the most important recent literature on the oldest subject in airmail history.

Naturally, the aerophilatelic literature of the years since 1950 has not been entirely devoted to studies of the Siege of Paris but my findings mentioned above for the 1914-1950 period that such literature was (a) scanty and (b) rather inadequate, are unfortunately still valid. Individual flights of particular airships, for example, are dealt with in detail⁽¹⁷⁰⁾, first flights collected, questions relating to forgeries discussed⁽¹⁷¹⁾, etc., etc. Monographs such as that of Joseph L. EISENDRATH on flights that ended in disaster, or that by LONDONO-GEBAUER on 50 years of airmail in Colombia are exceptions, as they run to over 200 and 300 pages⁽¹⁷²⁾. The same is true of the excellent history of the Scandinavian airmail by Orjan LÜNING⁽¹⁷³⁾ which was the first work on aerophilately to receive the Crawford medal in 1978, and the valuable contribution by Leonhard H. SMITH on the first England-Australia flight by (Sir) ROSS SMITH; the important monograph by R. E. R. DALWICK and C. H. C. HARMER on the Newfoundland airmail service also deserves an approving mention⁽¹⁷⁴⁾? But – aerophilatelist must forgive me – the broad sweep is still missing.

It is surely no accident that such outstanding researchers as Henry M. GOODKIND or Dr. Max KRONSTEIN have never written a bigger book: and the same is true of Frank MULLER, Jean SILOMBRA or Francis FIELD, to name only the last representatives of the pioneer generation still alive today: they have all produced catalogues, some of them outstanding, and remain on the whole the masters of the “small size”, i.e. they write short articles and pamphlets on restricted subjects, like H. M. GOODKIND, who died far too young⁽¹⁷⁵⁾. In the case of Dr. Max

KRONSTEIN, born at Karlsruhe and resident in the USA since 1938, Juror at the first international airmail exhibitions in 1930 and 1932, the Paris E.I.P.A. and the Danzig LU-POSTA, the “American Air Mail Society” has decided at least to make a collection of his articles⁽¹⁷⁶⁾, and I would like to suggest the same thing for the work of Henry M. GOODKIND and other leading aerophilatelists.

In conclusion, let us turn again to the question asked above, of why the literature of aerophilately is relatively scanty compared with that for the classics or postal history? Obviously there are many reasons, but I would like to put two in particular up for debate, one objective and one subjective. The objective reason is that airmail issues produced on the most up-to-date printing machines simply do not show the numberless variations in colour and printing, and the wide range of uses (over many years) that the classic issues do and so there is simply not as much to be said about them. All official – and semi-official – airmail stamps have been printed in the 20th century. Thus variant colours, printing errors etc., if not completely absent – see the 24 cent “Inverted Center” from the USA – are at least very rare, and the different flights with their postmarks are best dealt with in catalogue form.

The second reason is of a subjective nature, relating to the aerophilatelists themselves. My personal impression from reading aerophilatelic literature (the impression of a well-intentioned outsider) is frequently that the technical-historical aspect outweighs the purely philatelic in this field. Thus, the type of aircraft with all technical details, the weather conditions before and during the flight, the time of starting, the duration of the flight with any details, the number of passengers, intermediate stops, etc., are all recorded with the greatest precision, though from the philatelic point of view all this is totally irrelevant. One can appreciate the technical enthusiasm, the joy in flying, etc., so long as philately does not get overlooked, since that is what we are dealing with and not, to quote Horst AISSLINGER “the colour of the pilot’s underpants”. When aerophilatelists have got round to centering their interests on actual philately and not technology, then I think the day will not be far off when aerophilatelists too will get the monographs and handbooks they so badly need.

Now let us try to give a survey of the present state of philatelic research in a brief “tour d’horizon”. It is still true for the period after 1950 that the Anglo-Saxon world remains in the forefront of philatelic science and its dominance is not merely numerical. However, there are fresh developments here as well. It is hardly accidental that the leading personality in philatelic research over the years 1950-80 has been neither a Briton nor an American but the Australian J. R. W. PURVES⁽¹⁷⁷⁾. Naturally this does not mean that the centre of gravity in research has suddenly shifted from Great Britain and the USA to Australia, but it does show that the former dominions have taken work on the philatelic heritage into their own hands to a large extent – let us recall once more in this connection the great six-volume work put out by the “Royal Philatelic Society of New Zealand”⁽¹⁷⁸⁾ – and have long ago changed from learners to masters. Otherwise, the publications of the “Royal”, the “American Philatelic Society”, the “Collectors Club”, the “Philatelic Foundation”, etc., have lost none of their quality or importance for philately as a whole, and now as formerly the English-language literature leads the way.

I close my evaluation of the German-language literature by saying that it has maintained its second place with difficulty. This is partly because a Dr. H. MUNK or an Edwin MUELLER is not born every day, and partly because we must not ignore the fact that other nations have caught us up. This is not to imply there has been any fall in quality since, as before, there have been praiseworthy, even important, publications in the German language but one could wish they were rather more numerous by comparison with the publications from other countries. German-speaking philatelists are lucky in that they have two organisations to promote their researches: the Swiss “Fonds zur Forderung der Philatelie” (Fund for the Promotion of Philately) and the German “Stiftung zur Forderung der Philatelie and Postgeschichte” (Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History)⁽¹⁷⁹⁾, which do good work overall but are generally limited by their statutes to promoting already completed work.

In France too there has been in general no decline from the high level of publications. I might even speak of a rise by comparison with the earlier period, since such fundamental work as that by Raymond SALLES or the “Paris Academy” on the first French issues did not appear in earlier years⁽¹⁸⁰⁾. The greatest advance however has unquestionably been made by Italy, which has produced a whole series of outstanding authors over the past decades: since the German-Swiss Paolo VOLLMEIER also usually publishes in Italian. The Italian-language literature is one of the leading groups today⁽¹⁸¹⁾. Philatelic literature has also made progress in the Iberian peninsula, and can call on a whole range of noteworthy investigations⁽¹⁸²⁾.

Of the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Greece, etc., one may say that they keep up valiantly, without having produced anything really outstanding during the last twenty or thirty years⁽¹⁸³⁾. This is not true however of Czechoslovakia and Hungary, where multi-volume works have appeared which I cannot evaluate myself because of not knowing the languages, but which in the view of competent judges are to be ranked as definitive standard works⁽¹⁸⁴⁾. Little is heard from the other countries of the Eastern bloc, but I do not know of any major monographs.

If we now turn our eyes to countries outside Europe and North America, we have already mentioned the outstanding contributions made by Australian and New Zealand researchers. Africa remains more or less a blank spot on the map of philately, with the natural exception of South Africa, which has produced excellent work before and after our deadline. The Near East too has practically dropped out of any significant philatelic activity simply because of political conditions, with Israel forming a modest exception. In the Far East, Indian philatelists have tilled their native soil with success since the days of one Jal COOPER; however their publications are in English almost without exception and so come under the English-language literature already discussed.

Japan has developed into a philatelic “Great Power” in the decades since the end of the Second World War: this has affected the literature as well as revealed particularly by the work of Dr. S. ICHIDA⁽¹⁸⁵⁾. China on the other hand is still in the development stage, the occasional publication from Taiwan notwithstanding. Philatelic science has also shown noteworthy advances in South and Middle America in the years since 1950 and has found in A. BONILLA LARA a representative who has gained universal respect. This concludes our “tour d’horizon” which has deliberately tended to avoid names. I have also deliberately not listed what are, in my view, the important publications. Instead I will give a list of the works that have been awarded the Crawford medal since 1950. Although the Continental observer may have other views and detect a certain leaning towards English-language publications on the part of the awarding body, there can be no doubt that all the works mentioned are typical examples of the high level of philatelic research in the post-war period⁽¹⁸⁶⁾.

See list, pp.921-922

In no field does the future seem so hopeful to me as in that of philatelic literature, not only because of the steep rise in the number of works published, which is not necessarily a positive criterion, but because of the overall notably high level of these publications. Philatelic research has really taken a great step forward under the fruitful influence of the historical method, even though I cannot yet speak of a scientific discipline in the full meaning of the word. One factor lacking for this is a university connection, which is still quite remote, at least in Continental Europe, as I have pointed out in other places: if it ever came to be considered seriously, I would only propose the topic of “postal history” of which philately would be one branch.

However I cannot refrain from one critical comment on philatelic research to round off this chapter. I mean the universally spreading tendency towards “provincialism” which avoiding the easily misunderstood term “nationalism”, I use to mean the trend towards studying exclusively the stamps, postmarks and history of one’s own country. Of course this is not in itself a bad thing as it is the most obvious: one cannot expect an Iclander to produce the definitive work on the postal routes of Sicily. I do not at all want to be taken as meaning that the philatelist should only concern himself with the stamps or postal history of foreign countries – that would be a total misunderstanding. What I do condemn is the exclusive attitude that makes at least 90% of research philatelists devote themselves only to the stamp of their own country. This holds good for simple collecting, very much so for special collecting, perhaps even more than for literary concern with one given region. I would like to see a stronger internationalism in research, greater openness towards the postal history of other countries. The philatelic culture of a country, if such a term be permissible, is expressed not least in this degree of openness. It is certainly no accident that monographs on the stamps or postal history of foreign countries appear almost exclusively in the English or German tongues.

Page 924 - references

1 See above, p. 479. Notes 1-4, p. M. Notes 31-36.

2 Carlrichard BRÜHL: Research in the Philately, in 4th Soester Discussions 1975. The 3 essential passages of the lecture are in the article by Dr. W. Lippens quoted verbatim.

3 I am fundamentally different here from the statements made by Walter LIPPENS in: DZB. 55 (1980) No. 17, esp. Pp. 3089-91; see already above p. 267 note 10.

4 Robert L. D. DAVIDSON: Philatelic Wilderness (a. Critique of current Scholarships in Philately), in: Thirty-Second American Philatelic Congress (Newark 1966) pp. 75-84; agreeing Ira SEEBACHER in The Collectors Club Philatelist 46 (1967) No. 2, p. 117.

5 Carl H. SCHEELE: On the “Wilderness” of Philatelic Scholarship, in: Thirty-Third American Philatelic Congress (Los Angeles 1967) pp. 13-21. The only thing that could be criticized for this well-intentioned lecture would perhaps be a little too much emphasis on the educational element, but that was not criticized at all.

6 Ira SEEBACHER in The Collectors Club Philatelist 17 (1968) No. 1, p. Especially p. 2/13.

7 Henry M. GOODKIND: Philately’s Neglect, in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 33 (193/1) No. 6, pp. 287-88.

8 See p. 601 above.

9 Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung 18 (1905) No. 11 pp. 108-11; No. 12, pp. 119-23; 19 (1906) No. 1, pp. 3-7; No. 2, p. 18022; No. 3, pp. 28-31; No. 4 pp. 35-37, especially p. 109. The essay is essentially a bibliography.

10 Carl BECK: Superfluous - Unnecessary, in: Germania reports 29 (1925) No. 7-8, pp. 122-23.

11 Uten chap. 22, p. 1013 ff.

12 “Research” here at least also means “being up to date with research”, i.e. having the relevant reference works, etc. And not just those books that are needed for a specific investigation.

13 On the creation of libraries, in: DBZ 5 (1894/93) No. 12, pp.180-82. P. 182. Dr. Brendicke himself was an avid collector of literature.

14 And just as little to the works of other authors cited there in connection.

15 A laudable exception: above, p. 263 with note 24, cf. also above, p. 265.

16 See above p. 61M note 16, p. 68 with note 8, p. 69 with note 12, p. 98 with notes 5-6 and others.

17 Crawford Catalog, COI. 380, see MOSCHKAU, Geschichte, p. 26 m. Note on Tiffany see below, chap. 22, p. 1016 with notes 5-7.

18 cf.below chap. 22, pp. 1018-19 with notes 11-12.

19 cf.below chap. 22, p. 1044 note 13.

20 Fritz CHEAP: Mondial. Philatelic literature reference work, Vienna 1936. There were only 72 pages printed on one side in 8 ° in the loose-leaf system (13 pages German and 19 pages English magazines). The plan of the entire work cannot be judged from this.

21 Bibliography timbrologique de la France et de la Belgique, Bruxells 1878, 71 pages in small 8 °. Crawford Catalog, col. 55 (BLANC, No. 147, LECLERCQ-Waroquiers, p. 26 No. 406); see above, p. 789 m. note 50. The Belgian bibliography - at that time in Belgium almost all was written in French - ibid. pp. 61-74. The bibliography was given in: Bulletin de la Soc. Française de Timbrologie, t. I (1875-78) fasc. 4-10 has been published.

22 Bibliography française des Postes et de la Philatelie, Paris 1949, 169 pages in 8 ° (1402 numbers).

23 Académie de Philatélie de Belgique. Bibliographie de la Philatélie belge, Bruxelles 1972 (machine-written copied). Of course, this bibliography also contains all the treatises in Flemish.

24 (Biblioteca de Bibliografia italiana, t. XXX III), Firenze 1959, 396 pages in 8 ° (2802 numbers).

25 Bibliography at the same time reference book of the entire German philatelic literature from its creation up to the end of 1891 together with an outline of the history of philately with special consideration of Germany and a short history of German philatelic literature, 748 pages in 8 °, Munich 1892 (-94): Crawford Catalog, col. 370. The publisher was Anselm Larisch.

26 Vienna 1901, 63 pages in 8 °. Crawford Catalog, col. 371. The edition was only 150 copies. On Suppantchitsch see below, chap. 22, p. 1021 with notes 20-21.

27 Handbook of German Philatelic Literature. On behalf of the Enternational Philatelisten-Verein Dresden ... published and edited by Tax TON, Dresden 1916-18, 152 pages in 8 °. The “Handbook” does not list any magazines, even though it was originally intended.

- 28 The previous one was called "Archive of Philatelic Literature" and was published from 1948-1950. Incidentally, both publications do not only evaluate German magazines.
- 29 t. I, Columbus / Ohio 1911, 670 pages in uppercase 8 °. The two "French", read: Belgian magazines were "Le Timbre-Poste" and "Le Timbre Fiscal".
- 30 London 1925, 248 pages in 8 °. The "Philatelic Congress" acted as the publisher.
- 31 Cumulative Index to Philatelic Literature 1950-1963, 2 vols., London 1964. The publisher was the then "Junior (now: National) Philatelic Society". This "index" also only lists works in English.
- 32 The Stand Index to Philatelic Literature 1879-1925, 8 parts, London 1926-33, 146 pages in 8 °. 10 parts were planned. See also: Priced Catalog of Philatelic Literature 1940-41, London 1940, 48 pages; Food for Thought: 1945 edition of the Philatelic Literature Catalog, London 1944, 53 pages in 8 °.
- 33 A Guide to Philatelic Literature, London 19221, 19232, 19273 (with supplements), 19394, 90 pages in 8 °.
- 34 For the lists by Harris and Vallancey, see James NEGUS: Sources of Philatelic Information in: the Philatelic Literature Review. Second Series, t. 20 (1971) No. 2, pp. 69-84, especially pp. 73, 77 and below chap. Ss, p. 1041.
- 35 Priced Guide to Philatelic Literature, North Miami 1971, 509 pages in 8 °. The first edition from 1968 had only 232 pages in a smaller format.
- 36 Canadian Philately, Bibliography and Index 1864-1973, Ottawa 1979, 281 pages in 8 ° (National Library of Canada): a 246-page "supplement" appeared in 1983. The work is written in English-French. Bibliography of Finnish Philatelic Literature, 5 parts, Helsinki 1982, 363 pages in 8 °.
- 37 Alex LECLERCQ - Georges WAROQUIERS: Jean-Baptiste Moens (1833-1908), père de la philatélie. La nomenclature de son œuvre avec critères de rareté, Bruxelles 1981, 58 pages in 8 °; G. N. KELLOW: J. R. W. Purves, RDP., FRPSL: A Philatelic Bibliography, Melbourne 1982, 52 pages in 8 °. The Melville bibliography: above p. 166, note 18.
- 38 Bibliografía Filatélica y Postal. España y sus ex-colonias 1500-1980, Madrid [1984], 551 pages in 4 °.
- 39 I am thinking above all of the catalogs of the Collectors Club in New York and the Swedish Postal Museum: below, chap. 22, p. 1024 with note 25, p. 1031 with note 35.
- 40 See above p. 68 with note 8, p. 69 with note 12.
- 41 See above p. 98 with notes 5-6.
- 42 See above pp. 58-59 with notes 10-12.
- 43 LECLERCQ - WAROQUIERS, pp. 16-18 No. 103-18 and above p. 61 with note 17; See WILLIAMS, Philately, p. 47. The monographs on Belgium (1880), Württemberg (1881) and Argentina (1882) were two-volume.

44 Les timbres de Saxe depuis leur origine jusqu 'a nos jours, Bruxelles 1879, 104 pages in 8 °: LECLERCQ-WAROQUIERS, p. 17 No. 108. The volumes on Naples-Sicily, Peru, were declared as “2 editions”. Parma-Modena-Romagna, Toscana-San Marine-Kirchenstaar (all 1878), Mauritius and Luxemburg (both 1879): LECLERCQ-WAROQUIERS, pp. 16-17 No. 103-07, 109. Thereafter only original editions appeared. See above p. 64 note 17.

45 Cf. LECLERCQ-WAROQUIERS, pp. 7-9: the information given here is partly misleading, as it also takes journal articles into account.

46 Reseña Histórico-Descriptiva de los Sellos de Correo de España, Madrid 1881, 253 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 106 (NATHAN-GAHL, p. 124, no. 314). The book saw three editions (1892) and was reprinted in 1982 after the 1st edition.

47 WILLIAMS, Philately, p. 585.

48 Crawford Catalog, col. 239, 312, 412 and above p. 85 with notes 19-20; see WILLIAMS, Philately, pp. 508-10.

49 Catalog of postage stamps, stamped envelopes, and postcards. Compiled by the Philatelic Society, London. Spain and Colonies, London [1878], 48 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 238 (NATHAN-GAHL, p. 119, No. 289). But see above p. 123 m. Note 23.

50 Listed in: Crawford Catalog, col. 238-39 and: The Royal Philatelic Society, pp. 174-75. See the following note and below p.905 m. Note 82.

51 H. E. WRIGHT - A. B. CREEK: A. History of the adhesive stamps of the British Isles available for postal and telegraph purposes ... Compiled from Official Sources ... London 1899, 263 pages with 38 plates in 4 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 417; see ibid, col. 87, 239. A 19-page “supplement” was published in 1904: Crawford Catalog, col. 87. A. F. Basset HULL: The Stamps of Tasmania, London 1890, 136 pages with 9 plates in 4 °; DERS: The Postage Stamps, Envelopes, Wrappers and Telephone Stamps of New South Wales, London 1913, 575 pages with 55 plates in 4 °. This volume was published for the “Royal” by Stanley Gibbons; see below with the following note 52 Leslie L. R. HAUSBURG: The Postage and Telegraph Stamps of British India. Part 1: Postage Stamps; C. STEWART WILSON - C. S. F. CROFTON: ibid. Part 11: Telegraph Stamps, London 1907, 216 pages with 23 plates in 4 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 179, This was an improved edition of the 1892 volume of the London Philatelic Society. Cf. also John G. HENDY: The History of the Early Postmarks of the British Isles, From their Introduction down to 1840, London 1905, 204 pages in Klein-8 °: Crawford Catalog, vol. 182: The History of the Postmarks of the British Isles from 1840 to 1876, London 1909, 184 pages in V. Stanley Gibbons Ltd. had only this second part. Relocated. See also uten p. 905 with note 89 and Crawford Catalog, col. 139-40; see above p. 315 m. note 12 as well as below chap. 21 / §3m / s, 952 m. Note 5; § 4, p. 962. Note 8-10.

53 London 1891, 240 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 112. The book is the only slightly modified and supplemented version of a series of articles in the “Monthly Journal” 1-2 (1890-91). See also H. E. HADASCH: The Mulready and its Caricatures, in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 18 (1939) No. 1, pp. 1-15; No. 2, pp. 106-20; DERS: The Mulready Reprints, Facsimiles, Counterfeits etc., in: ibid. No. 4, pp. 177-86; additionally J. SHELFAX-GEI in: ibid. pp. 286-87.

54 below chap. 21 / §§ 1, 3-4, p. 937 ff., P. 951 ff., P. 959 ff.

55 Above p. 61 with note 20.

56 Danske Postfrimaerker 1851-1901. En historisk afhandling udarbejdet paa basis af originale aktstykker, København 1901, 156 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 215

57 Sveriges Frankotecken 1855-1905. En Minnesskrift vid de Svenska Frimärken as 50 Ars Jubileum, utgifven af Sveriges Filatelist-Förening, Stockholm 1905, 322 pages in 8 °; the German translation under the title: “Die Postmarken von Schweden 1855-1905”, was published as the 2nd part by Hugo KROTZSCH: Illustrated Handbook of Postfreimarkenkunde, Leipzig 1908: Crawford Catalog, col. 368, 217, 219.

58 Madrid 1904, 200 pages: Crawford Catalog, col. 115. NATHAN-GAHL, p. 167 no. 510, name 1901 as the year of publication and give a length of 160 pages. (The work was not available to me.)

59 below chap. 21 / § 2, p. 945 with note 4.

60 Crawford Catalog, col. 201, The original edition contains 107 stamps and postal stationery, of which approx. 100 are originals. See also SPAULDING, Earliest, p. 309 ad an. 1896. On Wada, see TYLER, p. 55. It should be remembered that Japanese books are read “back to front” in European terms.

61 Above p. 65 ff, p. 70 ff.

62 Paris 1898, 270 pages in 4 ° and 14 plates, including 10 color plates (BLANC, No. 956): The Swiss Post Stamps 1843-1862, Paris 1899, 278 pages: The Postage Stamps of Switzerland, 1843-1862, Paris 1899, 260 pages: Crawford Catalog, col. 266-67. The German and English editions are translations of the original French text. Regardless of the year, the movement was only delivered in January 1900. A Quarterman reprint appeared in Lawrence / Ma in 1975; However, it only offers an imperfect reproduction of the magnificent panels.

63 On Mirabaud, see above p. 140, note 6, p. 109, p. 112 and especially p. 561.

64 Ill. Briefmarken-Journal 27 (1900) No. 5, p. 134; The London Philatelist 9 (1900) No. 99, pp. 81-84, esp. P. 81: “Criticism practically stands disarmed in the presence of this superb volume...”. The DBZ, 11 (1900) No. 6, pp. 81-84, published its review in the form of an editorial penned by H. FRAENKEL.

65 See above p. 643-44 with note 798, p. 79-80 with note 73-74, p. 821 with note 131-32.

66 St. Louis / Mon. 1887, 272 pages; 1893, 230 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 380; see above p. 61 m. note 18 and ducks chap. 22, p. 1016 with note 6.

67 417 pages in 8 °, New York 1902: Crawford Catalog, col. 242. This is the revised version of a series of articles in the “American Journal of Philately” from the years 1897-1900, which was reprinted in the “Weekly Philatelic Gossip” from 1941-43 (and then as an independent volume in 1943, 319 Pages in 4 °; the reprint of! Quarterman Publications ”is based on this edition: Lawrence / Ma. 1982, 319 pages in 4 °.

68 According to a communication from G. TURNER. This fact does not apply in the Crawford catalog. See above pp. 634-35.

69 Afghanistan, its post and its stamps, Vienna 1879, 23 pages in 4 °; La Poste et les timbres-poste d'Afghanistan (Bibliothèque Timbrologique, t. III), Neuilly 1881, 32 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 264 (BLANC, no.943). See above p. 667 with note 123.

70 Crawford Catalog, col. 141-43: see above p. 697 note 59, Carl BECK - Carl HOLZSCHUHER: Die Bayerischen Mülradstempel, Muchen 1911, 115 pages in 8 °. For more on Glasewald's work as an auditor, see p. 489, p. 497 above.

71 History of the Saxon newspaper stamp 3 Pfennige Rot, Leipzig 1894, 48 pages in 8 ° (special print from: Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung 1894); see BUHLER, p. 5. See also Crawford Catalog, vol. 330-31. See also below chap. 22, p. 1038 with note 49.

72 Dresden 1882, 85 pages with 68 illustrations in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, vol. 214.

73 Baden and Bergedorf, which were initially inadequately dealt with, appeared in 1894 and 1896 in an expanded 2nd edition: Crawford Catalog, vol. 219 and below chap. 21 / § 1, p. 939 with note 12. The factory in Klein-8 ° was equipped with over 100 excellent collotype plates. Important states such as Saxony, Thurn and Taxis and Württemberg are missing from the illustration. Bavaria was also completely inadequately presented by Otto ROMMEL on only 15 pages: cf. beer on Hugo KRÖTZSCH: Otto Rommel's arrangements in the "Beibuch", in: Vierteljahrs-Nachtrag 2 (1895) No. 6, pp. 109-24. Peter Feuser: Stuttgart 1985 organized a reprint of the "handbook".

74 The postage stamps and the evacuation of the German postal services in the protected areas and abroad, Leipzig 1908, 127 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, vol. 124; Leipzig 19212, 447 pages in 8 °. A third, by Dr. Heinrich WITTMANN completely revised edition: The postage stamps and cancellations of the German post offices in the Schurz areas and abroad. Manual and special catalog, 3 vols., Munich 1967-69, 820 pages in 8 ° a supplement appeared in 1970. See above p.687 with note 236.

75 See below, chap. 21 / § 7, p. 984 with note 10.

76 KALCKHOFF, Geschichte 1888-1913, passim; DERS: History 1913-1938, passim; DERS: The postcards of the German protected areas and the German post offices abroad, Leipzig 1902, 32 pages in 8 ° (improved special print from the DBZ): DERS: The invention of the postcard and the correspondence cards of the Norddeutsche Bundespost, Leipzig, 1911, 58 Sides in 8 °; see also Crawford Catalog, col. 207. See also below chap. 21 / § 1. p. 942 note 8, p. 939 with note 10-11, p. 941 with note 15; Cape. 21 / § 4, p. 962 with note 10. Cf. also below chap. 23, p. 1091.

77 The postmarks of Oldenburg, Chemnitz 1911, 362 pages in 8 ° (Germania-Handbuch, t. IV). A photocopy with a detailed addendum from the pen of Richard KAUERT and a new table of contents appeared: [Borgstede 1983], 381 + 61 pages in 8 °.

78 See below, chap. 21 / § 4. p. 965 note 11 and Crawford Catalog, col. 296.

79 The postage stamps of Spain and its colonies based mainly on Spanish sources, 2 vols., Berlin 18942, 336 pages with 20 plates in large 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 124, E. v. BOCHMANN edited the Russia volume in the Krötzsch handbook: Keipzig 1895, 178 pages with 19 plates in small-8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 52.

80 Leipzig 1896, 396 pages in 8 °: Crawford Catalog, col. 98, cf. also Michael ENGLRAM: The postal system in the Rheinpfalz since 1816, Speyer 1913, 309 pages in 8 °; Karl LOFFLER: History of traffic in Baden, in particular the news and passenger traffic from Roman times to 1872, Heildelberg 1910, 588 pages with 7 maps, 4 tables and 5 supplements in 8 °; O. VERDARIUS: The Book of the Universal Mail. Development and work of post and telegraphy in world traffic, Berlin 1885, 400 pages in 4 ° (Facsimile edition: Wiesbaden approx. 1980). In all of these cases, the authors are extremely embarrassed to distance themselves from philately and everything. What could have to do with collecting, too. See below pp. 914-15 with notes 150-51.

81 See above p. 219 note 16 and below chap. 21 / § 4, p. 963 with notes 15-16 and chap. 25, p. 1132 m. Note 18 and: The Royal Philatelic Society, p. 156.

82 The Postage Stamps, Envelopes, Wrappers, Post Cards and Telegraph Forms of Queensland. Part I, London 1930, 181 pages with 33 plates in 4 °. The edition was only 200 pieces. See above pp. 898-99 with note 50-51.

83 The Stamps of Great Britain, Part 1: the Line-Engraved Issues, 1840-1853, London 1934, 171 pages; Part II, Addenda and Corrigenda to Part I, the Remainder of the Line-Engraved Issues, the Embossed Adhesive and Surface Printed Issues up to 1865, London 1937, 147 pages in 8 °. J. H. BARRON and I. J. SIMONS acted as editors, since Seymour's formulation left a lot to be desired. See further K. N. BEAUMONT - H. C. V. ADAMS: The Stamps of Great Britain. Part III: The Embossed Issues. The Surface-Printed Issues of Queen Victoria and King Edward VII, London 1954, 180 pages with 18 plates in 8 °; K. M. BEAUMONT - J. B. M. STANTON ibid, Part IV: The Issues of King George V., London 1957, 248 pages with 24 plates in 8 °. See The Royal Philatelic Society, pp. 67, 70, 88-89, 90, 131-32, 137.

84 Part I2, London 1950, 247 pages; Part I3, London 1967, 338 pages in 8 °: completely revised by Clive GARDINER Hill, ed., By John EASTON under the title: Introduction to the Line-Engraved Issues. The Imperforate Line-Engraved Issues. See The Royal Philatelic Society, pp. 84, 104, Part I2: The Perforate Line-engraved Issues, edited by Dr. W. R. D. WIGGINS, London 1962, 220 pages in 8 °; Part III: The Embossed and Surface-Printed Issues of Queen Victoria. The Surface-Printed Issues of King Edward VII, London 1964, 344 pages at 8 °; The editors were K. M. BEAUMONT and John EASTON. See The Royal Philatelic Society, p. 100. Part I2 by W. R. D. GIBBINS was awarded the Crawford Medal in 1963. 85 The British Post Office from its Beginnings to the End of 1925, Oxford 1926, 355 pages with 36 with 36 plates in 4 °. The name of the publisher already shows that this is a strictly historical investigation: Oxford University Press. 86 Marshall completely reconstructed six of the 15 steel engraved plates; Robson LOWE published twelve original-sized photo pages of this after his death; see also C. E. Dendy MARSHALL: A study of the Line-Engraved Twopence Postage Stamps of Great Britain, London 1929, 69 pages in 4 °. 87 Great Britain: Twopence Plate Nine. A Study of the Plate and its Repairs, London 1939, 93 pages with 12 plates; British Line-Engraved Stamps: Twopence Blue, Plates 1-15, London 1946, 170 pages with 57 plates; British Line-Engraved Stamps: Repaired Impressions, London 1949, 238 pages with 83 plates. All works were published by Charles Nissen's publishing house in 4 °.

85 The British Post Office from its Beginnings to the End of 1925, Oxford 1926, 355 pages with 36 with 36 plates in 4 °. The name of the publisher already shows that this is a strictly historical investigation: Oxford University Press.

86 Marshall completely reconstructed six of the 15 steel engraved plates; Robson LOWE published twelve original-sized photo pages of this after his death; see also C. E. Dendy MARSHALL: A study of the Line-Engraved Twopence Postage Stamps of Great Britain, London 1929, 69 pages in 4 °.

87 Great Britain: Twopence Plate Nine. A Study of the Plate and its Repairs, London 1939, 93 pages with 12 plates; British Line-Engraved Stamps: Twopence Blue, Plates 1-15, London 1946, 170 pages with 57 plates; British Line-Engraved Stamps: Repaired Impressions, London 1949, 238 pages with 83 plates. All works were published by Charles Nissen's publishing house in 4 °.

88 The Royal Philatelic Collection, London 1952, 436 pages with 64 plates and 12 color raffles in folio. The work received the Crawford Medal in 1953.

89 The Postmarks of Great Britain and Ireland: Being a Survey of British Postmarks from 1660 to 1940, Cheltenham 1940, 579 pages in 8 °. By the mid-1950s, 15 "Supplements" appeared, of which only the first eight (1940-49) were independent fascicles, the following appeared in the "Philatelic Advertiser", a summary of the 15 "Supplements" appeared: Cheltenham 1956, 62 pages in 8 °. A 2, revised edition from that time in the late 50s as loose-leaf edition: see last R. C. ALCOCK: British Postmarks. Short History and Guide, Cheltenham 1977, 314 pages in 8 °.

90 G. W. COLLETT - W. B. EDWARDS - C. S. MORTON - L. C. C. NICHOLSON: Jamaica: Its Postal History, Postage Stamps and Postmarks, London 1928, 248 pages in 8 °; Denys R. MARTIN - E. A. SYMTHIES: The Four Anna Lithographed Stamps of India, 1854-55, London 1930, 50 pages with 12 plates in 4 ° e (Crawford Medal 1932); see already DIES: The Half-Anna Lithographed Stamps of India, 1854-1855, Lahore 1927, 91 pages with 21 plates in large - 8 °. Both works were published by the Philatelic Society of India. See also uten p. 921.

91 Cape of Good Hope: Its Postal History and Postage Stamps, London 1930, 118 pages in 4 °.

92 Transvaal Postage Stamps, London 1940, 154 pages with 12 plates in 8 °; see The Royal Philatelic Society, p. 157.

93 The Handstruck Letter Stamps of the Cape of Good Hope from 1792 to 1853 and the Postmarks from 1853 to 1910, Cape Town 1943, XIV and 140 pages in 4 ° (Crawford Medal 1944): the Bechuana Lands: A Brief history of the Countries and their Postal Service to 1895, London 1945, XII and 110 pages in 4 °.

94 Fred JARRETT: B.N.A. Book: Stamps of British North America, Toronto 1929, 610 pages in 8 °; the second edition from 1926 had only 261 pages, the first from 1923 under the title "Postage Stamps of Canada" only had 103 pages (MORIN, no. 38); a reprint of the edition appeared: Lawrence / MA. 1975, 595 pages. Alfred Stanley DEAVILLE: The Colonial Postal systems and Postage Stamps of Vancouver Island and British Columbia 1849-1871, Victoria / B.C. 1928, 211 pages with 14 plates in 8 ° (Archives of British Columbia., Memoir No. VIII). A reprint appeared: Lawrence / Ma. [1979]. Jal COOPER: Stamps of India, Bombay 1942, 229 pages in small 8 °; 1951, 227 pages at 8 °; 1968, 177 pages in large 8 °.

95 The Postage Stamps of New Zealand, t. I. Wellington / N / Z /, 1938, 678 pages with 2 plates in 8 °; t. II (1949), 411 pages with 21 plates; t. III (1955), 694 pages; t. IV (1964) 561 pages; t. V. (1967), 818 pages; t. VI (1978) 479 pages. C. W. WATTS was co-author of Volumes II-V. The "Royal" of New Zealand acted as publisher; Volume V was edited by A. R. BURGE, Volume VI by D. E. G. NAISH and K. H. McNAUGHT, Volume III awarded the Crawford Medal in 1956. The entire work is now selling at auction prices of around $ 1200.

96 This statement applies in particular to larger monographs, which are the only ones discussed in this chapter.

97 The Stamps of Spain 1850-1854, London 1919, 127 pages with 14 plates in large 8 ° (NATHAN-GAHL, p. 204 no. 719). See below chap. 25, p. 1132. Hugo GRIEBERT had already published a study on the brands of Uruguay in 1910 at Stansley Gibbons Ltd, wine: A Study of the Stamps of Uruguay, London 1910, 97 pages in 4 °.

98 The Stamps of the First Issue of Brasil, London 1923, 121 pages with 40 plates in large 8 °. The edition was 200 copies. The book is now trading at £ 300. Lieutenant Colonel George S. F. Napier should not be confused with Francis H. Napier, co-author of E. D. Bacon. The book received the Crawford Medal in 1924.

99 The Postage Stamps of Buenos Aires, London 1925, 72 pages with 8 plates in 4 ° (Crawford Medal 1927). The edition was only 100 copies, on Cochrane-Spowart see below chapter. 21 / § 2, p. 948 note 14.

100 The Postage Stamps of Mexico from the Commencement in 1856 to the End of the Provisiona; Period in 1868, New York 1926, 324 pages in 8 ° (Collectors Club Handbook, n 4 of the 1st row). Only one luxury edition of 15 autographed copies also contained 5 plates. The original edition was only 150 copies. A Quarterman reprint appeared in 1976 in 8 ° under the short title: The Postage Stamps of Mexico 1856-1868. This has the advantage that from pp. 337-76 the supplements by Roberto GARCIA LARRAGA: Additions to "The Postage Stamp of Mexico. A Book by S. Chapman, included in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 32-33 (1953-54). S. CHAPMAN had already published a work on the Adler and Maximilian editions in 1912: The Eagle and Maximilian Stamps of Mexico, London 1912, 149 pages with 20 cards, including in 4 °. The edition was only 65 copies. Samuel Chapman was an Englishman who had lived for many years as a high official on the Mexican railways in Mexico and, with the support of the Ministry of Post, had been able to smear the documents in the archives of the postal offices and post offices. His books are therefore consistently based on the primary sources of the postal administration.

101 The Postage Stamps of Uruguay: with special reference to the "plating" of most of the lithographed issues, London 1931, 388 pages with 22 plates in 4 ° (Crawford Medal 1933. The edition was 200 copies. See above p. 414 note 14.

102 Cf. below chap. 21 / § 9, p. 1006 Note 3, The work received the Crawford Medal in 1929.

103 The Stamps of Turkey, London 1938, 240 pages with 76 plates in 8 °. The edition was 300 copies. See The Royal Philatelic Society, p. 71.

104 August DIETZ: The Postal Service of the Confederate States of America, Richmond / Va, 1929, 439 pages in uppercase 8 °. On Dietz as a catalog and magazine editor see above p. 683 m. Note 222, p. 834-35 m. Note 165. Lester G. BROOKMAN: The Nineteenth Century Postage Stamps of the United States, 2 vol., New York 1947, a total of 634 pages in 8 °. The title of the 2nd edition would be slightly changed: The United States Postage Stamps of the 19th Century, 3 vol., New York 1966/67, a total of 852 pages in 8 °. To Chase and Ashbrooke vgtl. Below chap. 21 / § 5, p. 968 with note 4, p. 969 with note 9-10. See above p. 901 with notes 67-68.

105 Postmasters' Provisional Stamps, New York 1937, 75 pages with 15 plates in 4 ° (revised by Hugh M. CLARK), Clarence W. BRAZER: Essays for US Adhesive Postage Stamps, o.O. 1941, 236 pages in 8 ° ; a reprint, enriched by all supplements, appeared: Lawrence / Ma. 1977, 295 pages in 8 ° . John K. BASH - Frederic R. HARRIS - Henry A. MAYER - William J. DAVEY: HAWAII: Its Stamps and Postal History, New York 1948, 412 pages in 8 ° (The Philatelic Foundation).

106 The United States Postage Stamps of the Twentieth Century, 4 vols. With a total of 1126 pages, New York 1932-38 in uppercase 8 ° . Volumes I-II were created in collaboration with Beverly S. KING. An improved 2nd edition of Volume I, Alone by Max JOHL editors, appeared in 1937: 371 pages in large-8 ° , Volume IV was awarded the Crawford Medal in 1938, On Johl's two-volume work on the USA commemorative stamps from 1947 cf. . above p. 239.

107 The Overland Mail 1849-1869. Promoter of Settlement, Precursor of Railroads, Cleveland / Oh. 1926, 321 pages at 8 ° ; a Quarterman reprint dated: Lawrence? Ma. 1976. Cyclopedica of United States Postmarks and Postal History, 2 vol., Moundsville / Va. 1933-35, 414 pages at 8 ° ; a reprint appeared: Lawrence / Ma. 1975. Postal Markings of Boston to 1890, Portland / Me. 1949, 367 pages at 8 ° ; the Quarterman reprint dates from 1974.

108 Victoria. The Half-Length Portraits and the Twopence Queen Enthroned, New York / N.Y. 1923, 273 pages in large 8 ° . E. D. Bacon wrote a famous review of this book: see chap. 21 / § 4, p. 962 with note 7.

109 Philately of the Anglo-Boer War 1899-1902, Kalamazoo / Wed. 1943, 226 pages in 8 ° .

110 See above, p. 60 with note 13. The work was published posthumously, den Hanciau died in 1924 at the age of 89; see above p. 59.

111 Le Congo belge et ses marques postales, Bruxelles 1931, 217 pages at 8 ° (BLANC, No. 333); Belgique, Les obliterations à numéro, Bruxelles 1935, 126 pages in 12 ° (BLANC, no. 331).

112 See above, p. 509, note 34.

113 So inter alia: Belgique, L'émission de 1869, Histoire, classement, variétés, Bruxelles 1929, 92 pages in 4 ° ; Belgique: Les émissions de 1865-66-67. Histoire, classement, variétés, Bruxelles 1932, 54 pages in large 8 ° (BLANC, No. 1256, 1258); Grèce: Premier Type. Histoire, classement, essais, obliterations, Amiens 1925, 74 pages in 4 ° (BLANC, no. 1260); Les premiers timbres due Transvaal, Histoire, classement, surcharges, essais, obliterations, reimpresions et imitations, Amiens 1922, 45 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1261); Les timbres de la principauté de Serbie (1866 à 1880), Amiens 1927, 54 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 1262). Compare also: Chili. Premier Type. Histoire, classement, variétés, in: L'Echo de la Timbrologie 54 (1940) No. 1054, pp. 47-50; No. 1055, pp. 102-05. See especially Les premières émissions due Mexique (1856 à 1874): Histoire, classement, faux, Amiens 1935, 374 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1264); cf. Marquis Guy de FAYOLLE: Catalog détaillé des timbres due Mexique décrits et expliqués dans l'ouvrage de MM. Paul de Smeth et le Marquis de Fayolle "Les premières émissions due Mexique", Amiens 1936, 58 pages in 8 ° (BLANC , No. 511).

114 Finlande: Les timbres des premières émissions de 1856 à 1889/95, Bruxelles 1947, 325 pages in 8 ° . The edition was only 250 copies.

115 Memorial Philatélique: Ce Que dissent les timbres, t. I: La France depuis 1880. Montpellier

1932, 371 pages with 9 plates (BLANC, no. 114); t. II: La Belgique, Montpellier 1933, 217 pages with 17 plates (BLANC, no. 115); t. III: Le Luxembourg, la Suisse, le Liechtenstein, Montpellier 1934, 324 pages with 14 plates (BLANC, No. 116); t. IV-V: L'Italie (Vignettes militaires), 2 vols., Amiens 1934-36, 364 and 329 pages with 25 plates (BLANC, No. 117-18; PILONI, No. 1924-25); t. VI: La France, Les premières émissions de 1849 à 1900, Bischwiller 1948, 162 pages with 2 plates (BLANC, no.119). All volumes are in 8 °.

116 BLANC, no.158-65.

117 Georges BRUNEL: Le timbre-poste français. Etude historique et anecdotique de la poste et due timbre en France et dans les colonies français, Paris 1896, 302 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 204): Les émissions des timbres-poste français de 1849 à 1900, Paris 1929, 212 Pages with 10 plates in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 196).

118 See above p. 144, p. 150; see also below chap. 24, p. 1104, p. 1107. Brunel's independent oeuvre between 1890 and 1942 is listed by BLANC, nos. 188-221. See above, p. 58, p. 169. On the post office legend invented by Brunel, see KANAI, pp. 19-20.

119 Les Oblitérations des bureaux de poste des colonies français, Amiens 1927, 56 pages in 8 ° BLANC, No. 769); Les Oblitérations des Bureaux de poste de l'Afrique du Nord (Algerie, Tunisie, Maroc), Amiens 1930, 99 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 768): Les Oblitérations des Bureaux de poste des colonies et des possessions françaises depuis leur creation jusqu 'à nos jours. Afrique Occidentale Française, Paris 1937, 60 pages in 4 ° (BLANC, No. 770): Les cachets des bureaux ambulants de France. Histoire. Listes alphabétiques par reseau 1838-1939, Paris 1939, 71 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 767).

120 With Louis FRANÇOIS: Les obliterations des bureaux français à l'étranger, Amiens 1924, 149 pages in 8 °. The edition was 50 copies. With Gilbert GÉRARD: Catalog des estampilles et marques postales d'Alsace et de Lorraine 1698 à 1870, Amiens 1937, 276 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 771-72). With Eugène VÉNÉZIANI: Nomenclature Générale des Bureaux de poste français detoutes categories avec indication des griffes oblitérantes qui leur ont été attribuées (1849-1876), Amiens 1926, 279 pages in 8 °: Amiens 1939 (2nd edition suivie d'une nomenclature département par M. BÉcasse), 379 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 774-75).

121 Les correspondances par ballon monté due Siège de Paris, Amiens 1925, 119 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 548).

122 Les estampilles postales de la Grande Guerre, Amiens [1925], 386 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1275); Les obliterations mécaniques françaises, Paris 1927, 255 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1314); a "Premier supplement" of 106 pages appeared in 8 °: Paris 1928 (BLANC, no. 1309); Les estampilles postales françaises au XX siècle, Amiens 1933, 323 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1274). The book on mechanical cancellations was written together with Gaston TOURNIER; see the following note 123 Les postes françaises en Italie sous la Révolution et le premier Empire (1792-1815), Bischwiller 1929, 89 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1308); Les marques postales militaires du Maroc (1907-1931), Amiens 1931, 206 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1306).

124 Histoire Générale des postes françaises, 6 vols. In 7 vol., Paris 1947-55, approx. 3000 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1324); DERS: Le Cabinet Noir, Paris 1950, 411 pages in 8 °.

125 La Commune de 1871. Les postes, les ballons, les télégraphes, Paris [1934], 373 pages in

8 ° (BLANC, no. 784).

126 Compiled by BLANC, No. 663-71.

127 La poste à Genève de l'origine à 1851. Historique, organization, développement, 2 vols., Genève 1943-44, 83 and 37 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 560).

128 Histoire de la creation due timbre grec et description complete de toutes les émissions, Paris [1923], 119 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 1033).

129 Étude sur les timbres de Grèce, Athènes 1933, 514 pages with 27 plates in 8 ° (BLANC, no.339). An English translation: A Study of the Stamps of Greece, 312 pages in 4 ° in Ringbinder, appeared in 1978.

130 Cf. below chap. 21 / § 3, p. 952 with note 7 and above p. 295 with note 38 as well as PILONI, No. 2031-35 on L. Rivolta. Cf. also Cesare RATTONE: Manuale e catalogo dei francobolli di Sardegna, torina 1951, 414 pages in 8 ° (PILONI, No. 2021).

131 Cesare MATTEOLI-BRADZKI and Em. SOGNO: I bolli e gli annullamenti postali del Granducato di Toscana, Roma 1939, 179 pages in 8 ° (PILONI, No. 1997); see below chap. 21 / §10, p. 1010 m. Note 14. See also Alfredo BANCI: Catalogo prefilatelico e Storia delle Corriere e poste del Lombardo-Veneto, Roma 1943, 174 pages in 8 ° (PILONI, No. 1915).

132 6 Cuartos 1850, Bilbao 1940, 355 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 634: NATHAN-GAHL, p. 255 No. 1007); the scope of the work is explained by the fact that it was published in four languages (Spanish, French, English, German). The inside title is dated 1936, but the work was not delivered until 1940.

133 t. I: 1850-1854, Reus 1935, 404 Setien; t. II: 1855-1869, Reus 1945, 415 pages; t. III: 1870-1900, Reus 1950, 365 pages in 8 ° (NATHAN-GAHL, p. 247 no. 953). A reprint was published by Llach-Barcelona in 1976, The Crawford Medal was awarded to Volume 2.

134 Historia de Correos y Telégrafos de la República Argentina. T.I: Desde la Epoca Precolombiana hasta Origenes del Correo en el Rio de la Plata, Buenos Aires 1934, 192 pages in large 8 °; t. II: Desde los Origenes del Correo en el Rio de la Plata hasta la Revolución de Mayo de 1810, Buenos Aires 1938, 440 pages in large 8 °.

135 Sellos y Otros valores postales y telegraficos Argentinos, 2 vols., Buenos Aires 1939-41, 771 and 671 pages in uppercase 8 °.

136 Norges Frimerker 1855-1924, Kirtiania (Oslo) 1924, 188 pages in 4 °.

137 Skilling-Banco-Frimärkers, Stockholm 1930, 160 pages with 7 plates in 8 °: one engl. Translation under the name of Olssons alone was provided by Eric HALLER: Skilling Banco-Stamps of the Coat of Arms Type, Stockholm 1955, 158 pages in 8 °. Both books are publications by the Swedish Postal Museum (No. 12 and No. 30).

138 Svenske Postverkets Historia, 2 vols., Stockholm 1936, 326 and 379 pages in 8 °.

139 Mention should be made, for example: The Stamps of the Danish West Indies, Copenhagen 1930, 110 pages in uppercase 8 °; The swei-colored postage stamps of Denmark and Danish West India (1870-1905), Copenhagen 1933, 46 pages in large 8 °; Denmark og Dansk Vestindiens Frimaerker, Vol. 2 and 4, København 1951, 135 and 190 pages in large 8 °. The Copenhagen Philatelic Club has relocated all of the titles mentioned.

140 De Poststempels van Nederland 1676-1915 Haarlem 1931, 180 pages with 24 plates in 4 °. The edition was 300 copies.

141 De Ontwikkeling van het Postwezen in Ned.-Oost-Indie, Bandoeng 1935, 183 pages with 22 plates in 8 °.

142 See above pp. 661-62 with note 105-07.

143 Large Lexicon of Philately, Munich 1923, 800 pages in 8 °.

144 Old Germany under the magnifying glass, 2 vols., Berlin 1934-371; 666 pages; 19665-6, a total of 1010 pages in Klein-8 ° (14 booklets, which can also be ordered individually).

145 reflections on philately, Berlin [1948], 324 pages in 8 °; the work was written in letter form (73 letters) from 1942-45; the letters 74-105 (until April 1948) with 120 pages appeared as 6 deliveries 1945-48.

146 Handbook of the Baden postmark. Postal stationery, postal notes and stamps, 2 volumes, Leipzig 1935-36, 193 and 447 pages in 8 °. Volume I was dedicated to pre-philately; the work originally appeared in deliveries.

147 Karl KÖHLER: The stamps of Württemberg 1851-1881, revised, supplemented and issued by Consul H. SIEGER, Lorch 1940, 136 pages in 4 °. See already p. 339 m. Note 4.

148 The Bavarian cruiser stamps of the issues 1849 to 1875, Munich 1920, 71 pages in 8 °. See above p. 687 with note 234 and above note 70.

149 The Prussian posting and number stamps..., 2 vols., Kolberg 1935-36, 471 pages with 135 plates in 8 ° (reprinted by the North German Post District Association [around 1980]). The brief summary by Wilhelm THALMANN has thus been overtaken: Compilation of the Prussian postmarks according to form and time sequence. A. Posting stamp, Bonn-Leipzig 1925, 48 pages in 8 ° (reprint o. O. and J.). On Glasewald see above p. 902 m. Note 70.

150 History of the Prussian Post from its origins to the present, Berlin 1859, 816 pages in 8 ° (reprint: Glashütten / Taunus 1976). See above p. 917 and note 164.

151 Karl SAUTTER: History of the Deutsche Post, t. I: History of the Prussian Post up to 1868, Berlin 1928, 747 pages in 8 ° (revision and addition of "Stephan": above note 150); t. II: History of the North German Federal Post Office (1868-1871), Berlin 1952, 135 pages in 8 °; t. III: History of the Deutsche Reichspost (1871-1945), Frankfurt / M. 1953, 603 pages in 8 °.

152 side panels on German postal history, Berlin 1935, 215 pages; The letter mail in the German postal history, Berlin 1935, 155 pages; The postal expansion sales in the German postal history, Berlin 1936, 151 pages; The parcels, valuables and registered mail in German postal history, Berlin 1936, 173 pages; The postal order and postal check service in German postal history, Berlin 1937, 315 pages; Cash on delivery and postal orders in German postal history, Berlin 1939, 207 pages. All volumes in small 8 ° appeared as volumes 19, 22-23, 34-36 of the series "Post und Telegraphie in Wissenschaft und Praxis".

153 See p. 858 above.

154 The postage stamps and postmarks of Poland in the 18th and 19th centuries, Vienna 1935, 82 pages in 8 °. The edition was 300 copies.

155 See below, chap. 21 / § 7, p. 984 with note 8-9, p. 985 with note 13 and note 19.

156 Crawford Catalog, col. 216 (BLANC, No. 748), 241, 182.

157 Carl SCHMIDT - Agathon FABERGÉ: The postage stamps of the Russian landscape offices, 2 vols., Dresden - St. Petersburg 1910-13, 410 pages with 50 plates and 472 pages with 52 plates in 8 °. The publisher was the Dresden International Association.

158 The postage stamps of the Sufi landscape offices. Contributions to the knowledge of these brands, 2 vols. (Masch.schr.), Berlin 1932-34, 300 pages and 198 pages in 8 °. Schmidt had given his own 18-volume collection to the Reichspostmuseum, which published a catalog penned by SCHMIDT: Collection of Russian landscape stamps in the Reichspostmuseum Berlin, Berlin 1934, 198 pages with 24 plates in 8 °. See above p. 697 with note 59.

159 Herbert Werner GEWANDE: History of the Airmail, Berlin 1934, 144 pages in 8 °: Herbert GLITSCH: The German Airmail, Dessau 1939, 137 pages in 8 °. On Kumpf-Mikuli see above p. 154, p. 857 with notes 225-26.

160 Herbert MUNK: New ways to research the federal editions 1850 ff. In the cross pattern, Bern 1941, 134 pages in 8 °. See also DERS: Suisse. Étude sur les premières émissions fédérales de 1850-1851, Berne 1942, 16 pages in 8 °, Les Planches des deux Rayon I, Berne 1944, 26 pages with 6 plates in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 1022-23).

161 Large Handbook of Cancellations on Swiss Stamps, Lucerne 1931-40, 624 pages with 21 plates in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 20; PILONI, No. 2656). The work was written in four languages, as was the new edition in 9 ring binders (3 of them for the panels): St. Gallen 1969-74. Both editions appeared in deliveries.

162 See above p. 912 with note 121 and note 124.

163 Cf. for example G. de CLERVAL: Les ballons pendant le siege de Paris. Récits de soixante voyages aériens, Paris 1871, 148 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, no. 327); DAGRON: La poste par pigeons-voyageurs. Souvenir du siege de Paris, Tours-Bordeaux 1871, 24 pages in 12 ° (for pigeon mail; BLANC, no. 364); Wilfrid de FONVIELLE: Les ballons pendant le siege, Paris 1971, 127 pages at 16 ° (BLANC, No. 530); Félix NADAR (one of the "aeronauts"): Les ballons en 1870. Ce qu'on aurait pu faire, ce qu'on a fait, Paris 1871, 34 pages in 16 ° (BLANC, No. 1026).

164 Dr. Heinrich STEPHAN: Universal mail and air shipping. A lecture in the scientific association in Berlin, Berlin 1874, 75 pages in 8 °.

165 Genèse de la poste aérienne du Siège Paris, Paris 1951, 112 pages in 8 °; see also Pierre SVELON: La poste pendant le Siège, 18 September 1870 - 28 January 1871, Paris 1955, 24 pages in 8 °. Basically Jacques LE PILEUR: La poste par Ballons Montés, Amiens 1943, 177 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 823) and les. : Les Aérostats Poste 1870-71, Paris 1953, 219 pages in 8 °. Cf. also DERS: Les marques aéropostales. Essay de nomenclature et de classification des obliterations, cachets et griffes, Amiens 1936, 52 pages in 8 ° and Amiens 1939, 105 pages in 8 ° (BLANC, No. 820-21).

166 The oldest airmail in the world. Experience reports from a besieged cosmopolitan city. Paris balloon mail 1870/71, Kempen 1957, 114 pages in 8 ° (Stockach 1976, 120 pages with 32 illustrations).

167 Paris par Moulins 1870/71, Hamburg undated [1971], 107 pages in 8 ° (with the collaboration of Wolfgang JAKUBEK); cf. also Giuseppe SCHENONE: La posta aerostatica da Parigi durante l'assedio prussiano del 1870-71, Milano 1971, 36 pages in 8 °.

168 Reuben R. THOMPSON: the Siege of Paris September 1870 - January 1871 by Ballon Monté, Lakeland / Fl. 1975, 322 pages in 8 °; Louis A. CHAINTRIER: Balloon Post of the Siege of Paris 1870-71, Washington / D.C. 1976, 163 pages in 8 ° (translation from French).

169 The "Papillons" of Metz or the two balloon posts in Metz. History, manual, catalog, Munich 1976, 80 pages in small-8 °: The Flight of the "Ville d'Orleans", Chicago / Ill. 1978, 175 pages in 8 ° (The Collectors Club of Chicago).

170 As examples I would like to mention Walter CURLEY: The Graf Zeppelin's Flights to South America 1930-37, Weston / Ma. 1970, 98 pages in 4 ° (in the ring binder); Fred F. BLAU - Cyril DEIGHTON: The Orient Flight. LZ 127 - Graf Zeppelin, o. O. 1980, 134 pages in 8 °; THIS: The Egypt Flight LZ 127 - Graf Zeppelin, o. O. 1981, 80 pages (Germany Philatelic Society, n 8 °). Mario ONOFRI: LZ 127 Graf Zeppelin. Trasporti postali, Firenze 1958, 124 pages in 8 ° a.a.m.

171 Here, too, just an example: Wolfgang HACKER: It really was! Authentic commentary on the first zeppelin mail and its forgery, Berlin 1960, 64 pages in 8 °. See also Kurt DAHMANN: German first flights and first air posts (1919-1944), Berlin 1970, 76 pages in 8 °: DERS: Deutsche Luftpost 1945-1969, Berlin 1973, 104 pages in 8 °.

172 Joseph L. EISENDRATH: Crash covers. An aerophilatelic challenge, [Cinnominson / F.J.] 1979, 210 pages in 8 °; Jairo LONDOÑO TAMAYO - Eugenio GEBAUER: Los primeros 50 años de correo aereo in Columbia, Bogotá 1975, 326 pages in 8 °.

173 Historia I Airpost North. The History of Airmail in Scandinavia, Stockholm 1978, 351 pages in large 8 ° (Sveriges Filatelist-Förbund. Specialhandbok No. 10).

174 The Ross Smith England-Australia Flight: A Postal History, Clearwater / FL. 1968, 177 pages in 4 °, Supplement 1970, 80 pages in 4 °; see also Nelson EUSTIS: The Ross Smith Air Stamp, London 1979, 72 pages in 8 °; Newfoundland Air Mails 1919-1939. With additional notes on subsequent flights and air stamps, London 1953. 180 pages in large 8 °.

175 Of his numerous works I can only mention: United States: The Twenty-Four Cent Air Mail Inverted Center of 1918, New York 1956, 32 pages 8 °; United States: The First Air Mail Stamp 10 pages in 8 ° (special print); The Hawker Stamp of Newfoundland, New York 1951, 23 pages in 8 ° (special print from the "Collectors Club Philatelist") and much more.

176 Max KRONSTEIN: Pioneer Airpost Flights of the world 1830-1935, ed. By Joseph L. EISENDRATH, Cinnaminson / N.R. 1978, 310 pages in 8 ° (American Airmail Society).

177 cf. below chap. 21 / § 8, p. 991 ff.

178 See above p. 909 with note 95.

179 On these bodies, see chap. 24, pp. 1118-19.

180 cf. below chap. 24, p. 114 with note 38 and Raymond SALLES: La poste maritime française, 9 vols., Paris 1961-75; t. VIII had been relocated to Boulogne.

181 Cf. SALIERNO, pp. 109-12; for Vollmeier, see chap. 21 / § 10, p. 1009 ff.

182 Cf. the remarks by LINARES CASTILLA, pp. 39-47.

183 On Greece see VIRVILIS, pp. 44-46. A six-volume (!) Monograph of Finnish postage stamps was published in Finland, which unfortunately was edited in Finnish and is therefore only accessible to a small group of Jesuits: Suomen Postimerkkien Käsikirja, t. 1 - V, Tammisaari 1975 - Helsinki 1972 (t. II: Helsinki 1971, t. III: 1968, t. IV: 1969, t. V: 1970. Editor is Lauri PELTONEN.

184 POFIS (Czech philatelic publisher): Monograph Československých známek, 3 vols., Prague 1968-79. See p. 921 below.

185 cf. below chap. 21 / § 9, p. 1003 ff.

186 The list up to 1968 from: The Royal Philatelic Society, pp. 158-58; thereafter the selected works are announced in the respective years of the "London Philatelist"; cf. also below chap. 25, pp. 1132-33.

187 I am talking explicitly about monographs that assume a certain length, and not about journal articles of two or three pages, which of course exist in abundance, but whose importance for research is usually minimal, not zero at all.

Dr José Marcó del Pont

José Marcó del Pont, born in 1851, came from an old and respectable Argentine family, which for generations had held senior posts in government¹. José Marcó del Pont also studied jurisprudence and held a doctorate in law, but did not enter politics, rather he held some senior positions in the country's postal service, but first and foremost he led the life of a scholar, which his considerable wealth allowed. He was already a keen collector at the age of 15, naturally a general collector, but in 1902-03 he sold his collection with the exception of the South and Central American countries, on which he concentrated from then onwards. His collections of Argentina, Uruguay and Mexico in particular were the best at that time.

As a researcher, he devoted himself to historical, numismatic and philatelic studies, particularly in relation to his homeland of Argentina. He was one of the founders, and later President, of the "Historical and Numismatic Society of South America" and President of the "Junta de Historia y Numismática Argentina". In the early 1980s he lived for several years in Paris and joined the "Société Française de Timbrologie", in whose activities he took an active part; in 1885-86 he was a member of its Council and in this capacity presided over meetings of the Society². Furthermore he was a "Fellow" of the "London (later Royal) Philatelic Society". From 1890 he again lived in Buenos Aires, where he took part in the philatelic life of the capital of Argentina, participating in several exhibitions and for many years was President and later an honorary member of the foremost philatelic Society of Argentina, the "Sociedad Filatélica Argentina". In 1910 he was President of the first international exhibition in Buenos Aires, which was also the first overseas “international”. In January 1914 the “Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888” awarded him the Lindenberg Medal, as the first overseas recipient³. He died on 11 July 1917 in his hometown of Buenos Aires.

Marcó del Pont left a considerable literary legacy, of which only a small part is devoted to philately, with which, however, we are concerned here. He did not leave a single philatelic work as such to be mentioned in this chapter, rather articles in journals, some of which were of considerable length, most of them later being reprinted⁴. His activities as a philatelic author began in Paris, but most of his work in this area was done in Buenos Aires. Apart from a small piece on Turkish(!) stamps⁵, all his other writings were concerned with the philately of South and Central America, with particular regard to his interest in his homeland Argentina and Mexico. In addition, he edited a short verbal account of the stamps of Colombia, but this was only of a descriptive nature, rather than representing research⁶.

The first philatelic work from his pen of which I am aware is about the overprints on Mexican stamps, and this comprises 18 pages; it was published a few years later in Spanish⁷. Another area of interest was Uruguay. In 1895 he wrote an informative essay on the stamps of this country⁸. When in 1913 Louis Hanciau wrote a wide-ranging but questionable study of the first issues of Uruguay⁹, Hugo Griebert and Marcó del Pont were united in their rejection of this work¹⁰.

Marcó's main interest was, however, naturally the stamps of his homeland, about which he wrote a long series of well-documented articles in the “Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica Argentina”. The value of these has not been lost up to the present day; in addition to two short studies of the Corrientes stamps¹¹ and the publishing of the definitive catalogue of Argentine revenue stamps¹² - he was a great devotee and expert on collecting area that has almost been forgotten today - he was concerned mainly with the early issues of Argentina¹³. Fundamental to this study was his work on the Rivadavia issue of 1866-72. He was the first to show the features of the different printings and also to give the numbers printed; Charles Phillips published an English translation¹⁴ of this essay, though over a decade earlier the German translation of the essay on the issue of 11 January 1862 had appeared¹⁵. Marcó rendered a particularly valuable service by publishing a detailed historical study of the carrying of mail on the Rio de la Plata from the 18th century to 1878, which identifies him as a perceptive historian and author of one of the first studies of postal history - in 1909-10!¹⁶ His final published work dealt with the Argentine stamps of the 1892-99 issue⁷. José Marcó del Pont was definitely one of the most prolific philatelists of the period leading up to the First World War and may be regarded as the founder of academic philately in South America, which was recognised with the award of the Lindenberg Medal. In his obituary, Edward D. Bacon described him as the *acknowledged doyen of philately in South America*¹⁸.

END

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur
April 1950, Volume 3, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 1998

ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR

APRIL 1950, VOLUME 3, ISSUE 4

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to me.

p.79

Interest in philatelic literature is being aroused.

A. I. [Adolf Ihm]

My years of effort in the field of philatelic literature and the production of the monthly philatelic journal Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur have wakened many serious students of literature from their sleeping beauty trance.

In close collaboration with the Zentralstelle for Sammelwesen [Central Office for Collectors], Leipzig, a Phila-Bibliographie, a general index to German philatelic literature has been produced and is issued a few times a year as a supplement to the Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur.

For the further propagation of my philatelic report, the Society of German Philatelists, Philatelic Literature Section, has already announced the regular publication of a Literature Supply Service (See members Circular No.3).

This will also include the recent additions to the largest West German specialist library, in the Munich City Library, and will give collectors the opportunity to borrow books from there.

This close connection will represent a positive development of the Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur. I would also like to put my publications out in a more attractive form in the future but for this I need the interest of a wide circle of collectors to get the finance for all these plans from a bigger circle of readers.

My philatelic reports are also arousing special interest abroad and I am pleased to have been something of a pioneer as regards the German philatelic literature.

p.80

A rescue society for German philatelic literature.

Jähnig, (Leipzig)

Paul Friedrich's appeal in Archiv N°3 is to be welcomed. May it find very many receptive ears. I herewith request all serious and genuine lovers of literature to support this work financially and by action.

I will not waste many words - let facts speak! I am ready to give 0.10 DM per month as a contribution to building up a basic stock. All other tasks and aims can be discussed when a circle of supporters has been built up - who will join me? I am willing to take on all of the preliminary work for the German Democratic Republic, and perhaps some enthusiast could do the same for the Federal Republic. Please send your views direct to Wunsiedel.

p.80

Philately on the radio.

p.80

Publisher - Alfred Ihm.

pp.81-82

New philatelic literature publications.

p.82

Phila-Bibliography.

A complete index to the German philatelic literature. Produced by Helge Findel, Leipzig, edited by Alfred Ihm, Wunsiedel. Appears four times a year, with an annual index, as a supplement to Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur and as a separate publication.

p.82

Periodical references.

Well over half the German philatelic journals have had to cease publication recently. Nobody knows what journals are appearing at any given moment, where the best articles will appear, which has most advertisements, what the details of literature are, etc.

The Society of German Philatelists, Hamburg/Schleswig-Holstein Section, will now help the technical press by sending via its periodical section a list of journals still appearing and their prices on receipt of 10 D-pfg. for return postage.

No serious collector, society or dealer can remain indefinitely without information - enquires should be directed to Ruprecht Glasewald, 14 Hellbrookstrasse, Hamburg 33.

p.82

Archiv der Philatel. Literatur.

Can be delivered in various ways to interested parties who wish to review the contents of domestic and foreign philatelic periodicals, on index cards in either single or double-sided form. In this case, the additional cost for postage and paper only will be charged.

pp.83-95

Contents of domestic and foreign philatelic periodicals.

Adolf Ihm

In co-operation with Dr. Kalckhoff and Study Assessor Simon, compiled by Alfred Ihm.

Abbreviations: First number = Year
 Second number = Issue
 Third number = Pages

p.95

[Paragraph at the bottom of the page.]

Domestic philatelic periodicals which have not been reviewed because they had not been sent by the publishers will be included in the next issue.

pp.96-97

List of journals dealt with in the Report.

Broadcasts.

Foreign-language journals.

p.97

Catalogues and Price Lists.

Auctions.

p.98

Great auction – 5th-7th June 1950 in the Prince's Room, Hanover

We have had the opportunity to see the first extracts of the auction catalogue and list therefrom the following interesting pieces. (See original)

END

Editrice Filatèlica

Philatelic Bibliographical Index (Complete to the end of 1924)

[Title in original language]

Series of Philatelic Publications No. 4, Editrice Filatèlica, Turin, Italy, 1925

(Introduction & Back Cover only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1991

PHILATELIC BIBLIOGRAPHICAL INDEX

(COMPLETE TO THE END OF 1924)

This index covers books exclusively, and the details are given in the following order: Title of the book, Author, Number of pages, Language of publication, Illustrated or not, Place and Year of publication.

With the wide range of material, the difficulty of getting precise information, and the impossibility of getting hold of all the works mentioned, our index is certain to have omissions and mistakes, particularly as regards the spelling of foreign names, We would be grateful to be told of any such, so that they can be corrected in our 2nd edition.

Back Cover

We should like to receive publications (for inclusion in the 1925 Supplement).
Supplemento 1925: to be put on sale during the first months of 1926.

END

Bibliography of German-language philatelic literature
[Bibliographie der philatelistischen literatur in Deutscher sprache]
Sammler-Dienst, 30th August 1958, Volume 9, Issue 18, p.776

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1991

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF GERMAN-LANGUAGE PHILATELIC LITERATURE

The firm of Dr. Rossipaul, Calw, Wurttemberg, informs me that they are shortly to bring out a comprehensive bibliography of technical literature on philately in the German language appearing since 1945 (books, catalogues, specialist magazines etc.). All authors and publishers of philatelic works are requested to get in touch with the firm of Dr. Rossipaul and give them details of all their writings, with full bibliographical data, preferably on single DIN A6 cards (postcard format).

The following bibliographical details are needed: author with forenames, title of the work, subtitle, editor, publisher (or full address if published by the author), year of publication (the latest, or the edition), number of pages, number of illustrations, format (in cm), series (= series of publication, with details of volume number, part, etc.), binding, selling price in standard currency (with details of whether available via bookshops, by post or out of print, whether a new edition is planned or in preparation).

The bibliography of German philatelic literature will cover at the very least the contents of the German Library in Frankfurt, the German Bookshop in Leipzig, the Berner State Library, the Austrian National Library, and the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library. The firm hopes that the additional information from philatelists publishing in German will enable all material appearing since 1945 to be included. It will be available via specialist and commercial booksellers, and is expected to cost 18 DM. The pre-publication price (before October 1958) will be 12 DM. Orders will be taken by all stamp dealers and bookshops, or may be sent to Dr. Rossipaul Co., 14b Stammheim uber Calw. Orders sent to the firm should state via which bookshop supply is requested.

END

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur
May 1950, Volume 3, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999

ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR

May 1950, Volume 3, Issue 5

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to me.)

p.99

Review

Philately on the radio

"Alpenland" and "West" stations in Austria.

Broadcaster Karl Weihs reports on philatelic happenings over the entire world, in his weekly broadcast “Stamp Gossip”, with particular attention to reports on new stamp issues and short commentaries on society happenings, auctions, exhibitions, literature, etc.

The broadcasts are also published in collected form (duplicated). These reports will be reprinted in Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur when they are sufficiently interesting for permanent retention.

Scientific

The Volkshochschule of Dusseldorf will again hold 3 useful and interesting philatelic lectures during the 1950 Summer term in the main lecture hall at 2a Gitadellstrasse. On May 11th, Police Court Judge F. K. Vessen will speak on "Building up a collection from the modern point of view", on May 17th, Dr. F. M. Lenig, on "Rhineland private post", and on May 23rd, Dr. A. Schroeder on "Precautions against forgery".

It would be gratifying if these interesting papers could also be printed, so as to make them available to other collectors.

p.99

Publisher - Alfred Ihm

p.100-101

New

philatelic literature

p.101

Phila-Bibliography

General list of German-Language philatelic literature. Compiled by Helge Findel, Leipzig.
Published by Alfred Ihm, Wunsiedel.

Use

of

Literature

To satisfy the many requests for literature, and make more wanted items available to those interested, The Literature Exchange Service of Section B (BDPh) has been set up. Anyone interested should contact Section B, Town Hall, Munich, Room 366/III. (First list of offers enclosed herewith.)

p.102-104

Literature noticed

Reviews, etc. of literature noted in other publications.

p.104

Literature preview

pp.105-120

Survey of the contents of German & foreign postage stamp journals.
Compiled by Dr. F. Kalckhoff, Chr. O. Müller and H. Posselt, edited by Alfred Ihm

Introduction and Explanation

To get a regular survey of the contents of postage stamp journals, a certain reorganization of the groups and sections was necessary. Essentially, the General Index to the German-Language Philatelic Literature by C. Schmittiel (Part 1, 1937) was taken as a model. At the same time, some abbreviations for the titles had to be altered, to avoid confusion with earlier journals.

To give the reader an idea of the extent of an article or notice, this is recorded by an approximate count of the page numbers. If the article occupies anything up to one page, one figure will be given: if it occupies several pages, two figures will be given. ¼ or ½ pages will not be separately noted.

To make the “literature” group a little more comprehensive, the book reviews in the various journals will be entered in detail under “Literature Reports”.

There will be two main types of entry, “specialised” and “general”.

Specialised entries

This group will include those articles and notices that relate to a given country or stamp issue from a country.

The processing is carried out according to the following explanation -

1. Name of the country to which the article refers.
2. The number given indicates the year of the stamp issue or of the treatise.
3. Title of the article (brief synopses in brackets if the same cannot be recognized from the title).
4. Author, if the same is named in the article.
5. Journal abbreviations, volume, filing number, a page number for articles up to (1) page, for articles with more than one page, one (2) page number is added.
6. Language information in brackets for articles in a foreign language.

expertise

All articles and notes are registered under this group, which, because of their content, do not refer to any particular country or are of a general characters.

It is planned to occasionally publish a list of the classification of groups and sections, because many readers may not have access to the “General Index” by C-Schmittdiel.

pp.119-120

Abbreviations of those journals covered in the Report.

Broadcasts.

Non-philatelic items

Foreign-language journals.

pp.121-122

The place of philatelic literature in stamp exhibitions.
A. K. W.

An open letter to the organizers of philatelic exhibitions.

As the editor of a European postage stamp journal, may I direct a few remarks in this place to the organisers of stamp exhibitions in connection with their treatment of the specialist press. Every editor of a stamp magazine has confirmed that exhibition organizers are very punctual in sending out their advertisements and reports and are extremely grateful when advance information about their exhibitions is given in the specialist press. At the actual exhibition however we always find that very little space has been allotted to the literature. If the publisher of a stamp magazine puts his paper into the exhibition, he will receive a prompt demand for payment of the exhibitor's fee, and will of course be given an entry in the exhibition catalogue, but when it comes to handing out the prizes, it is noteworthy that magazines only get medals or diplomas in very rare cases. As the writer of these lines, I shall remain anonymous, otherwise it might be thought that the ailing "Chief Editor" of a philatelic journal was working off his aches and pains this way.

The magazine I edit has already taken some fine prizes, but certain events have made me think. At one recent international exhibition, my magazine was very successful, whereas colleagues from other countries who had also exhibited, and produced journals at least as good as mine, were sent away empty-handed. My good exhibition organizers, is this necessary? When you send your bulletins and information about your exhibitions to us, and when you find us ready to take part in your show and thus make no small contribution to its international character, it really would be nice if a few medals and of course diplomas could be customary for the stepchildren of philately - the specialist press. I shall naturally not try to influence the gentlemen of the jury. But a serious philatelist would hardly believe that in these days a stamp magazine that has already appeared for many years and can be expected to continue has never received any recognition of the sort described in these lines. Of the European stamp magazines known to me, there is not a single one which does not deserve at least a diploma - the least that one might expect. How many philatelist are there today who have given the matter any thought at all and know what it means to edit a philatelic journal at the present time.

I hope no-one will be annoyed at my remaining anonymous, but I feel that the distinguished publication Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur from Herr Ihm is the place where these lines may appear to some purpose.

Though I am not an editor, but just a sincere friend of philatelic literature, I should like to add a few remarks on the basis of my many years of experience in this field.

The stepchild "Philatelic Literature" receives far too little attention not only at exhibitions but in the life of collectors' and dealers' societies, where there is again a profound lack of interest. We should not be surprised when the jury or exhibition organizers show such attitudes, as they originate at society level.

I do not know what will happen to philately when the few, unfortunately already elderly, editors of journals and collectors of the literature are no more.

Can so widely diffused a pastime really go on without Literature?

A. I. [Alfred Ihm]

END

Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek

Catalogue Part 1: Germany and German Area

[Katalog Teil 1: Deutschland und Deutsche Gebiet]

Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek, Munich, Germany, n.d. [1966]

Translation of the Foreword only, p.3

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

September 1991

CATALOGUE PART 1: GERMANY AND GERMAN AREA

FOREWORD

The philatelic Library of the Munich City Library originated in the year 1931 from gifts of the contents of public and Society libraries, and from collectors. The bookstock was gradually built up by further donations, and considerably increased by purchased. With its current stock of 15,500 books and thousands of auction catalogues, exhibition catalogues etc., it is now one of the leading philatelic Libraries of Europe.

The bookstock is organized by countries (political division) and subject areas. As well as the alphabetic and subject catalogues there is a card index containing over 30,000 periodical articles.

The present catalogue is the first part of the overall catalogue: the parts yet to appear will cover Europe, Overseas, Subject Areas and Periodicals with a general philatelic content. Periodicals relating to a single specialist area are included in this part.

The Philatelic Library is at 5/0, Sparkenstrasse, Munich 2. The opening times are from 8.00 to 16.30hrs. on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, Tuesday from 11.00 to 19.00hrs., and Friday from 8.00 to 15.30hrs.

Use of the Reading Room is free. The loan charge is -,30 DM per vol. for a single time, repeated borrowings make it necessary to purchase a six-months card for 3,- DM. There is no loan charge for juveniles, schoolchildren, students, pensioners, disabled, unemployed, etc.

The entire stock may be borrowed, apart from a few valuable books which may only be consulted in the Reading Room.

Foreigners must request any literature they desire via a public library associated with the German lending scheme. Members of societies affiliated to the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten may borrow direct without charge on production of a valid membership card.

Munich, August 1966.

Dr. Hans Schmeer
Director
City Library

Walter Merkle
Head of the Philatelic Library

END

Alfons Off

Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek

Catalogue Part 1: Germany and German Area

[Katalog Teil 1: Deutschland und Deutsche Gebiet]

2nd edition, Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek, Munich, Germany, n.d.

[1975]

Translation of the Forword and Introduction only, pp.5-7

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

September 1991

CATALOGUE PART 1: GERMANY AND GERMAN AREA

FOREWORD

Philately is gaining in worldwide importance in line with the extension of postal services and the speed-up of postal deliveries. The high number of philatelists in the world increases along with the increasing level of stamp use. Collecting becomes specialized, and thus more difficult. The postage stamp is a miniature reflection of its times and of the civilisation and culture of its country of origin: as such, it is not just a commercial item for collectors, but is also a source of information on all types of knowledge, an intermediary between all the regions and peoples of the world, and a miniature work of art.

Thus, the philatelist must turn more and more to the specialist literature. This is the reason why the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library has issued the present Overseas Catalogue, so making a considerable part of its holdings known to researchers, collectors and enthusiasts. It is my obvious duty and pleasure to thank the head of the Munich Philatelic Library, Otto Gleixner and his co-worker Lieselotte Jackson-Lindner for producing this catalogue with such knowledge, love of the subject and painstaking care. A word of thanks is also due to Councillor Dr. Herbert Hohenemser, cultural advisor to the City of Munich, whose care for the Munich City Libraries has resulted in the Philatelic Library having a yearly budget of a steady 115,000 DM.

Unfortunately, the issue of this catalogue is bound up with certain limitations. The Philatelic Library will not be able within any foreseeable period to provide either an external loans service or an information and photocopying service. The reason for this tough decision by the Director of the Munich City Libraries lies in the inescapable fact that there are only two members of staff. who have neither the time nor the resources to meet the growing demand. All attempts to get more staff have come up against the community's financial crisis. The City of Munich cannot provide more resources than those mentioned above. The Munich Philatelic Library is a community library with responsibilities towards the community in the first place. Unless it receives effective support from other places and institutions, its services will have to be restricted to its own locality.

Hence, I can only ask for understanding that the two-person team of the Munich Philatelic Library must necessarily restrict themselves to their principal and most urgent tasks: on the one hand to meet local needs and on the other hand to catalogue their holdings and make them accessible subject-wise. The present work aims to provide this service for its readers.

The Philatelic Library is the newest special collection in the Munich City Library system, which includes a local history section, a manuscript section, a law library and a music library, as well as the central scientific library. In addition there is a network of 26 local libraries, six mobile libraries and 18 libraries in hospitals and old peoples' homes. The foundations of the Philatelic Library were laid in the year 1931 under the versatile library director Hans Ludwig Held, when the Munich art dealer Friedrich Heinrich Zinkgraf made over his own private library and the holdings of the Munich Stamp Club to the City of Munich. Other gifts in succeeding years from various societies and the Bavarian scientist Hugo Schroder extended the collection so much so that in 1938 the keen philatelist Christoph Otto Müller could be installed as official director of the Philatelic Library. He instituted systematic build-up of the collections and recorded periodical articles in an index that today amounts to almost 80,000 cards. His successor Walter Merkle carried on the good work, which has been in the devoted hands of Otto Gleixner since 1969. The Philatelic Library includes literature on philately and postal history, catalogues of auctions and exhibitions, and magazines from all over the world. With its 22,000 volumes it is now the biggest and most useful research point in Germany for the cultural historian, postal historian, collector and enthusiast.

The Philatelic Library is of course located at no. 5, Sparkassenstrasse in the heart of Munich, and is readily available from the Marienplatz underground and railway station, or via the pedestrian zone, and is open to all enquirers. The Overseas Catalogue may create a desire in students to embark on a journey leading through Munich to the Philatelic Library. Philatelists from all over the world are always welcome.

INTRODUCTION

This is the second edition of the catalogue originally appearing in 1966, of the philatelic literature on the subject of Germany! It covers over 340 titles that have been added to the Library since then.

The section Postal History and Postal Undertakings has been split up because of the abundance of material and to give greater accessibility. Works added to the library since about 1968 will be found under the new heading Postal Undertakings, Postal Operation! The same is true of the new headings Field Post and Forgeries. Indexes of authors and periodicals are included in the catalogue for the first time.

Further subdivision of the individual sections, as was done for the Overseas Section, could unfortunately not be undertaken here. This will have to wait for another new edition.

The Philatelic Library is always interested in acquiring literature that does not appear in this catalogue.

All authors, firms and other people who have donated literature to the Library are hereby thanked.

Munich, Oct. 1974
5, Sparkassenstrasse

Otto Gleixner
Director of the Philatelic Library

END

STADTBIBLIOTHEK MÜNCHEN PHILATELISTISCHE BIBLIOTHEK
Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Munich State Library. Part 1
[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek der Stadtbibliothek München. Teil 1]
3rd considerably enlarged edition, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Bad Ems, Germany, 1983, 76pp.

Also available as 3rd considerably enlarged edition, 2nd reprint, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1990, 76pp. This reprint omits the endnote on page 75)

Translation of the introductory text and endnote only, pp.6 & 75

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1983. (Revised and extended June 1999)

CATALOGUE OF THE PHILATELIC LIBRARY OF THE MUNICH STATE LIBRARY
PART 1

FOREWORD

Catalogues of library holdings are printed very rarely, and when they are, usually only part of the stock is included. This makes things difficult for the user not resident on the spot but is understandable in view of the size of any one library and the amount of time and money need for the printing.

Hence it was all the more welcome in 1966 when Walter Merkle, the then head, was able to print the Germany section of the catalogue of the Munich Philatelic Library. Christoph Otto Müller, the founder of the Library, was unfortunately not able to do it in view of the wide range of his other occupations.

In 1975 I was able to put out the second, considerably enlarged edition of this catalogue, along with the Overseas section. The modern technology of the EDV (Translators note: electronic data processor - computer?) and the assistance of the DBZ with the editorial work now makes it possible to publish the entire catalogue as it was in May 1983.

CONTENTS:

The bibliographic data on all books in the Munich Philatelic Library and also in the Philatelic Library, were entered on an electronic data processor. This work has not yet been finished but is going on continuously.

In May 1983 practically all of the books dealing with the philately or postal history of particular countries, or with a theme, were loaded in. The sections on "subject areas", "catalogues" and "journals" are in preparation. Exhibition and auction catalogues will be catalogued and entered later. The currently-published catalogues will also be dealt with later.

The use of our computer made it possible to get a simplified print-out of the book holdings of the Philatelic Library. This is arranged systematically i.e. by countries and motifs. The literature for each individual country or postal area is subdivided by topic if sufficient information is available. A subject breakdown is not attempted for small areas, which will occasionally lead to inconsistencies in the alphabetical sequence for the countries concerned, but this in no way affects the usefulness of the catalogue.

The resulting printed catalogue is thus a simplified version of the much more detailed Library catalogue. It gives author, title, year of publication and book number for every book.

USE

Since all the books only appear once in this catalogue, it is absolutely necessary to look under all of the possible headings.

For example, a book on German air-mail cancellations could be entered under Germany - Air Mail, Germany - Cancellations, Air Mail - Cancellations, or Cancellations - Air Mail.

Thus, anyone who looked under only one heading might very well not find it. In the Library catalogue (card catalogue) such cases are dealt with by putting the corresponding number of cards under the headings concerned. The books in each section are arranged alphabetically by author. In the absence of an author, arrangement is by the first word of the title, with the article "der, die, das" ignored.

OUTSIDE

LOANS

All books may be consulted in the Reading Room, and with a very few exceptions may also be borrowed. Not available for loan are journals, stamp and auction catalogues and literature still available for purchase.

The members of philatelic societies affiliated to the League of German Philatelists may borrow directly. The rules for external loan may be obtained from the Philatelic Library if return postage is sent.

All other persons can use libraries in the national and international loans schemes. They should apply to the nearest one available.

ADDRESSES AND OPENING TIMES

Philatelic Library
2 Pestalozzistrasse,
8000 Munich 2

Opening Hours:-

Monday	08.00 - 12.00 hr
Tuesday	12.00 - 19.00 hr
Thursday, Friday	08.00 - 15.30 hr

The Philatelic Library will move into the new central building of the Munich City Library, probably in April 1984.

From May onwards the address will be as follows:-

Philatelic Library
5, Rosenheimer Strasse
8000 Munich 80

Opening hours:-

Monday - Friday 10.00 - 19.00 hrs.

END

Barbara Wincewicz & Tadeusz Wincewicz
Bibliography of the Contents of Polish Philatelic Periodicals: 1894-1939
[Bibliografia Zawartosci Polskich Czasopism Filatelistycznych 1894-1939]
Volume 1, Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1985, pp.7-8
(Set of 10 volumes, 1985-1989)

(Translation of the French Preface only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1991

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE CONTENTS OF POLISH PHILATELIC PERIODICALS: 1894-1939

PREFACE

We put into the hands of our readers the first volume of the Bibliography of the Contents of Polish Philatelic Periodicals: 1894 - 1939 compiled by the scientific research staff of the Museum of Posts and Telecommunications at Wrocław. The philatelic journals published during this period form a source of information on postage stamps, and on the history of the Post and the philatelic movement. Those interested in these often brief and fragmentary texts may find it difficult to get access to them, not only because the number of these periodicals to survive is small, but more especially because of the lack of bibliographic studies in this domain. Our publication should thus really meet existing needs and be an aid to research, active philatelists, postal historians and other circles of readers.

In drawing up this bibliography we based ourselves principally on the collections in the Library of the Museum of Posts and Telecommunications. However, this library does not possess a full collection of the periodicals that appeared during this time, so that we were not able to cover everything published in compiling the bibliography. In particular, we did not manage to get hold of the philatelic "ephemera", which are not likely to contain anything of lasting value to philately.

This bibliography will be published in volumes that appear successively. They will be paged continuously, so that they can ultimately be bound into one. The complete work will consist of the following parts:

- I Bibliography of the contents of each periodical.
- II Name index.
- III Subject index.

It should be pointed out that the authors of the bibliography have made a choice of the articles, using exclusively those which deal with the history of the Post and philately. We have also omitted pages of adverts, light articles, reports and obituaries, unless they gave details of the life, work, publications and philatelic activities of the person concerned. We have also left out certain short papers which in our opinion added nothing of any value to philately. Our bibliography is thus a retrospective selective bibliography.

We based our bibliographic descriptions solely on an examination of the periodicals. In the first part of the Bibliography of the Contents we have used a chronological arrangement of the periodicals in order of their appearance. We give a short bibliographical description of each title, followed by a summary of its contents. The bibliographic description consists of the basic elements given on the title-page of the first issue: title and sub-title, frequency of appearance, name of editor, editorial address, description of outside, year of issue and volume number for the year, and the number of issues per year. The bibliography was not designed to give a history of philatelic periodicals in Poland, and so it does not record changes in sub-titles, editors, editorial addresses and external appearance which took place during the life of the journal: only changes in title are noted. For the same reason we give only the chief editor, not the whole of the editorial board, and the editorial address, not the publisher. Each article is listed alphabetically by the name of its author, with anonymous articles by title. In cases where the title is missing as well, the articles are listed by the first letters of their text [inc:]. When the author of an article has hidden behind a pseudonym or cryptonym, and we have succeeded in identifying him, his publications are listed under his real name.

All elements in the bibliographical description not found in the periodical but stemming from the authors of the bibliography are given in rectangular brackets. Mistakes in the original are given in their incorrect form with the sign [!] alongside the correct form in rectangular brackets.

All information on corrections, continuations and controversies is given under a bibliographic point accompanied by the notation "Also" ("Nadto").

In drawing up this bibliography we used numbered indexes. In the first, main part of the bibliography we have assigned running numbers to the articles listed for each periodical. In the indexes - Parts II and III - the numbering is used to refer back to the entries.

These indexes form the key to the bibliography. The indexes of names covers the authors of articles and people mentioned in the bibliography. The subject index is arranged alphabetically according to the entries included. These two indexes can be used to refer back to bibliographical topics under study.

END

Nils Strandell

Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1908
[Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachliteratur im jahre 1908]
Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, March 1909, Volume 16, Issue 3, pp.I-IV;
April, Issue 4, pp.V-VIII & May, Issue 5, p.IX

Translation of the introductory text only, p.I

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

INDEX OF THE EUROPEAN SPECIALISED PERIODICAL LITERATURE IN THE YEAR 1908

Every year, the columns of the philatelic press contain an abundance of interesting communications in the form of scientific articles, notices, descriptions of newly-detected forgeries, important reports on new issues, official announcements and the like, all of the greatest importance for specialist collectors in individual fields. Most of these articles are in fact listed in the great Kohl Catalogue, but those that appear in the interval between two editions tend not to be brought to the attention of interested parties in good time. The following record has been compiled to overcome this drawback. As a start, only the European literature will be dealt with this year, concentrating on the more important periodical publications. An alphabetical sequence as in the last great Kohl Handbook is used, so that the specialist collector can get hold of volumes or issues containing material that interests him via his society or other library; he can also use this index, with advantage, for reference purposes in his own library collection.

For the sake of simplicity, the names of the periodicals are abbreviated as shown in the list below. The numbers after the initials relate to the pages covered in the journal concerned in 1908. Spaced-out figures indicate that the article, etc., has been taken from another journal. It often happens with English journals that the volume does not coincide with the calendar year, so that there can be two volume numbers for one calendar year. In these cases, the initial letters for the journal are followed by a Roman numeral referring to the volume concerned. Some magazines have a fresh sequence of page numbers for each individual issue: in this case, Nr. 1/10; for example would mean Issue 1, p.10.

The periodicals included in this year's index are as follows:-

Translator's note:

Refer to the original article for the list of periodicals indexed and the bibliographic listing.

END

Nils Strandell

Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1909
[Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachlitteratur im jahre 1909]
Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, May 1910, Volume 17, Issue 5, pp.I-IV
& June, Issue 6, pp.V-VIII

Translation of the introductory text only, p.I

A translation of the list of periodicals indexed and the bibliographic listing was published as follows: Gleanings from the foreign press., Philatelic West, October 1910, Volume 49, Issue 3, n.pp. [4pp.]; January 1950, Volume 50, Issue 3, n.pp. [2pp.] & Volume 51, Issue 1, n.pp. [3pp.]

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

INDEX OF THE EUROPEAN SPECIALISED PERIODICAL
LITERATURE IN THE YEAR 1909

As in the previous year, we are giving a listing of articles relating to special fields of collection that have appeared in the European specialised press. We explained in our March 1909 issue why we thought the publication of such a listing was advisable and practicable, and it is not necessary to go into all that again. It is obvious how useful such a listing must be to specialist collectors and its advantages need not be discussed any further.

Only the European specialised periodical literature is covered for the year 1909 but we have made provision for the coverage of non-European periodicals as well during the current year, so as to produce a world listing.

The index is again given alphabetically in the sequence of the last great Kohl Handbook.

The names of the periodicals are abbreviated as shown below. The numerals after the initials show the pages of the relevant periodicals covered for the year 1909. Spaced-out numerals indicate that the article, etc., concerned has been reprinted from another periodical. It often happens with English periodicals that the volume does not coincide with the calendar year, so that there can be two volume numbers for one calendar year. In these cases the initial letters for the periodical are followed by a Roman numeral referring to the volume concerned. One periodical has a fresh sequence of page numbers for each individual issue: in this case, Nr. 1/10, for example, means Issue 1, p.10.

The periodicals included in this year's index are as follows:

Translator's note:

Refer to the original article, or the translation in the Philatelic West, for the list of periodicals indexed and the bibliographic listing.

END

Nils Strandell

Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1910
[Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachliteratur im jahre 1910]
Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, July 1911, Volume 17, Issue 7, pp.I-IV
& August, Issue 8, pp.V-IX

Translation of the introductory and closing text only, pp.I & IX

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

INDEX OF THE EUROPEAN SPECIALISED PERIODICAL LITERATURE IN THE YEAR 1910

As in the last two years, we have again compiled a listing of the articles on special topics in collecting that have appeared in the specialised press. We explained in our March 1909 issue why such a listing was advisable and practicable and it is not necessary to go into all that again. It is obvious how useful such a listing must be to specialist collectors and its advantages need not be discussed any further.

As was foreshadowed in the 1909 catalogue, we have managed in this listing for 1910 to include all specialised journals (including non-European) in which anything valuable is likely to be found, so that the catalogue takes the form of a world-listing for the first time.

The catalogue is again given alphabetically in the sequence of the last great Kohl Handbook.

The titles of the journals are abbreviated as shown below. The numerals after the initials show the pages of the relevant journals covered for the year 1910. Spaced-out numerals indicate that the article, etc. concerned has been reprinted from another journal. It often happens with English journals that the volume does not coincide with the calendar year, so that there can be two volume numbers for one calendar year. In these cases the initial letters for the journal are followed by a Roman numeral referring to the volume concerned. Some magazines have a fresh sequence of page numbers for each individual issue: in these cases Nr. 1/10, for example, means Issue 1, p.10.

The journals listed in the current yearly catalogue are as follows:- Their addresses and subscription prices were given in detail in Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift 1910, Issue 8/9, pp.146-152.

N.B. Our German colleagues have notified us that the magazine Germania-Berichte is publishing a catalogue drawn up by Fr. Wilh. Thalmann, of the literature published in 1910, which will be very much like our own listings for the years 1908, 1909 and 1910, and intends to go on doing so in future years. We wish to inform our esteemed readers that we think it superfluous to publish any more of our own listings and so we refer them to the catalogue of the forthcoming literature to be published in Germania-Berichte in the year 1912.

Translator's note:

Refer to the original article for the list of periodicals indexed and the bibliographic listing.

END

C. Schmittdiel

Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature:

Part 1 - Instructions for Compilers

[Title in original language]

Robert Noske, Leipzig, Germany, 1937

(Translation of the Introductory text only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE GERMAN-LANGUAGE PHILATELIC

LITERATURE

PART 1 - INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPILERS

END

P.-I. Litschke

Philatelic periodicals covered by the philatelic reference organs "Literatur-Nachrichten" to 1960 and "Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur" (AphL)

[Title in original language]

Sammler-Dienst, 12th July 1975, Volume 26, Issue 14, pp.991-992 & 26th July, Issue 15, pp.1021-1022

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

PHILATELIC PERIODICALS COVERED BY THE PHILATELIC REFERENCE ORGANS "LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN" TO 1960 AND
"ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR" (APHL)

INTRODUCTION

Every philatelist knows that he can trace articles that will interest him in the comprehensive reference organs "Literatur-Nachrichten" (LN), from the Munich Philatelic Library and the Society of German Philatelists and its predecessor the "Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur" (AphL).

Unfortunately there is no indication in the literature of what German and foreign-language periodicals are covered in these publications. The aim of the present compilation is to give every philatelist interested a guide to which issues have dealt with a philatelic periodical of importance to him.

To get uniformity in the abbreviations, the "Verzeichnis und Abkürzungen philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften" (Catalogue and Abbreviations of Philatelic Journals), from the Gesellschaft für philatelistische Literatur e. V., Duisberg, has been used.

A. Archiv der philatelistischen Literatur (AphL)

Monthly reports on philatelic literature and chronological listing of the contents of home and foreign stamp magazines.

Details of journals already quoted will not be repeated for the following issues: only new titles will be described. Also, German and foreign-language journals will be dealt with separately.

Again in what follows only journals evaluated for the first time in the issue concerned will be dealt with. German and foreign-language journals are no longer listed separately, but are given in a single alphabetical sequence.

END

Friedrich Leitenberger
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925
[Bibliographie der Deutschsprachlichen Philatelistischen Literatur – 1925]
J. K. G. Wagnerische Buchdruckerei, Neustadt an der Orla, Germany, 1925, Paginated in Sections [47pp.]

Translation of the introductory text only, pp.III-V

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE GERMAN-LANGUAGE

PHILATELIC LITERATURE - 1925

FOREWORD

The fact that there are over 50 postage stamp journals in Germany, plus a not inconsiderable number of German-language periodicals published abroad, shows that it is not possible to produce an organ that will satisfy all philatelists equally.

However, this also means that the work published in these journals makes it impossible to get an overall picture of philately, since the division of intellectual output into so many parts makes it impossible for the specialist to cover it all: we have neither the time, nor the means, nor the opportunity to acquire and master the steadily increasing amount of material.

The aim of the work begun here is to try and overcome this long-standing drawback. The idea is not new, since attempts have often been started and then given up again: this shows that we do in fact need a bibliography on the one hand, but that on the other such a task is only undertaken with reluctance. The only novelty is the extensive division into class and subject which makes it possible for anyone interested to locate each entry within the whole. The index as such however should give every serious philatelist a picture of what has been written and where, about the various topics.

The system I have adopted attempts to satisfy all requirements - it will be shown during the progress of the work whether or not this wide-ranging theory can be translated into practice. The fact that the bibliography will have monthly supplements recording the contents of magazines that have just appeared, thus forming over time a work of reference to the successive issues, should hardly reduce the value of the work, since the regularity of issue will make it possible to cover the individual numbers of journals that do not themselves appear at regular intervals, and that should be particularly important: better 12 supplements than no information at all.

Any user of this work who is ready and willing to help me in producing it, is thanked in advance.

Friedrich Leitenberger

Gustav Freytagstrasse 2, Berlin - Schöneberg

January 1925.

INTRODUCTION

With few exceptions, the annual contents lists of our specialist journals only give details of the titles of the articles published: even in cases where there is some division by countries or subjects, it is not possible to locate particular stamps or features to the extent desired. For this reason, every type of stamp and every individual stamp will be given special mention in the present work, by using selected abbreviations and a regular method.

The progressive interests of our specialist circles cover the postage stamp in all its aspects and I take it as axiomatic for this group of collectors to rank the postage stamps on the same level and divide them up by country.

For the sake of clarity any attempt at further subdivision (airmail, literature, etc.) must be foregone, but it ought to be easy to locate all philatelic topics as they will be given under their classification or their subject. This means a certain amount of repetition, which however is unavoidable if the work is to be fundamental and complete.

In choosing the abbreviations, attempts were made as far as possible to find such as would have a certain likeness to the word concerned so that they would easily be remembered as a component of this and any other designation, on the whole this was not possible for the majority of abbreviations, since mistakes had to be avoided.

As regards the keywords chosen for the journals, I considered it advisable not to use abbreviations for the numerous journals that sound alike, but to use either part of their name, or the publisher, or the place of publication, or the society in the case of certain society publications: clarity was not sacrificed in the interests of saving space.

Philatelic supplements to the daily press will only be dealt with as necessary.

METHODOLOGY

Existing bibliographies can be divided into two groups on the basis of their arrangement, as follows:

- A. Philately of individual countries
- B. General and will contain:

Group A, everything relating to the stamps and cancellations of the countries in alphabetical order; reference will necessarily be made to:

Group B, in which the arrangement is by keyword for the subject concerned, etc.

It is possible to locate particular topics in both groups.

Their further construction can be illustrated by an example:

1.	Country name	Baden
2.	Journal	Zumstein
3.	Classification of stamp or cancellation	Fm
4.	Senf number, or year of issue and value, number in Kohl's Handbook in brackets ()	1 (1)
5.	Property	c+xu
6.	Number of journal	3
7.	Number of page	8

The actual entry for this example would thus be as follows:

Baden
Zumstein
Fm, 1 (1), c+xu, 3, 8

and this would be the abbreviation for:

Coloured variant of Baden No. 1, in Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung, Issue 3, p.8.

Each factor represented by an abbreviation is marked off by a comma. If there is a compound abbreviation, this is indicated by a plus sign “+”, followed by a comma at the end of the group. If any one of the five items listed above is missing in one or other case, a dash appears in its place, followed by a comma. Thus the actual entry is made up in all cases of five abbreviations or groups of abbreviations, always separated from another by a comma.

ABBREVIATIONS

To avoid changes in terminology, as few abbreviations as possible are used, all the more so as it is often possible to form compounds and thus simplify the use of the bibliography. When the classification of stamps or cancellations is involved, the compound is formed directly: in all other cases new terms are illustrated by a plus sign “+”.

To maintain alphabetical clarity, the abbreviations are split up so that the sequence is maintained on the left and those which do not relate to the initial letter concerned are given on the right: these are then again listed in alphabetical order. (See pages V to IX of the original

END

Friedrich Leitenberger

Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925

[Bibliographie der Deutschsprachlichen Philatelistischen Literatur - 1925]

Circular accompanying a review copy of the second part of the Bibliography, J. K. G.
Wagnersche Buchdruckerei, Neustadt an der Orla, Germany, March 1925, 3pp.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE GERMAN-LANGUAGE

PHILATELIC LITERATURE - 1925

Publisher:
J. K. G. Wagnersche Buchdruckerei
Neustadt an der Orla
Founded 1707

Editor:
Friedrich Leitenberger
2, Gust.-Freytagstrasse
Berlin-Schöneberg

Esteemed Editors!

With the enclosed we ask you to accept the second part of the Bibliography of the German-language philatelic literature 1925.

As I explain in the special supplement. Bibliographical Considerations, this work has been undertaken to promote the widest possible interest in philatelic literature, an undertaking whose success must be reflected in the specialist press, and thus serve to promote the actual use of this.

Hence I feel I can claim the right to ask for your friendly support in the form of a description of the work in the columns of your distinguished journal. Any criticisms you care to make will also always be welcome to me, since they will further my task.

I should also like once more to take the opportunity to ask whether you might agree to an exchange between your journal and the Bibliography, in which case I ask you to be good enough to send me all the issues published this year. However if you cannot agree to my proposals, I should be grateful if you could let me know by means of the enclosed postcard.

In the agreeable expectation that you will be able to meet the wishes I have expressed here, I beg to be yours with great respect

F. Leitenberger.

Schöneberg, March 1925

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL CONSIDERATIONS

Now that the second part of the Bibliography of the German-language Philatelic Literature 1925 has appeared, it may be as well for its compiler again to say a few general words, especially since the experience gained with the January issue and criticisms made of the first part have led to a certain amount of adjustment.

When in the Summer of last year I began to draw up a system for a bibliography, I was able to get it all on one quarto sheet. In the Autumn I went seriously to work, and filled three pages with the complete manuscript. Shortly before the decision to publish the bibliography, these had grown to twelve. However, when I had worked on the specialist literature for the month of January using this system, I had to recognise that even these 12 pages did not cover everything needed for a bibliography.

Things were much the same when it came to my ideas about the size of the individual issues. At first I thought in terms of eight octavo pages in brevier type, but it soon became obvious in the course of my work that this was out of the question, since the manuscript of Group A covered no less than 61 pages, and that of Group B a further 16 - a circumstance that could not simply be ignored, in view of the extra work created for the printer. And this was quite an important consideration: for motives of economy it was absolutely necessary to keep the work within reasonable limits, and even when this danger had been avoided, the typeface chosen and the complicated layout led to further difficulties: new matrixes were needed and some of the material already prepared had to be re-set - in a word, this second instalment was no picnic! The eight pages in brevier became 16 in nonpareil: thus, theory was to practice as 1 : 3!

I will not mention the trouble it is to deal with all this, but I will point out that I would like to reduce the effort a little. All our magazine publishers could help me here. All they need to do is be a little more accurate.

Let us mention the reporting of new issues. What about the designations of countries? There are countries which have the same name as colonies, or in which different authorities have postal rights - however the exact details are time and again missing: we then have to go through the Michel, Senf, Stanley Gibbons, Yvert, Tellier and Zumstein catalogues to find out exactly where this or that issue belongs. Once we have overcome this difficulty, we come up against the next one, that of describing the new issue - is it a postage stamp, prepayment stamp, special-occasion stamp or charity stamp - the writer often leaves his readers to make a guess! Actual descriptions of stamps also frequently leave much to be desired as regards the reporting of other features of stamps such as watermarks, perforations, picture, design, colour paper: of course the date of issue etc. remains a priority.

And in this way a bibliography is compiled!

If the country's name is not properly given, or the price of the stamp left out, it may be necessary not to list the report so as to avoid putting in incorrect details: or else what is reported as an ordinary stamp in one place can be listed as a special-occasion stamp in another: of course it can only be one or the other. Dates of issue are particularly important at the turn of the year: a 10c. stamp may be reported in 1924 as well as 1925 and we cannot know which is correct, especially when details of colour and watermark are not given. A really useful report on a new issue should cover the exact details of country, issue date, picture or design on the stamp, paper, watermark, separation, type of stamp, face value, colour etc.: if other details can be added such as official decrees, purpose, printer, designer, engraver, publisher, etc., so much the better.

In the short time at my disposal for preparing the first instalment, I could not go into such great detail, but the knowledgeable will easily be able to tell which magazines try to give as precise details as possible, and which are content with a bare report. And the risk of getting labelled like this will, one hopes, induce the journals that do not respect these principles to get into line with the others. One hopes!

It is moreover almost impossible to deal bibliographically with many technical articles. A specialist magazine should not publish papers or reports on stamps in which the stamps dealt with have to be guessed at. A magazine for light reading or the general press may be allowed to be vague, but not a philatelic magazine. Vagueness leads to a great lack of accuracy, although the author often need only look in the catalogue and get the relevant number to make everything clear. If it is not in the catalogue, date, place and value should be given, but to beat about the bush will just not do.

My system of abbreviations does not meet with general approval. I will admit it is rather lengthy, but the amount of material to be dealt with called for conciseness; and it is really not all that hard to understand. I have used "i" for error or mistake, I had to use the French word couleur for colour, began the word control with the old-fashioned C, chose h for the print, and x for undetermined details, with a ? for answers to questions, a % for half and half, and the sign § for illegal things. All other abbreviations are derived from the word concerned - and I managed to keep to these 60 abbreviations, so this is certainly not a book with seven seals. As was said in the introduction to the bibliography, and as can easily be seen from the abbreviations themselves, their number is not really so great since they are repeated to left and right of the keywords. On the left is the alphabetic sequence of the abbreviations; to the right is given the correspondence with the alphabetically arranged initial letters of the keywords. For reassurance however; we shall not be restricted to these 60; there will be a short supplement along with the additions to the journals being dealt with!

The thought also occurs that as the supply increases it will become more difficult to carry out the survey. This is undeniable. However, one simple question may be raised in answer to this objection: is it not better to have a survey than to have none?!! Or again: if a collector is taking all the 60 journals covered by me, when will he get the time at the end of the year to go through 60 contents lists? I could do it for 12, but that is only a fifth. However, who actually takes 60 magazines, who? Apart from those whose sole interest is in literature, 10% take one journal, 5% take two 3% take three, and perhaps 1% take five - how pleased must every collector be, to find out the contents of all the specialist magazines he does not take! The bibliography is meant to be a general work, not aimed especially at a circle of people interested in literature. However, anyone who actually wants to build up a complete universal work can be helped to do so: he takes two copies of each issue, cuts them up by countries and titles, and sticks the pieces arranged by states and pages into a loose-leaf binder; this can be fairly detailed, but will still not approach the completeness of my endeavour, up-to-date and not useless till more than a year has gone by! And the publisher will go a certain way to meet anyone interested as regards the second copy.

This is a sacrifice which cannot be rated highly enough. The criticism applied to the work so far has taken this fully into account, and it would be all the more surprising if here and there in the bibliography a factor were detected which would be in competition with the critic's own work. A work which is intended like no other to raise interest in the relevant literature merits for this reason the most extensive promotion at all times and in all places, since its success will always be to the advantage of all circles connected with philately. It should be the concern of the technical press and the societies to play their part in the realization of the overall plan by supporting the present work.

I believe that I have not set out on a false trail with my system, and that I shall not lack either the time, the wish or the energy needed to carry on the work: in fact I feel myself growing to meet the task. And so, respected gentlemen of philately, I ask for a little more care in composing your journals, then wishes can be kept within the bounds of possibility, and finally a little more support for the publisher and compiler - then everything will be fine.

Friedrich Leitenberger

END

Subscription-Invitation
[Abonnements-Einladung]
Philatelistische Presse, November 1887, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1992

SUBSCRIPTION-INVITATION

Editor's note: This translation was produced during the course of my research into periodicals devoted to philatelic literature, simply to determine whether it met the required criteria for inclusion in a bibliography of such publications. The short passage translated demonstrated that it was not devoted to philatelic literature.

No. 1

Volume 1 1887

Philatelistische Presse

International organ for the overall interests of philately.

Appears on the first of every month.

Subscriptions, adverts and manuscripts should be addressed to: N. HOFMEISTER, Czernowitz (Bukowina).

Czernowitz, 1st November 1887

Subscription-Invitation

The Philatelistische Presse begins its first volume with this number. The Editorial Board hopes from the outset for the friendly support of all philatelists in creating a magazine that will be capable of covering and promoting the interests of philately as a whole. However, this magazine is not meant only to serve its honoured readers, but - and this is our essential purpose - to offer also a means of communication between collectors of the East and the West by means of scientific articles which will illuminate the state of philately in both the East and the West. Since this is to be the task of the Editorial Board, they respectfully invite the honoured philatelists to subscribe to their magazine.

With highest regards
Editorial Board of the Philatelistische Presse.

Translator's notes:

1. At the time of publication, Czernowitz was the capitol of the Austro-Hungarian province of Bukovina. In 1918, it became part of Romania and changed its name to Cernautzi. Following the Second World War, it was within the Romanian territories absorbed by the Soviet Union (as the Moldavskaja S.S.R.) and was renamed Cernovcy. Following the break up of the U.S.S.R. in 1991, the Moldavian Republic became the independant state of Moldava.
2. According to the Crawford catalogue (Edward D Bacon: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, K.T.; The Philatelic Literature Society, London, 1911.), there were only two issues of the Philatelistische Presse published. The copy used for this translation is in the library of the Royal Philatelic Society London.

END

Die Philat. Litteratur
January 1894, Volume 1, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1992

DIE PHILAT. LITTERATUR

6th January 1894, Volume 1, Issue 1

Gumbinnen, East Prussia

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

Editor's note: Die Philat. Litteratur was printed in old German Gothic script and is therefore very difficult to read for those unfamiliar with it. Although it causes some difficulty when translating words, the main problem is with names and titles which are not translated.

A monthly magazine for those interested in philatelic literature.

Appears at the beginning of each month.

Subscription Price		Adverts Price
Per year	1 Mark	1 page	10 M., ½ page 6 M.
Abroad	1.50 Mark	¼ page	4 M., ⅛ page 2.50 M
Single Number	15 pf	1-5 lines	1 M

Publisher and editor: R. Rose jr., Gumbinnen.

Representatives and contributors wanted at home and abroad.

All publishers of philatelic journals who take this one are asked to send us 2 copies of their journal regularly, and we will do the same for them.

p.2

To all friends of Philatelic Literature.

In publishing this first number of Philat. Litteratur, we ask all friends of philatelic literature to be kind enough to take this journal and support us by sending us articles, subscriptions and advertisements.

In this hope we express our best wishes for the New Year.

Respectfully yours,
From the editorial office.
R. Rose jr., Gumbinnen.

p.3

Our German Literature.

A chat from Adolf v. Klevecke

On the 3rd May 1893 philatelic literature celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the first German postage-stamp magazine.

This was the Magazin für Briefmarkensammler issued by the Leipzig firm of Zschiesche and Köder. Slightly later came the Börsenblatt für Briefmarkensammler (Briefmarkenhandel? - Editor) from Reichel & Co. in Kaufbeuren, and the Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung from Ernst Roschlau in Coburg, which however, soon ceased to appear. The Magazin was purchased by a rival in the year 1866, which led to the closure of this as well.

However, in the year 1863 Durr⁽¹⁾ was inspired by the proliferation of new postage stamps to bring out the first "Handbook", which went into several editions. This was followed in the year 1864 by the "Description of all Postage Stamps Known So Far (more than 2209 types), with reports on reprinted stamps and guidance on the setting-up of collections" from Berger-Levrault & Son⁽²⁾.

If the collector who is now familiar with "philatelic science" looks back to those days, he will hardly be able to suppress a smile, since he is now almost overwhelmed by a veritable flood of journals, and can easily and cheaply get hold of numerous handbooks, catalogues, directories, stamp lists, philatelic calendars and pamphlets: it is all very easy.

In earlier days the collector was satisfied with an ordinary exercise book in which to keep his treasures, now he is supplied with everything of the best and cheapest. The collector has the widest choice amongst albums: he can get them at any price from 10 pfennings to 100 marks. One of the best, which merits recommendation, is the one published by Baumbach & Co. (see advert).

(To be Concluded)

- (1) To be obtained by sending in 1.50 marks.
- (2) See items on offer.

p.4

New magazines

By A. R.

At the end of the previous and the beginning of this year, a number of new specialist magazines (particularly advertising sheets) have seen the light of day.

The only one that can look forward to the future is Der Austria Philatelist. The first number appeared on the 1st December, adorned with the picture of the Imperial and Royal Appeal Court Judge Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz, whose biography is also included in the magazine.

Amongst its articles, the following are worth a mention:

- 1) The postage stamps of Austria, Hungary and Lombardy. by H. Kropf of Prague.
- 2) Spanish rarities, a chat about prices. by R. Ekardt of Prague.

Die Deutsche Briefmarken-Post writes as follows: Die Briefmarken-Börse, Int. Offertenblatt für den gesamten Briefmarkenhandel appeared for the first time in Hanover in September of last year.

The heading of the Börse, gives details of subscription and advertisement rates in French and English as well. Advertisements will be given the widest and most reliable circulation, and must be paid for in advance.

The magazine as a whole runs to 6 pages, half of the first being taken up by the announcements in three languages, and the rest by the “Advertising Section”. Adverts must always be paid for in cash and in advance. This “Advertising Section” is supposed (!!) “to fill a long-standing need” but seems rather designed to fill its publisher’s money bags to judge from the bombastic style (every line costs 25pf) applied to the the bigger advertisements.
(To be continued).

p.5

Letter box.

All questions addressed to us will be answered under this heading:

A. Huberlau, B.- A. Zeeher, Osn. - For the contribution you have sent us you will receive 3 issues of this journal, as circumstances prevent publication of the catalogue at present.

SOCIETIES

Wishing to use this magazine as their Society organ should please get in touch with me direct.

p.6

Das Universal=Briefmarkenalbum of the firm of Baumbach & Co., Leipzig.
[Advert for their stamp album by R. Rose jr., Gumbinnen]

p.7

Offers Sheet

Contact Sheet for Disposing of & Obtaining Philatelic Literature.
Price per line is 10 pf.

OFFERS A.	* WANTED B.
*
Owners of philatelic literature wishing to sell it via Offers sheet should send it to the editors with the lowest sale price. Settlement within 4 weeks.	* Details of the price which the
	* seeker is willing to give for
	* the works concerned are needed.
	* Answers to such requests should * be sent in as soon as possible, post-free.
	* The number alone is sufficient.
	*
	*
	*
20% of the sale price taken as commission.
For orders, only the number need be given.
	* 1. Bausche, G. Katalog aller bekannten
	* Briefmarken. 1865 - 60 marks
	* 2. Dappler, Briefmarken polka.
	* 1863 - 1.00 mark
	* 3. Degle, Robert Philotolisten=
	* Kalender, Bern, 1881 - 75 marks
	* _____ Philotolisten=
	* Kalender, _____, 1882 - 75 marks
	* _____
1. Ruhl, Briefmarkenfreund Leipzig, 1865 (quite new) 6.00 marks
2. Berger, Beschreibung aller Briefmarken, 1864 3.00 marks
3. Les Timbres-Poste 1864. 3.00 marks.

The next issue will appear on the 1st February. Adverts articles, etc. should be sent in before the 25th January please.

Publisher & Editor
R. Rose jr., Gumbinnen

Printed by Albert Olszewski, Gumbinnen.

END

Die Philat. Litteratur
February 1894, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1992

DIE PHILAT. LITTERATUR

February 1894, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.9

As No. 1, p.1.

p.10

Herr Victor Suppantschitsch, Graz, writes: Your magazine is very timely and I have read it with pleasure and am even prepared to edit it entirely if you wish. You would then see what impetus it could be given.

With deepest respect,
Yours faithfully,

signed Suppantschitsch.

Graz, 12th January 1894.

To contradict numerous rumours, I wish to make it known that I am NOT taking over the Int. Briefmarken-Journal published by D. Jeran, Reichenbach, since discussions with Herr Jeran have been broken off.

Richard Rose, Jr.
Publisher of Philat. Litteratur.

p.11

Rules for a projected philatelic literature society

Georg Kämmerer, Kiel.

Foreword

When in what follows I make an attempt to set out the rules for a proposed “philatelic literature society”, and I ask the forbearance of the world of collectors. However much care one takes, it is theoretically not possible to draw up a model set of society rules, since the actual activities of a society will soon show how far the individual sections correspond with the facts. I will only refer here to Section 4, which may cause surprise because of the relatively high sum involved. However, I look on a fixed contribution as suitable since there will be heavy demands on the Society’s funds during the early days to form a library, advertise in the various specialist journals, etc.; however, the point should be discussed and possibly a charge agreed on at the first meeting. I ask for a favourable perusal and evaluation of my proposal, and am always ready to discuss it in more detail.

PHILATELIC LITERATURE SOCIETY
(Society for the Study of Literature on Stamps).

RULES

§1.

The Society will bear the name Philatelistischer Literatur-Verein (Philatelic Literature Society) and will have its headquarters in the town where the greatest number of its members are resident. Branch societies may be set up with a membership of at least 5 persons, but their meetings should not conflict with those of the parent society.

§2.

The aim of the Society is to promote the scientific side of philately by giving to members the opportunity of widening their literacy knowledge. It aims to do this:

- a) by providing scientific talks and lectures and supplying accurate information on the relevant topics from members who have the necessary scientific knowledge.
- b) by holding prize competitions for the best works of a philatelic-literary nature.
- c) by a Society reading circle, which will obtain the greatest possible number of domestic and foreign journals.
- d) by starting and constantly adding to a specialist library.
- e) by bulk purchasing, so that members can have new and existing publications from the philatelic book market at the lowest prices.
- f) by means of the Society journal Die philat. Litteratur.
- g) by the foundation of branch societies.

- h) by monthly reviews of the new philatelic literature in the Society journal, including exact data on price, critical opinions, etc.
- i) by borrowing philatelic literature from every outstanding collection.
- k) by publishing a catalogue of all the philatelic literature available.
- l) by exhibitions organized by the Society at the suggestion of members, in which the development of the specialist literature can be demonstrated.

§3.

The entry fee will be 1.00 mark, but the first ten members, who are listed as founder members, are excused from this payment. Admission will be dependent on a vote by members, and prospective members must have reached the age of 16 years. If more than 5 members vote against, the application is rejected.

§4.

On the first day of each half-year a sum of 2.00 marks is due from each member: exit from the Society can take place on due notice being given, but a contribution will be due for the half-year in which the resignation takes place.

§5.

The Society year runs from the 1st January to 31st December.

§6.

The Society meetings will take place on 4 given days a month, at 8.30 in the evening at an appointed meeting place. Members arriving late will pay a penalty of 0.25 marks. Unjustifiable absences will incur a penalty of 0.25 marks. Guests may be introduced. At the end of every quarter a general meeting will take place: In particularly important cases the Chairman may call such a meeting outside the regular time.

§7.

The Committee will consist of a Chairman, Secretary, Treasurer-Librarian, and the editor of the Society's journal. The Committee will be elected by the members as a body at the last half-yearly general meeting. If the number of votes is equal, lots will be drawn. The Committee will be assisted by a similarly elected panel of 5 members, and they together with the Committee will decide all important matters.

§8.

People who have rendered special services to the Society or to philatelic literature can be given honorary membership and retain it free of all charges.

§9.

The Editor has the task of publishing all Society reports of importance regularly in the Society journal. This should also contain, every month, an accurate survey of new items appearing on the philatelic book market. Outstandingly good items should be indicated by a special mark (*) to recommend them to the world of collectors. For this purpose a volunteer will be chosen from the membership who will receive the new books and magazines which have been purchased for the Society and will provide the necessary information about them. This task definitely calls for a member with philatelic literary interests.

§10.

Items borrowed from the library or from the readers' circle should be retained for 6 days at most. The member concerned will be fined 0.25 mark for every day beyond this. Exceptions to this are foreign members who may keep books, etc. for 14 days. However, foreign members should make use of the library once a month at most, though they may take several items. The Society does not cover the costs of postage, etc. Lost items must be paid for in full, if carelessness has been involved.

§11.

Information on philatelic-literary matters will only be supplied to non-members on payment of 0.50 marks.

§12.

In the case of a possible dissolution of the Society, which however should not take place if at least 5 members oppose it, the Society's money will be divided between the members. The library will be delivered as a sealed lot to the magistrate of the town of Gumbinnen, with the direction that it is for the use of the next philatelic society to be set up in Gumbinnen.

Gentlemen who may wish to join the above Society are asked to supply their addresses to the office of this magazine.

p.15

New publications in the field of philatelic literature

1. Vierteljahrs-Nachtr.,ge zum philat. Permanent Sammelmert und lose Blatter von Hugo Krotzsch [Quarterly supplements to the permanent philatelic collection on loose sheets by Hugo Krotzsch], No. 1, 1.50 marks per year. Contents, Postmarks of the old German States on the stamps of the North German League and the German Imperial Post by Curt Bohnert.
 2. Die Post. From Bauernbach (Baumbach? - Editor.) & Co., Leipzig. No. 1, 75 pfg. per year, 15,000 printed (?) seems to be merely an advertising sheet for the "Universal Album".
 3. Int. Briefmarken-Börse, Published by Theophil Weber, Leipzig. 2 marks per year.
 4. Die Briefumschläge von Baden (The envelopes of Baden), compiled by County Court Director Lindenberg, can be warmly recommended to all collectors of the old German states. (Can also be ordered via our office).
-

Letter box

All enquiries sent to us will be answered under this heading.

A. HABERLAU, Berlin is asked to supply his address, as our letter came back marked undeliverable.

pp.16-18

Pages 16, 17 & 18 are merely advertisements.

END

J. A. Bosshard & Fritz Seifert

Well-known philatelists

[Bekannte philatelisten]

In: Deutsches Philatelistisches Jahrbuch 1928: Wer? Wie? Was? Wann? und Wo? in der Philatelie. [German Philatelic Year Book 1928: Who? What? Where? When? and How? in Philately.], Fritz Seifert, Leipzig, Germany, 1928, pp.91-123

Only the following entry has been translated: Otto Rommel, p.110

Translation by Brian J. Birch

Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE

May 2022

WELL-KNOWN PHILATELISTS

p.110

Rommel

Dr. Jur. Otto Rommel, Berlin. Born on the 2nd February 1857 in Hildburghausen. Author: Baden, Bavaria, Bergedorf, Deutsche Reichspost in Kröttsch's Handbook, History of the Saxony newspaper stamp 3 Pf. Red, Catalogue of the Nordic Bypost stamps, Morocco, its mail and its postage stamps, the Chinese local stamps, the Postage stamps of the Bergedorf postal district, the Postage stamps of Lübeck, the Courier railway and steamship stamps of Scandinavia and Finland, Special catalogue of the postage stamps of the German postal districts, Study of the postage stamps of Peru and many publications about philatelic Literature.

Reference: Bungerz p.360.

END

[Untitled extract]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1916, Volume 27, Issue 1, pp.2-3

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
 33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
 ca.1999

[UNTITLED EXTRACT]

The philatelic book literature has undergone only a very limited growth in Germany, and moreover this has been restricted to reprints of material appearing or to appear in magazines. Bavaria comes out best in this respect, since no fewer than three works have been devoted to Bavaria as a special topic: F. Schneider, Postcards (with fanciful details of prices on p. 84), Dr. Stenger & Sauter, cancellations from poste restantes, country carriers and sub-post offices, Dr. Stenger alone, the mill-wheel cancellation. Ohrt's new work seems to have died away, since no more of it was published in the year 1915; and only one part appeared in 1914, with at least two in 1913. The work has now reached the beginning of Paraguay. If we recall that the first part appeared in March 1906, i.e. practically 10 years ago, then we can see that if this work is ever finished, as we are not very hopeful it will be, the early sections are bound to be out of date in many ways. Nevertheless, it would be a pity if this comprehensively planned work were to remain a torso, like, unfortunately, almost all the major German undertakings (Heitmann's Grosse Handbuch der Philatelie, Krotzsch's Handbuch der Postwertzeichenkunde, Lindenberg's Briefumschläge der deutschen Staaten, Glasewalds Handbuch der Privatpostmarken.) Although it would hardly be possible to publish such works except by instalments, this method of publication does always entail the risk that the work will never be completely finished, either because the author or the customers get tired of it, or because the publisher runs into low water. Until now only two German part-works have avoided these snags, the Bibliography of the German Philatelic Literature by V. Suppantchitsch, which was not for a long time valued as it deserved, and the outstanding Textbook of Philately by the immortal Theodor Haas, which is unfortunately out of print at the moment, though it is hoped that a second edition will appear soon. One large-scale foreign handbook appeared completely in part form, the Catalogue for Advanced Collectors, by Collin & Calman, which appeared in New York during 1891-1900, and makes up a monumental work in three large volumes, though it is only rarely found in Europe. Two large-scale bibliographical works are announced for appearance in America. Both have W. R. Ricketts as the author. One is a compilation of the philatelic literature of all lands and languages, and is divided into two parts. One is an index of authors with details of the work they have published on philatelic literature, and the other is a listing by subjects. At the moment, the first part has reached the letter K (Koprowski), and it already covers 360 pages of mimeographed typescript. This method of production has the drawback that typing mistakes could often not be corrected. Thus, the holder of the Lindenberg medal is one "Kolchoff" otherwise unknown to philately. The magazines cited are referred to by abbreviations, e.g. Phs (Dres) for the Dresden Philatelist, AR-APS = Annual Report of the American Philatelic Society. The index to these abbreviations itself covers 56 pages. The second bibliography by the same author appears as a supplement to The American Philatelist, the organ of the American Philatelic Society. It is meant to be a general index to all the magazines in the English language that appeared from 1863 to 1910, but also includes the two most valuable French titles, Moens' *Le Timbre-Poste and Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie. It is a pity that the leading German journals could not have been included as well. The probable extent of this work can be judged from the fact that 186 closely-printed pages have now got as far as Bulgaria. Next to this comprehensive work, the bibliography of the German philatelic Society in Dresden will have only a limited part to play. In particular it remains to be seen whether the people nominated for this task are equal to it. So much has been published in Der Philatelist about the plans for this work, that everyone is expecting something very special: any disappointment will thus be all the more keenly felt. At the moment the Fatherland has a "call" on the people nominated, so that the appearance of this work has had to be postponed indefinitely. Meanwhile Karl Beck has published a compilation of individual German philatelic writings on the lines of the bibliography compiled by Rudolf Krasemann, whose premature death we lament, and this anticipates the first part of the planned Dresden undertaking. This again proves the truth of the old saying that actions speak louder than words. When the entire world was asked for advice on how to proceed, it simply turned out that nobody was in a position to come forward with a fully thought-out plan. Of the new foreign publications, we may mention the Norwegian work by Anderssen & Dethloff, Norges Frimerker (see p.128). This has been made available in translation to readers of the DBZ, starting with the current issue no. 4. For obvious reasons we cannot report on new English publications, and French ones seem not to have appeared.

END

New Year's Eve 1916

[Silvester 1916]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January, 1917, Volume 28, Issue 1, pp.1-3

(Translation of an untitled paragraph about Literature on page 3, column 2 only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

NEW YEAR'S EVE 1916

The most painful losses suffered by Literature because of the war, apart from some specialist reprints, are in the form of part-works that have failed to appear. The subscription works, Handbuch aller Bekannten Neudrucke by P. Ohrt, and Die Postwertzeichen der Russischen Landschaftsämter by C. Schmidt & A. Faberge have also issued no continuation. A distinguished exception is the Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Litteratur, published by the Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins Dresden, with the co-operation of philatelic advisors and edited by Max Ton. This handbook, which has exceeded earlier expectations, appears as a supplement to Der Philatelist, the organ of the sponsoring society. It started in the issue for the 25th July 1916, and despite the call-up of collaborators has now reached No. 48, up to Gutmensch, in December. This bibliography promises to be valuable. We must hope that the sponsoring society will not withdraw its support as abruptly and destructively as it did from the Krötzsch handbook, which was also issued monthly by Der Philatelist up to 1896. The publishing house of Hugo Krotzsch & Co. has also been approached to issue the Prussia volume of Die Briefumschläge der Deutschen Staaten. However, they have again made it clear that they cannot undertake to do this before they have seen the manuscript.

END

W. Thalmann

Index of subject articles appearing in philatelic journals (year 1910) and of handbooks appearing in the years 1908 to 1910

[Title in original language]

Germania Berichte, 1911, Supplement to 6-10

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

INDEX OF SUBJECT ARTICLES APPEARING IN PHILATELIC JOURNALS (YEAR 1910) AND OF HANDBOOKS APPEARING IN THE YEARS 1908 TO 1910

INTRODUCTION

This little paper is designed to be a help particularly to collectors who take a serious interest in our hobby. The particular purpose of this index is to afford a rapid survey of what has been published on special topics in the most-read magazines. On the other hand, however, this compilation may well stimulate to research those philatelists who have hitherto fought shy of the literature because they did not want to plough through the mass of it themselves, or lacked the time to search for articles that interested them. Everything will be made easy for them here. I should always be borne in mind that knowledge will steadily increase the pleasure of collecting.

Reports on new issues and short papers have only been reported to the extent that they contained important information.

Obviously, I could only use as sources the journals available to me. All publishers who would like to see their magazines included here should be kind enough to let me have free copies regularly. The same applies to new publications on the book market. The books noted in this year's index go back as far as I could manage to the Krasemann exhibition of the year 1907.

Most of the journals mentioned here, and also many of the books, are in the central library of the Germania-Ring and available for loan to members under the known conditions. Material not so available is marked by *.

I offer you this little publication in the hope that it will be really useful in your work and will be thus advantageous to our hobby.

Potsdam, January, 1911.
The author.

Address: Fr. Wilh. Thalmann
21 Teltower Strasse,
Potsdam II

END

Here it is - Grüne Sammler-Welt (Green Collectors World)
[Title in original language]
Grüne Sammler-Welt, March 1930, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

HERE IT IS - GRÜNE SAMMLER-WELT (GREEN COLLECTORS WORLD)

Reprints of our articles and reports must quote "Grüne Sammler-Welt" as the source-Niebull.

HERE IT IS - GREEN COLLECTORS WORLD

Many friendly wishes from collecting and dealing circles greet the appearance of the first number of the present magazine, which will now endeavour to justify your confidence and your abiding friendship. Please glance through this issue, which makes no claim to promise you everything and provide a complete coverage. This is simply not possible, as I lacked a collaborator for this issue, a collaboration on whom the publisher places the highest possible value, namely you yourself, esteemed reader! At the minute you cannot feel so intimately connected with Green Collectors World as we hope you will do from No. 2 onwards. People develop affection for a magazine when they have worked for it zealously themselves. The publisher will be especially proud when you can provide suggestions for improvement, when you are ready for further developments, as this will be the plainest indication that Green Collectors World is not simply an undertaking with material interests - the subscription price takes care of those - but is an embodiment of the ideal of drawing all serious collectors together into one family., and of being the mouth and ear of all philatelists, without detriment to the activities of societies. Thus, we wish you a pleasant and profitable time reading Green Collectors World, and we wish ourselves the satisfaction of seeing our efforts rewarded by your approbation.

To put into a nutshell
The aims we here maintain:
Collecting to encourage,
The reader entertain.
Your confidence we hope for
On us we hope you'll build
For this you have the promise of
THE GREEN COLLECTORS WORLD.

END

Alexander Bungerz

The German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1920

[Title in original language]

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

THE GERMAN LANGUAGE PHILATELIC LITERATURE IN THE YEAR 1920

FOREWORD

After a short interruption we bring you our 4th special issue, a review of the German-language philatelic literature in the year 1920. It appeared during 1921/22 in "Die Postmarke", Vienna, and the author promised to supply reprints of it, but unfortunately never did so. This left a deplorable gap in the series of similar publications by the author (from 1914), and today we are able to fill it.

The review is supplemented by periodicals and pamphlets that have appeared in the meantime, so that the collector of literature will now have a complete listing of all publications in our field of collection since 1914 - obviously, complete only in so far as the issues and writings concerned have been made known to the author.

Today we again extend our oft-repeated invitation to all members to be kind enough to let us know of any periodical, issue, pamphlet etc. that does not appear in any of these reviews. Only if everyone helps with this tedious and time-consuming work can it be anything like complete. Later on it could become impossible still to find details of the material concerned, and we find that even after a few months it may no longer be possible to clear up doubtful points. Will therefore everybody who has the opportunity to add to this review please do so and let us have the relevant information. All collectors of literature will be grateful to you for it.

Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors.

Berlin, September 1923.

The specialist literature of the year 1920 clearly reflects the upswing that stamp collecting experienced in that year. Interest naturally fell off in the first years of the war, but when it rose again, there rose along with it a need and a request for periodicals to deal with new issues etc., for books and pamphlets aimed at the serious student, and for catalogues and price lists as the basis for selling, buying and exchange.

The following periodicals on new issues are worthy of note:

The "Briefmarken-Neuheiten-Offertenblatt", L. Kipke; "Der Deutsche Sammler", Johann Heinrich Kirsch, which however only survived for one issue; "Internationale Zeitung für Philatelie", Rudolf Rohr; "Briefmarken und Ganzsachen", Rost & Grubert; "Der Internationale Sammler", Komet; "Der Sammlerfreund", Gelsenkirchen; "Die Weltpost", Munich-Hamburg;

"Verbandsblatt", des Markensyndikats", along with the announcements in "Die Ganzsache" the "Internationale Briefmarken-Borse", Munich, and the "Internationale Zeitung für Philatelie", Hagen, and "Sammlerpost", Unterrobblingen, the last two of which have not yet appeared, however. Other new titles to be noted are: "Hamburger Briefmarken-Zeitung", the "Mitteilungen der Gross Einkaufsagentur Deutscher Philatelisten", and the weekly "Briefmarken-Rundschan" from the Danziger Zeitung, which deserves special mention as the first German weekly magazine, and because of its awkwardly large format of 35:51 1/2 cm. New publications from German Austria are: "Foederation", "Philatelistische Rundschau", "Sammlerbund Sabu", "Universum-Briefmarken-Offertenblatt", "Das Postwerthzeichen", "Nachrichtenblatt der Tauschvereinigung für Postwerthzeichen in Wien", and the "Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung" from Klotzl & Steigberger. The "Monatliche Internationale Markenbörse" appeared in Leichtenstein, the "Offertonblatt für Sammler und Tauschfreunde", in the Czechoslovak Republic, the "Sammlerblatt" in Poland, "Der Banater Philatelist", in Romania, "Der Baltische Philatelist" in Latvia, and in Switzerland "Schmieds Internationales Briefmarken-Offertenblatt" and "Weka-Berichte". Finally, on the other side of the big pond, a German language stamp magazine, the "Chicagoer Briefmarken-Zeitung" has been appearing since 1913.

These new titles are counterbalanced by some that have finished. These are: "Der Ganzsachen-Sammler", absorbed into "Die Ganzsache"; "Der Sammler", Hadersleben, the "Interessanten Philatelistischen Mitteilungen", Sorau; the "Mitteilungen des Münchener Briefmarken-Klubs"; the "Vereinsnachrichten der Tausch-Verbindung Münchener Briefmarkensammler", the "Philatelistische Welt", Berlin - Lichterfelde. The "Mitteilungen des Deutschösterreichischen Philatelistenverbandes", Essen has changed its name to "Briefmarken-Post", whereas the "Verbandsblatt" will no longer appear next year. In German Austria, Gust. Walter's "Briefmarken-Anzeiger", the "Mitteilungen der Briefmarkentausch-Vereinigung", Bisamberg, and the "Deutschösterreichische Briefmarken-Zeitung" have ceased to appear. In the Czechoslovak Republic, the "Welpost-Echo" has also unfortunately gone under.

The "Generalanzeiger für Philatelie", first put out by K. Kirchhof & Co., in Iserlohn on 10th April 1883, has reached its 1000th issue on 5 July, under its present publisher Christian Sauerland who has issued it since 1887. It is the first time a German-language stamp magazine has reached such a jubilee. Even though it is a purely advertising sheet, we can still as Germans be proud of such a magnificent number of issues. The "Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journal" which has appeared since 1st January 1874 also reached its 1000th issue on 28th August of the same year; this also has the distinction of being the oldest specialist magazine still in existence.

Thanks to the keen interest now being shown by collectors and dealers, advertising sheets have moreover reached a circulation that would have struck us as a mere fairy-tale a few years ago. We can appreciate the increase best by looking at the bound volumes, which had become bulky folios by 1920. The "Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt" by C. G. Vogel in Posneck, which changed its title to "Internationaler Postwertzeichen Markt" in the middle of the year, ran to 2016 pages. Although foreigners may also have outstanding specialist magazines, they have nothing to match our advertising sheets.

We have also seen a great advance over the previous year in the field of books. The most valuable work was given to us by Dr. Kraus and Dr. Philippi with "Postwertzeichen von Chile", whilst Councillor Meisters "Die Deutschen Feldpoststempel 1914-1918" may be broader in extent, but is naturally not so sensational, as regards its contents Karl Beck gave us a good study, "Der Bayerischen Kreuzer-Marken der Ausgaben 1849-1875", Georg Butow published "Die Abstempelungen der deutschbelgischen Besetzungsmarken", and Dr. Emil Dub showed his wide learning in "Die Marken des Saargebietes". Noteworthy from the artistic point of view was "Die Schonheitswerte der Briefmarken" by Director Gustav E. Pazaurek. The "General Index" by Max Block should be very useful to coming researchers as a supplementary work to periodical articles. Lucke's "Atlas der Briefmarken-Geographie" appeared in its 3rd edition.

In the catalogue section, the new publications have been almost too abundant. Since the beginning of the war, the world of collectors has loudly bewailed the lack of any basis for evaluating overseas stamps. The firms concerned remained deaf to all these pleas. Then the firm of "Sammler-Woche" decided to put out a general catalogue, which appeared under the title of SW-Weltkatalog. Shortly afterwards Hugo Michel entered the arena with the overseas section of his catalogue. The old-established Senf catalogue did not appear in the year 1920, so could not be included in the statistics for that year. Now the German collector has three large catalogues, and need sacrifice a small amount of money and a large amount of time to study them. The special price lists of Paul Kohl appeared up to no. 61A, some of them unfortunately in a larger format, always an abomination to the book lover as it forms an insuperable obstacle to binding them later. If I now mention Henrich Poiger's "Addressbuch Oesterreichs und der Tschecho-Slowakei", and the various auction catalogues, I can close my listing.

When it comes to the periodicals section, there are unfortunately some gaps in the numbering of various journals. I cannot refrain here from expressing my sincerest thanks to all the publishers who have been kind enough to answer my enquiries on this topic; and also wish to mention those who regularly ignored my many questions accompanied by the return postage. Even registered letters containing a simple form to fill in were ignored. Those editors should remember when their announcements and prospectuses ask collectors for support in regard to subscriptions and advertisements, that they need also to respect the wishes of collectors. Especially when it is made so easy for them that all they have to do is fill in a few numbers and dates on a form provided. I here request all friends of literature to help me with details of the missing issues, and would be very grateful to have relevant information sent to my address at Tegernsee.

I now follow with a record of the periodicals, books, pamphlets, catalogues etc., published in the year 1920 as far as they are known to me.

END

V. Suppantschitsch
On philatelic libraries

[Ueber philatelistische bibliotheken]

Austria Philatelist, January, 1895, Volume 2, Issue 1, pp.7-9; February, Issue 2, pp.57-58; March, Issue 3, pp.108-110; April, Issue 4, pp.161-163; May, Issue 5, pp.202-204; June, Issue 6, pp.249-251; July, Issue 7, pp.293-295; August, Issue 8, pp.342-344; October, Issue 10, pp.422-423; November, Issue 11, pp.460-462; December, Issue 12, pp.504-506; 15th February 1896, Volume 3, Issue 4, pp.51-53; 1st March, Issue 5, pp.97-98; 1st April, Issue 7, pp.145-147; 15th May, Issue 10, pp.211-212; 15th June, Issue 12, p.254; 15th July, Issue 14, pp.290-291; 1st September, Issue 17, pp.341-353; 15th October, Issue 20, pp.395-396; 15th January 1897, Volume 4, Issue 2, pp.25-26; 1st March, Issue 5, pp.82-84; 1st June, Issue 11, pp.177-178; 15th June, Issue 12, pp.197-199 & July, Issue 13, pp.213-214

Only the introductory and final text is translated. The remainder of the article comprises lists of literature which do not require translation to be accessible.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1996

ON PHILATELIC LIBRARIES

by Supreme Court Counsellor V. Suppantschitsch, Graz

A survey of the now forty-year-old history of stamp collecting must lead to the conclusion that the rise of philately has gone hand in hand with the rise of philatelic literature. What was the state of stamp collecting in the days when the first handbook, the first specialist periodical and the first catalogue appeared, and what is its state now, when practically every month brings a new work and approximately a hundred and fifty specialist magazines are appearing? The difference is so tremendous that it would be quite superfluous to waste words on it. The amount of philatelic knowledge laid down in the philatelic literature is so great that no other field of collecting can show anything like it. For this reason alone it is worth making it available to the present day world and preserving it for future ages. It would however be a great mistake to assume that only recent and very recent literature is worthy of permanent consideration, and that the older and oldest literature can just be left to sink into quiet oblivion. Anyone who has much to do with philatelic literature will know what nuggets of gold are to be found in the oldest literature and how many questions that are now brought up as the latest thing have already been dealt with and decided by our predecessors. Our most up to date writers afford the most proof of this, since before every major publication they refer to the oldest literature and most are afraid of admitting that they can often use this as the source of their knowledge.

However, where can the individual researcher get hold of the necessary source material, when there is no central point where they are all collected together and can be consulted without excessive cost?

The realisation that it is in the interests of our study to provide such a central point has led to the foundation of philatelic libraries and it is these I am going to speak of here. Up to 10 to 15 years ago, i.e. roughly up to the year 1880, it was relatively easy to build up one's own collection especially if only the collector's mother tongue was taken into account. There were in fact -as I know from experience- a considerable number of collectors who got hold of everything good in the literary line that appeared in their own language: I was myself one of these collectors and there were very likely similar people in other countries.

From the year 1880 onwards however the literature began to increase in a geometrical progression, so that today no one individual finds it possible to acquire everything put out, even if only in the German language. It is very difficult and needs great attentiveness even to get to know of everything that is published. The totality of collectors must get together at this moment in time, and they are beginning to do so.

The big philatelic societies have undertaken the task of building up libraries, extending them, cataloguing and administering them. They appoint Librarians, draw up rules for reading and borrowing, devote part of their subscriptions to library purposes, etc. The larger and more vigorous the society, the more it could do for its Library. The expenditure involved is not slight, since philatelic literature has increased both qualitatively and quantitatively not just in Germany and Austria but also in other cultivated countries such as England, France and the United States. Hence, at least the most outstanding books and journals from foreign countries must be purchased. The most outstanding foreign writings should thus not be absent from any larger library. Meanwhile, however, the older and oldest literature from all countries is very seldom available and only a few copies of individual items are generally in existence. Hence, it is usually only the older collectors, who have had a long-standing interest in literature and have built up their own libraries, who have these rare and extremely rare items at their disposal. More recent lovers of literature and newer societies can obtain these things only at a considerable sacrifice of money, even if it is possible to find them.

If we now turn to the individual countries, we can state with justified pride that Germany and German-Austria have the most, if not the most extensive, libraries. Hardly any other country can show the number of large libraries, both society and private, that exist in this country. Coming to society libraries, I will name the most considerable, namely those of the "Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereines" of Dresden, the "Bayerischen Philatelisten-Vereines" of Munich, the "Oesterreichischen Philatelisten-Clubs" of Vienna and the "Berliner Philatelisten-Clubs".

The library of the last-named club in particular has received a quite extraordinary impetus from the tireless activity of its librarian, Judge Fränkel of Berlin. After these come the libraries of the societies in Frankfurt-am-Main, Stuttgart, etc. The number of private libraries is not inconsiderable either. The one that stands out from all other is that of the well-known stamp dealer Sigmund Friedl of Unter-Döbling near Vienna, which he has lodged in his own International Postage Stamp Museum. Next comes the library of the Senf Brothers in Leipzig, and that of Theodor Haas of Leipzig, the editor of the Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journal, following by that of H. Fränkel of Berlin, and those of the well-known philatelic researchers Dr. Fritz von Fossel of Klagensfurt, Ferdinand Czegka of Graz – the first of which covers only German literature however – and finally my own library.

It should also be mentioned that our old master Dr. Moschkau had a very extensive private library in his time, though it passed into the ownership of the Vienna Philatelic Club, now the Austrian Philatelic Club, some 10-12 years ago.

After Germany and German Austria, the United States of America should have most specialist libraries. At all events, it does possess the world's greatest library, that of the leading American philatelist, the lawyer John K. Tiffany of St. Louis in the state Missouri. This includes practically everything written and published on stamp collecting and philately in general. A zealous collector of philatelic literature for about 30 years, he put out a work entitled The Philatelic Library in the year 1874 – i.e. 20 years ago. He allowed only 150 copies to be printed for distribution to his friends. It contains a detailed listing and description of all philatelic publications to date – not even excluding dealers' price lists – covering all nations and languages. He has carried on his researches to the present day and has collected without interruption, so that of the periodical literature, for example, he has roughly 15,000 individual issues with only 160 of the older ones missing. He is absolutely the leading expert on literature and is acknowledged to be the greatest authority in this field. After Tiffany's Library there is a second extensive library in the country; that of the young millionaire H. E. Deats of Flemington. Its strength lies within narrower limits and consists mainly of American literature.

I have no detailed information about the extent of the big American Society libraries, but I do not doubt that they are very well-stocked, particularly as regards American literature, since both now and in the eighties America had an extraordinary number of collectors who were very interested in literature as well as ordinary stamp collecting. It must mean something to collect even approximately all the periodical literature of the United States and British North America, since this amounts to about 450 different journals with 5/6,000 issues.

The other civilised countries of Europe are far behind those mentioned as far as philatelic libraries are concerned. There are only two big libraries in France, those of the Société Française de la Timbrologie of Paris and Dr. Legrand in Neuilly, near Paris. There is really only one in Italy, that of Dr. Emilio Diena of Modena. In England, the country which in general belief is the cradle of stamp collecting, in which the first stamp magazine saw the light of the world, and which has almost the most extensive periodical literature in Europe, England which has produced the most outstanding specialist works and has the finest connoisseurs of postage stamps in its midst, England possesses to the best of my knowledge not a single specialist library of the kind dealt with here. There are individual collectors who have a library, but in line with the nature of the English people, who rarely tend towards the study of foreign languages, these libraries consist only of English, with maybe a few French, periodicals and books. There seem to be no Society libraries. This goes a long way moreover, to explaining why the older English journals, especially the ephemeral ones which only enjoyed a brief existence, are almost unobtainable now and are practically always great rarities.

Nothing is known about libraries in European countries not mentioned here.

However, what good are libraries, if no-one knows on the one hand where and in whose possession they are to be found, still less what their contents are.

Only a few German society libraries have catalogues, and amongst these only one, that of the International Dresden Philatelic Society, is complete and totally up to date, since this Society has a custom which might well be copied, of publishing the contents of the library at the beginning of every year in their Vertraulichen Mittheilungen [Confidential Communication]. The other German societies that have large libraries only appear to take stock of their books at longer periods of time, and these surveys are generally not complete since as a rule only entire volumes are listed.

To the best of my knowledge there is only one complete catalogue of a private library, that of Sigmund Friedl, of the International Postage Stamp Museum at Unterdöbling near Vienna.

Friedl is the only person who has published the contents of his Library, in his Weltpost, Nos. 20, 21 and 22 of the XIII and No.24 of the XIV volume (1888, 1889) with information as extensive as it is accurate. This has earned him the thanks of all lovers of literature, and since his library has increased considerably since then, he has begun to publish his catalogue afresh in No. 45 of volume XVIII: it is not finished yet.

It would give me great pleasure if this account would stimulate societies and individual collectors who have large libraries would draw up catalogues of their contents and make these known, in whatever manner, to the rest of us. This would be helpful and useful to our beloved study, and I would also be glad to learn about libraries whose existence is currently unknown to me and thus have not been mentioned in this survey.

I must point out that during the past year the Berlin Philatelists Club did print a catalogue of its own library. Unfortunately, it only covers the German periodical literature, and that not completely, but is otherwise a pattern of its kind.

Since I think it important and profitable to make known the contents of large libraries, and may assume that mine is one of the most extensive, if not the most extensive library in Europe, particularly as regards periodicals and rarities, I have decided the right thing to do is publish a catalogue of it. This I can do thanks to the editor of this magazine, who has most generously placed the columns of his famously well-known journal at my disposal. For ease of consultation I have decided to arrange, alphabetically, my bibliography of the German literature to the end of 1891 inclusive, so long as they are not continuations of older journals. A '†' before the journal concerned means it has ceased to appear. It is shown for every journal exactly what I own, and I permit myself to state that I am willing and want to buy or exchange everything missing, even single issues, and I respectfully ask societies and collectors who have anything that I lack, to let me have it. Naturally, I place my library at the service of philately.

p.108

CATALOGUE
of the Philatelic Library of Supreme Court Counsellor
Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz, to the end of 1893

† means that the journal concerned no longer appears.
I wish to obtain all missing issues.

The Catalogue follows, which does not need translating.

p.213 (July 1897)

This completes the catalogue of my library as it existed when I began this in January 1895 – I have managed to complete it with some success – so may I take the opportunity of adding a few concluding remarks.

The friends of philatelic literature increase from day to day, and so I may safely assume that my words in these columns have elicited interest in not too small a circle of readers. At any rate, many philatelists must have gained their first insight into the range of the literature. Mention must be made of two events which have taken place in the course of the last 12 months. The first is the passage of the library of Friedl's Postage Stamp Museum in Döbling, near Vienna, into the ownership of H. Fränkel of Berlin, whose library is thus raised to the level of one of the premier in Europe. The second is the death of J. K. Tiffany in St. Louis in the USA. He was the world's leading bibliophile. As far as his library is concerned, on the fate of which so many eyes will look with envy, his wife has informed me that it is not likely to go into private hands but rather to go to one of his country's public libraries. To speak frankly, I cannot like the plan, since in my opinion the literary treasures amassed by Tiffany's prodigious industry will be as good as lost to philately as soon as they go into a public library. We must hope that Tiffany's family gives up this idea at the last moment.

As this account has shown, the library catalogue I have published only covers literary productions up to the end of 1893. Enough has appeared since then in the literary field to fill another library, but obviously the most recent literature is much better known than the older, and so I think I may refrain from continuing this register for the period after 1893. I close with the wish for the vigorous further growth and prosperity of our literature and an increase in the appreciation of its value on the part of our collectors.

END

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler
August 1933, Volume 2, Issue 8

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1996

DER PHILATELISTISCHE LITERATURSAMMLER

August 1933, Volume 2, Issue 8

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest includes translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and provides full translations of any articles of special interest.)

pp.36-37 Literature at the WIPA

The International Stamp Exhibition - Wien 1933 - is over and as ever, the technical press is reporting on its progress. Our task is to say something about the literature exhibited and the following report will give a brief account of the literature shown at WIPA.

One is correct in claiming the Vienna Exhibition to be the greatest stamp exhibition to date. It is also obvious that philatelic literature was well represented. It accounted for a quarter of the almost 800 items exhibited. It was not easy for the judges to make a valid comparison between the items shown. To simplify an objective evaluation, the prizes were divided into a number of groups, one of which was devoted to philatelic literature. 193 items of literature were put into the exhibition, made up of 120 books and 73 periodicals. Differing from earlier exhibitions, the literature, with the exception of the official group, was shown under the relevant group of countries. Literature that covered a number of groups, and journals were given their own group. The idea of this division was sound, and certainly helped to ensure that the literature was properly evaluated. It was also much easier to judge literature forming part of a collection that was also exhibited.

The official group consisted only of the journal "L'UNION POSTALE" issued by the World Postal Union in Berne in French, German, English and Spanish, whilst the group "German Postal Undertakings" contained "MEMEL-RUNDSCHAU" so well edited by Ing. Becker. The rest of the literature was divided into 1. Books and pamphlets, 2. Handbooks and catalogues, 3. Journals, and then into the individual groups as follows:-

	Books & Pamphlets	Handbooks & catalogues	Journals
Official group	-	-	1
Austro - Hungary till 1918	3	4	-

Successor states to Austro - Hungary from 1918	2	2	-
German postal undertakings	17	5	1
Italian postal undertakings	2	2	-
North- and East Europe and colonies	5	4	-
West- and South Europe and colonies	9	9	-
Balkan States	4	-	-
Great Britain and colonies	7	3	-
Independant Extra-European States	8	2	-
Items covering several groups	14	18	71
	71	49	73

In the following report, items of literature not exhibited by their author but by their publisher or someone else, which are not specially distinguished by the exhibition classification, will be marked with a (V). Literature shown with or as part of a collection will be marked (S), and literature consisting of or relating to several items by (L).

Handbooks and Brochures

This section is not translated as it is primarily a list of titles.

Journals

A total of 73 journals were exhibited, 63 in one language, 5 in two languages, 3 in three languages and 2 in four languages. The single-language journals were divided amongst 15 languages (18 German, 14 English, 8 French, 4 Spanish, 3 each Italian, Polish and Portuguese, 2 each Dutch and Czech, and 1 each Esperanto, Japanese, Latvian, Rumanian, Russian and Swedish). The two-language journals were German-French, Croatian-German, German-Swedish, Ukranian-German and Greek-French. The three-language journals were Slovenian-Croatian-German, Danish-Norwegian-Swedish and Spanish-French-English. The text of both four-language journals was German, English, French and Spanish.

The remainder of the article is basically a list of periodicals and is not translated.

pp.37-38 JOURNAL SURVEY

The journals given under this heading are only those which actually reach the editor regularly.

Abbreviations used are those of the Deutsche Philatelistische Jahrbuch far as possible. New abbreviations used here and not in the Jahrbuch will be taken as definitive for a future new edition of the Jahrbuch.

List of contents

Complied by Körner, Preuss, Schmittdiel.

The abbreviations for the journals are those used in the Journals Survey. The first number gives the year, the second the issue number, and the third the page number for the article concerned.

Information

December 1992, Issue 8

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

INFORMATION

December 1992, Issue 8

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Dear Member

The end of 1992 is coming towards us with giant strides. Another successful year lies behind us; small setbacks, but a good membership makes up for these.

Our stand at the Stamp Fair in Sindelfingen has again raised our profile somewhat. Personal speed with collectors, whom we have hitherto had only written contact via inter-library loans, has given pleasure on both sides.

As for years past, we also had a stand at Nordposta in Hamburg, as a Grade 2 exhibition right in front of our door could not go short of philatelic literature.

For next year, visits are planned to the exhibitions and fairs in Hamburg-Ojendorf, Harsefeld, Sindelfingen, NAPOSTA in Dortmund and Nordposta in Hamburg.

This year the DBZ published the second part of our library catalogue, and this will appear as a special issue within the next few weeks.

Orders have already been taken in Sindelfingen; you too can place your order by means of a postcard to us.

The printing mistakes in the last part led several readers to take the trouble of writing to us to point them out.

We have in fact already corrected some of them. The result is, we hope, positive. However, everyone is warmly thanked in the name of the editorial board.

The editors also thank the authors for continuing our series of articles. We are happy to be able to present our members and readers with articles once again.

Yours, H.-J. Foster

LIST OF CONTENTS

	page
Foreword	1
Imprint	2
M. Wullenweber: Stamps of the Christ Child	3
W. Nopper The introduction of the foreign postal service after the end of the 2nd World War	10
Readers write	14

END

Societe Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin
Issue 11

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
September 1996

SOCIETE BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

Issue 11

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest includes translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and provides full translations of any articles of special interest.)

Dear Member and Philatelist Friend,

After far too short a holiday, and being up to the eyes in professional work, your editor has finally found time to draw up this 11th issue, which I hope will give you some pleasant surprises.

The first is due to Mr. S. Warquiers who with his usual generosity has agreed for us to publish the index to "Philatliste Belge", the most important magazine (along with the Balasse Magazine) for Belgian philately in the 20th century.

The numerous interruptions there have been to the publication of this have led to often very different styles of printing. Some issues have thus become very rare, and few philatelists have a complete set. This makes it all the more difficult to compile an index for it. Here is a real gap in collecting.

But this is not all

Deciding to take my courage in both hands, I decided, with Mr. Warquiers's support, to compile a Complete Table of Contents to Philatliste Belge. This should be ready by the month of January 1993, and will be the object of a special issue of the Bulletin of the SSB, on laid paper. All Society members will get a free copy. I will say no more. The surprise will be all the nicer.

Also, at the request of certain friends and with their support, we shall publish a second Bibliophilatelic Almanac in 1994. This will be better and more complete than the previous one.

Help from all members will obviously be welcome. They may contact me on this subject from today onwards.

CONTENTS OF NO. 11

- I Complete Forum (continued)
- II Literary event
Index to PHILATELISTE BELGE
- III Glance at the past

END

(This version has been left unedited in case there is any query relating to the translation in its replacement.)

Author (14pt)

Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau 1848 1912

Bibliographic details

(Notes)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

DR. PHIL. ALFRED MOSCHKAU 1848 1912

FROM STAMP COLLECTOR TO PHILATELIST AND HISTORIAN

In the springtime of philately, the young Alfred Moschkau, born on 24th January 1848 in Lobau, Saxony, was one of the first and also the most outstanding stamp collectors in Germany. In the year 1859 he found "5 unused red Saxony three-pfennigs" in his father's correspondence, and these gave rise to his love of philately. Exchanges with his schoolmates soon enabled him to call a collection of over 400 stamps his own. He tried to extend his knowledge of philately by studying the relevant specialist press. At the age of 21 he wrote his own first article for publication, and even in his youth his name became well-known in collectors' circles. He was the editor and author of the "Philatelistische Bibliothek" series, the 4 volumes of which kept appearing in one new edition after another to the turn of the century. At different times he was editor of a very wide range of philatelic journals, stamp tester, and society founder, as well as compiler and editor of stamp catalogues and albums, all of which established his reputation as the leading philatelist in the German language.

In his own lifetime Dr. phil. Alfred Moschkau ranked as "Chief of German Philatelists", as he was called by Gustav Reitz, Edler von Bollheim, in the biography published in Vienna in the year 1882.

In 1879, at the height of his multifarious work for philately, he was confined to bed by a serious liver disease from which he never fully recovered. As a result of this illness he had to limit his philatelic activities, and give up attending meetings and exhibitions. However, his friends and fellow-workers did not forget him, as can be seen from the greetings cards from meetings and exhibitions, especially the special postcard from the organizers of the "League of German and Austrian Philatelic Societies" which was founded in Cologne in 1896.

Dr. phil. Alfred Moschkau was the first serious philatelist who attempted to urge the German stamp collector in the direction of serious research, as illustrated by his contrast collection of the "Franco-German War 1870/71", which he exhibited at the "1st International Exhibition of Postage Stamps" in Vienna from 13-20 November 1881. He showed the postal history of both sides with scientific accuracy against the background of political changes, on the French side from an empire to a republic and on the German side from the North German League via the North German Postal District to the German Empire.

The present biography will provide the philatelist in the first place with a literary memorial of Dr. phil. Alfred Moschkau and thus to maintain for posterity his importance as the founder of scientific and historical philately.

The Author
Bruhl/Cologne, August 1983

I CHILDHOOD AND YOUTH

Otto Carl Alfred Moschkau was born on 24 January 1848 in Lobau in Saxon Oberlausitz. He was the son of Karl August Moschkau (1809-1867), a farrier and veterinarian, and his wife Laura Juliane, nee' Beichling (1814-1862).

His childhood was carefree and happy. The intelligent youngster went to school in his native town, and from very early days showed a particular inclination for history and archaeology. This inclination was strengthened by a collection of over 200 books he was given as a Christmas present when he was still only thirteen. He began on these books with zeal, to quench his thirst for learning. A heart ailment was the result of this strenuous overwork, so that he had to give up the idea of going to University. His elders then directed him towards the commercial world, and so in 1865 he went to the Commercial College in Leipzig, where he began his literary activity by editing the college paper MERKUR. In 1867 he went back again to Leipzig to continue his studies. In the following year he settled down in Dresden, where he became a regular visitor to the local libraries and museums. He also took up literary activity during this period. He was in rapid succession a shopkeeper, a homeopathic doctor, a photographer, a historical author and a novelist, and in all these avocations he carried out extremely fruitful and varied work. On 26 November 1875 he obtained a "Decree as Personal Homeopathic Consultant" from the Russian Countess Galitzin, after he had gained the degree of doctor in the year 1873.

2 HOW I BECAME A PHILATELIST

Recollections of Dr. Alfred Moschkau

Extract from Dr. phil. Alfred Moschkau's book "Zur Geschichte der Philatelie" - collected contributions on the history of stamps and philately, with portraits and illustrations, Leipzig 1879, published by Louis Senf.

My heart condition - a torment to me to the present hour - appeared in a serious form in the autumn of the year 1859, and banished me to a sick-bed. Accustomed to roam through meadow and woods in spite of wind and weather, I was now compelled to keep to my room for months and had to invent all sorts of ways of amusing myself. Though they tended to lose their attraction very quickly since the days seem longer to an invalid and he needs constant variety in his pastimes.

How fortunate therefore - since it might never otherwise have happened - was it for me that my father had an idea for shortening my unwilling hours with the Muses by getting me to go through his very extensive correspondence and discard whatever was obsolete and unimportant. A great trunk full of old documents was given to me to sift, and, pleased to have something useful to do, I set about undoing and sorting them bundle by bundle.

I had no idea at all that people were already collecting stamps over there across the Channel. Regardless of shape or colour, type or age, the letters with stamps on went into the wastepaper basket along with old certificates and receipts and special memoranda. For days on end I had nothing to do but open letters, read them through and either return them to the bundle or tear them in two and throw them under the table.

Then I unexpectedly found in an ordinary letter from Dresden five uncanceled old red Saxon three-pfennig stamps. They had probably been sent to my father as return postage and overlooked by him because they were so insignificant, but I had never seen them before and thought they might be worth saving because they were unused.

As if finding these stamps had made me fall in love with the entire species, from then on I subjected the inside and outside of every letter to an increasingly close scrutiny, - every stamp became a sacrifice to my suddenly awakened passion, and as well as the untouched correspondence, the letters that had been carefully arranged by year were gone through again and a cigar box was speedily filled to the brim with this new and original booty.

What a joy it was to count up the stamps at the end of the task and find the result to be several thousand of these "pretty little pictures".

However, what was the next step? Boredom led me to the idea of combining this treasure with one of my old notebooks, and with a zeal worthy in my father's view of a better object I pasted in my stamps - there is no other word for the way they were fastened. By the end of the second evening this task was finished, and the volume could be put under my pillow to bring "sweet dreams".

Thus, this stamp book contained the rank and file of a "stamp army" arranged by type and value without advice from anyone, and the five three-pfennig stamps were the commanding officers. However, my unresting mind had another idea only a few days later.

What exactly are stamps? What have they got in the way of portraits, coats of arms, and details of value? How many have you got of every type and colour. these and other questions rose up in my mind, and the result was that I got a fresh sixpenny octavo notebook and stuck into it one example of every country and every type, and wrote the name of the country above as decoratively as possible. I was able to put about 60 stamps together in this way - a number which was rapidly trebled, as more and more of my trusty school friends took it on themselves to save stamps for me, and brought me in new ones practically every day. I still remember clearly how the sight of a blue "Cape triangular" sent me practically into ecstasy, how its owner would not make me a present of it, and how with tears in my eyes I bought it for 25 pfennigs cash, a sum that represented two months careful saving out of my pocket money.

A year later, I had used all available means - swaps, with the produce of my father's orchard being a particularly successful medium of exchange for a long time - to reach the number of 250 different stamps in my "sixpenny book", and my collection had been produced in front of most of my father's personal and business friends - of course with a view to further additions! This "notable collection" then found an admirer in the shape of our barber, who on the advice of another person who later became my friend bid "in all seriousness" a mere 8 thalers for the book with the "rubbish" (my father thought the barber was an idiot!), and I was obliged to follow my father's advice and part with my collection.

Of this gigantic sum I got a mere 4 thalers, and my two younger sisters got 2 each - however the nagging grief at the loss of the collection was "mine alone", and did not come to an end until I was able to start a new collection, the necessary basis for which was the rest of my duplicates.

I think I shall have to forego giving a detailed account of how I quickly built up a bigger collection in the following years, how I bought stamps at "fifty pfennigs the lot" along with like-minded friends in Leipzig, with what delight I devoured the first issue of the Zschiesche and Koder "Magazine", and how for the long period of two decades I have remained a "true lover of stamps". This little sketch is just designed to tell my friends near and far: how I became a philatelist and how my first collection arose.

3. DR. ALFRED MOSCHKAU

CHAMPION OF SYSTEMATIC AND FOUNDER OF HISTORICAL PHILATELY

As Dr. Moschkau describes in his recollections, his passion for collecting was roused by the discovery of 5 unused red Saxony 3-pfennigs amongst his father's correspondence, and he did not part with them up to his death in the year 1912. When he arranged his collection of stamps by country and issue he created the first known philatelic special collection, on lines which are now followed all over the world. The sale of his first collection did not interrupt his urge to collect. He steadily built up a new collection on the basis of duplicates he had retained, with the basic stock increasing only slowly because of the condition existing then.

After leaving school he rapidly built his collection up by purchases to a value of over 1,300 marks, so that he could be classed as one of the major collectors of the springtime of philately before 1870. He acquired his philatelic knowledge from the first "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung" a "magazine for stamp collectors" published by Zschiesche and Koder from 1863 onwards. He studied each issue with real avidity to widen his knowledge. He wrote his first philatelic paper at the age of barely 21 so that whilst still young he became a familiar name in the philatelic press and amongst the new societies.

At the age of 19 he became engaged to Frieda Ernestine Pfeifer of Ober-Cunnersdorf in Saxon Oberlausitz. To set up his household he parted for a second time with the bulk of his stamp collection, but he did retain the rarities. After his marriage in the year 1868 these rarities formed the basis of a new collection, as he could not overcome his yearning to collect postage stamps and postal history. He had so many connections with philatelists all over the world that in a very short time he had again built up a collection of over 5,000 stamps, one of the largest in Germany. This was a general collection which would today be neither physically available nor financially possible.

This collection was remarkable for its completeness, since it only lacked 5 stamps from all the then available issues. The collection was repeatedly exhibited to members of the Saxon royal family, including his Majesty King JOHANN (1801-1873) and the then Crown Prince ALBERT (1828-1902) of Saxony, and to many other princes and leading officials of the various German postal undertakings. The first internal exhibition of his stamps collection took place on the 30 August 1868 at the Dresden "Geological Society", where Dr. Moschkau gave a full and particular description of his collection. He thus showed the Society members how the postage stamp could be a geographical mirror of the country concerned.

After combination with the Trauwitz collection, there came the "1st Open Exhibition" of his stamp collection at 5B, Waisenhausstrasse, Dresden, on 10 April 1871 under the auspices of the "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung".

An invitation to visit this exhibition was issued by Dr. Moschkau himself in "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung", no. 2, 1870, in the following words

"The editor responsible for this paper (Dr. Moschkau) intends... to exhibit his important collection of postage stamps. Examination of his extensive collection of 5,000 different stamps and covers, excluding private stamps, may bring many of those who now look down on philately to be more favourable to it. The exhibition itself took place thanks to the Field Post Office in the Franco-German War of 1870/71, and received vigorous support from the Dresden branch of the North German Postal Authority. As far as the exhibition knows, it is the first exhibition of its type in Germany".

Dr. Moschkau's bravura and skill showed it to be entirely possible for an individual to put on a stamp exhibition, providing of course he has the necessary breadth of outlook and organizing talent. He tried to make the Dresdeners aware of his exhibition by adverts in the local press and posters. He showed visitors round the exhibition himself, to impart the historical importance of philately to them, and to interest them in, and will them for, philately. We can thus hail Dr. Moschkau with reason as the father and founder of the German style of exhibition.

a year before this, in 1869, the young Moschkau made the acquaintance of Gustav Vauschte, later the editor and publisher of the Schaubek albums. This led to his collection being used as the basis for the make-up of the Schaubek albums. His friendship with Louis senf, co-founder of the world-famous stamp firm of Senf Bros., Leipzig, should not be forgotten either. In subsequent years it led to a lively exchange of philatelic ideas, and to a literary collaboration on "Senf's Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal".

At the beginning of 1870 he took on the editorship of the "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung" founded by G Bauschke and A. Zschiesche. In October 1871 however he gave this up to put out a periodical of his own. This bore the title "A. Moschkau's Magazin für Markensammler" Organ für die Gesamtinteressen der Markenkunde.

Unfortunately this enterprise of his own did not have a very long life. It ceased to appear as early as June 1872.

Published by Louis Senf, Leipzig, and obtainable from all bookshops

PHILATELIC LIBRARY

by

Dr. Alfred Moschkau

Vol. I

HISTORY OF STAMPS AND STAMP COLLECTING (PHILATELY)

with a description of all known watermarks on stamps, covers etc.

With 105 illustrations

Third, completely revised and expanded edition. Price 1 mark.

Vol. II

HANDBOOK FOR PROOF COLLECTORS

A catalogue of all postal proofs

With illustrations Price 1 mark.

Vol. III

HANDBOOK FOR ALL POSTAGE STAMP COLLECTORS

A catalogue of all postmarks, covers, postcards etc. issued 1653 to date. With 1300 illustrations and portrait of the author: also gives sale prices

4th corrected edition 400 pages 8o

Price 2 marks

Advert by Louis Senf for "Philatelistische Bibliothek", vols. I-III

On the 10th of May he founded the "Verein Deutscher Philatelister" in Dresden, along with law student Treickel and Dr. Arldt, and was its first President. The editing and publishing of the society journal "Vertrauliche Mitteilungen" was undertaken by the 1st President, but only four issues appeared, however. Although the Society only lasted a few years, it was nevertheless the model for all later societies founded in Germany and the German-speaking world.

In the year 1877 he helped to found the "Internationale Philatelisten-Vereins" in Dresden, with its later national and international sections. With interruptions he was editor of, and from 1894 a regular contributor to the society journal "Der Philatelist".

To further philately as a science and popularize it, Dr. Moschkau edited the "Philatelistische Bibliothek" issued by the firm of Louis Senf, later Senf Bros. Ltd. A total of four volumes containing relevant treatises appeared:

Vol. 1: "Watermarks on Postage Stamps"	1871
Vol. 2: "Handbook for proof collectors"	1875
Vol. 3: "Handbook for stamp collectors"	1876
Vol. 4: "The History of Philately"	1879

The "Philatelic Library" was extremely popular with stamp collectors, so that new and expanded editions of vols. 1 and 3 kept appearing till the turn of the century. As well as the Philatelic Library, 1877 saw the publication of "1st German Philatelic Calendar" which has had no imitators to date.

He was particularly interested in the creation of a model collectors album, since the simple accounts of his exhibitions were not adequate for all the valuable details of his stamps. Thus, after lengthy preparation, his "Deutsches Briefmarken-Album appeared in 1876, in a tasteful get-up and format - the names of the countries in raised gold lettering - and useful for the collector with a dictionary.

On the 1 January 1876 Dr. Moschkau became managing editor of "Senf's Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal". He steadily developed the IBJ into the leading scientific organ for German and international philately. In the following years, philately reached its first peak, represented by the foundation of collectors' societies in many towns. The magazine was simply overwhelmed with reports of the founding of such societies, too many to print. Barely the name of most of these societies still survives, but one is still flourishing with unaltered vigour. It is the "Verein für Briefmarkenkunde" in Frankfurt-am-Main. This was reported in the August 1878 issue of the "Journal" as having been "constituted" on the 6th of June, but it was noted somewhat ruefully that "the membership consisted initially of only 15 gentlemen". It rarely happened that a newly-founded society received special editorial greetings from Alfred Moschkau. In this case though he did so with the editorial note:

"We hope this Society blooms and prospers, may the Frankfurt society be a real nursery of philately."

This wish from the patriarch of philately has been wonderfully fulfilled. The society has effectively outlived all other foundations from that a later periods for more than 105 years, benefiting and advancing philately. This Society also retains one of the most extensive and valuable philatelic libraries in the ownership of any Society.

The earliest forgeries appeared in the very springtime of philately. Dr. Moschkau carried out a pitiless war against forgers and their productions. On this basis he was a member of the "Heidelberg Society for the Suppression of anti-Philatelic Elements" and wrote the first article on forged stamps, which was published in the "Heidelberger Bazar für Briefmarken sammler".

In the year 1871 he set up the first testing service for stamps. The tests were free: only the return postage was required. This service was extensively used, e.g. by over 400 philatelists in the years 1874 and 1875. Exposing a Frankfurt stamp dealer during his campaign for "clean" philately led to his incurring a heavy fine which compelled him to sell his house in Oybin and also a part of his collection. Because of the loss of this action, and his own failing health he announced the cessation of his stamp testing in the "Allgemeine Anzeiger" of 1 May 1877.

the fame of Dr. Moschkau as a leading expert in German and international philately extended throughout the German-speaking world. Hence, in the middle of the year 1881 he followed a call to Vienna to become editor of the magazine "Weltpost", formerly the "Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung". the subscribers to and readers of this journal were informed of Dr. Moschkau's arrival as owner and editor by the following notice in no. 7 of the VI volume, dated 15.7.81:

To our Readers

..... we are pleased to be able to announce today that the grand master of German philately Dr. Alfred Moschkau previously of Oybin, is now entering our business not only as co-editor of "Welt-Post" but also as the independent head of our widespread highly renowned stamp business. The name of "Moschkau" is already too well known for it to be necessary to stress what an asset we have gained for "Welt-Post" and for philately in Austria as a whole: our valued clients and customers in particular will be very pleased to hear that their orders will be dealt with by such a famous and knowledgeable expert.

Editorial Section
Siegfried Friedl

It is clear from this notice what a good name and reputation Dr. Alfred Moschkau enjoyed in the ranks of philatelists, and how highly regarded. It is thus no surprise to find him being named 1st secretary of the "Vienna Philatelist's Club" at the same time, and also being entrusted with the organization and direction of the projected "1st Open Exhibition of the postage Stamps of all Nations", the now world-famous Vienna International Postage Stamp Exhibition, the WIPA, held in Vienna from 13 to 20 November 1881. the opening ceremony took place in the presence of a member of the Austrian Imperial Family, high officials of the Royal and Imperial Postal Service, and well-known representatives of the European postal services. This first exhibition of stamps and documents on postal history roused the greatest interest on all sides and drew the attention of everyone concerned to the means by which philately could win new friends and enthusiastic collectors.

p.14 The captions to the two pictures read:

To the left of the exhibition hall and the tables are Dr. Moschkau's exhibits on postal history, and "The Franco-German War, 1870/71".

Anna Genonova, Countess of Longueville the inventor of postage stamps. It was at her suggestion that Fouget introduced the familiar "post-paid letters" by the "decree of 8 August 1653". This forerunner of the post-paid stamp does not detract from the important work of Sir Rowland Hill, who appears in postal history as the founder of the modern postal service.

Dr. Moschkau made a number of valuable items of his own available, and one reporter described these as follows:

"Dr. Moschkau exhibited philatelic memorabilia in Group VII, including: a portrait of the Countess of Longueville, the inventor of the first municipal postal cover, Paris 1653.; an old wood engraving of Sir Rowland Hill, the ultimate founder of the stamp method in 1840, also, in a splendid case, four original letters from Sir Rowland Hill and two photographs; the former addressed to Dr. Moschkau and the latter being presents from the venerable world postal reformer to named exhibitors".

Captions etc. of item on p.17.

Souvenir prospectus in the form of an 1870/71 balloon letter to the first open Postage Stamp Exhibition in Vienna, 1881.

Programme for Dr. Alfred Moschkau's contrast collection "The Franco-German War, 1870/71".

STAMP EXHIBITION IN VIENNA, 1881
ORGANISED BY THE VIENNA PHILATELISTS' CLUB

GROUP III

Exhibit by Dr. A. Moschkau, Vienna.
Editor of World Post, I Kartnnerring, 17,
Diploma of Honour, Paris 1877

THE FRANCO-GERMAN WAR, 1870/71.

North German Confederation
(Protector: King William of Prussia)Postage Stamps

France, Imperial

(Emperor: Napoleon III)Postage Stamps

North German Confederation, mobilizedField post letters and cards

France, mobilizedField post letters and cards

Switzerland mans its bordersField post covers

Germany occupies AlsaceStamps and cards for Alsace

The German Army besieges ParisBalloon letters and cards (originals)

The German Army besieges MetzOriginal balloon letters

Paris introduces the Pigeon PostOriginal pigeon-post dispatches (1500 dispatches on 4« 3 ctm, & original answer cards.

Commune in Paris, all official Private post (Commune) stamps postal service stops, private and covers.
firms carry the letters.

Gambetta as Dictator issuesComplete series of these stamps the first stamps with the head of the Republic.

The War comes to an end.
Germany: EmpireSeries of German imperial stamps
(Emperor: William I)

France: RepublicStamps of the Republic
(President: Thiers)

Count of Chambord, pretenderProofs of a Chambord stamp to the French Throne

Dr. Moschkau also exhibited for the first time his advanced contrast collection on the Franco-German war of 1870/71. On the German side, this illustrated the development from the North German Postal Region to the German Empire by means of stamps and field postage items, and on the French side it illustrated the changes in post from the Empire to the Republic in terms of stamps, field post and balloon letters, and pigeon-post dispatches (see souvenir prospectus for this collection).

This contrast collection shows the scientific acumen with which Dr. Moschkau collected, and at the same time documents the unique stature of this pioneer of philately. It is thus no wonder that Moschkau's collections were highly praised in the local Viennese press, and were celebrated as the highlight of the entire exhibition. Indeed, wrote the local press, to Dr. Moschkau belongs the honour of raising stamp collecting to the level of a science.

However his sojourn in the old Imperial city on the Danube, then one of the leading centres of philately, was only of short duration. An old liver complaint (see his postcard of 29 April 1878) compelled him to return in 1862 to his home in Oberlausitz, where he removed with his founded in 1879 to the Hall of Knights of the old town, and took up his residence in the space available. The philatelist Dr. Moschkau made his home in this splendid romantic castle, to cure his serious liver ailment.

"Museum for the History of Oybin"

However, his life as a philatelist was not interrupted, so that he soon resumed the editorship of "Der Philatelist", the society journal of the International Philatelic Society in Dresden. Moreover he undertook an extensive correspondence with philatelists all over the world, as the covers shown in the appendix illustrate. In 1883 he took on responsibility for the Society magazine GERMANIA- General German Philatelic Journal - from the Frankfurt society for Philately, so as to start a new type of scientific periodical. The aim was to make it the first German magazine for stamp collectors actually edited by a collector, as Dr. Moschkau explained in his issue no. 1. Furthermore, the new periodical was intended to build up the scientific side of philately as vigorously as possible, and at the same time to war against the dishonest elements that were exploiting collectors. In spite of this impressive editorial programme, response to the new journal was so slight that GERMANIA had to cease publication after the appearance of No. 12 of its first volume. thus the offer by his friend Louis Senf of the ????? acting editorship of the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" was very welcome to Dr. Moschkau. He tackled this post with enthusiasm and nerve, and was responsible for the appearance of the IBJ from no. 121 of Vol. XI, 1884, onwards. He carried on till no. 13 of Vol. XIV, when he became editor and contributor. However, he acted as principal editor till the end of Vol. XIV. At the same time he was chief editor of E. Heitmann's "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" up to and including no. 3 of Vol. V, dated 1 February 1892.

Dr. Moschkau did not want for public recognition of his services in developing and promoting the new philately as a coming special branch of historical science. He was the holder of Diploma of the "Societe' Francaise de Timbrologie", Paris, Mastership of the Free German Culture in Goethe's home at Frankfurt-am-Main, and honorary member of philatelic societies in Germany and abroad, the records of which, as far as we have them, are given in the appendix.

1. Philatelic Club, Hamburg (1874)
2. Philatelic Society, Leipsiz (1876)
3. Telegram from "Philatelists", Hirschberg/Schleswig (1879)
4. Wurttemberg Philatelic Society, Stuttgart, (1882)
5. Bavarian Philatelic Society, Munich (1883)
6. Vienna Philatelic Club, Vienna (1883)
7. Society for Philately on Staten Island, Edgewater, SI (1884)
8. "Globus" International Stamp Collectors' Society, Berlin (1891)
9. Alamo City Philatelic Society of San Antonio/Texas/USA, (1895)

Nor were official honours lacking for Dr. Moschkau the title of Royal Saxon Commission Councillor was bestowed on him, and he was awarded the WETTIN medal, accompanied by a gracious private letter.

Dr. Moschkau was Knight of the FRANZ JOSEPHUS Austrian Imperial Family Order and Knight of the HOLY STANISLAUS Russian Imperial Family Order.

Even during his lifetime Dr. Moschkau ranked as "The Chief of the German Philatelists", as Gustav Reitz - Elder von Bollheim and Chairman of the Vienna Philatelic Club wrote in his biography of the year 1882, as well as pioneer of systematic and historical philately. He wears the crown of being the driving force in the springtime of philately. His systematic and scientific labours raised philately to the level of a serious branch of study for the history of posts and commerce, and are the foundations for his undying posthumous fame.

The first and one of the greatest scientific philatelists from the springtime of philately.

Dr. Otto Carl Alfred Moschkau closed his eyes for ever on the 27 May 1912. A truly great and noble person ended his earthly existence, honoured and unforgotten by the great fellowship of philatelists all over the world.

May his memory be revered.

OBITUARY

The obituary on the old master of philately Dr. Alfred Moschkau in "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" no. 13 of 6 July, 1912 exactly expresses the great loss suffered by philately. Its finale reads:

"We do not wish to end this obituary without again making plain that the whole of philately has a great deal for which to thank the deceased, and expressing the hope that living philatelist, especially the many belonging to the younger generation will devote themselves to our hobby with the same tenacity and enthusiasm as Alfred Moschkau showed his whole life long."

(Joseph Kroger, Editor.)

DR. MOSCHKAU IN THE JUDGMENT OF HIS CO-WORKERS

Superior Provincial Court President Dr. Carl Lindenberg (1850-1928) writes as follows about Dr. Alfred Moschkau in his article "From Bygone Days" in "Illustrierte Briefmarken - Journal" no. 11 of 1 June 1913:

".....of course I only collected stamps and covers, and paid no attention to either watermarks or perforations on the stamps. Both characteristics, now in vogue with every half-way intelligent collector, were then as good as unknown. Perforations only began to play a part in Germany towards the end of the sixties, and the first accurate studies of water-marks were published some years later. Dr. Moschkau's contributions in this respect were very great. Like so much else that we owe to this old-established philatelist, they are now almost forgotten. He and Treickel truly were the pathfinders in the field of the scientific treatment of philately in Germany.

Those of us who struggled for so long in darkness feel eternal gratitude to him who first caused a ray of light to penetrate our gloom. Today, when we are working with recognised concepts, established principles and a fixed terminology, it is hard to retain any idea of how philately developed. It is more than time for a comprehensive history of philately, especially of philately in Germany.

ENDPIECE

According to the personal recollections of his nephew, Dr. Rudolf Moschkau, who has himself since died, his widow exchanged his stamp collection with a Zittau coal merchant for Louse coal during the inflation after the First World War. From there the collection passed into the hands of a Zittau stamp dealer, who broke it up and put it on sale. The remnant of the collection, some 60 sheets, was rescued by a fervent philatelist, who later bequeathed it to the DDR Cultural League in Zittau. On the other hand, the historic WETTIN collection of old manuscripts, mandates, prephilatelic letters and pictures remained intact. It was acquired by the Aittau Museums Union as early as 1912, and was handed over to the Zittau City Museum for careful preservation and archiving.

4. ALFRED MOSCHKAU AND THE 1ST LEIPZIG STAMP CATALOGUE OF THE YEAR 1871

A contribution from Dr. Cerutti, Milan

Biographers have gladly undertaken to draw the attention of the philatelic world to the meritorious work of Dr. Alfred Moschkau, the founder of scientific philately and the world's first great philatelist. His magnificent collection was so important that it could serve as the basis for one of the first stamp catalogues in the world.

As early as the year 1869 the young Alfred Moschkau made the acquaintance of Gustav Bauschke, a well-known Leipzig stamp dealer, whom he told about his then very extensive stamp collection. Using the Moschkau collection and an anagram of his own name, Bauschke then put out the first "Schaubek album", which was in great demand amongst collectors from the start.

In the year 1871 the "Catalogue of all stamps issued from the year 1840 to the present day. Based on the Alfred Moschkau collection and edited by G. Schaubek" appeared in Leipzig. Accordingly to this catalogue, Moschkau's collection must have included great rarities, entires as well as stamps. We can find what was missing from the catalogue by comparing it with present day ones. For example, Mauritius begins in the 1871 catalogue with the issue of 1856/57, and gaps are to be found principally in the old German stamps. On the other hand, the stamps of the former German states are present practically in their entirety, as the entries in the catalogue show. Moschkau did not only collect one specimen of every stamp, he also took into account variations in colour, watermarks etc., or Schaubek's catalogue would not mention them. Schaubek remarks in the preface that he placed particular stress on details of the year of issue, and careful separation of what had been looked on as slight fluctuations but were in fact different issues, often to be distinguished by differences in the watermark. The Alfred Moschkau collection "currently one of the most extensive and important in Germany" served the editor as an outstanding aid. In view of the early state of philately, it was a stunning achievement to bring such a collection together.

It is no longer surprising to find a catalogue of the year 1871 based on a private collection. There was hardly any co-operation between postal authorities and collectors' groups, especially not overseas. What could a catalogue editor turn to, if not to an important private collection?

Now let us look at the catalogue of 1871, which is in the possession of the author of these lines. Even purely externally it can only be viewed with emotion. It has an octavo format, and includes 94 pages, with two extra ones for the stamps issued whilst it was being printed. This total of 96 pages illustrates not only the stamps of the entire world but also entire series, so that the numbering is slightly different from that used in present-day catalogues for stamps alone. For example, under "Austria-Hungarian Monarchy", no. 1 is the 1 kr yellow, no. 2 the 1 kr orange, nos. 7-10 are the famous periodical newspaper stamps ("Mercuries"), nos. 25 and 26 the 1 kr light grey and greyish-lilac of 1861, then the entire series for 1861 follow as nos. 27 to 34, and so on.

The prices are given in silver groschen and half-groschen, which is surprising since the place of publication, Leipzig, lay within the region of the Saxony currency (new groschen).

The over-valuation of the foreign stamps is very noticeable. It is probably explicable by the fact that stamps were difficult to obtain from overseas. Stamp no. 1 from Corrientes (today a province of Argentina), for example, is quoted in the catalogue at 50 silver groschen, and the other Corrientes stamps at 40 silver groschen each, with the pink one not included. On the other hand, the Oldenburg stamp no. 1 is given at 10 silver groschen, no. 5 at 15 silver groschen, the Austrian 1858 newspaper stamp, the blue 1 kr, at 1« silver groschen, and the 18 kr from the North German Postal Zone at 1 silver groschen. This overpricing of foreign stamps went on to the beginning of the present century, as the author of these lines found when he began to buy stamps as an eager schoolboy. He obtained many South American and Australian stamps via his father's business, and these were fairly snatched out of his hands by his classmates in exchange for old German stamps.

The office of the German Stamp Journal in Dresden sold stamps at these prices "only as authentic and perfect examples". The mention of authenticity shows that forgeries were about even then. Stamps which the German Stamp Journal could not supply right away had no price given in the catalogue, and this happened very often, particularly in the case of foreign stamps. The stamp countries are arranged in ABC order. Thus Basle for example appears under "B" Neuenburg under "N", Winterthur under "W" and so on.

All in all the catalogue reflects a long-lost period of early philately, so that it can be looked on as a philatelic and bibliographical jewel. However, it could never have been printed had Moschkau not built up such an extensive collection.

5. FROM "SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS" IN DRESDEN - 1871

Conditions For Membership and Invitation to 1st General Meeting

The President of the Society, Dr. Alfred Moschkau, gave a humorous welcome to new members of the "Society of German Philatelists", as we may read in "Vertraulichen Mitteilungen", no. 1 for the year 1872: "New entrants are welcomed with open arms, those still hesitating are eyed askance, and latecomers must feel honoured if they are let in after imploring!"

Invitation to the 1st General Meeting of the "Society of German Philatelists", held in Dresden on July 14 1872, from the "Magazin für Briefmarken Sammler", no. 2/71. Editor and publisher Dr. Alfred Moschkau, Oybin.

THE FIRST GENERAL MEETING OF THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS will be held at Hempel's Restaurant, Old Market, Dresden, on 14 July from 11 am onwards

AGENDA

1. Presentation of annual report
2. Reading of society accounts
3. Nomination of honorary members
4. Motions proposed, see Confidential Communications Nos. 1, 2, 3
5. Election of new officials
6. Delivery of lectures

Members of the Society, and anyone interested in its aims, are earnestly requested to favour this meeting with their attendance.

THE COMMITTEE OF THE SOCIETY

Alfred Moschkau, President, Oybin. Law student A. Treichel, Vice-President, Berlin, Dr. Th. Arldt, Secretary, Dresden.

NB. on conclusion of the agenda it is hoped to take lunch together and if possible make a short excursion through the attractive surroundings of Dresden. Gentlemen who wish to give talks are asked to get in touch with one of the undersigned.

6.REPORT ON THE "1ST GERMAN PHILATELISTS' DAY", ON 14 JULY 1872 IN DRESDEN

The idea of a Philatelists' Day occurred to Commission Councillor Dr. Alfred Moschkau when he invited the members of his "Society of German Philatelists" to the first general meeting in Hempel's Restaurant in the Old Market at Dresden on the 14 July 1872 from 11 am onwards, and invited "anyone interested in the aims of the Society to favour the meeting with their attendance".

Unfortunately attendance at this open General Meeting was poorer than even the blackest pessimist could have foreseen. it is amusing to read the words in which Society president Moschkau himself depicts the course of this day.

"As decided, the meeting was called in Dresden, at Hempel's Restaurant in the Old Market, a private room was reserved, and the President arrived punctually with the minutes and accounts. The table had been laid for about 50 participants. However, neither the restaurateur nor the President had reckoned with our friends the philatelists. Of the room's two windows, one was occupied by the President, the other by the head waiter. Every man, young or old, who crossed the Old Market in the direction of Hempel's was greeted with silent but heartfelt pleasure as at last "a philatelist", a hand was ready to be extended to every passer-by, and the lips were open to give him a hearty welcome. From minute to minute, quarter to quarter, the hands crept round the dial of the clock on Holy Cross Church, at length the head waiter disappeared from the window and the room itself with a look of pity, and the President began to sweat with anxiety as he faced the bitter disillusionment about the level of interest he has assumed to exist. Then, more than an hour after the meeting should have begun he opened the meeting-room, and like a bird of good fortune appeared a friend in need, Herr Albrecht from Berlin, to help to bear the disappointment. His rail connection has prevented him from getting there earlier. Since none of the Dresden members has felt obliged to turn up, not even the Secretary or Treasurer, the two of us went on in friendship and harmony to elect a new Committee, go through the agenda, give each other advice, admonish the bad "philatelists", drew up plans and castles in the air for the future of philately, then sitting together at a festive board declared the "festival" open, drank the health of the society and the subject, and went together on the "festival boat" for a trip to Loschwitz. And the end of this story? We separated towards evening in the consciousness of having done our duty and each gained a friend. The restaurant owner let us off paying for the room, "on account of our misfortune", and the President proposed that such "days" should not be repeated till further notice, with the esteemed member signifying his approval in writing as required by our statutes. However, the Society founder's original intention of advancing philately by personal contact looked very hopeful.

7.DR. ALFRED MOSCHKAU AS AUTHOR IN THE PHILATELIC PRESS

7.1 Opinion of Victor Suppantschitsch, Graz

The philatelic book expert Victor Suppantschitsch, born in Laibach 31.10.1838, died in Graz whilst President of the Senate on 2.3.1919 wrote as follows of Dr. Alfred Moschkau.

"..... the most important phenomenon in the field of German philatelic literature..."

which documents his peak position as an author.

Victor Suppantschitsch was entitled to make this evaluation, since during his lifetime he owned the largest private philatelic library, built up over the period from 1861 to 1900. It included:

1800 books and separate monographs on postage stamps and 3037 complete volumes of philatelic journals, with over 30000 individual issues.

His catalogue publication

"Bibliography of the entire German philatelic literature" has never been equalled to date.

The next page gives an original reproduction of an article on "Dr. Moschkau's German Stamp Album" from the periodical "Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung" of 15 December 1876, which is a splendid witness to the creative force of the producer and editor.

8.DR. ALFRED MOSCHKAU AND PHILATELY

Achievements and Chronology

8.1 Dr. Moschkau as Editor

1869: first contribution as author in the specialist press.

1870: editor of the "Deutch Briefmarken-Zeitung" founded in Dresden by C. Bauschke and A. Zschiesche. Gave this up in October 1871 to devote himself to a specialist magazine of his own.

1871: From July on, editor of his own journal, with the title "A. Moschkau's Magazine fur den Markensammler-Organ fur die Gesamtinteressen der Markenkunde". The magazine appeared till June 1872.

1874: On 1 January appeared the first number of "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal", from the firm of Louis Senf, Leipzig, with the collaboration of Alfred Moschkau. The preface to the new journal was written by Alfred Moschkau under the title "Good Luck!"

1876: Editor responsible for "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" from no. 25 of Volume V to no. 90 of Volume VIII on June 1 1881.

1881: On 1st July took on the editor-ship of the Viennese "Weltpost" produced by the firm of Siegmund Friedle, Vienna. He left this post as early as no. 10 of the 1882 volume.

1883: Publisher of the Society journal GERMANIA - General German Philatelic Journal - for the Frankfurt philatelic society. However this ceased to appear on 20 December 1883 after 12 numbers.

1884: Again became editor of the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal", from no. 121 of vol. XI. He was managing editor up to no. 13 of vol. XIV, and after this was only chief editor, the managing editor-ship being transferred to the firm of Louis Senf from no. 14 onwards. He gave up the editor-ship completely at the end of the year 1887.

1888: From 1st April he became Chief Editor of the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" founded by E. Heitemann on Jan. 1st 1888. Remained in this position till no. 3 of Vol. 5 dated 1st February 1892.

8.2 Dr. Moschkau As Author

Editor and author of "Philatelistische Bibliothek".

1871: Watermarks on Stamps, Covers, Postcards Etc.
Includes a history of stamps and stamp collecting (Philately). Appeared in a total of 4 editions. Vol. 1.

The first German work on watermarks as a protection for philatelists against forgeries.
Vol. 2.

1875: Handbook for Proof Collectors
Lists of all official postal proofs known at that date. Vol. 3.

1876: Handbook for Stamp Collectors
Illustrated catalogue of all postage stamps, covers and postal wrappers issued from 1653 to December 1875, with many explanatory notes, reports on forgeries and new printings, with 2000 pictures of stamps. Second enlarged and corrected edition of the 1874 "Catalogue". Vol. 4.

1879: On The History of Philately
Collected contributions on the history of postage stamps and philately. Frau von Longueville, inventor of the postage stamp - Sir Rowland Hill, founder of the postage stamp system - Dr. Heinrich von Stephan, Postmaster-General; of the German Empire - Prince William of Prussia - Princely Philatelists - Who Actually Collects Postage Stamps? - Reminiscences - Stamps at the Vienna World Exhibition - The Covers of Sardinia and their Forgeries? Imitations - A Curiosity from New Brunswick - "The Conell Stamps" - Collecting Whole Covers - Collecting Cancellation Stamps - The Stamps of the Paris Commune - American Post Office Paper Money - Chinese Covers - The Local Postage Stamps of Russia - Detecting Forgeries - Forgeries: I : Basle dove - II : Naples 1860 with Cross of Savoy - III : Cover issue of 1856, Mecklenburg-Schwerin - IV : 1st Philippines issue. V : Roman 1 Scudo and 50 Baiacci - VI : The Certifications of Columbia and their Imitations - VII and VIII : Two New Forgeries :

Sardinia and Finland - IX : Zurich Forgeries - X : a Fraudulent Issue from Greenland - XI : Latest Forgeries : Japan - XII : Forged Tuscan Stamps : XIII : The 27 para from Moldavia - forged - XIV : Peru - Medio Peso - XV : Spanish Bear - Also a reminiscence for my friends.

8.3 Dr. Moschkau as Philatelist Editor and compiler of stamp albums and catalogues:

1871: Catalogue of All Postage Stamps Issued From the Year 1840 to the Most Recent Times
Based on the Alfred Moschkau collection, compiled and edited by G. Schaubek.
Prices given relate only to genuine examples in fine condition, from the offices of the German Postage Stamp Journal in Dresden. Leipzig 1871.

1874: Catalogue of All Postage Stamps, Covers, Postcards, Postal Wrappers and Local Stamps of All Countries Issued From 1818 to April 1874.
This was the first comprehensive German catalogue for all specialities in philately, and thus the prototype and precursor of all the stamp catalogues that appeared later.

1874: Schaubek-Albums in 2 Vols. a) For Stamps b) For Entires Developed from and based on the national collections of Dr. Alfred Moschkau.
The album for entires was particularly important, since it was the first collectors' handbook of the type. It consisted of loose sheets of cardboard with a border and a decorated space for the name of the country, which were generally quite blank/empty and could be kept in a portfolio.

1876: German Stamp Album By Dr. Alfred Moschkau.
The new, extended and improved edition is beyond doubt the peak of the then development of stamp albums. As well as the greatest possible clearness of arrangement for the individual stamp countries, the various sheets give the coats of arms of these countries with outstanding detail and precision. There is also a short dictionary combined with a luxurious make-up, which go to make this edition a gem amongst stamp albums.

1879: Dr. Alfred Moschkau's Permanent Album For Postage Stamps was also particularly designed to take uncut postcards, postal orders, covers, parcel labels etc. With a precise guide "Please take care in using this album".

The "Permanent Album" was followed in 1896 by Hugo Krotzsch's "Detailed Illustrated Catalogue of German Postage Stamps With Particulars of Size of Issue, Reminders ... based on the well-known excellent Permanent Album for Postage Stamps. With Notes on Prices".

8.4 Dr. Moschkau as Exhibitor - Stamp Tester - Society Founder.

1870: Internal exhibition of his extensive collection of stamps at the "Geological Society" in Dresden, to give the members a new angle on the countries of the world.

1871: 1st Public Stamp Exhibition of his collection in Dresden in aid of the field postal services during the Franco-German War of 1870/71.
At that time the collection included over 5,000 stamps and was outstanding for its completeness, since it only lacked 5 stamps of all the known issues of the period.

- 1871: Setting Up of the First Stamp Testing Service in Germany
Testing was free, for return postage only. Extensive use was made of this service; in each of the years 1874 and 1875 over 400 philatelists turned to it. In the long run he could not sustain this heavy work load, particularly in view of his failing state of health and the loss of a lawsuit against a forger, so that he announced the end of his testing service in the "Allgemeinen Anzeiger" - a supplement to the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" - on the 1st of May 1877.
- 1871: Foundation of the "German Philatelists' Society" in Dresden on the 10th May 1871, along with A. Treichel and Dr. Arldt. The first President was Dr. Alfred Moschkau, who also produced and edited the "Confidential Communications".
Although the Society only lasted a few years, it was the model for all those founded later in Germany and the German-speaking world.
- 1877: Foundation of the "International Philatelic society" in Dresden, with the collaboration of Alfred Moschkau. Society magazine, "Der Philatelist". Dr. Moschkau was the editor, with an interruption, and from 1894 onwards he was a regular contributor to the magazine.
The Society quickly gained international recognition and had sections throughout the German-speaking world and abroad.
- 1881: First Secretary of the "1st Open Exhibition of the Postage Stamps of All Countries".
The now world-famous Vienna International Postage Stamp Exhibition, WIPA, held in Vienna from 13-20 November 1881.
Dr. Moschkau himself showed a number of postal-historical memorabilia, as well as, for the first time, his contrast collection on the Franco-German war of 1870/71. This showed the scientific acumen with which Dr. Moschkau collected, and documents the unique greatness of this pioneer of philately. His collections were highly praised in the Viennese local press, and celebrated as the high point of the entire exhibition. Indeed, wrote the local press, to Dr. Moschkau belongs the credit of having raised stamp collecting to a science (see the introduction and Souvenir Prospectus to this contrast collection at the first WIPA in Vienna 1881).

9 HONOURS FOR THE PIONEER OF GERMAN PHILATELY DR. PHIL. ALFRED MOSCHKAU

The idea of organizing a group of philatelists to promote personal contacts and the exchange of ideas and to arrange meetings is as old as philately itself. One of the first attempts to form such a group was made by the Head of German philatelists, Dr. Alfred Moschkau, when he founded the "Society of German Philatelists" in Dresden on the 1st of May 1871 along with A. Treichel and Dr. Arldt. He was its first President, and invited the members and anyone else interested to attend the first general meeting at Hempel's Restaurant in Dresden on the 14th July 1872. although only one philatelist turned up, from Berlin, this was the basis for future Philatelic Days. They took place in 1889 in Mainz, 1890 in Frankfurt-am-Main, 1891 in Dresden, 1892 in Prague, 1893 in Berlin, 1894 in Kiel, 1895 in Mannheim and 1896 in Cologne in connection with the foundation of the "Bundes Deutscher und Oesterreichischer Philatelistenvereine" as is shown by the card reproduced below sent to Dr. Moschkau by his friend E. Plotz, committee member and librarian of the "Internationale Philatelisten-Verein" in Dresden. To round off this event, all participants took a steamer ride on the Rhine, when the ship's post had a special cancellation for them. Dr. Moschkau could not take part in the Cologne meeting because of his illness, as is also shown by the greeting from later Philatelic Days, a selection of which we print in the appendix.

Dr. Moschkau, the Head of German philately, died in Oybin in 1912 after a long and severe illness, so that the year 1987 is the 75th anniversary of his death. This date will be the occasion for the German Philatelic Day 1987 to honour the memory of this champion of the community of ideas amongst all philatelists. This will be done by the issue of a special stamp for the "Day of the Stamp 1987", special cancellations, and a memorial postcard. The following suggestions and designs have been put forward by the two authors.

10 DR. ALFRED MOSCHKAU AND SCIENCE

Homoeopathic Doctor, Student and author on Local History

The biography of Dr. Moschkau as a pioneer of philately would be incomplete if we ignored his other activities. For instance, he carried on an intensive correspondence with the great men of his time, e.g. Charles Darwin, Ernst Haeckel et al.

In the year 1875 he followed a call to become a teacher at the Koch Institute for Natural Medicine in Dresden, as he was an enthusiastic champion of the teachings of Samuel Hahnemann. His patron, the Russian Count Galitzin, appointed him as his personal homoeopathic consultant, on the 26th November 1875. To propagate his ideas on a natural life-style and therapeutics, he issued a popular-science journal "Der arztliche Hausfreund" from 1876 onwards, and this homoeopathic magazine became very popular amongst the people of Saxony.

For decades Dr. Moschkau was one of the few students of and writers on local history in Oberlausitz. The unique breadth of his interests is revealed by his writings on Oybin, on the knights' and robbers' castles of Oberlausitz, the High Church, the tombstones on the soldiers' graves of 1813 in Oberlausitz, on Wehlen, and by his 1872 "Guide to Oberlausitz".

From 1876 on he edited the local-history magazine SAXONIA, from 1879 the tourist paper "Oywina", and from 1884-1889 the magazine "Lausatia". In 1888 he founded the "Gebirgsfreunde" and edited it for two years. For some years from 1893 he was co-editor of the magazine "Aus deutschen Bergen". From 1898 to 1901 he was editor of the history paper "Aus der Heimat", and from 1907 to 1911 of the "Blätter für Leimatkundliche Geschichte". The last two were supplements to daily papers, whereas all the others were independent magazines.

Dr. Moschkau was an honorary member of the "Oybin and Jonsdorf Mountaineering Society", a member of the "Oberlausitz Scientific Society" and the "Globus" Natural History Society of Zittau. He edited the "Archiv für die Geschichte DES Oybin".

As a collector of the relics of the historical past of Oberlausitz, he founded the "Museum for the History of Oybin". In the year 1883 he moved his collected treasures to the Knights' Hall in the castle. This museum was privately owned, and was not taken over by the town of Zittau till the year 1937. In founding this museum, Dr. Moschkau earned the undying gratitude of his Oberlausitz homeland, which today finds suitable expression in honouring his person.

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 58

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 58

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

FOREWORD

No 58 of Literatur-Nachrichten represents the 5th issue during my period of office as Chairman of Section B (Literature) of the Society of German Philatelists. Their size has remained approximately the same. My co-workers and I have also evaluated about 140 philatelic periodicals over the past year. During my last visit to the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, a visit made possible by the committee of the society of German Philatelists, it was agreed with the then librarian, Councillor Markle, that further periodicals which we have not so far been able to evaluate would be made available for this purpose.

As has been the rule, Literatur-Nachrichten has only been able to appear once a year. The time that my co-workers and I have to devote to this purely voluntary work is considerable, especially in view of the fact that we all still have jobs to take the main part of our attention. I need say no more about financial questions, since publication has been made possible by the generous support of the society of German philately and Postal History. If you have already paid your subscription, the attached notice does not apply to you. As in the previous year, I would add that sorting the paid from the unpaid subscriptions would take a great deal of time.

As in every other year, I again make the following request: if you like Literatur-Nachrichten, please make it more widely known and canvas for it. If you have objections to make to it, please let me know, as my ear is always open to constructive criticism.

In conclusion my thanks are due to the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, councillor Merkle, and to Herr Raupp, the head of the library of the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies for their support. I would also like to express heartfelt thanks to my co-workers, Messrs. Baum of Dusseldorf, Danesch of Schwelm, Drs. Debo of Munich, Eilers of Stockelsdorf, Rossberg of Berlin and Wolffel of Helsinki, for their work on the index and the literature review.

Fritz Gaedicke

THE PRESIDENT

Thanks to the work of many active and diligent members, the Society of German Philatelists has been built up into a powerful organization that has gained international recognition and is in the happy position of enjoying particularly good relations with its Post Office authorities. It needs a President who can maintain what has been entrusted to him.

Wilhelm Kahler, solicitor and notary in Lubeck, was entrusted with the highest office in our Society at the 22nd annual general meeting in Soest. We express to him the wish and hope that he will keep up standards and increase in esteem.

He was born in Mecklenburg on 13.8.1902. As early as 1907 he came to Lubeck, which was his second home. After studying in Kiel, Vienna and Munich he came back to Lubeck as a solicitor.

Wilhelm Kahler is a member of the committee of the Chamber of Solicitors and Notaries in Schleswig, and his professional activities have led him to become chairman of a supervisory board and a member of many commissions.

His bent for science has led him to the presidency of a society in Lubeck that has several hundred members and aims at popularizing science.

He came to postage stamps early. He also has a keen interest in the collection of engravings and coins. As a collector he has always preferred Lubeck, Bergedorf, Mecklenburg and Schleswig-Holstein. He has also collected on the margins of philately, private post, ships' post and field post. Occupying himself with stamps has provided him with rest and relaxation after his demanding professional activities.

For over 30 years Wilhelm Kahler has headed the Lubeck Society of Stamp Collectors. he took over the chair of the Hamburg/Schleswig-Holstein State Society in succession to Richard Renner. It was Renner who also introduced him to the Society committee, to which he has belonged since 1957.

With the experience of age and the freshness of youth in outlook and approach, Wilhelm Kahler is sure to develop the BDPL on the right lines.

Werner Munzberg

Subscriptions: Subscribers who have not yet paid their money for 1969 are asked to forward this to P.O. Box Berlin West 1574.66 - special account in the name of F. Gaedicke. The subscription is 9.50 DM for home members, and 10.50 DM for foreign members.

Report of Society Section B for 1968

As usual, the greater part of my report will be devoted to Literatur-Nachrichten. This publication has now reached a size of 160 pages. Over the past year my co-workers and I have evaluated more than 140 philatelic periodicals. At the same time over 100 new books and catalogues were reviewed in the last issue. You will thus find a survey of the literature of the previous year in every issue.

For the time being, Literatur-Nachrichten can only appear once a year, since all the co-workers have professions and I cannot expect them to give up any more time. Moreover the financial question plays a considerable part : printing alone costs DM 10- per copy. The inland purchase price including postage is only DM 9.50 on the other hand. Publication would not be possible without the generous support of the Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History. Moreover I send out over 150 copies for review or exchange. It is thus obvious that the incoming subscription just cover the expenses of the section. Increased expenses in 1966 and 1967 meant however that I had to ask the Committee to cover the balance. Nevertheless in the five years that I have been at the head of this Section I have only cost the Society about 500 DM. If Literatur-Nachrichten were to appear twice a year as requested, there would necessarily be a considerable increase in costs. It would not be possible either purely from the viewpoint of the work involved. From No. 57 onwards I increased the price from 8.50 to 8.50 DM plus 1 DM for post and packing, and hope this will enable me to balance my books again. Because of the heavy postal traffic, a great many enquiries come from abroad, and the return postage is considerable. Just sending the literature back to Munich after evaluation costs about 150 DM per year.

I have again canvassed intensively, and my aim is still to get the majority of the societies that belong to the Society of German Philatelists to subscribe to Literatur-Nachrichten as well. As I mentioned last year, sending out specimen copies was not worth while. However I was very pleased to get more than 10 new societies as members as a result of the last meeting in Karlsruhe. I am very glad that we are meeting today in North Rhine - Westphalia, and I hope to recruit some new societies for Literatur-Nachrichten here as well. Money should not be an obstacle, or are there really societies who cannot afford 10 DM per year for the literature. Whilst I am trying to recruit you as subscribers to Literatur-Nachrichten, I would like to explain again briefly what you will find in this pamphlet. You will find in the literature survey the articles that have appeared in the journals evaluated, arranged by country and topic plus details of where to find them. You can get these articles to read from the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library.

The request I put forward in my last report, for copies of all publications to be sent to me, has had only limited success. There are working parties whose publications I can simply never get hold of e.g. those for Baden and Prussia. Also, people generally forget to send me a copy of the catalogue of their exhibitions. May I renew my request to send me a copy of all your publications. I am thinking not only of the Working Parties, but of all the societies that issue communications. I am also willing to publicize interesting new publications in Literatur-Nachrichten to the Working Parties and societies, as I did in No. 57 for the Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde and for Infla-Berlin. Let me have a short manuscript, and I will see what I can do for you.

I have also taken care to enter Literatur-Nachrichten in the literature class at even the smaller exhibitions, so as to publicize it. Although the exhibitors have kept the copies, I have never had a letter of thanks or a publication in return. they have not even acknowledged receipt. Here, as in the next report, the honorary members of the Society of German Philatelists might show a little more interest. I have sent some societies past issues as gifts for their libraries, and here again some of them did not bother with thanks.

This was my report on Literatur-Nachrichten, the signboard of both Section B and the Society of German Philatelists. Information asked for on literature questions will be answered as far as possible.

As usual, I will close by expressing my thanks to all those who have helped with my work as Section Chairman. Thanks to the Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History for financial support. Hearty thanks to my tireless co-workers, Messrs. Baum of Dusseldorf, Danesch of Schwelm, Dr. Debo of Munich, Eilers of Stockelsdorf, Dr. Rossberg of Berlin and Herr Wolffel of Helsinki. My especial thanks, this year as every year, to the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, Councillor Merkle, who has vigorously supported my work and met all my requests as far as possible. i also thank my deputy, Herr Raupp, for his support and co-operation. I thank everyone who has supported my work by sending me literature to evaluate. Amongst the quiet helpers whom one normally never sees, I would like to thank my dispatch division, namely my wife and daughter.

In conclusion, my annual request to you to canvas for philatelic literature in your societies, circle of friends, and your social occasions. Thank you.

Fritz Gaedicke

New Head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library

The long-time head, W. Merkle, retired at the beginning of the year. His successor has been named as City Chief Inspector Gleixner. We have confirmed by personal conversation that we shall go on working well together. I wish Herr Gleixner much happiness in his new sphere of activity directed to the benefit of philatelic literature.

F. Gaedicke

END

RABIER, Pascal
The French Philatelic Press
[Regard sur la Presse Philatélique Française]
2 Volumes, Diplôme d'Etudes Supérieures Spécialisées, University of Paris, Institut National de Gestion des PTT d'Evry, Paris, 1986.,
Second (revised) edition, Pascal Rabier, 1987, i + 586pp.

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 2000

THE FRENCH PHILATELIC PRESS

The study of the 74 commercial titles from the French philatelic press from 1864 to our own day has been based on 12 criteria. Recorded on index cards, the philatelic journals are described and annotated as products (conception, fabrication, marketing). We use four categories based on the editorial content:

- category 1 : stamp dealer's publicity sheet or advertising journal. Editorials, philatelic briefs, reports are all secondary. The magazine publishes mostly the lists of "special offers", philatelic supplies, books, and current prices of stamps on offer by the dealer, with publicity from advertisers. This is the publication that gets thrown away (catg. 1);
- category 2 : journal of information and philatelic events. The main part of its contents deals with new stamp issues, philatelic news and gossip, and advice to collectors. This type of publication aims at keeping the novice or experienced collectors abreast of novelties. Once it is no longer topical, the magazine is discarded (catg. 2);
- category 3 : journal of general philatelic documentation. This type of journal is aimed at collectors as a whole, to give them a "general philatelic culture". All branches of philately are dealt with in serious and enriching studies. Information and new issues are treated equally. The magazine is retained in collectors' libraries. If space is a problem, some collectors cut out and classify the philatelic articles so as to turn them up when wanted (catg. 3) :
- category 4 : journal of specialist philatelic documentation. The journal is aimed at a type of reader : the specialist collector. Researches in a particular domain are brought to the attention of all specialists in this domain. This "specialist philatelic culture" is supported by this type of publication. Usually the magazine is retained in the collector's personal library (catg. 4).

To facilitate research, three indexes are published at the end of the present volume.

- an index of managers and editors-in-chief of the philatelic journals studied, with a short biography,
- an index of titles, with the changes in or developments of certain names of journals, and the dates of foundation and cessation of the title,

- an index of illustrations, reproductions of covers, accompanied by references to examples.

To assist the reader, we have introduced "reference points":

- chronological landmarks relating to the press, postal history and philately:
- economic landmarks relating to the prepayment rate for an ordinary inland letter, compared with the price per number of the philatelic press at each epoch.

We hope this work will be useful to all our readers. But we do ask them to:

- let us have all useful details concerning the extreme date of journals, or of other commercial publications not cited:
- to donate missing issues to the Library of the Postal Museum, so as to complete the collection of periodicals, and lighten the task of the researcher.

Pascal RABIER
134, Rue Lecourbe
Paris 75015

1.2.2. – CORPORATE BODIES

The philatelic press titles in the overall sense are grouped into the Syndicate of the French Philatelic Press: the reporters and journalists belong to the Association of Reporters of the French Philatelic Press, and/or the International Association of Philatelic Journalists.

1.2.2.1 – Syndicate of the French Philatelic Press (SPFF)

The syndicate of the French Philatelic Press was founded in 1945 at the height of the paper crisis, essentially on the initiative of M. Pierre Yvert. It is made up of the titles and reporters who have a philatelic by-line in periodicals, and its role has tended to develop.

- Creation of the SPPF

The Syndicate of the Philatelic Press was founded on the 2nd August 1945 in the form of an association controlled by the law of 1901. The founding members are:

- ❖ L' Exchangiste universel
- ❖ L' Echo de la timbrologie
- ❖ Le Havre philatélique
- ❖ Le Bulletin Officiel de la Fédération des Sociétés Philatéliques Françaises
- ❖ L' Officiel de la Philatélie
- ❖ Le Philatéliste
- ❖ Le Bulletin Philatélique Mensuel
- ❖ Les Cahiers Philatéliques
- ❖ Les Cahiers de la Philatélie
- ❖ La Potinière Philatélique

M. Pierre Yvert, editor of “L’ Echo de la Timbrologie” at the time, was elected president of the SPPF.

- composition of the SPPF

The Syndicate is made up of regular members and honorary members. The regular members are journals, either printed or audiovisual, looked on as intellectual individuals and represented in the syndicate by one of their officers, in principle always the same one, though also with the agreement of the administrative board, philatelic journalist from the printed or audiovisual press putting out regular articles (1). Only two of the 10 founding members still remain.

(1) Articles I, paragraph 3 of the statutes of the SPPF, modified by the General Meeting of 30th June 1981

At present, the following journals belong to the SPPF :

- ❖ L’ Echo de la Timbrologie, represented by M. Gervais
 - ❖ La Philatélie Française, represented by M. Duxin
 - ❖ Le Monde des Philatelists, represented by M. Jullien
 - ❖ Le “Bulletin Mensuel de L’ ancienne Maison Théodore Champion” , represented by M. Varga
 - ❖ Les “ Documents Philatéliques”, represented by M. Schroeder
 - ❖ “France-URSS” represented by M. Liphchutz
- and the following philatelic writers :
- M. Charles Bernard (“La Vaix du Nord”)
 - M. Gérard Debord (“Ouest France”)
 - M. Jacques Mancier (“Le Figero”)
 - M. Claude Bourgeois (“La Voix des parents”)

The president of the SPPF is M. Jacques Gervais, editor of “L’ Echo de la Timbrologie”

- Role of the SPPF

The aim of the association is “to defend the interests of members on the purely professional level”. The SPPF deals with questions of prices, subscriptions, problems related to production and the techniques of photocomposition. The syndicate is an interlocutor vis-à-vis the administrator of the PTT, particularly on the subject of philatelic information, quality and delay in the transmission of documents. Moreover, the SPPF participates in the organization of international exhibitions, taking charge of the press stands and the organisation of public relations.

M. Garvais expressed himself as follows in 1981: “In this defence of collectors, the Syndicate of the French Philatelic Press has an important part to play: in information, education and protection. May those who do us the honour of reading us, also give us the pleasure of listening to us” (1). The SPPF has been heard, since it has been invited by the regional director of the PTT in Nantes to a conference and debate on philately on 27th June 1983. In fact, on the initiative of this body, which organizes “Meetings with the Post Office in the Loire region”, there has been an exchange of ideas between M. Beltran, director of the Stamp Printing Office, M. Laveau, head of the Stamp Issues Office, M. Bourgeoise, vice-president of the Federation, Mme. J. Caurat, a television producer, M. Garvais, president of the SPPF, M. Loeuillet, president of the CNEP, M. Mancier, vice-president of the SPPF.

On 19th November 1984, the SPPF representatives Messrs Bourgeois, Duxin, Gervais, Mancier, Strofati: were received at the Ministry of the PTT, at their request, by M. Lormand, Deputy Director of Production, and M. Laveau, head of the Stamp Issue Office to discuss the participation of the philatelic press in a future association for the promotion of philately and in the consultative commission for stamps. The press might receive a grant from the “Fund for the development of philately”, but in what form and to what amount, were the question asked by the periodical editors (2) (3).

(1) J. Gervais, editoriaial, L'Echo de la Timbrologie, March 1981, No.1519 p.3
(2) “For the SPPF”, La Philatelic Française, January 1985 No367, p.27
(3) The Association for the Development of Philately (ADP) has been in existence since May 1986. M. Gervais, president of the SPPF, is vice-president of the ADP.

1.2.2.2 -Association of Philatelic Reporters of the French Press (ACPPF)

In 1962, the “Association Syndicate de la Presse Philatélique Française” was set up. It united journalist, philatelic reporters, and philatelic authors. Messrs Henri Chiavassa, director of the Stamp Issue Office of the Principality of Monaco, and Jean Le Mouël, keeper of the Postal Museum in Paris, are honorary members. The aim of the ACPPF is to defend the interests of philately and promote philatelic studies and information.

To join the Association, one must be presented by two sponsors and to have written philatelic studies or to be keeping up a philatelic chronicle in the written or spoken press.

In 1972 the name of the association was changed: the term “association syndicate” was dropped in favour of “Association des Chroniqueurs”.

At the moment, the board of the association consists of: M. Vitalyos, president of the ACPPF; Messrs Duxin, Brun, Mms J Caurat, vice-president; M. Demaret, treasurer; M. Bertin, secretary general. Amongst the members of the association, we must mention the following: Messrs Amouroux, Bartoli, Françon, Guiraud d’Armais, Marion, Monteaux, Pichon, Pothion, Storch, Tollu...

Since 1979, a “Confidential Letter” has been sent from the ACPPF free to all members once a quarter. This was started by M. Vitalyos. Each member sends him philatelic information which is centralised. Thus the “Confidential Letter”, in the form of “philatelic briefs” in telegraphic style is sent out to 60 people. It is typewritten on two sides of a page (1). The information may be published if the source is acknowledged. It amounts to a sort of “philatelic press agency” since its aim is to serve as a source of information for the philatelic notes of magazines.

(1) See appendix 6, p.198

It may be noted that the first dinner-debate of the ACPPF took place on 21st March 1963 on the theme of “Whither philately” under the direction of Arthur Lafon, and was very successful. Forty or so members took part. Also present were Jacques Marette, minister of PTT, Henri Chiavassa, director of the Stamp Issue Office of the Principality of Monaco, and Jean Le Mouël, keeper of the Postal Museum in Paris. In 1985 the ACPFF took up this idea again and tried to organize a dinner-debate or round table to include every element of philately. The Minister of PTT took up the idea from the public angel, no doubt intending to reveal decisions from the philately sector. However this meeting never took place, for unknown reasons (1).

(1) Confidential letter of the ACDPF, third quarter 1985, No.27 forth quarter, 1985, No 28

1.2.2.3 -International Association of Philatelic Journalists (AIJP)

The International Association of Philatelic Journalist was founded in Prague on 20th August 1962. Its headquarters were fixed at La Haye. The aims of the Association were as follows:

- ❖ To promote amity and peace between peoples.
- ❖ To aid in the diffusion of serious information in confirmation of the truth.
- ❖ To defend the propriety and integrity of philately against forgery, speculation, misleading issues, and anything that may harm philately.
- ❖ Bring together journalist, philatelic authors and the philatelic press of the entire world and protect their interests.
- ❖ To uphold co-operation between the organs of the philatelic press by the exchange and translation of articles and their diffusion.
- ❖ Stimulate the publication of interesting manuscripts by finding publishers of them and promoting their sale.
- ❖ To publish a yearbook of members and the philatelic press of the entire world.
- ❖ To evaluate the philatelic literature at exhibitions.

In fact, it plays a very feeble part. The Association (1) sees its international vocation as the promotion of philately in the world, however the AIJP yearbook did ensure publicity and announcements for the international philatelic exhibition “Philexfrance 82” in Paris.

The AIJP has 500 members in 40 countries. Within the Association, two distinct groups have formed: journalists and philatelic authors. The weakness of the AIJP seems to be its shortage of members with the double quality of professional journalists (card-carrying) and philatelist (2). Twenty-one French people belong to the AIJP. Most of these use its letters alongside their signature to articles in the press.

The AIJP defines the philatelic journalist “as he who takes part directly, regularly and in a permanent manner by articles or talks in a philatelic magazine, a philatelic column in the mainstream press, or the radio of television. This includes the editors of magazines, even if they do not write for them regularly, and the editors of catalogues” (sic) (3). The world of philatelic press is a very shifting one. Some titles appear, others disappear, usually without collectors bothering. However this press is very useful, even indispensable, for the philatelist (3).

The philatelic press is necessary for the collector since it informs and educates him. Situated at the heart of a network of relationships that make up his sources, it needs financial support for its survival from all components of philately: collectors, dealers, philatelic societies, the administration of the PTT, the Federation.*

(1) Articles 1 of the Statutes of the AIJP

(2) The law of 1935, which lays down the statute for journalist defines the profession of journalist as “anyone whose regular and paid principal occupation is the exercise of the profession in one or more daily or periodical publications, or one or more press agencies, and derives therefore the majority of his resources”.

(3) Article 2 of the statutes of the AIJP.

()See the originals for pages 60 and 61.*

2.1 - The Functions of the Philatelic Press

The philatelic press has a triple function. It informs, protects and educates the collector.

2.1.1 - An Information Function

Philatelic magazines devote a considerable part of their editorial space to reports of new postal products and echoes of the “world of philately”.

2.1.1.1 - Current philately

Reading a philatelic journal informs the reader on stamp issues of the entire world, often accompanied by illustrations. The novelties are described, and sometimes their subjects analysed. Thematic collectors can get much information in this way, in the majority of cases. The commentaries relate to French postage stamps.

The press also calls attention to all new developments of stamp science: temporary cancellations, flaws. The calendar of demonstrations and philatelic exhibitions is informative for the reader. All useful data are given: places, addresses, hours of opening, sale of philatelic souvenirs, addresses of associations for sale by correspondence. Thus, reading a philatelic journal frees one from isolation. Specialist collectors find their own chronicle every month: maritime post, airmail, maximaphily, marks of franking machines, vignettes of GAPA, LSA or MOG (1), automatic sorting marks etc. The external activities of postal life are screened out.

Every journal has a press review: social bulletins, philatelic books, the foreign press, and even the works added to the library of the Postal Museum (2). To this is added “philatelic briefs”, which sometimes give valuable information, usually up-to the minute.

The advertisement section is a mine of information on the philatelic trade. It gives current prices, net price, sales or offers, and discounts. Some adverts are illustrated, some not. The collector knows where to buy, in what town, at what address, at what time. He will be aware, more precisely than from the catalogue, the real trend of stamp prices or the market. Moreover, the small ads for offers or sale, purchase or exchange can bring philatelists into friendly contact, enabling them to exchange ideas and information and get hold of the “stamps” postal documents which will enable them to complete their collections. The adverts are an element of information for current philately.

(1) GAPA: Automatic stamp machine. LSA: Free Service Franking. MOG: Microcomputer stamp machine.

(2) La Mode des Philatélistes, publishes a selection of the latest works received by the Library of the Postal Museum. (“Library” Feb 1986, no.394, p.82). also La Philatélie Française, informs its subscribers of all works added to the Library of the Postal Museum, with the pressmark. This saves the collector having to search the manual file (“Your Library”, Feb 1986, No.380 p.105).

2.1.1.2 - The philatelic life

The specialist press relates the life, (birth, crises, death) of the philatelic milieu. All the institutions' activities are brought to the notice of readers: the production of new products and services by "La Poste" (1). The exhibitions organized by the Postal Museum, the services of the Federation of French Philatelic Societies, the meetings of the Academy of Philately, the notebook of the CNEP (2), the functions of organs of the press.

The federal congress, the major international exhibitions, the various philatelic debates and colloquia are described and commented on by philatelic reporters. Collectors make their own contributions via their ideas.

The life of the association takes a large space in all the philatelic journals. Philatelic societies and regional groups describe their activities and set out their services. The proceedings of general assemblies are also published. The reader benefits from the feeling of belonging to the great philatelic family.

2.1.2 - A DEFENCE FUNCTION FOR THE COLLECTOR

Defence of the collector takes two forms: purifying the philatelic market, and giving useful advice.

2.1.2.1 - Purifying the market

The philatelic press warns of the theft of collection of postage stamps. It puts collectors on their guard against dishonest propositions: forgeries, repaired stamps, faked or regummed stamps. Offers of stamps with big discounts for numbers hide defects of this kind. A first-rate stamp should be bought at its fair price. Third-grade stamps do not carry an obvious indelible mark (3).

(1) This refers to the trademark "LA POSTE"

(2) CNEP Syndical Chamber of Philatelic Dealers and Experts

(3) Campagne in Monde des Philatélistes in favour of such a mark in 1969/74

Numerous magazines take part in campaigns against excessive issues of stamps. These "Pirate" stamps are put on the index of the International Federation of Philately. Every collection presented in competitive exhibition involves their disqualification (1). Private people in developing countries can get concessions for "issue contracts". The concessionaire takes on the task of printing, issuing, publicizing and selling the stamps. To make them official, these stamps are put on sale by the (not numerous) post offices. All the subjects are treated in line with international happenings, and not with the heritage of the country of issue. This explains the issue of non-perforated stamps and block sheets. The specialist press plays its part in defending the collector who is not a "milch cow" for the disposal of the products of postal administrations and makers of souvenirs.

2.1.2.2 - Advice

The specialist press gives advice to beginning or average collectors. It puts them on guard against "Margoulins", unlicensed pseudo-dealers. Reading it tells the philatelist what not to do: cut up envelopes, cut up postal entires, tear of stamps etc...

The philatelic magazine tell him how to choose a catalogue, how to use it, how to present his sheets for competition, how to build up a thematic collection, how to class his flames.

Is the collector aware of all these press contributions? (2)

* Slang work meaning something like “SLUSHERS”

(1) Campaign in Monde des Philatélistes : “Let this stop” in 1973

(2) See below p.90. for our enquiry into perception of the philatelic press. The monthly “Philatelic” is not quite as categorical in banning “pirate issues”

2.1.3 –AN EDUCATION FUNCTION

The philatelic press gives its readers a “general philatelic culture” by publishing studies and researches. General ideas are indispensable to the understanding of the “science of the stamp”.

2.1.3.1 –Philatelic studies

Philatelic magazines try to ensure balance in their main articles by presenting different studies for different tastes. Thematic studies, collecting, aerophilately, postal history or classic monographs enable specialist collectors to get in touch via certain articles, but also to understand the other branches of philately. The press thus assures a permanent education for philatelist. Published studies popularise all the components of philately. It sometimes happens that specialist detect mistakes or facts incorrectly presented. They send their corrections in to the magazine, and these are published in the “readers letters” (1).

(1) The problem is that of indicating and verifying sources.

The whole mass of philatelic studies constitutes a very important documentation for the collector. Stamp experts use them to give a mass of information, and make professional use of them.

2.1.3.2 –Philatelic researches

Philatelic journals also devote part of their editorial space to researches on postage stamps as manufactured products. Researchers reveal the state of their knowledge on methods of printing, and methods of presentation of the postage stamps in current use. The beginning philatelist can be disheartened when faced with these difficult articles. But it is necessary for his philatelic education to understand the main stages in fabrication of a postage stamp. Specialist studies, older or recent, are available to philatelists in the libraries of the association or that of the Postal Museum (1).

Thus the philatelic press plays a very important part in the formation and information of the collector. It is useful and necessary. A real philatelist ought to read all the journals and subscribe to them. Buying the four titles would cost 61.00f per month (2), which corresponds to the price of two “insets”, philatelic souvenirs made by the organizers of exhibitions (3).

The specialist press is not in competition, it is complementary. The reader finds different reviews of studies in every review apart from the list of new issues. But it is clear that the philatelic press and literature are scorned and neglected by collectors.

As early as 1938, Renaut d'Oultre-Seille, manager of the scientific review "Les Annales de Philatélie" gave a cry of alarm: "The only viable and living philatelic literature is represented by the general or specialist catalogue . Why? Because they are the oracles of the Goddess Quotation! At the moment, the mercantile aspect of philately is the only one that counts. The most leaved book, the most useful manual, even dealing with the most fashionable topics, hardly sell at all unless they have lists of prices and evaluations. They are sought out, used – but not read. What gets thumbed through is the catalogue section. Edit the work and the catalogue separately: the first will be left on the authors' hands, whilst the second is promptly sold out. Hence there is a tendency not to sell the catalogue section separately (4).

The press, so useful to the collector, diversifies its sources to the maximum.

- (1) The library of the Postal Museum has 5000 works and 560 periodicals on philately and postal history.
- (2) "L'Echo de la Timbrologie", "La Philatélie Française", "Le Monde des Philatélistes", "Timbroscopie" (prices as at May 1987)
- (3) We are not criticizing the sale of these souvenirs. As entry to these philatelic exhibitions is free, it is desirable for every visitor, collectors in particular, to acquire one or more of these souvenirs so as to help the organizers with their costs.
- (4) FP Renaut d'Oultre-Seille, "The great pity of philatelic literature in the world". Les Annales de Philatélie, Jan-Mar 1938, vol II, no 9, p 278.

2.2 – SOURCES OF THE PHILATELIC PRESS

The philatelic press lies at the heart of a relational network: The world of sources. The principal vectors of philatelic information are organized around three poles: the administration of the PTT and its ramifications, the "utilizers" of postal stamps and the press itself.

2.2.1 – THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE PTT

Journalists receive information and press communiqués from four branches of the PTT: The Bureau of Stamps and Philately; the philatelic service of the Post, the Postal Museum and BEPTOM (1).

2.2.1.1 – The Bureau of Stamps and Philately

The bureau of Stamps and Philately is an administrative service of the Director of Postal Services within the General Director of the Post. It serves the secretariat of the commission for philatelic programmes (2). The Bureau of Stamps draws up a list of suggestions for stamps, and the commission meets twice a year. Once the definitive list has been decided by the Minister of PTT, the Bureau of Stamps has to select the artist, draw up an information dossier on the stamp, determine the size of the printing, and decide on the face value, and the dates of issue and withdrawal. After the maquette for the stamps has been approved by the Director General of the Post, the Minister for Posts and Telecommunications and outside parties, its production becomes the concern of the Printing Works for stamps and Fiduciary Securities at Périgueux.

(1) BEPTOM: Bureau for the Study of Overseas Posts and Telecommunications
 (2) The Commission for Philatelic Programmes assists the Minister of the PTT in the choice of postage stamps. The commission has twenty of so members, and is presided over by the Director General of the Post. It includes functionaries from the administration of the PTT, including the Director of the Stamp Printing Works, representatives of collectors, of the committee on the history of the PTT, of the press, commerce, and users. Artistic interests are represented by an artistic counselor, 3 design artists and stamp engravers and representatives of the Ministry of Culture. Note that the SPPF would like to participate as an institution.

Every month the bureau of stamps issues a philatelic communiqué for the specialist press (1). There have been two documents since 19th February 1987. The first is entitled “Stamps” is 6 pages long, and covers issues and withdrawals from France, Andorra, Monaco, St Pierre and Miquelon, and new philatelic products. The second is “Temporary offices” (temporary post offices list of dated stamp imprints, temporary and permanent cancellations flames) (2). Illustrated in black and white the communiqué is rather dry in presentation. It would be desirable to enlighten the public as to conditions of creation of the stamp, explain the choice of artist, the whys and wherefores of symbolic or secondary details, and the documents used. The communiqué would be more attractive, and would thus help in the promotion of thematic philately, especially as regards the education of the young.

The original or special (3) communiqués are an important source for understanding French postal production (4). The philatelic magazines pass on this information, either in extenso or by adopting it. The communiqués are sent out by the philatelic service in Rue Bonvin. If they are late, the press is informed by Telex.

It should be noted there are no institutionalised meetings between the philatelic press and the Bureau of Stamps.

2.2.1.2 – The Philatelic Service of the Post

Set up on 1st February 1969 and attached to the temporary offices service, Rue de Douai, the Philatelic Service became independent on 1st January 1983 and moved to Rue F. Bovin, Paris XV (5). A hybrid between a management service (it depends for its logistics on the director of Posts of Paris) and an exceptional class of Post Office (out of order), the Philatelic Service deals with its 94,000 subscribers and commercialises its products. It has a “communication point”, for personal or telephone calls. Journals are received with pleasure.

(1) The Bureau of Stamps has put out philatelic communiqués since 1972. The Library of the Postal Museum has a similar collection from 1954 (Ref: not currently available)
 (2) See appendix 7. p. 200.
 (3) 6 special communiqués were published in January and February 1986.
 (4) This information is relayed by INPHOTEL, see above p.47.
 (5) The Philatelic Service of the PTT became the Philatelic Services of the (lost line of this missing from page 69)

The communiqués are drawn up by the Bureau of Stamps, printed in runs of 3,500 by the Director of Post of Paris, and sent out by the Philatelic Service. They are addressed to the people in a file drawn up by the Regional Director of Telecommunications in Lille (1). The communiqués dated between the 15 and 20, are sent out to the French and foreign specialist press, the general and audio-visual press, departmental and regional Directors of Post, philatelic points, the teachers who run philatelic clubs, and the presidents of the philatelic societies (on demand).

Journalists also receive PTT notices on glazed paper along with stamp-sized black and white photographs, without mention of “Specimen”.

2.2.1.3 – The Postal Museum

The Postal Museum is a public establishment of the state, administrative in character and under the aegis of the Ministry of PTT. Its brief is to be “an establishment called House of Post and Philately, oriented more particularly towards cultural action promoting knowledge and diffusion of the history of the post and of philately” (2). To this end, the Museum organizes exhibitions in the Messenger gallery (3). Philatelic and artistic exhibitions are presented to the public on the issue of certain stamps.

The public relations service sends out press communiqués to philatelic magazines, and also for the general daily press and to certain periodicals (4). Journalists often attend the opening of these exhibitions and publish accounts of them in their columns.

We may also note that the press obtains information via the Society of Friends of the Postal Museum.

- (1) The file will gradually be reintegrated with the Philatelic Service
- (2) Decree of 26th November 1980 in Journal officiel of 28th November 1980, p.2779. Articles 3 (? 4) and 4 (? 2) are repealed by the decree of 3rd March ? 1981.
- (3) Programme for the second half of 1986: ? and epic of airmail, ? ? , 35th anniversary of the Philatelic Union of the PTT, Artistic Society of the PTT; reflections of the thousand and one night (centenary of the PTT library).
- (4) See appendix 7, p.228.

2.2.1.4 – BEPTOM

The Bureau of the Study of Overseas Posts and Telecommunications is a public establishment of an administrative, under the double aegis of the Ministries of PTT and Co-operation (1). It promotes international co-operative action, notably with the francophone African countries and the overseas territories. The stamp service is one of its missions. The African countries entrust BEPTOM with the task of producing their postage stamps, from the maquette to commercialisation.

The agency for overseas postage stamps (2) sells for these countries stamps issued in their country of origin at their face value – every month. BEPTOM sends the press its communiqués announcing the sale of stamps, block sheets, first-day covers for the following countries: Peoples’ Republic of Benin, Burkina-Faso, Republic of Cameroon, Central African Republic, Federal Islamic Republic of the Comores, Republic of the Congo, Republic of the Ivory Coast, Republic of Djibouti, Gabonese Republic, Malagasi Democratic Republic, Republic of Mali, Islamic Republic of Mauritanie, Republic of Niger, Republic of Senegal, Republic of Chad, Togolese Republic, Vanuatu, also Democratic and Popular Algerian Republic, Tunisian Republic, Kingdom of Morocco and finally, New Caledonia and Dependancies, French Polynesia, Wallis and Futuna.

Thus, the philatelic press gets extensive information about the Francophone countries of Africa all at one time (3). It receives directly the communiqués of other postal administrations.

- (1) BEPTOM, 5 Rue Oswaldo Cruz, Paris, 16
(2) 85 Avenue de la Bourdonnais, Paris, 7
(3) For more information, see the interview with M. Guy Delmas, Director General of BEPTOM, in Philatélic Française, January 1984, no.355, p.7-8.

2.2.2 – THE “USERS” OF POSTAGE STAMPS

The specialist press receives a great deal of information from the “users of postage stamps” : amateurs who make up the collectors and associations : professionals who are the dealers and experts.

2.2.2.1 - The collectors

Unlike non-philatelic magazines, collectors contribute numerous articles, either published in extenso or revised and corrected by the journal (1). Reputable philatelists who specialise in a particular topic can thus express themselves and make their work known in magazines with a wide circulation, from 20,000 to 45,000 copies. Members of the Academy of Philately or the Academy of Postal Studies, or specialist societies write their articles after extensive researches, which professional journalists cannot carry out. These studies may not be spontaneous, but they are often written at the express request of the editors of philatelic journals in response to a current demand. In the majority of cases, they write for nothing. Sometimes they are paid in view of their drawing power. In 1985, 35 people not connected with the journal have written for “Le Monde des Philatélistes”.

Letters from readers of or subscribers to the journal constitute a not significant source of information. Editors receive 2,000 to 3,000 a year. They may be published in three cases. Amongst the letters of criticism, complaint, regrets or propositions, a minority will be published in the “Readers’ Letters” section (2). A second category of letters consists of requests for information, or elucidation on certain points. As a rule, they go in under the heading “Questions – Answers”. The last category of letters gives a great deal of information obtained from here and there, and enables the filling of such sections as “Phila-spot” in “Monde des Philatélistes”, “Bloc-Notes” in “La Philatélie Française”, “Here and There” in “L’Echo de la Timbrologie”.

The fact that many contributors do not require payment is a considerable advantage for the magazine.

- (1) For the record: not true of “Timbrologie” since this is the only one written entirely by professionals in journalism.
(2) Amongst these letters there will be numerous complaints against other people: the postman, the post-office clerk, the receiver, the merchant, the announcer.....

2.2.2.2 – Philatelic Associations

Philatelic societies address their communications to the magazines. They announce their activities and general meetings and give descriptions of their exhibitions and associated activities. Journalists cannot “cover” all the activities at once, because of shortage of time and money. Often though, reading these communications is tedious and uninteresting. Some specialist societies contribute very specific reports to the journal, for example ACEMA (1), the maximaphiles, France-USSR, GUVF (2). The Academy of Philately authorizes the publication in “La Philatélie Française” of certain studies which it judges to be important.

The Associations also sent out their liaison bulletins. These form important documentation for the use of journalists, and ensure a “press review” for the magazines. The Association Union, the Federation, is a source of philatelic information as regards its international activities.

- (1) ACEMA : Associaton of collectors of imprints of stamp machines
(2) GUVF : Ultra-Violet group of France (Association of Collectors of Courier Automation)

2.2.2.3 – The Dealers

If the dealers supply commercial publicity for the journals, they also give various items of information coming from the philatelic market. They send in their catalogues of net-price sales, sales on offer, and the results of auctions. The Syndical Chamber of French Merchants and Experts of Philately (CNEP) sends accounts of its activities to the periodicals.

2.2.2.4 – The Experts

Experts often write technical articles, spontaneously or on demand. They keep the magazines informed, warn them of the circulation of forgeries or the activities of swindlers. The magazines can obtain editorial or iconographic documentation from the vast resources of their professional expertise.

The telephoned philatelic information of the expert M. Brun is another source of varied information.

2.2.3 – THE PRESS

A philatelic journal uses its own resources along with those of its French and foreign colleagues.

2.2.3.2 – The French philatelic press

Editors can find documentation and their own production in the personal archives of the magazines. “L’Echo de la Timbrologie”, which celebrates its hundredth year of appearance in 1986 (1), is made up of a collection of over 80 volumes. The libraries of the philatelic journals are very important old books, periodicals, society bulletins. It is a pity that editors have not given a complete breakdown of their journals, particularly in the form of an analytical classification of their contents (by subject and author). Setting up a bank of information in the philatelic press would provide a valuable tool for both the journal and the researcher.

- (1) L’Echo de la Timbrologie will be 100 years old on 15th November 1987 : but it enters its hundredth year of appearance in 1986.

Journalists read the philatelic reviews put out by their confrères, which give them information. The letter from the ACPPF (1) helps in the gathering of information. The general press prints articles on the post or postage stamps and other philatelic news which enables journalists to judge the reaction of their confrères.

- (1) ACPPF : Association of Philatelic Reporters of the French Press, see above P.56..

The information bulletin of the press service of the PTT, “Repères”, and the in-house journal “Messages des PTT” are also useful sources of information on current affairs.

2.2.3.3 – The foreign philatelic press

The foreign philatelic press is obtained simply by an exchange of journals. The press reviews or “library” sections list the foreign philatelic journals received by the editors. In a society becoming more and more globalized, it is regrettable that the French philatelic press does not give more space to foreign sources.

For p.76. see original.

The philatelic press has multiple sources available to present a complete journal to its readers. It improves their philatelic understanding. However a magazine, like every industrial product, even a specialized one, has to be paid for. However, we know that collector are not happy about financing their own press, they prefer to buy a stamp for 15f or 18f rather than an issue of a philatelic magazine-paradoxical !

2.3 – THE ECONOMIC APPROACH TO THE PHILATELIC PRESS

The press as an undertaking produces and sell a product : the journal. As a result, it has the financial aim of covering expenses and making a profit on the one hand : on the other it has the commercial aim of making this type of product, the philatelic journal, known to a specific public.

2.3.2 – FINANCIAL ASPECT

Putting out a journal is very costly, thus the press establishment concerned must constantly find means to finance it.

2.3.2.2 – The cost of production

There are two essential aspects of the costs of production : the cost of fabrication and the cost of distribution. The editorial costs are considerably reduced because so many philatelists take part for free (1).

(1) Except Timbroscopie

- The cost of fabrication

Fabrication of the journal accounts for 50% of the charges. Three divisions are essential : stereotyping (typesetting), printing and paper (15%).

“Le Monde des Philatélistes” is printed on the rotary presses of the daily “Le Monde” in the Rue des Italiens or Rue St Denis. The covers (8 colour pages) and the contents (16 colour pages) are turned out in a little offset printing works belonging to the daily “Le Monde” (1), an outside firm puts them together. The daily “Le Monde” contracts to meet the cost of printing so as to present “Le Monde de Philatélistes” in a situation of equilibrium, “L’Echo de la Timbrologie” buys its issues in made-up form from Yvert et Cie. “Timbroscopie” has its covers and insides produced by two external printers. “La Philatélie Française” is printed in the Orne. The delay between the order going in and the printing calls for 10 to 15 working days, which is why the journal appears on the 15th of each month (2).

- The cost of distribution

Distribution accounts for 30% of the charges on a journal. There are two principal methods of distribution : sale of individual issues from a bookstall, and postal subscription. The first is very costly. Philatelic magazines are distributed by Nouvelles Messageries de la Press Parisienne (NMPP) (3). They take on average 40% of the selling price of the publication, with 20% (15 to 24%) going to the retailer (newsvendor). It is difficult for the management of the journal to decide how many copies to supply to each point of sale. Hence, more copies are always printed than will be distributed. This is an unknown because of the variability of purchases, which explain why it cost so much.

- (1) Before 1982, the covers were done at a private print works, SNIL at Aulnay sous Bois ; this meant light costs. “Le Monde” got a new offset printing plant at Ivry in September 1988. “Le Monde des Philatélistes” then became a quality product : offset printing, best quality paper, all paper in colour.
- (2) It contains the latest information.
- (3) Except for “La Philatélistes” which is sold by subscription exclusively.

By contrast with individual sales, “subscription (postal) is the most advantageous system for the editors : it assures them a regular sale without the return of unsold copies, and helps their finances because payment is made in advance (1). The postal tariff is cheaper than supply to a retailer, however, the special rate for the press, : journals and periodical matter registered with the Commission for Publications and Press Agencies (2) is in fact an indirect state subsidy which enables the sale price to be reduced.

In the tables below, we have calculated the postal rate per copy for the 4 philatelic journals : the rate currently in force (1st column), the rates for non-urgent items (PNU) and PNU 2 for a minimum of 15,000 objects being sent (printed rate), if the journal rate does not apply (3).

Month of February 1986	Journals posted (differently circulated)	Non- urgent items (PNU) other journals	Journals not registered with CPAPP (minimum 15,000 copies) (PNU 2)
L'Echo de la Timbrologie 161 g	1.01 f	6.50 f	3.39 f
La Philatélie Française 140g	0.51 f	6.50 f	2.78 f
La Monde des Philatélistes 219 g	1.01 f	6.50 f	4.02 f
Timbroscopie 209 g	1.01 f	6.50 f	4.02 f

A constant complaint from subscribers relates to delays in transmissions of the magazine. This posed a problem as regards attendance at meetings (4). Moreover, readers are annoyed when they see a philatelic journal on the bookstalls before it reaches their own letterbox. For example, “Mondes des Philatélistes” is sent out on the 28th of the month, it is distributed by the NMPP on the 29th in Paris and the 30th in the provinces, but the subscriber receives on the 2nd or 3rd at best.

- (1) P. ALBERT, La Presse Française, documentary notes and studies, La Documentation Française, No.4729-4730, 1983, p.53.
 (2) “L’Echo de la Timbrologie” : No.61048, “La Philatélie Française” : No.59246, “Le Monde des Philatélistes” : No.57439, “Timbroscopie” : No.65801.
 (3) An “urgent” periodical benefits from rapid and regular transmission at a special rate. “206 routing” applies to “publications appearing oftener than once a week”. “Urgent” periodicals must be registered with the Commission for Publications and Press agencies (CPPAP)
 (4) See the editorial by M. Gervais in L’Echo de la Timbrologie for December 1985, No.1571, p.3.

- The editorial cost

By contrast with other magazines, the editorial cost is low because only skeleton staff is needed (1). It represents 20% of the cost. This includes administrative charges and management costs. If the costs rise, receipts do not accompany them.

2.3.2.3 - The means of financing

Financial support comes from two sources : readers and publicity.

- readers

A journal is sold either by subscription or by sale of individual issues. The circulation (production) of the journal is not the principal element. The paid diffusion must be considered. When the journal is sold as individual issues, the management bears the loss on unsold copies.

The Office for Justification of Issues (OJD) for publicity supports controls the figures for paid issues (2). The latest figures are as follows (3).

- (1) Except for Timbroscopie.
 (2) The OJD, a tripartite private organization, brings together journals, publicity men and announcers.
 (3) The OJD control ; on 27th March for “Monde des Philatélistes”; 13th March 1987 for “Timbroscopie”. Declaration on the credit of “L’Echo de la Timbrologie”, from OJD, relating to 1st half of 1986. (no I don’t know what all that amounts to)

Title	Print run	Paid issue	Unpaid Issue	Total issue	Loss in % (1)

Timbroscopie (1986)	62,5 52	41,0 47	3,97 2	45,0 19	28, 02
Le Monde des Philatélistes (1986)	54,0 36	32,5 13	1,74 3	34,2 56	36, 60
L'Echo de la Timbrologie (1 st half of 1986)	38,8 17	25,0 64	1,36 6	26,4 30	31, 91
La Philatéçaise (1986)	20,5 00	20,0 00	500	20,5 00	-

$$(1) \quad \text{"Loss"} = \text{Print run} - \text{Total issue in \%} \quad \frac{\text{"Loss"}}{\text{Print Run}} \times 100$$

Timbroscopie is the leading journal as to print run and circulation. It is distressing to find that only 20,000 philatelists from 82,500 members of a federate association have taken out subscriptions to "La Philatélie Française", i.e. (25%).

There is a high rate of circulation by subscription for three philatelic publications out of four. Timbroscopie is sold mainly at bookstalls. Hence, the cover is designed to "hook" the reader. However, selling like this is risky for the magazine, because of the fickleness of buyers. Subscriptions bring the publisher a cash advantage which is not unimportant.

Title	% Subscribers	% Sold singly
La Philatélie Française	100	-
L'Echo de la Timbrologie	67	33
Le Monde des Philatélistes	45	55
Timbroscopie	35	65

END

Dr. A. Legrand

Catalogue of philatelic literature

[Catalogue de littérature Philatélique]

La Circulaire Philatélique, May 1907, Volume 10, Whole number 58, pp.73-77; June, Whole number 59, pp.93-98; August, Whole number 60, pp.113-119; September, Whole number 61, pp.138-142; October, Whole number 62, pp.157-160; November, Whole number 63, pp.178-181; December, Whole number 64, pp.200-201; January 1908, Volume 11, Whole number 65, pp.9-12; February, Whole number 66, pp.40-43; March, Whole number 67, pp.64-66; April, Whole number 68, pp.88-91; May, Whole number 69, pp.115-117 & June, Whole number 70, pp.146-148; November, Whole number 73, p.230; December, Whole number 74, pp.265-266 & February 1909, Whole number 76, pp.45-46.

(Translation of the text only, not the catalogue.)

Translation by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca. 1999

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Since La Circulaire Philatélique intends to undertake the publication of a Catalogue of Philatelic Literature, let us begin by looking at the ways in which this work might be carried out. A demand by stamp-lovers for such a catalogue is not a new thing. In 1874, Tiffany published a volume of some hundred pages entitled The Philatelic Library, a Catalogue of Stamp Publications, which gives a practically complete list of what was known at that time. Only 150 copies of this work were published, and in the preface the author enumerates the philatelic journals which had published lists. The defect of Tiffany's list seems to me to be the way he mixes up different types of publication: Catalogues, Price-lists, Journals, Monographs and Albums, dividing them into three sections merely according to their level of interest. We note also that each section is subdivided into eight parts, characterized by the use of one of the eight principal languages of Europe.

In 1878, de Bosredon published in the Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie a Bibliography of France and Belgium in the style of Tiffany's Philatelic Library. A reprint of this work forms No. 2 of the Bibliothèque Timbrologique of the Society. A complete catalogue in the style of those two works would certainly be desirable, but the cost price would be too high.

In 1887, Tiffany published a 25 page booklet entitled Stamp Collector's Library Companion, in which he lists all the stamp journals published in the United States of America alone; in the following year he completed his work with an Addenda which rectified the mistakes made and supplied the omissions.

In 1894, Fraenkel published, in the same form as Tiffany, a catalogue of the German journals which he entitled Chronologische Tabelle, and tried to make more complete. A small supplement appeared the following year. Tiffany and Fraenkel arranged the entries in the chronological order of their appearance.

At the same period, in 1895, a number of American dealers issued various lists of the journals of their country: Jones, amongst others published The Comprehensive List for Philatelic Literature Collectors, which gives a list of the magazines that had appeared in the United States and Canada, including the name of the journal, the place of its publication, the date of publication and the number of issues that had appeared up to the time of publication.

We do not intend to give here a historical account of all the attempts made to carry out this work: however, we ought to mention Suppantschicht and his publication, in an Austrian journal whose name escapes me, of all the items he had managed to collect and an indication of the issues he lacked. He has continued his work since then and has published the results in the Dresden Philatelist.

We have been told that he wanted to publish his catalogue but could not find a publisher in Germany for a work which everyone agrees is one of the most indispensable. The reason given is that the number of people interested in philatelic bibliography was not large enough to ensure a sale that would cover the costs.

Let us point out that in 1900 the Stamp Exhibition in Paris had a competition section for amateurs putting forward the catalogue of what they possessed by way of philatelic literature. Five people sent in the catalogues of their collections, and shared the prize money available to the jury. These collections must have grown considerably since that date. One of them has served as the basis for the present work.

The most important features for the construction of a catalogue of philatelic literature are the following:

1. The name of the author or editor.
2. The name of the country of origin.
3. The title of the work.
4. The date of publication, and for journals, the date of disappearance.
5. The number of volumes and issues that make up the work.

With these details given, it should be easy to find what one wants, but catalogues, journals, treatises, monographs, etc. should still not be jumbled together. The first step is thus to decide on the sections, and that is what we are about to do, but to avoid repetition, we shall start by giving what we think is the preferred order to follow in each section:

Three sections may be used to classify the items in each section:

1. Division by Country or Language.
By country results in a very large number of sections, and the country to which the item belongs must be known.

By language brings together the countries where the bibliography is most important. We may quote the United States, with Great Britain and the English Colonies, for English;

France, Belgium and part of Switzerland for French. One consequence of this system would be to split up the bibliography of a country such as Switzerland. Otherwise a choice has to be made between chronological and alphabetic order.

2. Chronological Order.

This is the one which seems most rational: but one may encounter so many difficulties at every step for want of knowing the dates of publication: so much research will be needed! This is the order adopted by Messrs. Tiffany and Fraenkel, but they only used it for their own countries, the United States and Germany. Could it be done for all countries without committing numerous mistakes.

3. Alphabetical Order.

This is the one we adopt, but on condition that it is preceded by division into sections according to the nature of the item: catalogues, journals, price lists, etc.

We intend to run together all the references for a given section without distinguishing them by country, and we shall arrange them in strict alphabetical order by the name adopted for the section. Let us also state that our first section will be Stamp Catalogues, and what we shall say will apply especially to that section; what relates to the sections will be left till we get round to them. We shall thus arrange the catalogues according to the name of their author or editor, and follow this by the other items we ranked as indispensable above: name of the place of publication, title of the journal.

When the work has run to several editions they will be given in chronological order, with a mention of that part of the title which particularly relates to them, followed by the date and the supplements.

But, you will tell us, at the end of some years it will be necessary to put in the notations 2nd, 3rd, or change all the numbers.

To overcome this considerable drawback, we propose to follow the example various people have adopted for postage stamps.

Deciding on Periods

It does not seem difficult to decide on these. The first would be that of the 19th century. Few publications are older than 1861.

The first period would finish with the year 1899, and would include all that had appeared in years that start with 18, finishing with 1899. Nevertheless, editions of works from this first period which have appeared in 1900 and since will continue to be listed as continuations of the earlier ones, unless there is a very considerable change that makes them into new works. The second period would begin in 1900.

We shall leave our successors to decide on its duration. The first series would only need a few corrections. The second series might of necessity need them.

The number that we prefix to each name is only meant as an aid in searching. It would only be definitive for items in the first part, where it should never need to be altered. Alphabetical order should be enough for the second part.

The sequence of numbers should be separate for each section. However, to distinguish between the sections it would be a good idea to prefix them with a capital letter individual to each section.

We will begin our catalogue with Section A: Stamp Catalogues, since the study of stamps began with a catalogue, a French one by Potiquet. To economize on space, the commonest words will only be indicated by the capital initial of their name, as shown in the list below.

All the names not preceded by an asterisk are for the most part in our collection, and details have been taken from the items themselves. The presence of an asterix (*) marks those we have seen, or which are mentioned in a number of journals and of whose existence there can be no doubt. The presence of a cross (+) marks those whose existence is uncertain, and which are only quoted on the evidence of one of the authors whose name is given.

The number preceding the name of the author is meant simply as a guide to research.

When the same author has published several works with different titles, they are listed in chronological order under the same number but separated by a short line.

(to be continued)

Dr. A. Legrand.

Explanation of Abbreviations used in the Catalogue of Philatelic Literature

Bei.	Beilage	Supplement
Ber.	Bericht	Report
Br. m.	Briefmarken	Postage stamp
Cat.	Catalogue, Catalog, Catalogo	Catalogue
C. P.	Carte postale	Post card
Co.	Cover	Cover
Cou.	Couvert	Cover
Ed.	Edition	Publisher
E.	Enveloppe	Envelope
F.	Foreign	Foreign
F. B.	Francobollo ou bollo	Postage stamp or stamp
L. Sh.	Letter sheet	letter sheet
N. B.	Neu Band	New Volume
P. C.	Post Card	Post card
P. K.	Post Kart	Post card
Pr. C^t	Prix-Courant	Price list
Pr. Cat.	Price Catalogue	Priced Catalogue
Pr. L.	Price List	Price list
P. S.	Postage Stamps	Postage stamps
PWZ	Postwertzeichen	Postage stamp
S.	Sellos	Stamps
S. P.	Sellos Postales	Postage stamps
St. E.	Stamped Enveloppes	Stamped envelopes

T.	Telegraphe, Telegrafos	Telegraph, Telegraphs
T. P.	Timbre-Poste	Postage stamp
T. T.	Timbre Telegraphe	Telegraph stamp
Wr.	Wrapper	Wrapper

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Second Article (June 1907)

Since the day when we began to take an interest in stamps and stamp collecting, we have tried to get hold of works that would help us: catalogues, journals, monographs, in French or English, starting with the catalogues by Messrs Potiquet, Moens, Baillieu, Mount Brown and others, and the journals Stamp Collectors' Magazine, Le Timbre-Poste, Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, Le Timbrophile, and some of the leading American journals. Our ignorance of German kept us away from the numerous writings in this latter language.

The works, carefully preserved by us after being replaced by others more in line with up-to-date knowledge, were turned to again when a reversal of fortune compelled us to sell our collection of stamps, at that time one of the most important of its day. It was then that, persisting in our love of stamps, we resolved to undertake the collection of everything that had been written on this topic.

The year was 1897. Potiquet's work had appeared in December 1861. Thanks to the kindness of colleagues and dealers, we were able within a short time to build up their number considerably as a result of gifts, exchanges and even purchases.

Always uppermost in our mind was the classification of the publications. We set out our point of view on this topic in an article in whole number 58 of La Circulaire Philatélique. We showed that classification by alphabetical order was preferable, but only on condition that separate sections were used, and we suggested three to begin with: 1st catalogues; 2nd journals; 3rd handbooks.

These are the three most important. We showed that three things are indispensable to characterize a publication. In the case stamp catalogues these are the name of the author or editor, the place of publication and the title of the work.

Because we were in a state of illness when writing this last article, and particularly when we were correcting the proofs, we missed out a fourth. Which is secondary, but which could be used to establish the nature of the types.

The format of the publications is far from being the same. In his Philatelic Library, Tiffany recognised that since the mechanical production of paper, the old expressions of 4°, 8°, 12° which once referred to sizes no longer meant anything very much. Thus, he gave the two dimensions: height and width of every item in inches. This presents few difficulties for professional librarians, but this is not the case for the simple amateur.

Following Tiffany's example, we suggest that the format of the work be given in centimetres where he gave it in inches: however, we think it will be enough to give the vertical dimension, which varies very greatly, whereas the horizontal dimension varies much less. The format will thus be designated by a figure preceded by the letters ft. [format]. In cases where it strikes us as necessary, a second figure separated from the first by a St. Andrews' cross (x) will be used to give the transverse dimension.

Dr. A. Legrand

Section A

CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

First Period (1861-1899)

Translator's Note: It has not been considered necessary to translate the individual entries for the catalogues in this or any other of the articles as they are reasonably self-explanatory.

[Advertisement on pages 97-98]

I wish to complete my collection of all the publications relating to philately that have appeared since its origin in all countries and all languages: catalogues, price-lists; prospectuses; journals; monographs; societies; legislative or administrative documents; and in general everything relating to telegraph and fiscal stamps. I thus ask everyone who has such material to dispose of, whether by gift, exchange or otherwise, to be kind enough to get in touch with me. I invite them to let me know the title of the items concerned, with the numbers of editions, and the titles of journals with an indication of volume or year, these details are indispensable because of the large numbers I own already.

Amongst my journals, many series are incomplete. Single issues which someone might want to get rid of might perhaps fill the gaps in my own collection. Hence, no-one should be afraid to let me know about these.

Give the price which you require.

Write to: Doctor Legrand Senior, 136a, Avenue de Neuilly, Neuilly-Sur-Seine, or to Ch. Lemierre, 169 Galerie de Valois (Palais Royal), Paris.

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Third Article (August 1907)

We express our most sincere thanks to the editors of magazines who have brought our work to the attention of stamp-lovers. We make no claim to be presenting them with perfect work. Hence, we shall be grateful to have omissions or errors pointed out to us. In this way, Alfred Smith has informed us of a catalogue by Fred. Booty which appeared as No. 234 of the Philatelic Library under the title The Stamp Collector's Guide. This had escaped our attention because of the insufficient details given by Tiffany. These items will form a short supplement at the end of the first part.

Dr. Legrand

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS
First Period (1861-1899)
(Continued)

This list is followed on page 119 by the same advertisement as previously, for items required by Dr. Legrand to complete his files of philatelic publications.

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Fourth Article (September 1907)

In deciding on the periods for each section in No. 58 of the present journal, we said All editions of works from this first period which have appeared in 1900 and since will continue to be listed as continuations of the earlier ones, unless there is a very considerable change that makes them into new works.

This is a mistake. In suggesting the use of these periods, our aim was to avoid frequent repetitions of the first period, which would entail the enumeration of editions that continued to appear after 1899. In future, catalogues that appeared after the 31st December 1900 will be placed in the second period. It has been pointed out to us that correctly the 20th century only begins on the 1st January 1901.

At the end of the first period of the first section we will give the omissions that have been reported, but the corrections involved for the second period will be reproduced there in the place that they should occupy.

Dr. A. Legrand

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS
First Period (1861-1900)
(Continued)

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Fifth Article (October 1907)

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS
First Period (1861-1900)
(Continued)

This list is followed on pages 159-160 by the same advertisement as previously, for items required by Dr. Legrand to complete his files of philatelic publications.

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Sixth Article (November 1907)

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS
First Period (1861-1900)
(Continued)

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Seventh Article (December 1907)

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS
First Period (1861-1900)
(Continued)

Page 201
Supplement. – Omissions.

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Eighth Article (January 1908)

Section A
CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Second Period (1901)

The series of numbers are a continuation of those in the First Period, new items start from 400.

The works preceded by a number followed by bis are the continuation of those mentioned in the first period, or the reproduction of those wrongly carried to the same period. Delete in the first period what is reproduced again.

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Ninth Article (February 1908)

Section A CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Text from pages 40-41

Page 41-on

Supplement and Omissions

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Tenth Article (March 1908)

Section A CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Eleventh Article (April 1908)

Section A CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

CATALOGUE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Twelfth Article (May 1908)

Section A CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Note from the Editor

1. The keenly intere

Fourteenth Article (December 1908)

2 4 1

Fifteenth Article (February 1909)

995

CATALOGUES OF POSTAGE STAMPS

Second Period (1901)
(Continued)

END

K. K. Doberer
Literatur Nachrichten
Sammler-Dienst, 26th January 1974, Volume 25, Issue 2, p.79

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN

In ordinary life railway timetables, telephone books, price lists and reference works in general, are not looked on as literature. It is quite different in philately. Price lists (catalogues) and other reference works form a prominent part of philatelic literature. Anything beyond that, which does not give prices, will usually not have much of a chance of selling (long experience).

I am of the opinion that this is not, or at least not only because stamp collectors are currently not great readers. According to my own unfortunate experiences, it is due to a great extent to the fact that the literary representation of the subjects concerned leaves a great deal to be desired, since philatelic specialists who could write don't seem to have wanted to do so for quite a while. We have got so used to this state of affairs in philately, that stamp dealers very often no longer take the trouble to bring out and supply philatelic literature that goes beyond the catalogue. This means that interesting philatelic literature has to be sold via the book trade.

This situation is not a law of nature. It could be altered if the philatelic material available was not just informative in the philatelic sense, but was also made interesting and readable from the general point of view. If people were ready to write philatelic books in such a way that even non-collectors could read them and find them interesting, it would be really surprising if stamp collectors failed to buy the same reading material.

An annual volume which is well-known to have far too small a readership circle in spite of the great value of its contents and the indefatigable nature of its research is Literatur Nachrichten, published by F. Gaedicke in Berlin. This is a reference work on philatelic literature and is thus not to be found in the shop windows of stamp dealers.

The new Volume 62/73 that has just appeared is again outstanding and contains a vast quantity of information from all over the world on all aspects of philately and the resulting literature, from books to magazine articles.

Because of the great mass of material let us pause for a moment and think of the classic adage "restraint denotes the master!"

Is it not conceivable that less material, weeded and presented with care, would reach a wider circle of readers?

I am thinking in particular of book reviews. It would really be better if the routine reviews taken from magazines which often owe their wording less to the reviewer's considered thoughts than to the publisher's laundry list, were replaced by the actual list of contents. This would at least tell the philatelist what he is actually being offered. It is not much help to keep on hearing about books which are supposed to be an inexhaustible source of information for the beginner and the experienced old hand, when there is no list of contents and no assessment of the text that one could expect in a reference work of this type.

Things are very much the same as regards periodical articles. Anyone who attempts to use these will know that the title of a book or article fails to give an adequate idea of its subject. This is just what Literatur Nachrichten should set out to do, if its references are to be useful.

This means that less, not more, material should be dealt with and evaluated. It does not fill me with rapture to find so much space given to books about coins and "Castles and Noblemen's Houses in Holstein"

However, critical remarks aimed at making the contents of Literatur Nachrichten useful to a wider range of German collectors should not lose sight of the fact that far too many member societies of the BDPH still do not subscribe to Literatur Nachrichten. The Society's Literature section might send out specimen index cards to all societies. Possibly members might then come forward who would be ready to evaluate a given journal for a period of time, but are not willing to take on an unpaid commitment permanently. This simply means that criticism of unpaid work is looked on as not very proper, and that idealists are much more likely to praise, whether their work is useful or not.

END

CARNÉVALÉ-MAUZAN, Marino
A Glance at Philatelic Literature in France
[Coup d'oeil sur la littérature philatelique en France]
MILANO '82 Prima Mostra Mondiale di Letteratura Filatelica.,
Catalogue 3, pp.35-38.

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1998

A GLANCE AT PHILATELIC LITERATURE IN FRANCE

Five years ago, the organizers of the International Exhibition of Philatelic Literature at Lugano (Switzerland) asked me for an introductory article for the catalogue. I took the opportunity of giving a few personal reflections on the current tendencies, instead of an exhaustive survey which might rapidly have become boring. I intend to do the same again here, while stressing firmly – what cannot be stressed too much – that I take the sole responsibility for what I say.

As in 1977, let us first look at the impact of the periodical press, which is the standard fare of the collector whatever his status.

L'echo de la Timbrologie (Philatelic Echo) came to hand, with its number 1533 under the patronage of Philexfrance 82 and the CNIT. The part relating to philatelic research is somewhat scanty, insignificant in my opinion, but the general information (past and future exhibitions, new issues, adverts) is irreplaceable. The same applies to “Le Monde des Philatelistes” (Philatelists' World), younger and perhaps more dynamic. Le Monde continues with unfailing regularity to publish remarkable specialist reports whose texts were first published in its 354 issues where they are not easy to consult. The last report dealt with the “Marianne de Decaris” – a sign of the times: this is really trendy – and carries the number 243.

As for the third journal, although it carried a certain weight as I stated in the Lugano catalogue, it has disappeared and I am one of those who do not regret it, for reasons I gave at the time. I refer to “Philatelie”.

Last but not least, the review from our own national federation, “La Philatelie Française” (French Philately), really makes itself felt with its 20,000 subscribers: it has a fair change of becoming the periodical no collector can be without.

After this quick look at the independent press and our own Federations' Review, let us see what the specialist societies are up to.

“L'Union Marcophile” (Stamp-Lovers' Union), (with its mini-journal “Les Feuilles Marcophiles” (Stamp-Lovers' Sheets), the last issue of which was 229 plus the special “Philexfrance 82”), has become the ne plus ultra for stamp-lovers, with more and more emphasis on postal history. In its way, the “Société des Amis du Musée de la Poste” (Society of Friends of the Postal Museum) is growing rapidly, and its publication (the last number of which is 68) combines purely philatelic articles which studies relating more specifically to postal history.

The C.L.E.M.P. and the Société Internationale d'Histoire Postale (now up to its 44th bulletin) do their best in the information line with more restricted means. The first concentrates on philately, and the second goes in very strongly for history.

Without pretending to have made an exhaustive survey, we cannot close the chapter on Society publications without mentioning two of the best “Les Documents Philatéliques” (quarterly bulletin of the Academy of Philately), and “Diligence d’Alsace” (Alsace Mail-Coach), of which I have just received No.26. This latter is perfectly produced and the illustrations are simply gorgeous.

Turning now to the publication of new works, special recognition must be given to the magnificent work which André Jamet did not manage to finish and which we owe to his wife Madeleine Jamet. Dealing with the origins of the postal service in the former French possessions, it finally casts light on a flock of hitherto little-known arrangements and provisions, with details of all the old postmarks from the dawn of our Colonial Empire.

Amongst the works predestined to become classics from the moment of publication we may note the catalogue of “Entiers Postaux de France et de Monaco” (Postal Entires of France and Monaco) by MM. Storch et Françon.

Jean Storch and Robert Françon: here without possible contradiction we have the most active – and on what a level – due in the whole of French philatelic literature. Not content with passing all French stamps from 1900 to 1945 through a fine-tooth comb in a magisterial series of volumes (The Sowers, The Pasteur, etc, etc), they are the co-authors along with J. F. Brun of the new-look catalogue called “Marianne” which I mentioned a little earlier.

Another duo worth of note are Bertrand Sinais and André Weingarten, whose gaze is directed elsewhere, towards the Military Post and post-free cards of the two World Wars. They have four titles in the Milano 82 catalogue.

As for the classic catalogue, they remain faithful to their own traditions. Yvert and Tellier have let us down a little by the absence in 1982 of the last overseas volume. The French Cérès became more and more impressive and has some particularly successful colour reproductions.

Apart from the works I have just mentioned, which witness to the more than respectable level of activity in French philatelic literature, the period of Philexfrance 82 presented us with three bombshells which deserve a closer look.

J. P. Alexandre, C. Barbey, J. F. Brun, G. Desarnaud and Dr. Joany are the co-authors of an astonishing volume “Les Tarifs Postaux Français 1627-1969”. Here is a work which will be widely discussed for year to come, and which will encourage the hesitant to begin studying stamps or letters – despite its price of 480 fr. Postal rates for abroad before 1849 still remain to be studied in all their complex detail in general, but they could be worked out by anyone with the necessary patience. Many of the names of German places are distorted (especially those of the towns of Wurttemberg, quoted on p.323), but perhaps this defective orthography was already quoted on their reference documents. The absence of a bibliography prevents this from being checked.

The second big surprise in June (some people found it hard to believe) was the arrival from the press of the “Catalogue Spécialisé des Timbres de France” (Specialist Catalogue of French Stamps) (Yvert and Tellier, Vol.11), covering the period 1900 to 1938, with an extension up to our own days for postal entires, precancellations, airmail, etc. Encyclopedic in its approach like the first volume, it covers several new developments, in particular on postal vignettes, and the aviation stamps (seals/markings) called “Semi-official”: we can recognize here some of the excellent recent work of J. Silombra on the subject. There are also 66 pages on cancellations and the military stamps of the two World Wars, to which B. Sinais is certainly no stranger; these indicate new lines of approach which are both remarkable and unexpected.

The last bombshell must be the catalogue with a tricolour cover “Marianne” produced by J. Storch, R. Françon and J. F. Brun, and published under the aegis of the Fédération des Sociétés Philatéliques Françaises. Of a printing of 20,000 (this is the number of subscribers to “La Philatelie Française” – an accident or the number judged to be maximum?). 18,000 had been ordered before the book appeared. From this angle it is a great success: a deserved success, moreover, if we consider the authors courage. They really must have needed it to create an entirely new system of numbering more logical than the previous one which had become an institution. How would the readers react when they found the famous Prussian Blue had lost its special number, or that the "Ile de France" stamps had been relegated on p.533, to the level of "local airmail stamps". Obviously I personally think these two innovations are perfectly justified. But there is another side to the medal: the revolution has not gone far enough: thus the pink 80c non-perforated Napoleon deserves better than an index number, since it involves a real change in colour, as the "Bulletin Mensuel des Postes" (Monthly Postal Bulletin) makes plain. Moreover the colour reproductions are not very faithful; of course the 83-84 edition (it appears the book is to be an annual) may remedy this.

On the whole I have two reservations about this many-faceted work: justly, as regards the very immediate problem of the hinge: the others seem to think this is of only relative importance, which unhappily simply does not correspond with the facts. After pillorying the "no-hinge" method (p.131), they give plus values (indicated by a special sign, a black cross) of "50% and even more" to certain vignettes, which could lead to confusion.

The situation becomes even less clear if we look at a very recent pamphlet also issued under aegis of the Federation ("Le guide du vrai Philatelite" (The Real Philatelists Guide), éd. GIP), on p.15, under the article on "hinges", we read that "a good hinge has never cheapened a good stamp". I have heard this saying before, and always thought it a leg-pull. In this case, though, the authors appear to be perfectly serious. There is a contradiction here which needs to be cleared up pretty quickly.

The other negative remark, the last I intend to make, concerns both the "Special Yvert" and the "Marianne": at the time when there is a considerable demand for stamps on letters (simply, in pairs, in multiples, in combinations), these catalogues make as if the entire letter has no particular interest, at least after 1900. A few sparse notes in Yvert do give values for the 1.25 Pasteur, the 2f Sower, military stamps and some tax and prepayment stamps alone on a letter, but these few cases are only exceptions which confirm a very deceptive rule of silence.

What was done by J. Storch and R. Françon in their earlier specialist catalogues was only symbolic.

Will the publication of a catalogue of French stamps on letters be the time-bomb for the next philatelic year.

The exhibition on Philatelic Literature in Lagano in 1977 was under the patronage of the Fédération des Sociétés Philatéliques Suisses; the one in Vienna, Vebileph, in 1979, at which I was also a member of the jury, was under the patronage of the Fédération des Sociétés Philatéliques Italiennes. The international exhibition in Milan "Milano 82" is under patronage of the F.I.P. and will necessarily have the widest scope. It is a pity to find such a modest contribution from France under these circumstances. The organizers had to get into direct contact with the publishers responsible for society and individual publications in France. The time allowed for registration was originally very short, but was extended in all cases, nevertheless there was very little response. However, let us not allow chauvinism to interfere with an enterprise that has entirely surpassed our little affairs, and I wish a deserved success with all my heart to "Milano 82", even if France has placed itself of its own accord under the sign of the barely sufficient.

END

Dr. Phil. Wilhelm Blank

Philately in the Specialist and Daily Press:

An investigation of the problem with special consideration of German-language journals [Philatelie in Fach- und Tagespresse: Eine Untersuchung des Problems mit Besonderer Berücksichtigung der Deutschsprachigen Fachblätter]

Doctoral Dissertation, High Philosophical Faculty, University of Leipzig, Leipzig, Germany, 1930, 108pp.+[1]p. CV

Also available as a reprint in a blue hardbound cover published under the auspices of the Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatélique (FIPP), with the Curriculum Vitae omitted

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1998

PHILATELY IN THE SPECIALIST AND DAILY PRESS

CONTENTS

Foreword	2
Introduction

The present work will investigate the development of philately as seen in German and foreign periodical literature.

My treatment of the specialist press is based on years of work in the field and on detailed personal observations in the post-war years.

Commercial questions relating to the specialist press in general - i.e. not the philatelic press specially - details of the stamp market and questions of collecting and dealing will usually not be dealt with for want of space. My original idea of a complete treatment of all philatelic periodicals also had to be given up. As for the daily press, I have limited myself to the most important German-language papers, and have dealt with only the most important of their special supplements.

I offer my warmest thanks to my respected teachers Professor Erich Everth and Professor Gerhard Kessler for their valuable advice and friendly support. I also wish to express my thanks for permission to use the subject library of the State Postal Museum (Superior Court President Carl Linbenberg), the German Library, and the private collections of Messrs Carl Beck, Berlin, the Glasewald brothers of Gossnitz S.-A., Hugo Krötzsch of Leipzig, and the firm Filatelia of Turin for the kind supply of illustrations.

May this thesis help to arouse interest in philately, and at the same time give an impression of the manifold development of specialist periodical literature.

Leipzig, Christmas 1927.

P.S. This script was prepared in 1927 but not printed till 1930. Changes occurring in the meantime have not been taken into account.

PHILATELY IN THE SPECIALIST AND DAILY PRESS

I. PRECONDITIONS

For the appearance of the first periodical literature on philately.

The 6th May 1840 can be looked on as the actual birthday of philately. The first postage stamps were issued on that day in England as the result of a Royal decree. Their inventor is generally taken to be Sir Rowland Hill, the English Postmaster General. However, since the year 1894 the bookseller James Chalmers has disputed this honour with him. A war of words has rages for decades about this question.

It took two years before other countries followed the British example. New York introduced its local stamps in 1842, followed in the next year by Brazil and the Swiss cantons of Geneva and Zürich. In 1845 appeared the (only) Basle cantonal stamp, the loved and popular “Basle dove”. In 1846 came Baltimore with its local stamps, and in 1847 Mauritius and the United States. The year 1849 saw Bavaria become the first German state to put stamps on sale in the form of its black 1-Kreuzer stamp. Other European states followed in 1850, with Saxony in the German-speaking lands issuing the famous red three-pfenning stamp produced in Leipzig, then came Prussia, Schleswig, Holstein, Hanover, Austria and others. Today there are no states in the entire world that do not make use of this invention, whether or not they belong to the International Postal Union, and, as Suppantischitsch says, they use these little pieces of paper to represent their national sovereignty.

Stamps had hardly appeared before they were getting collected, for the most varying reasons and on widely different grounds. Their often artistic and accomplished, even beautiful appearance, their small volume, the romance of their origin in distant and exotic countries, the world journey they had made, the circumstances under which they were issued – jubilee, accessions, war, revolution, occupation, plebiscite, or a new sporting record, the relative cheapness and ease of acquiring them, their official and representative character equal to that of a seal, all these helped to recommend them as a new object for collecting. Stamps became an item of commerce; their collection or rather their provision for collection became a specialist trade. Albums, catalogues and specialist periodicals soon began to appear. All extensive literature arose.

Along with the first postage stamps, as it were, appeared the first adverts in the daily press that indicate some interest in the collecting which was to expand into our present-day philately. The first known advert of this kind can be found in the “Times” in September 1841[♦]:

“Postage stamps wanted. A young man who wishes to paper his bedroom with cancelled stamps has collected more than 16,000 thanks to the kindness of his friends; since this quantity is not enough he asks sympathetic people to help him to carry out his idea by sending him stamps” Today there is hardly a single paper which does not carry adverts for stamps. Collections are offered for sale under “Small Ads”, and dealers advertise in illustrated papers, magazines and the like. However, the earliest adverts had no philatelic connections. Papering your wall with stamps had nothing to do with philately. The first collections were always on a very large scale. It soon became known that the missionaries in Africa could use a number of stamps to buy the freedom of black children and convert them to Christianity. Later this developed into the well-known trade in missionary stamps, now run on a completely different basis[♣]. All these purposes called for enormous quantities of used stamps, hence the need for these early advertisements.

[♦] See “Postwertzeichenkunde”, vol. 1895, p.11.

[♣] The Christian missions, particularly the Catholic and orthodox missionary societies, carry on steady world-wide propaganda as a result of which they collect as many stamps as they can. These stamps are packed unsorted into 1-kilo, 5-kilo and 25-kilo sacks, and sealed. These are then bought by dealers whose trade consists

The first publications relating to collecting of a philatelic nature came some time later. According to Bungerz, the issue of the London-based magazine "Family Herald" for 2nd March 1851 contained an advert that read as follows:

"Postage stamps. Collectors of used stamps: the advertiser will exchange 4 red penny stamps for one oval on/with a cancelled cover. Anyone interested should get in touch with T. H. Smiths Bookshop, 20 Brewer Street, Golden Square".

This advert leads to the assumption that philatelic collecting had begun by 1851 – in England at least; it is the oldest known published item relating to stamp collecting.

Small ads relating to postage stamps appeared in German-language family magazines at the beginning of the sixties. An example is the "Illustrierten Leipziger Zeitung" No. 1014, 1862. In the same year, a fashion magazine published in Leipzig, "Der Bazar" published pictures of stamps and short descriptions of them. In 1865 the Munich "Fliegender Blätter" gave an account of stamp collecting Nos. 934 and 935 and the same paper published a little sketch of a humorous nature entitled "The Stamp Collector". These publications had no connection with the actual specialist philatelic press, since they were not primarily aimed at collectors, were not written by specialists, and appeared in papers with completely different aims. However, they can be looked on as forerunners of the philatelic periodical literature. Satirical articles about postage stamps still appear quite often today in daily papers and illustrated magazines. These too, like the politically inspired articles such as the long-running controversy over the Fridericus stamps carried on daily by the entire press, cannot be taken as really philatelic.

On 17th September 1861 the first philatelic publication appeared in Strasburg, then a French city. It was in German, partly translated into French, and was not a true periodical, but a catalogue that appeared periodically. One of the greatest collectors of the time, Oscar Berger-Levrault who was born in Strasburg on 6th May 1826 (died in Nancy, 24th September 1903) put out a lithographic catalogue of all the stamps known to him for the use of himself and his closest friends. This first catalogue was produced in an edition of 40-50 copies. At the same time in Germany the firm of Tramburg Erden of Hamburg produced a catalogue "Survey of all known postage stamps from 1849 (a misprint for 1840) to 1862". Berger-Levrault's influence can be detected here as well; it is his distinction to have founded the systematic and scientific treatment of stamp collecting. The first catalogues met with great approval from collectors and were quickly snapped up; they may have been only primitive as to their data, but were still a valuable aid to sorting and arranging a collection. Nothing more could be expected for the moment. The following year brought the first two editions of the catalogue from Zschiesche & Köder in Leipzig, and the list from Priebatsch in Breslau, G. Wuttig in Leipzig and C. Beyfuss in Hanover. They were followed in 1864 by the first Swiss catalogue, from Wilhelm Georg in Basel, then later came the catalogues from Chr. Mann Jr. in Leipzig, Ferd. Eld in Dresden and the Literary Museum in Leipzig.*

English experiments. By now collecting had extended over the entire world. The foundation was thus prepared for a specialist press, for which many sacrifices had to be made over the decades, the first unsuccessful attempt to launch a special magazine as distinct from the existing catalogues and collectors' handbook was made by a certain Thomas William Kitt in London. However, it was A. Perris of Liverpool who managed to bring out the first philatelic magazine.

entirely of these mission sacks. The proceeds go for such virtuous purposes as supporting mission activities, training priests etc. The price of a kilo of missionary stamps varies. The origin and time of year play a part (stamps are seasonal goods). Adverts in the specialist press, and often in the general and daily press during Autumn, offered them to collectors in small lots – it has been found by experience that collectors often prefer to buy these guaranteed unsorted lots rather than the graded wares of dealers, and give themselves the pleasure of checking, sorting and classifying the stamps. The stamps are cheap since labour costs for cleaning and sorting are avoided. These can often be higher than the actual price of the stamps in dealer's cheap packets. These two features (work saved by the dealers and welcomed by the buyers) form the outstanding advantage of this method of trading missionary stamps by press adverts. It might also be noted that the missionaries need as good as no capital to acquire their stock and process it.

* Name of a defunct Leipzig publishing house.

It appeared for the first time on 15th December 1862 under the title “Monthly Advertiser”. The publisher was Ed. Moore & Co. of Liverpool. With No. 3 of January 1863 the title changed to “Stamp Collectors Review”. It managed to survive for only 19 numbers, and disappeared in June 1864. The literary aspect of philately had now developed to the point where the first specialist German-language magazine could appear.

II. THE SPECIALIST PRESS

a) Needs and Problems.

The specialist philatelic press fights a resolute war to justify the existence of scientific studies in the field of philately, which for them is a “conditio sine qua non”. Only when this has been accepted can they go on to other aspects of their tasks. A Philatelic journal exists to support and advise all new discoveries relating to older and more recent times, make them known to all those likely to be interested; to combat or mediate warn and explain; to act as a bond between the many friends of philately so as to enable to exchange ideas and stamps in a fruitful way; and to afford space for the explanation of all progressive and useful ideas. Moreover they must not ignore the commercial aspect, and must support honest and fair dealings. If the specialist press is to meet its aims fully, its activities must be fourfold, and exhibit the following properties:

1. Communication and reportage, so that new issues and real novelties can be made known in good time.
2. Set up and maintain a high intellectual level, so that the widest possible range of views finds expression and special studies are brought to the attention of the entire collecting world. Articles of a light, even satirical or humorous nature may also be published.
3. Advise and warn, using words and pictures to illustrate and teach about methods of production, reproductions, counterfeits and forgeries etc. of postage stamps with cancellations.
4. Promote trade, rousing the wish to collect and deal by discussing collectors and dealers in all parts of the world, thus supporting a vigorous commerce.

The task facing the independent specialist press form the basis for their work as a whole. Not all magazines try to cover the entire range; many specialize in line with individual interest groups, and in spite of their one-sided approach and perhaps resulting harmful effect they may act to clear the field and thus have an effect on the life of the topic as a whole*.

The specialist philatelic press is also worthy of note because it is dealing with actual printed items (postage stamps), and thus affords a detailed critical treatment of printing technology as developed in all phases of the XIX century. It looks at printing techniques from the most diverse angles. If the stamp represents the graphic work – often also the artwork – the paper and printing technologies involved will be studied, evaluated, reviewed and described down to the finest detail. But there are also counterfeits and forgeries. No one else will study an art print, a book or other piece of print work so carefully and thoroughly with magnifying glass and microscope for variations, double imprints, defective printing, hairlines, watermark intervals and other such fine details. Then philately and its specialist press must go on to associate regions, and often deal with them in great detail. Its actual work only begins roughly in the year 1840, but obviously the “pre-philatelic” era also has to be taken into account, since this may be of quite outstanding interest for the study of postal and communications services and their history, and for the development of philatelic science. Postal history, wartime and colonial issues must receive special attention. Thus for example a reliable account of the Lombardy cancellations can give a much better knowledge of the activities of the Austrian bureaucracy in Northern Italy than the historian or the popular imagination can supply. The same is true of the German colonies, and particularly of the German overseas post in Morocco, China or the Levant. Geographical studies are also essential for philately. With all these questions it should be borne in mind that philately strictly speaking does not relate to remote ages, but is limited to just the lifetimes of three men. If we now take into account the well-known tendencies of authors, we must reach the conclusion that they have built up a many-sided respectable domain of scientific study open to effort and striving in which thousands of people take a lively part, and to which the owners of many well-known or even world-famous names make their contribution.

* What is he going on about?

The philatelic literature and its specialist press has already received much attention over the years. Some of its friends have always directed their collecting activity as philatelists towards the literature and not the stamps. Over the years many quite considerable libraries of the German-language specialist literature have been built up, and it would not be too difficult today to get together about 10,000 different volumes for an exhibition. Unfortunately the biggest collections have been lost to Germany. The famous Fraenkel collection was sold from Berlin to London after the death of its owner, while their most valuable of all the Suppantshitsch collection was sold to the United States in February 1923 after an unsuccessful attempt to secure it for the German Library in Leipzig. It was acquired by the Collectors Club of New York during the inflation period. Today there are only a few collections in Germany that contain any great number of German-language periodicals. Some that are worthy of mention are the collections of the State Postal Museum, the Prussian State Library, the German Library (relatively complete from 1913 onwards), the Berlin Philatelic Club, and the Libraries of Messrs Beck (Berlin), Krotzsch (Leipzig), Bungerz (Munich-Gladbach), Glasewald (Grossnitz S-A) and Schütte (Magdeburg). Luckily, interest in the bibliographical side of Germany philately increases from year to year, as the upturn in the Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors reveals. We must not fail to appreciate, however, that the main emphasis is on the specialist periodical press and has been from the beginning, since the most important papers have been published by them. Also, most of the books published have owed their initial publication to the specialist press.

b) Types of Specialist Press

I now consider it necessary to start with a short general survey of the different types of specialist press and their contents.

We first find a group of completely independent papers, which report freely on everything of interest without regard to anything. They include specialist articles of all sorts, and deal with every current topic as well as research studies. They describe market conditions in a critical and independent manner, give announcements of new issues and the likely speculation in them and so on. A forum is available for their readers. The adverts section, which may not be present^{*}, cannot influence the text in any way.

This small group of independent papers is in contrast with a large number that are related either financially or via their publishers. This must naturally have a corresponding effect on the text. We are dealing, here principally with the large group of dealers' magazines. These are directed at collectors, and on the whole are well written, but by and large they are openly or covertly designed to promote the interests of the stamp trade or at least not go against them. These more or less justified concerns of the German stamp trade, so many-sided that it would be too big a job to discuss them in more detail in spite of the obvious connections. Many excellent treatments of this subject can be found in the philatelic literature[♥]. The dealers use these “house magazines” to bring their offers, which often far exceed the text, to the notice of their customers at regular intervals. Some of them even take foreign adverts as well. Many use their house magazines to put out supplements to their house catalogues. It must be stressed that though these magazines contain a good deal that is of low quality – often what is simply a dealer’s price list appears in a large format mimicking a journal – they often contain much that is valuable. Many house journals have quite prominent editors and contributors who are relatively independent of the firm. A unique example is a magazine put out by a Weimar periodical publisher, which is neutral like the illustrated supplements of the German daily press[♦] (e.g. the Elsner Supplements), and is sent out to its readers by different stamp dealers under different headings/imprints. Some dealers’ magazines appear in connection with the catalogues put out by the firm concerned. They then carry the supplement to the catalogue wither as their main purpose (Michel Supplements) or as a filler. This has the advantage on the one hand, a catalogue does not get out of date or alienated before the new edition appears, and on the other that the catalogue publishers retain a contact and exchange of views with their wider audience. It should be mentioned in this connection that the greatest and most useful German dealer in the entire state is, strictly speaking, the German State Post, which has much to gain here and nothing to lose.

^{*} Literally: "Which according to the trouble of acquiring drops out"

It should be remembered that every year positively enormous quantities of new stamps go into the international market and then direct into collections, and that a very great number of stamps are removed from the postal trade by special cancellations and philatelic overprintings. In the year 1913, for example, apart from Bavaria and the Colonial post (which supplied a higher number) 68,776 of the then highest (dearest) stamp, prices at 5 marks[⊕], were sold, but only a very small proportion were actually used for postal purposes (Berlin and Pforzheim, which sent out the majority of letters requiring this value of stamp). The numbers are significantly higher for the other 15 values then current, since obviously the dearest were the least often bought.

The detailed and precise reports on new issues in the entire specialist press of the world form a regular free advertisement for the unique stamp trade, and our State Post, then the only German stamp producer, employs it to great advantage. The postage stamp in its unused state is a receipt for cash in advance that has no intrinsic value, in other words is an order for an as-yet unperformed service from the State Post as per the order (in this cast the stamp) according to the existing rate of duty and its height[•]. This receipt, which, is yearly bought by the post as many examples in value from 5 pfennings to 5 marks from home and foreign collectors who have it in their collections in unused or specially – cancelled form and[♦]..... Thus for example the Post Office get 5 marks for a stamp which has cost them the twelfth part of a pfenning in production and retailing costs when it has been produced in a large format by the best copperplate (offset and ordinary single-colour printing are still cheaper). Thus the Post Office has large receipts without any corresponding outgoings. No other private or public undertaking enjoys such an advantage since neither ? nor travel tickets are never similarly bought in the unused state which postage stamps ? ?.

The German State – as must be mentioned in this connection – counts as one of the generally solid stamp countries, since its stamps are issued only for actual postal use, and not as a speculation against collectors’ interests and wishes. This does happen in many countries, e.g. Portugal, Danzig, Memel, Italy, San Marino, Liechtenstein, most Central and South American states etc. This is not by any means to say that the Reich Post should put out this kind of

♥ As an example we may mention the dissertation by the present clerk to the combined seminars of Leipzig University, Dr. Ammon “The German Stamp trade especially after the World War” Fischer-Verlag, Jena, 1927.

♦ What ever they may be?

⊕ Michel 1927 German State No. 97, Wilhelm II. Copperplate.

• As near as I can get to a meaning.

♦ Simply cannot make sense of this.

speculative issue which is not strictly postally necessary. The specialist press is practically unanimous in branding such issues, distinguishes them by smaller print in cataloguing and degrades them so that they cannot be looked on as completely suitable items of collection. As experience shows, such issues fall into disrepute. Since they are unsound they are less collected and do not get into albums, and so their sales on world markets falls right off. The Reich Post on the other hand can serve German philately and itself better and more intelligently by supporting artistic and scientific queries, reports and researchs.[⊕]

I thus come to a second group, what are called the collectors' magazines. Here again, there are quite different basic conditions for their appearance. In the first place come the society journals, which everyone can produce in his own speciality by means of a society or at least in connection with one or with the financial support or help of one. These journals have some scientific articles and items of general interest, reports on new issues and very detailed Society reports. The minutes of Society meetings appear in here, reports of members' activities etc. They include an adverts section devoted either to members' wants alone or to general notices of all kinds. These may be contrasted with a larger group of those which are satisfied with purely Society communications and have at most a column for matters of interest, e.g. reports on forgeries and frauds. These are regarded as philatelically worthless. Like these individual societies, there are bigger unions of collectors or dealers like the "Union of German Philatelic Societies" putting out magazines for their readers which can be classed in one or other of these groups. Many societies which cannot afford to put out their own magazine, issue their society reports via the stamp collector' corner of a daily paper if they are of purely local interest, or, if they have a wider range, in a free magazine or one put out by a dealer. The printing of these society reports (official organ of ...) is usually done free, usually involves an obligation on all members to take out a subscription at a reduced price.

Most collectors' magazines serve the interests of collectors in general, but there are quite a number which restrict themselves to a certain special field, e.g. "Private Stamps", "German Colonies", cancellations, entires, air mail, stamps from the Soviet Union, and others that deal with the philatelic literature.

We also find certain advertising papers which entirely lack text. However these are almost entirely dealers' organs, and of less interest to the collector. An example of an exception is the "SW Offers Sheet" (SW Offertenblatt), which was aimed at collectors but otherwise has to be looked on as a supplement which took the adverts from the main issue of "Sammler-Woche".

c) Format of the Specialist Press

There would be little to say here about the external appearance of the magazines from the printing point of view they have gone with the times, and very good and quite primitive make-ups can be found according to the means available. Crises, wars and inflation also have their effect on the printing side. Relatively everything can be found in the format: one of the biggest was the "Briefmarken-Rundschau" in Danzig in the year 1920 at 350 : 515 mm. The smallest magazines were "The American Collector", measuring only 50 : 89 mm and published in 6 numbers in 1890 by Miller in New Chester, and "The Vest Pocket Philatelist" founded in Denver in 1908 with a page size of 70 : 90 mm.

No definite line can be taken about the places of appearance. The German periodicals appeared all over the place according to their individual circumstances, even in some small towns, a particular part in the number of magazines appearing is played by Leipzig, which has brought out most philatetical journals.

The editors of specialist magazines get their material from the most varied sources: as well as long original articles, most of them based on someone's research results, and reports on new issues, which are relatively easy to obtain or compile, the magazine must report on many other topics from the philatelic world and thus in its own interests should not lose track of current events at least within its own programme. This programme will include the earliest possible mention of meetings, and auctions, and accurate reports on these, explanations for questions raised of a speculative nature, matter relating to the post and the World Postal Union such as the opening of new postal institutions and airmail routes, the use of advertising or anniversary stamps, reports on frauds and fakes, swindles, law proceedings, deaths and anniversaries of famous philatelists, new publications in the literature and very many more. The satisfactory performance of all these tasks naturally calls for a great deal of effort, which cost money: since this is only available to a small number of editors, the defects make themselves obvious in various ways, either by the use of insipid filler material or the use of reports and articles copied from other magazines and newspapers with or without acknowledgement.

[⊕] or something to that effect.

The magazines often suffer from the defective specialist knowledge of the numerous writers of articles who cannot and will not distinguish between fact and their own opinions, or from the inadequate and superficial information of the editor responsible. The specialist press suffers very much from this at the present day.

They lack in particular a factually soundly based and conducted correspondence which it would be in their interest to encourage. An attempt in this direction was made by Arthur Wübern (Hamburg) who put out a "Philatelistische Pressekorrespondenz" in 1915. This journal only managed two issues. Conditions were unfavourable because of rising costs and the war, which meant no or limited reports from abroad, so it could not last.

The text part of practically all the specialist journals also contains a regular item called the "Black List". Under this heading forgeries, frauds and slow payers are pilloried in a manner and detail that is hardly to be found in any other special subject. These detailed warnings have the advantage that a very great deal of dangerous material becomes known. On the other hand, unless care is taken they often publish the crudest and most atrocious material, which can only be called careless.*

The entire stamp trade has developed in all its branches over the years so that it strives to manage without ready money as soon as possible and go over more and more to exchange dealings and with the help of speculation to increase the value of its property and then get rid of it at the right moment before a fall and barter it against other promising goods. An individual stamp, or better, a given species of stamp (Seeback stamps, ruling stamps from the German colonies, Liechtenstein associates, Royal and Imperial field post, Zemstvo issues, sheet wares¹) is directly relevant in this connection, and there can be so to speak purely commercial papers whose price will depend on supply and demand, both of which are more or less "created" by the wholesale trade. Along with catalogues, the entire specialist press, both collectors' and dealers' magazines in their text and adverts sections, forms an indispensable and often adaptable tool for this pricing policy in the international stamp trade. The dealer uses the specialist press in its various types because this press – whether positively or negatively does not matter – generally concerns itself principally with one type of stamp which owes its market value essentially to the interest taken in it by the general public. For example it often happens that a stamp is put out in an issue of say 20,000 items and rouses the immediate momentary interest of collectors since it is mentioned over a period in the technical press, and cost perhaps 100 marks, whereas another stamp may be put out in an issue of 5,000, i.e. intrinsically rarer, but because it does not get mentioned it is readily available from the trade and can be supplied at 30 marks.

Thus it is often more important for a dealer for a stamp of which he has large stocks to be taken up and mentioned by the specialist press than from him to announce it without preliminaries to his circle of clients. Many dealers quietly buy up all of one type of stamp available on the market (even as much as 90% of the entire issue). The stamp is then suddenly in demand, but not generally available. The price rises above the normal value since the demand has become great and the transaction is carried out. With luck this can bring in considerable sums.

* To say the least!

¹ These are terms used in the trade to denote certain kinds of stamp.

Many dealers attempt to get publicity in the specialist press for a perhaps not entirely satisfactory issue, or one whose history has not been unravelled, but of which they are holding large stocks. In this case it is important to the dealer for a stamp to be quoted in the trade press not as a “new edition” but as a “2nd edition”, and a German colonial stamp that was actually never used in the colonies to be designated as a “Berlin issue” not as a “reprint”. It is also important to have the stamp appearing in the large albums.

Thus we have the curious situation that it is not the adverts alone but rather the scientific articles in the specialist press which willingly or unwillingly perform the function of price-setting factors.*

Whilst these internal connections between the international stamp trade and the specialist press are less visible on the outside and are usually unknown to the bulk of readers, who are only interested in their own collections, the contents of the magazines relate to clear and direct questions from collectors (or direct questions about collecting) which retain their general interest for collectors for long periods, often for decades. As an example we may mention the Hill-Chalmers battle for the honour of inventing the postage stamp, the development of airmail from the philatelic point of view, the extra charge for charity stamps, which most people do not bother about but which collectors are so to speak forced to concern themselves with¹. As well as the album problem, we must also mention the currently very important catalogue problem, since the collector naturally takes a great interest in the price structure of the stamp catalogues that appear afresh every year. In contrast to the dealer, the collector is interested less in the level of annotation in the catalogue than in the values of the individual stamps having the correct relationship to one another. The treatment of present-day collectors’ organizations, their for and against, is also the subject of lively exchanges of opinion. Here the textual content of the specialist press can carry out a deciding and clarifying function in many connections.

The advertisement sections and purely announcement sheets also present an ever-changing picture and supply much characteristic material. The many foreign adverts, which are multiplying over the years and were prompt to appear again after the war provide striking proof of the international importance that the specialist German press has gained and maintained. The inland adverts also point to a lively commerce and private exchange transactions. The size and layout of the adverts, the regularity of their appearance and such like details yields information on the nature of the business and the importance of individual firms. It is often not easy to separate the wheat from the chaff for those responsible. Swindling adverts are always managing to smuggle themselves into ever the best magazines. The publicity for many magazines is, as one often sees, extremely lively and original. This means that the specialist philatelic press has ? ? ?.

It is an established fact that foreigners are much readier to put in an advert if it does not cost them money. The publisher, who is simultaneously the dealer and the “board of directors” makes use of this and thus does double the business. He does not ask the foreigners for money, but for good used stamps from the foreign country concerned. In this way he saves himself the bother of handling cash, the losses in getting it changed, and the cost of the stamps he needs for his business or the circulations to his exchange circle.

The relationship between the big advertising sheets and the specialist magazines is unimportant for this ? ? ?.

It is interesting to look at the number of philatelic journals listed in the catalogues, usually incorrectly under the heading “Sport”. Thus the “Newspaper Catalogue 1927” from the Society of German Advertising Agent lists 23 specialist papers, 6 of which had already ceased in 1927. Sperlings Periodicals Address Book lists 15 in 1893, 13 of them being

* Not half so curious as this man’s German!

¹ Collectors are in favour of the lowest possible extra charges, since they believe more is gained that way and that charity stamps will find wider acceptance if, for example, an 8 pfenning stamp receives a 2Pf surcharge and is not increased by 100 or even 300%.

German language magazines on philately. In 1928 it gave 28 items. The Mosse catalogue gives the following numbers in its inland section:

1910	15	Titles	10	no	longer	appearing
1926	21	“	5	“	“
1927	20	“	2	“	“

It is very striking that it is often the most important and solid magazines which have failed completely. The Ala catalogue listed 24 German titles in 1925.

In 1910 we find an attempt at a philatelic journal record in the shape of a 50-page octavo brochure from the firm of C. Malke in Leipzig with the title “International Philatelic Periodicals Catalogue 1910”. Subscribers as well as advertisers acted as advisers to this little work. In a neat layout, this gives the actual magazines and periodical price-lists on the left, and the corresponding adverts on the right. Without giving any claim to completeness, it deals with 26 German specialist magazines, then 79 from the rest of Europe and 17 from overseas, a total of 122 in all. This first attempt was not followed up, since the extended editions did not appear in 1911 because of lack of demand.

In brief, the problems involved in the format of the specialist press as dealt with here are on the whole very many-sided. They have as constant struggle to stay in existence, as the course of history shows. A philatelic journal, which lacks a firm editorial policy down to even the smallest details, and instead just tries to muddle through, has no prospect of success, even if it has strong financial support for a time. If it wants to assume a prominent place in philatelic literature, it must strive to give value in its work, lay down its purposes, aims and intentions and be clear as to the means it will use to achieve these. This type of magazine is worthy of respect, since it will be supported and promoted by a circle of serious readers as a tool for research and a representative of the output of world philately.

d) History

From the first specialist journal to today

The first decade. The 1st May 1893 was the day on which the first specialist magazine in the German language the “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” appeared. Over four years and 48 issues, till its closure on 1st April 1897 it gave much information and stimulus to German collectors. It was published by the coin and antique dealers Zschiesche & Köder in Leipzig. Printing was by Fischer & Wittig in Leipzig. The issues were in a 210 : 170 mm format and had a uniform title page showing pictures of four stamps : The Saxon 3 pfenning and the Bavaria 1 Kreuzer, as the two oldest and most popular German stamps, plus the Hongkong 96 cents and the Turkey 5 piastre as highly exotic values. The 12 – issue volumes ran from May to April. The entire first year, however, gave no details of volume or year. The individual issues were usually of 8 pages, so that the first year had 96 pages. No 1/1 contained the following articles : “Introduction”, “A few words on older German stamps”, “Trials, forgeries and imitations”, “Private stamps of the United States of America”, “Antigua and Nevis”, and “Worms’ eye view”[♦]. The two works by J. B. Moens, “Manuel” (Manual) and “Illustrations du Manuel du Collectionneur de Timbres-poste” (Illustrations to the Stamp Collectors’ Manual) were described under “Literature”. The information was also given that the Zschiesche & Köder catalogue would be published consecutively in the magazine. One part appeared simultaneously with details of the price. Six adverts and a heading “Correspondence” completed the contents of this first example of the German philatelic press. The following notice appeared on p. 384 at the end of the last number of the IV volume :

“We hereby notify our esteemed subscribers that the “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” ceases to appear with this No. 48 which concludes the fourth volume. At the same time we inform our esteemed clients that our stamp business goes on as before, and we solicit their continued custom. The sixth edition of our catalogue will appear within a short time. Subscribers who have paid for a further term will be contacted by us with a view to refunding them the balance”.

[♦] A guess word not in any of my dictionaries.

This first German journal was thus carried on for four years and gave its admirers much useful material. Although this publication must have been significant – its values cannot be estimated today – it was still not commercially viable and the publishers did not find it possible to make up the difference for idealistic reasons. It can be found today in many collections; it is not particularly rare, though it might be very difficult to get all 48 numbers complete with their covers. Some of the issues sold out quite quickly. This is revealed by an announcement in no. 36. This stated that vols. I-III were still available, with the exception of nos. 4 and 5 of vol. I. No. 3 was no longer available from no. 39 onwards.

The four volumes contained a whole series of offers and advertisements for other literature, new magazines and catalogues, e.g. the Stafford Smith and Smith catalogues (in no. 3), “Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel” from Wilhelm Reichel & Co in Kaufbeuren (in no. 8), “Der Briefmaken-Freund” from Moritz Ruhl (in no. 12), “Allgemeine deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung” from Ernst Roschlau in Coburg (in no. 15), “Le Timbrophile” from P Mahé (in no. 20), “Addressbuch europäischer Briefmarkenhändler” from Chr. Mann (in no. 21), “The Stamp Collectors Magazine” from Stafford Smith and Smith (in no.23), “Catalogue des Literarischen Museums in Leipzig” (in no. 32), “Der Briefmaken-Sammler” from G. Bauschke (in no. 34), and “Philatelist” from Edward L. Pemberton (in no. 44).

The pioneering work carried out by Zschiesche & Köder in Leipzig in printing and publishing the magazine was trailblazing and a signpost for many others, who profited from their mistakes and experience. They were the creators of the first specialist journal in the German language and as such will be remembered.

Only two of the periodicals from the first “classic” period were able to survive into the following decades, and one has lasted to the present day. Hence the work done in the early years should be all the more respected and valued in that its material had to be gathered by primitive means, and the specialist press fulfilled its main function of introducing collectors to systematic regular and philatelically respectable collecting, in spite of the hard struggle they had to keep themselves in existence. However, I shall leave the last word on them to the greatest expert of this period, Suppantshitsch, who said in 1901 :

“If we take a critical look at the products of the specialist press from this first period, we might easily be led to think their value small; but this judgement would be incorrect as well as unfair. Unfair when we bear in mind that chaos still reigned in the field of philately at that time, the subject was new and totally undeveloped, and everyone who wrote about it must be looked on as a pioneer, a pathfinder deserving the thanks of those who come later. Incorrect, because much of what was laid down in the leading magazines of that period formed the basis of later research, and because the old magazines are still the inexhaustible mind and source from which our present-day technical writers draw”.

The last quarter of the XIX century. The happy outcome of the Franco – German War and the foundation of the Reich had a considerable influence on the whole of German scientific life. The war was followed by the years of financial speculation during which there was a surge in the improperly funded economy, followed by the inevitable collapse. Of course, the specialist philatelic press could not remain unaffected by these developments: it had to adapt itself to completely new and much extended trends in stamp-collecting. The principal reasons for this were the appearance and spread of special collecting, the foundation of many exchange societies, the spread of information about forgeries and the necessary methods of testing for and warning against them, and above all in the world-wide importance of the German stamp trade attained during these years.

Stamps had now been in existence for a generation, were multiplying daily, and their numbers increased still further after the World Postal Union was founded by the German Postmaster General von Stephan in 1874. Hence it soon became unthinkable to do complete collecting, i.e. build up a large-scale general collection. As a result of the spread of collecting, the rarer stamps became increasingly sought after and also rose in price. Thus, people soon turned to specialist collecting, and began to try to build up a “complete” collection on some postal topic that particularly interested them, instead of or in addition to a general collection. Naturally, someone who decided to specialize in a country would have to know this region, he would start by collecting freshly used specimen, then would go on to seek out all likely and unlikely variants and differences in size, colour, printing, paper, watermarks, perforations and even cancellations that were known, or that he himself had “uncovered”. The specialist press came in here: it presented him with a range of new problems. Countless papers had to accompany these researchers, to stimulate fresh activity and publish the results.

The stamp trade too was of course affected by these new and for them very satisfactory methods of collecting, but there is no room to go into this here. The new direction taken by the trade revealed itself in the issue of numberless individual in-house dealers’ price lists, which were sometimes merely stock lists, and also in the need for more extensive magazines of dealers’ adverts, in which supply and demand could be brought to general attention.

The next topic to come to the fore was that of swindles and direct forgeries. The technical and chemical means available were directed towards even the greatest rarities and artistically most accomplished stamps. The last point to be considered is the wide and rapid extension of society activities. This movement developed its own specialist press, and were this was not possible adapted the dealers’ papers to its requirements. The dealers too knew how to fly Society colours by getting the members onto their circulation lists and so getting their business. As well as the purely local societies there were many others that covered wider areas, even perhaps the entire world. The principal task of the society magazines – and hence their general value – lay not in the direction of philatelic research, but in putting out society notices, reports of meetings and members’ activities, subscription reminders, announcements and the like. These were exactly the factors that the specialist press had to deal with at this point in time, and by which they were influenced, by contrast with earlier periods, sometimes favourably and sometimes unfavourably.

A certain degree of originality was certainly not lacking in the foundation of the polemical journal “Rowland Hill”. It started on 1st April 1881, was published in ten numbers by three firms (Löwinger and Knöpflmacher, then Max Löwinger in Vienna, and lastly Johann Hydö in Neupest), and finished on the 15th July 1882. this magazine dealt, as its title suggests, with the claim of Rowland Hill to be the originator of the postage stamp. This began to be questioned suddenly at the start of the 80s. The entire specialist press concerned itself with this question for an entire decade. Objective studies and the opinions of hotheads led to a lively to-and-fro. The stone was set rolling when Patrick Chalmers suddenly claimed that not Rowland Hill but his own father, a deceased bookseller, was the actual inventor of the adhesive postage stamp. This claim was defended by Patrick Chalmers with the solemn enthusiasm in many writings in which he sought to justify it. He received support from many sides. According to Suppanschitsch, Lieutenant Colonel Carl von Gündel came forward in Austria as a more energetic partisan than Chalmers himself. He supported Chalmers cause in numerous articles in the German language press, until he was upset by the attacks of certain opponents who went beyond the limits of proper objective criticism, and threw in the sponge. His newspaper articles were based on thorough studies of the original sources, and carries the warm tone of honest conviction. Pearson Hill, the son of the English postal reformer, took up the cause of his father, but he took a more temperate and factual line. This paper war was carried on for years in words and pictures in the world’s specialist press with a vigour hardly seen in any other field, until it was brought to a sudden end by the unexpected death of Patrick Chalmers (on 3rd October 1891). Pearson Hill only spoke up for his father once more, in the year 1895¹. He died in 1898. The point at issue was never definitely cleared up, but the accepted view today is that Chalmers was the actual inventor, whereas Hill has the permanent credit of bringing postage stamps into service. The contending articles themselves form a red thread running through the entire philatelic press of the 80's.

Probably the most valuable periodical of this period as far as contents go was the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" published by Ernst Heitmann in Leipzig. It first appeared on 1st January 1888 and took a leading place amongst the German journals until it ceased towards the end of 1900.

On 12th December of the same year appeared the first issue of what is now a fairly rare journal, "Der Bazar", with the subtitle "Centralblatt für Philatelie". It consisted of four pages printed in three narrow columns of Gothic type in quarto format on ordinary newsprint. It contained adverts as well as useful scientific articles, but many of the adverts were "fillers", or related to other goods such as cigars, conversation lexical (phrase books), printed matter, music magazines and the like. Editing, printing and publishing were all carried out by Georg Heinrich Meyer at Quackenbrück near Hanover: only the last of the 12 numbers to appear were published by H. Crone (Anklam). The only volume known to me that contains all twelve issues is in the State Postal Museum♦.

By the beginning of the 90's, about 90 journals in the German language had already appeared, though many had only a very short life. In England the corresponding number was 150, and as many as 320 in the United States. The average quality of these magazines was not particularly high. However, very important new developments then occurred which cast their shadow on the specialist press as well. Albums were improved, paste and glue had long since given way to fold(er)s. The study of philately had deepened and broadened; exact and systematic research had pushed the old superficiality and childish trifling into the background. Cancellations and entires received more attention on the appearance of the early German colonies and the first overseas posts of the new German Reich. Rich men like Rothschild (Frankfurt), Ferrari¹, Dr. Legrand and others built up extensive specialist collections. Since they hardly had to worry about the financial aspect, they were often able to accumulate a great deal of material, which made it easier for researchers to carry out valuable studies in the service of philately.

As I showed earlier, illustrations and attempts at illustration had come into prominence in the preceding years. Photography and half-tone engraving had gradually been taken into the service of the specialist press. Fine screen electrotypes were printed on glossy paper, so that illustrations became more accurate, faster (more up-to-date) and more numerous. Hence, completely different things were expected from the technical press in every direction.

Relatively few magazines stand out from this period on account of their wide circulation, longer life or good editors who ensured their importance by publishing valuable research material. Competition between dealers soon became very intense, and the trade was well developed in Germany. Society activity was many-sided, and many individual collectors were specialist and researchers. they were served throughout the world by the German language specialist press, which after an unprecedented 38 years of development and effort had gained and demonstrated its right to exist by the turn of the century.

From the turn of the Century to the World War. For a large proportion of collectors, the turn of the century played a special part in the planning or classification of their collections.

¹ Archive Abt. XXII, Stand 210. (I think this must be a misprint, the same footnote is given as applying to the item on page 7 of Betty's transcript.

♦ Archive, Section XXII, Stand 210. As referred to above.

¹ Philippe La Renotière de Ferrari had the greatest private collection in the world, kept in Paris. He left it to the State Postal Museum. After his death in Lausanne on 20th May 1917 it was confiscated, sold by auction in 1921/22 as part of the German war reparations and so unfortunately scattered.

Many of them collected only up to 1900, so as to become more conversant with the dear old field, and specialize in or even complete it. Others only began to collect with the 20th century, and ignored the previous 60 years. The periodical literature follows this division to a large extent today. Many magazines concentrate, perhaps even exclusively, on issues before 1900, whereas others divide up their catalogues and price list along these lines (see Borek). However it must be said that this division is effective from the philatelic point of view, and there is no inner necessity to take the year 1914 into account. From the purely superficial viewpoint the German specialist press has altered little if at all in the intervening period: nothing outstanding was achieved, and only a handful of new publications managed to hold their ground over the years. Some of them built up a regular following and fully covered a need. There was a further development in catalogues; as with price lists, interest tended to concentrate more and more on the last years before the war.

The specialist German philatelic press had developed to a point where the interruption of the World War could be a sort of cut-off point in some respects. An external survey of the entire German specialist press for the pre-war period was given, thanks to the valuable and unselfish work of Hugo Krötzsch, at Bugra 1914 in Leipzig, where a large specialist library of about 10,000 volumes was exhibited along with 23 cases of periodicals. The title was "Origin (1863-72) and development of German philatelic periodicals, society magazines and advertising sheets down to the present day".

The World War. The World War left its traces on the philatelic press as well. In the first place, people no longer had any time for stamps. The whole trade was closed down in August 1914 under the pressure of events. Hardly a single magazine appeared at home or abroad. However, as soon as the first weeks of the war had passed, attention was again drawn to postage stamps by the issue of the German garrison stamps in Belgium and the Austrian field post series. The first issues of the magazines gradually began to appear in October and November with an eye to the Christmas trade. However, a large number had closed down and many had changed their editorial boards. The influence of wartime made itself more and more felt. The circulation of even the best magazines slumped to an unprofitable level, since the greater part of the foreign trade had gone, and many home subscribers were on active service. Moreover, the state of the reporting left much to be desired, partly because new work was not being done (again because of the war), and partly because stamps from Entente countries could only be imported without covers, later by roundabout means, and expensive if indeed they could be obtained at all. A good deal also changed in the printing side. Getting hold of paper presented difficulties, worn types were not renewed, illustrations were reduced or disappeared altogether, even bookbinders could not operate as they did in peacetime. Advertising sections also had to fight hard for their existence. The profitable items from abroad had completely dried up, and offers of exchanges were rarely made. But in spite of all these new drawbacks the five years of war still brought a whole series of new publications, which were to have widely differing destinies.

Post-War Period and Inflation. The war was over: even though it was a long time before international trade got back into its full swing, but collectors and the trade soon began to show a lively interest. Attempts were made to get missing items from abroad. It was even possible, without prejudice to the Fatherland, to take the many "War Tax" issues from England and its dominions and other Entente war stamps whose existence had barely been suspected, into one's collection. Collapse and revolution brought a mass of new material from all over Europe. There was great interest everywhere in the first issues from new states, like the adopted and emergency issues from the successor states to the Danube monarchy. In this way a wide field was opened up for the specialist press to sort out and deal with. On the difficulties of these troubled times, with the poor currency exchange conditions and unreliable, often indirect, reporting, there was a great deal that needed explaining and correcting. Above all, earlier connections had been severed during the long years of war. The exchange circles gradually resumed their activities, old societies whose members had returned from the front came back to life, and numbers of new ones were started. Thus the existing journals started work again, and the ones that soonest managed to overcome the difficulties mentioned had won the race in the teeth of vigorous competition. Conditions were still too uncertain for new publications in the year 1919, so few new journals appeared, but in 1920 and 1921 during which the German stamp trade regained its former world position there was a vast number of new journals of all types and qualities.

The year of the most severe devaluation of the currency produces no more new magazines in Germany itself.

Many periodicals, particularly those belonging to societies, fell victim to the inflation that began in 1922, others ceased publication for a period or helped themselves through the difficult period by slimming down drastically until this unspeakable period came to an end at the beginning of 1924.

After the stabilization. The next epoch in the history of the specialist philatelic press was preceded by a difficult time which had been catastrophic in a manner not yet fully understood. One magazine after another fell victim to it, since a subscription decided on at the beginning of a year was often not sufficient on receipt to pay for the postage of a single issue. So there was great joy when the "billions" period came to an end when the stabilized mark replaced the Reichmark, and it was at last possible to do some proper accounting again. An explosion took place at once. Initiated by the outwardly normalized aspect of the times, the year 1924 in particular saw a whole range of new specialist magazines, the reason and necessity for whose existence was in doubt. Most of these new publications were unnecessary, and were even a crime against philately, since it was more important to support and maintain the existing journals that were struggling for their existence.

An important item founded in 1925 was a supplement to "Die Philatelie" (Neustadt/Orla), entitled "Bibliographie 1925", aimed at covering the philatelic literature in German. This should have appeared in regular parts. Friedr. Leitenberger (Berlin) took on this thankless task and began to collect and classify the appropriate material with the most complete accuracy. All amateurs of literature and all researchers were grateful to the author and publisher, and its appearance was greeted with general satisfaction. Unfortunately this well-begun work, which would have increased and maintained the value of many of the articles appearing in periodicals, had only one attempt, and had to be brought to an end in May for the obvious reasons. It has been shown that a single firm and a single editor were not in a position to cover the activity of the entire world free of charge. In my opinion the league of German Philatelic Societies or one of the big international organizations should have started the large and all-embracing bibliography that the philatelic world so badly needed.

Foreign-language texts gradually disappeared from the German magazines, and the many adverts in English disappeared once more from the catchpenny titles. At the same time however, foreigners noticed that Germans had regained their purchasing power. Thus, German texts and notices in German began to reappear everywhere in the international press. New periodicals in all parts of the world accepted German as an essential ingredient of their work.

The overall economic position in Germany worsened during the year 1925. Its effects were felt very strongly in the stamp trade. As a result, many collectors and dealers who had survived the inflation period decided that things were not likely to improve overnight and got out of stamps. The resulting unexpectedly large amount of material available at any price had a bad effect on the market. The technical press also underwent a shake-out: A good many disappeared that were no loss at all, but many useful titles fell victim to this plague on journals after the stabilization. However the year 1925 did not pass without new research and even new magazines emerging, even though far fewer than in the preceding period.

The year 1926 brought no improvements to the German stamp trade. Existing journals managed to keep going, and another six new ones appeared. One of these was "Das Postwertzeichen", the organ of the Union of German Philatelic Societies. 1927 saw only one new title "Der Sammlerfreund” which began in September as an independent supplement to Sammler-Woche. Four magazines ceased to appear, one of them being the Japanese-German Yebin Kite Zasshi, and another “Die Zeiten un Briefmarkenhandel”, which proved unable to succeed against the two German advertising papers. “Der Philatelist”, which had been the organ of the Dresden Society since 1877 ceased to appear at the end of the year in favour of the Union magazine. The “Deutsche Sammler-Zeitung”, the only magazine to concern itself essentially with entires, was not able to maintain itself, here again the last editorial referred to the Union periodical. Hence, during recent years the German-language philatelic press has undergone what in many respects is a purification process. However the immediate future will belong, not to the detriment of philately, to the supplements on philately published in the daily press, which I will talk about in its correct place.

The Specialist Press in the Light of Numbers. In looking at the development of the specialist press, there is a certain interest in looking at numerical relationships.

The number of German-language periodicals existing in the individual years were as follows:

1863	1 item	1885	18 items	1907	38 items
1864	5 items	1886	21 items	0908	40 items
1965	2 items	1887	21 items	0909	40 items
1866	2 items	1888	22 items	0910	43 items
1867	2 items	1889	27 items	1911	45 items
1868	1 item	1890	31 items	1912	44 items
1869	3 items	1891	37 items	1913	43 items
1870	3 items	1892	38 items	1914	43 items
1871	5 items	1893	51 items	1915	37 items
1872	7 items	1894	43 items	1916	35 items
1873	4 items	1895	45 items	1917	35 items
1874	3 items	1896	45 items	1918	34 items
1875	4 items	1897	39 items	1919	41 items
1876	8 items	1898	36 items	1920	58 items
1877	7 items	1899	34 items	1921	76 items
1878	8 items	1900	31 items	1922	64 items
1879	14 items	1901	29 items	1923	59 items
1880	13 items	1902	27 items	1924	69 items
1881	13 items	1903	23 items	1925	56 items
1882	17 items	1904	31 items	1926	57 items
1883	17 items	1905	34 items	1927	52 items
1884	20 items	1906	35 items	1928	49 items

These figures yield a slow but steady rise, interrupted by a few decreases, in the number of specialist papers. It came to an end in 1924, since, as will be described in another place, some journals were then made superfluous by the founding of the Union magazine “Das Postwertzeichen”, and others by the inclusion of philatelic columns in the daily papers.

We tend to get new collectors’ and society magazines being founded in years when society activities are prospering, whereas dealer magazines usually appear during periods of economic crisis. Dealers try to keep their trade in being by intensive advertising. Thus the figures above balance out to some extent, so that the effects of trade cycles are less clearly visible.

The fluctuations in periodical literature can be set out as follows for the individual periods :

	New Titles Appearing	Titles Folding
1863-1875	20	15

1876-1900	170	151
1901-1913	67	52
1914-1919	28	28
1920-1927	96	79
Total	381	325

Thus 56 journals survived, 52 until 1927. 4 were absorbed into other magazines without being formally closed down. For 1914 and 1919 the figures represent the state of affairs for the entire year, and not at the middle of the year (July).

The figures for the individual years can be broken down as follows :

Year	New Titles	New Titles in Leipzig	Closed	Difference
1863	1	(1)	-	+1
1864	4	(2)	3	+1
1865	-	-	1	-1
1866	2	(1)	1	+1
1867	-	-	1	-1
1868	-	-	-	-
1869	2	-	1	+1
1870	2	(1)	2	-
1871	3	-	1	+2
1872	3	-	3	-
1873	-	-	1	-1
1874	1	(1)	1	-
1875	2	-	-	+2
1876	4	(1)	2	+2
1877	1	-	2	-1
1878	2	-	-	+2
1879	7	(1)	4	+3
1880	2	-	4	-2
1881	4	-	-	+4
1882	6	(1)	4	+2
1883	4	(1)	2	+2
1884	3	-	3	-
1885	1	-	3	-2
1886	7	-	3	+4
1887	3	-	8	-5
1888	12	(1)	4	+8
1889	6	(1)	4	+2
1890	11	(5)	6	+5
1891	12	-	9	+3
1892	12	(3)	8	+4
1893	16	(3)	20	-4
1894	15	(4)	9	+6
1895	10	(1)	10	-
1896	11	(1)	13	-2
1897	8	(1)	12	-4
1898	6	(2)	6	-
1899	4	-	9	-5
1900	4	-	6	-2

1901	5	(1)	3	-2
1902	2	-	4	-2
1903	1	-	-	+1
1904	6	(1)	2	+4
1905	6	(1)	5	+1
1906	9	(2)	6	+3
1907	5	(1)	1	+4
1908	3	-	2	+1
1909	3	-	7	-4
1910	7	-	2	+5
1911	5	(1)	9	-4
1912	9	-	8	+1
1913	6	(1)	3	+3
1914	4	-	10	-6
1915	6	-	6	-
1916	1	-	3	-2
1917	3	-	5	-2
1918	6	(1)	1	+5
1919	8	-	3	+5
1920	19	(1)	10	+9
1921	26	(4)	13	+13
1922	9	(1)	10	-1
1923	5	(1)	14	-9
1924	18	(1)	14	+4
1925	8	-	10	-2
1926	10	(2)	7	+3
1927	1	-	1	-

The third number gives the difference between the number of magazines started and the number that closed. It thus indicates the years in which more journals were started than closed, or vice versa, and thus how the periodicals situation altered (increased or decreased). The figure in brackets gives the number of magazines published in Leipzig.

It is striking to see the number of new journals that did not manage to reach a second or third year, so that in fact only every third journal lasted longer than this, and only every seventh went on for a long time.

The periods of survival were as follows:

No. of Journals	Surviving Years	No. of Journals	Surviving Years
155	1	1	19
44	2	2	20
26	44	2	22
35	3	1	21
18	5	2	23
14	6	1	24
8	7	1	27
9	8	1	31
6	9	3	32
3	10	2	33
4	11	2	35
3	12	2	40
4	4	2	41

2	15	1	43
3	16	1	46
1	17	1	51
1	18	1	55

The extremely large number of attempts to start magazines that failed to reach their second or third year can be ascribed to the fact that they were founded by dilettantes, and had no inner necessity and no scientific or technical knowledge behind them, so that they could not be kept going when they proved unacceptable. They included many attempts at Society journals, which often failed when their editors changed, since societies easily lose patients if the first year does not close with a profit. We should not overlook what are known as seasonal magazines from stamp dealers. The stamp trade is in fact seasonal. This fact reacts on price levels, as reflected in the price reductions shown in catalogues. The actual reason is determined by the retail trade and individual purchases. These take place in the winter months, December in particular being the period of maximum demand. This is because stamps and albums are bought very largely as Christmas presents, and also because schoolboys, like professional men and merchants, tend to concentrate more on their stamps during the colder winter evenings. Thus, as we have said, the stamp trade adjusted early to this seasonal working.

The markets and auctions for the wholesale trade are timed to correspond: the market prices rise in autumn and decline in spring. The catalogues appear late in the year, beginning with Zumstein's, then the three editions of Senf including the corresponding list from Borek, and closing with Michel-Europa, the overseas part of which completes the circle of catalogues in the German tongue. The magazines adapt themselves to this pattern. They often publish double issues in the summer, whereas the text and especially the adverts sections are expanded in autumn and winter. Very short-lived dealers' papers tended to appear in the autumn months of the crises years, then stop again in the first months or the summer of the following year.

Apart from the season, the development of philatelic magazines publishing depends above all on the trend of fashion, and this from a double point of view. It can happen – and interested dealers often helped it to happen via their influence with the technical press – that a certain section of the market suddenly becomes all the rage. The reason may lie in political events or – as is usually the case – in the appearance of an unannounced, well-developed and so cheap series of stamps. Older issues from the country concerned are then in demand and purchased, the dealers cannot get enough material and the price rises in response to the demand. Detailed special articles appear in the press about particular features and new discoveries: an area hitherto neglected becomes all at once “high style” for a shorter or longer time. As examples we may mention Bosnia, Iceland, Liberia and Persia. An event like this may bring to life magazines devoted to this special region alone, such as “Der Ukrainische Philatelist” for the stamps of the Ukraine, or “s Berichte” for the stamps from the German protectorates. The place of publication of such magazines is often the same as that where the stamps are issued. This has the advantage of giving reliable data from which a circle of readers all over the world perhaps will benefit; information will be sent out much quicker, and the local connection will enable anything of interest to collectors to be picked up in detail. We must find fashionable philatelic magazines of this type in, for example, Munich, Vienna, Danzig, Vaduz, San Marino, and in foreign languages in Catinje, Fiume, Malta and Shanghai.

In these cases the appearance of a fashion was the motivating factor behind the development of a specialist press.

e) The Individual Groups

With particular regard to present-day specialist magazines and their particular features.

In this section we will again give a brief account of the development of particular sections of the specialist press. It is very difficult to carry out a division of them. Nearly every single one is an individual type dealing with a particular subject. We must also bear in mind the difficulties resulting from the constant changes of publisher with resulting “change in tone”. The following classification – it has often been based quite arbitrarily on purely external factors. Most of the magazines could equally well be placed in another group. The ten groups themselves are given in sequence by time without cross-connections, just on the basis of the first appearance of the item concerned. I shall refer back to the relevant earlier chapter to explain the special features of the individual groups.

1. DEALER MAGAZINES

House journals from Senf, Kosack, Zumstein, Hess etc.

One production from the early days has, as said before, lasted down the years: The “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal” from Senf Brothers. This has appeared without interruption from 1st Jan 1874 to the present day, despite the many internal difficulties that had to be overcome. From the literature point of view Louis Senf was the more important of the two brothers, as he can be looked on as the spiritual father and founder of the journal. The name of Senf is familiar all over the world today: it has made the Leipzig stamp trade famous. The literary works, the catalogue and the journal are publications whose names at least are generally known well beyond the circle of collectors, and immediately connected with “postage stamps”. These points still embody the importance of the word Senf: it has also survived the crises periods of the war and the inflation, during which Senf was no longer setting the trend.

The present-day world-wide firm of stamp dealers and publishers, Senf Brothers, has worked its way upwards from small beginnings, and its literary productions, above all the “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal” has grown with it. It was in spring 1872 that Richard Senf opened a small stamp-dealers’ business in Leipzig. In the following year Senf took over the English firm of Werninck & Co., and with it the distribution of their magazine “The Stamp”. There was a particularly high demand after the failure of the “Deutschen Briefmarkenzeitung”. The Senf Brothers decided to fill this gap and put out a good new German magazine themselves. The preliminary work was done, collaborators lined up, and the first number of what is now the oldest specialist philatelic magazine was published on the 1st January 1874. It appeared in a small two-column format in Roman type, and contained eight pages starting right below the title “Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal” printed in simple Gothic type curved round into a semicircle. It also has the sub-title: Organ for Everyone Interested in the Stamp Trade. H. Werninck & Co. were given as the publishers. Since naming an English firm not existing in Germany was against official regulations, Louis Senf decided to take over the responsibility as from No. 7 (July 1874). The magazine included amongst other things reports on forgeries, and an illustrated chronicle of new issues. The first free supplement, on actual postage stamps appeared with No. 1, and this means of advertising was retained until ten years later. Dr. A. Moschkau took on the editorship. Louis Senf remained the publisher. Announcements from various firms appeared regularly up to No. 33 (vol. 3) of 1st September 1876. Adverts no longer appeared after this date. The editorial content improved steadily under Moschkau’s guidance: he published a regular “Monthly report from the editor”, that attracted general interest in collecting circles. This leading article dealt critically with topics of current philatelic interest. The treatment of the advertising section varied considerably in the course of the years. Also, the main journal changed its format from the fifth year on. It then appeared in roughly the same size as “The Summerhouse”^{*} and retained this size till the beginning of 1884. There was now a proper title-page with ornamental lettering, four stamps and a medallion bearing the head of Sir Rowland Hill, along with the contents of the greatly expanded text.

* A popular magazine of the day.

On the 1st May 1881, with No.89 of vol.8, appeared for the first time the name of Senf Brothers which is now known all over the world. Richard Senf came in again and dealt with the affair in tandem with his brother Louis. This also meant a change in the editorship. Dr. Moschkau gave up this post. The number of subscribers varied between 500 and 300 during these years. Fortunately, the Senf Brothers were able to get Dr Moschkau back as editor of the magazine: this took place at the beginning of the year 1884. At the same time the “Deutsche Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung” and “Germania” were absorbed into the magazine. The eleventh volume thus saw a great change in its fortunes. Teething troubles have been overcome by then, and the magazine has solid foundations. It now appeared fortnightly in a different, more convenient small format that it has retained to the present day. Subscribers got art supplements and free supplements of authentic stamps. This is a popular means of publicity which has been retained till the present day, and is uniquely suitable for philately.

Much useful work was carried out in the following period, so that the success of the journal was subjectively assured as well. Its contents were significantly improved and extended. They included reviews of literature, general opinions on philatelic problems, overseas correspondence etc. There was also a regular section on lighter material. Adverts from abroad faded out little by little. The magazine was the house organ for the firm of Senf Brothers. An attempt was made to satisfy the least wishes and suggestion of its circle of readers and customers. For instance, a column on coin collecting was soon dropped, and a new supplement for advanced collectors, “Contributions on Philately”, which contained especially valuable scientific material, was started. More attention was also paid to private posts, to be in line with fashion.

In No.139, the first issue of vol.XIV for 1887, Senf used for the first time a new title-page vignette showing the Augustusplatz in Leipzig, with the University, Mendelsohn fountain and riding-track, with ornamental title “Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal”. During subsequent years this picture went round the world a million times, and every collector will remember it; in line with the firms’ conservatism it remained unaltered for decades, till the 11th December 1926. Dr. Alfred Moschkau laid down his editorship in July 1887, and Louis Senf himself took over, till Theodor Haas came in in January 1890. By 1888 25 societies, 3 of them overseas, had the I.B.J. as their Society organ. This meant the firm had a large tribe of regular subscribers to be sure of. Greater stress was laid on the printing and art reproduction side.

At the beginning of the year 1889 (with No.241) the title was changed to “Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal” to conform with the new way of spelling. Since philatelically unimportant Society material such as lists of members, reports of meetings etc were taking up too much room, Senf brought these together from 1892 onwards into a new, free supplement “The Society Messenger” which appeared as necessary. This again shows how the editors were concerned to get rid of all that was not strictly text, and also of the adverts, and shift this material to a whole series of supplements.

The appearance of the new annual Senf World Catalogue affected the text of the journal in different ways. The catalogue, the firm’s main publication, had to keep in mind, its pricing policy justified, it had to be promoted and its supplements published regularly. This enabled it to maintain a connection with the new catalogue customers¹.

The year 1897 represents an artificial high point in stamp collecting, the like of which did not reoccur till the inflation period. A growth in the literature, especially of an unsoundly-based technical press which soon ceased publication again, was brought about by this. After the disappearance of “Postwertzeichen” and Ernest Heitmann’s “Illustrierte Briefmarkenzeitung”, when the Senf magazine reached No.529 exactly at the end of the century it was the oldest of all the existing specialist magazines. Joseph Kröger took over the editorship with No.769 of 7th January 1911. The war brought no change at first. Not till 1916 was Senf compelled to restrict the size and use poorer paper. This went on till the end of 1923, the magazine's 50th year. This was definitely one of the worst periods – apart from the foundation crisis – that the journal had to get through. On the 28th August 1920 it managed to publish its 1000th number. This was a rare jubilee for the philatelic press: many have dreamed of it but only three have managed it to date. C. Bohnert, the present editor, took over as sole editor with No.973 of 5th July 1919. Today the Senf Brothers' "Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal" still maintains its position and remains a worthy landmark of the first period of philatelic-literary activity.

¹ It would be outside the scope of this paper to go into the very interesting problems of catalogues: pricing, type and cost of notices etc. I shall be compelled to deal with some points in more detail in connection with the “Michel Supplements”.

Meanwhile many dealers' papers came and went, the first that comes to mind is one founded this century, the house magazine of the firm of Philipp Kosack & co., "Berliner Briefmarken-Jeitung". This first appeared in April 1905 with the subtitle "Occasional contributions to philately". However, it soon began to aim at a regular appearance. It came out first once a month, then twice a month, and up to the middle of the war three times a month, often with fine-art printed supplements. Since then it has appeared regularly twelve times a year. It goes all over the world, partly on subscription, but partly free to customers of the firm, so that circulation will look impressive. Up to 50,000 copies of some publicity numbers have been printed. The standard issue began with 24 pages, but often rose to 48: at the present time it regularly publishes 16 pages in ?* format, half text and half adverts, ie. The Kosack firm's own announcements. Outside adverts are not accepted. This advert section is likely to be more interesting than the editorial section for a large number of the regular readers. With the exception of a few war issues, the quality of the printing has always been irreproachable. The first editor was Philipp Kosack himself, recently Dr. Hans Kamnitzer has taken over. The special Kosack atmosphere always comes through, and it appears that the contents of the magazine are always more or less determined by him. Still, Kosack is independent in his way; he hardly needs to bother about a society or an individual collector. Thus he can do whatever seems right for his magazine. The individual view of collecting taken by Kosack means that he can offer something in the adverts section that he condemns in the main text as a wild speculation or not worth collecting for various reasons, since in his view collectors should accept whatever pleases and entertains him. Nevertheless, the Berliner Briefmarken-Jeitung is of high value. It has been successful over the years and many of its pronouncements on disputed questions of the day have been quoted with respect. It must also be given high marks for not participating in the cults of personality that crop up now and again in philately; in fact it has often deliberately opposed them.

The firm of Gustav Freyse (Hanover) published "Der Deutsche Philatelist" for the first time on 20th January 1907, under the editorship of Hans Müller. It had the subtitle "Illustrated Monthly Magazine for the Whole of Philately". Its readable text soon secured it readers and subscribers. At the end of July 1912 it passed into the possession of the Berlin firm of M. Kurt Maier. The outstanding text was edited by Carl Lindenberg, Professor Stenger, Frederick Bleibtreu and Alfred Maier. The adverts section was entirely reserved for the issuing firm, but the magazine became uneconomical and had to be closed down on 1st November 1925 because of "curtailment of activities". However since "Der Deutsche Philatelist" had a reputation and was well established, it was taken over by the well-known auction firm of Ernst Stock (Berlin), who brought it out as their own house journal from the beginning of 1926. The technical quality (Otto Elsner) is excellent. The cover and an insert are printed on glossy art paper. Its contents include valuable and fully illustrated reports on cancellations and colonials, as well as reports on exhibitions and auctions. The editorship is in the hands of the well-known Bavarian specialist Prof. Erich Stenger of the Technical University (Charlottenburg).

* Word not in any dictionary, literally means high format.

The firm of Paul Kohl A.-G Chemnitz, which was responsible of the next most important catalogue to Senf's of the re-war period, published "Mitteilungen der Firma Paul Kohl" from 1908 to 1914 as an explanation of and supplement to their catalogue.

The name of Zumstein is outstanding in the annals of Swiss philately; this is due not only to the prominent place taken by the firm of Zumstein & Co. of Berne (formerly Ernst Zumstein, Berne) in the ranks of the European stamp trade but also to the literary contributions made by Zumstein himself from the year 1908 to the present day in handbooks such as catalogues, and periodicals. The "Philatelistische Börsen-Nachrichten" appeared for the first time in 1908. This was placed on a better foundation when it was amalgamated with the "Philatelistischen Mitteilungen", started by J.F. Arnold (Bern) in 1906 as the organ of the Bern Stamp Exchange Club. In this way a two-sided treatment was ensured, and the addition of a new and costly magazine to those already existing was avoided. The "Schweizerischen Philatelistischen Nachrichten" thus appeared in 1909. The Zumstein firm had already tried to give it the character of a specialist Swiss journal, based on a healthy local patriotism. As early as March 1909 they began to take into account the French-speaking part of their readership, and to publish articles in French "in response to many requests for a French-language editor". The steady co-operation of well-known Swiss and German philatelist enabled the contents of the journal to be improved and developed further. Internal politics and the effects of the war on Switzerland led to a fundamental change in the firm's operations at the beginning of the year 1915. The "Schweizerischen Philatelistischen Nachrichten" was converted into the "Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung", a specialist organ for new issues and offers, which still appears today. This was built up into a commanding position by the recruitment of reliable reporters in all countries, so that, aided by the neutrality of Switzerland, the Berne journal became the only fast and reliable one in Europe in its field. A new journal, "Journal Philatelique der Berne" appeared: it was an unchanged word-for-word translation of the original German title. It lasted six years in this form. When more peaceful times returned, Zumstein decide on an expansion and reorganization of the journal, and this was carried out at the start of 1921. As a first step, the German and French texts were reunited. The text was expanded to include specialist articles of a scientific nature, a regular "Review", letters, literature reviews and other features in addition to the detailed reports on new issues. The firm had another important motive for publishing the journal. It served and still does serve for the publication of the regular supplements to the catalogues, which the firm must put out to its customers at short intervals of time. The Zumstein (Europe) catalogue, which is mainly in French and German, has proved its worth over the two periods of inflation, since it was converted into the Michel Mimark¹ and the Senf KU prices¹. It thus gained a position which it has maintained via the journal.

The "Wiener Philatelistischen Milleilungen" which has also appeared since 1914 is only a pseudo-scientific journal. It is a periodic dealer's announcement from the firm of Joseph Baumgarten, of Vienana 1, and has the external appearance of a specialist journal. The reports on new issues given as the "text" are simply copied from the hand-outs of the firms concerned. The Baumgarten reports appear in a completely random sequence.

From the year 1915 we have the current "Sächsische Briefmarken-Zeitung", from Alfred Kurth in Colditz. This dealer's offers-sheet was turned into a house magazine at the end of the war. It is edited by J. A. Bosshard, and includes technical articles of all kinds, philatelic gossip, descriptions of forgeries, reviews, new issues and literature reports. The 32 page magazine is printed in Brevier Roman and carries exchange offers and private and literature adverts, but doe not print offers from other dealers. The old offers sheet from the firm of Kurth is printed on yellow paper as a supplement. Since October 1925 there has been another regular supplement "Die Schule des Sammlers" (School for Collectors).

¹ Artificial prices with numerical keys used by the German catalogues during the inflation.

The Libau stamp dealer George H. Jäger, who has often acted as editor to specialist journals, started putting out his own monthly house magazine in 1920, under the title “Der Baltische Philatelist”, with the sub-title “Illustrierte Monatsschrift, vereinigt mit, Die Luftpostmarke”. It generally contains very interesting material on a variety of topics*.

Even in the United States, a German-language journal began to appear in 1920, the “Chicagoer Briefmarken-Zeitung”. It put out four times a year by the firm of Adolf E. Kratz, and its main object, to re-establish old pre-war connections. Its layout was exceptionally neat, and the editorials reliable. Richly illustrated on art paper, it appeared in a small format and covered 48-56 pages. The U-boat stamp of 1916 was at the head, to indicate friendly trade relationships between US and Germany. !!. The English title “Chicago International Philatelist” and the sub-title “Amerikanische und Deutsche Fachzeitschrift für Markensammler und Händler” were soon added. A probable true statement “Goes all over the World” was printed in big letters above the title. The text was 4/5 in German, the rest in English. The adverts were placed on the left. The richly varied editorial section covered enlightening and explanatory scientific articles, new issues, detailed country letters, society reports, literature, this and that, letters, reviews, and similar sections. There was an associated, well-illustrated firm’s advertisement “Die Chicagoer Briefmarken-Zeitung is a model for all the philatelic magazines of America”. It is worth noting that Herr Kratz has always stood out against the “clamour of competitors”, who have tried to attack the German nature of the magazine instead of its philatelic achievements. Since July 1922 there has been a new title vignette, showing the American side of the globe surrounded by an overlapping row of stamps (the words “German National Collection” appear below). Unfortunately the “Chicagoer Briefmarken-Zeitung” suddenly ceased to appear in 1924. Also overseas – covering North America -, the “Philatelistische Mitteilungen” was published by H. E. Harris & co. in Boston from 1921 (1st December) to 1923.

The year 1925 saw the foundation of magazines by two distinguished auction firms. The first, in April, was the “Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung” from the firm of S. W. Hess in Frankfurt-am-Main. This has developed well in monthly issues over a period of three years now. Originally it was printed by Wagner in Neustadt (Orla), then later in Frankfurt itself. Individual numbers run to 36-40 pages. In contrast to other dealers’ magazines, the firms’ own adverts take a back seat here: as well as a great many small ads, there are regular whole-page announcements from the large prominent dealers. The magazine has heavily publicized and supported the, now well-accepted “Hess German Special Catalogue”, which has developed in the course of five years from a price list on old Germany to a good, and in fact the only, all-German special catalogue. The external impression made by its small convenient format is also very good. Specialist notes on editions, cancellations, forgeries, issues, watermarks etc and the frequent notes on prices for strips of three, blocks, and pieces of letters increase the value of the catalogue quite considerably, so that it has become an indispensable handbook for the specialist collector. However the catalogue has the Frankfurt Briefmarken-Zeitung to thank for not a little of its circulation, though we cannot go into details here. From the second volume on it has had the subtitle “Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, and at the end of 1926 it was announced that this would become the main title. This change was never carried out, however, for reasons unknown to me. The text articles are long and copious; they are not scientific, but written to be generally readable under the personal editorship of S. W. Hess. Well-known names occur now and then as authors. Supported by heavy regular advertising, its circulation is apparently considerable: a circulation of 24,000 copies is sometimes guaranteed. As Hess recommends the Frankfurt Briefmarken-Zeitung by adverts in the daily press and the illustrated papers, he makes it available to a wide circle of collectors, stays outside the philatelic organizations, and even contacts what are called the “also♥” collectors. This range of readers seems to be taken into account in putting together the text, by no means to the disadvantage of the magazine.

* “Der Baltische Philatelist” seems to have folded. The last number known to me dates from February 1927.

Köhlers Philatelistisches Magazin” has appeared in a very elegant format since December 1925 from Heinrich Köhler (Berlin). It is the house magazine of the firm of Heinrich Köhler, only publishes adverts from that firm, and serves the needs of collectors on the whole whilst keeping the firm in the forefront of their minds. A particular feature is that no outside articles are accepted. Every column is written by Heinrich Köhler personally.

The firm of Walter Behrens in Brunswick has founded the first special and well-organized new issues service for the rapid reporting of these. Subscribers to it get new stamp issues quickly and cheaply, and can have them addressed directly from foreign countries all over the world, unless they prefer unused examples. Benrens puts out a quarto publication in blue paper covers every month, with the title “Benrens-Neuheiten-Dienst”. Subscribers get another small-format publication (since the start of 1927) with the title “Monatsberichte des Behrens-Neuheiten-Dienst”. Since these reports or new issues are regular, comprehensive and individually treated, often surprisingly good, lead to many sales and warn against many pitfalls, they deserve to be ranked more highly (at least in terms of this survey) than the usual dealers’ price list appearing as a magazine.

A unique item in the specialist philatelic press is the one put out by the printing firm of Rothe & Co. of Weimar. This firm produces a small, badly got up magazine containing a small-ads section. The part of interest to dealers contains a comprehensive, partly illustrated report on new issues, and short articles. Smaller dealers now subscribe to this in considerable numbers (100 upwards, according to recent reliable figures). It has appeared since 1926. The first of the twelve sides is blank, and subscribers can have their own text and headings inserted (usually in the form of a special announcement).

We will close this section with the happy information that over the last two years there has been clarification due to the necessary disappearance of non-viable dealers’ magazines and the less useful recent foundations. The journals remaining today are relatively well adapted to actual needs.

2 GENERAL ADVERTISING JOURNALS

International Stamp Market and General Advertisers. Two magazines from this group achieved a certain prominence in the course of the years. The first was entitled “Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger”, and appeared on 1st October 1871, after that on the 14th. Its first editor, printer and publisher was F. W. Rademacher of Hamburg. He said in his introduction “Collecting is done with more understanding nowadays, and this is the main point. The study of stamps (philately) has become a science (1871 !) to which learned men dedicate themselves with zeal. It then became obvious that in their opinion the three existing specialist journals carried too few advertisements, or none at all. I agree with this. To remedy this deficiency, and not by any means as a speculation, steps were taken to produce the new Advertiser. Starting a specialist magazine in the hope of making a profit is even today, in my view, one of the most mistaken speculations possible. Thus, as he goes on to say, he did not intend to compete with the existing journals, but work hand in hand with them. This proved possible, so that the new “Anzeiger” became the first advertising magazine. Right from the start it contained numerous small ads of all types, a study of which is of great interest, since they give a clear reflection of the times. Particularly worthy of note are the announcements of new issues, which today go into great detail using the most up-to-date and expensive techniques; all that was needed in those days was the bare announcement:

♥ Yours guess is as good as mine what they are!

* General Stamp Advertiser

* The author has forgotten to close the quotation marks, so it is not clear where Rademacher’s introduction ends.

“J. H. Rumpf has more new stamps in stock”♥

In 1878 the magazine was sold to E.W. Grossmann of Dresden. From 1882 (No. 231 of Vol. XII) it was called “Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung”. It lost importance over the years and finally disappeared with No. 282, the only one published in 1890 on the 1st November.

The advertising magazine “General-Anzeiger für Philatelie”, founded by G. Kirchoff & Co. of Iserlohn, has had an uninterrupted existence since 10th April 1883, i.e. is now in the 45th year. It has the subtitle “Internationales Insertions-Organ”, and appears three times a month in Roman type and a quarto format, and has roughly 30 pages with a blue cover. It gives dealers up-to-date information on the German wholesale trade, such as the most important auctions. Moreover, there are tastefully arranged block adverts covering an entire page, from the dealers of Berlin or Vienna for example, carrying general headings such as “Berlin” or “My sources of supply in Vienna”. Adverts covering 1/1 of a page are as frequent as the little 1/96 type. In times of quiet trade each issue carries an average of 4-500 adverts. Following this magazine regularly gives the clearest indication of the state of the German wholesale trade. It shows the enquirer the growth, usage and collapse of the individual market periods, trends and types. In 1887 it passed into the hands of the publishing house of Christian Sauerland & Son, who continued to ensure that it was very well edited, and kept the contents correct and orderly in line with its traditions and its venerable age. Thus, as a glance at its headings shows, it accepted no adverts relating to facsimiles, forgeries and corrections. This magazine continues to show what contributions can be made to the production of a sound and authoritative advertising journal by wide experience, good editorial, advertising and sale policies, and good printing techniques. In 1907, the firm was taken over by Hemer of Ludwigslust, Mecklenburg. This first stamp advertising paper reached its 1,000 issue on 5th June 1920 in the course of its 38th volume. Its 1,250th (consecutive) number appeared a few weeks ago. It obtained favourable notice in Vienna as early as the year 1894.

A very important firm of today, the well-known specialist magazine publisher C. G. Vogel of Possneck (Thüringia), which publishes some 25 advertising magazines covering a very wide range of subjects, laid the foundations for its development in the year 1892 with the publication of a stamp magazine. The “Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt” appeared for the first time on 25th January of that year. It was purely an advertising sheet (no text at all). It appeared fortnightly at first, then later and to the present day almost always weekly, and so was able to reach its No. 1,300 in its 36th year (1927). On the 1st July 1920 (No. 930) it adopted the new title “Internationaler Postwertzeichen-Market”, with the sub-title “International Stamp Market” and “Le Marché International de la Timbrologie”. In its 30th year the I. P. M. (the abbreviation generally used for its title) became the third German magazine to reach its 1,000th issue, on 22nd September 1921. The I. P. M. appears today in quarto format, 32-40 pages long, in the Vogel company’s usual style with a green cover. It is very well printed, as we would expect from this modern specialist publisher. Hand and machine setting are used side by side to produce a high level of graphic and art work and original texts for advertisements. The texts of the adverts are usually in German today, except where material specially prepared for the export trade is concerned. This mixture was only irritating – not in the I.P.M. only but in the advertising sections of practically all the specialist journals – during the inflation period when dealers were reduced to a humiliating begging for dollars, so that pretty well every second line of type read: For one dollar I sent you, send me one dollar andetc etc. This magazine is very important in the trade, since its weekly list of dealers’ prices and its auction results are a true reflection of the state of the market. The I.P.M. goes all over the world at present, as a result of subscriptions and free exchange arrangements. Its circulation figure is about 10,000: this has been confirmed by a notary for publicity reasons. It is worth noting that the firm of Vogel puts in a great deal of effort to secure advertising for the I.P.M. If an advert is located in any magazine from a firm which has not yet published one in the I.P.M, that firm is contacted and encouraged to advertise without regard to cost. Circulars and ordinary letters are replaced by express letters and prepaid reply-telegrams. Thus it may take years of patience before the Vogel advertisements office manage to catch the obstinate ones, and secure their valuable customs, with “certainly nothing to regret”.

♥ No.6. Vol. I. p.8.

At the beginning of the year 1927, the well-regarded journal “Die Zeiten im Briefmarkenhandle” was taken over by Sammlerwoche-Postmarke. It was originally founded in 1925 and published by the firm of John Bianchi (in Zurich), but after the takeover appeared in Vienna, edited by J. A. Reich. It was described as trilingual (German-English-French) advertising journal, and obtained a certain standing by vigorous promotion with international dealership circles, but could not stay the course. It ceased to appear with the last, December, issue for the year 1927. it might be noted that this, like another unfortunate title from the J.K.G.[⊕] Wager Print Works in Neustadt (Orla) in 1894, was only available to dealers.

3 SOCIETY JOURNALS

a) Journals from the General Societies. The second half of the seventies saw the appearance of the oldest society magazines that still exist. They were followed by many others, but are of special importance for various reasons. On 1st January 1877 Alwin Nieske published in Dresden a new journal under the title “Union”. This was with the encouragement and (ideal) support of the Dresden International Philatelic Society, but was independent of that body. It appeared in five volumes up to 1881. The idea then gradually developed of having their own bigger magazine that would act as more than just a Society record. There was a general wish for a somewhat freer magazine, since the entire technical press at that time was in the hands of the dealers concerned, or did not dare to offend them even when it might have been right or necessary to do so. Ernst Petritz put out the new journal for the first time on 1st June 1880, under its still existing title of “Der Philatelist”. In 1883 it passed officially into the control of the Society. Most of its contents were devoted to pure philately. In 1900 Suppantischitsch described this magazine as one of the world’s most highly rated in the field of philately. The financial support was sound, and so “Der Philatelist” could develop in an organically satisfactory manner over the following decades. The war did not affect the magazine in any way, it went on unrestricted, so to speak, until it fell a victim to the inflation in 1922. The Society then transferred its interest to the then highly regarded postage-stamp supplement of the “Danziger Zeitung”, and this became the Society’s official organ (see below). Once the economic situation had stabilized, “Der Philatelist” was revived. Since its times of appearance had to be restricted, subscribers were supplied every other month with “Archiv für Briefmarkenkunde”, the supplement to the “Dresdner Anzeiger” (see below). According to a report in “Philatelisten-Zeitung”*, the Society decided to stop publishing the “Philatelist” entirely at the end of 1927 (its 47th year), and adopt “Das Postwertzeichen” (q.v.) as the Society organ. Members had had to accept this as the Society magazine for a year already. However the “old” Philatelist proved well-nigh irreplaceable, since its range of interest was different from and much wider than that of its substitute.

The foremost German collector’s club also had its own journalistic endeavours in the “Vereins-Mitteilungen des Berliner Philatelisten-Club”. The first issue was put out by the club on 1st April 1888. According to Bungerz, 287 issues had appeared up to 1922 as well as this one. The “Vertrauliche Mitteilungen des Berliner Philatelisten-Club” appeared at regular intervals for the benefit of club members only.

The “Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal” has lasted to be the oldest existing Swiss philatelic magazine. It first appeared as a trial issue in November 1888 for the firm Kirchhofer in Lausanne. In 1895 the title was changed to “Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung”. It hung on well, though with some limitations, over the following years and during the war and post-war periods.

[⊕] unfortunately, title not given.

• Vol. 35, 1927, p.82.

It also became the official organ of the Union of Swiss Philatelic Societies. It has remained to the present day independent of dealers' interests and influences, and has thus been able to follow its own line for decades without becoming too narrowly a society or Union organ.

Another society magazine appeared on 14th November of the same year under the title "Germania Berichte". This magazine quickly became very important, and has just reached No. 311 in its 31st volume after coming relatively well through the years of war and inflation. Originally irregular, it has appeared monthly since its 10th volume (19th January 1906). Its subtitle reads "Zeitschrift des Germania-Ring, Verband Deutscher, Österreichischer und Schweizer Postwertzeichensammler-Vereine e.V",[⊕] and its chief purpose is to serve the needs of its 4,000 members, to whom it is supplied free. It is printed in two-column Roman type by August Hoffmann of Leipzig, and has a neat ornamental title. The outer pages carry advertisements of all kinds, to which no reference is made in the text. The editorial office has been in Leipzig since 1914, the current editor being M. Pellnitz. Publication, which received great attention during the difficult years from Fritz Seifert (Leipzig) in particular, is currently in the hands of the committee of the Saxonia Philatelic Society of Leipzig. Leading German philatelic writers have contributed to the journal. They, along with the careful editorial work, are responsible for the fact that today the "Germania-Berichte" has a reputation well outside the Ring and can be numbered amongst the leading specialist journals of the present day. "Germania-Berichte" has a supplement appearing at irregular, though roughly quarterly intervals. This is "Deutsche Stempel-Zeitung"[♣], with the subtitle "Illustrierte Zeitschrift für Poststempelkunde". The current author is the founder, Captain P. Ohrt of Dusseldorf. There have been 53 numbers of this since 1906. The first two were independent, then from No. 3 on it appeared as a supplement first to "Der Deutsche Philatelist" and later to "Germania-Berichte". It has often given very useful support to research on cancellations, and supplied many clarifications.

The publishers of independent magazines and the dealers did not stand by idle when the Society presses were so active, and so a whole cavalcade of specialist magazines of all qualities were brought into the world to join more or less successfully in the struggle for existence.

In the year 1913, the then newly founded Verein Leipziger Briefmarken-Börse* also started its own "Berichte". It had to cease publication in its second year, 1914, because of the outbreak of war. Not till September 1921 did the Society manage to start issuing its reports again under the distinguished leadership of Alwin Hofmann. In the course of years the level of the magazine was gradually raised till it completely satisfied the interests and needs of its circle of readers. In addition to a general philatelic section, a great deal of attention has been devoted in recent years particularly to the specialist literature. Space is also devoted to the doings of the very lively Society and to a business column, and also to a Comedy Corner. Hence the "Berichte" can be favourably described as the typical pattern of a Society magazine kept within Society limits.

The 1st July saw the first appearance of the organ of a collectors' society under the title "Fürstentum Liechtenstein, Internationale Markenbörse"[♥], in Vaduz. It is published today by Mugo• Mayer in Dornbirn (Austria). The contents relate mainly to Society doings and members' movements (the Society is not purely philatelic), with requests for exchanges and pen-friends. Nevertheless there are mainly scientific articles and a good section on new issues. On 16th December 1921 the first issue of "Mitteilungen des Deutschen Philatelisten-Vereins (Sociedad Filatélica Alemana) appeared in Buenos Aires (Argentina). This. Like the following ones, was typewritten and duplicated. Three issues appeared in 1922. In 1924 this was

[⊕] Journal of the Germania Ring, Union of German, Austrian and Swiss Philatelic Societies.

[♣] German Cancellation Journal.

* Society of Leipzig Stamp Dealers.

♥ Principality Of Liechtenstein, International Stamp Market.

• Misprint of Hugo?

converted into the well-edited monthly that it is today, going far beyond the bounds of “society communications”. The text almost always appears in German and Spanish, printed in two columns with a German article on the right and the Spanish translation on the left. An advertising section that contains many adverts from Europe is included. The technical section as such occupies a great deal of space. The editor, Simon, and the Society chairman Dr. Ulrich talk a great deal about “scientific philately”, and as-yet untitled field which is hard to define. German writers such as Beck, Glasewald and Leitenberger are to be found amongst the contributors. The magazine, like the active Society, does a great deal for the German spirit in Latin America.

A small Society magazine is published in Gera-Reuss (E. Germany) that is not suitable for inclusion amongst the specialist philatelic press. It is called “Der Briefmarkenbote”. Its 6th volume in 1922 carries the first indication of the inflation. In place of a report on new issues, which was promised, I read “..... a number of stamps were received, but because of the great number I am unable to describe them here”. Although the contents are so scanty that there is little text, there is a very full advertisement section, though it does not include any large firms. Of the 14 adverts given, 10 are offers from the editor himself. Of the remaining 4 adverts, only 2 have a philatelic content (No. 4, April 1927). It is a lucky thing that the specialist press is on the whole free of such clumsy botched work from a so-called journalist. The whole thing is best looked on as cheerful contribution, not to be taken seriously, to the much-mocked genre of Society magazines.

The magazine “Mainpost” appearing in Würzburg has become an outstanding publication loved by readers and advertisers alike and circulated all over Southern Germany because of its untiring industry and the diligence of its editor. It appeared for the first time in December 1922. The text and advertising sections developed slowly. The publisher and editor is Rudolf Jansen, who also runs the “Wirceburgia” stamp exchange he founded. The members of this exchange look on “Die Mainpost” as their house organ. This ensures a stock of readers. From its second volume onwards many large firms have advertised regularly in “Die Mainpost”. There is also a considerable number of small ads, readers send in many notices of wants and exchanges. Its development has been successful and uniquely outstanding for this day and age. The text section was improved and extended at an early stage. New contributors were recruited; a regular illustrated report on new issues was published, as well as reviews of specialist literature. In this way the wished of a wide circle of readers were met. Foreign subscriptions were considerably increased by a clever and well-thought –out pricing policy (adverts from abroad were not paid for in money, but with stamps as I have described in another place). “Mainpost” thus reached its 6th year under reliable and far-sighted readership, supported by faithful subscribers and an adequate level of adverts. It can be spoken of without hesitation as one of the good magazines of South Germany.

Since July 1924 a German-Slovene magazine “Kolektor” has been published in Kranj (Yugoslavia) and later in Straziska by a pen-friends and collectors’ club, under the editorship of Alwin Pogacnik. It consists in the main of club news.

b) Journals of a Political Nature. Although stamp collecting as such has nothing to do with politics, some political collectors’ organizations have been set up in the post-war period. In October 1920 a small exchange circle was set up with the name of “Deutschvölkischer Briefmarken-Tauschverein” (German Peoples’ Stamp Exchange Society). This has developed into the present-day Vaterländischen Verband Deutscher Briefmarkensammler e.V. in Oettingen” (Fatherland Union of German Stamp Collectors in Oettingen). The political activity of the Union does not extend beyond its name and the restriction of membership to those of “Germanic” descent. After only a year the young society had developed and established itself to the point where it could think of starting its own journal. This began in 1921 as the “Deutschvölkische Sammler-Rundschau”. The present editor is the society chairman, Julian Schmittner of Oettingen. The text was of general philatelic interest, Society doings being kept in the background. The title was altered at the same time to its presents "Briefmarken-Rundschau"*. In October 1929 a journal that had existed since 1923, "Württembergische Sammler-Rundschau", a house magazine from the firm of Werner Voss in Mergentheim devoted mainly to airmail, was taken over and this special topic developed. It was awarded a bronze medal at the Vienna Exhibition of May 1926, in recognition of the good work done by its energetic editor. The adverts section has not received especial attention. In particular, it lacks the otherwise ubiquitous announcements from the well-known German firms, even the publishers of catalogues and albums.

Another journal of just the same type is "Radio de Filintern" which has appeared in Moscow since July 1924. To deal with this unique item, it is necessary to be clear about the state of philately in present-day Russia. Everything to do with stamps, the stamp trade and stamp exchanges is officially controlled in Russia. Anybody who wants to buy or exchange stamps for collecting reasons has to belong to a section of the Filintern executive. The executive committee does not take part in any stamp dealing itself. Instead, it prints addresses for exchanges in its lists of members. All enquiries for stamps must be directed to the appropriate section. The regulations are even stricter for international, i.e. foreign trade. Any stamps meant for a Russian collector friend must be sent to the Philatelic Agency at 3, Twerskaja Jamskaja, Moscow 1, for extensive "control" before being passed on. To propagate their activities and keep in touch with members, this Soviet philatelic agency has similar business undertakings in most countries. The main Agency publishes three separate journals, which are the only literary outlets for Russian philately since the 1917 revolution. These are the foreign-language journals "The Soviet Philatelist", "The Soviet Collector" and the one already mentioned, "Radio de Filintern", which also includes German text. As these three magazines show, the political methods of the Bolsheviks have been applied here to the business of pure collecting. Their characteristic motto: "Philatelists of the Working Classes in All Countries, Unite!" is found everywhere, on every page and indeed on every sheet of notepaper. Obviously we are dealing here with the antipodal opposite of the Völkischen Verband deutscher Briefmarkensammler (People's Union of German Stamp Collectors) described in another place. But back to our magazine. From the printing point of view, Radio de Filintern is unobjectionable, even praiseworthy. A stiff multicovered paper cover contains 32 pages printed in two columns. The magazine appears monthly, and contains scientific articles in German and English, and usually, Esperanto as well. The very striking headpiece shows the globe of the world encircled by a floating band with the inscription "Filatelistas Internacio". The title is printed in Roman letters with the subtitle "Organo de Filatelistas Internacio", along with the inescapable "Filatelistoj de la mondo unuigu vin!"*. The adverts are given exclusively in Russian, but are priced in U.S. dollars, $30 for a half-page (certainly not cheap). I have found no advertisements from German firms. The contents, edited by L. K. Eichfuss, include the widest possible range of topics, with Soviet stamps treated in especial detail. Official propaganda appears everywhere, and is aimed at bringing philatelists together in an as yet non-existent world society of the "Red Philatelic International". Neither is there any shortage of political axes being ground. Eichfuss's leading articles drag everything in the Bolshevik manner, so that politics and philately are all stirred up in the same pot. Although some of its efforts are praiseworthy, the magazine is more political than philatelic, and has no special merit for postage stamp science. Neither the specialist nor the unprejudiced observer can avoid the conclusion that even with all due respect to the philatelic work, philately is only a "Means to an End"⊕.

4 UNION JOURNALS

* The same time as what?

* Which is no doubt the Esperanto for Philatelists of the World Unite.

⊕ That this viewpoint is entirely correct was confirmed by a chat I had with M. Glück, the head of the Agency for USSR Philately in Berlin.

“Sitzungsberichte des Internationalen Postwertzeichen-händler-Vereins in Berlin”^{*} has appeared irregularly since November 1886. Since 1897 another expanded journal has appeared monthly, and is now in its 31st year. It is called “Der Briefmarkenhanndler”. It contains no articles, and is of no interest for philately. At most, its rich array of adverts, including those from the best-known dealers and auctioneers in the Society, can yield much information on the state of the postage stamp market. Richard Blühdorn (Berlin) is currently responsible for the contents, which include such Society details as reports of meeting, members’ doings, black lists, invitations to subscribe, auction reports, youth recruitment, duty on luxuries (missed out in recent times), almanac, complaints about adverts, catalogue prices and the like.

The lack of a German specialist journal was felt very keenly in Czechoslovakia in 1921. This proven need led to the foundation of the magazine “Die Briefmarke” that still exists today. It got off to a good start from the firm of Ferdinand Bär, and soon became the organ of the Union of German Philatelists in Czechoslovakia, and the Union of German Stamp Dealers in the Czech Republic. The printing technology was good, and there were many pages of text. However, a great deal of space was given to Union matters, legal matters, Society reports and the like. Differences arose in 1926 that led to a severing of the link with both Unions. This meant the magazine had lost important financial and moral support, even more so when the Union of German Philatelists started its own magazine in Haida (Bohemia) and promoted it vigorously. Hence, the position is not very favourable today, and the costly struggle for existence, which has now lasted two years, very hard, since two magazines are too many for the market. The interests of the stamp dealers are not met by these trials of strength between big organizations. “Der Philatelist”, a magazine for philatelists and collectors is still on its first volume, and is currently the only official magazine of the Union of German Philatelist in Czechoslovakia, the first number dates from 6th December 1926. Its articles deal mainly with research on the home country. The old Society was “Die Briefmarke”, from Teplitz-Schönau. The relationship was dissolved for reasons unknown to me.

In the year 1922 the “Bayerische Händlertags-Zeitung” was started as “Mitteilungen des Vereins bayer. Briefmaken-Händler e.V. Sitz München”. It appeared monthly, and publishes society reports and dealers’ offers. On the whole it is purely for dealers. It has no philatelic content as a rule. It marks the dealers’ meetings with a well produced and illustrated special issue about 60 pages long. It contains many very interesting and valuable contributions on trade affairs from the pen of the best known German stamp dealers. The “Mitteilungen des Bundes Deutscher Briefmarkenhändler-Vereine”[⊕] have appeared in Leipzig since 1923, published by the Union of Saxony Stamp Dealers with Kurt Krötzsch as editor.

The most important development of the year 1926 is without doubt the appearance for the first time in July of that year of “Das Postwertzeichen”, as the journal of the Union of German Philatelic Societies at home and abroad. It is a continuation of “Bundes-Mitteilungen” published by Robert Noske (Borna) since 1924 in association with the “Deutschen Sammler-Zeitung”. Although the journal had a good, reliable provenance and a large circulation guaranteed by the number of Union members, it has not yet managed to develop satisfactorily, even though a systematic build-up should ensure slow progress. The text, edited first by Dr. Kalckhoff (Berlin) and now at the new office in Munich (Alexander Leo) is largely devoted to exact reports of Union meetings and the doings of the associated societies. There is also a list of new issues, book reviews, a column on “Protect your Collection” and articles of general philatelic interest. The appearance of this Union journal meant that many associated societies and unions (e.g. Dresden, Essen, the Entires etc) gave up their own journals, finishing them at the end of a volume or letting them amalgamate with other specialist sheets. The existence of the magazine seems to be assured, in spite of many attacks from individual “pillars” of the societies; its development depends on the resolutions passed at the annual union meetings.

^{*} Reports of meetings of the Berlin International Stamp Dealers’ Society.

[⊕] Reports from the Union of German Stamp Dealers’ Societies.

Private postage stamps were issued for the first time in Germany at Hamburg in 1868. Private postal systems for city deliveries went on expanding in middle-sized cities until they were forbidden as from 1st April 1900 by the Reich law of 10th December 1899. These private postage stamps were at first collected by every philatelist. However, too many speculative stamps began to appear, since every postal undertaking tried to make as much profit as possible at the expense of collectors before the private posts were banned. Collecting no longer increased, in fact it fell off; today collections of private stamps are quite unusual. This means it is much cheaper now to build up a relatively complete collection than it was when the stamps were issued. The great specialist in this subject was A. E. Glasewald; in 1887 he published a work with the title "Catalogue and wants/defects list of all German private postage stamps issued up to 1887". This went to five editions. Since the production of supplements appeared desirable, a monthly publication, "Neueste Privatpost-Nachrichten" (Latest Private Post Issues) was issued from January 1888 onwards. This was initially treated as a catalogue supplement. On 29th December 1883 Glasewald founded the Central German Philatelists' Union in Gössnitz (S.-Altenburg); today, this is one of the biggest German collector's societies. In 1892 this Union decided to start putting out its own magazine, and the first issue appeared on 1st July 1892. It bore the title "Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung", and incorporated "Neueste Privatpost-Nachrichten". This now appeared independently, and in 1893 published 11 issues with continuous pagination as a supplement*. It then ceased to appear, after it had survived for 65 issues in all. As we shall now show, another magazine entirely devoted to private posts and research thereon did appear later, but there was so little interest at the time that it could not survive. It was the "Mitteilungen des Berliner Vereins für Privatpost-Wertzeichenkunde", which as far as I know ran to 28 numbers between 1913 and August 1917. The "Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung" shaped up well from the start, and the text was devoted to general philately and Society affairs. In 1896 the large format still characteristic today was adopted. From 1906 onwards the magazine was called "Philatelisten-Zeitung", under which name it is now appearing, or rather reappearing, in its 34th year. Thanks to Glasewald's energy, which has kept the contents of the journal so valuable, it has gained over the years a readership extending well beyond the society. The World War came; the productive contributions from abroad came to an end, then the inflation had its special effects. The "Philatelisten-Zeitung" had to contend with great difficulties, and struggled on in the hope of better times soon to come, but in 1922 it could not be kept going any longer. Its publication was stopped in October, and not resumed till August 1924. Much was lost in this period. All the old lines of research could not be picked up again; this went to "Sammler-Woche", flourishing at the time, not to the revived "Philatelisten-Zeitung". Its contents soon reached the old standard, and it dealt mainly with research into old Germany, particularly Glasewald's[®] special interest Thurn und Taxis, and the prephilately of the old German postal undertakings. It researched cancellations, and gave valuable and extensive reports on forgeries. The advertisement section is printed on special (in recent years coloured) pages. After the death of his father, the son took over his work and strove to keep it up to the level attained and ensure progress. The publisher canvassed energetically for adverts and subscribers, so that its range was steadily extended, and "Philatelisten-Zeitung" is today one of the most read and influential German philatelic periodicals. In the year 1922 the "Mitteilungen der Deutschen Gesellschaft für Staats-u. Privatmarkenkunde" was founded by A. K. Hoppe (Charlottenburg). It is still going today.

* This is not very clear !

[®] A.E. Glasewald, one of the leading philatelists of the old school, was born on 2nd August 1861 and died 16th September 1926. He was the founder and for many years the editor of "Philatelisten-Zeitung", and a well known examiner for and expert on Thurn und Taxis. His most important work: "Thurn und Taxis in History and Philately" appeared for the first time in 1927.

A monthly entitled “Die Gelegenheitsmarke” (Occasional Stamps) is now in its 4th year of appearance in Klagenfurt. Its contents, a mixture of stamps for special occasions, private stamps, seals, cancellations, Treasury and telegraph stamps of all sorts, are philatelically worthless, with the exception of relatively complete and detailed treatments of airmail and airship stamps.

6 THE YOUTH PROBLEM

The question of the rising generation is of very special importance for the future of philately. The technical press has made efforts in this direction from time to time, starting with the one and only issue of “Briefmarken für die Jugend”[♦], from Alfred Moschkau (Oybin). The basic problem involved in providing an enlightening and tempting magazine for young collectors is that a considerable sacrifice is involved without any certainty of success. The importance given to this question today can be judged from the number of Society and Union resolutions devoted to the existence of “Das Basler Täubchens” (The Basle Dove) (see below). The Senf Brothers have also made various literary experiments, which have all proved failures in practice, but from which a good deal has been learned and turned to account for the “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal”.

I have repeatedly called attention to efforts to supply a good magazine for young people, which all philatelist must want since capturing young people is of great importance in philately as in so much else. A great deal of attention – though still far too little – has already been put into this, and great deal of effort and money sacrificed. This is the sort of task whose benefits will be reaped in the distant future, but cannot be ignored now.

There are three basic reasons why a philatelic magazine for young people will always be uneconomical in spite of their great importance. All three relate to the composition of the readership, which is very unstable. In the first place, older recruits to stamp collecting will not read a magazine for young people. They will look on any such with contempt, and are generally let to collecting by reading a manual. The young collector himself is almost never well off. He is likely to buy at most an individual issue, and is seldom in a “state” to afford the cost of a subscription. Thus the publisher has to create a market for each individual number, so to speak. Moreover, even the subscribers do not make up a lasting market, since they outgrow the magazine after a few years and turn (usually too early) towards a “proper” magazine. The publication of supplements in the daily press would certainly solve the problem more easily, and at less cost, than the attempt to put out a weak youth magazine that will always need propping up.

Many attempts have been made in the philatelic-literary field to find out, directly and indirectly, what young people want. However the daily papers look on it as a main task to attract and hold on to young people, and they are much more important than the specialist press. In 1926 the factor Fritz Seifert and the Leipzig firm of August Hoffmann realized that there was no good magazine for young people who were already in societies, and so they started a new one “Das Basler Täubchen”. It has the subtitle “Briefmarkenzeitung für die Sammlerjugend” (Stamp Magazine for Young Collectors), and is also the organ of the youth section of the Mitteleuropäischer Briefmarken-Sammlervereine (Middle Germany Stamp Collectors’ Society), and more recently the Bundes Deutscher Philatelisten-Verbände (Union of German Philatelic Societies). It is named after the rare and beloved Swiss 2½ Rp cantonal stamp of 1845 from the Basle City Post, which is one of the most popular rarities from the old Europe. No. 1 of Vol. 1 is dated August 1926. It has appeared since then at irregular intervals. The contents are kept easy enough for teenagers to read, but interesting. Every technical term is explained. The editor often contributes a gossip column on stamps. Reports from youth sections, with names and often photographs as well form a popular part of the individual numbers. There is a regular column "From the Lexicon", and a letters section to supply any information wanted, or the reader can work out the meaning of a word for himself and then check it against someone else's opinion, a very valuable stimulus which is the first stage in the development of our future specialist writers and journalists. The adverts are also aimed at and written for young people. The whole philatelic world can only be thankful for the foundation of the "Dove".

[♦] Stamp Magazine for Young People.

In addition, a well-known advertising magazine "Die Blauband-Woche" (Blue Band Weekly) publishes a regular column "The Little Stamp Collector", which is certainly doing much to attract young people, since the magazine is distributed free of charge and publishes short illustrated easy-to-grasp articles.

7 MAGAZINES FOR COLLECTORS

a) The Group "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung", "Sammler-Woche", "Die Postmarke"

The year 1890 saw the foundation of one of the most important philatelic journals, the "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung", which has for a long time been a fixed pole amongst the flux of phenomena, thanks to the energy of Hugo Krötzsch. It appeared for the first time in Berlin on the 18th October 1890. Vols. I-VII of the Berlin period formed its first epoch, during which the magazine established its foundation. The new magazine was edited by Dr. Hans Brendicke (Berlin). The principal contributors from the beginning were Lindenberg, Kalckhoff, Fraenkel and Ohrt. An excellent and comprehensive bibliographic index to the first seven volumes exist. The "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung" was started by taking over the philatelic section from the illustrated magazine "Der Sammler", which took place on the 1st October 1890. The result was a new specialist magazine on a broader basis, which had been lacking in Berlin till then, since the "Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung" had ceased publication in 1887. The lack of a good independent philatelic magazine in Berlin had become steadily more obvious as philatelic research progressed. The new foundation helped to make good this deficiency. As has been said, the contents of the journal were kept independent of any consideration of financial advantages, securing adverts or the like, and so gained the opposition and enmity of many interested parties. This is why the magazine was not financially successful, but called for sacrifices too great to be born in the long run. At this point Hugo Krötzsch (Leipzig) leapt into the breach, and took over both the publication and the editorship from No. 10 of Vol. VII, 8th October 1896. He moved both to Leipzig. Dr. Brendicke closed the first Berlin period with the following words of farewell*, which clearly illustrate the whys and wherefores of this period:

"From its very first number the D.B.Z. has enjoyed the regard of serious philatelists, the editor can say with pride that the course towards scientific research which he took has proved to be the correct one, so that he has been able to direct many associated periodicals into the course which they should follow in the interest of our philately. It is impossible to sail over all the shallows and cut through all the waves without taking water on board. The Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung has had to fight many battles during these six years, has often had to struggle against contrary winds, and if any reproach may be made against it, it is merely that of not doing enough tacking and weaving. It has been sailed with a steady eye on the advancement of philately and the well-being of its circle of collectors, and from its struggles and opposing, even downright antagonistic elements, it has found out where the chances of success were smaller, so that more could be achieved by an exact calculation of the odds. The editor and his collaborators have never lost the consciousness of their own power, their pride in the might of knowledge, and above all their belief in the rightness of their cause, and have upheld these in the most difficult times.

* Vol. VII, No.9, of 8th September 1896.

The new editor was thus faced with no easy task: he demonstrated his qualities both as an editor and as a businessman in the following years. There is no doubt that within a few years Hugo Kröttsch had D. B. Z. independent and free of all dealer politics, with valuable and solid contents, and was unwearied in his efforts to place D. B. Z. on a sound financial basis, and to build it up from year to year in such a way that it gained in importance from year to year until it could be described as the κατ' ἐξοχήν philatelic journal*. By the turn of the century it was known to leading researchers as without doubt the best specialist magazine in the German language. Personally Hugo Kröttsch showed pure impartiality combined with an ability to work in a tactful but non-partisan manner. This is reflected in the D. B. Z. The D. B. Z. also performed great service in promoting and building up the philatelic section of Bugra♦. The D. B. Z. was luckily brought through the difficult days of the war, until its 30th year (No. 7 of 9th July 1919). The independent magazine for German collectors then fell victim to the financial constraints of the post-war period, and became a dealers' journal. The Franz Junghanss dealership of Leipzig bought it out. The period of high inflation and the Ruhr troubles arrived, and also had a destructive effect. No. 4 of 30th June 1923 contained an announcement of the next issue and an article that finished with the words "To be continued". However it was not possible to keep the magazine alive under the financial conditions of the year 1923. No. 4 was the last issue of this proud magazine for the German collector, which had been awarded the Grand Prize of Bugra♥.

The last year of the war saw the appearance of an undertaking of a completely new type, the "Sammler-Woche" (Collectors Week). Appearing under particularly favourable circumstances, it quickly conquered the field and overtook even its oldest competitors to become by far the leading specialist magazine in the German language. It then went under just as quickly, not during the inflation period, but during the stabilization period. All that survives now is the great name, adorning the German section of an Austrian magazine. Albert Kürzl is the man who struggled with many misfortunes and by trial and error took it to the top, and kept it there by great sacrifices until he had to give way under the effects of stabilization. Even in the worst days of the war he strove to publish the first issue of "Sammler-Woche" in Munich on the 1st July 1918. It was eight pages thick, in the quarto format that was always retained. It appeared on the 1st of every month, but became a weekly at the end of the war. Its contents were not only philatelic; stamps were on a level with coins, picture-postcards and the then available emergency paper money. The subtitle read in fact "Magazine for all branches of the collecting hobby". The work on stamps gradually lost its hobby character and became truly philatelic. Its development went on slowly. In No. 7 of the first volume published on 1st October 1918, Alexander Bungerz (Berlin-Birkenwerder) published the first leading article "Revolution Stamps". Kürzl and Bungerz soon embarked on an extensive and very promising programme, philatelic art and science were included. Journalistically, Sammler-Woche was still in the nursery. With the material available it would have been easy to produce something really outstanding, but the taste and impulse for this were lacking. So the paper had a "no style/vision". The number of subscribers and adverts increased from month to month. At the beginning of its 3rd year, S-W had already become the leading title amongst independent magazines for collectors. As such it was able to maintain fortnightly or monthly appearances over the years.

Meanwhile a catalogue crisis had arisen in Germany. Senf had lost its importance over the years, and Michel appeared only as a catalogue of wartime stamps. Kürzl jumped in here as well, and started a new large-scale catalogue undertaking. The "Sammler-Woche-Weltkatalog SWK. 1920" appeared, shortly followed by "Kürzl Europakatalog 1921". Both are outstandingly good productions in view of the conditions of the time, and became all the better known world-wide as the older publishers failed to act. Sammler-Woche had the task of promoting these and producing the supplements and corrections. Bungerz had gradually withdrawn. Knorr & Hirth, the publisher of "Münchener Neuesten Nachrichten", had taken over the printing. A regular literature column, dealing critically with all new publications, appeared from about 1920. In 1924, the title of "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung" which Krötzsch had taken to the top was bought by "Sammler-Woche" as a new subtitle, after Junghanss of Leipzig had given up publishing it. From 1924, i.e. its 7th volume, S-W appeared for the first time strictly every week in accordance with its name. Lieutenant-Colonel Hesshaimer, the graphic artist who had already appeared in "Postmarke" and was at that time producing outstandingly beautiful "philatelic engravings", now began to illustrate Sammler-Woche as well. Many artistic engravings and also many caricatures are owed to his lively imagination and the work of his hand. In February 1924 it was transferred to the Munich publishing house. From March 1924 onwards S-W appeared for a time as a technically very accomplished weekly, with 24 and sometimes 32-44 pages (!). Its external appearance, like its technical production, became artistically more valuable and steadily more excellent. The advertising section was tastefully laid out and systematically arranged. Albert Kürzl placed his whole energy and his entire resources at the service of the magazine. Thus, a high point was reached. The "Sammler-Woche" was beyond dispute the biggest and most authoritative specialist philatelic magazine on the Continent.

* Don't know what this means, nor does a classical scholar or the staff.

♦ Whatever this is.

♥ Some sort of exhibition, obviously.

We must stand amazed before this achievement, the single one of its kind in the sixty-year history of the specialist philatelic press. Unfortunately the man who carried out this work lost his grip. The undertaking did not attract great interest at the time. A long-term objective of building up firm support and thus ensuring financial stability was not adopted. So began the final struggle for existence of this noble undertaking of Kurtz's. In August 1924, the time when the whole economy once more collapsed, the "Sammler-Woche" was very drastically cut down. The publisher had to make great efforts to keep to his programme. In December 1924, a No. 52 of a volume was published for the first time in the history of S-W and of the specialist philatelic press generally. Sammler-Woche had become the big magazine of philately, trying to serve all philatelic disciplines and their various branches. Readers and advertisers, publisher and editor had learned in the course of a few years to work together to shape a clear and openly determined programme. Now however it went unstoppably downwards. A limited company was formed and month by month the whole thing slipped away from Kürzl. Apparently everything depended simply on a financial solution. Albert Kürzl, the founder of Sammler-Woche, appeared for the first time as its editor in No.25 of Vol. VIII, dated 19th June 1925. Now it went downhill step by step with every issue. Its contents soon even ceased to deal with current affairs. Other magazines were very much quicker and more reliable as sources of information. Its path continued downwards in its 9th year as well. The artificial striving for effect and the groping and fumbling for a creditable way out could be sensed in every line. The once impressive numbers melted away to a few hundred subscribers. The German "Sammler-Woche" came to an unceremonious end with No. 17 of 1st September 1926; it was merged into "Postmarke", of which more in another place.

The last days of the World War also saw the foundation of today's leading Austrian magazine, "Die Postmarke". After detailed preparation and negotiation, the first number was put out in April 1919 by the O.T.V. (Officers' Stamp Exchange of Vienna). Until then there had been an insignificant "Mitteilungen des O.T.V." with no philatelic content, which was transformed into the periodical that still appears today and made into a subject-based magazine for collectors. The first leading article, setting out the programme, was written by Lieutenant-Colonel Ludwig Hesshaimer, the President of the Society. Monthly publication was intended. Copiously illustrated articles of lasting value soon won the field. Alexander Bungerz became the first German contributor. The first volume could be looked on as definitely a success. By the third volume the advertising section had been made fuller and easier to use. This is not surprising, since the low value of the Austrian crown as compared with the mark meant that adverts were relatively cheap. From the fourth volume on, the advertising section was taken completely out and published separately. No. 34 contained the first scientific article by Engineer Edwin Müller, who had taken over the editorship from the 1st February 1923 and took it to its present position. Under his guidance “Die Postmarke” gained new lustre that made it into the leading specialist German-language periodical of the world, first “outflanking” and then “swallowing up” even “Sammler-Woche” itself. It gained a silver medal at the International Postage Stamp Exhibition in Vienna in 1923, to which it devoted a special issue (54/55). The Christmas issue for the same year was especially outstanding. Sammler-Woche wrote as follows about this:

“A masterpiece of philatelic literature is the Christmas number of the Vienna “Postmarke”, which we ungrudgingly salute. Outstanding contributors, the Hesshaimer’s art work, and a detailed advertisement section which casts a bright line on the propaganda work of our Viennese colleagues, combine to make a bulging issue which inspires the utmost respect in even the blasé philatelists of Germany. Our congratulations”.

The year 1924 saw a certain amount of consolidation, the magazine was stabilized internally and maintained at the level already reached. Particular emphasis was laid on the quality of the published articles, and empty gossip completely disappeared. No. 96/97 was a magnificent special issue “75 years of Austrian postage stamps”. It was a coronation for “Die Postmarke’s favourite subject, and for its editor Edwin Müller♥”. In the second half of the year 1926 the transactions were arranged by which “Sammler-Woche” and “Die Postmarke” were amalgamated, which meant in practice that the ailing Sammler-Woche was taken over by Die Postmarke and the name transferred. A new magazine appeared from No. 128 (No. 18 of S-W) with the new double title “Die Postmarke-Sammlerwoche”. Within Germany it was still known as “Sammlerwoche”, and outside as “Die Postmarke”. The contents of the two were identical. The Society notice relating to this amalgamation only glossed over the long-awaited internal collapse of the old “S-W”, and can only be taken as whitewash. The once so great and proud “Sammler-Woche” had really ceased to exist. Its name was carried by another magazine, the old Viennese “Postmarke”, which had certainly been started on a rather broader basis but still tended by and large to limit itself, being an Austrian magazine, to its favourite specialized topic of research on old Austria. A new monthly supplement appeared from June 1927, as “Der Sammlerfreund”, with the subtitle “Monatsschrift für Briefmakensammler”. “Die Postmarke” had become too specialized and too technical in the course of time. These supplements are more general, written not for the layman but for the less devoted collectors. They aim to provide suitable reading for the beginner and the “occasional collector”.

This again shows editor and publisher working prudently side by side, the only way in which it could have been possible to produce a leading magazine from difficult beginnings and the hard days of the war.

b) Other Magazines for Collectors.

Louis Senf, the 75 year old♥ Leipzig Nestor of the stamp trade and the old master of philately has retired from the firm of Senf Brothers. However, he has carried on with his multifarious philatelic and especially his literary activities. In 1893 he managed to persuade the then album firm of Baumbach & Co., Leipzig, to publish and financially guarantee a new journal. Louis Senf was thus the spiritual parent of the new magazine, No. 1 Vol. 1 of which appeared on the 1st January 1894 under the title “Die Post”, “Universal-Anzeiger für Briefmarken-Sammler”. The first basic aim of this was to publish supplements to albums, so that the publisher could keep in constant uninterrupted contact with his customers, i.e. the owners of his album systems. There could be a lively exchange of opinions and experiences on a broader basis than was possible with letters. The magazine provided a commentary on the album and its arrangement.

♥ In 1922 “Die Postmarke” published his outstanding work on “The postage stamps of Austria”, 450 pages in large octavo.

♥ He was born in Leipzig on 2nd August 1852.

The actual editorship was in the hands of Louis Senf during the early years. The “Post” soon had to begin a hard struggle to exist, which went on for many years but was kept up with success. The old-style allegorical headpiece was always retained, right through till today. The close tie with the album firm was soon broken, and frequent changes of publisher and printer followed. However “Die Post” became a totally independent specialist journal. Financial difficulties were there to be overcome. Issues often appeared three weeks late. On 30th May 1909 the offices and publishing were transferred to Bischweiler of Essen. A great deal of space had always been devoted in the text to the treatment of philatelic-literary questions in – probably deliberate – contrast to other journals. A monthly supplement “Die Philatelistische Litteratur”[♦], subtitled “Zentralblatt Für Litteraturfreunde und - Sammler” was in fact published from 15th January 1895 to 15th November 1897, in three volumes with a total of 30 issues. Dr. Rommel (Leipzig) was the editor. The main section of the “Post” remains significant as to content even during the years of crisis. Its Colonial research was particularly noteworthy. It described new cancellations adopted in the Colonies with the exact dates of their employment, the opening of new post offices and (travelling railway ?)posts[★], the field post of the Herero Uprising, put out geographical maps of the region, and so supplied valuable material for what is today unfortunately the closed collecting subject of the German Colonial and overseas post. Louis Senf gradually undertook series of articles based on his own extensive knowledge of what is called the “classical” period of philately, in which he grew up and became interested in collecting, and much of which he has preserved for posterity. They have titles like “From the Old Days”, “Remainders and their Fate” and so on. His special articles were happily even more numerous. The 25th anniversary volume appeared during the difficult period of the war. However the last issue (Nov/Dec) was not sent out by Kehl[•] till the end of February 1919 because of the collapse of Germany. From No. 7 of the 34th volume the firm was taken over by A. Stecker & Co. G.m.b.H. of Wilhelmshaven-Rüstringen. The technical presentation improved immediately, though what has become the characteristic yellow cover of the advertising section was replaced by a white one. The greatest part of the credit for the creation and often the continuing existence of the “Post” belongs to Louis Senf. His work was drawn from the inexhaustible well of knowledge based on his own life, and always had a useful, informative and fruitful effect on philately, so that “Die Post” was established as an independent philatelic organ, and has carried on as such to the present day.

The “Donau-Post” has appeared regularly in Pressburg from January 1918 to the present day. In 1919 the advertising section was printed on greaseproof paper from time to time. In the same year the publishers brought out the “Donaupost-Umsturzkatalog 1919” (Danube Post Revolution Catalogue 1919), which went to a second (improved) edition in January 1921. Both catalogues were in great demand in those confused times, since they were the first to classify and publish the confused material from the fallen Danube Monarchy and their many successor states. The “Donau-Post” itself published the necessary corrections and supplements since it was designed from the outset to specialize in the stamps of Austria-Hungary and its successor states, especially Czechoslovakia. It found an unselfish and impartial editor in Dr. Viktor Weinert. Throughout the war – in the war – and even in the most difficult times of inflation it stayed German and maintained the high level of its work, so that today it can be nominated as a leader in its special field.

Franz Petersohn, an editor of the old “Sammler-Woche” has put out a new octavo journal with the title “Philatelistisches Vereinsblatt”[♥] in Munich since the beginning of 1926. It contains a good, pleasantly written text section, and a few small advertisements, the whole being a pale ♦ Sic!

★ 1903-1907 in German S.W. Africa.

• Whose he?

♥ Philatelic Society Papers

reflection of the old “S-W”. Since 1927 part of it has carried the title “Sammler-Post, Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung” and this is sent out to non-Society subscribers.

Of the foreign magazines with their text in German, mention should be made of one, which unfortunately ceased to publish in 1927 in Japan, which did not actually carry a German title. It was called “Yebin Kite Zasshi” (The Japanese Journal of Timbrology), and appeared monthly from 1924. It had 48 pages, and was artistically printed. It was the organ of the “Japanische Gesellschaft für Briefmarkenkunde in Tokyo”, editor Takaharu Mitsui (Tokyo), who had studied in Germany. It regularly published Japanese translations of articles by leading German writers, with the German-language version appearing simultaneously or in the next issue, though the German text was often grossly distorted by the typesetters in the Tokyo printing office.

8

SPECIALIST PERIODICALS

German Colonies, Ukraine, Entires.

Still to be mentioned are some specialist magazines devoted to research in new and very popular areas of collecting, such as the “Illustrierte Zeitung für deutsche Kolonialmarkenkunde” published 1907-12 by Hans Müller in Hanover. This was preceded in the year 1906 by the first appearance of another magazine entitled “Philatelistische Berichte”, later “Friedemann Berichte für Briefmarkensammler” which is still appearing at the present day and has gained a quite special place in the ranks of philatelic periodicals. It is devoted to the special area which Friedemann has cultivated with special affection for decades, the stamps and cancellations of the German Protectorates and post offices abroad. He continues to supply valuable data on the basis of the most recent research and discoveries to “Friedemann’s Handbuch der Postwertzeichen und Entwertungen der deutschen Postanstalten in den Schutzgebieten und im Auslande”. Both in its make-up and its method of publication the “Berichte” stands out above all other philatelic journals. The first issue came in April 1906 and the sequence has been unbroken since that time. 3 – 6 issues appear per year, no doubt according to circumstances, and when they have reached a certain number of pages they are combined into a volume (hence not an annual volume). Together with the “Handbuch” these form a valuable standard work for their special area. To date there have been 2512 pages (9 volumes). This represents a really considerable output of research activity in the special area that Albert Friedemann’s activities has made so popular. It is closed territory for collecting now, but maintains the interest of serious philatelists because of new discoveries, collector’s liking for its forerunners* and for the war relief stamps of German East Africa etc. They are a constant reminder to us Germans of what we have had and lost, of our achievements, struggles and even our failures. Albert Friedemann (Leipzig) is personally responsible for the “Berichte”, which appears in an octavo format with copious illustrations on the best art paper (with the exception of the war years). The most expensive photographic illustrations are not spared. There is no advertising section; it appears in a pleasing and very distinguished form from his own special publishing house and business in Leipzig. It maintains its scientific and research character throughout and is never used as a worthless rigged-up “House magazine” for the firm’s own advertising. Körner & Son of Leipzig are currently responsible for the all-round excellence of the printing. There is no subscription; nor are orders by post accepted, and no right of ordering is guaranteed. It is sent “only to my Society friends”. The contents of the “Berichte” cover recent researches and discoveries in its special field; new printing questions, numbers of issue and there is an important section on forgeries and make-ups, with comparative pictures of genuine stamps and cancellations alongside the forgeries, overprints or defective cancellations, warnings, lawsuits about stamp forgeries (Friedemann is called in very often as an expert witness), and other similar topics. “Die Postmarke – Sammlerwoche” writes in very striking terms about Friedemann’s “Berichte”^{*}.

* Stamps from the Motherland without overprint but cancelled by Colonial or foreign post offices.

“The name Friedemann is so intimately connected with the stamps of the German colonies and overseas posts that it is probably familiar to every German collector. There can be few dealers who bring so much idealism to a topic as Friedemann, and many collectors could also take him as their example. Friedemann’s life work, the study of the German colonial stamps and their cancellations, has already born rich fruit. One can easily accept that the stamps of the German colonies would never have attained their present popularity unless Friedemann’s studies had made it possible to distinguish the good from the bad in spite of the many existing forgeries. Stamps which have received Friedemann’s endorsement, never lightly bestowed, can hardly be questioned by other researchers or disproved by other tests. Friedemann’s great handbook on the stamps and cancellations of the German colonies is a pattern of basic philatelic research, and few similar works can be ranked on a level with it. What Friedemann has accomplished can be best appreciated from the fact that the Kohl handbook includes some of the countries lying within Friedemann’s field of research, and relies very largely on his researches”.

Amongst the existing foreign-language journals there is a German-Ukrainian one from the year 1925 “Der Ukrainische Philatelist”, appearing in Vienna. It is extremely rough and ready, and has a simple Cyrillic main heading with subtitles in German and English: “Der Ukrainische Philatelist” and “Ukrainian Philatelist”. About two of its six pages are in German. Its contents cover the Ukrainian stamps, the bifureated printings[♦] and special topics connected with them. Der Berliner Ganzsachen-Sammler-Verein (Berlin Society of Entire Collectors) put out a society magazine, “Der Ganzsachen-Sammler” for the first time in the year 1912; it was sent out along with the “Berliner, Briefmarkenzeitung”. This connection with Kosack’s journal was broken in the year 1920, but the Society, which had about 400 members, managed to keep its publication going until a short time ago. A new and independent journal “Die Ganzsache” was founded on 1st January 1921; supported by the firm of Robert Noske of Borna (near Leipzig), who made no profit from it, it managed to retain its position even through the inflation period. The editorship has always been in the hands of Dr. Ascher, Berlin. Its original field of entires, cancellations and air mail was extended so as to make it better able to overcome the difficulties of the time; from its 3rd volume at the beginning of 1923 it became a general philatelic journal, though with most of the space given to entires. To correspond with this internal change, the title was altered in 1924 to “Deutsche Sammler-Zeitung (bisher, Die Ganzsache)”. Reports from the Bundes Deutscher Philatelisten-Verbände (League of German Philatelic Societies) were also accepted up to July 1926. The Berlin Philatelic Club used it as their society organ for a time. However it continued to serve the interests of entires collectors as its main task – independent of the dealers’ stock/capital. In view of the general conditions today, and the journal’s special position in the less popular field of entires collecting, the number of readers is probably not very large, so that the publisher and the society have had a hard struggle to keep this valuable paper afloat. From the end of 1927 it has appeared monthly as a supplement to the Viennese “Postmarke”.

9 Bibliophilic Papers

There were two papers devoted to the bibliophilic side of philately, one was “Die Philatelistische Literatur”, from Richard Rose, of which two numbers appeared in 1894, and “Der Philatelistische Litteratursammler”, founded in the year 1906 by Dr. Otto Rommel, a well-known bibliophile. This is of particular value today[♥]. No 1 dated 20th October 1906 was produced by typewriter, the rest were duplicate by lithography.

^{*} No. 128 (18) of 16th September 1926, p. 227..

[♦] Literal !

The most important new title of the year 1921 is without doubt “Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm”. This, the magazine of the Vereins philatelistischer Literatursammler (Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors), with its headquarters in Berlin, is the only magazine in the world of exclusively philatelic-bibliophilic interest, and deals only with specialist literature or bibliographic studies. The first issue dates from 20th July 1921. The magazine is produced by lithography from a typewritten script. Editorship is in the hands of Carl Beck and Alex Bungerz. It has been repeatedly distinguished at international stamp exhibitions. The adverts section of the “Bücherwurm” has proved its value for literature wanted and offered over the entire world. The magazine has produced excellent work in its field over the years.

10 Catalogue Questions

The wide-ranging problem of the German catalogues cannot be dealt with in detail within the scope of this paper, although it often has a profound effect on the inner and outer shaping of many specialist magazines. I thus refer my readers to what I said earlier about Senf, Hess and Zumstein. The following may be said about Michel and Borek:

If we look through the reviews in the technical press of the pre-war years, we find that collectors were no longer entirely satisfied with the big German catalogues. Sometimes the pricing, superficial and often contradictory in relation to the values of individual groups of stamps, gave rise to entirely justifiable complaints; sometimes annoyance was caused by unsuitable classification, or unnecessary and to the collector quite deplorable, renumbering. No notice was taken of justifiable complaints, since they were established and had no competition to fear. Hugo Michel (Weimar) made use of all these reasons: he ventured to bring out his new “Michel Catalogue” for the first time in 1910, and this became successful in the course of time, aided by several lucky chances. It was the only catalogue to appear in Germany during the World War, and for a time after the war was the most widely circulated catalogue in the world^{*}. Even today, when it is passed from the Hugo Michel G. m. b. H. to the Schwaneberger album published in Leipzig, it retains a noteworthy place amongst the German catalogues. The Michel mark, the artificial unit of reckoning that made the catalogue useful even during the inflation period, is still known today to every collector, though it is no longer current. Years of experience going well back into the nineteenth century, a fundamental study of the state of the market, a keen and accurate eye for future development, a capacious memory and a never-flagging capacity for work, these are the factors by means of which the quiet and personally unassuming Hugo Michel gained success and reputation for his catalogue and his name. Unfortunately his personal touch, which was the confidence-inspiring background to the catalogue, seems to have disappeared or at least been reduced during the past couple of years. It no longer seems to be present in the “Michel-Nachtägen”, which has appeared regularly as a magazine every month since 1921, and is intended to maintain contact between catalogue dealer and customers. It is printed in the format of the catalogue. The right-hand (odd-numbered) pages show new issues and the necessary additions and corrections to the catalogue. These are printed so that they can be cut out and stuck to the appropriate page of the catalogue. However, the additions are usually not cut out, but collected up as a magazine, since the left-hand (even-numbered) pages are devoted to philatelic articles of all kinds.

A special and in many respects unique position amongst the German-language periodical literature is occupied by the “Briefmarken-Preislisten” from Richard Borek in Brunswick. It has appeared since the year 1906 without noteworthy interruptions. Looked at superficially, it cannot be fitted into the strict definition of a specialist periodical, but if we look more closely at its connections, its importance and its acceptance by its circle of readers, we come to the conclusion that the “Borek list” is quite outstanding amongst dealers’ periodicals. The Borek list is an intermediate stage between a pure stamp catalogue, a dealers’ price list and a technical periodical. Its classification is based on the numbering of the Senf catalogue, even though Borek often disagrees with this. It has the advantage over catalogues that the prices it gives are the actual market prices at which the firm of Borek will supply customers and not, as is often the case with the Michel catalogue, simple comparative values for relating individual stamp issues to one another. Since nothing escapes the trained eye of the experienced dealer, and since he is always extraordinarily well informed because of his connections, the gossiping discussions in which he sits in judgement on the individual countries, and describes the market position of the old issues and the quality of the new ones are of very special interest to the collector. Since Borek did not go along with the price notation* used in the Senf catalogue during the inflation period, but worked on the basis of Swiss francs, his lists won wide acceptance as the preferred basis for exchange. They are still used today for comparison alongside the catalogue for expensive items.

[♥] Bacon, Philatelic Library, p. 718.

^{*} A detailed account of the catalogue as such would be outside the scope of this paper.

III THE DAILY PRESS

a) General Questions and Possibilities.

Happily, philately is being given more and more attention in the daily press from year to year. This is partly because of the general attempt many publishers are making to extend their readership by offering special supplements devoted to a new and modern topic, and partly a reflection of the fact that during the period of severe economic crises, especially the inflation, many periodicals and organs of local collector’s societies had to cease publication and turn to the daily press instead. Hence it was very often the daily papers that rushed into the breach, and began to publish articles with a philatelic content as well as reports and announcements from the main societies. This led gradually to the development of one or more permanent supplements. A good, technically sound column appearing regularly could bring the publisher many advantages, and would always play a part in expanding and popularising a newspaper. If we remember that the first articles on postage stamps appeared in the year 1840 in the then English periodicals “Spectator”, “The London and Westminster Review” and “The Art Union”, and that for the rest of the century articles on stamps with a distinct philatelic content only appeared rarely in the columns of the daily press, we can see there has been an important step forward during the present century, especially in the post-war years. The postage stamp, a symbol of world-wide commerce of which millions are in daily use, a representative and so to speak a visiting card from their country of origin, captured the globe a long time ago, and at the same time has acquired ardent collectors and researchers in all parts of the globe. The ideal value of philately is understood by a wide circle of publishers who appreciate the importance of the stamp trade. Hence the daily press could not pass this topic by unregarded either. Absorbing the new material into their regular coverage called for completion of the text*. A good stamp column is also advantageous from the publisher’s point of view, as the stamp dealer is willing to use the non-specialist press partly, or if his business permits, entirely for this trade announcements and other advertising. A glance at suitable daily papers, illustrated papers, magazines etc. will demonstrate this♥. As dealers’ organizations are always stressing, they will consider placing adverts mainly in the papers which do not generally exclude philately from their texts. Adroit and specialized advertising can thus do a great deal for the publisher and there is commercial advantage to be gained from a good stamp column at regular intervals.

* A conversion key for marks of the wartime and revolution periods.

* This is what he says.

♥ See “Zeitungs-Verlag”, No. 32 of 31st July 1925.

It is thus obvious that philately has taken an important step forward by the introduction of philatelic columns or supplements into the daily press, so long as the columns concerned are not just put together by “scissors and paste”, but have been written by a reputable philatelist, and all reports and notices are soundly based on philatelic principles though written in a popular generally-acceptable style. With some exceptions, a column in the daily press should not be aimed at the convinced and committed collector, since its principal task – and this must never be forgotten – is to win lay people for philately. Corresponding mistakes are frequently found in newspaper supplements and individual articles on technology, sport and other topics. The philatelic section of the daily press often suffer from a lack of trained specialist writers, who are not engaged because of cost, though the result is the numerous defects in terminology and its correct use and in the treatment of various special topics. The occurrence and outcome of philatelic events such as meetings, collectors’ or dealers’ exchanges, auctions, exhibitions and festivities are generally given the attention they warrant in the press, but the reports often show that specially trained correspondents are needed for philately as for the theatre, the arts and sport.

In drawing up a purely philatelic column, there are various considerations which must not be ignored. Above all the editor must realize that he can perform useful pioneering work for philately, and that his work has to show philately in a worthy manner to a wide public who may be ignorant of it or have the wrong impression about it. Careful writing and an orderly, easily-understood presentation can catch the attention of the layman, who can then be cultivated until he finally realizes that “there is something more to it”, and the game is won. A continuing presentation of the stamp as a phenomenon of daily life at the basis of philately must be the main line of approach, and then the display of a little adroitness in presenting the subject in more detail or from a particular angle will interest people in a phenomenon of daily life. The supplement or column can give the beginner the first practical advice for starting a collection without spending too much money. The text and advertisement sections should be carefully checked and edited along basic technical principles, and can then be a source, perhaps the best source, of information on stamp dealers, catalogues, albums, new issues, prices, societies and exchanges. A precise and perhaps extended knowledge of all these things is also of great importance for the beginner and can protect him from buying experience too dearly. A well-edited letters section can deal with interested enquiries. Because of the up-to-dateness of its questions and answers, this can be the most-used part of the supplement. Many enquiries which a specialist magazine would leave unanswered because they are not advanced enough for its readers, or because they need a personal reply, can be dealt with by the daily press without the risk of being or becoming boring. Even advanced collectors may welcome the supplement as “light reading”, and do not apply the same standards to them as to the specialist magazines. Obviously the treatment of philatelic questions and problems in the daily press should be consistent and correct. It should also be mentioned that to the best of my knowledge that there is as yet no philatelic correspondence (in print or matrix) for the daily press.

b) Position of Individual Papers as Regards Philately.

The number of daily papers that regularly publish articles on philately is very great, so that I can only mention the most important, or the ones that are of particular interest for some reason. My reasons for choosing them are also very various, they can hardly be given for the individual cases. The initiative often came from the readers or from a local stamp collectors’ society. A publisher or editor is also often personally interested. The examples of Breslau, Düsseldorf, Frankfurt-am-Main, Stuttgart and Wiesbaden have shown that when a paper takes up philately it must “also” within a fairly short time take in the corresponding competitive magazine. Many of the supplements considered are too philatelic, so that they do not serve the cause of free publicity to any extent, and encroach on the territory of the specialist press.

A whole series of these supplements appears in Berlin. The oldest, dating from the year 1919, belongs to the “Berliner Börsenzeitung”. The “Berliner Allgemeine Zeitung” published by the firm of Ullstein has a weekly supplement on Thursdays, “Der Briefmarken-Sammler”. It is signalled by a stereotype block on the title page and a catch-line printed in red at the top of the page. The text is edited by the well-known philatelist and philatelic adviser to the State Postal Museum, President of the Superior Provincial Court Carl Lindenberg. The vast knowledge and uncommon experience of this man guaranteed a reputation for these supplements in learned circles. They contain an important leading article followed by items of general interest understandable by the lay public, along with reports on new issues and auctions, anecdotes, jokes, and literary reviews as well. The most important home and foreign firms appear in the extensive advertising section. The “Berliner Lokal-Anzeiger” has had a technical supplement, “Der Briefmarken-Sammler”, edited by Paul Seelhoff, since 1921. The following also appear in Berlin.

Berliner Morgenpost	with	Die Briefmarken-Post
Berlin Tageblatt	with	Postwertzeichen
Der Deutsche	with	Der Briefmarken-Sammler
Der Tag	with	Neue Briefmarken
Deutsche Allgem. Zeitung.	With	Briefmarken

The “Deutsche Illustrierte Zeitung” has a regular, profusely illustrated “Briefmarken-Ecke” (Stamp Corner)

The periodic supplements to the German provincial press deserve a mention as follows:

Augsburg	Neue Augsburger Zeitung
Beuthen	Oberschlesische Zeitung (for the Stamp Collector)
	Ostdeutsche Morgenpost (supplement for Stamp Collectors)
Brunswick	Neueste Nachrichten (Briefmarken)
Breslau	Breslauer Zeitung since September 1921 (Collectors’ Corner)
	Schlesische Zeitung (for Stamp Collectors)
Chemnitz	Allgemeine Zeitung (Stamp Review)
Dresden	Dresdner Anzeiger monthly (Archive for philately)
Düsseldorf	Düsseldorfer Nachrichten (Round about the postage stamp)
	Düsseldorfer-Stadt-Anzeiger (Postage Stamps)
Erlangen	Erlanger Tageblatt (For the stamp collector)
Frankfurt/Main	Frankfurter Nachrichten (New postage stamps)
	Frankfurter Zeitung (Briefmarken)
Frankfurt/Oder	Frankfurter Oder-Zeitung
Görlitz	Neuer Görlitzer Anzeiger (Stamp corner)
Greifswald	Greifswalder Zeitung
Hamburg	Hamburger Acht-Uhr-Abendblatt (The stamp collector)
	Hamburger Nachrichten (From philately)

Of outstanding importance is the exceptionally intelligent and well-produced “Briefmarkenecke” of the “Hamburger Fremdenblätter”. Edited by Friedrich Schütt, it has appeared fortnightly in the Sunday evening edition since 15th March 1924. Independent, and very diverse in content, it takes up about half a page of the Hamburg broadsheet.

These are also in:

Heidelberg	Die Badische Post.
Jena	Jenaische Zeitung (Stamp corner)
Krefeld	“Our People” weekly, fortnightly supplement
Kottbus	Cottbuser Anzeiger (Collectors)
Leipzig	Leipziger Tageblatt in the year 1922 (philately)

More recently (the first time on 4th August 1927, No. 216), the “Leipziger Neuesten Nachrichten” has had a “Briefmarkenecke” (stamp corner), which appears regularly covering half a page without advertisements.

Magdeburg	Sport-Sonntag in the winter months (Philatelic notices) Magdeburgische Zeitung
Mannheim	Mannheimer Tageblatt (Der Briefmarken-Sammler) Neue Mannheimer Zeitung
Munich	Münchener Zeitung, monthly, edited by Emil Herold (Marken-Sammler der München Zeitung)

The “Süddeutsche Sonntagspost”, a publication from the firm of “MNN”, Knorr and Hirth, Munich has published a “Briefmarkenecke” (Stamp corner) every week since the beginning of 1927. It gives short reports in layman’s language on new issues, and publishes exchange requests from its subscribers “free of charge for the present”.

These are also in:

Nuremberg	Fränkischer Kurier (Stamp corner)
Stuttgart	Stuttgarter Neues Tagblatt (Stamps) edited by Paul Seelhoff Schwäbischer Merkur (S.M. stamp corner) from 12 th September 1925
Wiesbaden	Neue Wiesbadener Zeitung (Stamp corner) Wiesbadener Tageblatt (Stamp corner)
Zehlendorf	Zehlendorfer Anzeiger (for the stamp collector)
Zwickau	Zwickauer Tageblatt (Postage stamps)

The German language press abroad has also adopted philately, and even our major papers overseas have not excluded it. The favourite and most popular supplement, and one that has developed in its own special way, is the “Briefmarken-Rundschau” (B.R.) of the “Danziger Zeitung”. This appeared for the first time on 16th June 1920, i.e. the time when the new Free State began to put out its own postage stamps, and do provided a sudden new philatelic interest for the entire world. The “Briefmarken-Rundschau” initially appeared every Friday in very close association with the Danziger Zeitung under the methodical and excellent editorship of G. O. Kaemmerer, an upright philatelist who never forfeited his independence on technical questions and fought bravely against speculation in Danzig and also against the interference of Poland in Danzig’s postal laws. The “Briefmarken-Rundschau” soon aroused widespread interest, so that the Danzig firm of A. W. Kafemann G. m. b. H. felt able to make it available on its own to interested stamp collectors, without their having to subscribe to the “Danziger Zeitung” as well. This is always gratifying with this kind of supplement.

The Internationale Philatelistenverein (Int. Philat. Society) of Dresden used it as their official organ for announcements after the closure of the “Philatelist”. When Danzig went onto the gold standard, the publisher was compelled to cease its publication with No. 34 of the 4th volume, dated 24th August 1923. “Briefmarken-Rundschau” was soon taken over by “Der Osten” publishing house, but could not keep going in the long run, and neither could “Neueste Briefmarken-Umschau”.

German philatelic supplements have also found a solid foothold in the daily press of the “successor states”. One such, with an established and profitable advertising section, is “Der Briefmarkensammler” which has appeared every Sunday for seven years as a free supplement to “Deutsche Zeitung Bohemia” in Prague. An “Internationaler Briefmarken-Kurier” has appeared since October 6th 1921 as an independent supplement to “T. Z. am Morgen” in Troppau. “Die Deutsche Post”, as second Troppau daily paper, includes a regular “Markenrubrik” (stamp column). German-language “Philatelistische Abhandlungen” appear regularly in the “Pressburger Grenzbote”. Since the beginning of 1924 the “Czernowitzer Allgemeine Zeitung” has had a well-edited monthly “Philatelistische Rubrik”. The “Pester Lloyd”, a German daily paper in Budapest has published a whole-page “Briefmarken-Rundschau” in its Friday evening edition since March 1924. It is edited by the technical author Fr. H. Lehnert, and does much to propagate and publicize philatelic problems in the Kingdom of Hungary. “Der Morgen”, the German language daily published in Agram*, has contained a two-page supplement on philately every Thursday since the beginning of 1925. Unimportant columns on philately have appeared regularly for a long time in a whole series of German newspapers in Czechoslovakia, in Aussig, Brünn, Karlsbad, Komotau, Podersam, Postellberg, Saaz, and Teplitz.

* Of the Austria-Hungarian Empire

In Austria on the other hand only a few provincial papers rise to a “Philatelists’ Corner”. The “Linzer Morgenpost” in Linz am Donau has had one every Monday since March 1924. As the Viennese papers become better and better established, a good many of them have gradually decided to open their columns to philately. In the post-war period, the “Sport-Tagblatt” led the way with philatelic publications in 1919, but this supplement had to be given up again because of the troubled state of the Viennese newspaper industry. Later, Dr. Schwager edited the “Philatelistische Rubrik” of the Österreichischen Reisezeitung”, and the column “Der Briefmarkensammler” that appeared every Friday in the “Illustrierten Wiener Extrablattes”. The Österreichische Wehrzeitung” has had a “Philatelistenecke” (Philatelists’ Corner) since 1920. Also in November 1920 the “Neue Wiener Journal” decided to supply a “Wiener Briefmarken-Kurier” along with its Saturday noon edition. Unfortunately this “Kurier” was not included in the main issue of the N.W.J. and so it soon ceased to appear. In 1921 both the Viennese Monday magazines, “Neues Montagblatt” (the Monday morning edition of the “Reichspost”) and “Der Montag” started to include philatelic news. The “Wiener Mittagszeitung” has also published a “Briefmarken-Rundschau” every Tuesday since 9th October 1923. at the beginning of 1924, “Der Tag” came out with a “Philatelistischen Ecke” that contains very good articles, soon followed by the “Neue Wiener Tagblatt”, and from 5th April 1924 the “Neue Freie Presse” as had a column entitled “Der Philatelist” in its illustrated weekly Sunday supplement. Also worthy of mentioning are “Der Jugendfreundsammler”, a monthly column in the Viennese journal “Der Jugendfreund”, and the “Briefmarken-Ecke” (since 1925) by G. Pause in the illustrated Viennese magazine “Die Pause”. Since Christmas 1926 the Viennese weekly paper “Sonntagsglocke” has had a philatelic column by K. F. Naumann with the title “Die Kinderwelt-Marke” in its “Kinderwelt” supplement. This devotes a great deal of solid effort to the absolutely vital task of educating young collectors.

The “Neue Zürcher Zeitung” of Zürich has published a “Philatelie” supplement since before the war. This is outstandingly good and technically well edited. Regular papers are also published in Strasburg by the “Strassburger Neue Zeitung” (Le Nouvean Journal) and the “Strassburger Neuesten Nachrichten” (Les Derrières Nouvelles). We should also mention the “Volksstimme Für Elsass-Lothringen”, which has a whole-page supplement, “Der Briefmarkensammler” every 14 days. This is the official organ of the “Union des Timbrophiles de Strasbourg”. Good scientific articles, e.g. by Albert Friedemann (Leipzig) on the German Post in Kyushu and the Marianas, fill this column. There is also guidance on prices, social news and local advertisements.

In America we have the “Milwaukee Sonntags-Post” with its extensive supplement “Für Briefmarken-Sammler”, and the New York “Herald” (sic!), with “Philatelistische Neuigkeiten”.

* In Czechoslovakia.

• Another name for Zagreb.

This activity by the daily press has an importance for the specialist philatelic press that should not be underestimated, since it draws attention to philately and gets people involved with it. It gains new supporters and smoothes their way. It would be very desirable if the whole of the daily press could take it as an accepted thing to deal regularly with questions of philately.

CONCLUSION

To conclude this study we will state that philately in all its forms is directed into chosen paths and guided along them by the philatelic periodical literature, and especially by the German-language press. There is hardly another field of collecting besides philately in which the literature has become so valuable and so extensive in so short a time.

In contrast to earlier years, the developments of recent years have seen the daily press publicising philately and introducing it to a wider public and to some extent displacing the specialist press as a result of favourable and also apparently unfavourable factors. The appearance of many new specialist journals has been made superfluous and their functions have often been taken over. This would account on the one hand for the cessation of many magazines in favour of the Society organs, and on the other for the way in which the daily papers have been adopted and taken into service.

To comprehend this double development, direct it properly, make suitable demands on it and use it in good time must be a task for the future.

CURRICULUM VITAE

I was born on 9th August 1904 in Eichstätt on the Altmühl as the eldest son of the ironmonger Eduard Blank. I attended the Classical Grammar School in Lörrach from 1915, and from 1922 the Old High School in Würzburg, from which I matriculated in 1924.

I had decided to become a journalist. My academic studies were arranged to take my career interest and tendencies into account, so as to get the widest possible general background as well as specialist knowledge in my chosen field. I had five terms at the University of Würzburg, and attended lectures by, amongst others, Professor Count Degenfeld, Professors Kress, Marbe, Meurer, Sapper, His Excellency von Schanz, H. Schanz and Termer on jurisprudence, political economy, geography and philosophy. For economic reasons I was compelled to go to work in various press establishments in 1925 and 1926. I was able to pick up a good deal of knowledge on the practical side of editorship and publishing generally.

In 1926 I went to Leipzig, where I had lectures from Professors Everth, Volz and Wiedenfeld, and took part in sessions at the Instituts für Zeitungskunde (Institute for Journalism), such as their seminars on political economy and geography. At the present time I am active as editor and section head for the periodicals section of the Internationale Presse-Ausstellung (International Press Exhibition) Pressa 1928, Cologne-am-Rhein.

I hope to obtain the degree of Doctor of Philosophy on the basis of my inaugural dissertation entitled "Philately in the Specialist and Daily Press" as the conclusion to higher education.

Wilhelm Blank.

END

Author (14pt)
Title
[Title in original language]
Bibliographic details
36th meeting, Leverkusen

(Notes)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

TITLE (14 pt)

END
Miming the original document

Greetings	Page
Wolfgang Obladen Lord Mayor of the town of Leverkusen	5
Dr Heinz Jaeger President of the Society of German Philatelists	7
Günter Kegel 1 st Chairman of the North Rhine-Westphalia State Society	9
Gerhart Hüttl 1 st Chairman of the Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society	11
Patron and Honorary President	13
Official programme of events	15
Meetings	21
Agenda of 36 th Society meeting	27
Minutes of 83 rd German Philatelic meeting	29
Printing programme	31
Special cancellations	33
Index of contributors	37

Gerd Bethke: Special Leverkusen cancellation	41
Exhibition record	49
Sections	49
List of Donors	113

p.5.

The Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society looks back this year on the 25 years of its existence. On this occasion the members of the Society of German Philatelists are holding their meeting in Leverkusen.

In the name of the City of Leverkusen I offer hearty congratulations to the Bavarian Society on its silver jubilee. At the same time I extend a hearty welcome to all society members and participants, and wish them a pleasant and informative stay in Leverkusen.

Postage stamps have been with us for more than 100 years, and all that times have served not only for postal purposes, but also as desirable objects of collection by young and old. The postage stamp is not only a very beautiful object because of its wide range of designs and motifs, but arouses in its owner an interest in foreign peoples, their history and present state.

I am certain that the big exhibitors in the Forum, in which more than 50 active sections of the Society will demonstrate the results of the research and the associated scientific literature, will also help to rouse our townspeople's enthusiasm for stamp collecting.

I wish every success to the society meeting and the philatelic meeting, and thank the members of the Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society for holding this distinguished event in Leverkusen.

Leverkusen, October 1982.

Obladen
Lord Mayor.

p.7.

A hearty welcome to the delegates and guests of the Society of German Philatelists for the 36th Society meeting and 83rd German Philatelic meeting in Leverkusen.

After long and careful preparation, our friends of the Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society, under the leadership of Herr Hüttl, have put together an impressive programme.

There will be two high points of the meeting in Leverkusen: one is the forthcoming selection of panels from our society for the coming very important year. New guidelines have to be laid down.

The second is the main Salon "Research and Literature in Philately", which will illustrate the work being carried on in all branches of our hobby.

I am very pleased to recommend this "basic philately" to visitors to Leverkusen, since we shall have our work cut out in the coming years to keep philately and its further development in the forefront of our Society activities. We must help the young collector, and must be able to offer interesting subjects to the specialists and individualists.

As well as all your work and efforts during our society and philatelic meetings in Leverkusen '82 I hope you will also have some pleasant hours in the company of your philatelic friends.

I hope the great philatelic meetings in this world-famous Bavarian town will have a successful and harmonic course.

Dr Heinz Jaeger
President
Society of German Philatelists

p.9.

It is a great pleasure for me to welcome participants and guest to the 36th Society meeting and 83rd Philatelic meeting to Leverkusen in the name of the Philatelic Society of North Rhine-Westphalia.

This is only the sixth time since the 2nd World War that a Society and Philatelic meeting have come within the range of our Society, the others were Wappetal (1951), Düsseldorf (1955), Essen (1965), Soest (1968) and Krefeld (1973). The repetition of these names and dates rouses memories of great and ideal exhibitions and gatherings which none of us will ever forget. The same applies to the organizers of this now historical event in philately.

This year's meeting gains special importance from the forthcoming choice of a new Committee for the Society of German Philatelists, as we have to lay down the lines for the future development of our Society.

The Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society has done fine preparatory work in arranging the events in connection with its silver jubilee. The working sessions from 28th to 31st October and the Salon "Research and Literature in Philately" will attract the undivided interests of all visitors, and I hope very much that everyone will find something for his own interests in and for the societies and sections associated with the Society of German Philatelists.

Günter Kegel
First President of the Society of Philatelists in North Rhine-Westphalia.

p.11.

The sections for Research and Literature of the Society of German Philatelist have been members of our Society since 1973 and 1975.

This was one reason why we decided to have an exhibition limited for the first time to Society sections only. About half the sections are taking part, and have listed their aims and achievements in the catalogue. The two societies and their attached sections have a joint information stand, where you can make personal contacts, get advise, and also examine and acquire serious philatelic literature.

All sections of the Society are active on an honorary basis, and operate world-wide, i.e. many foreign philatelists are included amongst their membership. Please remember always that only a knowledge of the research and the resultant scientific literature can protect the collector to any extent against harm.

We shall be happy if you, our dear guests and visitors to this exhibition make full use of this hitherto unequalled opportunity.

Gerhard Hüttl
First Chairman of the Bavarian Stamp Collectors' Society

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler
December 1933, Volume 2, Issue 12

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

DER PHILATELISTISCHE LITERATURSAMMLER

December 1933, Volume 2, Issue 12.

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler
2 (12) Dec 1933
Supplement to the Journal "Grüne Sammler-Welt"

Goodbye

With this number our supplement says goodbye, to reappear in a new guise in the coming year as an independent journal of double the size. When we decided 1 ½ years ago to tack "Der Philatelistische Literatursammler" onto the magazine "Grüne Sammler-Welt" as a supplement, we did not suspect that after a short period of existence there would be so much material that we thought it necessary to convert the supplement into an independent magazine.

We are all the more pleased to be in a position to communicate this to our friends and readers in that only a short life was predicted for our supplement by various people. We can state with satisfaction that the continuation of our magazine is more than certain. As already mentioned, we hope in the course of the year to publish a large number of bibliographic articles from the pen of well-known philatelists. We also have many new features and improvements in mind.

For the design and production of the magazine we have to thank not only our efficient publisher, but in large part also our distinguished contributors, who belong almost exclusively to the "Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde". We offer our sincerest thanks in this place for the work they have contributed so far. At the same time we ask for more work in the future for the benefit of philatelic literature.

So we hope to see all friends and readers again in a Happy New Year!

The Editors

Choosing Articles

By Siegfried Simon, Rastatt.

“Many of today’s collectors are tired of specialist articles” and “we thus ought to try not just to attract the attention of existing philatelists, but also to attract young people”. These two remarks are the quintessence of most philatelic articles today. If we accept them, we draw the following conclusions.

Actual “collectors” are compelled by the enormous quantity of stamps that have appeared and will appear to turn towards quite limited regions so as not to get an oasis in the midst of a great waste on every page of their albums. These are the people who express the wish to have older, experienced collectors writing popular articles in one of the magazines to form the necessary scientific basis for their speciality.

However, the general collector and in particular the young ones are unfortunately less interested in special articles, since 90% of them either lack interest or are not in a position to buy a magazine.

However, even the advanced collector, even the specialist with a deep purse, take only one, or at most two or three, magazines. However a large number of specialist philatelic journals appear in our German fatherland and the adjoining states, and they mostly try to give serious, accurate and up-to-date information for collectors.

Various collectors have already been struck by the thought that it is a thousand pities there is so much valuable and interesting work they never manage to read, and that in particular they never get to know about interesting articles.

The wishes of research collectors in this direction should be met by a new section “Selected Articles” in our magazine.

Take this case: a collector is interested in subject “X” and would like to know about all new publications related to it. His “favourite magazine” published nothing about it, but another one very well might. In this case the new section will give brief but clear information on all scientifically interesting articles – including topic “X” – that appear in other magazines.

The articles will be surveyed by specialists in the various fields. They will decide whether the articles are space-filling rubbish, another re-hash, or a true scientific study. In short, the collector-reader will be given information on the whole range of serious philatelic magazines. It is also important in this connection for good articles to be read not only by subscribers to their original journal, but should be made known to all interested collectors.

The articles could then be conveniently listed with reference to the individual issue from the publishers, so that every collector and publisher would be helped in every imaginable direction. There is no need to make any special mention of the benefits to the collector of being able to study all the literature, since they are quite obvious. This task should have been carried out a long time ago by one of the big German philatelic organizations with a magazine at its disposal. As this has not happened so far, however, we must make a start now.

Dear Reader: this is new, and may not catch your attention immediately, but it will fill a deep chasm in German philatelic life....

Wishes for the specialist press

Over the years numerous collectors, particularly lovers of literature, have expressed various wishes. They related exclusively to magazines, which cannot easily be surveyed. We will use the turn of the year to stimulate discussions of this and at the same time ask Messrs the publishers to weigh up whether these wishes could be fulfilled. Our own view is that for the magazines to attend to these wishes can only be advantageous and make the philatelic literature more useful. For these reasons we list these wishes, and recommend their adoption most warmly. These suggestions are as follows:

Each journal should have on the first page of its cover at least the year, the volume number and the issue number. Giving the month instead of the issue number should be avoided as far as possible. Giving the month as well is to be recommended.

Journals that have running numbers should if possible give the number of the year with the running number in brackets. Only with journal that have used running numbers for years would it be desirable to have the year number in brackets.

No magazine without pages numbers! The magazine “Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm”, Leipzig, and “Mainpost”, Würzburg, are requested to use these in the coming years.

Every magazine with continuous page numbers! This wish is directed at the following journals: “Concordia-Post”; Bad Buckow – “Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde”, “Biberach (Riss) – “Der Internationale Philatelist”, Vienna, - “IPO Nachrichten (Gelsenkirchen) – “”Sieger-Post”, Lorch (Württemberg) - “Tamina”, Berlin – “Der Ukrainische Philatelist”, Vienna.

Always give supplements separately! Special magazines are usually published as supplements to bigger journals. The specialist collector prefers to keep these separately and take them out of the journal. It is thus desirable to have the supplement included in the journal in such a way that it can be removed easily and without damaging the journal. The magazine “Der Deutsche Inflationsmarken-Sammler”, Immenstadt (Allgäu), might bear this in mind for its supplement “Memel-Rundschau”.

Some magazines, which are at the same time the organs of large international exchange societies, might also bear the philatelic literature in mind when it comes to their exchange packets. Simply referring to “Literature” or “Periodicals” is not enough. The abbreviation “Philit”, used by the magazine “Internationale Markenbörse Liechtenstein” is recommended. This abbreviation will be readily understood by German. English and French collectors of philatelic literature.

Finally, wishes have also been expressed to use postal wrappers the same size as the magazine. It happens all too often that the postal wrapper is too short and the part of the magazine protruding beyond it is damaged in transit.

We are always ready to receive further suggestions from readers. If they are useful for the aims of philatelic literature, we are very ready to publish them in our paper.

Survey of contents

We ask philatelists with a knowledge of languages to survey foreign magazines for their contents, we have magazines, guidelines and stationery available. Postage will be refunded. Please write to the editor.

Review

Bungerz-Gedenk-Plakette. The Bungerz Memorial Plaque, to honour services to the German – language philatelic literature, was awarded on 7th November to F. Fritz Seifert, Leipzig, for his activities as editor and publisher. Our heartiest congratulations.

ALPINA, Allgemeines Philatelistisches Nachrichtenblatt, Verlag Herbert Mannigel, Berlin-Wilmersdorf, Augustastraße 53, which has appeared hitherto in duplicate form, will appear in print from January 1934 at the beginning of its third year. Format 290:225mm.

Die Kleine Briefmarkenzeitung Vienna, a well-produced journal that has appeared regularly since October 1932, will change its name to “Wiener Briefmarkenzeitung”, it will also act as a reliable guide and informant to both young and old collectors.

TAMINA, Internationales Nachrichten- u Offertenblatt für Sammler und Händler.

(International Report, offers sheet for collectors and dealers) This is from Gerhart Hayer, Berlin-Dehlem, Auf dem Grat 19. Hitherto duplicated, this has reached us in printed form for the first time, with no. 10 of the first volume. Format 245:170mm.

Catalogue Supplements. Glasewald: Supplement 1 to cancellations catalogue, in "Philatelisten –Zeitung", Gossnitz, No. 9/10, p. 39. "Kayssner": Supplement 2 to "Katapultpost-Catalogue" in "Grüne Sammler-Welt", Niebüll, No.11, p.150. Senf: Supplement 2 to Senf-Catalogue 1934 in "Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal", Leipzig, No.20. Zumstein: Supplement 2 to Zumstein's Europa-Catalogue 1934 in "Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung", Bern, No.11 p.139.

Literature Preview

Dictionary of Philately: At the recent annual meeting of the British philatelists in London, the publication of a detailed philatelic dictionary was decided on. It is intended in the first place to establish the terminology of philately on an international basis. The style of print used in stamp production will also be extensively covered.

Society for the Friends of Philatelic Literature

Society for the study and promotion of philatelic literature.
Editor: C. Schmittiel, Hamburg, 19, Tornquiststrasse 45.
Annual subscription 3 RM, including journal.
Postal money address: Hamburg 68046 (under Carl Schmittiel)

Members will obtain bibliographic studies mentioned at a reduced price.

Important Notice Contrary to an earlier announcement, subscribers will receive next year only the society paper “Der Philatelistische Literatursammler” cost-free. The magazine “Grüne Sammler-Welt” can be obtained at a reduced subscription price. Members who want to go on receiving “Grüne Sammler-Welt” are advised to place an early order.

Selected Articles. I wish to express my best thanks to all members who have promised their help with the new section “Selected Articles”.

C.Schmittiel

Specialist Articles at Reduced Prices.

Our members can obtain specialist philatelic journals at reduced subscription rates. All members wishing to take advantage of this facility are asked to let us know which journals they want by 15th December 1933 at latest. The money should be sent with the order to the above postal money address.

The following journals can be obtained at reduced prices. The regular subscription price is given in brackets:

RULES

Of “Society for the Friends of Philatelic Literature”, founded 1st October 1932. Adopted at General Meeting on 15th October 1933.

- 1 Name and Location. The society bears the name “Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde”. It is legally located and registered in Hamburg.
- 2 Aim. The society’s aim is to promote knowledge and collection of the philatelic literature.
- 3 Membership. Any person of good repute and over the age of 21 can be a member. Applications should be sent to the Chairman in writing, with details of birth, occupation and full address. On entry, every member undertakes to obey the rules. Honorary membership may be awarded by the committee or the Annual General Meeting to such people as have given outstanding service to the Society, to philatelic literature, or to philately.
- 4 Financial Year and Subscriptions. The financial year is the calendar year. The annual subscription will be determined at the A G M, or fixed by the committee if necessary. The subscription is always due in January of each year, and the full amount will be due from anyone joining later in the year.
- 5 Committee. The committee as a whole will be elected for an indefinite period at an ordinary or Extraordinary General Meeting. It will consist of three people, the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and Secretary-Treasurer. The Chairman will represent the society internally and externally, for all legal and extra-legal affairs. In his absence his place will be taken by his representative the Vice-Chairman. The Committee as a whole will divide business amongst themselves and can co-opt others during the financial year. If more than half the Committee members drop out during the year, fresh elections will be needed. Re-election is permissible. All Committee members are honorary members, Committee members may replace one another. Two tellers must be elected for the Annual General Meeting. They need not be members.

6 Annual General Meeting. An A G M must be called every year. Its agenda will be:

- 1) Business report.
- 2) Financial report.
- 3) Report of tellers.
- 4) Discharge of Committee.
- 5) Appointment of tellers.
- 6) Motions.
- 7) Any other business

All members must be notified of the A G M by letter or by notices in the Society journal. An extraordinary general meeting will take place at the request of the committee or at the wish of a tenth of the regular members who have paid their subscriptions. Their proposal must be set out in detail in a letter to the Chairman or his representative. The A G M or E G M must be called by the Chairman or his representative, with details of time and place. They will also draw up the agenda, in conjunction with the committee.

7 Election and Voting. In A G M's and E G M's, election is by simple majority. A tied vote means rejection. Foreign members may be represented by a member resident in Hamburg, but no member may represent more than 50 foreign members at one time. Only members whose subscriptions is up to date may vote. The results must be recorded by the Chairman and the Secretary.

8 Society Communications. The society will supply a society organ to its members. In this and in occasional special publications, the efforts and aims of the society and all its doings will be reported insofar as they are suitable for publication.

9 Resignation. Resigning members must pay their subscriptions for the current year, and must declare their resignation in writing in the form of a letter to the Chairman or his representative by 30th September at the latest. They have no claim on the Society's resources.

10 Expulsion. Members who act contrary to the interests of the Society or prove themselves unworthy can be expelled by resolution of the Chairman after a hearing by the Society. The same applies to members more than three months in arrears with their subscriptions. The subscription for the current year will still be due. Otherwise, all questions of rights and obligations must be referred to the next A G M or E G M, at which the expelled member can object to his exclusion. A two-thirds majority is needed to approve the expulsion of a member. Expelled members, like resigning members, have no claim on the Society's resources. The expulsion of a member is not legally actionable.

11 Dissolution. Dissolution of the Society can only take place at an Extraordinary General Meeting, by a three-quarter vote of members attending or represented. Disposal of the Society resources will be decided on by the dissolving meeting.

12 Changes to Rules. Alteration to these rules can only be by a three-quarter majority at an A G M.

Periodical Review

Only journals regularly supplied to the editors will be listed here.

Contents Survey.

By Körner, Preuss, Schmitt diel.

Abbreviations for the journal relate to the Periodical Review. The first number gives the volume, the second the part number and the third the page number of the journal concerned.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
June 1897, Volume 3, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.IX-XX

Chronicle.

of changes in the literary field.

German Empire

Zeitschrift für den Forscher und Sammlerverein, published by Pfannenberger in Göttingen, appeared in three issues in 1896. On the 25th April 1896 the following magazine appeared as a continuation of this:

Allgemeine Sammler-Zeitung from the same publisher, as Vol I, No 1, with Nos 2-5 following up to the 15th October 1896. Vol III, No 6, appeared on the 5th November 1896 under the new title, followed by Vol IV, No 1, on 25th January 1897.

This journal was reported as discontinued in No 17 of Phil. Börsenblatts, without our knowing whether any numbers extra to the above were published. The contents of the discontinued journal were only marginally relevant to philately.

Austro-Hungary

Rund um die Erde actually appeared as No 5 in July 1896, which confirms what we said about this in No 3, p 7. However, this was the last issue.

France

Revue Philatélique, the title used from No 66 onwards.

Revue Philatélique Française finished with No 67 of March 1896, according to a report in III Briefm. Ztg. It is true that we received no issues of it from that date, and that we have found no references to it in the rest of the philatelic press, so that we would have no reason to doubt the accuracy of the report were it not that Revista Philatelica No 3 of March 1897 mentioned receiving Nos 76 & 77 of the Revue. It still remains a complete mystery why none of the German magazines have received anything since No 67. We hope the publisher, E. Vervelle of Paris, will give us some information. Volume I (1890) comprised Nos 1-9, Volume II Nos 10-20, Volume III Nos 21-32, Volume IV Nos 33-44, Volume V Nos 45-54, Volume VI Nos 55-64, Volume VII Nos 65-67.

Norway

Aalesunds Frimaerkebad, was reported as appearing before and up to 1894, though we never got hold of it, and according to a direct communication from Dethloff of Kristiania, only three issues were published in all. No 1 was published by J. Bolstedt, No 2 and 3 by Ludwig Holm of Aalesund. The little magazine, described as a product of youthful high spirits, ran to 4 octavo pages, two of which carried the publisher's announcement.

Italy

La Toscane Philatélique appeared as No 1 on the 15th February 1897 from Jean Salsiccione of Leghorn. It is a six-page advertising journal and will be sent on request to prominent collectors and dealers all over the world. Unless otherwise requested, all notices are in French. The same publisher announced a journal called L'indicatore Filatelico Internazionale for the 1st January 1896, but this apparently never appeared. (see our report p.7 for 1896).

La Revista dei Francobolli was announced for the first days of February 1897 from Spoleto, but never reached us. The appearance of a specimen issue was mentioned by other magazines. The annual subscription was 10 lire, although the specimen issue already spoke of off-prints and translations.

Il Filatelico, a "quarterly journal" without numbers or date was published in 1896 by Vierci & Garassiri of Savonna; it is not known whether any later issues appeared. Externally, it is an advertising magazine, but it contains notices from its publishers only, and so in spite of its format it should be classed simply as a price list, and does not belong with the periodical literature.

Il Commercio dei Francobolli was issued as No 1 September 1895 by Ettore Ragozino of Naples. Exactly the same applies to this as to the previous one. This magazine (or rather this price list) was also supposed to be a "quarterly journal" i.e. every three months, but again it is not really a journal and we do not know of any other issues.

Spain

La Filatelia is known to have appeared since January 1896 from D. Eloy de Montes Casarabilla of Malaga, as we know from p. 21 and 27 of 1896. It appeared regularly up to No 8, since when we have not received it. A combined issue Nos 9-12 for September to December 1896 appeared in early 1897, with the statement that the magazine would again appear regularly. However, we do not know of any further issues from 1897.

Romania

La Roumanie Philatélique, the only philatelic magazine in Romania, invited subscriptions and adverts in L'Echo de la Timbrologie. Annual subscriptions 1 franc, with 5 lines of advert free. Editor and publisher is P. Agageau of Jassy. According to an announcement in Internat. Offertenblatt für Philatelie, this published its No 1 on the 15th March under the title Anunciatorul Marcilor from J. Saraga of Jassy, and is thus identical with the above named paper, which we announced on p 8 of No 3.

Filatelistul Roman was supposed to appear on the 25th November 1896 in Turn-Severin, but did not reach us, nor L'Annonce Timbrologique from which we took this notice.

L'Orient Philatélique appeared with No1 on the 1st March 1897 in Turn-Severin as the successor to Filatelitul Roman, which seems to have stopped again, if indeed it ever got started.

Globul was published by G. K. Panitescu in Berlad, according to a report in L'Annonce Timbr.

L'Echo de la Timbrologie was announced as to appear shortly by Georges Bollé of Berlad.

Russia

Vsemirana Pochta, or "World Post" is described as an entirely Russian journal of wide scope published with great difficulty by J. Krewing of St. Petersburg, and has already put out 3 issues. As it is in Russian, we do not know the publisher's address, the price, nor the frequency of publication.

United States of America

The Daily Stamp Item, published by C. H. Mekeel of St. Louis, Mo, since the 1st January 1896 has ceased with No 288 of the 26th November, ostensibly because the presses were needed for a weekly magazine, but probably because there was not the support for a philatelic daily.

The Home Worker, according to p.27 of 1896, appears in Knoxville, Tenn, and cost 25 cents (1.05 mark) per year. The publisher is not given; the address is "P.O Box 25, Knoxville, Tenn".

Philatelic Literature, which we in No 2, p.3 wrongly confused with Philatelic Litteratur, is published in Taunton, Mass, and is entirely devoted to the interests of the numerous collector of philatelic literature in North America.

Philatelic Literaturists also serves literary-philatelic collectors, and is published by Doughty & Page in Muscatine, Iowa.

Official Bulletin, the organ of the Texan Philatelic Association, appeared recently in San Antonio, Texas. We have already received Nos 1-6 of this journal.

p.XX

Periodicals received by the Editor.

END

Ph. K. [Philipp Kosack (Publisher)]

Catalogue of the philatelic library of the Earl of Crawford K. T.
Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1911, Volume 7, Issue 7, p.167

(This is a book review)

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008, August 2010)

CATALOGUE OF THE PHILATELIC LIBRARY OF THE EARL OF CRAWFORD K. T.

Quarto (26½cm x 35½cm) 470 pages, Edition of 300 copies, London 1911. Price 42 Marks.

You have to be the Earl of Crawford, not only to assemble such a large collection of all kinds of philatelic literature, but to bring it together in such a luxurious catalogue. The Earl's library is world-famous because of its wide scope, its extent and its strongly scientific bent. It is still surprising to find it occupying 470 double-column pages.

Editing was carried out by Mr. E. D. Bacon, the custodian of the collection, and in the name of the Philatelic Literature Society, for whose members the first 100 copies, which are not for sale, have presumably been reserved. The price of 42 Marks is very high for a catalogue, however we are convinced that the owner of the collection has made a significant contribution to the cost of printing, especially since the work, which is moreover dedicated to the King of England, is printed on specially manufactured paper in only a small edition, which will all be sold. With the exception of a few societies, collectors in general, have no money for philatelic works without prices for stamps.

END

O. Rommel

Periodical chronicle

[Zeitungs-chronik]

Der Philatelist, February 1898, Volume 19, Issue 2, p.70

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

PERIODICAL CHRONICLE

For this first time we have to go back as far as the 1st July 1897. In future we hope that we will always be able to keep our readers up to date.

End note

All publishers and publishing houses are requested to send me the first issue and inform me about any changes.

Editor's Note:

This was the first part of a very long series of reports extending until at least 1904, in which Rommel attempted to chronicle all new, changing and expiring periodicals on a worldwide basis.

It was thought to be excessive and unnecessary to translate the whole text as most of the data could be readily understood with the use of a dictionary. BJB

END

Utopia Berichte
March 1991, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

UTOPIA BERICHTE

March 1991, Issue 3.

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

The UTOPIA project comes forward again after a long pause (September 1988). Unexpected technical difficulties in the processing of certain periodicals (amongst them the DB2-Deutsche Briefmarken – Zeitung), which have not been entirely solved even yet- have delayed the project considerably. However, so as not to try the patience of the Working Party members any farther, the subject indexes already published in reports 1 and 2 are reproduced here in tabular form. This should make it much easier to locate publications by key words.

It will no longer be necessary to search in different subject indexes for publications on, for example, the 1897 Olympia stamps. Instead, all publications on this issue and its forgeries will be found under "1130.000" and "1130.900" respectively. Naturally, it will then be necessary to look through the subject indexes for the periodicals concerned and choose from the articles available.

I hope that this supplement to the subject indexes will simplify work within the UTOPIA project.

Subject indexes to further German-language periodicals will be published with the next Working Party circular (December 1991).

Photocopies of the articles or reports listed to date can be obtained in return for the cost of production (currently DM-30 per DIN A4 sheet) plus postage.

END

Utopia Berichte
September 1988, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

UTOPIA BERICHTE

September 1988, Issue 2.

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

Page 1

The present report includes:

- 1 A list of the first 50 German-language periodicals surveyed for the UTOPIA project, with details of the volumes covered.
Publication of the subject indexes (in reports No.1. or 2)
Records of possible errors
- 2 The subject indexes of a total of 30 periodicals, including:
See the original document for the list of abbreviations and titles.

Page 2

Further indexes will - as already stated - be published at irregular intervals.

Members of the GREECE Working Group will receive the UTOPIA-Reports as a supplement to the Working Group circulars.

P. Tiberius

Gottfried-Keller Strasse 38
6000 Frankfurt 50

END

Literature Nachrichten
1968, Whole number 57

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to me.

p.1

Fritz Gaedicke: Preface.

Today I can send you whole number 57 of Literatur-Nachrichten, the fourth of my term of office. Again, it is several pages longer than the previous one. If you look at Literature-Nachrichten, you will be able to see that we have evaluated a total of 140 currently appearing philatelic journals. This time we have managed to include the Danish periodicals.

For the time being this publication will continue to appear once a year, since the entire thing is produced by voluntary labour. The general rise in prices has applied to printing costs as well. The printing of this issue alone costs 10 DM. It would hardly be possible to publish at all without the generous support of the Federation of German Philatelists (Bund Deutscher Philatelisten) and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History (Stiftung zur Förderung der Philatelie und Postgeschichte). The increased cost of postage has compelled me to raise the subscription price by 1 DM. I include a bill for the first time with this issue. I hope in this way to save myself a good deal of trouble, as I would rather spend time on my official task of making Literatur-Nachrichten still more comprehensive than on reminding dilatory subscribers to pay up.

Before I go on to give my annual thanks to my co-workers, I have a heartfelt request to you as subscribers. If my work pleases you, then please make it known more widely, and bring in new subscribers. If you are not pleased, then please write to me. I am always open to receive constructive criticism.

In conclusion, my thanks are due to the Head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, Chief Municipal Inspector Merkle, and to Mr Ramp, the head of the library of the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies (Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten Vereine) for their assistance. I also wish to thank my co-workers Messrs Baum of Dusseldorf, Damesch of Schwelm, Dr. Rossberg of Berlin for their work on the index and literature survey.

Fritz Gaedicke

pp.2-4

Fritz Gaedicke: Report of the chairman of Working Party B to the 1967 Federation Day in Karlsruhe.

On Wednesday I was able to send out a batch of Literatur-Nachrichten. Although 31st December is the closing date for editing every issue, it has taken so long to produce. To save money I was compelled to have the manuscript typed out by a lady, who does this work in her spare time. Nobody else is prepared to take on this difficult material for an honorarium of 2-DM per page.

This issue is again slightly larger because the Scandinavian journals are now included. The increase in the number of pages alone has brought the cost up by about 600.—DM. Just the printing costs this year for Whole number 56 came to about 3.000.—DM. These high costs would make it impossible to publish without considerable help from the League of German Philatelists and the foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, but I have sent out many more copies than I have subscribers. The working Party's other expenses are covered by subscriptions, so that they call for no further expenditure by the League of German philatelists. You will see from the following details that their expenditure is still considerable. Income and outgoings in the year 1966 were as follows:

Total income	4,906.50 DM
Total outgoing	4.950.72 DM
Advanced by me	44.22 DM

Breakdown of outgoings.

Printing costs	2,327.50 DM
Typing	391.66 DM
Herr Müller's expenses	100.00 DM
Office supplies	113.35 DM
Postage	554.70 DM
Telephone, fares, parcel post	580.78 DM
Travel expenses	330.80 DM
Miscellaneous	551.93 DM

You will see from this that the increase in postal charges has had a very noticeable effect. The international expansion of Literatur-Nachrichten has let me in for a good deal of foreign postage. It may be that in future we will have to charge extra for postage. On the other hand, I do not want to alter the subscription rate for the publication, as I look on the production of Literatur-Nachrichten for philately as a real service from the League of German Philatelists to its members, and I may say in my own name and that of my co-workers that we are proud of this work, which we do voluntarily in our spare time. There could be no finer acknowledgement of our work than to find every society in the League of German Philatelists on my list of subscribers. For this reason I also ask for an intensive effort and again request everyone present to canvass for Literatur-Nachrichten. Nobody can tell me a Society cannot afford 9.—to 10.—DM a year for this. My first accounts published in the League reports (Bundesnachrichten) in 1965 were successful. They led to my picking up several new subscribers, including one from abroad. I hope and wish this will be repeated. I am happy in this connection that we are meeting this year in the South-West of our Fatherland, so that I can make personal efforts to gain new friends here for Literatur-Nachrichten, and thus for philatelic literature. I have given up sending specimen copies to individual societies, since out of 80 societies approached only three have signed on as subscribers.

We evaluate a total of 124 philatelic journals currently, and I alone read and work on about 100 issues. The Finnish, Swedish and Danish periodicals are now being dealt with by the cooperation of Herr Eilers and Herr Wölffel. In my last report I asked individual working parties to let me have copies of their publications to work on. Some have done so, but there is still a whole series from whom I am not yet getting anything. I am thinking for example of the working parties on Baden, the Papal States, Prussia etc. I would also ask all Society Chairmen to send me a copy of their society magazine. They often contain something of general interest. I am thinking for example of the Rhein-Lahn-Boten. I would also like to renew my plea for the organisers of exhibitions to send me a copy of their catalogue, so that I can evaluate it. You know that this literature becomes available later in the Philatelic Section of the City Library. In future I shall not include lists of offers in Literatur-Nachrichten. There are two reasons for this: 1) Christoph Otto Müller, who organized the literature exchange service, has died as you know, and I cannot carry on this exchange service on the grounds of space alone (I have 6 bundles of back issues of Literatur-Nachrichten alone to store), and the inclusion of this price list loses me the concessionary rate for book postage. However I intend to develop Literatur-Nachrichten in other directions, as for instance including magazines with regular contents or mentioning continuing articles on certain topics.

This was my report on Literatur-Nachrichten, the signboard of Society Section B. It is not difficult to supply special information when wanted, and my co-workers and I try to do so.

As usual in conclusion, my thanks to those who have supported me in my work as Section Chairman. Thanks to the League of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History for their financial support. Hearty thanks to my collaborators, Messrs Baum of Düsseldorf, Danesch of Schwelm, Eilers of Stockelsdorf, Chr. O. Müller of Steinebach and Dr. Rossberg of Berlin. As ever, my special thanks are due to the Head of the philatelic Division of the Munich City library, Chief City Inspector Merkle, and his assistant Fraulein Strempel, who have given me energetic support in all my efforts. I should also like to thank Herr Rupp, the librarian of the League of Berlin Philatelic Societies for his support and cooperation. I thank everyone who has sent me literature to evaluate. Also in conclusion I should like to thank some people who normally never appear, my daughters.

Although I have already said quite a lot about recruitment in my report, just one more suggestion from me. I am quite ready to make a few examples of Literatur-Nachrichten available for larger exhibitions. Please contact me in good time, so that I can send you the samples.

And finally a request to you all, promote philatelic literature in your societies, amongst your friends, and with your exchange partners.

Fritz Gaedicke

In its issue of the 5th August, the Sammler-Lupe publishes a profusely illustrated and technically very sound article on the French engravers who produced the Saarland stamps between 1947 and 1956. In it Dr. Heinrich Schneider describes the work of the French engravers who produced outstanding issues for the then autonomous Saarland. One point he makes is that the artist can be associated with the issues. It would be very desirable for the Berlin engravers to have such a basis for their artistic work. It is very novel and interesting to have the individual values assigned to their engravers.

The magazine Wissen is currently publishing a series of general introductory articles on philately.

END

Information
1989, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

INFORMATION

1989, ISSUE 3

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

Dear friend of the philatelic library,

Good work takes a long time. Because of various circumstances it was unfortunately not possible to put out "Informatin" any earlier. Instead we can today already after you the 1st supplement to our catalogue that appeared recently; the catalogue can still be obtained from the library at a cost of D.M. 9.50 plus postage costs. The library expects to publish its extensive material for home collectors in the DBZ during the ivth quarter of 1989.

With friendly greetings, I remain Director and editor

Illegible signature

Information from the Hamburg Philatelic library ev, No.1, /89

Publisher: Hamburg Philatelic Library e.v.

10, Holenfelder Str., 2000 Hamburg 76,

Tel (040)-251 23 vo

Opening times: Tuesday 14.00-18.00; Thursday 14.00-19.00 hrs

Every 1st Saturday in the month, 9-12.00hrs (except during Hamburg Fair)

“Information” appears at irregular intervals 1-4 times a year, and is sent without charge to members of the philatelic Library. Reproduction with acknowledgements permitted; all rights reserved. Contribution by names authors do not necessarily reflect the views of the editor.

We direct your attention especially to the adverts by the firms of Brocks and Ehreugut, and the DMG on pages 2,35 and 36.

Committee and officers of the Hamburg Philatelic Library e.V

Minutes of the Meeting of Members of the Hamburg Philatelic Library e.V on 4.11.1989 at the “Brunnenhof” Restaurant, Norderstedt 16 individual members were present plus representatives of 6 societies, i.e. 22 voting members.

Agenda as sent out on 20th February 1989.

ITEM 1

Herr Hüweler opened the meetin at 19.15 hrs and greeted those present. Attenders rose in memory of members who had died during the year 1988.

The number of members has hardly changed, with 150 individuals and 26 socieities at present.

The past year was distinguished by the work on the new catalogue, currently being printed in the DBZ and also to appear as a special publication. Also two issues of “Information2 have appeared: the first for 1989 will come out in May. We were the only library to have a stand at IPHLA/NAPOSTA '89 in Frankfurt: the other philatelic libraries only had showcases.

During the last year we acquired a photocopier, an efficient printer which can amongst other things also print address labels, and a parcels balance.

At the last members' meeting we chose an advisory parcel. This is provided for in our rules, but we have not had one so far. Most of the panel were present at the first meeting, those gentlemen who could not come sent apologies. This panel meeting could produce interesting suggestions, which we shall consider. The results will be reported at the next meeting.

For 1989 we received a voluntary grant from the Foundation for the promotion of Philately and Postal History which was 3,000 D.M higher than for the previous year. This will be used for book purchases in the first place.

The increase in subscriptions agreed to at the last AGM has not led to any cancellation at least as far as the societies are concerned. A further increase in subscriptions is not planned for the immediate future, we must find other ways and means of raising money. For example we shall try to get hold of new books cost-free, but will always have to buy a certain number, especially dear ones.

Contributions are also not flowing in so abundantly, but we cannot accumulate large sums in the bank, or fail to enlarge our book stock with new works.

Our premises are a great problem. At the moment we have to make do with 70m² library space and 60m² cellar space for storage. We have discussed some possibilities with the advisory panel, and will have to see how far these can be implemented.

There was no discussion of the chairman's report.

Item 2

Frau Weil read her report, and amplified some of Herr Hübeler's points. As regards the newly acquired efficient printer, it could be said that at the moment the entire book stock is in print. We need all author catalogue, a title catalogue and a numeric catalogue: This is only possible with the help of a computer. The parcels balance was purchased since we are now self-bookers with the German Federal Post. This saves us at least 0.90 DM per parcel in charges. The increase in the postal charges has meant however that we can no longer charge a flat rate of S.D.M. for outside oans, but we shall try not to increase the charges again in the near future. We have sent out more parcels.

Again, there was no discussion of this report.

ITEM 3

Herr Hübeler established that the meeting had a quorum. 18 people were present, having a total of 22 votes.

ITEM 4

The minutes of the last AGM had been made available to all attenders and all Societies in 2Information". There being no amendments, the minutes were approved.

ITEM 5

Herr Rübke reported that the budget for the year 1988 was DM 56,000, of which DM 55,345 had been effectively disbursed. He dealt in detail with space charges, wages, travel expenses, office supplies. He also dealt with the receipts individually. In contrast to earlier years we have had in agreement with the Committee to think of the possibility of making necessary investments. There were no questions on the Treasurer's report.

ITEM 6

Both auditors were prevented for personal reasons from attending the meeting. Herr Schnell checked the accounts on 7.4.8.9, and Frau Dettmann on 10.4.1989. Their report is available.

ITEM 7

The Treasurer's report was accepted with 21 votes in favour.

ITEM 8

Two new auditors had to be elected. The two previous auditors were not asked whether they would like to continue, so the question was put to the meeting of whether anyone present was willing to undertake this task. Frau Riese and Herr Tonn were proposed, with Herr Niedersetz and Herr Fürster as deputies. Frau Riese declined, the gentlemen accepted. Voting was en bloc; Herrs Niedersetz and Tonn were unanimously elected as auditors with Herr Fürster as deputy, the candidates being out of the room.

ITEM 9

The budget for 1989 was read out. It was increased by DM 5,00.--. This increase is designed in the first instance for book purchases, and to a small extent for other expenses, e.g. printing costs.

The projected budget for 1990 was presented by Herr Hüweler only took on the chairmanship for three years, which must be borne in mind when discussing the composition of the new committee and the advisory panel.

On the budget projection, Frau Brandt asked whether we were getting the catalogue from DB2 without charge. Herr Hüweler explained about the purchase. There were no other questions about Item 9.

ITEM 10

There was a proposal from Fran Weil to change the name "Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg eV" to "Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg eV". She based this suggestion on the fact that people abroad tend to take us for book dealers. Herr Hüweler had already been in touch with the Foundation of the promotion of Philately and Postal history to see whether there were any objection to a change of name. There were none, and moreover the establishments in Berlin, Frankfurt and Munich call themselves "Philatelistische Bibliothek". Herr Hüweler spoke in favour of the meeting agreeing to a change in name. Herr Dräger made the proposal of adding sub-title to the name. The pros and cons of a change in name were the subject of a lively discussion, until Herr Ehlers finally suggested that a proposal be formulated and put to the vote. Fran Weil proposed subject of a lively discussion, until Herr Ehlers finally suggested that a proposal be formulated and put to the vote. Frau Weil proposed the motion that the name "Philatelistische Bucherei Hamburg eV". The motion was carried with a majority of 15 for, 2 against and 5 abstentions.

ITEM 11

Frau Brandt made the request that the next AGM be again held in central Hamburg: some members of her Society had excused themselves from attendance on the grounds that the journey to Norderstedt was difficult for anyone without a car. Frau Brandt offered to search out an inexpensive room for the Agm.

Herr Tonn asked whether it would be possible for the library to get a regular constant workforce. The Committee have already looked into this possibility, and explained that it cannot be done at this time.

The discussion about the workforce led naturally to the idea of thinking again about our weekly quota. However this was the primary concern of the Librarian, Frau Weil. The Committee has only an advisory function here.

ITEM 12

Herr Hüweler closed with thanks to all participants and best wishes for their prosperity will the next AGM. Meeting closed at 20.45pm.

Winsen, J.S. 1989.

D. Hüweler
1st Chairman

J.Fullrich
Minutes Secretary

1988 Annual Report of the Ph. Library Hamburg

It was possible to catalogue the stock of the library by computer in the year just gone. Thus the new index appeared in April 1989 after a 10-year interval. It has been published as a supplement in DBZ from no.24, 1988 onwards. A new feature was the exhibition guide, mainly devoted to local history, and thus available to collectors interested in postal and territorial history. Unfortunately the holdings of catalogues and auction catalogues are not yet catalogued, but this is planned for 1989.

561 new titles have been added to the library's stock, plus German and foreign-language periodicals and working-party periodicals. Unfortunately, getting hold of the literature is not always as simple and takes a great deal of time. However at this point we should like to thank everyone who sends us their new publications regularly and cost-free. We also wish to thank the Foundation for Postal History and Philately for their special support, and the BDPL for sending free copies of their working party papers.

We are particularly proud of our external loans service, which had risen to 661 volumes lent out in the year 1988. It is anticipated that the new catalogue is likely to produce a doubling of demand. 8,950 copies were prepared for readers, principally extracts from the subject catalogue and the old periodicals. These tasks could only be carried out thanks to the active support of our many voluntary workers. Hearty thanks to them, who have given so many hours to helping the library.

The library was visited by 863 readers on 105 days of opening. Since 1st November 1988 the opening hours have been extended to 14-18hrs on Tuesdays, 14-19 hrs on Thursdays, and 9-12 hours on every first Saturday in the month. We had a stand at postage stamp exhibitions.

The conditions of loan can be obtained by sending a stamped addressed envelope to:

Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg eV.,
10 Hohenfelder Strasse,
2000 Hamburg 76.

Doris Weil

END

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm
February 1922, Volume 2, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BÜCHERWURM

February 1922, Volume 2, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of interest to me

p.1

BIBLIOGRAPHIC WORKS IN THE GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

by Carl Beck

Today, when philatelic literature is beginning to enjoy increasing recognition, and more and more attention is being paid to the establishment of philatelic libraries, I believe the time is ripe for a paper of this kind.

Every serious philatelist who has got beyond the schoolboy stage of merely buying stamps and sticking them in an album and is really interested in his treasured stamps, will find it absolutely useful and necessary to read and study everything relating to his favourite topic. Equally so, it is of great use and profit for the philatelic bibliophile to familiarise himself with the bibliographic studies of other researchers and experts.

In addition to my own large philatelic library, the basis for this bibliographic study has been above all the outstanding work of the great English literature specialist E. D. Bacon (The principal sources of information for philatelic literature collectors., The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 1, pp.4 & 16.), which later appeared in an extended form in the Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, 1911.

I. Reprints and Technical Studies

Translator's note: Please refer to the original for the references.

To be continued.

pp.2-5

SOCIETY LIBRARIES - ASSOCIATION LIBRARIES

By Fr. Wilh. Thalmann of Potsdam, Overseer of the library of the Germania-Ring.

A corrected reprint from Germania-Berichte, 1907, No.19.

It is not part of my intention in dealing with the subject today to lay down any rigid rules for planning these types of book collections - there are too many different opinions and the means available must play a very large part. Rather my aim is firstly to encourage societies to set up libraries and give a few hints as to the selection of books for these, and secondly to go into more detail about the nature and structure of an association library. I am thinking moreover, only of the small and middle-sized libraries, which are in fact, the significant majority within our speciality. The older and bigger societies have usually had collections of books, sometimes quite considerable ones, for a long time.

Every thinking collector must agree with me at once when I say it is absolutely necessary for the prosperous life of a society that it purchases a small set of handbooks right at the beginning. Every society committee should take it as one of their principle tasks to get the members to read the main specialist periodicals. I know this is not an easy task: one regularly hears the excuse "Oh how can I read everything: I am so short of time that I can hardly get through the daily paper and my professional magazines". However, reading brings knowledge, and knowledge brings power, even in our hobby! How much wasted money could have been better spent, how much subsequent annoyance could have been saved, if more philatelic knowledge found its way into the wide circles of our collectors. Forgers and their accomplices would long ago have stopped their merry doings. A more active use of our rich scientific literature would have changed things.

Thus, a society should well hold, in addition to its own magazine, the best German journals and keep them where it is convenient for its members, and also some foreign journals. These should be read aloud at Society meetings and attention should be drawn to newly-discovered forgeries described, as well as to any particularly interesting and informative articles, which should be read and discussed. The loose issues should then be placed in a binder and circulated amongst the members. Thus, pleasure in reading and understanding of what is an offer will gradually be awakened, and stamp-stickers will be converted into wise and observant philatelists.

Apart from the periodicals, which form the basis of a society library, it must also have the most important handbooks - the bibliographies by Beck and Thon [Ton?] will be helpful here - and catalogues available for its members: The national monographs should not be lacking, or those on former postal regions. Hence in addition to the journals it takes and the monographs mentioned, the society bookcase should more or less contain:

Kohl's stamp catalogue; Senf's stamp catalogue; Glasewald: Cancellation Register for the Individual German States and Colonies; Haas: Textbook of philately; P. Krötzsch: Detailed Illustrated Catalogue of German Postage Stamps; Ohrt: Handbook of all Known Reprints; Wülbern: Originals and Reprints of Heligoland; Friedmann: The Postage Stamps of the German Protectorates; Ohrt: The Cancellations of Oldenburg; Dr. Stenger: The German War Stamps: etc.

As said above, the society would then build on this foundation according to its means and interests. Members could contribute either personally or collectively, by gifts on society anniversaries. In this connection I would also like to call attention to the more recent literature under the names of Bungerz, Beck, Heinze, Stenger and the work on Chile by Krause & Philippi, and glance back at the two magnificent jubilee volumes from the Berliner Philatelisten-Klub. Well-to-do members will be able to set up a permanent memorial to themselves within the society by presenting it with Krotzsch's Handbook of Philately or Lindenberg's classic work on Entires of the German States. The opportunity of obtaining Lindenberg's Great Handbook of Philately, Suppantchitsch's Bibliography or rarities such as Glasewald's little works on the cancellations of Thurn & Taxis and Baden should never be neglected. To do further justice to collectors of entires in the society, reference may be made to Lindenberg's edition of the Senf Entires Catalogue of 1914 and its Supplement, Dr. Ascher's Entires Catalogue 1913-1920. Dr. Kalckhoff's studies on "The Postcards of the German Empire and its Colonies" also deserve a mention. Societies which also go in for Field Post Office cancellations will find these indispensable: Glasewald's little book on The Post in Wartime and for the World War, Meister's outstanding work on German Field Post Cancellations 1914-1918, plus Holzschuler's The Bavarian field Post Cancellations. Austrian societies must naturally not omit Kropf's fine works. This is a selection from the books whose titles come straight to my pen, which would be an ornament to every library, and the diligent use of which would be profitable for the collections of the society members.

When the library is only small, it is best housed in a society bookcase. It will then always be ready to hand at all meetings. Of course, the person in charge should be present at every meeting with the key, if possible. Custodians who only turn up rarely and then without the key, are not worthy of the important task of disseminating knowledge amongst the society members and should be replaced as soon as possible.

For larger society libraries, the following proposal from Herr Lawyer Sommerfeld has proved to be a good solution to the problem that many older societies have had in making their book-stocks available. "The Essen Philatelic Society has reached the following solution, which I now lay before a wider circle since it may form a useful pattern for other societies."

"Some years ago the Essen town council built a municipal library which would cover all branches of knowledge and be available to everybody. The aim of the late Chief Burgomaster Zweigert, who was the father of this idea, was to incorporate all the special libraries then getting little used in societies and associations, in a legally possible form into a sort of public library, and thus make them available to a wider public. The various teaching "Libraries" in particular were to be united in this municipal library. This suggestion has been accepted by the societies already, and some of the arrangements are in hand. The Essen Philatelic Society is also on the point of transferring its book collection to the municipal library.

The books will remain the property of the Society. The Society will transfer its newly purchased works, particularly the current issues of journals, to the municipal library. The reference collection to the municipal library. The reference collection in the reading room of this institution will contain the newest Senf and Kohl, and perhaps also the handbook by Haas. The reading room also holds the latest issues of the leading German philatelic journals to which the Society subscribes. These journals go to the library as soon as they have been shown at one of the Society's evening meetings.

The location of the catalogues and the display of the journals in the reading room are done less in the interests of Society members than with a view to winning fresh adherents for philately and looking after the rising generation.

Young collectors have already seized eagerly on this opportunity for philatelic self-instruction. Probably this is more effective than the exhibitions for young people on which so much emphasis is laid."

I hope to report from time to time on the success of this.

I do not know yet whether other societies have followed this example. Even then, though, I would retain the nucleus described above in the bookcase to satisfy the hunger for knowledge during meetings. However, such things as small books of transitory value and unimportant journals should be excluded from society libraries as a matter of course, just to save space.

Things are quite different with an association library. This should take everything, printed or written, that deals with our hobby or relates to it, including, for example, the manuscripts of talks and papers that have not appeared in print. Nothing should be left out, from the standard works to the simplest society reprint, whatever language they may be in. Such things may be of interest to one amongst the large number of Association members, or be used by someone doing research. As we said, private and society libraries may not have room for a great deal of material, but nothing should be refused by a large association library, so that it can supply information, an instruction or foundations for the further development of the specialist literature.

If an association library is to be anything like complete, and if it is to build up its main and most important section, the collection of handbook, monographs and special scientific works, it must set aside a certain amount yearly from the association's funds. Otherwise, this section will remain wretchedly incomplete, and the library as a whole will be of no special value. It is an acknowledged fact that collections of this sort of material rarely come to an end, as they are a constant source of information for their owners. Well-to-do philatelists will also have a splendid opportunity to do an especially valuable service for everybody. However, authors and publishers can gain respect more than ever before by giving a presentation copy of their publications to one of these comprehensive libraries. They would make the work readily available to wider circles. It would have the further advantage of serving as a good advert; since many a philatelist who borrows such a book may decide to get it for his own collection after reading it.

Quite different considerations apply to the second most important part of an association library, the periodicals collection. This is generally dependent on the membership for its extent, and in fact periodicals collections tend to grow more quickly. Pretty well every collector subscribes to one or more magazines and tends to get them through his society. Of course they will hold a value for him for a while, but in the majority of cases this gradually disappears, and very often there is also a shortage of room to store magazines for longer periods. The association library is then the most obvious and always-grateful recipient. Societies can also help here by transferring their duplicates or any material they have no room to store, thus making it generally available.

Speaking of magazines, I must put forward two opposing points of view on the value of collecting philatelic advertising sheets, the type that contain no articles. One view is quite definite that these must be collected volume by volume; the other holds that it is quite sufficient to pick out one volume of such magazines per decade so as to illustrate their development. On practical grounds I would have to support the second viewpoint, though otherwise I would like to see everything collected that relates to philately. These publications are generally in a large format, and form thick volumes in the course of a year. The result is they take up a great deal of room in the bookcase that could be better used. This is a factor that must certainly be borne in mind, unless one is in the position to have one's own library building put up! Moreover, the intrinsic value of this type of paper is zero after a short time, and researchers will only get a few prices off it at best. Moreover, these can generally found in the advertising supplements of the specialist magazines. Does this not mean that odd volumes of these advertising sheets will be adequate? These will be enough to show what and whose they were. This would be the extent of their value to a library.

I should also like to recommend the setting up of a collection of single numbers of all present and past magazines from the full range of our hobby. It is easier to get completed, has statistical value and gives an interesting survey of the diligence of writers and the courage of publishers.

The third section of an association library would be the collection of catalogues and price lists. Here above all, along with similar things that have the value of handbooks in the wider sense, should be complete sets of the major catalogues such as Senf, Kohl and the foreign equivalents, along with price lists from the lay and more important stamp dealers. There should as far as possible be recent examples of the large number of price lists from middle-sized and smaller firms. If we wanted to store all these publications, our castle in the air for the advertising magazines would have to become a veritable library palace with extensive side wings.

Finally, the fourth section includes all the printed matter that does not fit readily into the previous sections, such as for instance material relating to meetings and exhibitions, rules and annual reports of associations and societies, small items of transitory interest, in fact everything of any interest for our hobby which might be helpful to late researchers about its early years.

Hardly anything need be said about having the book stock, although I would advise against amalgamating an association library with a local public library. The members of the association may be scattered widely beyond the community concerned. It will be difficult for a local library to send books to them without incurring considerable costs. Moreover the people running a large philatelic library ought to have at least a little knowledge of philately.

When it comes to binding, the society library will usually try to ensure that the result will form an ornament to the society bookcase, which will be all the more possible since the books will only be handled by a small circle of people. Things are quite different in an association library. Practical considerations are foremost here. The books have to serve a wide clientele living over a wide area, and thus be subjected to travelling.

pp.6-8

Literature news

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

p.8

Miscellaneous

p.8

Warning

By Carl Beck

Briefmarken-Post, P.O. Box 107, Gelsenkirchen.

On 9th November 1921 I sent the requested amount of 9 marks for Issues 1-6 of this. In spite of several reminders, including two registered letters, I have to date had neither the numbers I ordered nor any money returned. We can thus caution our members against any contact with this magazine.

p.9

Society of philatelic literature collectors

The committee for the current year, 1922, consists of the following gentlemen:

Alex Bungerz of Tegernsee. Chairman

Carl Beck, 38 Kochannstrasse, Berlin. Secretary and Treasurer

H.Rohm, 13 Röderichstrasse, Rödelheim, Frankfurt-am-Main. Member

Fr. W. Thalmann, 21 Teltowerstrasse, Potsdam. Member.

The following new members have been admitted to the Society:

- 61) Hans Krebs, shopkeeper, Amberg, (Oberpfalz)
- 62) K. Zirkenbach, manufacturer, Halle a. d. Saale
- 63) Arvid Cedergren, Eksjö (Sweden)
- 64) Carl Kolb, St. Blasien
- 65) F. Rauch, Magdeburg-Freidrichstadt
- 66) Fr. Leitenberger, shopkeeper, Berlin
- 67) L. Oesterle, shopkeeper, Karlsruhe (Baden)
- 68) W. de Weerth, Düsseldorf a. Rhein
- 69) Verein für Briefmarkenkunde, Frankfurt am Main

Because of the steadily rising costs of labour, paper and printing, the subscription for the year 1922 has had to be increased. The subscription is now:

Members in Germany and Austria	40 Marks
Members in Sweden	5 Krone
Members in Italy	10 Lire
Members in Holland	3 Florins
Members in France	12 Francs
Members in America	1 Dollar

Members who have not yet paid their subscriptions for the year 1922 are politely requested to send their amount direct to my Post Office Transfer Account (Berlin 46690) so as not to have a break in receiving the magazine. An order is attached.

p.10

Wants list of philatelic literature

I want to purchase examples of the following in good condition:

Direct offers to: Carl Beck

Translator's note: See the original magazine for the list.

p.11

Advertisements

p.12

What do they say about the “Philatelistische Bücherwurm”?

Comments from the philatelic press.

END

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler
July 1933, Volume 2, Issue 7

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

DER PHILATELISTISCHE LITERATURSAMMLER,

July 1933, Volume 2, Issue 7

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.

p.

Stamp collecting and philately have spread to a quite extraordinary extent amongst the 3.5 million Germans in Czechoslovakia. This is true, not only of the present time, but was so before the war, and there have been stamp collectors here since the primordial days of our hobby in the 50s. Sudeten German stamp collectors were not only numerous in the 60s of last century, but some were also occasionally active in philatelic publicity, and one of them (Prof.Dr.Gustav Adolf Weiss) was a zealous contributor to "Der Briefmarken- Sammler", the second oldest German specialist magazine founded in Leipzig by Bauschke in 1866. Over the decades, Sudeten German philatelists have given rise to a relatively extensive philatelic literature, which can now be collected and consigned (?).

Let us begin by listing the journals that have appeared:

1.DER DEUTSCH BRIEFMARKENSAMMLER, open for every one interested in philately. Published by G.Bauschke in Aussig. Volume.1, 1869, nos1,2,3, with a total of 12pages./ According to Suppantchitsch, three other issues should have appeared. The editor was Josef Stoy of Aussig, probably an employee of the printer. Editorial supervision and revision however was by Bauschke himself who, as we know from Moschkau, must have left his place of work at Leipzig for some time and possibly finished up in Aussig.

END

Information
1990, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

INFORMATION

1990, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.

p.

JUST A MOMENT MORE

Dear Members and Friends of the library:

In this history-making year 1990 it is not only the new Federal States that are faced with difficult problems.

You will find details of the new Committee in the minutes on p.2. Since these were published, the Committee has heard from the Foundation for the promotion of Philately and Postal History e.V.

This had already announced a reduction in its rate of support at the Society Philatelic meeting in Friedrichshafen.

So far as one could tell at the meeting, cutbacks (by reduction of support) are to be expected in practically every section.

Since however our Hamburg library is not self-supporting, these cuts will be very painful. However we are still hoping for a positive decision!

However we do not want to do nothing but complain, and have also got good results to report.

Since the publication of our catalogue in the DBZ and the subsequent printing of this work, our honorary helpers have not been idle. There has been an evaluation of the existing exhibition guides, since most of them contain a number of valuable philatelic articles dealing with domestic and foreign topics.

A domestic section containing about 2000 titles has thus been produced with a great deal of effort. This, and the listing of book contents (including working party reports and journals) has made a second part of the catalogue necessary.

The DBZ has again agreed to publish it, and another catalogue will follow.

Here again we should like to appeal to philatelists with “time” to make themselves available for our common purpose. There is much to do!!!!

We can provide coffee and cakes, and in really serious cases a drop of water?

IN conclusion, another appeal to collectors, firms and other sponsors. Our computer has practically reached its limit of capacity, and for the reasons stated above (cuts) we have to start an appeal for money to make the necessary purchase from our own resources of the new instrument which we need so badly.

Have a good time reading this new report, and the “editor” will thank you in advance for any contribution you are inspired to make.

With best wishes for the coming festival, and a Happy New Year for 1991
Director and Editor.

MINUTES OF THE ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING OF THE HAMBURG PHILATELIC LIBRARY ON 2.6.1990 IN THE ORER HOTEL, HAMBURG

16 INDIVIDUAL MEMBERS WERE PRESENT, PLUS THE REPRESENTATIVES OF 11 Societies, i.e. 27 voting members AGENDA as in notice of 17 May 1990.

ITEM 1 (Welcome and Establishment of Quorum)

Herr Hüweler opened the meeting at 19.20 hrs and welcomed those present. He established that the meeting was quorate. 16 individual members and 11 society representatives were present, a total of 27 votes.

ITEM 2 (election of Minutes Clerk)

Fran Weil was elected as Minutes Clerk with 23 votes for and one against.

ITEM 3 (Director's Report)

Herr Hüweler reported on the activities of the last 3 years. Stocktaking of the books and production of the library catalogue, along with the development of external lending, had been in the forefront. 1 photocopier, 1 printer and 1 parcel balance had been purchased.

3 news bulletins had been produced and sent out to members. The number of individual memberships had risen from 152 to 158, and the number of society memberships from 26 to 28.

The existing PC is no longer adequate for future stock records, and a new machine is urgently necessary.

Herr Hüweler expressed the Committee's thanks to the voluntary helpers, and also thanked his colleagues on the committee,. As he did not wish to stand again, he proposed the following:

1. Director Jutta Fulrich
2. Director Hans-Joachim Förster

- | | |
|--------------|--------------------|
| 3. Treasurer | Walter Rübke |
| 4. Member | Norbert Burmeister |
| 5. Member | Inge Riese |

No discussion of the Director's report took place.

ITEM 4 (Report of Library Management)

Frau Weil read her report, which is given in the Appendix.

ITEM 5 (Approval of the minutes of 11 April 1989)

The minutes of the last AGM had been sent to all present and to all Societies in "Information". The minutes were approved unanimously without discussion.

ITEM 6 (Treasurer's Report)

Herr Rübke reported that the budget for the year 1989 had been 60,044.—D.M, and our outgoings had been 7,000.—DM below the limit. He set out the individual receipts and expenditures. There was no discussion.

Item 7 (Auditors Report)

Herr Niedersetz read the auditor's report. Herr Tonn was away on holiday.

ITEM 8 (Discharge of the Committee).

Herr Niedersetz proposed the discharge of the Committee, which was passed with 4 abstentions

ITEM 9 (Election of Chairman for meeting).

Frau Brandt proposed Herr Brock as the meeting chairman. 23 in favour , 4 against.

ITEM 10 (Election of Committee)

Herr Brocks expressed his thanks, and proposed Frau Füllrich as 1. chairman. Herr Rühlmann raised a point of order, which was answered by Herr Brock.

Frau Füllrich accepted nomination, and was elected by 23 votes and 4 abstentions. She accepted the results, and expressed thanks for the confidence shown, and again thanked the voluntary helpers.

Frau Füllrich proposed Herr Förster as deputy. He was elected with 22 votes for, and 5 obstructions. He accepted the position.

Herr Rübke was proposed as treasurer by Frau Füllrich. He was elected unanimously, and accepted the post.

ITEM 11 (Election of other members)

Frau Riese and Herr Burmeister were proposed as members and elected unanimously. Frau Riese accepted, Herr Burmeister previously expressed his willingness to serve.

ITEM 12 (Budgets 1990 and 1991 – preview)

Budget proposals were outlined by Herr Hüweler.

ITEM 13 (motions)

There were no motions in writing.

ITEM 14 (Miscellaneous)

Frau Brandt enquired about the presence of the library at philatelic exhibitions.

Herr Brocks proposed attendance not only at local society exhibitions, but occasionally at the “big” exhibitions, e.g. Wurzburg.

Frau Weil confirmed that a library stand at exhibitions could be advantageous, and that there were still information gaps here.

ITEM 14 (Closure)

In conclusion Frau fullrich thanked all who had attended, and wished them all the best till the next AGM.

End of Meeting: 21hrs.

1) chairman

minutes clerk.

1989 ANNUAL REPORT OF THE HAMBURG PHILATLEIC LIBRARY

On the year just finished, production of the library catalogue stood at the forefront of our work. This catalogue was available for readers in time for Iphla in Frankfurt in May 1989.

The second point of effort was outside loans, which totalled 334. 1628 volumes were sent out, and 4200 photocopies prepared. Reader's cards were made out for 75 new readers. 37 readers were enrolled as new members of the library. Hence the society “Hamburg Philatelic library e.v.” now has 162 members and 28 member societies.

The number of visitors to the library has fallen off, however, with 760 readers on 132 open days. The limited space available is probably responsible for this. Only 7 reader's places are available, and this is simply too few.

675 new titles were added to the book stock, and the book stock (without stamp catalogues) is now 8,000. As well as this there are 6400 volumes of journals and 4200 auction catalogues.

The periodical holdings are made up as follows:

335 different German – language journals, 62 received currently 170 different foreign-language journals, 25 received currently

204 different society papers journals 141 received currently 30,400 new catalogue cards have been printed. Users now have both an author and a subject catalogue available.

A new topic in the bookstock is the postal history of German states and cities. The main items catalogued are articles from guides to exhibitions.

Unfortunately getting hold of literature is not always easy, and takes a great deal of time. At this point, may we thank the authors and publishers who send us their new publications regularly and without charge; and the BDPh for sending us their working party report. Our special thanks go to the Foundation for Postal History and Philately for supporting our work.

As in other years, the library joined the BDPh display with a stand at Iphla in Frankfurt, Nord post in Hamburg, and a publicity event.

Doris Weil.

Without philatelic literature we are living on the Moon

LEAVES FROM OLD FOLIOS

To the High State Government

Cologne, 11. Oct 1919

BERLIN

It has been the general opinion for many years that several millions of money could be saved by getting rid of unnecessary postage stamps. The time has really come to put this idea into practice in view of present-day conditions and the ever-increasing shortage of paper.

I have thought for several years of making myself useful in this direction, and I have now succeeded in designing an instrument which by means of light hand pressure will enable every stamping to be reliably controlled continuously and reliably.

The numbers and nothing else need be altered, and the instrument is thus completely ready and is suitable for all stamps on letters and parcels.

So that not too many instruments need be used, several stamps can be applied to a letter directly and in the colours of the existing stamps. This would entail the complete replacement of postage stamps and put an end to the forgery of stamps.

I do not possess a completed instrument, since my present circumstances do not enable me to construct it, but I am ready to lay detailed drawings before the High State Government at once for possible testing. The accompanying sketch shows the instrument at full size, for e.g. the 10 pf. Postage, with a picture of the impression produced by this instrument.

I ask the High State Government for a reply to this and recommend myself with the greatest respect.

F.Waitzner

Cologne

The answer reads.

Herr F.Waitzner, Cologne

Your communication of the 11th.

Berlin W66, 17 Oct.1919

Your proposal for a stamping instrument to replace postage stamps is not new, and weighty considerations, against it prevent it from being used.

I.A.R.

INFORMATION FROM THE PHILATELIC LIBRARY HAMBURG e.V

Published by : Philatelic library Hamburg e.V., 10, Hohenfelder Str., 2000 Hamburg 76. TEL 040/2512340

Editor: Hans-Joachim Förster.

“Information” appears at irregular intervals and is sent free to members of the Hamburg Philatelic library. Reproduction with acknowledgement of source permitted: all rights retained. Contributions with a named author do not necessarily represent the views of the editor.

No. 4/1990

December

Page 1	Just a moment please
Pages 2-4	Minutes of the Annual General Meeting
Pages 5-6	Annual Report
Pages 7-9	Postal strike in Great Britain (Manfred Althen, Bad Vilbel)
Pages 12-15	What has the maker of petroleum furnaces to do with cancelling machines (Fürster, H.-J., Riese, I)
Pages 16-18	Leaves from old folios

END

Societe Belgique De La Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
1990, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

SOCIETE BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

1990, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.

p.

Bulletin 4

Dear philatelist and bibliophilae friend,

Here we are at the end of the holidays, and over the horizon comes a new philatelic season which we hope will be full of promise.

Some of us have taken the opportunity to leave for fresh fields, others have perhaps preferred to devote themselves to projects which family and professional matters had relegated to the Greek Kileuds.

The calm of the holiday season is often propitious for bending over one's stamp albums; it is sometimes the occasion for fetching out of the bottom of the drawer the wonders that deserve a better fate. Unless you prefer to improve the pages of your album: there is nothing immutable about the mounting of a collection, it should be a reflection of its maker.

New acquisitions have to be put in, one's knowledge of the subject expands, one's personality develops, leading to fresh ideas about everything, form as well as content. Philately is no different from any other human activity, like all the others it is the expression of a personality.

However, let us get back to our Summer occupations. Perhaps you have opted for the rediscovery of the treasures in your library. Have you yet asked yourself to what category of bibliophile you belong?

Are you perhaps one of those who looks on a book as an ebullition of ideas, and who respond above all to the spirit of the work, to the message which the author wanted to convey in his lines.

Others have a more practical approach: for them a book is in a collection of knowledge through which they feverishly rush in search of precise items of information.

Finally, there are bibliophiles of the spirit: for them, a book is an object of art to be lusted after. The fame of the author, the original edition, the prestige of collecting or the gilding on the leaves have for these collectors as much importance, or even more, as what the author wrote.

It is striking that one's first glance at a library reveals right away to what category its owner belongs, and shows a small part of his personality. Philosopher, pragmatist, conservationist?..

R.L.

1. New members

We have had the pleasure of welcoming amongst us

- Mr. Y. Vertommen, of Livange in Luxembourg
- Mr. A. Artan, of St. Martin in Brussels
- Mr. E. Paastesen of Tervueren

Welcome to the S.B.B.

II Belgica 1990

Everyone will still remember the Belgica 90 salon which took place at Heysel last June. It was unanimously agreed to be a success: particularly elegant and striking décor, high level of collections exhibited, and a large number of foreign postal administrations and dealers present.

Nevertheless it is a pity that there was such a lack of Belgian material: if an international event of this kind aims at enabling amateurs to pick up foreign items hard to obtain in this country it should also exhibit Belgian material not usually met with outside our frontiers. This was, unfortunately, quite sparse, or at totally ridiculous prices.

Belgica 90 was above all a great promotional event for philately. To realise this one only had to walk through the salon, especially at week-end, and see experienced philatelists rubbing shoulders with beginners, enthusiasts with the merely curious. Lots of young people also. No doubt free entry for everyone, along with the diversity and originality of the centres of interest made available to the public, largely contributed to making this exhibition a popular festival. Bravo once more to the organisers.

As we announced in the previous bulletin, the S.B.B. was present at the Belgica '90 salon. It gave us the opportunity to make numerous fruitful and diverse contacts. Moreover, our president found himself entrusted with the task of getting the exhibition's library going.

In this, some fifteen showcases held the works exhibited by a number of our members: original editions, often very rare, from all epochs and covering the most diverse aspects of philately. We will take this opportunity of thanking sincerely all those who agreed to make the gems of their collection available on this occasion.

Mme E. MOSSIAT
Messrs A. DELRE

G. DE RAM
H. HAVRENNE
A. le JEUNE d'ALLEGEERSHECQUE
V. SCHOUBERECHTS,
O. SIMONS
G. WAROQUIERS

We also decided to hold our June meeting in the audio-visual centre of palace 4. Unfortunately the extremely close timing of the audio-visual activities on the programme for this day did not allow our president to give his talk on the history of the letter post in Belgium. However, this is only a pleasure postponed.

This paper was replaced by a colloquium on bibliophilately Messrs Simons and Hvrebbe, president of the press and publicity commission for Belgica 90, spent twenty or so minutes convincing a numerous and attentive audience of the need for the philatelist to keep on updating his knowledge. Twenty minutes is far too short a time to deal adequately with such a subject, and the discussion went on around the showcases in the library.

IV. Subjects of the meeting

ON this occasion we shall give details of the list of keywords which will form the basis of our bibliographic file.

The topic for the month will be that of air mail, a subject as wide as it is specialised.

Do not forget to bring to the meeting all documents relating to it, to have them indexed.

V Sympathy corner

It is with great sadness that we record the death of Hector Raasens, the well-known editor and auctioneer of Anvers. We share the sorrow felt by his entire family, and give them our sincere condolences.

VI the Subject of "Various Courier Services"

We are going on with our bibliophilatelic compilation work, whilst waiting to get it all onto the computer.

During June, we decided to give our attention to the various possible means of forwarding by courier: some of them turned out to be most unexpected. Here are the references we know of:

VII Our General Meeting

This will be held in the month of December, and we hope to organise a grand sale of books on this occasion. If you would like to put any items on sale, you may send them to the president from now on.

You will find the conditions of sale attached. We hope these will be agreeable to you, and that many of you will participate as buyers or sellers.

VII Request for Help

The philatelic almanach of the S.B.B. announced for the end of the year 1990 is well in hand. Its originality, the wide range of its contents and the quality of its presentation (photos, printing on laid paper) enable us to state here and now that it will depart from the well-worn paths.

Many people have already offered to help, but we should still like to have a few supplementary articles. Thus, if you feel you have the soul of a writer, why not give up a few hours to writing for this publication.

There is no shortage of subjects: biographies of well-known authors, portraits of famous collectors, study of a rare, curious or original edition (albums from the false Fauniers, for example). We await your suggestions.

APPENDIX 1.

PUBLIC SALE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

As previously announced, the S.B.B. will hold a public sale of philatelic literature during its general meeting next December. This will be a good opportunity to interest specialist collectors of the material as well as a wider public in research on special philatelic topics.

To get good results from this sale, we shall give it maximum publicity. As a start, the S.B.B. will edit a descriptive catalogue of the lots offered for sale and send it, obviously to all Society members (some thirty at the moment). Then we shall contact a number of philatelic circles, both French- and Dutch-speaking, asking them to announce this sale in their members' bulletins, so that anyone who wants a sale catalogue can get one by simply asking for it. Finally, a few weeks before the sale, the S.B.B. will take a table at the Sunday market in the residence Palace, where the lots will be available for inspection.

We already have a number of interesting items, but hope to get many more. If you want to get rid of books, catalogues, monographs or periodicals (complete runs for preference) please fill in the following page. To get estimates or further information, do not hesitate to contact the president. He is entirely at your disposal.

END

Dr. Wilhelm Blank is 70 years old
[Dr Wilhelm Blank 70 Jahre]
Der Sammler-Dienst, 7th September 1974, Volume 25, Issue 18, p.1239

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1998

DR. WILHELM BLANK IS 70 YEARS OLD

Dr. Wilhelm Blank of Bonn, currently a Parliamentary journalist there, completed his 70th year on the 9th August. Since the year 1923, i.e. for over 50 years, he has acted as a philatelist for philately. He has been amongst the regular contributors to our journal for many years.

His special lones apart from philatelic literature are the German region and the stamps of the principality of Liechtenstein, with which he has been connected since the days of the Consortium. He is above all a specialist in the German Protectorates, which he does not look on as a closed field for the collector: indeed, he propagates and promotes further collecting over the colonial and Mandate periods down to their independent Successor states of the present day. Dr. Blank wishes to get the young collectors of today interested in the current stamps from this interesting region. He fell under the spell of postage stamps in his childhood days, which finally helped him to get the best marks in German, history and Geography at his high school. As a fourth-former at high school at high school he founded a students' exchange circle with the help of an understanding teacher. His first article and description of new issues appeared in 1927, also during his high school days.

Dr. Blank was a founder member of the FIPP (Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatelique), and also belongs to its successor organization, the AIJP (Association International des Journalistes Philateliques).

In 1930 he was given the bronze medal at "Ipostea", and has received many other philatelic distinctions and awards over the years.

"Sammler-Dienst" would like to express its heartiest good wishes, plus the hope that our reliable colleague of so many years will enjoy all success for the future.

Carl Beck
Victor Suppantschitsch †
Der Briefmarkensammler, April 1919, Volume 3, Issue 4, p.144

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

VICTOR SUPPANTSCHITSCH †

A heavy blow, so heavy that only philately could bear it, has fallen on us and shaken us to our depths. Victor Suppantschitsch is no more! The noble, productive life of our valued friend, Senate President Victor Suppantschitsch came to an end on Sunday the 2nd of March this year. Only a few months had passed - 31st October 1918 - since we celebrated his 80th birthday. He was then still hale and hearty and was able without fatigue to answer the numerous letters and telegrams of good wishes showered on him by friends, colleagues, philatelists and admirers. And in all these answers he was the complete man we respected and loved. His strength declined rapidly after the days of this honourable and well-deserved triumph when he could look back on the long, respected and in the best biblical sense precious life. There is no room here even to hint at what Victor Suppantschitsch did for philately, especially German - Austrian philately. It must suffice to say that his loss will be irreparable, and that in him philatelists of Austria have lost their "Patriarch". Suppantschitsch was without any doubt the first person to put the importance of literature for philately into its correct light and to propagate and extend the knowledge of philatelic literature: he was really the world's leading authority in the field of the understanding of philatelic literature.

We, who have been connected with the dead man for a period of 20 years, know from our own experience the ardent intelligence and love he brought to philately. And for this reason we younger men loved and respected him like a father since he will always be the pattern of a truly learned man, devoting himself to things German - and dying in harness.

However I would like to say with the poet Claudius:

Peace enfold this headstone o'er God's holy peace,
Alas you have laid a good man in the grave,
And to me - he was much more.

Carl Beck, Berlin

END

O. Y. Basin
Philatelic Dictionary
[Filatelisticheski Slovar]
USSR, 1968, pp. 2-4

(Translation of the introductory text only)

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1998

PHILATELIC DICTIONARY

The aim of the "Philatelic Dictionary" is to give short explanations of the concepts and terms relating to the collection of postage stamps, and to answer the questions that arise during the use of philatelic literature.

The dictionary offers the reader above 800 items. The majority of them relate to philately and the history of postal development. Along with these are items containing information on polygraphy, paper, writing and graphic skills to the extent that this is necessary for all philatelists. Also included are the monetary units for all countries of the world.

The dictionary will appeal to wide circle of philatelists.

115 illustrations, 41 references

FROM THE AUTHOR

Every year the number of philatelists in this country increases – these are people interested in collecting and studying postage stamps. Many are attracted by the miniature pictures of events at home and abroad, national heroes and great figures in science, the arts and literature.

At one time, philatelists were looked on as rather odd, but this error belongs to the past. Nowadays philately is regarded as a useful and active occupation that helps in the knowledge of the world.

Let us look at the postage stamps of our native land. They reflect the many-sided life of the Soviet people, the first in the world to build up a Communist society. Our stamps carry the portraits of the founders of scientific communism, K. Marx and F. Engels, and the great leader of the Soviet state and the Communist Part, Vladimir Ilych Lenin (more than 300 stamps are "Leniniance"). Interested parties can study subjects connected with the victory of the Great October Socialist Revolution.

A wide selection of our stamps relate to the heroic achievements of the Soviet people during the years of the Great Patriotic War. From our postage stamps look out at us our famous Russian scientists – Lomonosov, Mendeleev, Timiryazhev, Pavlov, Pirogov, Mickurin, Tsidkovski, Mikluzho-Matlai, Sechenov, great poets, writers, composers, artists.

Philatelic subjects include architecture, the exploration of the cosmos, the conquest of the Arctic and Antarctic, sport, fauna and flora, and many others. Indeed, the range of miniatures on stamps is limitless.

This is why millions of people of all ages and professions are fascinated by the collection of postage stamps.

The interest of certain individuals – collectors of the past – contemporary philately has grown to be a great world-wide phenomenon. This is witnessed by international exhibitions of stamp collections and the creation of national and international philatelic organisations, growing from year to year by way of the literature of philately.

Serious attention is paid in our country to the development of philately. Many thousands of collectors have joined the All-Union Society of Philatelists, a voluntary mass organisation whose chief aim is the painstaking development of philately as one aspect of Communist educational work.

In 1963 the symposium “The Soviet Collector” was published in the USSR. The pages of this contain much distinguished research material on stamps as a means of postage payment and on the history of the development of home and foreign posts. The monthly journal “Philately USSR” is very popular. Every year the bookshelf is supplemented by new and interesting publications in this field.

Collecting involves not merely the mechanical and unsystematic accumulation of stamps, but also the creative study of their history, the investigation of their subjects, the history of postal undertakings, the analysis of methods of printing, etc. Hence the philatelist must possess a great deal of knowledge to be found in the specialist literature and must be able to use reference books.

During their researches, philatelists often come across special concepts and terms, the meaning of which is not always clear to them, such as, for example “Angarion”, “Vserrini posktovi soyuz”, “Dvoynaya zhubtsovka”, “Zemskaya pochta”, “Kart-maksimum”, “Kommemorativ”, “Frankirovanige”, “Yam”.

But philatelists do not encounter only philatelic and postal terminology in the narrow sense during their researches. Questions arise in connection with the production of postage stamps, How does one describe the paper on which they are printed. How are the engraving plates produced? Such terms as “Litografiya”, “Offset”, “Vysoka Pechat”, “Raster”, “Sborni Negativ”, “Stereotyp”, “Tisneniye”, “Fototipiya”, and many others, require explanation.

A lexicon relating to philately will be wide-ranging and multi-subject. One often encounters in the specialist literature concepts from the descriptive arts, such as “Allegoriya”, “Barelef”, “Bordyur”, “Nyuan”, “Reproduktiya”, “Symbol”, “Fas”. They also need clear definitions.

In creating a thematic collection, the philatelist will collect not only domestic postage stamps, but foreign ones as well. In doing this the collector will encounter the writing of various peoples and the sometimes unknown names of the monetary units of other states. He will definitely need information as to these.

The compiler has striven to collect the most useful philatelic terms and concepts. The dictionary includes more than 800 different terms. It is arranged in an alphabetic sequence. A definition of the term or concept is given first, then comes supplementary information revealing its point. In many cases the etymology of the term is given in square brackets, i.e. an indication of its derivation or original source.

Terms which consist of two or more words are arranged in the alphabetic sequence by their first word. In other words, they appear in the order in which they are used in ordinary speech, i.e. without varying their natural and usual places. For example, the concept “aluminium stamp” appears under the letter A, and “vodyarnie znak” (water-mark) under the letter V, “kombinirovanniya zhybtsova” (combined perforation) under K, and so on. If forms of terms used in the text are explained by other forms, i.e. if these forms supplement the explanation of the concept in question, they are marked by the use of italics.

A variety of literary materials were used in the course of working on this dictionary, and a list of them is given at the end of the book.

There may be isolated examples of the omission of items of philatelic terminology from the body of the dictionary. There may also possibly be deficiencies in the treatment of certain terms. The compiler will be grateful to receive notes and ??? from readers. These should be sent to the address of the publisher, “Syazk, 2 Chistoprudni Boulevard, Moscow Central.

The compiler expresses cordial thanks to Prof. K. A. Gerugrad for much valuable advice and also to V. A. Karlinski and K. M. Fredelco for their help in preparing the manuscript for publication.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1990

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1990

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

INTRODUCTION

Dear Reader,

You see before you the 90th volume of LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN, known and loved everywhere at home and abroad. In it you will find all the German philatelic publications of the year 1990, and some of those from abroad as well. Every serious stamp collector and philatelist who wants more information on his field of collection will certainly find something of importance to him in this reference work.

Once more, LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN 1990 has a coverage that leaves all previous ones in the shade. In this connection, my special thanks are due to Franz-Josef Lindauer, who has worked at his computer for many hours of his free time to input a large amount of data. This selfless devotion to philately as a whole cannot be valued too highly. Anyone who has set up an extensive database will know how much time it takes to complete such a work.

LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN 1990 appears at a time when the BDPL is reorienting itself, especially as regards the Society Working Parties, from which most of the works quoted here originate. The BDPL cannot and must not lose the inestimable philatelic resources within these working parties, since research and literature is, and will remain, a backbone of organised philately. German philatelic research and literature occupies a leading place on the international scene. This must remain so.

Beginning within the next year, the BDPL plans to let LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN appear as an electronic data bank. In the long run, the immense amounts of data, growing year and year, will be impossible to deal with except by electronic means, in the way that has become customary in German libraries, for instance, in recent years. Of course we cannot assume that every present-day reader of LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN has a personal computer available to read this database on. For this reason LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN will continue to appear in printed form as well for a time; sooner or later however the electronic database must replace the printed book in mastering the quantities of data.

In conclusion I must thank the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History for their extensive support in the production of the current work.

Soeist, 16.9.1992

Bund Deutscher Philatelisten e.V.

Franz-Karl Lindner

END

Societe Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
1992, Issue 10

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

SOCIETE BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

1992, Issue 10

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

Dear member and Philatelic Friend,

We invite you cordially to come to our next meeting, which will take place on Friday 12 June at 20.00h at the home of our member Mr.E. Paaskesen, at 78, Brusselsesteenweg, Terrmen (300 in from the terminus of the 44 tram). On this occasion we should finally be able to show you the computer programme we have been trying to develop since the foundation of our Society, namely a computer programme for encoding, key-word sorting and research of all philatelic works.

Thanks to Mr. Paaskeseu we have an initial file of more than 1000 works. To give a better idea of the possibilities offered by this file, we shall take advantage of the meeting to give a demonstration.

We take this opportunity to thank our member for his support and the help he will continue to give us.

LITERARY TOPICS

Eliane and Marcel Reneumostier are well-known to the philatelic world, and their expertise is beyond dispute. They have once more lived up to their reputation by offering the latest addition to their collection on History and Philately. This is a compilation devoted to the travelling post offices of Belgium, from 1840 to 1914.

The first pages describe the origin and development of the railway in Belgium, largely from the historical point of view, and analyse the trial period of the travelling post offices brought into service.

There are then two distinct sections. The first deals with the lines (from 1850 to 1895), when the offices bore the name of the railway lines over which they travelled. A description is given of cancellations in the form of bar seals, dotted lozenges, double circles and simple circles; for each of these cancellations the authors deal in turn with the administrative aspect, the cancellations, the departure stamps and the marks of origin.

A second section is then devoted to the period after 1895, when the travelling post offices carried the name of the route they travelled, and not that of the line they served.

More than once, the use of our railway lines involved the creation of original variants: the authors do not fail to explain them and mention the special postmarks used on each occasion.

We may also mention that the numerous reproductions of postmarks and philatelic documents borrowed from well-known public sales, along with the clarity of the explanations, make this new study very pleasant to read.

Finally, we may note a format new to the collection on history and Philately (24 x 17cm) along with the use of sized paper: These are two details of practical importance since they improve the appearance of the work and make it easier to read.

R.L.

SUBJECT OF MEETING

At the February meeting we hope to deal with the philatelic literature on Belgian or foreign travelling post-offices. I shall bring several items and a first list which will be distributed to participants.

Of course I invite everyone to bring in titles that they know, or to let me have the necessary details on the bibliographic slips that we produced last year (anyone without slips should contact Mr.A.Decré).

WANTED

We also want to have a complete set of Philatèliste Belge for our readers. Offers to the President, who will pass them on.

END

Societe Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
1992, Issue 9

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

SOCIETE BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

1992, Issue 9

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

Dear member and Bibliophilatelist,

The year 1992, which we hope you will find rich in philatelic events, will get off to a good start for the S.B.B.

In fact, after long months of preparation, we shall be able to present to you, at our next meeting on Wednesday 26th. February at 20.00 hr in the maison du Luxembourg of Belgium, the project which we have hoped to develop right from the beginning of our Society. This is a computer programme which will enable all philatelic works to be encoded, sorted by key-words and researched and will also as far as possible indicate the best way to get hold of them.

Thanks to one of our members, Mr. Erik Paaskesen of Tervueren, we shall have an initial file of more than 1000 titles immediately available.

We thank him for all the help he will give us now and hence forward.

If there is a cross in the box below and if you are still interested in our activities, we ask you to get up to date with your subscription as mentioned further on.

BALANCE SHEET

If the year 1991 was a little less active for the S.B.B. than 1990, this was due in the first place to a slightly reduced level of philatelic activity, but mainly, I must admit, to demands on my time which prevented me from giving it my full attention. Nevertheless I am happy to see our association continuing to grow at home and abroad as well; if the end of the year does not see us successful on a large scale, we have nevertheless had a good reception amongst a public of connoisseurs even as far afield as... the United States. Finally, we have the pleasure of welcoming to our committee Dr. Bigaignon, of Wezenbeek-Oppeum, who will help with editing The Bulletin from now on.

O.S.

III Subscription 1992

The S.B.B. celebrated its second anniversary at the end of 1991. We hope that our association will keep on growing in 1992. Some people have shown their confidence in us by sending their subscriptions for 1992, and we thank them in advance. If you are not one of them, you will find a subscription form in the name of S.B.B. attached. May we point out that the subscription remains unchanged at 750 Belgian francs, and should be sent to account 000-1304282-20 of the Belgian Society of Bibliophilately.

IV Gandae 1991

Last December we had the opportunity to take part in the national competitive exhibition GANDAE 91, during which many very interesting collections were exhibited. The biggest slice of the cake was devoted to Postal History. Theme collecting, Maximaphily and Aerial post were also well represented. On the other hand, there were only three collections of Postal Entires, and a feeble showing of Traditionsl. We reflected the current trend of the philatelic market in Belgium.

Scheduled for the week preceding the holidays the exhibition had only a limited successs with the public in general and collections in particular. All the same..with a class of honour consisting of the collections of members of the Academy of Philately, a good range of gold and silve medals to reward some very fine collections, GANDAE 91 was an excellent showcase for Belgium philately, probably the best for many years. We hae only one wish...may the next national exhibition be more of a popular success. The organisers deserve it!

V SYMPATHY LORNER

We have unfortunately recently had to mourn the death of one of the outstanding figures of Belgian philately. On December 2 last, mr. W.Balasse, a member of the Belgian Academy of philately and a well-known auctioeer, editor and publicist, died at the age of 86.

We repeat our sincere condolences to all his family.

VI SUBJECT OF MEETING

A our February meeting , we hope to study the philatelic literature relating to rural post in Belgium.

This is a very popular subject at the moment, and we hope to see you there in large numbers.

Other articles have appeared in the Revue de l'Académie de Philatélie, WEFIS magazine, the PROPHINA review, and the V.B.P. study Circle. We will give a continuation in the next issue.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1989

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1989

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.
Preface

Two partial volumes of the LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN were necessary to publish the combined edition of the philatelic literature of 1996. It is obvious that the philatelic usage of research is unbroken, and there are still exploratory-worthy philatelic skilled questions, tendency rising. As it is in the Natural Science for example, it also seems to be in Philately, that the solutions of problems results in a whole slew of new questions. For me it means, that I am not afraid regarding the philatelic discoveries in the future. We will have to research many more problems. The solutions are all so important, that they should be written down.. Therefore at this point my fervent plea to all exploring philatelists: Don't let research results disappear in drawers. Publish them in separate editions or through philatelic magazines and naturally first of all in our "philatelie".

An anniversary is connected with this edition of the LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN, to which possibly only insiders are privy. It is the 10th edition under the leadership of our federal group leader for research and literature, Franz-Josef Lindauer. In total he has collected 6486 pages in laborious, minute work. Only few can imagine how many voluntary hours he invested in this pursuit. I am certain he did this for those philatelists in BDPh e.V. for which philatelic literature does not only consist of stamp catalogues, but who are prepared to dive deeply into philately.

To Franz-Josef Lindauer, the man celebrating his anniversary, goes not only my thank you, but I also permit myself to make this clear on behalf of all users of the LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN. I hope and wish that Franz-Josef Lindauer will remain with us for a long time, so that he can publish additional editions of LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN under his direction. Once again a warm thank you to him.

I wish that this edition of LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN will also be used by many as a work of reference, to make themselves familiar with results of philatelic research.

A thank you to the Federation of Philately and Postal History for their generous support with the publication of this volume.

Soest, June 22, 1998

Association of German Philatelists e.V.

Franz-Karl Lindner

END

Literature Nachrichten
Issue 85

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Issue 85

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

For the 6th time Robert Hohn, the chairman of the Literature section of the Society of German Philatelists, has attempted in Literatur-Nachrichten for the year 1985 to discover all the numerous friends of philately whose work has contributed to basic studies. The results of his labours, which have been known and valued for many years in the field of international philately as well, are presented with pleasure by the society of German Philatelists, but he hopes they will perform the no less useful task of promoting understanding between the philatelists of all the world. Hence, all the national societies belonging to the Federation Internationale de Philatelie (FIP) have received the annual volumes of Literatur-Nachrichten as a gift from the Society of German Philatelists, and we are happy that this has led to widespread recognition of Robert Hohm and his co-workers. A further external mark of distinction was bestowed on Robert at this year's 88th Philatelic Meeting in Coblenz in October 1987, when he was awarded the Richard Renner medal in appreciation of his work.

Unfortunately however, the time is drawing near when Robert Hohm will no longer be able to carry out this work, but he may be certain that the form and substance he has imported to the now annual publication will be retained for the future.

When the Society of German Philatelists sent the 1985 volume of Literatur Nachrichten out into the world it did so with thanks to the man who, with the aid of only a few co-workers has worked unselfishly and without limit to produce this issue, whose value can hardly be overestimated. The Society of German Philatelists joins its thanks to him and his co-workers with thanks also to the foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History. Without their recurring active support the publication of such a work would be an impossibility.

Society of German Philatelists

Emil W.Meaves
Vice-President.

Foreword

The Literature Section of the Society of german Philatelists has pleasure in presenting Volume. 85 of Literatur-Nachrichten for the year 1985.

The number of journals covered, together with the publications from the various sections and working parties of the BDPH e.v., has risen to about 180 for this year. Journals from 23 countries are included mainly from EUROPE but also from the USA, Canada and Israel. We acknowledge with thanks the help of Herr Uwe Seif, Schorndorf, for the evaluation of publications from the DDR. Others will be given in Volume. 86.23 exhibition-catalogues were also received.

The presnt volume also covers 250 recent publications in the field of specialist philatelic literature.

As many of these publications were presented to the Literature section, their contents could be described in detail. The addresses for the working parties and sections of the Society of German Philatelists, and for the publishers of the specialist magazines, were checked and brought up to date.

May I express my heartfelt thanks for their support to my co-workers who have done so much in indexing the information received, and also to the ladies and gentlemen of the Philatelic Library. My special thanks go to my deputy, Herr Franz-Josef Lindancer of Soest. The steadily increasing work of transcription can only be carried out with the support of the Foundation for the promotion of Philately and Philatelic History, the computer made available by the Literature and Research sections, and the unselfish efforts of Herr Lindaner in working with this computer.

The Literature section will be happy if the 1985 volume again proves a useful tool for everyone who uses it in their philatelic research.

Cologne, November 1987.

Robert Hohm.

Chairman of the Literature. Section of the Society of German Philatelists e.v.

CONTENTS

Preface	3
List of working parties	6
Alphabetical index to recent literature	26
Publications from BDPL working parties	33
Recent scientific literature	58
List of journals covered, with publisher's address	102

List of exhibition catalogues covered	111
Alphabetical index of abbreviations	112
Location code-survey	121
Location points:
National themes	126
Motifs	333
Various types of post and postal
Dispatch undertakings	377
Subjects	405
Miscellaneous	451

END

Literature Nachrichten
1986, Issue 82/83

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1986, Issue 82/83

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

FOREWORD FROM THE EDITOR

The time has again come for the literature Section to present devotees of literature amongst research philatelists with the double volume for 1982/83, thus making it possible for him to pursue his speciality to an even greater extent.

It is barely a year since the Society of German Philatelists put out the double volume for the years 1980/81 to the entire world, thus earning thanks and recognition from the numerous reviews in the German and foreign philatelic press. A great number of letters, all positive, also reached the Literature section. These thanks belong exclusively to it and its meritorious chairman Robert höhn. How far the flow of Good things has been kept up over an entire year can only be measured by a comparison between the relevant numbers in the last two volumes. There has been no decrease. There were 12,870 entries in the index of the 1980/81 volume, and this time there are 12,400 representing the evaluation of 251 9250) specialist journals and society publications from 27 (30) countries. It ought to be obvious that one single man could not cover all these, and so in his introduction Robert höhn expresses sincere thanks to his co-workers for their help and support, to which the thanks of the Society of German Philatelists are naturally added.

The Society takes its national and international obligations very seriously, so it will again make this volume available without charge to all member societies of the Society of German Philatelists and all national societies in the International Federation of Philately – The FIP. It can only do this thanks to the active support of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without which publication of this work would not have been possible. It is a real pleasure to express these special thanks once again here.

We and Robert höhn hope that he and his co-workers will be able to go on with their valuable work for a long time yet.

Society of German Philatelists eV
Emil W.Meurs
Vice-President

INTRODUCTION

The manuscript for the 1982/1983 volume of Literature-Nachrichten was finished over the New Year 1985/1986.

The first section of about 20 pages gives a survey of Society working parties with the current addresses of their chairman and headquarters as at 1.1.1986.

In the next part O give details of 245 newly published books from the past two years. 140 of these have been seen by myself or my co-workers and so have been described accurately in more detail. You will find the publisher's address and the price, if known, for every book mentioned.

Some journals have ceased to appear in the meantime. "The Aero Field" West Midlands, England has not appeared since June 1983, the last number was 388. The last volume of LIV reported the appearance of a new magazine from the rapp Co. of Switzerland- "RAPPORT". This had only a brief life of about 2 ½ years. The last issue appeared in the middle of 1985. Also "Die Pinzette", the organ of the V.O.B.-Verband oberfränkischer Briefmarkensammler-Verein (Union of Upper Franconian Stamp Collectors' Societies) appeared for the last time at the end of 1985. A few new journals have appeared in place of these. The addresses of their publishers appear in the supplement on pages 91-93. Where the addresses for the journals listed have not changed, I have not given them again, as they can easily be obtained from the previous volumes 69/81. They will be given again in the next volume, to save reference to out of date copies of LN.

Because of our operating costs, emphasis will be laid in future on work from the European region, and on the journals in the German, English and French speaking countries.

In the third part, locations are given some 12,300 references to technical articles in Working Party publications, reports from the Society and its associate members, periodicals, exhibition catalogues and society circulars. These total 251 periodicals and publications from 27 countries-20 European and 7 overseas (mainly the USA). 33 Exhibition catalogues are denoted by "Aust", Society circulars by "Vier" and commemorative issues by "Fest".

At the end of this volume you will again find some details of the philatelic libraries in Berlin, Frankfurt, Hamburg and Munich.

I wish to thank all my co-workers most sincerely for all their help and support.

May this volume again be of great help in your philatelic researches.

Cologne, January 1986.

Robert höhn

LIST OF WORKING PARTIES AND ASSOCIATED MEMBERS OF THE RESEARCH AND LITERATURE SECTION OF THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS EV

As at 01.01.1986

SURVEY

- I ??? German states
- II German Empire to 1945
- III Germany since 1945
- IV Special Topics
- V Working parties on postal history
- VI Interregional groups of societies and working parties
- VII Motif groups
- VIII European states
- IX Overseas states
- X Associated sections on a research
- XI Associated sections on literature

The workingparties marked * are study groups of the “Rhine-Dauuke” Cancellations Guild whoe publications only appear in “Guild Newsletter”

Collected by the research and Literature Sections of the Society of German Philatelists eV
Compilation of Working Party publications

Specialist periodicals
Society circulars
Exhibition caalogues

1. List of periodicals surveyed with publishers’ addresses. Changes and additions to list in Literatur-Nachrichten 69/81, p.135-146
2. Alphabetical index to abbreviations
3. locations
 - a. countries
 - b. motifs
 - c. Various types of postal undertaking
 - d. Subjects
 - e. Miscellaneous

END

Literature Nachrichten
1986, Whole number 84

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

Literature Nachrichten

1986, Whole number 84

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.
FOREWORD FROM THE EDITOR

Since the volumes for the years 1990/81 and 1982/83 have appeared within the period of just a year, so that an outstanding gap has been closed, the Society of German philatelists can again meet the repeated wishes from collecting circles by presenting "Literatur-Nachrichten" for the period of a year. This is thanks to the painstaking work of the chairman of the Literature Section, Robert höhn, and his helpers.

With the present volume for the year 1984, the interested collector will again have in his hand a source of information that will give him reliable information in many cases.

The increasing number of references from the region of international philately and its associated societies, and the work done in indexing journals without charge at the Philatelic section of the library, represent an aid to philately for which the Society of German Philatelists expresses thanks. The previous edition of "Literatur-Nachrichten" for the year 1982/83 contained 12,400 references covering two years, so that the total of 7,800 references in the present volume again represents a rise in the scope of this work. As in previous years, the BDPH has made this 1984 volume available to all national societies within the FIP to carry out its self-imposed international obligations.

The Society of German Philatelists can only express its sincere and hearty thanks to Robert Höhn and his co-workers for the immense labour they have again undertaken for a whole year. Without the continuing support of this undertaking by the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, the publication of this work would not have been possible. It is thus a real pleasure for the Society of German Philatelists to express very special thanks to them. Society of German Philatelists e.V

Emil W. Meures
Vice-President

PREFACE

Today I can give you Vol. No.84 of Literatur-Nachrichten, for the year 1984.

Right at the beginning of this volume comes the list with the most recent addresses of the working Parties: this is followed as usual by a survey of new specialist books. There are 186 in this year: 65 of them have been seen by me or one of my helpers, and could thus be dealt with in detail. The following alphabetical subject index gives you your own field of interest.

For the working parties, the address of their business premises is given along with that of their chairmen.

The next part of this volume records articles on philately and postal history from nearly 120 journals from 22 countries in Europe and the USA from the year 1984. Together with articles from exhibition catalogues, society bulletins and commemorative publications, the total again reaches over 7,800 articles.

I have marked the society bulletins with "Ver", the commemorative publications with "Fest", and the exhibition catalogues with "Aust".

I express heartfelt thanks for their co-operation on "Literatur-Nachrichten" to all my helpers, to the ladies and gentlemen of the libraries in Munich and Hamburg, and not least to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History for its financial support.

It thus only remains for me to hope that this volume also will prove to be a useful aid to your philatelic research.

Cologne, November 1986

Robert Höhn

CONTENTS

Preface	3
List of working parties	6
Publications of working parties in the BDPL eV	26
Alphabetical subject index	27
Recent specialist literature	44
Survey of journals evaluated	74
List of journals with publishers' addresses	75
Alphabetical Index of abbreviations	82
Location code – survey	87
National themes	96
Motifs	264
Various types of post and postal dispatch undertakings	296
Subjects	320
Miscellaneous	356

END

Literature Nachrichten
1981, Whole number 67/68

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1981, Issue 67/68

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

GREETINGS FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS, DR. HEINZ JAEGER

In January 1951, the never-to-be-forgotten Christoph Otto Müller, for many years the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library and first chairman of the literature section of the Society of German Philatelists eV, produced the first volume of his new publication LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN. He thereby started a tradition which last year could look back on thirty years of existence. This total inexhaustible source of information on philatelic writing was soon being thankfully received by collectors far outside the confines of the BDPH, and many volumes of LITERATURE – NACHRICHTEN have received high and the highest awards in the literature class at exhibitions at home and abroad.

It is a happiness for the Society of German Philatelists to see how, under him and his successors Fritz Gaedicke and Erwin L. Martner, friends came forward from the wide circle of philatelists to help with the work of evaluating journals from all parts of the earth.

For the past three years our current chairman Robert Höhn has undertaken this labour of Sisyphus: studying the work of his first years and the current one we can appreciate. The headlong development undergone by philately within this period of three years. Topics and fields of collection that appeared as single items in the index between 1951 and 1960 have today developed into extensive ranges.

Robert Höhn says in his prefaces that the current double volume no. 67/68 for the years 1978 and 1979 is the third of his "period of office" - he had already given collectors the double volume 64/65 for the years 1975 and 1976 and vol. 66 for the year 1977 - and he can really be proud of this achievement, not only because he has devoted a considerable part of his free time to the service of philately. Our hearty thanks to him extend also to all the people who have played their part in carrying out this work and the Society of German Philatelists is grateful to them all.

May LITERATUR – NACHRICHTEN for 1978 and 1979 find its way into the hands of many grateful collectors, and help them to find information and profit for the subject they have chosen.

Dr. Heinz Jaeger
President of the BDPH.

PREFACE

Today we are able to give you volume 67/68 of Literatur – Nachrichten for the years 1978 and 1979, the third volume from my period of office.

As the number of pages has risen quite considerably from the previous one, I have decided to divide this volume into parts. I have separated the reviews from the index of literature, and hope this will make it better and handier for you.

In part I you will find a list of working parties and book reviews, plus the addresses of the publishers of the journals dealt with (7.1). The literature abstracts and their associated indexes are given in Part II (from 7.2)

New features are all the magazines on postal history from the Federal Republic, certain Belgian journals, and even in the English language.

The “Deutschland – Sammler” from Dr. Wihman has appeared for the last time, it ceased to appear after 27 years with no.10 on 31.12.79. the firm of Borek – Berichte” to “Briefmarkenwelt”, however for the sake of simplicity and to avoid confusion I have retained the abbreviation B or B.

Some magazines from England and the USA are no longer being received in time: obviously they will be dealt with in the next volume.

The titles are quoted in the original language as far as known to me. However, if I only have a German translation, the original language follows in brackets. With difficult languages (e.g. Finnish, the Slavonic languages) I have added a German translation.

In the top right hand corner of the references section. I have added the country or subject area to the number. I think this will make things somewhat clearer, and I will help you to locate your field of interest. Before I follow my yearly custom of thanking my co-workers, may I make a heartfelt request to you.

If you like this work, please say so and bring in new subscribers. If it does not please you, however, please write to me. I am always grateful for constructive criticism.

My thanks are due not least to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without whose financial help our work would not be possible.

Finally, may I express my sincere thanks to the philatelic Libraries of Munich and Hamburg, and the libraries of the Postal Museum in Frankfurt and Berlin for their support and cooperation. Special thanks are due to my co-workers, Messrs Danesch, Debo, Kensing, Langie, Hinz, Dr. Rossberg and Frau Seegle for their hearty cooperation on this index. Unfortunately Frau Seegler can no longer be “with us” for family reasons. She dealt with all the Finnish magazines for me. I now see a replacement for Frau Seegler, someone familiar with the Finnish language. If the readers of Literatur-Nachrichten include anyone who knows Finnish and is willing to work on Literatur Nachrichten, please get in touch.

It only remains for me to hope you will again find this voume a useful aid to you philatelic work.

Cologne, December 1981.

Robert Höhn

INDEX TO CONTENTS

Part 1

1. Preface
2. Index to contents
3. Annual report of the Literature Section
4. Philatelic libraries, rules and opening times
5. List of working parties in the Society of German Philatelists
6. Book reviews and supply of literature
 - 6.1 Subject Index
 - 6.2 Working Party publications
 - 6.3 Recent books arranged by author
 - 6.4 Supply of literature
7. Literature abstracts
 - 7.1 List and publishers' addresses for the journals covered, arranged by country
 - 7.2 Alphabetical index of abbreviations
 - 7.3 Locations
 - 7.3.1 Countries
 - 7.3.2 Motifs
 - 7.3.3 Various posts and postal undertakings
 - 7.3.4 Subjects
 - 7.3.5 Miscellaneous

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE LITERATURE SECTION, 1980/81

As in every annual report, Literature – Nachrichten will play the main part in this year's.

Volume 66 of 1977 was entered in the literature class at NAPOSTA 81 in Stuttgart. The jury awarded it a silver medal.

Literatur – Nachrichten 64/65 were sent out in the current year 1980/81. Every working party belonging to the BDPh, every state national society library and every associated society has received a volume cost-free. The 58 national societies in the FIP in Vienna has received a free copy, as have the chairmen of the Society committees. A volum has gone to the philatelic libraries in Berlin, Hamburg, Frankfurt, Munich and the uSA, and to the postal museums in Frankfurt, Berne, Osto, Stockholm and Ottawa. Every publishing house that has supplied its publications free for indexing has also received a free copy, as have the indexes and workers of the Society Literature section.

This volume includes the addresses of the publishers of the periodicals indexed and details of where they can be borrowed when available: readers have welcomed these innovations. The next volume will include as well the library of the Society for Philately 1878, of Frankfurt. My hearty thanks to Messrs Frey, Kohl and Mette for their help with this.

The next volume of Literatur – Nachrichten for the years 1978 and 1979, is again planned to be a double volume. Work on it is in full progress. So far about 7000 – 8000 index cards carrying references have been prepared, and it is estimated there are still 3000 – 4000 to be done. In spite of all our efforts, the Section has been unable to continue to get hold of some journals, and others have ceased publication in the meantime, such as for example Deutschland – Sammler. On the other hand, the Section has obtained certain journals (particularly foreign ones) which have not been covered hitherto. Fruitful contacts were made at NAPOSTA and WIPA. The philatelic Library in Munich has also helped me to find some new journals. My best thanks to Herr Gleixner for his help.

The Literature Section joined with the Research Section and the publishers for the Society of German Philatelists to take a joint stand at the 3rd. International Postage Stamp Fair in Essen 1989, at NAPOSTA '81 in Stuttgart and WIPA 1981 in Vienna. Members were obtained in this way for the Society and for our section. Contact with other group was strengthened by personal conversations. Two new recruits for indexing were enrolled at NAPOSTA: Herr Otte from Niederhausen and Herr Lange from Recke.

The special tasks of the Section, mainly queries about philatelic literature, were handled efficiently.

In conclusion may I, as in all other years, thank my co-workers in the Section for their active support, without which Literatur-Nachrichten could not be what it is today, an internationally well – regarded publication.

Not least however the literature Section thanks the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without whose financial help and support our work would not be possible.

Cologne, June 1981.

Robert Höhn

END

Literature Nachrichten
1984, Whole number 69/81

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1984, Whole number 69/81

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.

[Page 1]

PREFACE

How simple and straightforward it sounds in Paragraph 2 of the Constitution of the Society of German Philatelists to say that it exists to promote, enlarge and extend the various fields of study, and to promote technical writing in the fields of philately and postal history, and that it does this in part by running a Literature Section. In the forthcoming Handbuch Philatelie, this Section's work is given simply and plainly as Production of the annual Literatur-Nachrichten.

This continues the tradition started by Christoph Otto Müller and carried on by Fritz Gaedicke and Erwin L. Martner, and we now have the latest volume, that for the period 1980/81, again before us. Again we have the devoted work of our Section chairman Robert Höhn, who has undertaken this task for the third time and who, in the words of the President of the Commission for Philatelic Literature of the F.I.P. (Fédération Internationale de Philatélie), has no equal in the entire philatelic world.

It thus appears again that this kind of task cannot be carried out simply by mentions in constitutions or handbooks, but depends much more on the readiness of a few idealists who are willing to remain in the background and with the support of an equally few like-minded optimists get the volume into the hands of its expectant users.

The first volume prepared by Robert Höhn was for the year 1975/76, and contained 476 pages. It was followed by a volume for the single year 1977, which had 288 pages. The following two years were covered by two volumes of 182 and 496 pages, a total of 678, and the current years 1980/81 are the same. [Translator's Note: I make this four issues not three as mentioned earlier.]

Again, the number of world-wide philatelic journals indexed has risen and the number of working parties and research groups covered by the Society of German Philatelists has also increased and with them the number of circulars and special publications issued.

The number of philatelic references in this work that serves philately world-wide has also increased.

What has unfortunately remained the same is the number of selfless and industrious co-workers of Robert Höhn, who like him devote many hours a day and many days a year to the task of indexing a magazine, a society's publications, or a particular field of philately.

The society of German Philatelists may well congratulate itself on the appearance of this new volume of Literatur-Nachrichten. The work has extended well beyond the limits of a merely part-time occupation and calls for a level of commitment that can extend and deepen the friendship between the peoples of this world.

Our thanks are also due to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, whose help has again made it possible to publish this work, as well as to Robert Höhn and his helpers, who we can not name individually. However one of them does deserve to be mentioned by name, since the immense amount of indexing he has carried out forms the basis of this work. This is Otto Gleixner, the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library. His catalogue, like the present work, was recently made available by the Society of German philatelists thanks to the help of the Foundation and the working parties and research groups in the Society. Also, since we often refer to our hobby as "family-friendly", you must allow me to express sincere thanks to all the wives of our co-workers. They must certainly often have to show tolerance when their husbands are devoting themselves to the problems of philately. May Robert Höhn remain for many years yet at the head of the Literature Section, along with his co-workers. You are certainly never too old to work.

Emil-W. Mewes.
Vice-President, BDPh.
Research and Literature Section.

Page 3

PREFACE

Today I can finally give you a double volume of Literatur-Nachrichten for the years 1980 and 1981.

However, I will in future try to put out one volume per year, so that the format will be smaller and more convenient.

Since the numbers of Literatur-Nachrichten and the years they relate to have always been different, I have often wished to bring the volume numbers and the years into line: Vol. 82 would thus be for 1982. This made it necessary to number the present volume as 69 to 81. I ask for your understanding about this.

The number of new books and publications appearing in this period demonstrates that philatelic research is not dying out, and that philatelic literature goes on expanding: Thus, I have referred to 340 new books and special publications, of which I have had 155 to review.

I and my co-workers have indexed 250 publications from our working parties, along with periodicals from 30 countries: the result is 12,870 index entries.

I could not get hold of certain journals in time, and some index entries reached me too late. These will obviously be given in the next volume.

The Neu Lipsia-Rundschau has ceased publication, hence it appears for the last time here. Also, I have replaced the abbreviation BorB for the magazine Briefmarken-Welt by BrW for the new title. The two Belgian journals La Revue Postale and Kwertaalblad voor Filatelie have amalgamated and will appear in future under the title Belgica. The editorship is in the hands of H. Raassens, Antwerp. Numbering of Belgica follows on without break from that of La Revue Postale. Its abbreviation will be Belg.

I have retained the digital system only for text references. The first number (7) disappears, so that the symbol for your field of collection will be shortened to one figure and so will be much easier to remember. In the last pages of this volume I list some new specialist journals. These will be indexed in the next Literatur-Nachrichten.

As always, may I again express thanks to all of my co-workers on Literatur-Nachrichten, to the Society of German philatelists, to the ladies and gentlemen of the philatelic libraries of Berlin, Frankfurt, Hamburg and Munich, and particularly to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, whose financial help has made our work possible.

It thus only remains for me to wish that this volume of Literatur-Nachrichten will again be a useful aid in your philatelic studies and tasks.

Robert Höhn
Cologne, November 1984.

Page 5.

CONTENTS

Preface from the Vice-President of the BDPH, Emil W. Mewes	1
Preface	3
Contents	5
Philatelic Libraries	6
List of working parties	10
Book Reviews	22
Subject index	23
Working Group publications	32
Publications from federal societies, national societies and the DPhJ	68
New publications by author	75
Publishers of literature	121
Periodicals index	134
Addresses of publishers of journals indexed	138
Alphabetical index to abbreviations	148
Locations	153
Countries	162
Thematic	464
Various postal and postal-delivery undertakings	519

Subjects
Miscellaneous

564
638

END

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm
March 1923, Volume 3, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BÜCHERWURM

March 1923, Volume 3, Issue 2

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

The "Grosse Lexiton der Philatelie"

By Alexander Bungerz

Even in the earliest years of philatelic literature collections began to be made of the inscriptions on foreign postage stamps, enabling the collector to understand and appreciate his stamps, and be in a position to understand his favourites better. Number 32 of 1 December 1866 of "Magazin für Briefmarkensammler", the first stamp magazine in the German language, already included a "stamp Dictionary". Then in the year 1867, G.W.Schubert published a "Guide to the Labyrinth of Postage Stamps Published To Date", which gave 680 keywords listing the symbols, portraits, allegories, coats of arms, mottoes, etc appearing on stamps and entires.

A suggestion for the production of a "Hand Lexicon for Stamp Collectos" was put forward by Karl Swoboda in 1880 in the Viennese "Welt-Post", and Ernst Lunge terminology in "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" 1884. The first useful "Dictionary" was given to collectors by Oscar Kausch in his book "Language in Philately", which appeared in 1886 (1st edition) and contained 934 terms. A more detailed work was published by "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" in the years 1899-1900: this had 1567 term with numerous illustrations.

Similar publications are also found in the foreign-language literature; the distinguished author Dr. A Legrand, who wrote under the pseudonym Dr Magnus, produced "Words carried on stamps" in the "Gazette des Timbres" 1874, and in "Stamp Collector's Fortnightly" Bishop and Creek began an excellent work which was unfortunately interrupted by the outbreak of the war, and finished at the letter M. Other attempts were cut off by the same event, or remained within very restricted limits.

There has been no attempt in Germany since 1900 to produce a dictionary, so that collectors had to rely on “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal” for 1899 and 1900, the latter of which in particular has become very rare. Since Krausch’s book is also out of print, and in any case only goes up to 1883 (last edition), it became our absolute necessity to get a ????????? lexicon, to which all collectors could refer to get at least a minimum answer. Naturally such a work, being a quasi-compendium of philatelic literature, could not be expected to deal in detail with every term. This is not the purpose of such a work, which would need 50 or 100 volumes instead of just one! A lexicon must simply be a reference work, which gives an answer when consulted. If one needs more, one should refer to specialist work in the particular field, as “Brockhaus” and “Meyer” also do.

For example, a collector may have a stamp carrying the letters A, BLP, CA, D, EC, or the unscripted Akali Dala, Buiteu Bezit, Chells, Diamond Jubilee, Estado Soberano etc, and wants to know what they mean and where they come from. Another may have stamps carrying pictures of historical events, but cannot reach the foreign inscriptions on them, a third may want to know what district or memorial appears on his stamps, a fourth may be interested in animals, a fifth in monuments pictured, a sixth wants the dates of the opening and closing of German colonial post offices, a seventh wants to know when the oldest stamp periodical appeared, or when the first exhibition, the first auction, the first philatelic meeting etc. took place; they will all find information under the relevant heading.

The kings, princes, presidents, national heroes, generals, statesmen, poets, ministers will be found under their names, with a brief account of their activities so far as they are known, and a list of stamps on which they can be found. If the collector does not know exactly what the name is that he wants, he can look under the heading “Portraits”, under which 650 people are again listed alphabetically.

It is of great interest to know how the various stamps were developed, designed, engraved and printed. Many of the artists are of international fame and reputation, but for the greater part they are completely unknown. If we look under Aarts, Barre, Carmichael, Diez, Enschede, Firle, Geiger, Hjortzberg, Isells, Juug, Karlbach, Lemaire, Merwart, Netto, Obrowsky etc we shall find which stamps we owe to them. Anyone uncertain of the spelling of an artist’s name can easily locate the name concerned in the complete list under “Artists”.

Many stamps appear in practically every collection but are not shown in any stamp catalogue. The collector usually thinks he has got an uncatalogued stamp, and writes an angry letter to the editor of the catalogue or to a magazine, whereas he would have found out quicker by a glance at the “Grosse Lexikon” that the stamp concerned is a forged or speculative stamp which does not belong in any catalogue. Again, some stamps are not put out by countries, but by private undertakings, and again one will look for them in vain in a catalogue. In this case the Lexicon reveals which undertaking issued the stamp, such as the Nordic bypost, American Express, or some shipping line. Railways that have issued stamps are also listed.

The chapter on cancellations is extraordinarily detailed. If it is simply a place cancellation, the name of which is legible, a mention in the Lexikon is not necessary and would be tedious. It is a different thing with special-occasion stamps, which often consist of single letters whose meaning is not obvious without further explanation, or with what are called numeral stamps, which were used instead of place-names. Obviously the collector will want to know what localities the numbers refer to. Details are available for the old German states which used this type of numeral cancellation, but they were given up a long time ago and most collectors are stumbling entirely in the dark. Complete lists of these numbers will be found in the Lexikon under the individual states such as Baden, Bavaria, Brunswick, Prussia, Saxony, Schleswig-Holstein, Thurn and Taxis, along with details of the individual post-offices, so that the collector can soon put himself on the right track. For other countries, such as Belgium, Denmark, Greece, Iceland, Netherlands, Poland, Portugal and the Orange Free State, the post offices using number cancellation are all listed together. The post offices set up by Germany and Austria-Hungary in the occupied territories during the War will also be found in the Lexikon, along with all the post offices in the German colonies.

The devices, mottoes and coats-of-arms appearing on stamps are also given, along with the private and engravers' marks and the initials of postmasters which are auxiliary sources of information. Also to be found are all watermarks, sheet watermarks, edge markings, plus as well as an account of the various types of currency with their abbreviations and values and their translations. A detailed numerical table gives the principal numbers in some twenty languages, also the names of the months, which are usually abbreviated in cancellations.

Magazines, books, pamphlets etc are of importance for the development of philately. All the magazines that have appeared in the German language are given in the Lexikon, naturally with details of the publishers and the date of first publication: even the journals which ceased to appear a long time ago are listed. The publishers of albums, catalogues etc can also be found. It is interesting to find out when the first album, the first catalogue, the first handbook appeared in Germany, when the first sales and the first society meetings were held, and when the first stamps auction and the first exhibition took place.

This is not the place to go into the details of the difficulties involved in compiling a comprehensive work at this time. It need only be said briefly that after unsuccessful attempts by other publishers, the "Sammler-Woche" took the work in hand and after two years of work made it possible to publish the "Grosse Lexikon der Philatelie". Printed by the world-famous firm of Kuorr and Hirth of Munich, this work should be ready at the end of April. As this article is being written the firm is carrying out the last odds and ends of work, and the publication date given will be adhered to so long as there are no more strike or political upheavals. The price of the Lexikon has been fixed at about 50,000 marks for Germany, 75000 for Austria and 100,000 marks for other foreign countries. Members of our Society will get it at a reduced price. Orders should be sent to herr Carl Beck, 46 Grünerweg Berlin o.

If I now mention that the Lexikon contains 14000 entries and 2400 illustrations and extends to 600 double-column pages in large dictionary format, I think I have said everything necessary.

Circular No.2. Special contributions were made for the publication of our circular or bibliographical writings, and these were from Messrs:

We thank all these gentlemen once more for their generous monetary contributions.

Subscription for 1923. Esteemed members who have not yet sent in their subscriptions for this year, are again respectfully asked to send it without delay to my account (Berlin 4669C). members from abroad will do best to send the amount in banknotes of their own country in a registered letter to my address. Postage stamps cannot be accepted! If this request does not meet with a response either, we shall be regretfully compelled to recall these tardy gentlemen to a sense of their obligations to the Society by publishing their names in the next issue of our journal.

We hope that our esteemed members will help with the heavy work of keeping a journal going in these-days when so many are failing, by the prompt remittance of their subscription.

END

Utopia Berichte
March 1988, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

UTOPIA BERICHTE

March 1988, Issue 1

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

INTRODUCTION

At the end of 1985 the chairman of the Greek Philatelic Society of Athens, Herr A. Virvilis, put forward in the Society magazine "PHILATELIA" (no.515) his ideas for a project which he christened "UTOPIA".

This was to collect, record and index, plus – at a later date – data – capture all handbooks, monographs, articles and commentaries, plus exhibition and auction catalogues, that related to "GREECE" as a subject for collection.

The GREECE Working party of the BDPh became interested in the UTOPIA project at the beginning of 1986, and declared itself ready to deal with the German – language periodicals.

Interest and willingness to co-operate in the UTOPIA project have also been expressed by the GREECE collectors' societies in Great Britain, the USA and the NETHERLANDS.

The first thing needed to systematize the work and lay down criteria for selection and sorting was to develop an index for the wide-ranging topic of GREECE as a field for collection.

Despite numerous meetings and extensive correspondence it was unfortunately not possible to arrive at a concept acceptable to all participants, and so the GREECE Working Party began its work using its own concept for an index, and is still carrying on with this today.

If a uniform index is ever decided on, the adjustments that might be needed could be carried out without difficulty.

The GREECE Working Party has the library of the SOCIETY for PHILATELY e.V., Frankfurt – am – Main as the principal source for its work. The Philatelic library in Munich has been called on from time to time for missing volumes or issues.

The thanks of the GREECE Working Party are due particularly to the VEREIN FÜR BRIEFMARKENKUNDE 1878 for its valuable support, and to the Working Party members Messrs H.Strassberger, Munich, and B.Eberhardt, Langen, for their co-operation.

The present work (two numbers) give the results of three years of research. 50 periodicals in more than 750 volumes have been dealt with.

The work, whose end is not yet in sight, consists of:

Index to the overall topic of Greece

UTOPIA – reports from the Greece Working Party

Listing of the periodicals covered
Subject indexes (alphabetic)

The most convenient way to keep them would seem to be keeping them in a ring binder with an index, so that subsequent issues and supplements could be inserted without difficulty.

The UTOPIA reports (in DIN A4) will go out to Working Party members as a supplement to the Working Party RUNDBRIEF .

Anyone interested in the previous A5 issues should apply to the UTOPIA section of the Greece Working Party.

The publication of further subject indexes will take place at irregular intervals (15 further periodicals are in hand at the moment).

In the annual reports of 18.10.1986 (RB no.35) in Hanover and 24.10.1987 (RB no.38) in Sindelfingen, I reported on the difficulties encountered in compiling the UTOPIA index.

Since no harmony has yet been reached after another two years, I have gone on with the UTOPIA project on the lines of our own index.

The following index is based on a survey of all articles relating to Greek philately in German – language periodicals. Of the 35 journals gone through so far, the subject indexes to the following 10 periodicals are published today:

SEE list

Further indexes will – as already stated – be published at irregular intervals.

END

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm
January 1923, Volume 3, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1999

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BÜCHERWURM

January 1923, Volume 3, Issue 1

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

THE PHILATELIC BOOKWORM, Vol.III no.1. January 1923

PHILATELIC EXHIBITION AT THE STAMP EXHIBITION, BERLIN 1972

Visitors to the exhibition held in the Berlin zoo from 15 to 22 October 1972 could find with some trouble in a very quiet corner a small, very small selection of old and very old magazines, books, and catalogues in cupboards and simple glass cases. They were exhibited by the City library. The Germania-Ring and the two editors of "Philat. Bücherwurm". The publishers of the Berlin magazines (Berliner Briefmarken-zeitung, Der Deutsche Philatelist, Mn. G.Zeitung) had in fact exhibited complete runs of their papers, but we shall concentrate here on just the bibliographic rarities, libraries named, and were exhibited openly here for the first time.

The specialist journals reported fully on the stamp treasures on show, they were proud to call attention to the great rarities that were to be seen, many of which were unique. However, there was probably nothing published about the bibliographic rarities. Space forbids us to go into details of the history of individual items, nor can we discuss every item on display. In the end we can only after a selection of the rarest items and the most splendid books.

Unfortunately the bibliographic section of the exhibition was not awarded a prize. The reason for this, as President Lindenberg said in his speech during the exhibition banquet, was the insufficient number of medals available. The only awards given of the Postage Stamps of the German Protectorates by Albert Friedemann, the latest publication of Major P. Ohrt, and the handbook of the Postage Stamps of the Netherlands, Indies, published by the "Netherlands Society of Stamps collectors".

As was stated in the speech mentioned, every one of the bibliophiles exhibiting deserved a prize, so they could console themselves with that thought and wait for the next opportunity, when it is to be hoped that there will be enough awards available for literature, the stepchild of philately, to be remembered.

We spoke above of very rare stamps, and this can be said with even greater truth of the rare literature on display, since today it is possible to get practically any stamp if one has the means, whereas bibliographical rarities have to be unearthed and obtained by years of effort under the most difficult conditions in the face of lack of interest, inconvenience and lack of understanding. We can still today find a Miraband, Kropf or Polanski, but not a Dürr or Beyfuss. You have more chance of winning the big prize in the lottery than of getting hold of Schaubeck's deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung or Owitsch's hamburger B.Z.

Members who did not visit the exhibition personally will find in what follows a short selection of the chief rarities and valuable items.

Amongst those exhibiting in Class b4. Magazines

Were

Alexander Bungerz-Tegerusee. A selection of the oldest and hence rarest German magazines from the first years of philately, including: Magazine Für Briefmarkensammler 1863-1867 (first German stamp magazine); der Briefmarken-sammler 1866-1871 by G. Bauschke; Moschkau's Magazine 1871; Deutsche Briefmarken-zeitung by Schaubeck, vol.III 1872-73 (no.33, the rarest German magazine issue, of which only 3-4 issues are known); Union, Dresden, nos 1-50 of 1877-1881; Berliner Illustrierte Briefmarken-Auzeiger by Wild, no.1 of 15.1. 1870; Philatelistische Berichte by S.F. Friedmann of Vienna, nos 1-40 complete; Schweizerische Briefmarken Zeitung by E. Riesen of Schwanden, from the years 1875-1876.

Germania-Ring Library The London Philatelist 1893; Philatelic record 1889; Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society 1911; Svensk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift 1900, Prussian State Library, Berlin. Philatelic section from the former library by Dr. Rommel. Der Bazar für Briefmarkensammler by W. Faber 1869-1870; Philatelistische Blätter 1874; Hamburger Briefmarken Zeitung 1878-1880 (extremely rare); Der Briefmarken Händler by P. Kleiwer 1879; Der Briefmarkenfreund by C.G. Mann für; 1882; der Mitteilungen des Wiener Philatelisten-Club 1882; Fliegende Blätter für deutsch Philatelisten by E. Kastner of Vienna 1884; Der Grazer Philatelist 1829-1897; Verein philatelistischer litteratur sammler-Berlin. Der philatelistische Bücherwurm 1921-1922.

Class 65. Scientific Works

Carl Beck, Berlin. A selection of the oldest handbooks and catalogues from the 60s and 70s, such as : Dürr – Handbuch, I and II edition 1863 (only 2-3 examples of the 1st edition are known); catalogues and handbooks by Berger-Levrault 1864; Lauber 1866; Mann 1865, 1870, 1871; Schaubeck 1871; Zschiesche and Köder 1864, 1865; Moschkau 1874; Grossman 1876; Ruhl, Der Briefmarkenfreund (along with 3 of the only known 4 supplementary tables, extremely rare) 1864; Schubert Der Führer im Labyrinth der bisher erschienenen Briefmarken 1867; Moschkau, essays 1875; Hietzow, Schwarzes Buch 1879; F. Meyer, Postwerthzeichen des ottomanische Kaiserthums, 1879.

Max Barchard t, Berlin-Steglitz. Görges, Postalmanach 1842-1854. Germania-Ring Library: Beyfuss handbuch 1863 (one of the rarest German works); Glasewald, Abstempelungen von Baden and a work on Thuz u. Taxis; Lindenberg, Briefumeshage der deutschen Staaten; London Philatelic Society, India and Ceylon, British Colonies, Oceania, British North and South America; Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford; Moeus, practically all his works; Dr. Diena, Modena; Sveriger Franktecken 1855-1905.

Philipp Kosack & Co, Berlin. E. Derocco, Geschichte der Postwertzeichen von Serbien 1866-1911; Bela Payer, Die Briefmarken des Königreichs Ungarn.

M. Kurt Maier, Berlin Friedl, Tafeln zw. Sizilien Sammlung Rothschild; Kropf, Österreich + Abstempelungen, Miraband u. Reuterskiöld, Schweiz; Earée, Album Weeds, or how to detect forged stamps; Mähé, Les Marchands d'autrefois et leurs Catalogues; Polansky, Timbres-poste de Pologne; B.T.K. Smith, How to collect Postage Stamps.

Finally however we must mention that the literature shown aroused visible interest in the visitors. However it gave us particularly great pleasure to be able to welcome many of our members. Amongst them were: President of the Supreme Court of justice Carl Lindenberg, Government Councillor Dr. F. Kalckhoff, Ph. Kosack, Simson, Dr. Pirl, Paepfow, Dr. Munk, Dr. Ascher, Vollmer, Leitenberger, Alfred Maier, F. Bleibtreu, Consul-General Heinze, W. Butschke, Thalmann, Bütow, all from Greater Berlin; Hugo Krotzsch, Albert Friedemann, Fritz Friedemann, K. Georges, Louis Seuf from Leipzig; Noske and Borua; Paul Köhl, Heberall from Chemnitz; Tabusch, Hillendahl from Magdeburg; Dr. Wendtlaud-Rüstringen; Carl Kolb-St. Blasieu; Epstein, Buschet, Grössler from Kartsbad; Baumgartner-Vienna. We spent happy hours in the company of our esteemed members, and they will not be forgotten neither by them or by us. To give our members an idea of the sometimes very animated conversation, we will end our report with a short occasional poem which our member Fritz Buschek of Carlsbad, the representative of the Czechoslovakian Society of German Philatelists surprised us by producing

1. After philately and the day's work done
We sit here in the wine-bar happily at one
A goodly company, merry to view
I dedicate my finest poem to you.
2. Laughter of music, laughter of the heart,
Laughter of the eyes all gaily take part
O let it stay so, do not lose the mood
It must ever be so in the German blood.
3. We feel the pang that we must part,
Only for a short time, it doesn't break our heart
We shall meet again, happily at one
Shortly, since Germany knows full union?

My Philatelic Library

By Nils Strandell, Stockholm.

Continuation and Conclusion.

To make sure that I get all the various issues of the magazines, I use a loose-leaf system. Every magazine (again arranged by country) has its own page, and every issue of the magazine received is entered, with the date. This system has proved very useful. It often happens that individual issues fail to arrive, and if they are not claimed right away, experience shows that it is often impossible to get hold of the missing issues later. And an incomplete volume has very little value.

Also I have for many years used another loose-leaf system which is very important for study purposes as it makes the vast amount of material in the magazine articles readily accessible. Each country has its own sheet, or series of sheets, where every article or review of interest can be entered. This loose-leaf system is designed to complement the Kohl handbook, and is kept in the German language. A special system is used for abbreviating the often lengthy journal titles.

I have now been keeping this register for more than ten years, and have recorded the contents of more than a hundred different journals from all parts of the world. Hence this loose-leaf system has grown to a bulky compendium, and is very valuable in that it gives an instant survey of the literature relating to any special topic. Perhaps a very short extract may be given:

Schleswig-Holstein

Schleswig Plebiscite: postal services in the voting period. Jydske

F.B. 19

The stamps of Schleswig-Holstein. Frim.Saml.23

The postal shilling. I.B.J. 101.

Denmark: "Voting region". Un. Anz. No. 108/8

Catalogue of the forged stamps of Old

Germany: (Ion): Schleswig-Holstein DD.P.101

Stamps of the Plebiscites (Armstrong):

Northern Slesvig W.E.P XVII 82 etc.

The fifteenth section is the last in the library.

It should perhaps be mentioned in conclusion that I also record all duplicates (from all sections from 1 to 15). The main catalogue of the library is kept on white cards (using a typewriter). But I record the duplicates on salmon-coloured cards. These have a note saying where the item is. I am thus always in a position to say at once whether I have a duplicate of a particular work or particular magazine, and know where I can put my hand on it.

Misprint A misprint unfortunately found its ways into the introduction to this paper: the approximate number of philatelic works was given as 500. The number is of course 5000.

The biggest philatelic society library in Austria has an extremely large number of duplicated philatelic books, journals etc. from the years 1865-1914, in German, French and English to dispose of.

Thus:

1. a chest containing various simple issues, prospectuses and price lists (some of them very scarce. This would be disposed of entire for preference, and might also be suitable for a circulation of philatelic journals.
2. Unbound complete and incomplete volumes of various common and rare periodicals
3. Bound years of the same in great numbers
4. Philatelic books and catalogues, bound or in paper wrappers.

All collectors of literature are thus asked to send in their lists of wants. These should only quote complete volumes or books, since it would be too much trouble to look out individual issues. People interested in the incomplete volumes are also asked to apply.

The books and complete volumes are only available for exchange, but the incomplete volumes will be sold for cash. However we are only interested in a large-scale exchange, and cash orders of less than 50,000 crowns will be politely declined.

Every communication on this topic will be answered if a reply-paid card (or the return postage) is sent. Answers may sometimes take a while, however.

Letters should be sent to F. Thurze, 13
Aichholzgass, Vienna XII.
Reference: this paper.

END

Alfred Moschkau

The philatelic literature of Germany

[Die Philatelistische Literatur Deutschlands]

Supplement to A. Moschkau's Magazin für Markensammler, March 1872, Issue 9, 2pp.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

THE PHILATELIC LITERATURE OF GERMANY

Though I cannot entirely contradict the assertion of our leading philatelic author, that We Germans still have only a far too superficial, wretched literature, it is rather too sweeping for me to agree with it entirely. It is true that our literary productions gain very little attention abroad. The reasons are firstly that the study of the German language is neglected abroad, and secondly, that we have only recently cleared the ground for scientific study, or to put it better, have begun to find out which foreign results we can make use of here. In any event, our literature is nothing to be ashamed of. German work has been translated into the French, English and Dutch languages, and has been reviewed favourably for years in the magazines of foreign countries. Above all, German work has been and continues to be highly valued in its own fatherland.

I have already published a catalogue of German specialist journals in No. 12 of Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung that I was editing at the time, and I have in hand a complete enumeration of German philatelic works. I offer it with great pleasure as a significant index of the value of philately.

END

Max Ton

Handbook of German Philatelic Literature

[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur]

Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins Dresden, Dresden, Germany, 1916, 152 columns. iii & v-vi

(Translation of the introductory and end text only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 2000

HANDBOOK OF GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

INTRODUCTION

CONTENTS

The Handbook covers, as far as possible, all published material of scientific interest on philately and postal history that appeared from 1863 to 1916.

German translations of foreign works are distinguished by a note. Mere society reports, festschriften etc., society minutes and membership lists have always been left out for their lack of scientific content. Popular magazines are only included in exceptional cases because of their philatelic content: price lists, auction catalogues and exhibition brochures have also been included if they have any importance for philatelic purposes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

The details are as far as possible complete and accurate: in particular, the original spelling of old titles has been retained. Missing or incorrect names of authors have been supplied and corrected. This is indicated by the use of square brackets “[]”.

ARRANGEMENT OF MATERIAL

The material is divided into:

- A) Books
- B) Periodicals

To facilitate searches, the following should be noted:

1. Books are given under the name of the author, under the name of the first if there are several; if there is no author, the main word of the title,
2. Periodicals under the key word of the title,

3. Proceedings of societies, exhibitions, etc., when included, are given under the firm, the location of the society or the place of the exhibition.

EXTENT AND DATE OF PUBLICATION

The size of independent works is noted as far as possible. Supplements are given special mention.

The date of publication is always taken from the publication itself. If this is lacking, this is shown by the notation “o.J”.

Alphabetical arrangement is always preferred: only different editions of the same work are arranged by date.

REFERENCES

Careful reference to the works of individual countries and authors will increase the usefulness of the handbook, especially as regards the rapid location of titles.

FORMATS

The format is determined by the height of individual covers, thus:

8°	up to 25cm
4°	above 25 to 35cm
2°	above 35 to 45cm
gr 2°	above 45cm

If the bibliographic indication of size is different from this, it is given in round brackets.

EXAMPLE OF BIBLIOGRAPHIC DATA

Berlin n.Leipzig: Friedrich Luckhardt (1900) XIV, 372s, 8°, means: the work concerned was published by the firm of Friedrich Luckhardt in 1900, its pages are numbered from I – XIV and 1 – 372. Since the height of the cover is 21½, the format is 8° = octavo.

EXPLANATION OF SYMBOLS

Abb	Illustration(s)	Fortgef	Continued
Abdr	Impression	Fortges	Continued
Abt	Section	Fortsetz	Continuation
Anh	Appendix	Geb	Bound
Anm	Remarks	Gedr	Printed
Aufl	Edition	Hrsg	Publisher
Ausg	Issue	Hrsg	Published
Bd	Volume	Jg	Year
Ade	Volumes	Kart	Bound in boards
Bearb	Edited	In Komm	Inc. commission
Bed.Verm	Extensively enlarged	Leinw	Linen, canvas
Beil	Supplement	Lfg	Part, number

Bildn	Portrait	Qlfgn	Parts, numbers
Bl	Sheet, leaf	Lithogr	Lithography
Bzw	And, or relatively	Lithogr	Lithographed
Dr	Printing	Ms	Manuscript
Durchgus	Revised	Nachtr	Supplement, appendix
Ebenda	Same, Ibid.	Nr	Number
Ersch	Appeared	o.J.	Without date
Erw	Expanded	o.O.	Without place
Farb	Coloured	o.O.u.J.	Without place or date
Orig.	Original	Übers	Translated
Port	Portrait	Ubers	Translated
Pseud	Pseudonym	Wmgearb	Revised
Red	Editor, edition	Umschlag	Cover
Reg	Register	Umschlagt	Cover title
S	See	Verbess	Corrected
s.u.d.T	See under the title	Verf	Author
Selbsuerl	Published by the author	Verf Vgl	Compare, cf
Sonderabdr	Special impression, Off print	Verm Vers	Supplied
Sonderdr	Offprint, reprint	Vorw	Foreword
Sondert	Separate title	zsgest	Compiled
Taf	Table
T	Part
()	Supplementary data from book or periodical itself
[]	Supplementary data from outside sources
< >	Denotes material already in brackets on the title page of the book or periodical

p.75

LITERATURE, philatelic

- Gerdt, A. Herr Schwefelmeier's up-to-date reflections on coloured illustrations in the philatelic literature, Leipzig 1891.
- Gottschalt, Albert The German philatelic literature 1894 to 1897, Berlin 1898
- Konig, Ludwig On philatelic literature (with examples). Paper given at the XDVII German Philatelic Day in Regensburg, 1905.
- Moschkau, A. Photographic souvenir for German philatelists Sheet 6, Philatelic literature and its suppliers, Nossen 1871.
- See also Bibliographies of philatelic literature.

A PAPER MONUMENT

With the tenth delivery we come to the end of the Handbook of German Philatelic Literature. Stated during the year 1915 (see page 132), and with all the difficulties encountered by the World War, it comes to an end in February 1918. It is our honourable duty at this point to express our most heartfelt thanks to our co-workers and especially to the man whose name graces our title page. Not all were equally eager participants, because of the nature of the time. Some were in the service, other were handicapped due to minor burdens at the home front. All though, were enthusiastic participants to complete our work. A big thanks to all of them. No less thanks is deserved by the management of the printing company Hesse & Becker in Leipzig. Their performance during the difficult war years can only be judged by those who are familiar with the difficulties that had to be overcome. Last but not least, we must thank Max ton who was the active and hardworking editor, who also started the work. Like a busy bee he accumulated the material despite home front service. Our handbook now shall go out in to the world to philatelic collectors as a minor witness of German peace time work during war time. May it provide much happiness to the under4signed society.

The International Philatelic Society – Dresden

I.A: Franz Wallner, Publisher

END

Libraries

[Title in original language]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, February 1913, Volume 24, Issue 2, p.44

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LIBRARIES

The remainder of the philatelic library of the French Philatelist Dr.med.Legrand, who died last year, has been auctioned in London. On the 27January. In the auction rooms of Glendining + Co., what was left of the wonderful collection of "Philatelic literature" built up by the old stamp collector was put up for sale: mainly periodicals and catalogues of the French Works, "L Echo T" mentions the catalogues by Valette (1862), Mahe (1863, 1865). Berger-Levrault (1867), the two first editions of Maury (1865). These are all truly rare items.

It would be particularly desirable for bibliofiles to have details of the auction prices obtained, as a price catalogue for old philatelic literature is still lacking.

END

Victor Suppantschitsch
Austria-Philatelist, December 1893, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.3-4 & plate

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 1998 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008, March 2013)

VICTOR SUPPANTSCHITSCH.

Nobody has a better claim to open the series of biographies relating to philatelic literature in our paper than Victor Suppantschitsch, the old master of Austrian philately. Not only within the boundaries of our Austria, but far beyond them, especially where young people turn to philately, Victor Suppantschitsch has been recognised and honoured for decades for his services as a leading light of philately. In view of the interest thus attaching to this man an account of his life will - we are quite sure - be of interest to our readers.

Victor Suppantschitsch was born on the 31st October 1836, the son of a merchant at Laibach in Carniola (Krain), and completed his studies at the high School of his native town in the year 1857.

After an extended study tour through Bavaria, Wurttemberg, Baden, Switzerland and Italy, he devoted himself to juridical studies in Vienna.

He entered State service in the year 1862, became an Assistant in 1869, Deputy Public Prosecutor in the County Court at Laibach in 1873, District Judge in Adelsburg in 1874. He stayed in this post till 1883. In this year Suppantschitsch was named Counsel to the Supreme Court in Klagenfurt, and in 1886 he became Counsel to the Supreme Court in Graz, a distinguished position which he occupies to the present day. Moreover, in 1887 he became Chairman of the Appeals Court for Styria, Carinthia, Carniola and the Küstenland, and in the year 1889 he was given the honorary post of President of the Arbitration Board by the Workmen's Insurance Institute for Styria and Carinthia.

Suppantschitsch was incited towards collecting when he inherited a small stamp collection from his deceased brother in the year 1863. He took to it with joy and affection, set up exchanges with collectors all over the world, improved his philatelic knowledge by reading the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, published at that time by Zschiesche & Köder in Leipzig, and was soon known as a collector over wide circles.

His activities as a writer on the subject of philately began in the year 1870. From then on he published a large number of Technical articles in Wiener Illustrierten Briefmarkenzeitung, the later Weltpost; Union of Dresden, Germania, Wiener Briefmarkenzeitung, Erdballmerkur, Postwertzeichenkunde, Philatelistische Börsen Courier, Globus of Berlin, and many other specialist journals on this and the other side of the black-gold boundary (Translator: i.e. Austrian frontier).

With Ferdinand Meyer, of unforgettable memory, he had such a close tie of friendship that Meyer's death almost persuaded him to say farewell to philately. Fortunately he did not go so far; he did indeed get rid of the important collection he had built up chiefly by exchanging for Austrian stamps, and devoted himself instead exclusively to literary activity. his first work, Leitfaden der Philatelie [Guidelines to Philately], was published in 1880. Basically it remains valuable today, and will remain so as long as philately exists. It is a work of imperishable value, in other words the alpha and omega of philately. As soon as it was published by Eduard Wartig, it found ready acceptance and attracted the most favourable attention to its author. It was distinguished by the award of the bronze medal in the year 1881 by the Société Française de Timbrologie in Paris.

In the following year, Moriz Schauenburg of Lahr published his Weltbriefmarken-Album [World Stamp Album], along with a number of smaller albums for beginners. In the year 1888 the same firm published his large patented Permanent-Weltbriefmarken-Album [Permanent World Stamp Album] in six large quarto volumes. In July 1892 he began to publish the large and well-know sections of his Bibliographie der deutschen philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Beginne bis 1891 [Bibliography of the german Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to 1891.] This is distinguished by the depth of learning of its author. It is to consist of sixteen sections and the thirteenth has recently appeared. The first thirteen sections contain the history of the philatelic literature in a minuteness of detail never achieved before. In February of this year he began a work which is not yet finished but will be a considerable addition to philately. It is entitled Versuch einer Bibliographie der fremdsprachigen Literatur Europas seit ihrem Beginne bis 1891 [Attempt at a Bibliography of the Foreign-Language Literature of Europe from its Beginning to 1891.]

Victor Suppantschitsch has the distinction of being the first person to show the importance of literature to philately in its correct light, and of opening the way for a knowledge of the philatelic literature, as he was the first authority in Europe in the field of understanding of the philatelic literature.

Also, he has unquestionably the largest philatelic library in Europe, even if we consider those belonging to the Dresdener Internationale Philatelisten-Verein, the Friedl Museum in Unter-Döbling by Vienna, and the Société Française de Timbrologie of Paris. Its catalogue lists over 2000 items, amongst which for example, are more than 750 complete volumes of philatelic journals.

His services to philately have been recognised by honorary membership of the Hamburger Philatelisten-Club (1877), the Inner-österr. Philatelisten Clubs of Graz (1888), and the Schüler-Vereins of Bruchsaal (1891).

Moreover, he officiated as Foreman of the panel of judges of the First International Postage Stamp Exhibition held in Vienna in the year 1890, and received commendations on all sides.

We will conclude by mentioning, that Supreme Court Counsellor Suppantschitsch has given the most friendly welcome to our undertaking and has very kindly agreed to give his help. We can only express the wish that he will have many years yet to devote his outstanding services to philately.

END

Peter Riedl

Otto Rommel

Austria-Philatelist, 1st February 1895, Volume 2, Issue 2, pp.53-54 & Photograph

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

OTTO ROMMEL

The considerable advances in the organic scientific development of philately in Germany can only be understood by tracing the large number of papers in this field back to their origin. This will show that in fact a relatively small number of men has shaped and produced the form and content of present-day German philately. One of the foremost places on the General Staff of this German philatelic army is occupied by the name of Otto Rommel.

The biographical data available to us yield the following facts: Otto Rommel was born on 2nd February 1854 in Hildburghausen in Saxe-Meiningen, where his father held a high juridical position. He turned towards his father's calling, and at the end of his law studies in 1877 he became a junior barrister, then Assessor, and in Autumn of the year 1885, Counsel to the Supreme Court of Thuringia in Jena. He gave up this post in the year 1891 so as to devote himself entirely to philately.

The beginnings of his interest in the hobby date back to his boyhood, and the foundation of his present extensive collection goes back to the year 1868. After his studies were behind him in 1877, he devoted himself with particular zeal to caring for and extending his collection, began to study the philatelic literature and in 1883 began a connection with the Internationalen Philatelisten-Verein in Dresden. He soon realised a need for the reform of the entire field of collecting and began to publish, with some very well received articles, in the magazine of this Society. The name of the new author quickly gained such a reputation that at the end of 1883 when A. Koeppe of Barmen put out his then very popular album he asked for Rommel's opinion beforehand. Amongst other fine collections that Rommel assembled at this time was a collection of several thousand Peruvian stamps which he acquired from a young Peruvian named Joachim Halguers. This aroused his total interest as a researcher and the result of his work was his Studies on the Postage Stamps of Peru. This appeared in 1890 and 1891 in Postwerthzeichenkunde, and was later issued as a separate publication. It is a pattern for the philately of this country to the present day. By the 1st October 1890 Rommel's name as a philatelic writer was already so well known that he was offered, and accepted, the general editorship of Postwerthzeichenkunde. Then began a period of intense literary activity. We will mention only the articles Bamra (published in translation by The American Philatelist), Some remarks on the forgeries of Baden, Cancellations on the postage stamps of Saxony, and the pamphlet Postage Stamps of the Bergdorf Region, - two supplements to which have appeared. All his work showed a solid basic mastery of the subject.

His versatility and intelligence were also used to make valuable contributions to other magazines. Thus we encounter Rommel's work from 1891 on in Philatelistischen Börsencourier, Philatelistischen Rundschau, and especially in the Leipzig Illustrierten Briefmarken-Zeitung. They are always distinguished performances of the first rank and many have been translated into foreign languages. We also take it as a special honour to number Rommel amongst our collaborators and direct our readers' attention specially to his paper in our current issue.

The following of Rommel's major works deserve particular attention:-

The 1892 edition of A. Larisch's priced catalogue; his co-authorship of the second edition of the Köppe-Albums; and the excellent supplement to Kröttsch's fine Permanent-Sammelalbum, in particular. All the German postal regions in this, with the exception of Schleswig-Holstein, Württemberg and Prussia, were from his pen.

Otto Rommel was a general collector with a special interest in German postage stamps. He also had an exceptionally rich collection of forgeries, along with an important library of philatelic catalogues, journals, pamphlets and compendia in all languages.

German philately looks with pride on this man, whose life we have sketched very briefly and whose personal qualities have extended the picture of an outstanding specialist in the most attractive way.

Otto Rommel is today still in the prime of life: may it be granted to him to carry out many more distinguished works in the field of philately.

END

Alfred Koch

References on the German Postal System: Supplement 1500-1964

[Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen Nachtrag 1500-1964]

R. V. Decker's Verlag/G. Schenck, Hamburg/Berlin, Germany, 1969, 3 unnumbered pages

(Translation of the introductory text only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1999

REFERENCES ON THE GERMAN POSTAL SYSTEM:
SUPPLEMENT 1500-1964

The present supplement to "Literature on the German Postal system" gives a complementary survey of the postal literature from 1500 to 1964 on the basis of new data obtained from the general catalogues of certain libraries within the German Federal Post and from foreign postal undertakings, from bibliographies, indexes of these and important specialist publications that have appeared since Part 3 of the main work "Literature on the German Postal System" in 1966. The existing bibliography has also been extended by the inclusion of scientific papers from collections such as "Current Questions in the German State Post", "Yearbook for Posts and Telegraphy", "Post Office Yearbook" "Notes from the Scientific Week I Posts and Telegraphs" etc. etc. some further literary items of importance (see contents) are also included. Since valuable literature was destroyed in Germany by war action, and since now much is accessible because of the partition of Germany, it appeared useful to insert items on the German Postal System got from catalogues of foreign postal undertakings into the supplement.

My heartfelt thanks are due to the Postal Service in Berne, the Hague, Copenhagen, Paris, Rome and Stockholm, also to the library of the German Federal Post for their generous and valuable help in the production of this supplement. My sincere gratitude goes to the library of the Federal Ministry for Posts and Telegraphs in Bonn, particularly to Departmental Head Dr. Gesteukurk and Supervisor Schulz for supporting this project.

Bonn, July 1969

ALFRED KOCH

Explanation

All references can be obtained via the library of the Federal Ministry for Posts and Telegraphs in Bonn. On some cases a location is given for the material, e.g. Frankfurt (Main) =Library of the Frankfurt Division of the German Federal Post (M). Documents and maps in the library of the Federal Postal Museum in Frankfurt and Main are designated by (Mu).

Philatelic Literature can be obtained from the Philatelic section of the Munich City Library.

Items in the Postal Service Libraries of foreign countries are devoted by a number in brackets at the end of the reference, e.g. (2).

The numbers mean

1. Library of the Central Post, Telegraph and Telephone Undertaking, Berne

2. Library of the Central Post, Telegraph and telephone Undertaking in the Hague
3. Post and Telegraph Library in Copenhagen
4. Library of the Central Post and telegraph Administration in Paris
5. Central Library of the ministry of Posts and telegraphs in Rome
6. Royal general Post office Library in Stockholm
7. Library of the Central Post and telegraph Undertaking in Vienna.

Foreign Library catalogues used are:

Catalogue of the Library of the Swiss General Post and telegraph undertaking in Berne.

Catalogue of the books in the Library of The Central Post, Telephone and Telegraph undertaking in the Hague

Catalogue of the Postal and telegraph Library in Copenhagen

Catalogue of the Central Post and Telegraph Administration in Paris

Bibliography on posts and philately (Luigi Piloni; 1959)

Catalogue of the Royal General Post office Library in Stockholm

General index to the library of the Central Post and telegraph Undertaking in Vienna.

Contents

A	Literature with details of author	1
B	Literature without details of author	47
C	Route maps, railway guides, postal schedules etc.	97
D	Index of personnel names	101
E	Index of places	113
F	Subject index	133
	Appendix: Heinrich von Stephan-bibliography	199

The "Literature on the German Postal System" covers:

- 1 Literature on the German Postal system, German postal history and the World Postal Union
- 2 Papers from the collections: "Current Questions in the German State Post" "Yearbook for Posts and telegraphy; "Post office Yearbook", "Notes from the scientific week in Posts and telegraphs"
- 3 Literature on transport and means of communication with respect to the postal system
- 4 Literature from the daily press, in so far as it relates to the postal service
- 5 Laws and regulations concerning the postal services
- 6 Postal law, postal regulations, conditions of service and personnel management
- 7 Agreements, arrangements and treaties with foreign postal undertakings
- 8 Statistics, commercial and administrative reports, commercial plans, operating reports
- 9 Training and instruction manuals
- 10 Postal manuals, handbooks, calendars and pocket books
- 11 foreign-language training and instructive manuals, also dictionaries
- 12 official timetables and route maps
- 13 Trade, commercial and economic geography
- 14 Local guide books, local directories, street guides to major cities
- 15 Official and legal circulars from the German postal undertakings, postal journals.
- 16 Literature on postage stamps of historical interests

END

INTERNATIONALE PHILATELISTEN-VEREIN, DRESDEN

A reference work (Bibliography) of the German philatelic literature
[Ein nachschlagewerk (Bibliographie) der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur]
Philatelisten-Zeitung, July 1915, Volume 24, Issue 6, pp.83-84

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1998

A REFERENCE WORK (BIBLIOGRAPHY) OF THE GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Attempts to supply stamp collectors with a complete as possible reference work to the stamps of all nations, and if possible a reference work to the German philatelic literature, all by no means new. Unfortunately however so far they have all been a failure, because their scope was too wide. Attempts were made to cover not only all independent publications at home and abroad, but as far as possible all the articles that have appeared in journals. Good as this idea was, it became more and more impossible to carry it out, because the flow of publications on philately has steadily increased in recent years.

This has led to an increasing need in German collecting circles for a reference work that will at least give reliable and exhaustive information on German philatelic literature. Even this is lacking at the moment though there is no shortage of usable preliminary studies.

Above all, Senate President Dr. Suppanschitsch of Graz well-known in philatelic circles, has promoted philatelic literature in word and print with indefatigable zeal and industry.

However, both before and after Suppanschitsch various people have worked for the future of German philatelic bibliography, sometimes openly and sometimes in private. We may mention Supreme Court Coincensor Dr. Berchmann of Darmstadt, Captain Ohrt of Düsseldorf, Dr. Rommel of Berlin-Steglitz, and the deceased Alfred Moschkau, Frankel, Theodor Haas, Rudolf Krasemann and Dr. Ludwig König.

Amongst these, Alfred Moschkau in particular was the first to try and compile a serviceable bibliography, of Germany to begin with.

Unfortunately, the bibliographical works he published in the seventies remained uncompleted because of his death.

Probably the pen of Dr. Ludwig König of Kiedl would have given us the German philatelic bibliography. He was the owner of a philatelic library of some 1000 volumes, and was one of the leading experts on philatelic literature as a whole, as is demonstrated by the paper "On Philatelic Literature" that he gave to the 17th. German Philatelic Meeting at Regensburg. Now however the green turf covers him as well.

In summer 1914 in Leipzig at the 2International World Exhibition for Book and Graphic Design” (“Bugra” for short), by far the greatest part of all philatelic literary productions were available to be admired.

The fact was then often be woaned that there was no “German” reference work to cover the books and periodicals put out by Hugo Krotzsch, Counsellor Suppautschitsch, the International Philatelic Society, the German Philatelists’ Union and other collectors and societies, so that the English Crawford catalogue has to be used instead.

The International Philatelic Society of Dresden has now decided to follow a suggestion from one of the contributors to its own journal, Max ton of Leipzig, and meet the need for a complete as possible. German philatelic bibliography, which it will publish itself. The actual compilation of this bibliography will be exhausted by the Society to the originator of the suggestion. He seems particularly fitted to solve this problem in view of his regular work as a library assistant and his reputation as a philatelic author.

The new “German” philatelic bibliography will be limited initially to covering about 1200 titles. It will appear in 6 or 12 individual issues each with 200 or 100 titles, and will be arranged as follows:

1. General works on philately and collecting. Postal histories, as far as they relate to philately.
2. Special literature on the postage stamps of individual countries.
3. Specialist journals
4. Stamp catalogues, price lists from dealers, auction catalogues.
5. Miscellaneous. Illustrations, single-sheet publications, private publications etc.

It will be decided later whther or not to include the album literature in the bibliography.

Peiodical articles will only be listed in the bibliography if they are of permanent scientific work and have not also appeared as pamphlets or sections of books.

Emphasis will be placed on the greatest possible accuracy for titles. If exact data for title, price, publisher etc are not currently available, this will be indicated by the use of special symbols.

All titles will be listed alphabetically in each part under the relevant heading. Every title will also be allotted an individual number, so that it can readily be ascertained in later subject and author indexes. On the other hand, individual issues will not have their own indexes.

The bibliography will be restricted to philatelic literature in the German language.

Foreign-language publications will only be included if they contain a German text as well as the text in the original language of their country (translations).

Reprints of individual works will be included if this seems justified on the grounds of practical usefulness, otherwise they will be ignored.

The work will appear in parts. Each part will cost s50 pfg, including postage. Subscribers to the first part will be expected to subscribe to the entire work.

We thus request all German stamp collectors to give their hearty support to the compiler of the future German philatelic bibliography, and in particular to send him a copy of all new German publications in philately so that they can be included as soon as possible in the reference work.

Thanks to all our specialists and esteemed patrons for the rapid support, help and advice. So far we have had answers from Senate president Suppantisch of Graz, Supreme Court Counsellor or Kalckhoff of Berlin, Herr Hugo Krottsch of Leipzig, Herr Glasewald of Gossnitz, and high Court Counsellor Dr. May of Dresden. These gentlemen have already made themselves available in the interests of learning. We ask everyone who may have anything to contribute to this important work not to refrain from letting us have their opinions or advice: their pros and cons will work out to a viable whole. We shall genuinely try to arrive at something valuable and useful for philatelists, but to do this we shall need everybody's cooperation.

We wish total success to this good work, and hope that when it has been happily brought to a conclusion it will finally be found of practical use.

On May of the war year 1915.

International Philatelic Society, Dresden.

END

Dr. Rommel

The philatelic periodical literature
[Die philatelistische zeitungsliteratur]

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, 15th April 1911, Volume 7, Issue 8, pp.188-190

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 2000

THE PHILATELIC PERIODICAL LITERATURE

It is an unfortunate fact that most philatelists do not take as much interest in the philatelic literature, and especially the philatelic periodical literature, as they would find it profitable to do. Many people satisfy their thirst for knowledge with a good catalogue, which simultaneously gives them information on prices and acts as a basis for purchase and exchange. Others have at least one favourite paper which is easily skimmed through and keeps its subscribers fairly well informed on current happenings. The provision of a philatelic library, which unites the treasures of older and more recent times and makes it possible to consult and compare, is unfortunately the exception in Germany. We have some 100 German societies with about 20,000 members, but their libraries differ very much in scope and some scarcely deserve to be called such. Others, such as those of the Dresden International Philatelic Society and the Berlin Philatelists' Club are unfortunately not kept systematically up-to-date since there are no means to do so, and are so, quite understandably, little used.

Nevertheless, reading is necessary for philately as it is for every activity based on knowledge and experience, and in this case plenty of literature is available. However, this abundance is not due to a lively demand from subscribers, but rather to the commercial interests of the dealers who publish it, and of other dealers and collector-dealers.

Nevertheless, it is worth paying some attention to the philatelic papers now and again.

There is no doubt that the peak of philatelic civilisation is occupied by the German race, i.e. Germans and English with their American cousins. The German race also includes the Dutch and Scandinavians, who also meet the requirements.

The following German journals deserve individual mention; above all the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal, now in its 38th year. though this does serve the purpose of its publisher in the first place, it has much to interest others. Der Philatelist is in its 32nd year, and is purely a Society journal. its strength is in its detailed society reports and leading articles, so that there is little need for detailed scientific articles. perhaps there will soon be a change under the new directors. Die Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung is in its 22nd year, it is neither a dealers' nor society organ and serves the interests of zealous philatelists, even though the death of Fränkel and the dispute with Ohrt have not passed without trace. A many-sided, admirably edited journal is Philatelisten-Zeitung, which is both a society and a dealers' magazine, now in its 19th year. Der Briefmarken-Sammler has a modest presence, but still managed to reach its 19th year without interruptions or double issues.

In a class on its own is the Vertrauliche Korrespondenzblatt, whose wings have been clipped by Society resolutions. It serves chiefly as a link between collectors' societies. It has always been based on an ideal love for the subject, disinterestedly used in the interests of the subject. In spite of an almost total lack of learned articles, it has done a great deal of good in the twenty years of its existence by uncovering frauds and naming the fraudsters.

Die Post is more for the small and average collectors. It has gone its own way for 19 years, independent of dealers and societies, and has attracted keener interest in recent years because of Louis Senf's "Reminiscences". It has also been a keen advocate of the study of cancellations on German colonial stamps, whereas German colonial stamps themselves have been the theme of the Germania-Berichte now in its 15th year. The same subject is exclusively treated with expertise and skill by Friedemann's Philatelische Berichte. The great interest in German colonial stamps is further illustrated by the fact that there is yet another magazine, the Illustrierte Zeitschrift für Kolonialmarken-Kunde devoted exclusively to them. This is a supplement to Deutsche Philatelist which has taken over as another supplement P. Ohrt's Deutsche Stempel-Zeitung of which only 3 issues appeared in 1910.

I will mention the Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung here just for the sake of completeness. I trust the reader will know what it contains.

A definitive judgement cannot yet be made of the new magazines founded in recent years. Kohl's Mitteilungen has only published 11 issues and 12 numbers in the last three years and is only now beginning to appear regularly. Its contents have always been valuable. Die Allgemeine Anzeiger für Philatelie from Hans Schneider of Worishofen has published 18 numbers in 9 months and seems to be developing into an advertising sheet with a good text section. The same applies to the Blauen Blatt now in its 13th year, although this concentrates on the specialist areas of picture postcards, charity stamps, etc. Die Internationale Zeitung of Hamburg serves all branches of collecting as a hobby.

Finally, passing over a whole range of small and very small society and specialist journals, we may mention the two major advertising journals Generalanzeiger für Philatelie and Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt. The Internationale Offertenblatt für Philatelie founded by C. A. Mylius in Sonneberg passed into other hands in 1910 after 15 years of existence.

After this abundance of quantitatively and qualitatively outstanding journals from Germany, we turn to the German speaking press of Austria-Hungary. There has been no outstanding title since the disappearance of the Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung (later Weltpost) from S. Friedl of Vienna and the Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung from Koch of Vienna. Friedl's Illustriertes Briefmarken-Offertenblatt often has a small but interesting supplement, although in the main it is simply an advertising sheet in the service of its publisher. The Grazer Briefmarken-Zeitung is very wide-ranging and good but only appears once a year at the charter festival of the Society of Stamp Collectors of Graz. Der Universalanzeiger is an advertising journal with text; at the kindest appraisal of the contents of this paper, it cannot be ranked as a first-class scientific magazine, moreover its paper and its small type are not very advantageous. It only remains to mention Der Grazer Sammelstport, a semi-philatelic journal of limited scope with double and triple numbers, Der Sammler from Oscar Nentwich of Trautenau, which is well-produced but limited as to contents and seems to lack a philatelic correspondent, the Internationale Rundschau für Sammelstport and Die Reform both from Vienna, neither of which really counts as a scientific journal.

Things appear to be better in the Hungarian half of the Empire, there the German philatelic press is represented by Ungarische Briefmarken-Sammler, previously called Szekula Briefmarken-Verkehr and Stempel-Marken-Sammler. The first has appeared for 11 years now but is only concerned with the interests of its publishers and leaves much to be desired textually and editorially. The second got off to a very good start but appears to be trying to cover too much at once since it deals with cancellations, postage stamps, private stamps, charity stamps, etc.

Amongst the German journals from Switzerland the Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung continues to hold the first place, particularly since its 23rd volume appeared in 1910 with a new editor and a new format. Apart from these we only need mention the semi-philatelic Weltpost and the outstanding Schweizerische Philatelistische Nachrichten from Zumstein which is devoted to the study of Swiss stamps in particular.

In the Netherlands the Nederlandsch Tijdschrift voor Postzegelkunde continues to hold first place. It is distinguished by technical articles of high quality and an outstanding section on new issues. The Nederlandsche Philatelist must be ranked somewhat lower, although it obviously strives to give its readers stimulation and information. The other Dutch magazines are mere advertising sheets or little better and do not deserve further mention.

In Scandinavia we find the two noteworthy rivals Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidskrift and Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift. Well behind them comes Skandinavisk Filatelistisk Tidstrift from Axel Henrikson in Odense which has many obstacles to overcome before it can rank amongst the leading journals.

England and America have sent over such a mass of journals that only the outstanding ones can be named here, especially since America is the land of ephemera. A whole number of journals is seen to disappear every year without any damage to philately. Outstanding in England are Ewen's Weekly Stamp News, a large-format weekly with extensive coverage and a very interesting text. Then comes Gibbons Stamp Weekly which, unfortunately, appeared for the last time in 1910 to be replaced by the former, and still excellent, [Stanley Gibbons] Monthly Journal plus the outstanding Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, Philatelic Record and London Philatelist all from London. From America comes the interesting Mekeels Weekly Stamp News and Redfield's Stamp Weekly and the recently revived Philatelic Journal of America, the slightly lower-rated bi-weekly Metropolitan Philatelist, the young but good Stamp Journal and, recently, also The Stamp Collector which deals in detail with American philatelic periodical literature, and the Philatelic Gazette the first 7 numbers of which have appeared. Practically all the others are of the second and third rank.

Of the English language journals from other countries we may mention The Hobbyist from Canada, the British Guiana Philatelic Journal from British Guiana which only appears twice a year, N.Z. Collectors Exchange from New Zealand, Philatelic Journal of India from British India, Australian Philatelist from New South Wales.

Worth particular mention is Journal of Philatelic Literature Society, a well produced quarterly from London which is devoted purely to philatelic literature.

If philatelic literature is any sure guide, philately is not so well established in the Latin countries as in the Germanic ones.

The best journal in France is still Collectionneur de Timbres Poste even after the death of the aged Arthur Maury. It has an aspiring rival in the Postillon from Alfred Montader, although sometimes his temperament gets in the way of his desire to serve philately. Echo de la Timbrologie has appeared fortnightly for 25 years and appears to consist of advertisements in the first place. What articles it publishes are always accurate and good. The Journal des Philatelistes from M. Lemaire, Paris, Revue Française des Collectionneurs, Revue Philatélique Française, Circulaire Philatelique, L'Amateur de Timbres-Poste can none of them be classed as first-rate. Le Timbre-Poste is better but it is much dearer than the comparable magazines in Germany or England. Revue de la Federation Philatélique de France is outstanding but only two issues appeared in 1910. Its parent society does not appear to have a distinguished past. It is whispered that the Société Française de Timbrologie would now rather fool around than advance philately!

Belgium also seems to have fallen back. After the well known Timbre-Poste and, later, Timbrologie Belge had disappeared the philatelic press was represented essentially by only two papers – L'Annonce Timbrologique and La Revue Postale from Brussels and Liege respectively. Neither of these was ever intended to deal with philately in the wider sense. They are filled with short announcements and revenue-earning advertisements.

French Switzerland remains even more problematic? What is going on when Revue Philatélique Suisse and Revue Postale appear?

Moreover, the Luxembourg Moniteur du Collectionneur has fallen off badly in size and contents. Today 3-4 double issues are appearing of a journal which some years ago appeared 12-20 times a year.

Other philatelic journals in the French language appear in Hungary, Turkey and Romania but they are advertising journals or little better and do not merit a description.

If we cast an eye on the Italian specialist press we, again, find a state of decadence. The good old Francobollo, the Filatelica from Rome, the Rivista Filatelica Internazionale from Milan and Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo from Bologna have disappeared long ago. They were all reckoned to be good philatelic journals. Rivista del Francobollo suffered an interruption after the death of Becchini. It remains to be seen whether the new owner Andrea Pulcini of Rome can reach at least the same level as his predecessor. A very promising start was made in 1909 by A. Fiechi of Milan with his Gazzetta dei Filatelisti but on the other hand all the other Italian periodicals that have appeared to date have been purely advertising journals or, like the new Francobollo from Turin, have a very modest scope.

In the 60s and 70s of last century, Italy and Austria had good magazines (Corriere dei Francobolli and Il Timbrofilo) but it has had none at all for a long time.

The centre of gravity of the Spanish philatelic press has shifted from the motherland to the New World. Philatelic literature in Spain was never qualitatively strong but quantitatively at least it was so. All that are appearing at present are Madrid Filatelico, El Filatelico Español and El Eco Postal, all three of no particular importance and typographically of poor quality. Much more valuable is the Revista de la Sciedad Filatelica Argentina even though it only appears six times a year. Moreover, Uruguay Postal, Tarapaca Filatelico, Matanzas Filatelica, Mexico Filatelico, Puerto Rio Filatelico and Revista del Circuto Filatelico de Cuba are not at all inferior to the periodicals of the Spanish motherland and, sometimes, surpass them. Admittedly the best South American Journals Colleccionista from Rosario de Santa Fe and its namesake from Colombia, El Sello from Chile and Guia del Colleccionista de Sellos de Correos from the same place have all disappeared some time ago. The disappearance in 1904 of the outstanding Anales de la Sociedad Filatelica Santiago from Chile is particularly to be regretted.

The Portuguese philatelic literature from the homeland was copious but not very valuable. Only Porto Philatelico and Revista Philatelica Portuguesa were of any significance. Today, a magazine having the same name as the latter is the only representative of the philatelic press in Portugal. Brazil use to have a whole series of outstanding philatelic journals but has none at all at present to the best of my knowledge.

The Greek philatelic press has come back to life and appears in the native language which means it is not understandable by foreigners. The Hungarians are concerned to serve philately in the mother tongue but this means they will not gain a wider readership even though Levelező-Tözsde, Magyar Bélyeggűjto and Magyar Bélyegűjsag may meet the needs of the land of the Magyars. Collectors in Hungary cannot avoid the use of German philatelic literature.

When it comes to the Slavic regions, Greater Russia no longer has any philatelic journals. German, English and French magazines are read there. The Czechs have their Césky Filatelista from Prague and the Poles their Filatelista from Cracow, two journals insignificant in size and content.

Editor's Note:

The author seems to have provided many of the periodical titles from memory and accordingly, some suffer from minor errors. Although I have corrected one or two of the most glaring errors, I have not attempted to check every title systematically as the periodicals should be easily recognisable

END

V. Suppantschitsch

Rarities of the philatelic periodical literature to the end of 1900

[Die seltenheiten der philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur bis ende 1900]

Der Philatelist, June 1903, Volume 24, Issue 6, pp.160-162; July, Issue 7, pp.194-196;

August/September, Issue 8/9, pp.229-230; October, Issue 10, pp.258-259;

November, Issue 11, pp.297-298; December, Issue 12, pp.330-331;

January 1904, Volume 25, Issue 1, p.8 & February, Issue 2, pp. 39-41

Also available as a reprint of 12pp.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

January 1999

RARITIES OF THE PHILATELIC PERIODICAL LITERATURE TO THE END OF 1900

Every large general or specialist library has its rare, very rare and unique items, and this is true for the large philatelic libraries as well. Today, when societies and collectors place a much higher value on philatelic literature than was the case ten or more years ago, and more and more attention is being paid to philatelic libraries, I think I shall do at least some of my readers a favour by describing my own experiences in the field described by the title of this article.

I have restricted myself to the periodical literature because the centre of gravity of philatelic literature rests on the journals. The amount written on philately in the subject periodicals is none than ten times the amount published in book form: moreover a great deal of the material that goes into book has been published first in the specialist magazines. This, if we look at the large philatelic library we shall find that by far the greatest part of its stock consists of magazines, and only a small part of books. This is true to a greater or lesser extent for the literature of all languages and countries.

I have the world's philatelic literature before my eyes as I write, and to deal with the material conveniently in values dividing it into groups, I think that the best way to do this is by language. The languages that come into question here are: German, French, English, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, Danish, Norwegian, Dutch and Rumanian. Magazines are also published in Swedish, Finnish, Greek, Hungarian, Russian, Polish, Czech and Bulgarian, but none of them are rarities so they can be left out of account.

I may state as a general rule that there are hardly any branches of technical literature which show so many rarities as the philatelic. There are two reasons for this. The first is that the bulk of philatelic literature consists of magazines, which are always much more likely to be put outside for further use. Moreover, it is often bound and put into a general library where it may get attention, whereas a single magazine tends to be in the way and get thrown out without reflection.

To this we must add the fact that our specialist press, unlike any other, has produced an enormous number of magazines which have not only failed to get as far as a single complete volume, but have folded after the appearance of only a few issues, or in many cases after one single issue. Hence, even if the odd collector here and there kept one of these magazines with the intention of getting it bound at the end of the volume and preserving it, he would be likely to throw it into the wastepaper basket when further issues failed to appear.

Our periodical literature contains several hundred of such “ephemera”, and form one large continent of rarities, especially in the German and English Language groups. The second reason must be the low value placed by collectors on philatelic literature. On the earliest decades of the development of philately nobody knows how to rate it, and this is also the reason why so little literary material has survived from those days. There were a few individuals, such as John K. Tiffany in the USA, Leoni in Italy, Bosredon in France, Moschkau in Germany and Dr Thebussem (Pardo de Figueroa) in Spain who took an interest in literature as early as the 70’s, and did not just collect it, but also classified it. However, by and large their work had almost no effect on collectors. Only in the USA did Tiffany’s example inspire other people to collect philatelic literature. There were only a few small libraries in Europe up to the beginning of the 1890s, most of them belonging to societies. This is why one tends to have so few examples from the early period of philatelic literature, especially the 1860s. That sometimes it is simply not possible to find out how many issues of particular magazines were published. This applies especially to the journals published in Great Britain: in the few years from 1862 to the end of 1869 at least 42 specialist journals were published there, of which 9 managed only one issue, 10 managed two, 5 three, 2 four, and the remainder more than that. AND even England, the cradle of periodical literature, paid the very slightest attention to preserving it, so that the magazines published in that country during the 1860s and 1870s are not just rare, they are often completely unobtainable. The Us, France, Italy, Spain and to some extent Germany as well started their bibliographies in the 1870s, were groping totally in the dark as regards the English literature till the start of the 1890s. My bibliographical papers in “Postwerth zeichenumde” of 1893 and “Austria Philatelist” in 1898, and J.K. Tiffany’s “English Stamp Publications” in the Stamp News Annual published by Theodor Bull and Co in London in 1894 were the first publications to shed light on this topic.

Since then a great interest in libraries has developed in England, and at the present time there is a considerable number of friends of literature who are teadiously trying to make up for past neglect and in particular to save as much of the old literature as is still available.

Moreover such of the English periodical literature as was still available was saught out assiduously by the foreign collectors, mainly American, so that today more is likely to be found abroad than in the land of its origin.

However, the purchase of Tiffany’s large library by the Earl of Crawford in London for the impressive price of 2,000 pounds sterling = 40,000 marks, meant that a large quantity returned to England, though it is now in private hands and unavailable for the foreseeable future.

Before I go on to clarify our periodical literature in terms of its rarity, I must point out that I have totally ignored their scientific value and have considered only the number of copies available, with some lesser attention to the ratio between supply and demand for the individual journals. There are journals which exist in large numbers but are still dear because they are in great demand, such as for example the first volumes of such outstanding English magazines as Stanley Gibbon’s Monthly Journal, Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, London Philatelist etc. These cannot really be classed as rare journals, whilst other magazines which were only acquired by a few large libraries are very rare, since only a few copies are in existence. My criterion is thus not value, but merely the more or less frequent occurrence of a journal.

I must also point out that it often happens with our periodical literature that certain issues of a given magazine are much rarer than all the others, or that a magazine itself is not at all scarce, but that a complete set of it, what the English call a "file", is very rare indeed. In the same way, individual numbers or complete volumes may be rare. The reason for this is that the publisher has printed certain issues of his magazine in increased numbers for advertising purposes, to attract subscribers or advertisers and the like, whereas other issues would only be printed in sufficient numbers to meet the subscriptions and carry the advertising received. Finally, when the publisher permits the sale of individual issues, it can happen that individual issues are bought by non-subscribers because of an outstanding article or for other reasons, and thrown away regardless once they have been read, while the publisher is left with a greater or smaller stock of other issues on his hands and permanently available.

The following account will relate only to rare journals, and I shall divide them into 3 groups, designed R,RR and RRR according to their degree of rarity.

A. Magazines In The German Language
 1. RRR

I take the rarest German magazine to be the "Philatelist" published by R. Skalweit in Mag De burg. This is a little magazine, of which issues appeared in a duplicated form over the period 10 April to 15 September 1886. I know nobody who has the complete set, mine is lacking no.1.

Next in order is "Regelmässigeu Markt- wud Wochen berichte der Hambirger, Lubecter and Brewer Briefmarken borse, published by Th. Muller in Hamburg in the year 1872. This magazine is produced by lithography with headings in typography, and appeared in 4 numbers from 1 to 22 September. It has been assumed so far that only 3 issues appeared, and I said as much on p.143 of my bibliography of the german Philatelic Literature, but in fact 4 numbers appeared. This is apparent from two notices in the Allgeweine Briefw-Auzeiger, no.25, v.1, October 1872, published by Rade macher in Hamburg. At the end of the second page of this contemporary, it sat under the heading "Miscellany": with no.3, , Hear Th. Muller gave the subscribers to his weekly market report a free stamp, to their great surprise. It was the green Sk Holle laud country post, which was described as anew a=issue a short while ago. No.4 gives the conclusion of some notes on the Philatelic Club (see correspondence" the editor writes:

The Hamburge Philatelic Club. Herr Th. Muller publishes a description of this club in No.4 of his weekly market report...etc."

Again, no complete set of this magazine is known to me. Herr Heirrich Fraenkel has no.s 1-3.

Now follow some magazines, of which only one complete set is known to me. They are:
Der Deutsche Briefwarkeusammler, published by the Spiro Brothers in Hamburg.

der Deutsche Briefwarkeusammler, published by G.Bauschko in Aussig (Bohemia), Der Duternationale PhilatelisteuFREUD, by O.Raphael in hyck;

Die Veieiusberichkte des Vereinguug Oldenburger Briefmarkeufreude, and Die Montalicheu Berichte, from C.Jacobs of Goslar.

The Spiro Brothers' Dier Deutsche Briefmarken- Sammler appeared in Hamburg in 3 numbers from 20 Nov. 1865 to 20 Feb 1865. I have if complete in my library, and do not know of any second example.

G. Bauschkes' Dier Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler was published in Aussig in the year 1869. Moschkau mentions 6 issues as appearing, in his notices of literature in Illustr. Briefmarken-Journal, and I repeated this in my own bibliography on the basis of his authority. However, I now have reasonable doubts about the correctness of this information, based justly on a remark in a contemporary journal, and secondly my own failure to detect the existence of more than three issues during my many years of research on literature.

C.Vau Riusu published an English-language journal, "The Continental Philatelic Magazine" in Amsterdam, on p.27 of the May 1869 issue the editor states, in a listing of new periodical literature, that he has received no.1 of the Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler from G.Bauschke in Aussig a.d. Elbe. On no.7 of 15. December 1869 in a note inserted amongst the adverts he states that both the "New England Journal of Philately" and "Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler" have ceased publication, and that both had published only three issues. The American journal, published by Hyford in Boston during 1869 certainly closed after three numbers, so there is no reason to doubt Van Rinsum's information relative to the Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler. I must accept that only three issues appeared. On this case the only complete set known to me is in the possession of Herr.H.Fraeukel in Berlin.

Only no.1, of 15 Jan.1882 of the International Philatelic-freud was known till Herr Henrich Fraeukel unearthed a second issue, dated 15 Feb, a few years ago. Probably he is again the only person to own it.

A very interesting item is the Vereius berichte der Vereinigung Oldenburger Briefmarken freude. 11 issues of this were published, on 16,19 and 26 January, 2,9 and 16 February, 1 March, 3 and 15 April, 1 May and 2 June (Holiday issue) 1889. titles; nos 1-6 consist of two pages and nos 7-11 of 4.

I do not know whether there are any complete sets apart from my own., but I doubt it.

The "Monatliche Berichte" from C.Jacobs of Goslar published 6 issues beginning on 15 March 1876. To the best of my knowledge, the only complete set is in the library of the Vindobona Austrian Philatelic Club in Vienna.

I would like to add to these two others, which are just as rare and little known. They are the "Vereiusbote, Hauptvereinsorgan des Vereins für Postwerthzeitheukuude in haibach", and the "Monatlichen Berichte" from L.Stein in Pilsen. The first of these is hectographed, and the second duplicated with a printed title. Both published only two numbers, the first on Jan 1 and 1 Feb. 1893, the second on 1 December 1893 and 1 January 1894. Both are in my possession.

More than two sets of the following journals are known to exist: "Briefmarkensammler, from o.Windisch in Nuremberg, and no.11 of "Deutsche Briefmarkenzeituug," the xxx. vol. which was published by E.W.Grosmann in Dresden in 1888.

The first of these is known to have been discovered by Dr.Emilio Diena in Rome at the beginning of the 1890s, and it appears I am the only person to have unearthed a second example. It seems to have appeared for the only time on 15th November 1864, and its format (46*29cm) puts it amongst the biggest philatelic journals. It is duplicated, and runs to 5 pages.

As for the “Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung”, the publisher of this put it out very irregularly from the year 1887 (vol.xxx). Nos 6,8 & 9 of this year failed to appear. Only a few issues appeared in 1888, namely 1,5,6 and 11; only numbers 1,4 and 5 in 1889, and only number 10 in 1890. Up to the current year, no.4 was known for 1887, and nos 1&11 for 1888, and No.1 for 1889. These were all found this year by Dr.Otto Rommel in Leipzig. The rarest of all these issues now is No.11 of 1888, as only two copies of it are known, one of which belongs to Dr.Rommel and the other to myself.

Another extremely rare issue is no.33 (the last one) of “Deutsche Briefmarken-zeitung”, from G.Schaubet. This was published in three volumes from October 1870 to 15 June 1873 in two editions (Dresden and Leipzig), and again it appeared irregularly during its last volume. Nos 19 and 30 did not appear at all. the last three issues were not sent to many subscribers, others assumed it had ceased with no.28 and did not bother to chase up the stragglers. This is the reason why many sets of this otherwise widely available journal are lacking the last three issues. The last issue, no.33, especially exists in only a few copies. The big library of the Internationale Philatelistenverein in Dresden has the issue in addition to myself.

It is also certain that only 2 complete sets exist of the “Vereinnachrichten Schlescher Briefmarken Sammler”, of Breslau. One belongs to Herr Heinrich Fraenkel and the other to the Tiffany Library, which also acquired it from Herr Fraenkel. 41 issues of this magazine appeared from 19 April 1876 to 15 October 1879, some being duplicated, some hectographed.

In the same way, it is not likely that more than 2 complete sets exist of the “Monatlichen Mittheilungen des Vereins der Freunde der brief-marken kunde zu Hildesheim”. Even the one in the Society’s own library is not as complete as mine, which contains all 73 numbers issued between January 1886 and the end of 1893, including the Society’s annual report. Some are duplicated and some hectographed. Some individual volumes and numbers are quite easy to obtain.

The following magazines also belong to this group: “Fliegende Blätter für deutsche Philatelisten”, published by E.Kastner in Vienna in the year 1884. This name was in fact well-deserved, since this consisted of loose sheets in the format of “Mittheilungen des Wiener Philatelistenclub”, vols I and II, lithographed without any date or issue numbers. The first to appear had only one side of text, the second had two. Probably there are only a few copies in existence.

“vertraulichen Mittheilungen” of the Vienna Philatelists’ Club, which I got to know and acquired myself in the year 1896. It was the forerunner of the later “Mittheilungen”, but was printed, and appeared in 3 issues from 15 April 1881 to 1 July 1882. Herr Heinrich Fraenkel owns this as well as me, who mentioned it in the “Deutsche briefmarkenzeitung” at a time however when I already owned it.

“Mittheilungen des Schweizer Philatelisten-Vereins”, of which only a single issue appeared in March 1884.

The magazine does not mention where the Society had its headquarters, but its papers of association give Olten as the place.

Apart from any examples which might turn up in Switzerland, I only know of those belonging to Lord Crawford and Herr Theodor Haas of Leipzig in addition to my own.

Again, only a few complete sets of the “Hamburger Briefmarken-Zeitung” are known. Vol.I, which has 12 issues from 1 Jan to 15Dec 1879, preceded by a trial issue for 15Nov. 1878 is quite often met with, but Vol.II, which covered 6 issues from 15th Jan to 20June 1880, can be found very few libraries, since the two lasting issues, nos.5 and 6 are amongst the greatest German rarities. I was only able to complete this volume two years ago through the kindness of the International Stamp dealers’ Society in Berlin, who let me have no.6 Herr Fraeukel and Lord Crawford also have complete sets, whilst a copy of no.6 is in the possession of the Vindbonda Austrian Philatelists’ Club.

One great rarity is a complete example of “Philatelistische Verkehr”, from Bohue of Leipzig. Most sets are lacking no.11 of the year 1880, which constitutes the second volume. This issue was not an independent magazine, but appeared as a supplement to “Neue philatelistische Blätter” from the same publisher, and is thus very rare.

It is also very hard nowadays to get hold of the 1886 (3 issues) and 1887 (14 issues) of “Sitzungsberichte des Internationalen Briefmarkenvereins” of Berlin. Only a very few copies of these can exist. This journal went on unnumbered to the end of 1889, and numbering began on the 6th January.

There is also “Union”, from A. Nieske of Dresden. This appeared from 1 Jan. 1877-1881 as a forerunner of “Philatelist”. The last volume consists of only two issues, 49 and 50, and these are very rare. Finally, this group includes the school magazines which were brought to light by me. They were produced in small numbers, are usually duplicated or hectographed, attracted little attention and were usually circulated only within school circles and thus only a few examples have survived.

The following are in my collection

Nachrichten des Briefmarkenclub Mercur, Muhlhausen

i. . Th., 1891, no. 1

Union, Zittau, 1889, nos. 1 – 12

Kosmas, Praue, 1891, nos. 1 - 3

Sammler, Bruchsal, 1890, no. 1

Globus, Berlin, 1891, nos. 1 – 12

Mitteilungen aus dem Philatelisten – Schulerverein, Bruchsal, 1891/2, nos. 1 – 5

Mitteilungen des Vereins “Chalmers”, Leipzig 1893 1 sheet

Vereinsbote, Stuttgart, 1892, 3 sheets

The only rare issue of “Philatelistische Jugend-Schrift” is vol. II 1893/4

II RR

The next group of journals can be classed as rare:-

- ♦ “Der Briefmarken-Auzeiger” from C.V. Cardona of Trieste, 1866 no. 1 (no. 2 was never published), and from A. Wildt of Carsel, 1870 no. 1
- ♦ “Briefmarkenfreund” by C.C. Mann of Leipzig, 1882 no. 1
- ♦ “Internationale Markenbörse” from A. von Degen, Baltimore, 1879 no. 1
- ♦ “Bukanester Philatelist” from Paucn & Markus, 1885 nos. 1 – 12

- ♦ “Philatelist” from Moschkan, Dresden 1872 nos. 1 – 2
- ♦ “Verfräntliche Mittheilungen des Deutschen Philat-Viereius” in Dresden, 1871 – 1875 nos. 1 – 4
- ♦ “Philatelistische Blätter” Leipzig 1874 nos. 1 – 6
- ♦ “Allgemeine Deutsche Briefun & Zeitung” from Rochan of Coburg, 1864 nos. 1 – 12
- ♦ “Borsenblatt für den Briefun-Handel” from Reichel of Kaufbeuren, 1864 nos. 1 – 12
- ♦ Finally, the two nos 1 of “Mittheilungen des Niener Philatelistenclub” of August and September 1882.

III R

Finally, the following must be classed as rare:-

- ♦ “Bazar für Briefunartenmarken-Sammler” from Faber of Heidelberg, 1869/70 nos. 1 – 11, particularly no. 2 which has a much bigger format.
- ♦ “Neue Philatelistische Blätter” from Bohne of Leipzig, 1879/80 nos. 1 – 3
- ♦ “Schweizerische Briefun-Zeitung” from E. Riesen of Schwanden, 1875/6, nos. 1 – 9
- ♦ “Illustrierter Briefun-Anzeiger” from A. Zschiesche of Leipzig, now Naumburg, 1882 to 1886 nos. 1 – 8
- ♦ “Dresdner Illustr. Briefun Journal” from Grossman, 1881/82 nos. 208 – 231, of which nos. 213 – 216 and 224 – 229 do not seem however to have appeared.
- ♦ On the whole, the “Allgemeine Briefun-Anzeiger” published by Rademacher in Hamburg, later by Grossmann in Dresden, with its continuations (Dresd.III.Br-Journal and Deutsche Br. Zeitung), amounting to 20 vols in all from 1871 to 1890 must be listed as amongst the rarer German magazines, especially the Dresdner Ill. Br.-Journal and the last years of the Deutsche Briefun-Zeitung. It should be noted, though, that Grossmann suddenly turned vol.XV into vol.XXVII and this mistake was carried on, so that the only issue known for 1890, no. 10, carries the volume number XXXII, which leads to a great deal of confusion.
- ♦ “Briefun Sammler” from Bauschke, Leipzig, 1866-1871, the last volume, VI, nos. 49 – 52, being particularly hard to find.
- ♦ “Vereinsmittheilungen” Zurich, 1884/5, nos. 1 – 12
- ♦ “Wiener Briefunarten-Journal” from A.V. Szabo, 1891, with a trial number dated 15 February and then nos. 1 – 7 from March to September. Number 1 of a new series appeared in 1893 and this is also not very frequently met with.

The following more recent magazines also belong in this group:-

- ♦ Vols. II and III of “Deutsche Briefunartenpost” from H. Freff of Barman, 1894 and 1895, nos. 1 – 20, if they are complete.
- ♦ The interesting “Briefmarken-Blatt” from R. Weiring of Hamburg, 1894/5, no. 1 – 5
- ♦ Vol. I of “Mittheilungen des Vereins ‘Mosel’” in Kirchberg, 1893 nos. 1 – 12
- ♦ No. 4 of “Neue Briefun.-Zeitung” from E. Grunsberg in Karlsbad dated October 1894, and
- ♦ Individual issues of “Universum” from Danth in Frankfurt a/M, especially nos. 147 and 148

It might certainly seem peculiar that such a relatively large number of German stamp magazines should be so rare but, nonetheless, there are reasons for this. It may very well be that one or more copies of the titles recorded here as rare are in the hands of collectors or other people and so long as they are not in the possession of specialists in literature they might as well not exist. One purpose of these columns is to prompt collectors and dealers to search out such items now lying forgotten in obscurity and put them into libraries.

Before I go on to deal with the overseas periodical literature, might I just say again that there are individual issues of German magazines which I have never managed to see and am thus inclined to doubt the existence of.

One such case is "Fortuna" from Wenzel of Coepenik. I have never managed to provide whether the following issues of this journal ever existing or not:

- ♦ Nos. 4, 5 and 6 of vol. II 1889
- ♦ No. 11 of vol. IV 1891
- ♦ Nos. 30, 32 and 35 of vol. V published by Bergmann in Oedenburg
- ♦ No. 6 of vol. VI 1892, and perhaps 1893.

I would be very grateful for definite information on these.

It should also be pointed out that up to the end of 1900, about 200 different magazines with a total of about 7,600 issues had been published in the German language.

B. MAGAZINES IN THE FRENCH LANGUAGE

The critical evaluation of the French periodical literature is not my aim here; the only one I shall mention is the magazine of all magazines, the "Timbre-Poste" of J.C. Moeus in Brussels which has been the guiding star of the entire philatelic press from the earliest days of our literature up to the end of 1900.

Over this period, about 150 different journals have been published in the French language, with a total of some 5,100 issues. The number of titles has increased quite extraordinarily, especially during the last few years. In the 30 years since the appearance of the first magazine on 15 February 1863 only about 60 journals relating to philately were produced, but in the 7 years from 1894 – 1900 another 90 appeared and steady growth is expected for the immediate future, however, the French periodical literature has relatively few rarities.

I. RRR

The rarest magazine must be the "Revue Philatliste" published by Pf. Geissendorf in Geneva. For a long time I was not even able to get a sight of this, as I did not know anyone who possessed even a single issue, but the publisher confirmed that at least 8 numbers appears from March 1887 onwards during that year. It was produced by hectography and meant only for young collectors which explains why it was never, or at least very rarely, kept.

After this comes "Intermediaire Timbrophilique" from A. Batifort of Marseilles. It is the continuation of "Timbrophile" from the same publisher. This also appeared in Marseilles in 3 numbers from 15 January to 15 March 1888, and is not particularly rare. However, nos. 4 and 5, 15 April and 15 May 1888 were published under the first title mentioned and are extremely rare. The only person known to me to possess them is Dr. A. Legrand of Neuilly.

To this category also belong:-

- ♦ “Collectionneur de Timbres” from Ch. Vincent in Hedeberg les Gand.
- ♦ “Bulletin de la Societe Timbrophile de Bruxelles”
- ♦ “Courier Philatelique” from T. Brandt of St. Imier, and the first series of
- ♦ “Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste” from A. Maury of Paris.

The first of these appeared in 6 numbers from April to September 1882. The second appeared in two numbers – November 1883 to January 1884. The “Courier Philatelique” covers 3 issues from 1 October to 1 December 1884: I have never yet managed to see a copy of no. 3 but am assured on good authority that it exists. As for the first edition of Maury’s “Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste”, it is extremely rare. Maury published the first three issues over the period from 15 July to 15 September 1864 in a large format. The second edition then appears on 15 September 1864 in a small format but was recast and pruned so that the 3 issues could be put together in one volume. Only a very few examples of the first edition have survived.

II RR

Foremost amongst these great rarities is the second edition of “Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste”, nos. 1 to 47, complete for June/October 1874. Simple issues of this are very rare and only a few libraries have it complete to the end of 1874. A break of ten years is then known to have occurred and it resumed in January 1885 in the smaller format with no. 51, and still appears in this form today. Numbers 48, 49 and 50 do not exist as magazines – they are simply price lists.

The “Ami du Collectionneur” also belongs in this group. It appeared as a supplement to the non-philatelic journal “Etoile d’ Italie” published by L. Quartini in Rome in the years 1876-1877, though nos. 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12 and 13 of “Etoile” do not include this supplement. A complete set is owned by the Library of the Dresdner Internationalen Philatelistenverein, amongst others. Finally there are:-

- ♦ “Moniteur des Timbrophiles” and
- ♦ “Philatelite Suisse”

The first was published by J. Chapelle in Gand and survived for 2 volumes. The first covers nos. 1 – 9 (15 April to 15 December 1882), the second covers nos. 1 – 6 (15 January to 15 June 1883). The second title also appeared in 2 volumes with 12 issues from 1 March 1888 to February 1889. Its publisher was Th. Geissendorf of Geneva.

III R

Finally, these are just rare:-

- ♦ “Amateur de la Timbrologie” from A.G. Machado in Rio de Janeiro, I, 1 – 3 from May to September
- ♦ “Ami du Timbrophile” from Netto & Almeida of Lisbon, with an unnumbered specimen issue dated 10 February 1888, then Vol. I, nos. 1 – 5 from 10 April to September 1888. The specimen issue is especially rare.
- ♦ “Commerçant de Timbres-Poste” from F. Servettaz of Geneva; the complete set is:-
 - I Nos. 1 – 12, 1 February 1885 to 1 February 1886
 - II Nos. 1 – 3, 15 April to 15 December 1886
 - III 1, 15 March 1887

- ♦ “Timbrolgie” from G. Carion in Paris, of which only a single issue appeared in November 1885
 - ♦ “Philatelite Universelle” from A. Boillat in Porrentrien, I, nos. 1 – 5 from June to October 1886, and the first edition of Vol. I of J.B. Maeu’s “Timbre-Poste” nos. 1 – 12 from 15 February to 31 December 1862. The first two numbers of this volume were reprinted in the year 1863 and the whole volume in the year 1867. The main difference between the two is that the first, rare edition, has 60 pages and the second, 55.

Of more recent journals, one that can be designated as rare is “Revue Francaise de la Philatelie Universelle” published by a Society in Chalon-sur-Saone, in 2 volumes with 7 numbers from 25 November 1891 to 25 May 1892.

It should be noted that I have never managed to establish whether a magazine called “Mulready” announced by van Weddingan of Brussels did actually appear, or when, and in how many issues.

C. MAGAZINES IN THE ITALIAN LANGUAGE

Stamp collecting took root much later in Italy than in England, France, Germany or North American, nor has it ever reached the same popularity as in these countries. This makes it obvious that literature and, especially periodical literature, not going much later there and has remained well behind that of the countries mentioned in abundance and importance.

The decade of the 1860s produced no magazines at all and, even during the 80s of last century, there were only 5 Italian language magazines. Moreover, two of these appeared in Austria, not Italy. By the end of 1893 there had been only 18 magazines with 271 issues. Since then there has been rather more activity in the magazine field, as by the end of 1900 about 18 more magazines have appeared with c.200 issues.

I. RRR

The rarest magazine must be the “Rivista della Stampa Filatelica” a paper which most lovers of literature can never even have seen. It was published in La Ciotat, a little harbour village between Marseilles and Toulon, i.e. in France, by L. Mori and is partly in Spanish as well – i.e. it is in Italian and Spanish. 22 issues are known, in 2 volumes as follows:-

- I, nos. 1 – 11 February to December 1883
- II, nos. 12 – 22 January 1884 to January 1886

I know of no-one who possesses the complete set. Drs. Diena and Legrand have the most issues in their collections.

After this come:-

- ♦ “Gioruale dei Collezionista” by Bonfiglio & Co., Palermo
- ♦ “Timbrofilo” from G.J. Morpurgo in Trieste,
and
- ♦ “Raccoglitori vom Deposito Centrale del Timbrofilo” in Florence

3 issues appeared of the first of these between 15 June and August 1880. The third consists of 7 issues from January to July 1875 and had, as a supplement, a catalogue “Catalogo e Guida Generale dei Francobolli, Marche da Bollo etc". This was planned on a large scale and, naturally, remained a fragment; it is also very rare. In the year 1874, a small magazine was put out under the same title as a specimen for a quarterly that E. Carlo Usigli, who also issued a catalogue, proposed to publish. However, it closed down after this first issue. This specimen is especially rare. Finally, the second one appeared in 5 numbers over the period from 12 May to 20 November 1876 with an unnumbered straggler following on 1 August 1877. This is also a great rarity.

II. RR

In the second line of rarities are:-

- ♦ "La Posta Mondiale" from P.R. de Torres in Leghorn – the oldest printed paper in the Italian language, and
- ♦ "Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo" from Leoni, Mignani and Tonolla, later from J.A. Lolli & Co., in Bologna, the latter only as a whole.

"Posta Mondiale" consists of 2 volumes as follows:-

I, nos. 1 – 5, July to December 1873

II, nos. 6 – 12, January to July 1874 and contains two coloured lithographic sheets of stamps, "Guida" on the other hand produced five volumes in the period from July 1876 to December 1880 with a total of 51 issues. Each issue had a coloured cover up to the last volume, which is the rarest. This magazine, too, began to publish, in the August-September issue of Vol. III, a supplement in the form of a catalogue with the title "Catalogo dei Francobolli Postali e Telegrafici emessi dal 1818 a Tutto il 1877" which, however, again remained unfinished. Numbers 16 and 17 contain the bibliography of Italian philatelic literature by Guiseppe Leoni.

III. R

Less important, but still rare, are "Corriere dei Francobolli" from Theodore L. Mayer in Trieste and, more recently, "Bollettino Filatelico" from E. Albini in Varruchio. The "Corriere", one of the best documented journals in the Italian language, lasted from 23 March 1875 to 8 April 1879 and racked up the respectable total of 52 numbers, 12 in the first two volumes, 11 in the third, 14 in the fourth and 3 in the fifth volume. In addition, nos. 7 – 12 of the second and the entire third volume had a supplement that could, however, be subscribed to separately and thus sent out on its own and not along with the magazine. The supplement to no. 10 of the second volume never seems to have been published. These supplements have a date later than that of the main volume to which they belong and are even rarer than the latter. It should be noted as a curiosity that nos. 11 and 12 of the fourth volume were confiscated by the Public Prosecutor and reprinted without the objectionable material. Not a single example of the suppressed copies has survived.

"Bollettino Filatelico" on the other hand only lasted till its third issue of 25 August 1892, with which it ceased publication. It contains notes in Italian, German, French, English and Spanish, and may be rare because it was sent out mainly to the Transvaal, Japan, Hawaii, Persia, Cape of Good Hope, India, etc; also because it was produced in limited numbers only.

D. MAGAZINES IN THE SPANISH LANGUAGE

The Spanish periodical literature got going relatively early, since in 1870 there was a magazine in Madrid devoted entirely to philately and called “Indicator de los Sellos”. However, after that the field remained barren as, up to the year 1880, only 5 magazines in all with 48 issues appeared and 3 of these, with 43 issues, came from South America and only 2, with 5 issues, from Europe. The number of periodicals did not begin to rise till after 1880; by the end of 1893 it had reached 46 titles with some 1,300 issues, though the lion’s share again came from America.

Here again there are a large number of magazines that only survived for one or a few issues and, as a result, the list of Spanish language journals contains many and great rarities.

I. RRR

Above all in this category we have:-

- ♦ “Filotelical Circular” from J. Perez in London
- ♦ “Indicator de los Sellos” from E. Gilabert in Madrid
- ♦ “Revista Filotelica” from J.N. Albornoz and J. Daws in Buenos Ayres
- ♦ “Collecionista de Sellos” from D.B.C. Cortes of Madrid
- ♦ “Anunciador” from E. Pardo of Bogota,
and
- ♦ “Revista del Mercado” from Usuga in Guayaquil

Hardly more than 1 – 2 copies exists of any of these magazines.

The first of these is of very special interest as it was put out by a Spanish dealer in London, in 9 issues, from January to December 1881. Moreover, its external appearance is quite exceptional, each issue consisting of a single sheet hectographed onto the sort of tissue paper used by salesmen for their duplicate books and carrying the form’s business heading “J. Joaquin Perez, 81 Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.4” in violet. I have a complete set but apart from this I know only of Herr Fraenkel in Berlin who has 5 – 6 issues and the former Tiffany Library and Mr. E.C. Bacon in London who have one number apiece.

The “Indicator de los Sellos” published only a single issue on 15 July 1870 and “Revista Filotelica” published just one on 1 August 1874. One does read occasionally that a second issue of this latter title was published but I do not think it was. Tiffany has only reported a single number “Collecionista de Sellos” appeared in 4 numbers from 15 February to 31 March 1871, whilst “Revista del Mercado” finished on its first issue of September 1881. “Anunciador” on the other hand lasted from March to December 1879 in 18 issues. I have seen none of these apart from “Filotelical Circular” and if any copies are in Europe they are most likely to be in the Tiffany Library.

II. RR

The next stage of rarity includes:-

- ♦ “Anunciador” by P.L. Orrantia in Bogota
- ♦ “Filotelista” by C. Villamil in Panama
- ♦ “Anunciador Filatelico” by Rivera of Bogota
- ♦ “Correo del Caribe” from Chumaceiro of Curacao, if complete
- ♦ “Filotelista” by J. Perez & Michelson of Bogota.
- ♦ “Heraldo Filatelico” by Posado of Bogota

- ♦ “La Voz” from C. Castelbondo of Baranquilla in complete volumes and of the more recent journals:-

- ♦ “Revista Filatelico of the C.P.” from Ast. Rodriquez of San Juan
- ♦ “Caracas Filatelico” from Th. De Arrendondo of Caracas, if complete “Anunciador” appeared in 4 issues from June to 11 August 1882 in a 22 x 34 cent format, consisting of 2 pages, only one of which was printed. It is purely an advertising journal. Number 3 is printed in a green colour.

Villamil’s “Filatelista” published 7 issues over the period from 1 August 1886 to May 1887.

“Anunciador Filatelico” appeared for the first time in April 1882 and finished with no. 5 of August 1882.

“Correo del Baribe” began on 10 February 1891 and put out its last issued, no. 15, on 10 April 1892. The first volume contains 12 issues, the second only 3.

The Bogota “Filotelista” was published by the same J. Perez who later put out the “Filotelical Circular” in London in the year 1881. This one appears in 7 issues from 20 January to 20 July 1880 in conjunction with Dr. Michelsen, currently in Hamburg.

“Heraldo Filatelico” survived for only 4 issues from 15 October 1886 to 16 January 1887. On the other hand “La Voz” had a much longer life, since whilst it was a philatelic journal it published 3 volumes with 34 numbers, the first of which appeared on 15 February 1888 and the last on 25 December 1891. Later numbers did appear but without philatelic content. Only a single issue exists of “Revista Filatelica de la CP.” dated 1 June 1893.

Finally, “Caracas Filatelico” has 11 issues – so far as I know – running from 21 April 1894 to February 1895.

III. R

In the third rank we get:-

- ♦ “Ecuador Filotelico” from Tama of Guayacqui
- ♦ “Mercurio” from H.B. Miller of Lima
- ♦ “Filatelico del Peru” from V. Perron in Arequipa
- ♦ “Filotelico” from Vos-Schottborgh of St. Domingo
- ♦ “Progreso Filotelico” from L. de Castro in Bogota
- ♦ “Rivista Filatelica” from G. Schoonewolf of Baranquilla and from the more recent period:-

- ♦ “Estrella Filatelica de Chile” from M. Cruzat of Santiago
- ♦ “Revista Filatelica” from C.N. Mekeeh in St. Louis
- ♦ “Opinion Filatelica Chiklena” from J.J. Vives-Solar of Santiago

“Ecuador” is one of the few South American magazines that kept going for a complete volume. The first volume includes 12 numbers from 31 January to December 1886, the second includes only numbers 13 and 14 from January and February 1887.

“Revista Filotelica” also went to 20 issues:

Vol. I, nos. 1 – 12 from September 1887 to August 1888

Vol. II, nos 13 – 20 from September 1888 to April 1889

Two volumes also exist of “Filotelico”. The first appeared in 12 issues from January to December 1885 and the second in two issues, January and February 1886.

“Estrella” on the other hand has two volumes but only 11 issues; 1 – 7 of 15 June to 20 December 1892 make up the first volume, and 8 – 11 of 20 January to 20 April 1893 make up the second.

“Revista Filatelica” is worthy of note since this magazine was published in North America which is totally English. The world-famous philatelic publisher, C.H. Mekeel of St. Louis, permitted himself this extravagance. However, this magazine did not have long life. It lasted from 1 May 1892 to May 1895, i.e. less than three years, in three volumes which, however, only amounted to 21 issues in all. It was aimed principally at South America and, as a result, is little known in North America and Europe.

The rest of these magazines only reached a few issues; “Mercurio” 5 from 15 October 1886 to 15 March 1887, “Filatelico del Peru” 9 from 1 May 1893 to 31 January 1894, “Progreso Filatelico” a single issue dated 1 January 1887, and “Opinion Filotelico Chilena” approximately 10, the first of which was published on 1 July 1894.

As a rule, magazines published in South America, whether in Spanish or Portuguese are, more or less, hard to get hold of, those of very recent date not excepted. Even in Europe these magazines find few subscribers and so only odd issues have made their way here, sent by the publisher in the hope of getting an exchange, or for advertising purposes.

E. MAGAZINES IN THE PORTUGUESE LANGUAGE

The Portuguese language, which is only spoken in Brazil apart from Portugal and its colonies, made its first appearance in the philatelic press world only in the year 1882 and it was Brazil where the first specialist magazine appeared. Since then there have been some 30 magazines in this language with roughly 480 issues. Although all the older magazines are more or less hard to get hold of, the only ones to rate the classification are the following:-

I. RRR

- ♦ “Brazil Philatelico” by L. Levy of Sao Paulo in Brazil; only 3 numbers appears from January to March 1882
- ♦ “Philatelista” produced by the Philatelic Society of Porto Allegro, with 7 issues from January to July 1888.
- ♦ “Gazeta Filatelica” by A. Borgies Monteiro in Rio de Janeiro. This journal, of which only a single issue dated 15 November 1892 exists, was written in Portuguese and French.

Next came:

II. RR

- ♦ “Brazil Postal” by A.M. de Souza of Rio de Janeiro – 13 number of this were issued over the period 14 July 1890 to July 1891
- ♦ “Philatelia” by A.E. de Mellor of Campo – one single issue dated 15 July 1894

Finally, these are still rare:-

III. R

The first series of:-

- ♦ “Philatelist” from the well-known Lisbon dealer F. Martin, this cover 2 volumes, namely:-
 - I, nos. 1 – 9 April-December 1887
 - II, nos 10 – 14 January-August 1888and
- ♦ “Philatelist” from F. Toudella of Pernambuco, which also published 15 issues in 2 volumes over the period from 15 October 1890 to December 1891

Hence, with one exception, all the rarities originate in Brazil.

F. MAGAZINES IN THE DUTCH LANGUAGE

Holland began its journalistic activity in the year 1885. There is, in fact, talk about a nebulous magazine that appeared in Dutch as early as 1869 with the title “De Timbrophilist” – a real “Flying Dutchman” and I personally think this phantom ship is as likely to turn up as the magazine. It was supposedly published by the well-known dealer and album producer, C. van Rinsum, then located in Amsterdam and the fact is that the appearance of this magazine was announced for July 1869 in nos. 5, 6 and 7 of “Continental Philatelic Magazine” from the same publisher. However, I still think it never actually appeared. My reasons for this are;

Firstly, Tiffany states in his standard work “Philatelic Library”, St. Louis, 1874, p.30, that he has had it confirmed that this journal never appeared. This is particularly important since Tiffany was a dedicated and methodical researcher and it would have been relatively easy to check up on the existence of this magazine in the year 1874. and find out if it had actually come to life. Moreover, in all the decades I have been dealing with philatelic literature I have never managed to get hold of a single copy, or hear of one being sold. I must not keep quiet about the following either. Tiffany got in touch with me in 1896 to ask if I knew anything about the existence of “De Timbrophilist”. This prompted me to get in touch direct with Rinsum who was then living in Dieppe. Rinsum replied that he magazine had actually appeared in 13 issues, of which he still possessed a complete set. When I asked him to sell it me he explained after a good deal of to-and-froing that he could not find it, whilst offering to sell me his other creations “Continental Philatelic Magazine” and “General Stamp Advertiser” both rarities of the first rank, along with other very old magazines, without more ado. Now in my experience, if “De Timbrophilist” had really appeared in 13 issues it would have been quite impossible for it to vanish completely without trace, so that not even Tiffany, who was collecting literature in the ‘60s, could confirm it had ever existed.

Perhaps these lines will prompt someone with information about this to clear the matter up, for which we pressophilists will be very grateful.

If “De Timbrophilist” had existed it would have deserved the RRR rating. The following can only be rated:-

II. RR

The first five duplicated numbers of

- ♦ “Nederlandsch Tijdschrift voor Postzegelkunde” published by the Philatelic Society of Amsterdam from 8t August to December 1884 and scarcely obtainable to day,
- and
- ♦ “Postzegel” from C.A.D. Steenmeyer of Amsterdam, the first number of which appeared in October (probably on the 30th). So far I have not been able to discover the exact life of this interesting magazine.

III. R

The one rare item remaining is:-

- ♦ “Maanblad der Afdeeling Utredt etc” published by Joh. A. Moesman. One specimen issue and at least 9 other numbers of this had appeared by the end of 1896. This magazine too is duplicated and only relatively few copies were introduced.

A total of 10 magazines with approximately 400 issues have appeared to the end of 1900.

G. MAGAZINES IN SCANDINAVIAN LANGUAGES

The Scandinavian periodical literature got going very early, as early as the year 1867, in the dawn of antiquity as one might say, with a magazine that now ranks with the greatest rarities and, moreover, is outstanding in content for its period. Unfortunately it was the only one and up to the year 1886 there were two gaps of approximately 8 years each in which the Scandinavian languages made no contribution to the periodical literature. These languages were not stabilised into the specialist literature until 1886.

I. RRR

The rarest magazine is thus:-

- ♦ “Nordisk Frimeerke Tidende” from K. Lund of Copenhagen. This appeared in 12 issues from 26 August 1867 to 30 June 1868. It should be noted that it contained interesting bibliographic articles.

II. RR

Three magazines fall into this group, they are:-

- ♦ “Skandinavist Frimeaert Tidende” 15 issues of which appeared in the period from 15 October 1876 to 15 December 1877 (publisher Arthur Philipsen, Copenhagen)
- ♦ “Skandinavist Frimaerke Journal” published by Fr. Bertini, also in Copenhagen and consisting of:-
 - Vol. I, nos. 1 – 3, 20 October to 20 December 1876
 - Vol II, nos. 4 – 8, 10 January to May 1877
- ♦ “Nordist Frimaerkeverden” from Emil Jensen and S. Schmidt, also of Copenhagen. Only 4 numbers of this were issued, the first on 1 January, the last on 15 April 1878.

The largest group is:-

III. R

- ♦ “Skandinavist Frimaerke Tidende” originally published by Th. Knudsen and N. Moller Kroman in Sonderho, then later by H. Rhode in Copenhagen. It consists of:-
 - Vol. I, nos. 1 – 12, 31 October 1890 to 30 September 1891
 - Vol. II, nos. 1 – 12, 30 October 1891 to 30 September 1892
 - Vol. III, nos. 1 – 12, 30 October 1892 to 30 September 1893The last issue of the third volume was recently reported by Dr. Rommel.
- ♦ “Philatelist Journal” by A. Petersen of Nike, 2 issues dated 20 April and 20 May 1894
- ♦ “Filatelisten” by Martin Holm of Aalesund, the existence of only two numbers of which (10 May and 10 June 1894) has been confirmed
- ♦ “Frimaerke Handleres of Samleres Advertissements Haefte” from Danielson of Aarhus, at least one issue of which appeared in May or June 1894, and
- ♦ “Finska Filatelisten” published by the Helsinki Stamp Collectors’ Socieity.

Until a short time ago, only the specimen issue 0, of December 1894, was known. Only in July 1903 did Dr. Rommel report that a further 9 issues had appeared from February to December of 1895 and, also, that two issues appeared as Vol. II in the year 1896.

The total Scandinavian periodical literature amounts to 23 magazines with roughly 430 numbers.

II. MAGAZINES IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE

Of these, the ones under the sub-heading (a) were published in the United Kingdom, those under the sub-heading (b) in North American and those under (c) in other places.

The number of magazines published in English in Great Britain and North American is very large and the number of rarities is very considerable for the reasons set out at the beginning of this article. If I were to deal with these in the same way as the rarities in other languages I would far exceed the space available in this magazine.

Hence I will limited myself this time to dealing with the rarities in sub-division (c) and will turn to those in (a) and (b) in a later article. However, I should make the general remark that the philatelic literature in English is by far the most in demand all over the world, that the number of literature collections in English and North America is five times greater than that in the rest of the world put together and that, in fact, only the literature in English command any place on the world market.

The magazines in sub-group (c) are as follows:-

I. RRR

- ♦ “Continental Philatelic Magazine” from C. van Rinsum of Amsterdam, which I have already mentioned. This appeared in 8 issues from February 1869 to 15 January 1870, the last two of which are designated as a new series. It is written in rather unorthodox English.

- ♦ “General Stamp Advertiser” from the same publisher. Only a single number appeared dated 1 June 1870.
- ♦ “Australian Stamp Collectors’ Journal” from Stanley of Adelaide, 4 issues from November 1879 to February 1880, and
- ♦ “New Zealand Stamp Collectors’ Quarterly” from F.A. Hendersen in Auckland, also a one-off, dated October 1880.

II. RR

In this are:-

- ♦ “New South Wales Stamp Collectors’ Magazine”. This was published by Buckley, Blunsum & Co., in Sydney, in 3 numbers from 1 November 1879 to April 1881, following by a single issue of a New Series published by D. Vindin in August 1882.
- ♦ “Philatelic Times” by F. Moore & Co., and F.A. Hendersen & Co., in Auckland, 2 issues from May to July 1881.

III. R

Finally, the rare titles are:-

- ♦ “Oceanic” published by the Stamp Publishing Co., in Honolulu on the Sandwich Islands in 4 issues, the first of which has no date and the last is dated May 1889.
- ♦ “Australian Stamp News” from J.E. Newell Bull in Gualda. I know of an 1893/94 volume in 4 numbers and odd issues of a new series from the year 1898.

Before I close, I should point out that by no means all the magazines I have failed to mention here are easy to obtain but, in my experience, the ones I have mentioned are the valuable items of philatelic literature apart, naturally, from sub-groups (a) and (b) of the English Magazines which have not been dealt with this time.

The author would be grateful for any clarifications or corrections:

END

S. de V.

Serious bibliography

[Bibliographie sérieuse]

La Circulaire Philatèlique, October/November 1930, Volume 20, Whole number 208,
pp.167-168

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 2000

SERIOUS BIBLIOGRAPHY

What was Philately in 1867? Many collectors do not know. However a work of documentation which goes into this question in detail has just been published under this title by Yvert and Co. of Amiens, with the care they habitually take over the preparation of philatelic works.

The author of this historical and anecdotal work is not just anybody! For it is M.Georges Brunel, Laureate of the Académie Française, President of the Société de Bibliographie, and one of our most distinguished philatelists – stamp collectors. He is, I believe, one of the best and most prolific of the good French writers on philately.

“What was Philately in 1867?” takes the form of a handsome pamphlet, illustrated by 7 engravings and the portraits of celebrated philatelists of the past: Herpin, Dr.Legrand, Martin Caillebotte, Philippe de Ferrari, Berger – Levrault, Moeus, de Saulay and Pierre Mahé.

The author reveals at the outset that he has personally known the personages mentioned in his work. There can hardly be any other philatelists in this situation. As a young man, I had the honour of making the acquaintance of Doctor Legrand (Doctor Magnus) : “The founder of philatelic science” as M.Georges Brunel so rightly call him (p.aa of his work); and I always took the wise advice of this old and learned master as my guide in philately. Later on, I was in steady correspondence with M.Pierre Mahé, and moreover some time before his death I drew up. The bibliographical notice published by the C.P., with portraits at different ages on the basis of originals supplied by M.Pierre Mahé himself. I thus read with emotion what M.Georges Brunel has to say in an elegant and clear style about the philatelic curriculum vitae of these two real stamp-loving philatelists, amongst other people mentioned in the work. I was sorry not to find in it the portrait of Father Maury, whom along with M.Ch.hemierre I got to know about 1902 in connection with the shady activities of certain amateurs who were apparently already trying to corner philately for their own profit. It was premature to say the least at that period.

But the name of Arthur Maury is not passed over in silence in this work: for (p.29) the author does full justice to the memory of this eminent professional in philately by saying that “he was a pleasant and courteous person, an unremitting worker with a good deal of feeling for the relevant who controlled his tongue sufficiently to produce interesting articles from time to time”...

The brief account I have given of this excellent and useful new work by M.Georges Brunel will, I hope, inspire all subscribers to the C.P. to get hold of it, and they will certainly not regret their purchase. Moreover, faithful subscribers to C.P. to get hold of it, and they will have known for quite a time that when I talk about a philatelic work I have taken care to read it through previously, which I do believe is not the case with everyone who writes reviews on philatelic bibliography.

S de V

A type of philatelic work not previously published in France has just been put on sale by M.H. Chirice, 76, Rue Bannier, Orleans. It is the Annuaire de la Philatélie postal rates for ordinary and special stamps, the value of foreign money, a list of philatelic periodicals, groups, societies or philatelic circles, federations, syndicates etc. the Company of Experts; and even (or above all) – “houi soit qui mal y pense” – a list of members of the Académie de Philatélie in Paris.

The addresses are grouped by departments and towns in the case of France, and by towns for other countries.

Of the list of French philatelic journals I noted that the oldest are: “Le Collectionneur de timbres – Poste” (66H. year); “L’Echo de la Timbrologie” (44th year); “La Circulaire Philatélique” (32nd yr) and “L’Echangiste Universel” (23rd year). Unless I am mistaken, France holds the record for the Longevity of its philatelic periodicals.

The numerous subscribers to C.P). who will certainly buy this annual (if only to encourage the editor and support a publication which fills a gap) will doubtless not find all their names there – mine is not in for one - ; but there is nothing to prevent them getting it put into the next edition, if they really want to...

Finally I see nothing to criticise in this Annual; but I think it would be very useful if the editor could give next time the names or possible the pseudonyms of philatelic writers who really have as much right to appear in a philatelic annual as most of the other philatelists.

S de V

END

Giovanni Riggi

Analysis of a degradation

[Analyse d'une dégradation]

Catalogo 3, Prima Mostra Mondiale di Letteratura Filatelica - Milano '82., Milan, Italy, 1982, pp.41-42

The original version in Italian: Analisi di un degrado, is available on pages 39-40

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 2000 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

ANALYSIS OF A DEGRADATION

The gigantic process of self-advancement begun over the course of centuries by Homo Primigenious, carried on by Erectus, passed on to Sapiens and then to Technologius is oddly related to the support* of signing and marking, a support which has become steadily more delicate and fragile as the tale to be told became more complex and confused. Right from its birth, the support has enabled the history of adventures, the arms and the armours of men to be transmitted to posterity in a manner which increased their strength and their technology, moving towards a millenary future in different shapes and forms that varied from rough stone to the soft, shining, supple paper on which we are busy writing these reflections.

* Translator's note: It would appear that the "support" referred to is that material which is written on.)

Thus as a first analysis the study of the "support for signing" is the mirror of civilisation and its expansion in the knowledge of the people; it also suggests today's sudden explosion of the need for communication and - with other reasons - accounts for the outset of a natural decline in quality which has become obvious very recently and has received attentive and alarmed study over the last few years. In line with the succession of outstanding historical events, stone, papyrus, parchment and paper have appeared in a sequence in the general historical development of a continuous and often unpredictable future. The most cruel and bloody events on our journey have often created an urgent need for written communication on the part of either the victor or the vanquished, whilst religion and magic, love and death, fantasy and poetry have all displaced interest from meditation and given to the constantly increasing numbers of mankind the art of narration and roused in them the pleasure/right/duty of expressing in graffiti: and signs-primitive or highly developed - the most important facts and disturbing feelings of their lives.

Entreaties, ignoble and unworthy political troubles, and wars, wars, above all wars more than any other event have encouraged the discoveries and technologies needed to dominate neighbours and adversaries, whereas culture, science and peace have contributed to the refinement of the finished product, which itself when all is said and done is aimed at the domination and submission of friends and allies. This type of technological process has been studied historically in all domains of science, and is also common in the case of paper, which today dominates world affairs and often upsets us by its forced intrusion into our intimate and private surroundings. The explosion of the mass media and the bureaucracy, particularly at our latitudes, has educated increasingly more vast strata of population, whilst favouring literacy, and curiosity about it in people at a lower stage of technical development. Today more than ever we read and write.

The need to know, as quickly as possible and by the best means possible, is perhaps the outstanding heritage of the last century: This has left resourceless many people and many governments whose entire budgets have been absorbed - to a proportional amount - according to their possession or non-possession of cellulose or the exhaustive direction of their communications network, an irreplaceable element for man's information and confrontation with the cultural level of modern nations. However, with the continued repetition of situations, and an increased consumption does not mean only a reduction in the unit price, but also a decrease in the quality of finished or standard products. A frenzy for knowledge will not mean only an increase in one's cultural patrimony, but also a sudden replacement of things hardly used - and at the logical end of the process - we must conclude that a higher rate of consumption means a lower quality, and a lower quality is the index of highly perishable goods. Thus the reduction in unit price, consumption linked to an increasing demand, the need for literacy, the speed and rapid decay of information, the increase in demand for a quality product, are the immediate and obvious causes of the degradation of the printing paper over these last years.

There are also anarchic technologies, certain types of secretly blameworthy productions unimpeachable from the aesthetic point of view but having undeclared defects, under trademarks - often of multinationals - which have for years increased our lack of control and our absence of knowledge of the degradation taking place within the realm of paper: and still air and water, heaven and earth, people and things are covered and filled with toxic residues, powders and liquids with unknown secondary effects, and poisonous fumes from other urgent technologies, and all these have done the job with almost universal agreement but on the sly and so no-one has got to know.

In spite of all we have just said, we still have precious incunabula, Egyptian papyri and engraved tablets which could with simple precautions be a patrimony for us all and will be the same for posterity, but at the same time we have modern texts which are very numerous, polyhedral, polychromatic, polyglot, polytechnic, polydisciplinary which have become our patrimony and ours alone, and not the heritage of our descendants more or less removed in time. The process of degradation recently revealed by laboratory studies on cellulose up to science-fiction limits have shown how much better ancient pulps last than the modern ones, and show us what route we should follow from now on.

Multitudes of people are now coming to grips with the delicate art of writing, but if they wish to leave the large or small harvest of their maturity to succeeding apes, they will have to learn not to give in to the blandishments of reduced prices or miracle technologies and they more than anyone must denounce to the whole world the formulas for the global degradation which is killing us a little more every day.

Translator's note: This reads to me like a remarkably incompetent translation from the Italian original: in parts it is almost impossible to sort out what he is about. But it probably doesn't matter as he has obviously not got any particular point to make, except that cheap paper and pollution are not good things.

END

KOCH, Alfred

Literature on the German postal system, 1871-1964

[Schrifttum Über das Deutsch Postwesen 1871-1964]

R. v. Decker's Verlag, G. Schenck, Hamburg-Berlin, Germany, 1996, pp.v & vii

(Translation of the introductory text only)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1999

LITERATURE ON THE GERMAN POSTAL SYSTEM, 1871-1964

PREFACE

The present bibliography, "Literature on the German Postal System, 1871 to 1964", forms a third part to the two bibliographies compiled by Hermann WOLPERT (Stuttgart): "Literature on the German Postal System. Part 1: from the beginning of the 16th century to the end of the holy Roman Empire (1806)", published in "Arcive fur das Post – und Fernmeldwesen", Frankfurt – au – Main, 1950, no.7, pp.465 – 585, and "Part 2: from the end of the Holy Roman Empire (1806) to the founding of the German Empire (1870), in "Archiv fur das Post – und Fernmeldewesen", Frankfurt – am – Main, 1952, no.4, pp.177 – 272.

Because of its size, the third part has not been published in "Archiv fur das post – und Fernmeldewesen". It will appear in collaboration with the new "Zentralstelle der Deutschen Bundespost für Dokumentation und information" (Darmstadt). It covers the period from the foundation of the German Empire (1871) to the collapse of the Third Reich (8.5 1945), from the reconstruction of the German Post Office in the partitioned Germany (May 1945), from the reconstruction of the German Federal Post (1950), and then up to 31st December 1964 (c.4500 bibliographic data).

I have to thank the librarians of the Federal Ministry for Posts and Telephones, the German Federal Post, the Federal postal Museum at Frankfurt – au – main, the general managers of the Austrian and Swiss postal and telegraph undertakings, and the Central Office of Postal Technology for their friendly advice and the generous use of their collections. Particular thanks are due to Dr. GERSTENKORN, the director, and Herr Schulz, head of information, in the library of the Federal Ministry for Posts and Telephones for their essential help with my work.

Bonn, December 1966.

ALFRED KOCH

Contents

A. Literature with details of author	1
B. Literature without details of author	86
C. Route maps, railway guides, postal schedules etc	160
D. Index of personal names	166

E. Index of places	187
F. Subject index	215
G. Supplement	321

The “Bibliography of the German postal System, 1871 – 1964” covers.

1. Literature on the German Postal system, German postal history and the World Postal Union
2. Literature on transport and means of communication with respect to the postal system
3. Postal law, postal regulations, conditions of service and personnel management
4. Statistics, commercial and administrative reports, commercial plans.
5. Training and instruction manuals
6. Postal manuals, handbooks, calendars and pocket books
7. Foreign – language training and instruction manuals, and dictionaries
8. Official timetables and route maps
9. Local guide books, local directories and commercial directories
10. Items on stamps of historical interest.

END

Ulrich Häger

Quo vadis - philatelic literature?

[Quo vadis – philatelistische literatur?]

Sammler-Dienst, 25th April 1964, Volume 15, Issue 9, pp.446-447;

9th May, Issue 10, pp.504-506 & 23rd May, Issue 11, pp.561-564

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999

QUO VADIS - PHILATELIC LITERATURE?

The heretical thoughts of a philatelist who may be past it

Part 21/1962 of SAMMLER-DIENST gave a report on the development of philatelic literature, as far as that is possible within the confines of a magazine article, and Parts 9 and 10 of 1963 gave a description of a 00 year old stamp catalogue. This all showed on the one hand that German language literature once had a high reputation amongst readers all over the world but declined in importance from the beginning of the 2nd world War (with the exception of the continuation of the KOHL handbook by Hans von Rudolphi, and a few other items). On the other hand, the praise of classical literature as embodied in a catalogue from 1863 receives a check, since this was not only full of gaps, but the details of the values and colours of the stamps included abound with so many striking mistakes that the author can never have seen the stamps as originals and must have obtained his data at second-hand.

Defective writings help no collector, unfortunately however the gaps in, or even the total uselessness of, a catalogue or a book glittering with beautiful illustrations only comes to light after it has been purchased. This kind of disappointment must naturally have happened often in the early days of philatelic literature; new ground was being broken and usually the author had only the material directly to hand for his researches. There were no international journals, and for many years no original material either. However, both are needed even to deal with domestic postal services, since many documents important for philatelic research were sent abroad in the form of stamps and cancellations etc, and kept on going, so that many research topics called for international collecting, or at least the perusal of foreign literature in all its forms. When faulty, or to be more exact, unserviceable books appeared later on, this was simply unavoidable from the restricted standpoint chosen.

However, is it still unavoidable today: can or should the collector accept faulty new publications and make do with them? Every reasonable thinker must answer this with a categorical no. If it seems necessary, the bookshelves must remain empty, since philately – in so far as it relates to the study of postal undertakings, the investigation of the often inadequately documented methods of producing stamps, the use of cancellations etc – is now a science on a level with other arts and sciences (even though it is alas often still sneered at).

Does this mean that many philatelic books should remain unwritten, since they can only deal with part of a wide complex of questions, or patchily with a given subject, since the number of records or published results available for analysis is still too small. This is indeed the case for research present and future. Moreover in many cases a research topic can never be pursued completely to its end, since fresh evidence may suddenly pop up and make everything that has been written before either incomplete, or even totally wrong. However, nobody would actually think to? leave such books unprinted, or consign them right away to the rubbish heap. How many themes in science have first been set going by incorrect writings, how much can be determined more accurately by checking the contents of a book, and how many new paths have been opened in this way.

There are many examples of this in philately and its associated literature. Literature cannot be condemned root and branch as an aid to the progress of research, since it either forms the basis for fresh researches or enable new results to be properly classified. For example, the Kohl handbook is no longer authoritative in many respects today, but it will be one of the standard works on philately for all time. And if Dr. Munk, who was really unique in his own line as responsible editor, were still alive, he would gratefully accept every additional information and correction, use them in supplements or new editions and make them generally available.

Literature of the scientific type can, nay must, have gaps and defects! Only in details, though, in a lack of information on a still unknown cancellation and the like. The basis of the work, the general information on the events of the past or present times, must offer a solid and error-free foundation.

Even in philately it is rarely possible for one person to know everything and research into everything.

Often several thousand little building bricks go to make up one comprehensive (not always definitive) handbook or catalogue. And these little building bricks, in the shape of typefaces, colours, and plate defects for stamps, and dates of application for cancellations, may be scattered all over the world in the albums of collectors who simply do not know or suspect that they have in their collection the one item that could make a decisive contribution to the progress or settlement of a piece of research. Too few collectors look at any literature apart from catalogues or else language difficulties make it impossible for them to use it.

Since stamps, cancellations and other items important in philately are not preserved in museums to the extent that the material of other sciences is, many questions remain unanswered entirely, as for many years. The postal authorities of many countries have begun to take more and more interest in setting up postal museums, whose contents frequently have a stimulating effect on philatelic research and literature unfortunately however only a few philatelists manage to penetrate into the “holy of holies” of these postal museums, since there are no university professors or people well-known in the popular press to evaluate the contents of these treasures and perhaps even make them known. Official bodies frequently tend to be much too cool to requests from philatelic societies.

However, many philatelists do the same, thinking only of themselves or remaining anonymous so that the literature has always suffered.

Well-to-do collectors (often they are only “also – collectors”) have assembled the most valuable collections which they keep safely locked up for tax reasons. The owner lacks the time, possibly even the interest and patience, to arrange his treasure properly or put it to any scientific use. Collections of this type are built up not just by purchases at auctions (where researchers would at least have pictures of the stamps and cancellations) which would be useful for the literature, but are also acquired privately. The collections remain in concealment - they even shun the light of exhibitions – and vanish into obscurity again after being sold.

Only rarely can the owners of large collections (in the sense of simultaneously extensive and valuable) also be reckoned as true philatelists, since they lack the time for intensive study of their stamps, but they can make their treasures available to other people for study and so enrich the literature. Some proof of reservation by wealthy collectors (coupled with the fear of becoming known to the tax officials as stamp collectors) was given by the uncommonly interesting, exciting and useful series of articles "About Old Switzerland" published in the outstanding "Schweizer Briefmarken Zeitung" of 1958/61. These showed how many questions raised by the old guard in their papers had to remain open for lack of information or partially answered in the present state of knowledge. This series of articles did a great deal to further research on the classic Swiss stamps, and the then owners of certain rarities were asked, for example, to give details of their colour to the author. The response to these requests was deplorable, yes, shameful. And finally this could not be concluded properly.

On the form of a reprint, this series, which somewhat resembles the labours of Sisyphus reveals the best intentions of an enthusiastic philatelist.

Continued.

However, should this work not appear in book form, only because in some respects it was and must continue to be, only a torso. No, philately must be thankful that this book is available in a bookcase here and there, so that its contents might be taken up by a similar "worker bee" in a later generation and enriched with many new building blocks, so that one day the "honey comb" may be complete. In other words, a new book may become available that has answered all the questions. This is a hope that we rarely see fulfilled in philately, however, since the material is too multifarious and we have too many "drones" in our midst.

Things are quite different from the literary point of view for the less expensive stamps and cancellations. The "small" collector is much more willing to communicate: articles, short reports and supplements on this type of collecting can be found everywhere. However it is by no means the case that there is less to say and ask about the little stamps, or more to say about new issues, than there would be about rarities from the classical period. The building blocks from this level have produced many valuable and informative books.

The most important supports for small-scale work on the stamps that interest the "broad mass" of collectors are the Working Parties of the BDPL. What they achieve is often more than admirable. Frank exchanges of opinions, loan of materials amongst one another, and other things useful to research are commonplace in the Working Parties, even though requests for co-operation have sometimes to be repeated a number of times, since not every collector has the spare time available that philately calls for. As an example of the many successful Working Parties we will mention here only that on "Buildings Series 1948", with its circulars and the ensuing handbook. Should this handbook not have been printed, since the information it contained could have been altered from day to day as fresh information became available and new material surfaced from the Federal Post. No, it ought to have been published since it probably inspired other collectors to "reveal" their knowledge and make their material available. If there had been a long delay till the publication of a fuller handbook, there would have been a danger of someone with useful information taking it to the grave with him whilst his material is scattered at random to the winds. Where would we have been for example with the continuation of the Kohl handbook if Hans von Rudolphi had not taken up where Dr. Munk had had to give up, simply because the alphabetical sequence could no longer be strictly adhered to. Croatia for one could be dealt with in the basis of direct experience: This chapter obviously needs revision but at least the basis for one is available.

According to what has been said, it is logical for magazine articles to be free of gaps and errors, but obviously only in the case of articles on stamps, cancellations or postal history which cover new territory or attempt to carry research a little further. The extension of specialist journals is more likely to stimulate collectors (there must be a few who read more than the adverts) to publish their own comments and corrections than the publication of books in limited editions.

Another example. Should the writer of these lines have ignored the article on Tonga's gold – medal stamps in SAMMLER – DIENST (no 25/26, 1963) because a detailed description of how they were produced could not be given, and the article had thus to be left incomplete. Hardly, since the German collector would probably then have known practically nothing about these outstanding stamps. Success was in fact not wanting, since details were given by a collector in No. 4/1964. In the meantime the author had got more details from an English source about the non aqueous gum, DAVAC, supplied by the firm of Samuel Jones and Co for the Tongau stamps. Thus here again brick was added to brick, making a full treatment possible at a later date.

If periodical articles include the type which give a general survey of familiar things for the benefit of new readers and collectors, these must expect the newest data to be used as the source material, and must demand absolute reliability. False or inaccurate information, as for example the article "Forerunners of the Postage Stamp" in no. 2/64, do not help either the collector or philately.

A well-edited journal is usually adequately funded (if it has a large adverts section, then this alone and not the subscriptions will cover the overheads and do the earning, but the publisher of philatelic literature in book form often has a hard struggle to keep going, and often ends up ruined. The printing costs and the selling price to a level which prevents many collectors from acquiring a book whose contents are valuable.

This did not happen so often in earlier days. The times were not so hectic, and television had not started to allure. The collector had more leisure for intensive reading. Consequently, up to the first World War, patrons could be found who would make hefty contributions to the publication of special works/often in a really lavish format). Large societies – especially in Great Britain – produced noteworthy things in this line. Other rich philatelists published their books themselves, ignoring the hefty costs, and even gave them away sometimes. As an example here we may quote Axel de Reuterskjöld and Paul Miraband, who in 1899 paid 60,000 francs to have their unique work "Die schweizerschen Postmarken 1843 – 1962" printed (Miraband could have got as much out of his waistcoat pocket), and gave away the entire printing of 500 copies (150 copies were German and English translations of the original French text). Today there are hardly any supporters of philatelic literature, so the societies have to leap into the breach, as the Society of German Philatelists does for example. Unfortunately they can only help up to a point, so that many valuable works are left to gather dust in a drawer.

What does appear to be flourishing is literature for the motif or thematic collector. There has been astounding activity here and abroad in this field since the end of the last war, so that it is hardly possible to find one's way round a Society's book stock without a card index. Pleasant though it is to see this unstoppable growth in the number of theme collectors, the literature designed for them can only be classed as truly philatelic in a very few cases, as it is not concerned with the study of posts and postage stamps. In the eyes of many readers this viewpoint may seem heretical but cannot be gainsaid.

It has been suggested several times that publishers are being altogether too optimistic in "going in for" literature for theme collectors, but this can hardly apply to catalogues of every sort. This branch of the business is most flourishing, since the collector of today is more likely to pay out 2 or 20 marks for a new catalogue (since this will give the all-important catalogue (since this will give the all-important latest prices for stamps!) than for a subscription to a reliable magazine or a special work on their chosen field of collection. Which collector today will build up a small but reliable personal library and also be sure of using them. From the percentage point of view our fathers and grandfathers thought and acted quite differently and more significantly. The few exceptions come nowhere near the standard set by James Lindsay Earl of Crawford (1847 – 1913). By diligent search after all philatelic literature and the purchase of important private libraries after the deaths of their owners (amongst others, Tiffany/St Louis, 1897 and Frankel/Berlin 1907), the detailed catalogue made a book of 924 pages. Crawford bequeathed his library to the British Museum.

As a result of these changes, and for other reasons, it now appear that more detailed work should appear for preference in separate sections over a long period of time. This has turned out to be a thoroughly practical, and for 80 years preferred, method by which the collector can acquire a comprehensive work for a small regular outlay. The great danger in this publication as a part-work is that the initial interest of collectors may die away, or publication of the work may be broken off for various reasons. (e.g. Carl Lindenberb, Grosses Handbuch der Philatelie, 1887/96), the compiler may die (e.g. Hans von Rudolphi, Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, 1944), or lose interest in carrying on (e.g. Hellmuth Kricheldorf, Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, 1958). The philatelic libraries are thus left with more and more “torsos” on hand, though strictly speaking this only applies to Kricheldorf of the examples we have given, as the others did at least get as far as publishing to the end of a period or country. This again raises the question: should the publication of Kricheldorf’s Madagascar “torso” have been discontinued? No, because it was and is unknown whether another researcher was available or could have been found to take over the material.

The choice of a contributor to deal with a given country for a handbook is very important and not always easy, when it is known there are a number of experts who might expect to be considered. Once the work has appeared, years will pass before a new revised and corrected edition will appear. Of course, corrections will appear here and there in the magazines, but usually only in one simple one, probably one which only reaches a small circle of readers. For example, in 1963 a series of Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde appeared as the section “Pleskau – Ljadi-Luga”, with a reply in “Collegium philatelicum”.

The same thing could naturally happen with any book, and so – unless a greedy publisher is in the background, which is as good as impossible where the Working party on New Handbooks is concerned – before a manuscript is accepted there should be a conference of experts to decide in the interests of philately whether its factual content is unimpeachable.

Apart from the philatelic-scientific literature (including journals) dealt with so far, there are other books designed to appeal almost exclusively to the new collector and the juvenile. These books usually identify themselves by their titles (for example: How Do I Collect Stamps), or subtitles which identify them as guides, or else their entire make-up reveals them as aimed at the beginner. Here and there we may also spot a “black sheep” with a pompous title that promises more than it could possibly give and may deceive even collectors who have become knowledgeable philatelists into buying it. However, word soon gets about on such unsuitable items, so that the trick will have little hope of success, especially as experienced philatelists known where to go to extend or refresh their knowledge: they will definitely never turn to the firm of Hinz and Kunz.

This only applies to a few publishers. The publications of reputable stamp dealers (e.g. Müller of Basle, Gibbons of London), including their magazines, can generally guaranteed as reliable, since it is known which philatelists have been concerned with a particular book. However, even outsiders (philatelically considered) may come up with publications to satisfy any critic if they happen to get the right man. In the hectic times we have been having for years, this can only be done for commercial reasons. Obviously, stamp dealers who bring out books will expect to meet at least the basic costs themselves. Nothing else is strictly necessary, since the real aim is to get new lasting customers for the stamp business, so that the choice of author becomes specially important. This is not simply a new development: older collectors will still remember the firm of Seuf Brothers of Leipzig, who engaged Theodor Haas and other forgotten great man of German Philately to produce their handbooks.

Continued

However, for a number of years publishers from other fields have also been mixing in. They must be more or less rejected only as regards their introductory books for stamp collectors. These publishers do have their books written by stamp collectors who look at a good deal of source material and try to rework it, but they are not really philatelists. Otherwise there is no accounting for all the nonsense they contain, starting with the crassest mistakes, going onto falsities or omissions in evaluating the literature and finishing in pure fantast. If the authors had actually seen the stamps they talk about in their books, they would have been leaders in their field for many years, and if they really understood the philatelic terms they use they could not have put down on paper the impossibilities that have actually appeared.

SEE BETTY'S WRITING!!!

Many books are not really reliable – young people especially are likely to be taken in by vivid illustrations etc. and are likely to be badly misinformed by ill-written books.

It can often be very difficult to find a really reliable and up-to-dae text.

Example: a book called “Stamps – My Hobby” from a reputable firm, the Franck Verlay has no named author: whoever wrote it knows little of philately and can't even get his history and geography right.

Missing bit

Another example is the dearer but better produced book by Dr. Walther Heering = “Philately – in fun and earnest”. This is better, but still contains enough mistakes to make it unsuitable for beginners.

Missing bit

A new-perhaps undesirable – trend is towards publication of books devoted to stamps as objects of speculation. Philatelists must be pleased when their stamps rise in value, but undesirable for this to be only object of stamp collecting the true philatelist will have other aims in view this too is not a new development.

Again, “theme” collectors are well served as to literature, but you are not likely to be able to sell your “theme” collection at a very high profit.

Stresses again that all philatelic literature has its defects but is nonethe less useful. Publications giving financial advice are of little interest: “theme” literature, though expanding, has not importance for philatelic research.

All remarks relate chiefly to German language writings, but similar conditions are found abroad.

Little hope of any really good modern standard works being produced. Philatelists will have to make do with catalogues, reports on new issues etc.

Author concludes by inviting discussion

The “classical” period of German philatelic literature came to an end with the Second World War, what is going to take its place?

Missing bit

END

U. Häger

We glance through an old journal

[Wir blättern in einer alten Zeitschrift]

Sammler-Dienst, 26th November 1966, Volume 17, Issue 24, pp.1412-1414;
10th December, Issue 25, pp.1474-1477 & 24th December, Issue 26, pp.1544-1546

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
April 1995

WE GLANCE THROUGH AN OLD JOURNAL

The Periodicals up to 1870

Quite soon after the appearance of the first two adhesive postage stamps in Great Britain on the 6th of May 1840, people began to take pleasure in collecting these little works of graphic art which began to be found on letters from many countries. For a long time they merely collected: The whole point was the number of items a collector owned. What we call philately, the study of dates of issue, types of cancellation, printing methods, etc., did not yet exist. Lacking this, it was hardly possible for like-minded people to get together for chat and comparison. However, in the end collectors got together here and there, the first societies came into being and a modest trade in postage stamps began. It is very interesting to trace the beginnings of stamp collecting, societies, and stamp dealing, but unfortunately we have no room to go into these topics here, although they are basically linked to the origin of philatelic literature.

The literature appeared initially in the form of short items for stamp collectors in magazines of general interest or devoted to other types of collecting. Again all this happened in Great Britain between 1840 and 1844. The first purely philatelic journal appeared in the same place towards the end of 1862. Collectors in Germany had to wait only a short while longer: from the 1st May 1863 onwards they had the short-lived Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler.

Up to the mid 1870s the output of journals increased considerably: however the majority were very short-lived, as there was too little interest and the publishers could not cover their costs. The journals in this branch of literature had little to offer from the scientific-technical point of view over the first ten years of their life: also, they very often contained false information which was usually never corrected.

The publishers were often stamp dealers, who frequently aimed at getting collectors to act as editors or regular contributors, choosing people whose names were known nationally and even internationally and were authorities on various topics. However even they could be taken in by forgeries and falsifications in the absence of proper methods of checking. However, we must not find too much fault with them, everything has to have its start and this can never happen without mistakes.

Thus, the early years of German philatelic literature were not especially productive.

However, to do them justice it should be said that these oldest journals do give a lot of information on dates of issue (now generally known as the first day) which the researcher would otherwise have had to dig out by other and much more tedious methods. The journals from about 1870 onwards are much more full and interesting and can also be very amusing to us collectors today. Thus we shall start by glancing through the first five years of a journal that developed into one of the best, most comprehensive and reliable for the German collector. It lasted for 69 years and only the last war and the subsequent partition of Germany gave it its death-blow. I refer to Senf's:

Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal

This saw the light of day on the 1st January 1874, its title even then having a spelling unfamiliar to us (Illustriertes with i instead of ie) but common enough then. From the beginning it picked up a wide circle of readers who stayed with it for decades. Its sub-title described as an organ for anyone interested in stamp collecting.

The publisher was given as H. Werninck and Co. of Leipzig, then a well known firm of stamp dealers. It was noted with pride in the title that the magazine was issued with the collaboration of Dr. A. Moschkau, A. Treichel, R. F. Albrecht, etc., so we already have several names which will be associated forever with the history of philately. The name of Werninck on the other hand means little at best to the literature researcher. The and Co. means a great deal more, since it hides the identity of Richard Senf of the famous "Senf dynasty" as we might almost call it. Without any notification to the reader, after only six months of this journal, it gained as its editor and publisher the best known member of the house of Senf: Louis Senf. From 1881 till the forced closure in 1942 the firm of Senf Brothers had the responsibility for the Journal. Moreover they enriched the literature of philately with a number of books that are still worth reading today and up to the last years of the war put out the beloved Senf catalogue, which in its day was looked on as better and more reliable than the Michel catalogue.

The Journal appeared monthly at first then fortnightly from 1884 onwards. The first four years were in the then familiar quarto format and each issue had eight full pages without an actual title page (this only appeared with a contents list at the end of the year.) Something like half of the very first pages contained the beginning of an important article. The fifth year appeared in the folio format that was also quite common at the time, though today it causes headaches for librarians, as it cannot be stood upright on ordinary book shelves (which are higher in libraries anyway than in household bookcases). Probably in 1878 it was not thought desirable to increase the number of pages and it was not possible to publish more text and retain the format used till then. Use of the folio size enabled the number of pages per issue to be kept to eight and even permitted the luxury of a title page carrying pictures of stamps and a little portrait of Rowland Hill. Nothing is known about the circulation of the Journal; it cannot have been very high at the outset, but probably paid its way by opening new markets for the stamp trade. The subscription for the twelve issues in a year was 1 Thaler, which became three Marks after the introduction of the Reichsmark as the standard currency.

Special Articles

Comprehensive research articles of the type we are familiar with in Sammler-Dienst were absent from the journals of 90 years ago. People were satisfied with short articles describing stamps, which were often necessary because the catalogues only gave illustrations of a small part of the stamps that became available. Variants, types, etc., were discussed only rarely. Much more space was taken up by reports on forgeries of the “Basle Dove” which had suddenly appeared in Berlin, Hamburg and Vienna. This stamp was already a rarity in 1874, the firm of Wernick offered it cancelled for 37½ Gulden on the last page of the same issue and only a “Croesus” or a “loony” gave as much as that for a postage stamp in those days.

Forgers had an easy time of it. This was because most collectors only had the chance to look at the originals in the rarest of cases. Hence, it was enough if the items passed off on collectors had only an approximate likeness to the originals. This can be appreciated from a description of the forgery from Berlin, the beginning of which reads: The green hatched background of the real one has become a plain light blue-green: The cross - lines in the black lily are four lines of equal weight in the original, but have become two faint and one heavy line in the forgery, i.e. only three. A number of further characteristics of the forgeries were given, so that really no collector should have been taken in by the false Doves.

Announcements and descriptions of forgeries form a real thread running through the five volumes we are dealing with here. They show amongst other things how much ground stamp collecting had gained between 1874 and 1879; the production of forgeries became worthwhile and their sale was undertaken - often quite knowingly - even by dealers with established reputations. Parallels can still be found in our own days. Dealers even gave orders for the production of forgeries. For example, in the fifth year the Journal had to warn its readers against really well done forgeries of Hanover, Mauritius and the USA. (Postal stationery was collected as eagerly as stamps in those days - unfortunately though, usually as cut outs, which are worthless today).

The producer was known, but the name was suppressed and he was referred to coyly as a Leipzig printer (K and S), who had recently put on the market about 9,000 very fine forged stamps with deceptive printing. (This a reference to the cancellation on the postal stationery.) The editors of the journal added to their description according to our informant, the dealer concerned has recently run off another 9,000 copies! Obviously a very flourishing business. Who could say where these 18,000 forgeries ended up: some of them may well be preserved in inherited collections?

Almost as frequent as the reports on forgeries were those on essays, a sign of how far our collecting forefathers were already prepared to deviate from the straight and narrow path: the “specialist collector” must have been born as long ago as 1874, though he was more of a rarity and certainly not always taken seriously. Of recent years the outlook has again become satisfactory thanks to the appearance of Sammler-Dienst which covers these special topics and thanks to K. K. Doberer for his interesting and thought provoking work on essays (and new and reprinted issues).

Postal stationery was always dealt with in great detail, and there were some comprehensive studies which did their authors great credit. As a representative of the numerous contributions of this sort, one which also goes into details, we will mention A. Treichel’s paper on Diagnosis of envelopes and postcards of Württemberg published in the first two issues of the Journal.

Today’s popular press gets its wide readership by retailing the purely private doings of this or that person. This has probably always been the case since human beings appeared on this earth and stamp collectors too are curious and like to know something about the people who have built up or inherited unique collections. The Journal began quite early to satisfy this curiosity. N°10 of 1874 gave a short account by Alfred Moschkau of the many obviously important collections he had come across during his travels. For example, Shipping Agent Carl Fisher of Dresden: he has a collection of four thousand items and it is quite significant that these include neither nuances, essays nor cancellations. His sumptuous Schaubek album contains not only practically all the rarities but also practically all postal stationery (not new issues) whole and uncut Moschkau was obviously very impressed by this collection but he was quite bowled over by that of L. Hartig of Dresden it was the most costly and impressive I have ever seen. It occupied a specially designed spacious cabinet. No wonder that even Moschkau was overcome, as it numbered 7,600 postage stamps, 1,400 uncut entires, 300 money orders, 360 reply-paid correspondence cards, 140 field post envelopes and cards, 1,000 essays and proofs, 70 postal wrappers, 146 English official and return covers, etc. His hymn of praise to this collection closes with the words The owner can pride himself on having not only the most complete, but also the most expensive and valuable collection in Germany, quite worthy of being placed in a museum or archive. This last wish remained unfulfilled, as the treasure-trove passed more or less unobtrusively into other hands. Reports of this kind naturally aroused the ambition of rich collectors to abandon their anonymity. They made their own much more extensive collections known by letter, which led to further reports of this sort (and even to a pictorial volume containing 80 portraits of collectors and dealers accepted as important). Collectors today are much less forthcoming - mainly because of the financial authorities - and usually we only get to know about their treasures after they have died (Burrus for example). It is rare for philatelists to let their rarities be exhibited during their lifetimes (for example WIPA 1965 - Anderegg, or Graz 1966 - Berlingin).

Articles of general information in the Journal differ little from those we find today in Sammler-Dienst, though they were obliged to be less detailed because there were fewer stamps. Biographical sketches were given of personalities from the realm of the Post, such as Heinrich Stephan and Sir Rowland Hill, the Cursus Publicus of the Romans and other ancient postal systems were described and accounts were given of the activities of the already existing World Postal Union, and the history of the carrier-pigeon and balloon posts. The magazine held a really colourful mixture and doubtless had something for everybody. Nothing though about cancellations!

Although the main thing collected at that time was used stamps, practically nobody took any interest in the cancellations, which made later research into cancellations very difficult, since unlike stamps, the periods and types used were not recorded and nothing about them can be obtained from the old literature.

Practical Advice

Since little attention was paid to the preservation of stamps, it is rare to find articles aimed at helping the collector to build up a collection that would be worth seeing and of lasting value. The adhesive hinge was still unknown, and everyone got to work with the glue-pot kept alongside stamps. There was no warning against cutting off the perforations and it was quite common to do this when the pre-printed spaces in an album had been made too narrow (which happened very often). Not even an authority like Moschkau spoke out against these bad habits - he may very well have had them himself. When he was reviewing the third edition of the Schaubek Album (albums were looked on as literature in his day), Moschkau merely remarked that the spaces for the postal stationery were too small. He wrote in the case of North America one is sometimes compelled to cut away the stamp (meaning the stamp on entires) so as to fit it into the space. It is very annoying to have to cut up covers, etc. This is the extent of the criticism: people were accustomed to use the scissors.

Descriptions of new stamps albums were almost the most important service to collectors. New albums came every one or two years from a number of publishers (many were identical between stamp dealers), they were tightly bound and only a few extra sheets could be inserted until the album was “bursting at its seams”, since no allowance was made for the way stuck-down stamps would bulk it out: pasteboard dividers were not used. Also, the Journal dealt by and large with the subject of stamp purchase, which came down in the end to warnings against the simply incalculable mass of forgeries. Even the very promising title How to get a start in philately was only a lament about the all-too-many impure elements.

Moreover, assistance was given - certainly unintentionally - to those who wanted to deceive unwary collectors, for example by the publication of a detailed article on Chemistry and Philately, which gave an exact description of how all the colours of the rainbow from blue to red could be brought out in a startling way from a red or green original stamp by the action of nitric, hydrochloric or sulphuric acid, or of a soda solution. A table was given which named the stamps of different countries which reacted particularly beautifully in changing colour. The author even prided himself on how just as a joke I sent a still youthful stamp lover a 3pfg German Reich postage stamp in blue as a printing error. To conclude, the exact recipe was given for transforming the blue 2d Great Britain stamp of 1840 and later into a beautiful black one fill a test-tube with sulphate of ammonia till it just covers a stamp put into it... bring... this to the boil and add concentrated hydrochloric acid drop by drop whist it is boiling. A black precipitate will form and the stamp will quickly take on a beautiful black colour! Who knows how many collectors tried this out from the pure love of experimenting and - if they used the 1840 stamps - deprived themselves and posterity of a valuable collection.

Enough of the practical advice, which will make a present-day reader shake his head and laugh. The examples chosen from this field make it clear that the old journals are no mine of information in this respect.

Reports on New Issues

Our Sammler-Dienst is outstanding when it comes to information on new issues of stamps. Its illustrations are only in black and white, but are printed sharp and clear on art paper, and the accompanying text is particularly lucid. The Journal also devoted considerable attention to new issues; up to four of its eight sides were devoted to new stamps (which had however usually appeared several weeks or months earlier). Around 1875 there was still no “Philatelic Service” in postal undertakings to send out descriptions, pictures or samples of new stamps. However, the new issues section did show most of them as pictures, even if only in a typographic form and based on specimens from groups of collectors or correspondents. By and large readers could always profit from the annotations and keep a look out for stamps that were rising in value. For example, N°1 of the Journal indicated the value likely to be reached by the 70-kreuzer Württemberg stamp (Michel 42) issued just a year before: These stamps are likely to be extremely rare, since they will only be used on very heavy letters going overseas. The same issue offered this stamp for sale by the dealers Werninck and Co., who were identical with the publishers. They had only a simple unused item in stock, on offer to the highest bidder. Unfortunately it is not known at what price this 1874 specimen found a buyer. The price would have been interesting, since the Zurich 6-centimes, already a classic at that time, was advertised unused in the same issue for only 30 to 35 Groschen according to quality.

In the general text a good deal of space is devoted to postal stationery, and the same in the reports of new issues. These include postcards, postal wrappers, etc., with stamps on and were given detailed commentaries in word and pictures. Who still bothers today about bill [of exchange] stamps, telegraph stamps or stamps for other postal services. Bill stamps perhaps, when they have been used for the prepayment of letters. However, in 1874/78 it was usual to collect all possible types of stamp, as well as ordinary postage stamps and postal stationery. Hence, the issue of new types of these were noted in full detail. This was true for private city postage stamps, Zemstvo stamps from Russia and others.

Many interesting and amusing examples of false reports could be taken from the new issues section (headed: Chronicle), since obviously at that time anything communicated by collectors and dealers from overseas was accepted by the editors without consideration and without any form of checking. Apart from out and out false data on colours and values, there are plenty of reports on stamps never actually issued. However, this did not seem to strike anyone as particularly tragic, since it is rare to find corrections in subsequent issues.

Literature, Catalogues and Albums

Alfred Moschkau, a constant contributor to the Journal published a survey of the literature known to him in 1872 in his own journal, Moschkau's Magazin. He contributed another article on the German philatelic literature to N°5 of 1874 of the Journal. Both lists are inadequate when we consider how much had appeared to that date and how much new material was coming out every year. However, Moschkau gradually published more and more articles. The increasingly lively activity of the societies made itself noticed and experts and contacts in philatelic matters shed their reserve and shared their knowledge.

Catalogues are the most prominent items here, all those with the name of the editor or publisher only familiar now to the "historian of literature". The most soundly-based one had already appeared; it was the Catalog aller seit 1818 bis April 1874 ausgegebenen Briefmarken, Couverts, Postkarten, Streifbänder und Localmarken aller Länder. [Catalogue of All Postage Stamps, Covers, Postcards, Postal Wrappers and Local Stamps of all Countries issued from 1818 to April 1874], by Moschkau.

Yes, 1818. The oldest postage stamps were those made in the Kingdom of Sardinia from November 1818 to May 1836 for sending letter-sheets by private messenger. Moschkau's catalogue, which also gives complete postal stationery, is correct, since these were sheets of paper with coloured, later colourless, values stamped on, at these rates, which became sealable letters when folded. The Michel catalogue is rich in rarities but is and intends to be purely a stamp catalogue, so it is a little surprising to find these letter-sheets (often known as Sardinian ponies in collecting circles) firmly catalogued under Sardinia. Later Moschkau went even further back, to 1653 and the closures similar to postal wrappers with the money due for delivery stamped on that were used by the Paris city post. The Moschkau catalogue went into many editions and finished up as a thick unwieldy volume, but it always had relatively few illustrations and its descriptions were often incomplete.

His literature survey also included six new address books, obviously a very lucrative proposition at that time. These gave the addresses of dealers, and various ways of doing down the competition was attempted even in the book of titles, i.e. The only correct addresses for the most important stamp dealers. Was the address given for Herr Lehmann of Berlin really the only correct one? Also on the market were the music and words of a postage stamp waltz - The Philatelists and a postage stamp board game with dice!

Then, and for decades later, the albums were fundamental to the literature, since they often gave short geographical, economic and political notes on postal regions, together with the State's coat-of-arms and a portrait of the Ruler or President. New albums are very sharply scrutinised and reviewed, which reveals that the ideal album just never turned up: collectors often had to re-stick from one tightly bound album to another.

Recognition was also given to literary productions of other countries, which yesterday as today was more extensive than the German output. Moschkau thought however that the German literature, if much sparser, was better and more reliable, and he wrote in a commentary in 1874 ... let us leave the foreigners to their albums as thick as Bibles and in awkward formats, their catalogues with 6 to 7,000 numbered items, etc., and lets us go quietly on in our old way, we shall be better off like that. Foreigners were always ahead of us in many ways, and catalogues were one: the German ones could not get anywhere near 7,000 items, because connections to the far corners of the earth were either incomplete or totally lacking.

To promote philately in every possible way The Journal in its very first issue offered a prize of 30 Marks for the best work on the history of philately, with special regard to its development, literature, important collectors, etc., in the German lands, England, France and America. Authors were only given a period of two months to fill at least 16 columns of our Journal, as the closing date was the first of March. There does not seem to have been a large entry, as there is no mention of the result of the Prize Competition, which Alfred Moschkau was to judge. However, the 30 Marks were certainly paid out, since from June 1874 onwards an article on History of Posts and Postage Stamps appeared in several instalments, and is still worth reading today. The author was R. F. Albrecht, one of the leading philatelists of the day.

Exhibitions

Though there were not many to report, the few details given about exhibitions are interesting to read. Collectors often shunned publicity, as they did not want to make themselves more ridiculous than strictly necessary. The few societies that existed tended to operate behind closed doors. However the Journal was able to publish two outstanding reports during 1874 on Stamps at the Vienna World Exhibition, an event which aroused a great deal of attention everywhere, especially in collecting circles. This was the third time that postage stamps had appeared in an Exhibition that placed the cultural and economic achievements of a nation on view internationally. The first time was at the international Exhibition of 1862 in London, and the Second at the one in Paris in 1867. With Vienna in 1874 collectors could see it officially confirmed that collecting stamps was in order.

The stamp exhibition in Vienna would simply not compare with present-day exhibitions - even those on the smallest scale. Most of the sheets were not on show to everyone in display cases or the like. Let us pick out the most important parts of the report to get an idea of what a stamp exhibition looked like at that time: The stamps ... were displayed with great elegance ... In the first place ... This applies to the stamps exhibited on the German side. The display included The extensive collection of stamps belonging to the German post office, on 103 sheets containing some 1,890 mainly uncanceled stamps. It was already worth noting that an official body with quite different sources of supply from the private collector had managed to accumulate 1,890 different stamps. Uncanceled as well, and so easily stuck down into sheets by wetting the original gum (The stamp hinge had not yet been invented). Nothing else can be meant since the report goes on to say The loose sheets with the stamps stuck on (! from this author) we kept in a red morocco strong-box, How then could visitors to the exhibition admire the treasures from Berlin? Quite easily since the strong-box was guarded by an attendant, and kept shut. Naturally though, interested parties were willingly given a look.

It should be mentioned in passing that this morocco strong-box in Vienna was the beginning of the State Postal Museum set up by Postmaster-General, Dr. Heinrich Stephan during his term of office.

However, there were other stamps which could be seen anytime without an Argus-eyed guardian, since Apart from this collection ... entire sheets of the then current Reich postage stamps ... and trials ... all on show in the form of specimens with wide margins (These must definitely have been stuck to the “sheets” with glue by at least one edge- The author). The centime stamps put out under the French occupation of Alsace-Lorraine, the gold-coloured. Prussian bill stamps and Bill of Exchange blanks were also shown.

Another pair of “Viennese bonbons” for collector may also be mentioned: Bavaria showed.. entire sheets (! The author) of all its postage stamps that have appeared to date... Württemberg also showed all its then current stamps, envelopes, postcards ... Also there was a single example of the Bill stamps of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt.

Numerous postal undertakings were represented at Vienna by objects that included stamps: An article made with infinite care was shown in the Netherlands section, namely an artistically carved round table whose glass-covered top carried a mixture of postage stamps in the most tasteful and elegant of groupings ... The basis was a star made up of a mosaic of differently coloured stamps, and the spaces between its rays were filled by arabesques of the most widely-differing colours consisting of the stamps of all the European countries. The overall impression would have been even more beautiful if the talented designer had used only uncanceled stamps for his work. Who does not remember the glass plate or ashtray covered in stamps and kept by Granny in her parlour? It was a popular hobby at the turn of the century, and many valuable stamps were sacrificed to it, even though the reporter in Vienna bemoaned the fact that the maker of the “philatelic table” had not restricted himself to uncanceled stamps. If uncanceled stamps had mainly been used for the many objects decorated with them, the albums of uncanceled stamps preferred by collectors would look very much poorer today, since a decorated fruit-plate took by and large 300 stamps, since the stamps were not just stuck down next to one another with Dextrin or gum arabic onto their green felt support, which in its turn was stuck to the underside of the glass plate. An artistic streak had to manifest itself by cutting them up.

The collector had another attraction laid on the Vienna World Exhibition: The most splendid exhibition was by the Banknote Company of New York, who showed practically all the stamps they produce, usually in proof form, magnificently arranged in two gold frames”. Anyone who knows the number of countries for which the American Bank Note Company printed 90 and more years ago will realise how many rarities from the USA, and Newfoundland to Argentina, must have been present in those two frames.

It seems specially noteworthy that even philatelic literature was represented at this World Exhibition. And this was under the auspices of the German General Post Office, amongst others! An entire large wall covered with magazines enabled a survey to be taken of all the magazines for collectors then being published.

Finally, it is interesting to look at the results of the World Exhibition through the eyes of the philatelic reporter: Although we Germans have not received a prize from the jury of the World Exhibition for our stamps, yet these - so often referred to as little slips of paper - have attracted considerable attention amongst the assembled postal authorities, a circumstance of importance for our cause, which meets with deathly silence at best in many quarters, but is still enjoying success and esteem more than ever just now, even in scientific circles.

The next notice concerning an exhibition turns up in N°30 of the Journal for June 1876. The editor found out completely by chance that in midsummer of this year a stamp exhibition will take place in Stuttgart. Since there was no further reference to this in later issues, either the exhibition did not take place or it took place unmentioned under some broader philatelic event: and what we may read between the lines may relate to this. One point made is the following: If this kind of enterprise does not want to come to grief from the start, the minimum necessary is to get accurate and detailed notices, programmes, times, etc., into all the relevant German magazines ... Then many prominent collectors, and especially the authors of philatelic works will readily take part and give the event a certain value, or otherwise the organisers will find themselves rewarded by pitying laughter and shrugs of the shoulders. this was written 90 years ago, and is still true for so many exhibitions today.

Up to our terminal year of 1878 for studying the Journal, there were only two more references to exhibitions. One of them was purely private in character, and again failed to ensure adequate publicity, since only in the August 1877 issue did the journal refer to an exhibition open daily between 12 and 2pm from July 20 onwards for an entrance fee of one Mark. This was set up by the well-known stamp dealer and publisher of the Schwarzen Liste (Black List - names of unreliable dealers and collectors), Paul Lietzow of Berlin. Nothing is said about the duration of this exhibition in aid of the wounded of the Imperial Russian Army (Russo-Turkish War, The author), and so it could have been still on by the time it was mentioned in the Journal. Visitors were offered a stamp collection in 6 large albums containing 6,200 stamps, cards, envelopes of all lands, including 1,300 whole pieces. The report does not make it clear whether these whole pieces were prepaid envelopes with stamps stuck on (postal stationery), or true entires with cancelled stamps: the latter cannot be assumed straight away, since cutting away the cancellation remained the general practice for a long time. In the following issue the Journal was happy to report that Lietzow's stamp exhibition ... in spite of the cost of entrance ... was heavily attended, many non-collectors attending as well. This heavy-attendance amounted to about 150 people in all!! This gave a total profit of about 121 Marks, to which Herr Lietzow generously donated 106 Marks 50 pfennigs, so that about 91 Roubles could be transmitted to Petersburg for the wounded Russians. Lietzow could then boast of a personal letter of thanks from the Empress of Russia. Alfred Moschkau drew up the balance-sheet and wrote that by this exhibition Lietzow had doubly earned our thanks: once because of his charitable purpose and again because this type of thing does so much to promote and support our cause.

Lietzow's activities gained a brief mention a year later (July/August 1878). Postage stamps put in an appearance at the International Exhibition for the United Paper Industry In collaboration with Alexandra Owitch of Uhlenhorst. collections of the rarest and most beautiful stamps, postcards and covers were shown ... in elegant square black frames ... the covers included a balloon letter. (Paris, 1870, The author)

Also: Mention should be made of a tapestry made by Herr Rudolf Fischer of Berlin from Seals, bill-stamps and postage stamps, which made a charming effect ... the exhibition of the tapestry is based simply on the popular idea that nothing should be thrown away unused". This gives us a much later successor to the advert in the English magazine which has been so much quoted in the histories of philately: soon after the appearance of the first two postage stamps this advert asked for 10,000 penny stamps to paper the walls of a room.

Micellaneous

The Journal had a correspondence column used to answer queries from the readers. These could be very tedious, such as the words Received with thanks of interest only to reader R. K. of Graz, or the question Are V.-S. covers well established? from C. Ad. of Petersburg, etc. Little by little there crystallised out of these a Letter-box which often gave brief information on important matters to a wider circle of readers.

The reader of Sammler-Dienst has already heard about the FIP (Federation Internationale de Philatélie) and its activities. But who is aware that attempts to bring stamp collectors together at the international level and bring philately to general notice began as early as 1878. The German collectors' magazine Union proposed this kind of meeting, and no less a person than Dr. Amable Legrand, Secretary of the Société de Timbrologie of Paris, a skilful writer, the author of many still useful research studies under the pseudonym Dr. Magnus, and one of the great philatelists, put forward in N°50, February 1878, of the Journal the suggestion of a philatelic congress to be held in Paris (Paris has been the seat of the FIP for a long time). Legrand took a whole page of the Journal in its 1878 super format to give detailed proposals about what participants in the Congress should do and what they would have to agree on. It would be too much to give even a selection of all the ideas put forward at that time. A whole week was to be devoted to meetings arranged by the participating countries, and obviously the question of financing was very much to the fore and led to the failure of the project. Legrand thought in terms of 200 to 300 (!) delegates from all over the world for the first Congress, which was simply unattainable in 1878. However it was uncommonly interesting to read ideas of 88 years ago which today have been partially realised, extended or improved by the FIP. Naturally only a part has been realised, since opinions have been altered or superseded in various ways. However the basic ideas put forward by the German magazine Union in 1878 and given practical interpretation by Dr. Legrand in the Journal can be found today in the statutes and activities of the FIP.

Sir Rowland Hill, who introduced the adhesive postage stamp in 1840 (he died in 1879, well advanced in years after being many times honoured by the world), was naturally loaded with honours in England; the State and private organisations vied to give one another thanks and recognition to the "Father of the Postage Stamp". Hill's native town, Kidderminster, could not possibly be left behind, and the city fathers and townspeople decided to erect a monument to this great postal reformer during his lifetime. A "Memorial Committee" was set up, and appealed for contributions throughout England. The editorial board of the Journal were thrilled by this idea, and informed the Committee that they intended to support the appeal with all their might. At the same time, they petitioned permission to start a money-collection, and sanction was received at the end of December 1876. When the appeal closed at the end of 1878, the sum of 31,200 Marks, a magnificent one for the period, had been raised in England, but the Journal was only able to transmit the very modest sum of 39.35 Marks to the Committee. So says the last report given on this attempt. Nothing further was said in the Journal about the success achieved in England, so that any further contributions could not have altered the final total by much. At any rate German collectors did contribute to immortalising Hill in bronze for all time.

Some of the items given under the heading Miscellany are very amusing to read. For example it was reported in 1876 that: A flea circus is currently appearing in Dresden. The Editor, who went to see it, saw to his amazement Gold miniatures of the mail-coaches of all the countries being drawn along by teams of fleas in the most entertaining manner.

Not all that long ago some keen businessmen tried to bring in a fashion for reproductions in Gold of the rare first stamps from different countries, either as jewellery or even to fill empty albums, but apparently these did not catch on as expected, since everything, has gone very quiet about the Gold stamps. However, as Ben Akiba knew, everything has been here before, including reproduction stamps as jewellery. The following notice appeared in the September 1876 issue of the Journal. Amongst novelties in the realm of jewellery are stickpins, cufflinks etc very prettily made of pinchbeck and enamel in the form of German Groschen- and 3-pfennig stamps ... We think them really tasteful philatelic ornaments ...

Soon more and more people began to place their hopes on stamp collectors. For instance, a Max Pollak of Sternberg in Moravia concocted Philatelic Stomach Bitters in 1878 and presented a bottle to the editor. Alfred Moschkau gave it some doubtless free publicity and wrote The bottle itself has a very pretty label on which are four striking colour pictures of stamps. The content really has to be commended, in fact it is a delicious liqueur ...

From the postal point of view as well, unusual or interesting things could be found under Miscellany. One item related to the smallest known post office (probably meaning since the introduction of postage stamps. The author) in Philadelphia, Texas: Since the total receipts in the year just finished (1877) amounted to a whole 54 cents, the postmaster was relieved of his heavy official duties.

To be taken seriously from the historical point of view are the many birth announcements: letters reached the editor from all over the place announcing the formation of collectors' Societies. Most of these societies are now barely known even by name. However, one is still flourishing today as vigorously as ever: this is the Verein für Briefmarkenkunde of Frankfurt-am-Main. This was reported in the August 1878 issue of the Journal as being constituted on the 6th of June: it was said rather dolefully that the membership consists at the moment of only 15 gentlemen. It really happened that Alfred Moschkau gave a special greeting to a new founded society, but in this case he said in his editorial: We wish growth and prosperity to this young society: may the Frankfurt society be a true guardian of philately. This wish has been fulfilled: The society has outlived all others from that and later periods and has now given 88 years of active service to everything that is included in the general term philately.

This society also has one of the most extensive and valuable philatelic libraries ever owned by a society, and has made possible this glance at the early years of what was till 1942 one of the most widely circulated journals.

END

Ullrich Häger

The rise of philatelic literature

[Vom werden der philatelistischen literatur]

Der Sammler-Dienst, 13th October 1962, Volume 13, Issue 21, pp.964-970

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

June 1999

THE RISE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Without wishing to hurt the feelings of any of the numerous lovers of postage stamps, a slight distinction must still be drawn between collectors and philatelists. The first category, are sometimes referred to rather disdainfully as “stickers”, but we should not make rash judgements, and should always bear in mind that a collector may become a philatelist one day. Both are extremely fond of postage stamps, but one tends to be interested more in new stamp issues and catalogue prices, whilst the other devotes his attention rather to the postal history of a country and the circumstances connected with the production and use of stamps, cancellations, etc. one type of stamp lover simply collects, whereas the other does collect of course, but also goes in for more or less intensive research. The collector gets his stamps out of catalogues and attempts to fill any gaps as quickly as possible. In many (but still far too few) cases the catalogue is also a magazine (with an adverts section as extensive as possible) and gives the collector all he needs to carry on his hobby satisfactorily. The philatelist also collects stamps and cannot do without catalogues either, but also devotes his attention to research articles in periodicals, to pamphlets and books which deal with postal topics wither generally or from a specialised view point. To the philatelist, stamps and all the other things needed to run a postal service such as cancellation stamps cannot be separated from the philatelic literature. Indeed, in some circumstances the philatelist would rather part with a stamp than with the literature on it. Just like science and technology, philately cannot do research or make any progress without literature.

The philatelist has a mass of literature available, so long as he knows what exists and where to find it (one little hint: the Philatelic Section of the Munich City library is one of the best there is: any member of a society affiliated to the BDPh can borrow from it showing proof of membership). Like the first postage stamps, the earliest philatelic literature is of the most interest, although the very earliest journals that we know about were in many respects incomplete, defective, and even quite wrong. However, the authors should not be blamed for this since research is quite unstoppable, and many factors must interact to give perfection, and philately has hardly reached that point yet.

The Hamburg Altona Philatelic Union is holding an exhibition on “100 years of Stamp Literature” at Hamburg over the period 1 to 31 October. This gives an idea of the tools available to the philatelist over the years, and can help to mature the collector into a philatelist. However, we can only give a very broad survey here, and will limit ourselves to the period up to the end of the century (paying particular attention to the first 20 years). A really detailed analysis of the literature that fructified philately would take several issues of SAMMLER-DIENST. Simply to give the name of a book or periodical does not imply that others, not mentioned, on the same or a similar topic are valueless, since only a few can be mentioned as typical of their period or representative of a given range of literature. Mention or non-mention is not related to any criterion of work.

The interest of collectors was directed surprisingly early towards the first postage stamps issued on the 6th May 1840, since articles appeared that year in the "Spectator", and "The Art Union" relating to the new way of paying for sending letters. As early as 1841, "The Times" published an offer to buy stamps, though they were wanted in large quantities to decorate a room in place of wall paper. The year 1851 seems to have produced the first offer of an exchange for collectors, in the "Family Herald", Smith's Bookshop in London offered "4 red penny stamps for an oval-cancelled cover" (i.e. stamps for entires). Up to 1860 articles on postage stamps continued to appear in daily papers and magazines, but none of these can really be called philatelic literature, since they generally amounted simply to hawking and gave no impetus to collection or information on philatelic science.

By 1860 the need for a published account of all existing postage stamps had often been expressed, since only a few collectors (and by this time there must have been a great many of them, otherwise how are we able to explain the sudden appearance of a really varied literature) knew exactly how many values belonged in a series of stamps from any one country. Thus appeared the first actual work for stamp collectors with the information arranged by countries.

This began in 1961; thus the motto of the Hamburg exhibition is not quite accurate. It is actually a few weeks more than 101 years since the appearance of the first philatelic publication!

However, this mistake is unimportant, since the first of what became an almost incalculable number of philatelic publications actually appeared in the year 1862. It is simply a forerunner of our present-day catalogues, which are known to have been antedated. It appeared (according to Victor Suppansschitsch) when the Strasburg printer Oscar Berger-Levrault issued about 50 copies of a list of all the stamps known to him, on about 12 quarto pages containing already 973 stamps. Herr Berger obtained additions to his catalogue from his friends – the only people who received copies – so that by 1864 there had been enough new issues and additional entries to justify ten editions, finally reaching 26 pages. Just at Christmas the same year (on Dec. 21 1861) Alfred Potiquet issued his catalogue, though it carried the date 1862. It was published by the firm of Eugene Lacroix in Paris and was a revision of Berger's list made available free to everyone.

These two lists broke the spell. In Brussels in 1862 J. B. Mœus (one of the most outstanding dealer-cum-philatelists of his day) issued his "Manuel du Collectionneur des Timbres-Poste" (Manual for the Stamp Collector), which developed over the years into one of the most important, detailed and reliable standard works for collectors all over the world. Brown's "Catalogue of British Colonial and Foreign postage Stamps" and Gray's "Hand-catalog of Postage Stamps" were received with delight in England, as was A.C. Kline's "The Stamp collector's manual" in the USA. The end of the year 1862 also saw the first German catalogue appear. This was the "Übersicht über alle bekannten von 1849-1862 emittierten Frankomarken" (Survey of all postage stamps known to have been issued 1849-1862), produced by Tramburg's Heirs in Hamburg. All these and other publications limited themselves to a simple description of the stamps: only a few also gave details of the method of printing, type of paper, perforations etc. Illustrations were first found only in Frederick Booty's "Aids to Stamp Collectors".

The history of stamps (French in particular) was also dealt with as early as 1862 by H.T. Boyer of Marennes in "Histoire du timbre-poste" (History of the Postage Stamp). However it is still more surprising and noteworthy to find Mœus issuing a booklet "De la falsification de timbres-poste" (on the falsification of Postage Stamps) at this same time to make collectors aware of the risks presented by the forgeries even than appearing on the market. In 1863 Leures and Pemberton did the same in English with “Forged Stamps”. The year 1863 was distinguished by a supplement to the Moeus catalogue in the shape of a volume with 54 sheets of illustrations of stamps plus text (“Les Timbres-Poste Illustrés” (Illustrated Postage Stamps)), and by the photo-cards from terbèchet Allain and co in Paris. In 1864, Moriz Ruhl of Leipzig gave collectors enlarged, sometimes even coloured, pictures of many of the most in-demand stamps in the twelve parts of his “Der Brief-markenfremd themselves overwhelmed by the almost frantic on rush of new editions of the earlier

END

R. Glasewald

100 years of literature on postage stamps

[100 Jahre Briefmarken-Literatur]

Der Sammler-Dienst, 13th October 1962, Volume 13, Issue 21, pp.963-964

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 1998 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

100 YEARS OF LITERATURE ON POSTAGE STAMPS

Fortunately, nobody knows who the first stamp collector was, or what he looked like - with beard or without...? Hence, we have been spared a flood of special stamps commemorating the 100th anniversary of stamp collecting. Since by 1855 most countries had issued their first postage stamps, it cannot have been very long before the "rage" for collecting them swept over national boundaries in their wake. We do know that the first books for collectors (thus the first stamp albums) appeared in the year 1862 simultaneously in Germany, England and France!

As early as 1861 a man called Franz Oscar Berger-Levrault of Strasbourg, Alsace, put out a twelve-sided lithographed list of all the stamps that had appeared, and ten editions of this had been published by 1864. Tramburg's inventory in Hamburg towards the end of 1862 included a list that can be looked on as the first German stamp catalogue.

In 1863 the publishing firm of Dürr of Leipzig put out a Handbuch der Briefmarken-Sammler [Handbook for postage stamp collectors]. It contained advice on the best way of setting up a stamp collection, and its 18 pages of text and 38 of catalogue gave the first information in Germany on the history of the prepayment stamp, the stamp as an article of commerce, etc. It thus became the first serviceable textbook.

The heartfelt longing of collectors to know more about their favourites and get to hear of new issues and forgeries to be avoided was picked up by the firm of Zschiesche and Köder in Leipzig, and from the 1st May 1863 they published the first German specialist journal, Magazin für Briefmarken Sammler. The Spiro Brothers of Hamburg, amongst others, tried to give them some competition with Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler, which began in November 1864 but met with little success.

Instead of giving a long-winded account of the earliest philatelic publications from the years 1862/63 (they are carefully listed on the 750 pages of Victor Suppantchitsch's 1892 Bibliography of the Entire Philatelic Literature), we shall confine ourselves to three short extracts from the Dürr handbook:

It says on p.15:

... the loosened stamp should then be allowed to dry again, its edges trimmed off level with a pair of scissors to give it a regular shape, the reverse side should be coated with a solution of gum arabic, and it is then neatly stuck down at the appropriate place in the album.

And again on p.18 we read:

Thus, for example, in Paris (about 1860) a formal market grew up where sellers and collectors could get together every week in the Tuileries and Luxembourg gardens. Speculators were not lacking from these places, and often managed to drive the prices up to the heights after they had got possession of items that were already in demand.

No-one should be surprised that in this field too the less scrupulous have attempted to impose on eager collectors by counterfeiting postage stamps!

In other words: even 100 years ago the mice were at the cheese ...! It remains obvious that without guidance, without catalogues and magazines, i.e. without specialist literature, stamp collecting would never have attained this world-wide expansion. Information was necessary, or else the fickle elements would soon have given the death blow to this new area of collecting.

Thus, there is sufficient reason for us to be celebrating the 100th anniversary of philatelic literature today. For this occasion, a special exhibition:

The Literature of the Postage Stamp will be mounted from the 1st to the 31st of October 1962 in the State and University Library, 40 Moorweidenstrasse, Hamburg 13. It will cover 100 years of philatelic literature and will be open Mondays to Fridays from 10.00 to 18.00hrs. The organisers of the exhibition are the State Library and the Hamburg-Altona Philatelic Society, which has now been working to promote philately for almost eight decades.

The exhibition is completely neutral. Individual names of exhibitors are not given, so no distinction can be made. The arrangement of the exhibits is as follows:

- I. Specialist journals of the world, a unique panorama of all magazines on stamps currently appearing world-wide, from some 45 countries.
- II. Specialist books
 - a) Classical works, before 1900
 - b) Handbooks
 - c) Works on Old Germany
 - d) Germany
 - e) German Regions and Colonies
 - f) European countries
 - g) Overseas regions
 - h) Works on cancellations
 - i) Airmail and entires
 - k) Thematic areas
- III. Catalogues of the World
- IV. Special Literary works
- V. Graphic techniques to combat forgeries.

The official opening before invited guests took place on Monday the 1st of October 1962. The catalogue of the exhibition and the programme of events, plus details of special postcards and special cancellations can be obtained from Dr. A. Lienau, Am Weiher 3, Hamburg 19.

END

K. K. Doberer

Literature promotes literature

[Literatur fördert literatur]

Der Sammler-Dienst, 19th December 1964, Volume 15, Issue 26, pp.1440-1441

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1999. Minor editorial changes, February 2008

LITERATURE PROMOTES LITERATURE

It is a fact, possibly a regrettable one, that a large part of the readership of our specialist magazines lays most emphasis on studying the adverts, which over recent years have certainly given the pleasure of seeing their "favourites". For a certain proportion of collectors, this quite primitive satisfaction is enough to justify their paying for the magazine. Reading the articles is an incidental and they have no objection to their being cut down.

This state of affairs is equally well known to the editors of journals and to organisations. They only have limited scope for arousing interest in technical articles and technical literature, since their main task is to maintain the number of readers.

The philatelic organisations are in a much better position to create the interest, though it must be admitted that so far they have not taken advantage of all the opportunities available. However, activity in this direction would be equally welcome to the magazines, as it would then be easier to raise the quality of their articles.

All this means in practice that the magazines would welcome the friendly co-operation of the philatelic organisations in putting out reports that would aid the magazines in their struggle to create high-grade philately.

It is extremely gratifying that the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten (Society of German Philatelists) is now promoting a development which can really be called a breakthrough in this direction.

It relates above all to the Bundesnachrichten (Society Reports). The editorship of Werner Münzberg has brought about radical changes here. They are no longer restricted to arid reports about the Society, but deal with a wide range of problems in an interesting way. The Society has been encouraged to create a paper for all its members. Does this mean competition for the technical press? Not in the slightest. It has been found that a really lively demand has been created and that the increased interest has been a good thing for all the magazines and for philatelic literature generally.

Happily, this development is not restricted to the Society level alone. As an example of a modern provincial society organ, I might mention the Landesvorsitzen-Nachrichten of the Bavarian State Society, under the editorship of its chairman Rudolf Niedermayer. The two-coloured cover immediately reveals the technical level of the publication, which is printed by photogravure. As well as Society news, it contains a wealth of philatelic information which can often be given more directly in an internal publication than in a public magazine. This also means that the magazines are relieved of certain tasks, since there is often a tendency to expect more of them than commercial magazines can really be expected to supply. Co-operation between the magazines and the organisations is thus made easier.

There is however another way of lightening the burden on the magazines. These must regret it when specialists try to air problems of no interest to the general collector in the commercial publications, down to the last dot over an i. However, societies should be ready to step in here. The best example in this field is that of the Circulars of the German society of Old Letter collectors (Deutsche Altbriefsammler-Verein), under the scientific leadership of Hermann Deninger and the editorship of Werner Münzberg. The accuracy of their information and the discussions of problems can only be appreciated by those who have had the chance to see one of these Circulars. The societies can also provide a transition to the philatelic literature. A shining example of this is the paper that has just appeared on Plate defects on the Stamps of Baden, written by Robert Fluhrer of the Baden Society and published by Hans A. Weidlich. Twenty seven large format pages gave a hundred and thirty three enlarged photos of plate defects on Baden stamps, covering all the fundamental defects in exact and sharp pictures.

This saves the specialist the trouble of having two comparison publications. The text refers to certain types of similar defects that have also turned up on Bavarian stamps. Good specialist literature thus makes connections between the work being done in different countries and reveals the need to take a wider view. The work was published by Professor Dr. Weidlich, and is available at the price of 6DM plus postage and packing from Karl Bald, 8781 Wernfeld/Main.

END

Philaprilistische Bücherwurm
1st April 1922, Only Volume, Only Issue

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

PHILAPRILISTISCHE BÜCHERWURM

1st April 1922, Only Volume, Only Issue

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Only volume: BERLIN, 1st APRIL 1922: Only Issue

SPECIALITIES

Our friend 'A' is a great seeker after rarities, he is not much interested in the regular issues of journals but if they are some kind of variant his keener attention is aroused. I visited him recently: he has a nice apartment on the top floor in x-Strasse, i.e. there is the basement, ground floor, lower mezzanine, intermediate floor, middle floor, upper floor, upper ground floor, mezzanine and main floor, then comes the top floor. This is the common pattern in Berlin. He was there to look over the "Postwerthzeichen-Market". He orders 20 copies of every paper, so that he can find the variants that are his speciality, and he managed to find something once more. Some sort of foreign body – let's say a piece of bread-and-butter or cheesecake – must have fallen on the printing plate and had naturally left an impression – in this case it was roughly in the shape of the map of Australia. Now this impression made an even greater impression on friend 'A'. He got straight on to Possneck and talked for a long time directly to the printer who had made this fortunate impression. The result was that in fact a piece of bread and butter was involved. The talking went on for a really long time and, later, cost him 300 marks in telephone charges. I did not listen any more, but did catch the words "then send me another couple of pounds", though could not tell whether he was referring to butter or "Postwerthzeichen-Market”. The Metropolitan Museum has already offered him $250 for the misprint, but friend ‘A’ would rather part with his last little finger than this variant.

Friend ‘A’ has a blind copy of “Magazin”, which is obviously extremely rare, since there is no trace at all of any printing on it. It is simply not possible to determine which volume and which number it is, which has rather upset him over the years, but the fact that he has a real blind issue of this journal, a really great rarity, is enough for him. Moreover he found it very difficult to establish, from comparisons and expert opinion, that he was in fact dealing with the “Magazin”. This issue, if one may really refer to it as such, is his greatest treasure.

Not quite so rare, but still within the front rank of rarities, is a copy of number 1 of “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal”, 1874, from which pages 4 and 5 are missing. This copy, however, was not sent out and was used by one of the printers to write a letter. This printer, whose name could unfortunately not be determined (we only have the first ‘Beder’, which we can without doubt take to be the equivalent in Saxon dialect of the German ‘Peter’), writes to one ‘Glarchen’ in a slangy way from which we can only make out a rendezvous at 6 o’clock: the rest of the letter is such as to be incomprehensible. Hence this “6 o’clock issue” is the second rarest item in the collection.

Of uncommon interest is a specimen number of a journal which lacks both title and publisher, volume and number – the text is present. Unfortunately it cannot be seen where the journal was published, since the head is missing. Friend ‘A’ has filed this under the key-word “Parliament”, since they have no heads either, as he says.

The counterpart of this Parliament issue is a manuscript, if I may employ so high-faluting a word to an item that carries only the hand-written title “Illustrierter Briefmarken-Journal”. The last word has been crossed out, and “Zeitung” written above it, then this is again crossed out and “Anzeiger”, “Borsenblatt”, “Courier” and “Nachrichtenborsen courier anzeiger” written in, along with the words “edited by Ede Piefke”. Other data, and the complete text are totally lacking. However, it may be deduced from the peculiarities of the hand-writing, the name of the editor and the type of ink and paper that this is an otherwise totally unknown Berlin project from the beginning of the nineties.

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATIONS IN THE YEAR 2022

Our centenary celebrations took place in the nicest possible way. The Chairman, Professor Woodworm, opened the meeting at 2000 hours with a few unimportant words, whilst the lady and gentleman participants flirted with one another freely. Our clubhouse had been newly decorated in honour of the event at a cost of 88 million, and the observation tower surmounting the 20-story library had been given a new platinum roof (which was unfortunately stolen by a Polish airship the following night).

Greetings and telegrams came from branch societies in all countries. The Petersburg branch sent a barrel of caviar which was very welcome as it cost 5 million (according to the Convert & Teller Catalogue). Unfortunately when we came to eat it, it proved to contain more Ka than Ar, but this did not spoil the festivities. New York cabled some cables, and the South Pole branch sent a barrel of cod-liver oil. Great-uncle Poncaré sent some philatelic swear words, and the future king Lloyd George sent the pen with which, more than a hundred years earlier, the then quite sweet little Crawford catalogue had been written: however it was so rusty it could no longer be used.

From Czechoslovakia, whose king is one of our honorary members (he has the certificate in his coat of arms), and from the second Japanese capital, Constantinople, came heartfelt requests for handouts. Our Chinese representative showed us particular honour by cutting off his head and sending that; was passed it on as a present to the President of the republic, as the one he has now is obviously not sufficient.

Dead on 2100 hours, the “Angel Chorus” from the “Mastercollectors” rang out from the top of the observation: the heavenly choir sang the Festival Song, which began with the words:

The bookworm
The observation tower
They have this in common
They both stand high
And usually alone
The bookworm is a fellow
That isn't hard to please
It is ey...

At which point the choir came to a very premature stop, since they thought the song had finished, which made us think about the rhyme for “fellow”. We all tried very hard to think what in Heaven will rhyme with “Fellow” as we couldn't find a rhyme for it on Earth.

Promptly as the clock struck 2400 hours our harmonious festivities came to an end. Only the Venetians and Venezuelans, who had celebrated a bit too enthusiastically, had to be given a mercy flight to a hospital. Just as the ordinary flights were ready to take off, two more telegrams arrived. One was from the Kingdom of Ireland, very prettily printed in white on green, and one from Serbia, which read “Dr. Bchrwm, hch, hch, drml hch”! The Americans broke the record for the return journey, as they covered the distance home in 18 minutes 58 11/100 seconds.

MISCELLANEOUS

Russian Currency

A Petersburg philatelic bookworm writes to a Berlin comrade: “My guide through the labyrinth, I gladly accept the Schubert offered at the stated price. Please send it to me by post, I will send you the payment in a railway wagon”.

In the Bookshop

Mrs. Newly-rich asks to see a copy of Meiter's “German Field Post Cancellations 1914-18”, studies the book from all sides, tests the binding and the paper and finally says “but this is very poor paper, it must be wartime paper, haven't you got a peace-time edition”.

In the Detective Office

Proprietor, to someone looking for a job “every day in here we get matters that call for the utmost discretion, do you think you are fit for such a position?” The applicant “yes I do, I have worked for a long time in a Jugoslav print works putting the imprints on stamps”.

At the Marriage Bureau

“I have someone really special – a lady who has a really good philatelic library!”

“Have you a photograph?”
“Of the lady?”
“No you fool, of the library”.

Double Michel

“Why on earth have you got two identical Michel catalogues?”
“Because I mark my stamps “double Michel!”

Wireless

The Martians telephone today and proposed themselves as a branch society, and asked us to send a delegate to classify and arrange their library. Unfortunately we could not comply with their request as all German airships have been sequestered by the Allies.

Berlin Market Report

We give a brief report of today’s market: Suffrage lively, ears of corn rising, Bolschviks weak. Outrages averted, jailbreakers wanted, sowers under pressure, goodbye difficult, stages left vacant, air mail fallen, Karl and Zita separated, Bouchier dissuaded.

The Thurn and Taxi-riding of collections is taking over well-known and loved scientific writers. Send letters to the Editor marked ‘Weimar’.

END

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
1991, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

SOCIÉTÉ BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

1991, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Dear Member and Bibliophilatelist,

It is with pleasure that I finally find the spare time to let you know everything decided and put into effect by the Committee of the S.B.B. since our General Meeting in January.

The dozen or so people who turned up at the Hotel Astoria on that occasion did not regret it. After recalling the history of our Society and determining our new objectives for the year 1991, we went on to our first sale of philatelic works.

Although so few people were present, enquiries were numerous and the rarest works found purchasers. Thus, we sold the works by Salles, Hanciau and Cock, autographed items, and many magazines at very interesting prices.

From now on we hope to do the same thing again on a larger scale. So, if you have any really good items, do not hesitate to trust them to us; we will include them in a second sale planned towards the month of October. Nevertheless, if you prefer to sell directly from one person to another, we are also interested in certain things. Do not hesitate to contact us on this subject.

In another direction, relating to our bibliographic collection we are advancing gently but surely. A specialist programme has been drawn up but we are still trying to improve it before we encode all our works.

Moreover, before we put them on the computer, it is first advisable to copy all the information out again onto the bibliophilatelic slips with which you are all familiar. Nevertheless, help from you is still indispensable, there is so much work to be done. Do not hesitate to contact us as soon as possible.

Finally, we are also thinking of members who might want to have their books rebound. We have contacted several bookbinders and believe we can offer very attractive prices. Once again, first come will be first served. Call us without delay.

0.5

If there is a cross in this box you are behind with your subscription. Please read note II carefully.

p.3

IV. Almanac 1990

Long awaited... finally arrived. This could be the motto for the difficult gestation of this almanac. It has finally appeared and all members should have found it in their letter-box by now.

Obviously, this almanac has been rather long in appearing, but we believe we can offer our readers an original work of high quality.

We should again like to thank all those who have helped in various ways and we wish you all good reading.

V. Current Literature

Under this new heading we hope – in every issue – to give a brief commentary on recently published philatelic works.

Members who manage to acquire new works on the subjects dealt with at our meetings are, of course, invited to help us with this task by letting us have their personal opinions.

Therefore, here are two current works:

I will begin with a subject that has occupied us a great deal in recent months; I obviously refer to the various means of transporting mail, and more particularly, air transport. It seemed an interesting idea to analyse Mr. Lhéritiers papers on “Balloons”, and of Messrs. Collot and Corne of the “Mermoz” line.

p.5

VI. Subject of the Month

Our work on the compilation of bibliophilatelic references goes on. This time, we are looking for all the papers which amount in themselves to a bibliography of philatelic literature.

Let us quote the following by way of example:

p.6.

This last item covers only books, catalogues and periodicals written or edited by J.-B. Moens. It is still the most complete in this line.

Other references certainly exist which are less well known or more inaccessible. If you know of such, we shall be glad to hear of them.

VII. The Bulletin

As well as drawing up our bibliophilatelic data base, an important objective of the next months will be to ...

On one hand, we hope to publish regular articles of current interest such as sales reports, summaries and reviews of works... an appeal is thus aimed at amateur chroniclers.

On the other, we shall include in the bulletins certain articles published quite a long time ago in famous almanacs or periodicals from the philatelic press.

These are often quite short articles on philately, its history and anecdotes. Published decades ago, even in the XIX century, only bibliophilatelists today can be expected to have them in their archives. They may hardly ever read them themselves, and as for other people, they often do not know of their existence.

Of course these are not unpublished papers, but the passage of time gives them a picturesque aspect always interesting and pleasant to re-read at the present time.

What could be more surprising than to discover or rediscover the tribulations of a stamp unique in the world, or the ideas of a stamp merchants of the last century...

(3)

CONCERNING BIBLIOGRAPHIC LIBRARIES

At the meeting of the Annual Philatelic Congress of Great Britain, held last June in Nottingham, various authors read papers on various subject. The best of these gained the Congress Cup, awarded during the closing banquet to the winner: this year it was Miss Eva Brooks, who won with her paper on "The Philatelic Library".

In our opinion, as in that of the judges who had to pronounce on the merits of the papers given at Nottingham, this subject is so important that we cannot miss the opportunity of recalling the dominant interest that it has for collectors who do not limit themselves to the pages of a catalogue when they call themselves collectors.

We read her paper with an interest made all the keener by the fact that it coincides at every point with the sentiments we would have expressed in similar circumstances.

We will not reproduce here everything said on this topic by the laureate of Nottingham; we shall restrict ourselves to giving our readers an account of her principal ideas, adding to them our personal reflections.

(3) In Le Philatliste Belge, No. 70, 31 July 1927, p.208-212

Lovers of postage stamps can be divided into two classes. The simple collector and the philatelist, i.e. the collector who studies his stamps. Should not the first duty of every society be to educate the first so that he becomes the second? And in every case, should not the society afford him the means of becoming such? Collectors pure and simple go to their local meetings, look at exhibitions, and listen to the lectures and talks put on. Certainly this amounts to a first step on the right road, that of the study of stamps. Unfortunately though, most societies hold infrequent meetings, generally one a month, and moreover not all the members can attend these. Also, it must be recognised that a chatty lecture has only a very short-term value. This means of education is greatly overrated, since anyone who listens to what is read out or told to him does not have to reflect on it and concentrate all his attention on the subject being dealt with. Listeners are passive: what is said immediately fades away, since conferences are on the whole merely a survival of the epoch when books were dear and scarce.

Of course, a lecture can be an excellent preliminary, but it should be followed by personal study and application. Setting aside the discoveries made by the actual inspection of stamps, one may state with certainty that almost all the knowledge put forward in talks has been obtained from works of philatelic literature. To go even further, it is probable that every real research or discovery has been promoted or uncovered by people who have started by reading the literature appropriate to their subject of study.

Collectors of medals, porcelain, engravings all have their reference books without which they would miss many opportunities and would be exposed to serious monetary risks: the collector of stamps is in exactly the same situation as they!

Philately is thus a science, and the collector is called, after a more or less long period, to become a philatelist. To reach this point, it is indispensable for him to have recourse to work based on the experience of his elders and condensed into books and philatelic literature. The more one reads, the more one studies stamps, the better philatelic one will become, and this means that progress in philately will be intimately bound up with the intellectual and practical advantages drawn from one's reading and studies.

It follows from this that no society will really meet its objectives unless it owns a philatelic library. Of course, all the large important clubs will have set up their own, and probably many of the smaller ones have or try to form a collection of books. There is no doubt moreover that their members who are specialists will have the bibliography relating to the countries in which they specialise, but the general collector will always need to look up certain information, knowledge or explanations which he can best locate in the library of his society.

However, it is notorious that in many cases the members of a group ...

Thus when a library exists, it poses a series of problems as follows: does it include the books that members really want or will find useful? Is it available at suitable times and frequently enough? Is anything done to get members to read what will interest them, and to study their stamps?

Someone has to find out what might be wanted, and this task naturally falls to the Librarian.

Societies ought to grasp the need of entrusting this function to a capable man if it is to be fulfilled in an adequate and methodical manner.

It is a truism to say that what suits everybody suits nobody, hence the need to put in this post not somebody who is merely willing to take it on, but somebody who also has the time to devote himself to it seriously and put into practice his ideas and initiatives.

A librarian is not merely a custodian of his books. Anyone who takes the job seriously and has a spirit of propaganda can detect possible readers in places where no-one would have suspected. In fact, the demand for books to read has to be propagated.

The librarian's first task is to find out the countries in which his members take an interest. The information he collects on this point should be kept up to date so as to constitute a permanent reference. Next, he must find out how far the volumes in his library meet the needs of each member. We should then prepare, for society purposes, a list of books, brochures and other publications which could be useful to members, and let them know that the library contains items which would interest them.

Of course the librarian is not omniscient and should regularly consult specialists as to which would be the best materials to buy, but he should see that each member can lay hands on the literature that is or could be useful to him if he is to get all the desirable advantages from his society.

His next task is to draw up a catalogue, since without it a library is the equivalent of a book kept obstinately shut. From all points of view this catalogue should be on cards, since they enable it to be kept always up to date. These cards should refer not only to every book or pamphlet, but to every article of importance published in a journal which itself appears in the catalogue. The title of each book or article should be filed under the name of the country on subject to which it relates. Journals should obviously be bound at the end of each year, including their table of contents; but it would be too much to expect anyone who wanted information on such and such a country to search through the contents of a number of years. This need is met by the cards which will immediately locate the volume and page number of the article needed.

To the cards should be added maps, which are an invaluable aid for exhibitions or talks on the subject of the stamps of all nations. A map of the world will undoubtedly be useful in making comparisons. When it comes to colonies or small less-known countries, a map showing the location of neighbouring countries and in certain cases of their post office will be a welcome adjunct to the library. A map is indispensable for certain countries, especially when its stamps often have cancellations from offices which have disappeared or are very little known. These maps will be indispensable when the society gives an exhibition or lecture relating to the country it represents.

The librarian can never show too much inclination for adaptation and propaganda: this will show itself particularly in his control of the list of members, against the names of whom he will note the countries in which they are specially interested. If Mr. X is interested in the stamps of Gambia, the librarian will make a duplicate of every card filed under this heading and pass it on to Mr. X, asking him to put it into his album or file of references. He will also keep him informed of everything new which appears on this subject.

Miss Brooks gives more details of the system to be used in conveying to the members information on all the additions to the catalogue, but we shall pass over these, and other details relating to various organisations. It may be noted that the job of a librarian, properly understood, is no sinecure if he is interested in his work and wants to arouse and satisfy a demand for his books. If, in spite of his efforts, the use of the library remains practically zero he must seek for the reasons. Conferences, exhibitions, meetings, do they meet the needs of the majority of his members. Or is his activity restricted to exhibitions or specialist countries which only find favour with a few interested parties? The exhibition of interesting or famous collections is an inspiration and a privilege, and societies should be especially grateful to owners whose spirit of altruism and devotion allows them to send their treasures journeying from society to society to help in the education of less advanced collectors. Moreover, it is not enough to exhibit specialist collections: some part or other of a general collection should be shown to arouse general interest in exhibitions.

Setting up a competition based on philatelic knowledge will certainly increase the use of the library. Whatever the subject may be, the aim should be that every participant comes away feeling he has learned something. One should avoid as far as possible the exhibition of stamps from a country of little general interest, or which are so rare and costly as to be beyond the average purse. This type of exhibition puts people off rather than encouraging them, as well as giving rise to the circulation of pamphlets in which all the stamps look identical.

If we can set up a programme of meetings along lines that favour the study of stamps by the less advanced, there will be a very good chance of their moving from the first category to that of philatelists proper, and as such they will appreciate the usefulness of their society library. Generally, speaking, it is only the ignorant who show contempt for the contents of books: a real stamp-lover is never philatelically ignorant, at least as far as his special interests are concerned.

It is a false idea to be combated amongst writers and publishers that the institution of society libraries interferes with the sale of their works. Anyone with a special interest in a particular country will borrow it as soon as it appears on the shelves, and if it meets their needs they will immediately ensure their personal possession by buying a copy.

It thus follows that libraries will on the contrary promote the sale of books and will give authors and editors a definite advantage, since most of them generally are not thinking of a return and are free of any financial interest when they write or publish.

**

Such are the considerations, reproduced as faithfully as possible, put forward by Miss E. Brooks in her interesting talk.

May stamp-lovers and philatelic societies draw inspiration from it, and profit from it. We have often tried to show everybody the correct road to follow: "Le Philatéliste Belge", like practically all its comrades reports on all new publications that come its way. It has also tried to give its readers information on the most interesting articles published in the philatelic press, and intends to start doing so again very soon. It has also, for a long time, offered the bibliographic card service mentioned by Miss Brooks, and does this extensively for all regions. In other words, this service can give interested parties either special or general information on everything written since a very remote epoch.

We are convinced that there is not a single Belgian society or organisation which works as the laureate of Nottingham suggests, unlike a number of foreign societies, principally English, German, Swedish or American. Even if there is one which has an embryo library, demands are never or hardly ever made on it, or no detailed catalogue has been made, or else the members are completely ignorant of its existence.

We cannot escape the fact that the philatelists of Latin countries, the French in particular, are at a serious disadvantage from the literary point of view, since nine-tenths of what is published on postage stamps and has any real value is written in English or German. There are also important publications in the Italian and Spanish languages, but they are a minority. This disadvantage resulting from unknown or unfamiliar languages has been the object of a serious attempt at solution by our contemporary "Filatelia" of Turin, which publishes all articles in the language in which they were originally written, and gives an appendix of French translation of all those not written in the language of diplomacy.

As for lecture-conferences, they have been introduced by many societies affiliated or not to the Royal Federation, and they have an incontestable utility if they are drawn up in such a manner as to interest the maximum of listeners. We are completely in agreement with Miss Brooks' opinion that ??? subjects, or those which will only appeal to a small minority, should be avoided: or at least they should not be allowed to exceed a given time and not provoke the ??? accompanied by despair when the speaker announces during a conference that he still has to go through ten or fifteen years' issues from such and such a country.

Let us finally mention an interesting suggestion which has been made with a view to promoting or popularising philatelic knowledge: why do societies reward winners at meetings or exhibitions by giving them a cup, a medal, or something similar. Why not think of giving them a credit which will enable them to pick out a book which will please them and which can be given them in place of a prize or no real use. At least they could be given the choice between an object such as a cup or medal and one or more interesting books.

International exhibitions, whilst giving out the usual diplomas, could adopt a similar manner of proceeding.

VIII: Wanted

Mr. Mars Smets, 24 Av. Massenet, Brussels 1190, tel. 085/84.13.80 (WE: 02/343.33.44) seeks all philatelic literature (books, catalogues of sales) relating to the United States and to territories which have been under American administration at a given point in their history.

IX: Library

Starting with this number, we shall offer a number of items which we have in stock and which members want to get rid of. Details available from the President.

Also, we shall give details of new publications

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Philatelistische Bücherwurm
October 1922, Volume 2, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

PHILATELISTISCHE BÜCHERWURM

October 1922, Volume 2, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

THE FRIEND OF POSTAGE STAMPS
(Der Briefmarkenfreund)

By Alexander Bungerz

The above is the title of a little book that reached my desk thanks to the kindness of Herr J. A. Reich of Vienna. It was written by Adolf Fr. Storch, an official of the Imperial and Royal Post, and editor of the "Post", and printed by Karl Finsterbeck in Vienna in the year 1866. It measures about 12 : 17½ centimetres and runs to 44 pages. Its respectable philatelic age certainly justifies a detailed description, even though it is not the oldest "handbook".

The first printed work on philately, according to Senate President Viktor Suppantchitsch who died on 2nd March 1919 in Graz, was a private catalogue from Berger-Levrault dated 17th September 1861. This gave a chronological list of all postage stamps known to the author, and was sent for information to the people he exchanged with. These then reported their own experiences and discoveries, and Berger-Levrault put out a new edition, a total of ten of which had appeared up to the year 1864. The first issue contained twelve sides in quarto, and the last ran to 26 in octavo.

The second known work is a French one, put out by Alfred Potiquet under the title "Catalogue of Postage Stamps Produced in the Various Countries of the Glob", and appeared in the "Librairie Industrielle de Eugene Lacroix, 15 Quai Malaquars, E. de Laplante, stamp merchant for collections, 1 Rue Christine 1862", with the date of publishing 21st December 1861. In the year 1862 the patriarch of philately, J. B. Möens, came on the scene with his “Collectors’ Manual” in January; then in March came the second edition of Potiquet, followed a little later by the “Collector’s Notebooks” from Fois Valette in Paris. The first catalogues also appeared in England, namely those of Mount Brown and Dr. Gray in London, Frederic Booty in Brighton, Smith, Stafford Smith in Bath, and Young and Stockall in Liverpool. The first work by Berger-Levrault appeared in Strasburg, then a French city, but in the German language, so that it is reckoned to belong to the German philatelic literature. The first thing in Germany itself was the catalogue published by Tramburg’s heirs under the title “Survey of all known postage stamps issued from 1849-1862”. The date 1849 is of course a mistake, it must mean 1840, the year in which the first postage stamp appeared (in Great Britain, 6th May).

As far as America is concerned, A. C. Kline issued “The Stamp Collectors Manual” in Philadelphia the same year. It would be too much to list further publications, though it may be noted that the first album was also published in 1862, by Justin Lallier in Paris, whilst England has the credit of publishing the first stamp magazine (Monthly Advertiser, 15th December, Ed. Moore & Co.). A few months later, on 15th February 1863, followed Möen’s well-known journal “Timbre-Poste”, and on 1st May came the first German magazine “Magazin für Briefmarken-sammler” from Zschiesche and Köder in Leipzig. After this short bibliographical survey I will turn back to the “Briefmarken-freund”.

I should like to reprint the preface in its entirety for the readers of this journal. It is as follows:-

“The troubles of His Holiness the Pope have roused in me the wish to do my bit towards relieving them, and that by literary means, by devoting part of the proceeds of this little work to the above purpose and thus demonstrating my veneration and true devotion as a good Christian to the Holy Father. I thus offer this little work for publication with the hope that it will afford many true stamp lovers a substitute for real stamps, obtaining which is not only very difficult but also very costly. The collection of stamps is as legitimate as the collection of coins and seals. Not only do stamps offer an easy introduction to geography and history, but the typography, engraving and lithography of stamps offer examples of the development of art and industry in the different countries. I append a short geography to make it easier for the younger generation to learn.”

The author.

The arrangement begins with Europe, starting with Baden. Details are given of the surface area, the reigning Grand Duke, the capital city, and the principal rivers and mountains. Then comes “Postage Stamps 1851, a stereotype of the 6-kreuzer, with the caption “Stamp value in circle, black print on coloured paper”. The 1860 issue gives the picture of the 1-kreuzer with the words “Stamp, coat of arms, coloured print on white paper, perforated”. The third illustration is of a section of a cover with the 1858 9-kreuzer, and the notation “Cover. Grand Duke Frederick in relief, coloured print on white paper”, the fourth shows the 1-kreuzer, “State postage stamp, black print on yellow paper, perforated”. We see that the individual values are not given in the description, so that the collector of those days would not find it a “substitute for real stamps” as claimed in the Preface. The next states are Bavaria, Belgium, Bergedorf, Brunswick, Bremen, Denmark, Danube principalities under Turkish rule, Finland, France, Greece, Great Britain, Hamburg, Hanover, Holland, Holstein, Schleswig, Italy, Papal States with 11 illustrations, Lubeck, Luxembourg, Malta, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Modena, Naples, Norway, Oldenburg, Austria with 13 illustration, Parma, Poland, Portugal, Prussia, Romagna, Russia, Saxony, Sweden, Switzerland with 11 stereotypes, Sicily, Spain with 18 illustrations, Thurn und Taxis, Tuscany, Turkey and Württemberg. In all, there are 180 illustrations for Europe. The numbering actually goes to 181, but number 124 (Prussia) is not shown; instead we get the remark “As Stamp No. 121 above”.

(Conclusion to follows)

p.32

This work is a real mine of information for the philatelic bibliophile. For example, number 245 of 15th August 1898 contains a “Catalogue of the Swiss philatelic journals”, number 286 of 15th January 1902 a list of the philatelic journals of Spain, and number 287 of 15th February 1902 a list of the Dutch philatelic journals.

The world’s philatelic periodical literature of the year 1901-1903. In “Der Philatelist”, Dresden, vol. XXV, no. 312-321 of 15th March to 15th December 1904. Format 245: 175mm.

Index of the most important philatelic books and papers, domestic and foreign, excluding periodical literature. Chemnitz, 1907. Format 205: 135mm. 16 pages and wrapper.

Catalogue of the periodical literature of the entire world. Systematic chronological survey of the entire philatelic periodical literature, classified by language and country. With the co-operation of Victor Suppantchitsch in Graz; E. D. Bacon in South Croydon; R. R. Thiele in Wanwatosä, Wisc; A. J. Parès in Toulon; E. B. Jones in Sioux City, Iowa; and others. In “Szekula Briefmarken-Verkehr, Budapest, Vol. X, No. 110 to Vol. XIII No. 144, 20 Feb. 1910 to 20 Aug. 1913. Format 225: 150mm.

Unfortunately this catalogue remained incomplete. It covers only the German language groups and the beginning (Belgium) of the French language groups over the years 1863 to 1909.

2 16-page offprints of this work were also produced. Format 225: 150mm.

(To be continued)

p.35

MISCELLANEOUS

Prize for Philatelic Literature: Director Sieger has established a prize to be known as the Sieger Prize for Philatelic Literature, to be awarded annually for the best philatelic work. The prize will be awarded by a circle of leading philatelists, whose names will be announced later. The conditions are:

The work must appear in print for the first time, in the period from 1st October to 30th September. In judging less attention will be paid to style and aesthetic values than to philatelic utility.

The prize is restricted to works appearing in the form of books or pamphlets, not magazines, catalogues, albums or the like. Reprints may be considered for the prize if they were purchased in bound form and the period between their first appearance in print and their reprinting falls within the year as defined above. However, catalogues taking the form of a handbook may be considered.

Anything to be considered should be sent by 15th October every year at latest to Herr Director Sieger in Lorch (Württemberg). Disputes about the prize will eliminate the work concerned, while the actual prize will be awarded by a group.

There are 2 prizes offered this year:

A first prize of 3,000M

A second prize of 2,000M

A philatelic work has been crowned by the Académie Française

The “Danziger Briefmarken Rundschau” writes: For the first time in the history of the famous Académie Française since its foundation in the year 1634, a philatelic work has been distinguished by one of its prizes. The work concerned is the recent outstanding publication “The Post in Paris from its creation to our own days” by Georges Brunel, founder and editor in chief of “Le Timbre-Poste”. It was given a share in the “Grand Prix Jean Jacques Berger”, awarded every 5 years, so that philately can pride itself on official recognition by Science for the first time.

Honours

The “Germania Ring” which now includes some 80 societies with over 5,000 members held its 25th meeting in Leipzig on the 19th and 20th August. Four philatelists and researches were given honorary membership at this silver jubilee meeting. Three of the gentlemen thus distinguished are also members of our Society. These are Appeal Court President Carl Lindenberg of Berlin, Major Paul Ohrt of Dusseldorf and Dr. Med. Paul Pirl of Charlottenberg. We take this opportunity of offering our best congratulations to these researchers who have done so much for philately.

Purchase of a large philatelic library

We have also been informed that the large philatelic library of our esteemed co-member Solicitor and Notary Dr. Elias of Dortmund has been purchased by a well-known Berlin stamp dealer. Nothing is known exactly about the actual purchase price.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1971, Issue 60

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1971, Issue 60

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

FOREWORD

With issue 60 I give you the seventh issue from my period of officiating as Chairman of the Society Literature Section. It is slightly greater in extent than previous issue. The number of journals and catalogues indexed has also risen to 160 items. This obviously entails more work, and I must once more try to find people to help on a voluntary basis. At the minute I am indexing more than 100 journals by myself. My free time – and only then can I carry out this task – if often too short. Subscribers willing to help in evaluating journals are asked to get in touch with me.

This work overload is also one reason why I must keep to once-a-year publication, although financial constraints are the main reason. However, I am now up to date, since all journals and books received by the date of publication have been dealt with. Hence this issue covers all the literature made available to me up to the end of April 1971.

Publication has again been made possible by the generous financial support of the Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History. A small increase in price will be unavoidable next year, however, as the increase in the postal rate for printed materials has affected our finances very badly.

As last year, I am sending a bill with every copy. If you have already paid your subscription for 1971, you can ignore this.

In conclusion, the usual request to you: if you are pleased with Literatur-Nachrichten, please make it known, since it ought to be in every philatelic library. If you have not been pleased with it, then please let me know, as I am always ready to listen to construction criticism, and will willingly try to meet your wishes.

May thanks are due to all collaborators for their unselfish work, and to the Society of German Philatelists for the help I have received.

Berlin-Spandau, June 1971

Fritz Gaedicke

Report of the Chairman of Section B

As in every annual report that I have issued, the main topic of this year's will be Literatur-Nachrichten. It is still the signboard of the Society of German Philatelists in the literature sector. With an average of 160 pages, it has developed into a respectable work of reference. The only limit is the amount of work that can be carried voluntarily in my free time. However, I have again managed to include a few new titles in this issue. As far as possible, I have kept up the connection with the last Literatur-Nachrichten from my predecessor. It has thus been indexed from the year 1963 on. During the past year, my membership of the AIJP has enabled me to recruit Dr. Lipinski to deal with the Polish stamp magazines.

For the first time this year I stopped the editorial work when the manuscript began to be prepared, so that it is more up-to-date. There is no other way the annual publication.

I also have to spend a great deal of time in chasing up outstanding subscriptions. Writing to foreign magazines to get specimen copies is also very laborious and takes up a great deal time. However, this labour is unavoidable, since the magazine could not go on without free copies of the journals as I have not the means to buy in these publications. The subscriptions taken in just cover the costs of the Section and in 1969 I had to ask the Society for a contribution. What has pleased me is the recognition given to Literatur-Nachrichten at exhibitions. I got a bronze medal at Saerbrücken. I also look on the rise in the number of subscribers as a form of recognition, but it remains my wish for the majority of the societies in the BDPH to subscribe to Literatur-Nachrichten.

So much for the report on Literatur-Nachrichten. The special task of the Section is to answer enquiries as well and promptly as possible. If there has sometimes been a delay, I ask for your indulgence. When one has to read through over 120 stamp magazines, it is always hard to find time for other activities.

With the friendly support of the Hamburg-Altona Stamp Collectors' Society I was able to give a paper on philatelic literature in Hamburg at the beginning of the year. I would like to take this opportunity of once more thanking Frau Brandt, the first Chairwoman, and hope that the members of the Society obtained much new information from my survey of the literature of the world.

In conclusion, my thanks to everyone who has supported me in my work. Thanks to the Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History for their generous financial support. Hearty thanks to my collaborators, Messrs. Baum, Danesch, Debo, Eilers, Rossberg and Wölffel. Especial thanks to Herr Gleixner, the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, who has always given me vigorous support. I also wish to thank everyone who has made books and magazines available for my work. The last word, as in every report, is on recruitment. I do urgently ask you to promote literature in general, and Literatur-Nachrichten in particular within your societies and your circles of friends.

(Fritz Gaedicke)

The Library of Postal History and Philately – the Councillor Kalckhoff Memorial Library – also called the Postal Library – was constituted on 4th January 1971 from the existing three libraries in the Berlin postal area. The three libraries were those of the Society for German Postal History, Berlin Section, the State Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies and the Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888. They were in a position to fund the costs of running and building up their collections, so they were forced with the alternatives of either closing the libraries or making a gift of them to the LPD Berlin. The LPD Berlin accepted the gift, and added the libraries to the Berlin Museum of Post and Telegraphy. The idea is to carry out a complete reorganization, close the existing partial card-index and create an efficient documentation centre by means of three Post Office personnel. Only in this way can this great treasury of knowledge and information be preserved and made newly available.

We philatelists expect from the LPD Berlin and the Post Museum, increased activity and a rise in the number of journals taken, particularly regular subscriptions to the periodical literature in English, French and Spanish. Of the roughly 2,500 periodicals currently appearing, at least 10% - hence the most important – should be taken regularly.

It goes without saying that all works on philately and postal history appearing on the German, European and overseas market should be purchased, as should older works if the budget permits.

The Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888 will act in an advisory capacity to the library. This will carry on an old tradition that began more than 80 years ago with the club's founder Lindenberg, who was curator of the Reich Postal Museum.

It is to be hoped that the Berlin Post and Telegraph Museum will supply helpers who can deal understandingly and sensitively with the often specialised needs of philatelists. Archivists schooled in postal history and possessing plenty of initiative will be needed.

Neuhold

Please do not forget to send your subscription as shown on the enclosed bill to Berlin West, P.O. Box 1574, 66 F. Gaedicke – Special Account.

END

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
1990, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

SOCIÉTÉ BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

1990, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Dear Member and Bibliophilatelist,

1990 is coming to an end, and again a new year dawns which we hope will be rich in happy events for you.

THE TIME FOR BALANCE SHEETS

The end-of-year holidays are often made the occasion for surveying our good resolutions for the year that has passed. This is what we intend to do as briefly as possible.

Our association saw the light at the beginning of 1990 as an active society. We quickly acquired 36 members, an impressive number if we consider the specialist domain which still constitutes philatelic literature.

Over the course of this year 1990, we have sent out 4 liaison bulletins in which we have tried to keep our members abreast of the activities and projects of the S.B.B. and in general of everything relating closely or distantly to bibliophilately. Moreover, the S.B.B. held two meetings for talks. The first was held on the 25th January 1990 in the Maison de Luxembourg, where Vincent Schouberechts told us of a well-known researcher, André de Lock. During March, Monsieur Strapier suggested the use of his own house for our second get together, during which Madame Mossiat entertained us with the exploits of Spérati.

Three themes for study were adopted during the year: the Epaulettes, forgeries and the various means of carrier transport, with special emphasis on wind transport. Thanks to the faithful help of various members we have collected numerous bibliographic references relating to the subjects studied. All these findings are summarised in the Almanac Philatelique which will appear at the end of January 1991.

Under the direction of our President, the S.B.B. was also entrusted with the library of the Belgica 90 Exhibition. A score of showcases held the books and periodicals, old or more recent and in many cases quite rare, that many of our members had agreed to exhibit. It was pleasant to see the curiosity aroused in the visitors, many of whom asked for fuller information. There was thus the opportunity to familiarise the wider public with a still too little-known domain of philately.

We can also announce that our data bank is being built up little by little. We may recall that this data bank will be at the service of the researcher by giving him the maximum number of references to books and articles on a given subject. An information scientist, Mr. Algoet has agreed to give us the benefit of his advice and expertise to create the software. He is already making preliminary trials on the basis of a very full list of "subject codes" and "country codes". Monsieur Algoet, to whom our hearty thanks, is the father of Mme Hahn, well-known in philatelic circles.

This will be a lengthy piece of work which needs, and will continue to need, a great deal of work, but we are convinced of its usefulness and have decided to carry it out to its end.

Finally, we have organised two events to close this year 1990. Once, as announced, is the publication of a philatelic almanac, which will reach you through the post during the month of January. Some hundred pages long, and printed on laid paper and adorned with photographs, this almanac will carry the list of references on the subjects dealt with during our meetings, along with a variety of unpublished articles. We will reveal no more for the moment

I. NEW MEMBERS

We have had the pleasure of including in our number Mr. Bigaignon, of Wezenbeek-Oppem. Welcome to the ranks of the S.B.B.

II. INVITATION TO OUR A.G.M.

You are all cordially invited to our A.G.M. which will take place on Saturday, 19th January at 1430 precisely in the salons of the Hotel Astoria, 103 Rue Royale, Brussels 1000.

Agenda:

- President's address
- Reply by Committee to all requests for information on the administration of the S.B.B. In this collection we shall always be very grateful for advice you can give us or the help you may give to the S.B.B. in the future.

- Sale of philatelic literature; we would like to point out that this sale will be a first. It is in fact the first time in Belgium that a study circle has organised a sale devoted to philatelic literature alone. This is a fact worth mentioning.

We should also point out that had to ring at more than one door to make up the catalogue you will find at the end of the bulletin. Hence we thank all those who have entrusted lots to us. We hope that the purchasers will not deceive them.

III. APPEAL TO YOUR GOODNESS

During this first year of existence, the S.B.B. has tried to keep you informed about its various activities. If you wish to help us to continue you can do so by sending in your subscription for 1991. This remains unchanged at 750 Belgian francs, and should be sent to Account: C.C.P. 000-1304282-20, Société Belgie de Bibliophilatérie.

IV. SYMPATHY CORNER

We have heard with deep sadness of the death of Dr. A. van Grunderbeek, great stamp lover and member of the Académie de Philatélie de Belgique. We share the grief left of his entire family and express to them our sincere condolences.

END

Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler
10th February 1907, Volume 1, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 2005

PHILATELISTISCHE LITTERATUR-SAMMLER

10th February 1907, Volume 1, Issue 3

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

P.P.

No.3 of "Philatelistische Literatur-Sammler" is basically a new edition of no.1, with the alterations that have come to light in the meantime. Nos. 4 and 5 will give the editors duplicates and wants lists relative to the French and German philatelic literature. I respectfully ask all lovers of such literature to participate actively in exchanging, buying and selling. When buying, postal or carriage charges are always at the expense of the purchaser, exchanges are free to each party.

This paper is sent free to all collectors of philatelic literature known to me, particularly in those countries to which individual issues refer. I offer to send it regularly for an annual subscription of 1.50 marks. Publication is irregular, but it will appear at least six times a year in issues containing 8 pages.

I would like to have regular exchanges with all publishers of philatelic journals.

I offer myself for the active promotion of all philatelic journals under the usual conditions.

I wish to have correspondents in all countries to supply information on the availability of philatelic literature.

END

Der Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler
1st May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 2005

DER PHILATELISTISCHE LITTERATUR-SAMMLER

1st May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 4

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

Published by Dr. ROMMEL-LEIPZIG

P.P.

Enclosed is No.4 of my magazine for literature collectors, and I ask all lovers and collectors of philatelic literature to check their holdings thoroughly and join me in vigorous buying, selling and exchange. I ask buyers to send me their orders. I prefer to have offers of philatelic journals along with their prices. As for exchanges, I am always, I am always especially pleased to get lists of duplicates, particularly of states, countries and languages different from those wanted in return. Postage and shipping costs must always be paid by the purchaser; with exchanges I use post-paid in both directions.

This magazine has been sent post-free and without charge to all philatelic literature-collectors known to me, particularly in the states to which individual numbers refer. For regular supply, I would like an annual subscription of 1.50M.

The magazine appears at irregular intervals but at least 6 times a year as issues of about 8 pages. I would like to have regular exchanges with all publishers of philatelic journals.

I ask for the vigorous cooperation of all philatelic journals under the usual conditions.

RIVISTA DEL FRANCOBOLLO, Rome

Can be ordered from its cover orive of 2 francs.

I seek correspondents in all countries to share information on matters relating to philatelic literature, with a view to the further expansion of my big catalogue of the philatelic periodical literature of the entire world. In later numbers it is planned to publish short reports on the condition of the philatelic press and to accept a limited number of advertisements relating to philatelic journals: these will not be from the editor alone but will give wants and offers from literature collectors. Unless these relate to exchanges, I shall charge 20 pfennigs for a whole line, and 10 pfennigs for a half-line.

OPEN INVITATION

REV.R.K.THIELE of WAVWATOSA. Wis. I again ask him here to send me an equivalent for my consignment of magazines (about 700 issues) of summer 1903.

JACQUES PARES of PARIS, 35 Rue des martyres, employed by Th. Lemaire, 16 Au. De l'opera has owed me for 3 years for about 400 magazines sent to him, and is hereby requested to let me have something in return at last. Hermann BURKHARDT of Zwich is requested to settle the balance of his account.

Printed and published by Dr. ROMMEL, 9, Insel-strasse, LEIPZIG 28: also responsible for editorial matter.

END

Der Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler
11th May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 2005

DER PHILATELISTISCHE LITTERATUR-SAMMLER

11th May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 5

Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of permanent interest to bibliophiles.)

p.

Edited by Dr. Rommel-Leipzig

No. 4 of my journal for literature collectors is enclosed, and will all friends and collectors of philatelic literature check the contents very thoroughly and take part with me in vigorous exchanges, buying and selling. Those anxious to buy should send me their wants. Offers of philatelic journals are most acceptable if they come with prices. As far as exchanges are concerned, lists of duplicates are always most acceptable, particularly of countries and languages different from the ones required. Postage and freight charges are always at the expense of the purchaser; with exchanges, I give postage for postage.

This magazine is sent without charge and post-free to all collectors of philatelic literature known to me, particularly those in countries to which individual issues related. To send it regularly, I would appreciate a yearly subscription of M1.50.

The sheet appears at irregular intervals, but comes out at least 6 times a year in a size of about 8 pages.

I would like regular exchanges with all publishers of philatelic magazines.

I am ready to represent actively all philatelic magazines under the usual conditions.

REVISTA DEZ FRANCOBOLLO, Rome

Can be ordered from me at its original price of 2 francs.

I seek correspondents in all countries to exchange information on philatelic literature so as to extend my large catalogue of world philatelic literature. The intention for subsequent issues is to publish short reports on the state of the philatelic press, plus a limited number of advertisements relating to philatelic journals, not only from their publishers but also from literature collectors with their wants and offers. Unless there can be an exchange. I shall charge 20 pf for a line and 10 pfg for a half-line for such advertisements.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1951, Whole number 6

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1951, Whole number 6

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

CONTENTS

1. Philatelic literature at the exhibitions in Karlsruhe, Wuppertal and Stuttgart.
2. Donations to the philatelic section of the Munich City Library.
3. Review of literature.
4. Literature references (index).
5. Literature exchange service.
6. Exhibition Calendar.
7. Auction catalogues received, offers.
8. Readers' letters
9. Miscellaneous

p.34 English Bibliography

The English magazine "The Stamp Lover" regularly publishes an "Index to Current Philatelic Periodicals" by Arthur Blair, in which the contents of 65 English and North American specialist journals are listed by country.

The following journals are covered:

- p.35 The August/September issue covers the publications from 15th June to 10th August 1951, the October/November issue gives the index for the current year up to 15th October 1951.

This very useful bibliographic work by “The Stamp Lover” forms a valuable supplement to the bibliographic data in “Literature Reports”.

- p.36 Helpers with Index!

In recent years a number of our readers have been kind enough to help with the index (including getting hold of the journals).

Unfortunately not all our helpers have access to the journals they would like to deal with, and the latest issues cannot be spared from here. We are therefore putting out a call for readers of Literature Reports who either take one of the following journals, or can procure it, to be dealt with for the index. The titles with which help is needed are as follows:

- p.37 Distinction for Exhibiting Philatelic Literature

A prize and scroll were awarded to G. Schlorke, the collector of airmail literature of Eisenach. At DEBRA 1950, Herr Schlorke exhibited books on airmail, exhibition catalogues, and many German, English and French periodicals on airmails, flight routes, airmail adverts, etc.

END

Literatur Nachrichten
September 1951, Whole number 4/5

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
1983, Transcribed onto computer March 2012

LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN

September 1951, Whole number 4/5

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

[p.1]

Contents.

- 1.) C. Michaelis: Contribution to our knowledge of the German philatelic literature
- 2.) Donations: the philatelic section of the City Library of Munich
- 3.) Arrivals: Offers and Auction catalogues
- 4.) Literature synopses
- 5.) Literature information (Index)
- 6.) Literature placement service
- 7.) Exhibitions calender
- 8.) Radio philately
- 9.) Reader's views
- 10.) Miscellaneous

pp.2-4

Contribution to our knowledge of the German philatelic literature.

C. Michaelis

In earlier days, namely the years 1932-1935, I have published contributions on the literary history of German periodicals under the title The duration of the life of postage stamp periodicals in the magazine Der Philatelistische Literatursammler (The philatelic Literature Collector) and its successor Die Philatelistische Literatur (Philatelic Literature). Over 50 different journals were described in them. The storm of war had an annihilating effect on those that reached the year 1943. The section to be published now will deal in particular with those journals that were either not included in the previous sections, or that went on publishing useful contributions beyond the cut-off date of the previous sections. Finally, some very recent publications will be included.

A few words first about the journal: Der Philatelische Literatursammler (The Philatelic Literature Collector). The Grüne Sammler-Welt (Green Collectors' World) that appeared in Niebull from 1930 onwards did not reach a very high level philatelically speaking, but stood high in popular regard because of one significant factor, the publication from July 1932 onwards of its supplement "The Philatelic Literature Collector". The editor of this was C. Schmitt diel of Hamburg. This supplement met a deeply felt want for the friends of philatelic literature. It gave wider circulation to contributions from the ranking specialists at home and abroad. From Volume III, Issue 1, 1934, onwards it became an independent paper and the title was changed to Die Philatelistische Literatur.

The issues published were as follows:-

Volume I	1932	N ^{os} 1-6
Volume II	1933	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume III	1934	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume IV	1935	N ^o 1

A general index is only available for years I and II. A particular rarity is Volume IV, 1935 N^o 1. Volume I, 1932 was also produced as a special numbered edition on art paper. Unfortunately the magazine ceased to appear far too soon.

Apart from its limited number of subscribers, this early death was due to personal factors. The contents of the journal were always first-class.

Finally a description should be given of the journal that was in a way the mother of the previous one, namely the Grüne Sammler-Welt. The name refers to the green paper on which the entire journal was printed in the early stages. From number 1 of 1933 onwards, white paper was used for the inside and only the cover remained green. The editor and publisher was Johs. Klink of Niebull (Schleswig). The contents, in the early years especially, were kept on the popular level and were intended more for the smaller collector. Important scientific articles only appear in the later years. There was a good new issues service for stamps (H. E. Silger) and entires. After the publication of Volume VII number 9 of 1936, the magazine was amalgamated with Aequator (of which numbers 1 to 3 had appeared independently in 1936) and issued under the title Sammler-Welt-Aequator. From Volume VIII numbers 10/11 of 1937, there was another change of title to Sammler-Welt (Collectors' World) under which name the magazine went on appearing independently to the end of 1938. Half of Volume X of 1939 appeared only as what was called an insert in the Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde (German Journal of Philately) (Breslau).

When the title changed to Sammler-Welt-Aequator, the green cover also disappeared and was replaced until the end of 1938 by an illustrated coloured cover. Volume VI number 1 of 1935 had a very individual format, as it appeared in three different make-ups:-

- a. green paper for the cover, white for the text
- b. white paper for the cover, green for the text
- c. white paper for cover and text.

There is a cumulative index for 1930-32, then individual ones for the subsequent years up to VIII 1937.

The total number of issues was:

Volume I	1930	N ^{os} 1-11
Volume II	1931	N ^{os} 1-6, 7/8, 9-12
Volume III	1932	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume IV	1933	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume V	1934	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume VI	1935	N ^{os} 1-12
Volume VII	1936	N ^{os} 1-9 from N ^{os} 10-12 as Sammler-Welt-Aequator
Volume VIII	1937	N ^{os} 1-9 from N ^{os} 10/11-15 as Sammler-Welt
Volume IX	1938	N ^{os} 1-24
Volume X	1939	N ^{os} 1-12 as insert in Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde

pp.5-6

Donations: the philatelic section of the City Library of Munich.

p.7

Arrivals: Offers and Auction catalogues.

pp.8-23

Literature synopses.

pp.24-78

Literature information (Index).

Contents of the following periodicals.

pp.79-

Literature placement service.

pp.81-83

Exhibitions calendar.

p.84

Radio philately.

pp.85-89

Reader's views.

pp.90-100

Miscellaneous.

p.95 For working on the index the following have agreed.

p.99 Literature information.

Corrections and additions to the Index.

- 1.) Add a + to the Index for:
- 2.) Remove the + for:
- 3.) Corrections for misprints:
- 4.) Changes in abbreviations:
- 5.) Additions:

END

Literature Nachrichten
1951, Whole number 3

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1951, Whole number 3

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

pp.1-5 Assessment of philatelic literature at postage stamp exhibitions by Ch. O. Muller.

pp.6-8 Donations to the philatelic section of the Munich City Library pp.9-15 Literature reviews

pp.16-48 Literature record pp.50-52 Literature exchange services (LIVEDI)

- Literature wanted
- Literature offers
- Further offers

p.53

p.54 Exhibition calendar

p.55

p.56-59	Readers' comments
60-61	Sundries

CONTENTS

This issue includes the following:-

1. Catalogue of the journal abbreviations used in the index to the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library.
2. Literature on offer from the bookshop of Carl Gerald's Son, 10 Hammerlingplatz, Vienna VIII.
3. The same from the firm of E. H. de Beaufond, 8 Rue St. Florentin, Paris ??

p.53 Society Periodicals Section

Philately has so many aspects today that one journal alone cannot meet the needs of collections. But – who knows all the journals, who is aware which of them has departed this life? As a result, the book trade hardly bothers with philatelic journals because of the limited demand. The stamp trade reluctantly buys the ones in which competitors advertise, and to crown all the most important cannot be obtained via the post.

Hence the Society has done as it has previously before 1914 and after 1924, and set up a periodicals section under the leadership of Herr Ruprecht Glasewald, 14 Hellbrookstrasse, Hamburg 33.

From now on, the following journals can be obtained at trade prices (not including postage, reduced rates if 3 are ordered at once):

Orders may be placed by sending the appropriate sum in the form of a money order to P. O. Box Hamburg 1326 85, Rupr. Glasewald, Hamburg 33.

p.55 Offers received

END

Literature Nachrichten
1952, Whole number 7

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1952, Whole number 7

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

	Page
1a The Central Philatelic Library for Swiss Collectors	2
1b Catalogue of specialist journals available in Philatelic House	3
1c The subject press in Scandinavia 1951	7
1d Stamp auction for the benefit of the philatelic section of the Munich City Library	8
2. Reviews of literature	11
3. Periodicals survey	16
4. Literature references (index)	20
5. Literature exchange service	50
6. Exhibition calendar	51
7. Auction catalogues received and offers	51
8. Readers' Letters	52
9. Radio philately	56
10. Miscellaneous	57

p.2

The Central Philatelic Library for Swiss Collectors

In March 1944, the governing body for Posts and Telegraphs and the Union of Swiss Philatelic Societies came to an agreement about the creation of a Central Library. The Union's central library was transferred to the Department of Posts & Telegraphs. The Union helped with the progressive development of this Central Library by passing over gifts and review copies and supplying a credit every year for new acquisitions. Books purchased for or donated to the Central Library become the permanent property of the DPT. The direction of the DPT, by way of recompense, makes no charge for housing and running the library, or for using it. A special order governs the day-to-day use of the library.

What led to this arrangement? A few years before the agreement with the Union, the Zurich Central Library decided to get rid of its philatelic literature. Since the DPT Administration, being the owners of the country's biggest stamp collection, had a direct interest in philatelic literature and wanted to maintain the collection, they took over the title to it. This laid the foundation for the later development of a philatelic library. Another factor was the ever more obvious realisation that private or society libraries were, with a few exceptions, simply not viable in the long run and had either to vanish or be amalgamated with another existing one. There was, however, another very weighty motive. There are known to be what are called stamp collectors and philatelists. A collector is more or less a person who fathers together stamps or other philatelic items. However, not every one of these is a philatelist, since that implies someone who does not just collect, but goes into the subject in depth, and knows the history of his stamps, their special features and everything else associated with them. He is thus concerned not just with whatever he is collecting, but also with the specialist literature, to widen his knowledge and made his knowledge and experience available to others. Thus the philatelist does not only get entertainment and enlightenment from his collection but is enriched by studying the relevant periodicals. Another, usually quite unexpected, world opens before him. The Central Library is designed to help with this praiseworthy side of philatelic activity.

Its stock currently numbers about 3,500 volumes, brochures, catalogues, journals, yearbooks, etc., with a purely philatelic content. To this is added the abundant collection of Dr. Paganini's airmail archive. If we also bear in mind that as well as numerous monographs on postal history, official publications such as Ministry circulars and the like are available, we may safely say that the reader has about 7,000 volumes to choose from. This is all in very pleasant surroundings. From the foundation of the library to the present day, over 4,000 books and pamphlets have been issued on loan. If we look at the published issue figures for some of the important foreign libraries, we see that our level of interest exceeds that in more prominent philatelic countries.

Nevertheless, we hope that still more collectors will find their way into the literature and become philatelists, true philatelists in the best meaning of the word.

E. Rickli
Bern

p.7
Notes

- Journals marked x can be obtained via the post.
- Journals marked + can be obtained via the journals section of the League of German Philatelists (R. Glasewald, Hamburg 33, 14 Hellbrookstrasse)

The Scandinavian Technical Press 1951

“Svensk filatelisk Tidskrift” (Swedish Philatelic Magazine) contains nothing but reports on meetings, exhibitions and new issues. It is the house journal of the main Swedish society and appears in Stockholm 10 times a year at 70 ore per issue (vol. 51)

“Nordisk Filateli” (Nordic Philately) is the most respected advertisement journal (vol. 14) but unfortunately publishes relatively few philatelic articles.

“Frimärk bladet” (Stamp Press) is connected with the Stamp Collector’s Society and often publishes useful articles though it is actually only an advertising paper. It costs 50 ore per issue (vol. 7) and is 20-32 pages long.

“Frimärks uyt” (Stamp News) appears eight times a year. It is the organ of a Stockholm dealer and contains mainly offers of adverts.

“Skandinavisk Filateli” appears in Borås eight times a year, and is a small but relatively good magazine, practically the only one to publish adverts from abroad. Almost no text, is devoted mainly to new issues from the Nordic countries.

“Skandia” magazine for labels etc., appears in Stockholm, has changed hands frequently. Irregular publication. Only for subscribers.

“F-H-Nytt” (F.H. News) is a quarterly publication from the stamp-dealing firm of Frimärshuset. Offers and price-lists, also their own ongoing catalogue of the stamps from the Nordic countries.

“World Philatelic” is a Swedish edition of the Italian journal, but very small.

E. B. Wehner / Västervik

p.8

Stamp Auction in aid of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library

On 12.XII.1951 at 1435, Radio Munich broadcast an item on “Stamps as a Hobby” relating to the auction of stamp held in aid of the Munich City Library. A shortened version is given here:

“We have often mentioned the philatelic library in Munich, pointing out that they had not enough money to acquire all the important new publications. What could be done? The philatelists of Munich had an original idea. Wilhelm Hofinger has reported on it as follows:

The Committee of the Munich Philatelic Union – chairman Herr Fridl of the Workers’ Philatelic Club – decided to obtain the means for improving the City Library and the reports it publishes from the ranks of collectors.

Hence in early summer, a collection was undertaken with very satisfactory results. However a library always needs more money to buy in the current literature, and so we have just had to repeat our supporting effort. We have just held a stamp auction in the Kreuzbrau Hall in Munich, at which over 100 lots with a total of more than 5,000 Michel stamps were offered. All of them, including a Black Cross and other rarities were donated by supporters at home and abroad. Bidding was lively and high, and the many jokes made by the auctioneer and the public led to a happy and enjoyable meeting so that all the lots could be knocked down at a good price. Hardly one lot went below 20% Michel, and many of them went much higher.

The further continuance of our philatelic library is thus ensured for some time, and what is perhaps still more important, the "Literatur-Nachrichten" (Literature reports) can appear again. The collectors of Munich may be proud that they have in this way aided an open collection which is not indispensable only to them since other national and even foreign societies have shown by their gifts how important our library is to them. Obviously though, we cannot leave matters now. So we are starting right away on the preparations for a similar auction next Spring.

When state and city see how serious we are about our philatelic library, and how we are even ready to make personal sacrifices for it perhaps they, on their side, will occasionally be willing to see if it is really impossible for them now and then to squeeze out a little to secure and improve a cultural benefit for Munich. By and large the sums involved are not tremendously high, but they would be a lot for our members to find.

p.9

List of Donors

The following dealers, collectors and societies have assisted with donations:

p.10

Note

When the place of residence is not quoted, it will be Munich. The Philatelic Library wishes to express its most grateful thanks to all donors who have not yet had a personal acknowledgement.

p.57

Miscellaneous

The preparatory work carried out by Dr. Erich Mathieu, the editor of the Short Stamp List, on a Japan-Germany exchange has led to the foundation of the NICHI-DOKO-TOMO NO (Japan-German Friendship Society) organisation. Details were given in Short Stamps List No. 2/1952. This is the disinterested foundation for an international exchange arrangement between the two countries.

Philatelic courses for the winter term of 1951/52 at the City Literary Institute in Gibb St. are announced to begin on the 2nd October.

174 philatelic journals are listed in the American Philatelist No. 608. Title, address and price are given for each individual journal.

(BTB 1951-12, 134)

Philately at the Dusseldorf University Extension

Our member, E. W. Mowes is to give a series of extension-course lectures at Dusseldorf University with the title "The Romance of Postage Stamps", and forming an introduction to the building-up of a collection. The last evening will be devoted to an account of the philatelic literature.

Sieger Prize for Philatelic Literature

The trustees of the “Hermann E. Sieger Prize for Philatelic Literature”, Privy Councillor Dr. Kalckhoff and Dr. Gerard Schmidt, have awarded the prize for the year 1951 to Dipl-Ing Karl Winkler for his work “Handbook to the Cancellations of Bavaria”.

W R 1952 – 1: 15

Library List

A note of their stocks of philatelic literature has been sent in by:

1. Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies bookshop (curator Willy Harms)
2. Werner Puth, Hanau
3. Royal Philatelic Society, London; Accessions list for first half of 1951 in London Philatelist.
4. Stamp Collectors' Union of Hanover North
5. Cologne-Aachen State Society

Forgeries

The rare perforations on the buildings series have now been extensively explained, thanks to the effective co-operation of the firms of Schmitz (Bonn) and Kuhlow (Aachen). The Federal Ministry of Posts has also confirmed the definite existence of forgeries. The following values appear with the forged line perforation 14:

25Pf Type III	all sides L14 (forged)
40Pf Type II	horizontal L11½ (correct!) vertical L14 (forged)
90Pf Type III	horizontal L14 (forged) vertical L11 (correct!)

The first has been produced from unperforated waste, and the second two from partially perforated waste.

Before and since, only the following closely-perforated values of these three denominations are known to be all right:

25Pf	Type II and III K.14;
40Pf	Type II and III, K14; Type III L14: 11 and L11: 14 (possibly also 14: 11½ and 11½: 14 !)
	Type III L14 on all sides
90Pf	Type III K14

Dr. Withmann . Passau

In connection with the National Stamp Exhibition, Lord Mayor Damm of Wupperfal made the significant comment that philately, which has hitherto been presented to the outsider in an all too superficial manner has been revealed to him here as the linch-pin of a deeper science.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1952, Whole number 8

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1952, Whole number 8

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

	Page
1a New handbook of philately	2
1b Philatelic literature in public libraries also	3
1c Gifts to the philatelic section of the Munich City Library	6
2. Literature reviews	6
3. Periodicals survey	16
4. Literature references (index)	19
5. Literature exchange service	49
6. Meetings calendar (exhibitions, congresses, etc.)	54
7. Auction catalogues received and offers	54
8. Readers' letters	55
9. Radio philately	59
10. Miscellaneous	59

p.2

New Handbook of Philately

When the first edition of the "Kohl-Briefmarken-Handbuch" (Kohl Postage Stamp Handbook) appeared 25 years ago, it was the hoped-for beginning of an incomparable encyclopaedia of stamps. The work was steered safely through all kinds of obstacles and difficulties, until the sudden resignation of the then editor, Dr. Herbert Munk, placed its continuation in jeopardy. All philatelists will still remember how the initiative of the "Philatelic Handbook Section" of the National League of Philatelists, supported by the "Society of German Collectors" planned to replace the Khol handbook by the "Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde" (Handbook of Philately), edited by Hans von Rudolphi. Even the death of von Rudolphi did not interrupt the work, until the outbreak of war compelled a halt to be called.

More than six years after the end of that war, we, i.e. the entire body of philately, are still without a definitive work which will give us information on the stamps of the entire world. Without a definitive German handbook, without an equivalent encyclopaedia, without the prospect of a fresh start. Time is passing beyond recall. The death of every philatelist means the death of some knowledge, lost for ever to us and our successors. The few monographs that appear here and there, and always singly, preserve as good as nothing.

No-one can approach this mighty torso with the style and force of a Dr. Munk. Both the opportunity and the qualifications are lacking. However, at this twelfth hour it can and should be our task to take up this twice-begun work and bring it to a conclusion. The "Society of German Philatelists" has set up its "Committee on the New Handbook of Philately" with the object of getting the New Handbook of Philately into print. It cannot be either a continuation or a supplement in aims or form, but it should have the spirit of Dr. Munk and his co-workers and use their efforts as its pattern. To do this, we shall need the help of all German and foreign philatelists.

Hellmut Kricheldorf

Enquiries should be addressed to "Committee on the New Handbook of Philately), Executive Committee, 22 Bruckfeldstrasse, Frankfurt (Main-Neiderrad) (P.O. Box No. 144265, Frankfurt-am-Main)

Philatelic Literature in Public Libraries Also

Our eager co-workers and Dusseldorf colleague published a very welcome article with the title "More Passion Amongst Philatelists" which appeared under the sub-heading "Between us Collectors" in part 4/1952 of the SL publications of the Sk Maklert in part 23/1951 of the DZB. It reads as follows:

"I have taken the opportunity of going through the catalogues of a number of public libraries, in my own immediate locality and in the cities of Dusseldorf, Cologne, Duisberg, Essen, Dortmund and others. I found a good deal of literature that could only have been of use and profit to a small circle of people, and had only been taken out a few times. I found textbooks on chess, on how to make puppets and do wood-carving, or looking after tropical fish and golden hamsters ... but nothing on philately. It would be a laudable task to work out statistics on how many people borrow such books, and how often. If these libraries stocked philatelic literature, it would certainly be borrowed, not by collectors alone but, like many of the books mentioned, by outsiders as well. I can well imagine that Hofinger's monograph on French stamps or Fritz Sebastian's distinguished work on Thurn and Taxis or the North German postal region would be just as interesting to the non-specialist as a book on the breeding of tropical fish.

The Chairman of the Philatelic Literature Section, my colleague Christoph Otto Muller of Munich, suggested at the same meeting that the libraries of the bigger cities should at least get the latest catalogues every year. I would extend this to the purchase of other new philatelic publications. Nobody need object that they simply have not the means for purchasing such items. If all the larger public libraries set aside an annual sum of up to 75DM for such purchases, this would really not affect their overall provision. Why this stubbornness and lack of understanding towards us philatelists from official quarters? Simply and solely because we have not put ourselves forward enough, and have always tried to keep our interest and our hobby a secret as if it were a vice, even from the eyes of our pitying wives, and especially from our friends and colleagues. Once or twice a month we come in contact with eager people from all walks of life who share our enthusiasm, who sometimes – and herein lies the tragi-comedy of the whole situation – are in positions where they could do us some good.

I know an Inspector of Schools, an excellent man, and a few weeks ago I lent him Father Clemens Anhäuser's book "The Christian world depicted on stamps". He was quite astonished by the affection with which this work had been put together. A colleague of his of the same rank is himself an ardent stamp collector, but has never said anything to him about philately or its use in lessons. I know a whole series of teachers who are members of reputable societies and are themselves not only enthusiastic collectors but also researchers in a very wide variety of field, who never say a single word about their hobby either in the course of their teaching; or in friendly conversation with their colleagues in the staff room.

Hence, it is any wonder that we are so isolated, and that the chairmen of our youth sections are always wringing their hands in the philatelic press about the lack of new blood. The production cost for our literature is well above the average for other books of the same length, and this is "thanks" in the first place to the fact that the market is extremely small. I think the hearts of both authors and publishers would beat higher if a greater demand led to more copies printed, and thus to a reduction in the price.

What applies to the provision of literature in public libraries is no less true to some extent for the libraries in secondary schools. The kind of literature for amateurs and hobbyists mentioned at the beginning is also found in these libraries to a greater or lesser extent. However, a book like "Herings stamp book", "The School for Philately" or "The Romance of Postage Stamps" are hardly ever found, though I cherish the idea that it is by reading such books that many people have first been brought into real contact with stamp collecting. Certainly, when a publisher in our line brings out a new book he will send the usual circular round to the people concerned with such purchases, but this is likely to join so many other items in the wastepaper basket in our fast-moving days. We would all lend a helping hand here: societies could notify the heads of public libraries as to the contents and value of the book concerned, and we collectors could do the same for anyone whose position and calling might enable him to help.

It is rather shaming to find, for example, that some "bridge" libraries and the Bibliothèque Française are much more open to collector's wishes about the provision of foreign literature than are their German colleagues."

These striking remarks should prove to the direction of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library that the presence of at least the most important catalogues, handbooks and monographs in public libraries would not simply meet a need that definitely exists, but would considerably decrease the burden of external loan requests going to Munich.

It should be noted that various German libraries do take the trouble to borrow philatelic literature from their readers from Munich: they include the Nassau State Library, Wiesbaden, the library of the Technical University, Hanover, the West German Library, Marburg, the Hesse State and University Library, Darmstadt, the city libraries of Krefeld, Osnabrück, Siepen and Viersen, the Dortmund State and City Library, and the Luneberg Senate Library. The Pfalz

State Library at Speyer tries to purchase important philatelic literature and the authorities in Cologne and Dusseldorf are interested in philatelic literature. One of the Munich public libraries (Ramersdorf) has a collection of philatelic literature for loan, and the new director of the Munich Library system, Herr Branz, has very kindly allotted the sum of 3,000DM to the philatelic section of the City Library for the purchase of philatelic literature during the financial year 1951. He is himself a collector and will uphold the cause of philatelic literature, as will the cultural commissioners for Munich, Prof. H. L. Held, and ex Lord Mayor, Dr. Karl Scharnagel.

These examples show that in towns where men in public life are interested in philately it would always be entirely possible to secure philatelic literature its rightful place in the public libraries.

Ch. Otto Müller

p.20

Additions to short index, Literature reports No. 7, p.20

p.59

Miscellaneous

- The Munich collector, Josef Maria Rehse has died in Munich-Pasing in his 82nd year. In decades of laborious effort, Rehse built up a unique "Archive and Museum of Contemporary History and Publishing" which filled 60 rooms in the Munich Residence and a lot of space in the Marstall Museum. Rehse gave his collection of philatelic literature to the philatelic section of the Munich City Library as early as 1939.
- Death of Colonel Hugo Schröder; on the 8th August 1951, Military Policy Colonel Hugo Schröder, the pioneer of Bavarian postal history and founder member of the Gesellschaft zur forschung der bayer Postgeschichte (Society for the Study of Bavarian Postal History) reached the distinguished age of 85 years and, still in full mental vigour and without using spectacles, produced his last piece of research for the Archiv fur Postgeschichte (Archive of Postal History) "The Taxis Post-Horse Service at Pocking. Sovereign Rights, Relationship between the Taxis State Post and the Imperial Town of Ulm and the Post at Reichenhall".

Schröder's historical works, too numerous to list here were accurate, thorough and important for the study of Bavarian postal history. Only a few months later, shortly after the beginning of the New Year, Colonel Schröder died suddenly. In him the Munich Philatelic Library lost one of its keenest supporters, who had contributed a great deal to it by his gifts of literature.

- Ludwig Hesshaimer, 80 years old: On the 10th March, the noted Academy painter and Austrian colonel Dr. Ludwig Hesshaimer, who was born in Kronstadt (Siebenburgen) celebrated his 80th birthday far from his homeland with his daughter in Brazil. An enthusiastic philatelist, he was president of the Union of Austrian Philatelic Societies from 1921-1941, president of the Officers' Exchange Society of Austria from 1919-1941, and chairman of the working party for the WIPA exhibition in Vienna from 1931-1933. For the success of the latter he was awarded the silver Medal of Honour of the Austrian Republic. As a painter he was not able to interest his own country in his designs for stamps, but he did see jubilee and airmail stamps produced from his work in Iceland, Liechtenstein and Columbia. In 1922 Kurzl produced a limited edition of Hesshaimer's "Philatelic Engravings" (12 original etchings). The Wiener Zeitung (Vienna Journal) of 8.III.52 published a self-portrait of the artist, who suffered much during the First World War, in its supplement "The World of Stamps". The editorial board of "Literatur-Nachrichten" send heartiest birthday wishes to this supporter of the Munich Philatelic Library.

Ch. Otto Müller

- Rudolf Seibold death: The darling of Munich, particularly its operetta lovers, who had appeared for almost half a century at the Gärtner Theatre, ended his considerable life as an artist with startling suddenness.

The Sudd. Zeitung (South German Journal) wrote as follows about his death on I.II.1952:

"He did not manage to accumulate wealth, and never managed to buy his own little house as he so much wishes to. His children never saw him studying a part at home. His was entirely a natural gift. "You must always have had a really jolly time at home with him", their schoolfellows said to the Seibold children, but at home their Papa was an uncommonly quiet and silent man, whose hobby was stamp collecting. No doubt he went to the angels with Heinrich Kuote."

- Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift (Nordic Philatelic Journal); from the start of the New Year, Herr Eigel Rathje of Copenhagen becomes Chief Editor of this highly regarded periodical, now in its 59th year. (DA5 1952-89/90, 10)
- The Ukraine Philatelisten-Vurband e.V (UPV), (Ukraine Philatelic Society), together with the "Ukraine" working party in the BPPL, mentions in its 51st circular that it hopes to bring out a printed UPV news-sheet every three months. It will be edited by S. K. Werner and Dr. Ketlev Schmidt. The first chairman of the UPV is Dr. Seichter, 7 Luisestrasse, Soltan/Hanover. A Ukraine catalogue with up-to-date prices is being planned. Enquiries to Dr. Detlev Schmidt, 12 Röenoort, Hamburg/Wohldorf.

p.61

Billig and Rich

55 West 42nd Street, New York 36, NY, auctioned 343 lots of literature in their last auction.

Merger of Philatelists

The "Landesverband süduresdentscher Brief-markensammler-Vereine un Bund der Philatelisten", (State Union of Saut-West German Collectors' Societies in the Philatelists' Society) has been founded in Pforzheim, to include 3,000 collectors from Pfalz, Baden and Wurtemberg. The first president was Professor Dr. Jaeger of Karlsrule, the second, Dr. Maier of Stuttgart and the third Hans Hoffman from Pfalz.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1952, Whole number 9

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1952, Whole number 9

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

CURRENT PHILATELIC PERIODICALS OF THE WORLD

In No. 1, of Vol. 65/Oct.1951 of the journal "The American Philatelist", its editor R. A. Kimble gives a list of the specialist philatelic journals known to him at that time, and "Literature Reports" reprints it here at the request of many readers. The editor of "L-R" gives corrections and additions to this list, based on the holdings of the Munich Philatelic Library, at the end. Mr. R. A. Kimble writes in the introduction to his list:

"This survey is based on the latest information available to us, but makes no claim to be complete, since philatelic journals come and go, attracting little or even no attention. They also change their name, address and subscription rate. Thus anyone interested in any of the journals cited below should check himself if the details are still correct. Please write direct to the editor of the journal concerned, not to the editor of A.P.

Other relevant journals will be added to this list as soon as they become known to the editor of the A.P. We do not record journals known to us only by hearsay, only those we have seen and checked ourselves. All journals should be addressed to the Editor, American Philatelist, 8118 Dante Avenue, Chicago 19, Ill.

The present survey does not include those journals which are nothing more than price lists from dealers or local society organs of restricted interest, nor those which fail to be of general interest or useful to searchers after information. In other words this is not bibliography, but is meant to be simply a handy practical reference list.”

Do not restrict your studies only to stamp catalogues. Reading the subject journals and the philatelic literature of earlier days will widen your knowledge

Kamp-Mikauli/Vienna

p.12

Corrections and Additions to Kimble’s List

1. Journals 58, 59, 90, 108, 119, 128, 131, 149, have ceased to appear in the meantime.
2. The journal “Stamp Collecting Weekly Stamps Review” is incorrectly entered under W. The main title is Sstamp collecting; weekly belongs to the subtitle.
3. Additions (journals not in Kimble’s list or started publication since then).

p.13

4. The following of the journals listed in Part 7 of “Literatur-Nachrichten” have since ceased publication.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1952, Whole number 10

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1952, Whole number 10

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

CORRECTIONS TO NETHERLANDS LITERATURE

The reprint in No. 7 of L.N. of the articles on the Netherlands by the Netherlands specialist Rudolf Hammerschmidt of Dusseldorf contains a number of mistakes by the author:

In the third paragraph from the end on p.539, in the article "Netherlands Stamp Centenary" St. Coll 1952-1993: 537, it is wrongly stated that Moesman printed Plate III of the 10 cent. In fact, the printing of Plate IV followed the 10 cent.

In the article "Netherlands 1867-1868" the pair shown is wrongly labelled as Type I: it is in fact Type II, since this is the only type to have the break in the supper price symbol. It also follows from the text that the engraved figures must be Type II since the original Type I did not meet with the approval of the authorities.

There are other mistakes in the article "The twelve best stamps from the Netherlands" (SE 1951-23: 364). The notes on the cancellations of individual catalogue numbers are often wrong.

No. 3: local cancellation (semi-circular cancellation) is not at all rare; it occurs just as often as the box cancellation "FRANCO".

- No. 6: the ordinary cancellation is the FRANCO box cancellation. Local cancellations are very rare; number cancellations were introduced in 1869, not 1867, occur on twice-used stamps and are rare (there was in fact a new issue in 1867).
- No.12: The usual cancellations are the FRANCO box cancellations and number cancellations, but the local type are not particularly rare.
- No. 29: The 1872/88 issue does come in various perforations, but No. 29 only has the perforation 14 kl. This (line perforation A) is forged on the 5 and 20 cent, since both stamps are very clear with this perforation. However, there are no forged line perforations A on No. 29 since this is the only perforation found on this stamp.
- No. 45: The usual cancellation on this is the local one (big circle or little circle). I have never yet seen this stamp with a number cancellation and it is very doubtful whether any do exist.
- No. 132/133: There is in fact a whole series of different perforations for the 1923 issue, however, the two highest values in question here only have the line perforation 11½.

p.55

More recognition for philatelic literature at exhibitions.

p.62

Miscellaneous

- Lower Saxony Society
In Society of German Philatelists
Subject: Loan of Literature
- Hanover, 15 March 1952
Stormstrasse 4

It is our intention to start lending literature within our Societies. Societies wishing to take part are asked to let us know which books, journals, etc., they could lend. Please send reports to Herr Karl Böker, 297 Podbielski Strasse, Hanover II.

The societies will be expected to pay only postage and packaging costs in the case of large consignments.

With friendly collectors' greetings

Hillmer, Chairman

- Foundation of the International Union of Stamp Dealers' organisations:

The provisional committee of this newly-founded union – Ernst Müller (President of the Union of Swiss Stamp Dealers) has been named as the representative for Switzerland – agreed on April 28th, 1952, in Monte Carlo to call the first General Meeting for 2nd July 1952 in Utrecht (Holland). At this, the Committee and the three sub-committees (for the promotion of collecting, against dubious stamp novelties and for professional ethics) will be finally elected. All national unions of stamp dealers have been invited to join this international union, and to get in touch as soon as possible with Mr. L. A. Hobbs, 445 Strand, London W.C.2.

- Willy Hess, Hamburg, dead: German philately, especially that of the Hamburg/Schleswig-Holstein regions, has suffered a very heavy loss. Willy Hess, secretary of the Hamburg/Schleswig-Holstein Society, and Honorary Chairman of the Barmbek-Uhlenhorst-Winterhuder Stamp Collectors' Society died in a car accident on 11th June in the 58th year of his life. In the year 1945, W. Hess played a leading part in the revival of the Society of German Philatelists. We have Hess largely to thank that the Society was brought through the difficult times of the post-war period and the currency revaluation.
- For technical reasons the BADEN bibliography cannot be published till later issues of the L.N.
- 65th birthday of a Famous Philatelist: the long-term President of the 1885 Stamp Collectors' Society of Mainz, Bank Director a. D. Fritz Fasse, 35 Grosse Bleiche, Mainz, celebrated his 65th birthday on 5th June 1952.

Herr Fasse has been a member of this Society since 1925, and President since 1935, and his initiative was responsible for the revival of the Society after the collapse. Since 1940, Fritz Fasse has been deputy President of the Hesse State Society. In 1941 he was given the Diploma of Honour of the National League of German Philatelists in Vienna for distinguished services. Last year he was awarded the silver medal of honour of the German Philatelic Society eV, Frankfurt/am/Main, for his successful organisation of the 4th Society Meeting and 51st Philatelic Congress in Mainz in 1940.

The Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, which has received keen support from Herr Fasse, and Section B of the German Philatelic Society send him heartiest best wishes for his birthday.

Ch. O. M

- An Ideal State School Board:

State School Board of the City of Munich Town Hall, Munich 2

Munich, 17.Oct.1951

Subject: Organisation of Stamp Collectors' Clubs in Local Schools

The State School Board of Munich is pleased to know that the students in local schools are interested in stamp collecting. The head of the Junior Section of the Bavarian State Philatelic Society is authorised to get in touch with the heads of individual Munich local schools about the formation of stamp collecting clubs amongst the pupils and to come to suitable arrangements. Schools may organise these clubs in their own way.

Signed Ederer,
Head of Schools Board
(BPh 51-6: 5)

END

Literature Nachrichten
1952?, Whole number 11/12

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1952?, Whole number 11/12

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Starting its own philatelic section is a praiseworthy modern activity for a public library

The following lines pay a worthy tribute to philately and philatelic literature, one which is all the more valuable as coming from a winner of the Goethe prize and mainstay of our cultural life:

Professor Dr. L. C. Hans Ludwig Held
Munich/Town Hall
Commissar for Culture

6th September 1952

To the Editorial Board of "Literatur-Nachrichten"

Highly Esteemed Mr. Editor!

You ask me for a few thoughts on the value of philately. As you know, I am so convinced of its value that I would like to see a signboard in front of every public library carrying the words “For young and old! Entrance to the Philatelic Section of the x.x. City Library”.

Our experiences with philately have been good, and we are overwhelmed with enquiries and requests from foreign libraries which we can hardly satisfy any longer. You will see from this what a good thing it would be if foreign public libraries realised that starting its own philatelic section is a praiseworthy modern activity for a public library.

Signed:
Hans Ludwig Held

It would be an excellent idea if a great many public libraries would follow the example of the Cultural Commission for the Bavarian state capital, which has accepted philatelic literature into the Munich City Library since 1931, and is still a model in the expansion of its philatelic division.

p.2

Thoughts of Prominent People on Philately

- City Manager, Erich Walter Lotz, Br., spoke on “The Place of Philately in Cultural and Intellectual Life” on the occasion of the opening of the exhibition “100 years of Brunswick Postage Stamps”. He said amongst other things:

“We have so much in our history, our culture and our intellectual life to give us impulse and direction towards new achievements, and which it is worth while acting on and promoting. I consider that philately can also give us a respite from ordinary life and help us to enrich our knowledge, widen our understanding, reveal possibilities for cultural enrichment and appeal to and captivate mankind.”

- Lord Mayor Danm-Wuppestal made the important point, in connection with the National Postage Stamp Exhibition, that philately has hitherto been all too easily dismissed by outsiders as superficial, but appeared to him to be the key to deeper knowledge.
- On the occasion of his visit to the exhibition “The Christian world as Pictured on Stamps” in Vienna, the German Minister for Posts, Dr. Ing. Schuberth, stated that he had now been converted to philately and was looking forward to seeing the treasurers on display, according to a report in the Wiener Zeitung of 13th September 1952.

His interest in philately was revealed by the President of the Bundestag Dr. Ehlers by an article on confessional stamps published in the Bundestag journal “Rheinpfalz”.

- Cardinal Spellman says of philately: Postage stamps are known and in daily use in all civilized countries of the world. This modern method of paying for letters and parcels is generally familiar. Postage Stamps are however also “documents in miniature” of human history. Also they are one of the means by which a nation expresses its hopes and needs, its beliefs and ideals in a visible form. A wide and multifarious field is open to the stamp collector. Anyone who makes collecting his hobby will find new and interesting fields continually opening out before him.

p.3

The Philatelic Journals of the World

As a supplement to the list by Mr. R. A. Kimble, the editor of the magazines "The American Philatelist", which was published in Part 9 of LN, we give here a list of the journals given on pages 59-68 of the "Stamp Collectors Annual 1952" (edited by Tom Morgan, published by Harris Publications Ltd., London WC2

See also p.16 of original.

p.76

Miscellaneous

- The Ingolstadt Stamp Collectors' Society celebrated its 50th anniversary in October. Commemorative covers with a special cancellation can be obtained from the Chairman, Herr Friedrich Karl, 8 Am Stein, Ingolstadt.
- Youth Philately: Gastone Rizzo, a teacher from Sanguinetta (Verona), who has shown how postage stamps can be used in teaching young people and thus made successful publicity for philately, has been distinguished by the award of the "City of Munich Prize of Honour" from the Union of Bavarian Philatelic Societies. This was accompanied by a trip to Munich and a few-day stay provided by the Munich Stamp Club.
- 40 years of the German Airmail Service: A triple jubilee was celebrated in Berlin during the period 24-28 October 1952. One was the first airmail in Germany in 1912, then the 25th anniversary of what is now the oldest airmail collectors' society in Germany, and the 20th anniversary of the German airmail journal "Die Luftpost".

Two entires in the form of airmail postcards are available at 0.55DM the pair. They can be had with a special airmail cancellation from the Berlin-Tempelhof airport (only on 26th October, the 40th anniversary of the German Airmail Service), at 0.65DM the pair for addresses in the Federal Republic, or 1.10DM the pair for addresses elsewhere in Europe. The number of these special cards is extremely limited, and orders should be in as soon possible! They should be sent to IAPC Press and Publicity, Kurt Dahmann, 9 Konstarzer Strasse, Berlin-Wilmersdorf. Please include return postage with request!.

- The Society of German Philatelists (BDPh) and the Union of Philatelists of North-Rhine-Westphalia have lost a value member by the death of City Treasurer, Otto Koenen, Solicitor, notary, honorary graduate of the Westphalian State University, and holder the Society's service cross.
- Anyone interested in the "Baden Bibliography" can obtain it from the Chairman of the "Baden" working party, Insp. Oskar Tölle, 65 Erzbergerstrasse, Karlsruhe (Baden).
- It is good to know that the State Examiner, Mr. Pfenniger/Munich, has decided to publish his "Study of the 3-Kreuzer Plates" before very long in Circular 3 of the AG 1/6 Bavarian, since the extract printed at third hand in the "Basler Taube" has led to misunderstandings.

p.77

Central Library

- A special library of philately has now been set up in Switzerland, like the one in Munich. We learn from a communication from the Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung that the Postal & Telegraphic authorities and the Union of Swiss Philatelic Societies have come to an agreement to amalgamate all their literature on philately and thus make it more generally available.

The basis of it is a philatelic library sold off some years ago by the Zurich Central Library and bought by the Ministry of Posts & Telegraphs to keep it in the country. At the minute the stock of this special library has reached about 7,000 volumes by expansion, purchases, etc.

(SE 1951,-23:370)

- Correction, No. 10/1952 of LN carries the date "May-July", instead of "August-October".
- The jury of the 5th International in Merano showed an ideal interest in philatelic literature. Everything from Germany entered in the literature classes gained the highest distinctions available. A really excellent proof of the interest taken abroad in German literature.
- An Italian Teacher Distinguished at Merano: The prize of honour awarded by the Union of Bavarian Philatelic Societies and the Munich Stamp Club, including an expenses-paid 4-day stay in Munich, for the best work in philately was awarded to a schoolteacher who has a special system for interesting Italian schoolchildren in stamp collecting. This system has already been taken up by the highest Italian authorities.
- Columbia University – Institute for Arts and Sciences is holding a course on philately from 7th October to 16th December 1952. The course will be conducted by Winthrop S. Boggs, Director of the "Philatelic Foundation", who has been holding similar courses for 15 years. Well-known authorities and collectors have promised their help.

The course is intended for collectors who wish to progress further and for anyone interested who wants to take up collecting. The headquarters of the New York Collector's Club has all conceivable aids on the premises, such as for example one of the largest philatelic libraries in the world, outstanding collections scientific instruments, projection equipment, etc. The 10 evenings will cover all topics important to philatelists, e.g. history of philately, postal history, how to acquire stamps, philatelic literature and how to use it, the practical side of philately, various types of collecting, and everything worth knowing about postage stamps themselves.

- American University Receives Gift of a Stamp Collection; Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass, has been given his hundred-volume collection of stamps by Mr. Abrams. Where are the German collectors who will support public collections on philately after the American model?
- Literature in Sweden; In transmission no. 30/1952 of Radio Vienna I, Dr. Kalmar held a conversation with Judge Felix Ullmann, who has been honoured by the ITEP for his collection "Greek heads of Hermes", and was just home from Scandinavia. Dr. Kalmar's question of whether Swedish collectors are concerned with catalogues, journals and textbooks was given a positive answer by Ullman, "since wherever there is a trade in stamps, there will be many periodically appearing technical works, and specialist scientific works on the stamps of Scandinavia. I was particularly impressed by the works in multi-coloured printing, and the detailed works on cancellations.

(BRW 52-30)

- Of great important for philatelic literature is the Dusseldorf Stamp Collectors' Society publication "Wasserzeichen". Its report No. 5 lists the following additions to the Society's Library:

Winkler	Handbook of Bavarian postmarks
Hofinger	Monograph on French stamps
Muller-Mark	Reflections
Rasche	Valuation of the Prussian Circular Number Postmarks
Bochmann	Catalogue of German occasional Postmarks

Its magazine circulation includes the following titles; Sammler-Dienst, Wultring, Kürd-Berichte, Kerkur, Rundbriefe des DASV and the Poststempel-Gilde Rhein-Donan, as well as Literatur-Nachrichten.

- A Philatelic Course: The (London) City Literary Institute is again including a philatelic course in its winter syllabus. It started on September 24th, at 7.30 p.m. Among the lecturers for this season are Mr. H. W. Edmunds, President of the Royal Philatelic Society, Mr. H. C. V. Adams, who will talk on the Penny Black, and Professor L. Dudley Stamp. Particulars from Mr. Nugent M. Clougher, City Literary Institute, Stukeley Street, London, W.C.2.
- The State Union of Bavarian Philatelic Societies has published a list of its associated societies with the addresses of their chairmen and meeting places, also details of how to get on the list for the Union's circulation.
- The Technical Society of German Valuers and Auctioneers informs its members by means of circulars of the telegraph messages received from the Federal Ministry of Posts.
- Dr. Poser reports that the Brunswick University Extension Department is holding a course of 10 two-hour lectures, from 9.x.1952, on "What we can learn from postage stamps".
- The October issue of "Austria Philatelist" (Vienna) will be devoted to philatelic literature by its editor, Herr Adolf Kosel.

END

Literature Nachrichten
January/March 1953, Whole number 13

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1
Contents.

p.2
The place of philately in cultural and intellectual life.
Erich Walter, City Mayor Lotz, Brunswick.

We have so much in our history, our culture and our intellectual life to give us impulse and direction towards new achievements and that which it is worthwhile acting on and promoting.

I consider that philately can also give us a respite from everyday life and help us to enrich our knowledge, widen our understanding, reveal possibilities for cultural enrichment, and appeal to and captivate mankind. Philately has not been for year, and definitely is not now, simply the collection of stamps. A total of over 100,000 stamps has now appeared all over the world, so that the serious and well-grounded collector has to be simultaneously concerned with the history, geography, literature, culture and themes of lands and people, to concern himself with the lives of other people and try to learn about and understand them.

Modern philatelists are thus tending to move away from pure collecting and commercial aspects and more and more towards historical collecting, research, cultural links, an understanding of specific laws and edicts, geography, a knowledge of old methods of transporting post and people, and an understanding of the social and political links between peoples.

Thus, the modern philatelist and collector makes a valuable contribution to the study of the social and political history of his country.

I consider that this type of collecting has come more and more to the front at practically all the exhibitions held in the last few years, and that collectors of this type have become scholars and individuals.

And if in this way we can bring new blood into philately and rouse sufficient interest in young people for this great work, we on our side will have made a worthy contribution to our country.

It will be necessary too not to neglect the philatelic literature and keep it scientifically accurate and national.

pp.2-4

Statistics on the proportions of different groups of subjects in philatelic literature.

Dr. Wilhelm Engelhardt, Berlin.

From a lecture to the Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888.

It was recently authoritatively established that postal history was threatening to outweigh philately in German stamp journals. From the same source in Brunswick we hear the warning cry:

“Don’t forget the cancellation on the stamp!”.

The assaults by “philatelists” on thematic collecting are well known. Old philatelists think of themselves as up against three enemies who are menacing them – postal historians, cancellation fans, and thematic collectors.

Editor’s note: This was evidently of no interest to me so I never bothered to have the rest translated.

pp.5-6

Philatelic journals in the 1953 Post Office List.

pp.6-9

Reports from philatelic libraries.

pp.9-22

Literature reviews.

pp.22-26

Periodical reviews.

p.27

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.28

Auction catalogues received.

Radio philately.

pp.28-29

Literature Exchange Service. (LIVEDI)

pp.29-37

Readers' letters.

pp.37-61

Literature references. (Index)

pp.62-67

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
April/June 1953, Whole number 14

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

pp.4-8

Contributions to our knowledge of German philatelic periodicals.

C. Michaelis

Unfortunately only now can we give a continuation to the article of the same name in Nos. 4/5 of the 1951 volume of this journal: however we now hope to publish the articles more often.

Wir Briefmarkensammler

This magazine was published in Vienna by the stamp-dealing firm of Norbert Frischer. It was a monthly in support of their new issues service. The first issue appeared in October 1931, and the total issues after that were:-

I	1931	nos. 1-3	IV	1934	nos. 1-12
II	1932	nos. 1-12	V	1935	nos. 1-12
III	1933	nos. 1-12	VI	1936	nos. 1-6

The first editor was Alexander Bungerz, familiar to all lovers of literature. However he died almost at once, so that only the three issues for 1931 appeared under his direction. No. 1 of 1932 was planned by Otto E. Stiedl, whereas from No. 2 of the same year Norbert Frischer himself took over the editorship. The very fine printing was the work of the book and fine-art printing firm of Herold K.G.

Up to and including No. 6 of 1934 the magazine was printed on excellent paper that ensured good illustrations, and was made up in a novel and interesting way. Unfortunately from No. 7 of 1934 there was a big step backwards as regards both content and appearance. The paper was poor, its colour kept changing (pink, yellow, blue, green, etc.), the text only amounted to 4 sides and was entirely devoted to new issues. Details of the printer are also missing from the number mentioned onwards. Indexes were only issued for Volumes I 1931 and II, 1932. Two of the issues for 1934 contained a supplement entitled Wir Jungsammler, which was aimed at the young collector in particular. The magazine was sent free to subscribers to the Frischer firm's new issues service.

Die Philatelie

The magazine Die Philatelie appeared for the first time on 8th September 1924 from publisher J. K. G. Wagner's book printing works of Neustadt (Orla). It had the subtitle Zeitschrift für Briefmark-Sammalspost and Handel (Journal for Stamp Collectors and Dealers.).

The total issues were as follows:-

I	1924	Nos. 1-11/12	II	1925	Nos. 1-13
---	------	--------------	----	------	-----------

Up to the end of February 1925 (i.e. up to and including No. 6) the magazine appeared three times a month, and after that only once a month. The first editor was H. Dölling, and from II 1925 no. 8 Max Ton of Weimar took over. All issues contained a very effective title page designed by R. Engel-Hardt of Leipzig. The pages of Volume I are not numbered. Consecutive numbering of the pages started with Volume II. The paper used was of average quality, about the grade used for newspapers. Volume II, 1925 Nos. 1-8 appeared in two different parts as Sections A and B. Section B was a supplement Die Händlerbörse.

Volume II, 1925 No. 1 was a jubilee issue in celebration of the 125th anniversary of the printing and publishing firm.

II 1925	No. 9 is a special issue on "Saxony"
	No. 10 is a special issue on "Old Austria"
	No. 11 is a special issue on "Switzerland"
	No. 12 is a special issue on "Thurn and Taxis"
	No. 13 is a special issue on "Jaffa, Persian Levant"

Amongst the principal contributors were Beuth, Bungerz, Ehrmann, Leitenberger, Paul P. Lindenberg, Luithlen, Ton, etc., so that the level of the contents was bound to be high.

The firm tried to meet special needs by taking up Friedrich Leitenberger's Bibliography of the German-language philatelic literature 1925 and publishing it in instalments as a supplement to their journal.

Unfortunately this work only got as far as 3 instalments with a total of 10 + 17 + 19 pages, and a four-page swan-song "In memorium".

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung (Teplitz)

This magazine made its first appearance with No. 1 on the 6th November 1928 in Teplitz-Schönau. The manager was K. Sacher, the editor K. Kleophas and the publisher Ferd Bär, all of Teplitz-Schönau. All three were stamp dealers. From Volume II, No. 2 1929, Bär took over as editor, and from No. 4 Sacher disappears as well, so that Bär was left to run the journal by himself.

The Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung was printed by the printing and publishing firm of Turn-Teplitz, then from No. 2, 1929 by the Buchdruckerei Wächter of Teplitz-Schönau. The individual numbers came out in a grey paper cover with different colours of printing (green, violet, black, red, etc). A title page heading by Stralh was used at first, but a new one designed by Ludwig Hesshaimer was used from Volume II, No. 7, 1929 onwards.

At first, the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung had the words Zeitschrift für die Gesamte Postwertzeichenkunde on the cover as a subtitle. From Volume II/1929, No. 10, this subtitle became Offizielles Organ des Verbandes der Maschin-Stempelsammler. The subtitle was changed again at Volume III/1930 No. 4 into Offizielles Organ des Verbandes der Maschinenstempel-Sammler, Lübeck, des Aero-Philatelisten-Club von Deutschland e.V, und Vieler Anderer Vereinigungen.

Total issues to appear were:

I	1928	Nos. 1-4	III	1930	Nos. 1-7, 8/9, 10-12
II	1929	Nos. 1-12	IV	1931	Nos. 1-2

No. 1 of the 2nd year is marked on the cover as “No. 5, Vol. II”, but inside on the title page as “No. 1, Volume II*. There are two editions of No. 1/1928, the second being marked as such by suitable overprinting to the heading on the cover.

The pagination was separate for Nos. 1 and 2 of 1928. Consecutive pagination starts with p.46 of No. 3. The adverts section is separately numbered, and so are the covers the latter are marked V A – D, and the adverts IIa – IIq for example, with the Roman numeral representing the issue.

The D. B. Z. was affiliated to the F. I. P. P. It gained a bronze medal at Iposta 1930 in Berlin. The principal contributors were Diers, Leitenberger, Leseticky, Kleeberg, Möbusz and Schönherr. Nevertheless, scientific articles occupied only a small space by comparison with the popular ones. Much space was given to postmarks in particular, which may have contributed to the early extinction of this magazine.

Weltpost-Echo

After a four-page specimen issue had been put out as a prospectus, No. 1 of this journal appeared in Teplitz-Schonau on the 10th October 1919. It had the subtitle Halbononatsschrift für Briefmarkenkunde. The editor was Max Bloch, the publisher Friedrich Leitenberger of Teplitz and the printer St. Tietze of Aussig.

Total issues published were:-

I	1919	nos. 1-4
II	1920	nos. 1-7, 8/9, 10, 11/12, 13/14, 15/16

At the beginning of 1920 the large format initially used was abandoned for octavo, which was half the size and much more convenient to handle. At No. 1/1920 the subtitle changed to Offizielles Organ des Philatelisten-Vereins Teplitz-Schonau und Seinen Sektionen Bruix, Aussig und Karlsbad”.

An index was only published for Volume 1/1919, rather oddly in the reduced format of Volume II. Pagination ran consecutively from the first to the second volume. All the advert pages were included in the sequence.

The principal contributors were Beck, Bloch, Bungerz, Leitenberger, Komma, Walter. Its contents were all valuable. It made ample room for the philatelic literature as well, in line with its editor's interests. Occasional articles in English and French were published. Initially only mediocre, by the beginning of the year 1920 it had become very good. It fell a sacrifice to the difficulties of the period. Under normal conditions it would certainly have lasted more than the bare two years.

Der Deutsche Sammler

Its subtitle proclaimed this journal, which first appeared in July 1937, to be the "Organ der deutschen Sammlerweinschaft", and also "combined with the journals Die Weltkorrespondenz and Der Bildersammler".

Total issues to appear were:

I	1937	Nos. 1-6
II	1938	Nos. 1-12
III	1939	Nos. 1-6, 7/8, 9, 10/11, 12
IV	1940	Nos. 1-6, 7/8, 9-12
V	1941	Nos. 1-6, 7/8, 9

All in two different editions marked A and B. The subtitle was changed at Volume II, 1938, No. 3, since further journals had been amalgamated with it, and it then read Der deutsche Sammler Das Postwerthzeichen, combined with Der Poststempel, Die Weltkorrespondenz, Der Bildersammler, Philatelisten-Zeitung.

Thus this journal, the organ of the German Collectors' Society, absorbed the journals of other societies under more or less pressure. It was published by the Volt und Reich firm in Berlin. The editorship was in the hands of a committee, to which Ludw. Hesshaimer, E. H. Sieger and W. Voss amongst others, belonged.

At the outset, Nazi propaganda took up a good deal of space, but later on useful articles came more and more into the foreground, so that by and large this can be looked on as a very valuable journal as far as its contents are concerned. Indexes were published, a joint one for I/II 1937/38, and then for III/1939 and IV/1940. The journal ceased publication on being merged with the Deutschen Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde (Verlag Kühn, Breslau).

Das Postwertzeichen

It is very rare for a stamp magazine to cause as much commotion even before its appearance as Das Postwertzeichen did. A vigorous war of words, not always free of personalities, was waged in the philatelic press. The main point at issue was whether the "Bund" needed its own journal, or could make do with a news-sheet, but was also related to the choice of publishing house. The societies saw a new central organ as a danger to their own magazines, a few which the later absorption of some of them into Postwertzeichen proved to be not without foundation. However, the journal was founded, and carried the sub-title Zeitschrift des Bundes deutscher Philatelisten-Verbande im In- und Auslande e.V.

During the whole life of the magazine it was printed by the firm of Robert Noske in Borna in Leipzig, who had made a name in other directions by services to philatelic literature. The "Bund" itself was the publisher initially, but the firm of Noske took over from 1936 No. 12.

The editor changed during the period of its appearance. The first one was Privy Councillor Dr. Franz Kalckhoff. He was followed by Alexander Leo from II/1926/1927 No. 1, and Curt Langert from 1935 No. 2.

The total issues published were:-

I	1926/27	Nos. 1-11	VII	1933	Nos. 1-12
II	1927/28	Nos. 1-12	VIII	1934	Nos. 1-5, 6/7, 8/9, 10
III	1928/29	Nos. 1-12	IX	1935	Nos. 1-11
IV	1929/30	Nos. 1-12	X	1936	Nos. 1-12
V	1930/31	Nos. 1-17	XI	1937	Nos. 1-12
VI	1932	Nos. 1-11	XII	1938	Nos. 1-2

The volumes are paginated consecutively. Roman numerals, usually I-VIII are used for the advertising sections in each issue.

Indexes exists for all volumes except XII. From 1935 there are frequent changes in the title and sub-title, beginning with X/1936, with Vereingt mit der Philatelisten-Zeitung.

In the main the covers are the same white paper as the text, but from no.8/1935 some of the covers are light blue.

In 1938 there was a separately-paged supplement of 18 pages containing an article by Köhler "Royal Württemberg posts ..." etc, and one by A. Leo on "The oldest Württemberg post-paid stamp".

The principal contributors were Kalckhoff, Munk, Pauli, Priwe, Marbach, Thalmann, Brönnle, Ohrt, Richter. This list reveals that Das Postwertzeichen was one of the outstanding journals of the period between the two world wars.

After the appearance of the last issue, No. 2 of 1930, the journal only survived in the sub-title of Der Deutsche Sammler, founded in 1937 with which it was amalgamated.

Equator

This journal enriched the world of stamp magazines with a complete new type. Unfortunately, all that appeared were:

- 1948 prospectus issue
- 1949 nos. 1-3

i.e., only 4 issues. The editor was F. Behle-Neuhold, the publisher Philately-Equator and the printer H. O. Persiehl, all of Hamburg. One can best describe this journal by calling it a philatelic magazine in the most up-to-date American format. The articles are not scientific-philatelic but popular. These articles, so well written and illustrated, formed a powerful advertisement for philately. It is thus a great pity that it could not survive for more than 4 issues.

Das Danziger Postwertzeichen

This magazine carried the sub-titled Mitteilungsblatt der Arbeitsgemeinschaft der Sammler Danziger Postwerthzeithan im Ih-und Ausland. It is a journal of a very specialised type. This applies not just to its make-up, though it was duplicated from dies and each issue came in a red cover on which was impressed a symbol like a medallion containing the initials ASDP contained in a cog. However the same is true of its contents.

Total issues published were:

I	1936	Nos. 1-4	VI	1941	Nos. 21-23
II	1937	Nos. 5-9	VII	1942	Nos. 24-30
III	1938	Nos. 10-14	VIII	1942	Nos. 31-33
IV	1939	Nos. 15-17	IX	1944	Nos. 34-35
V	1940	Nos. 18-20

In contrast to magazines that had appeared earlier in Danzig, such as Briefmarken-Rundschau and Neueste Briefmarken-Umschau, this one is devoted exclusively to the stamps and especially the postage stamps of Danzig. One can even say that it is the most important source of information on Danzig stamps etc., since there is still no handbook on Danzig in existence. The chairman of the Danzig society, Wilhelm Marx, was editor of the journal for the whole period of its existence.

Since the magazine was only supplied to member of the society, a complete set is a bibliographic rarity apart from the value of its contents.

pp.8-15

Literature Reviews.

pp.15-20

Periodical Reviews.

pp.20-21

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.21

Auction Catalogues Received.

p.22

Radio Philately.

pp.22-26

Reports from Philatelic Libraries.

pp.27-55

Literature References. (Index)

pp.55-57

Readers' letters.

pp.57-59

Literature Exchange Service. (LIVEDI)

pp.59-64

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
July/September 1953, Whole number 15

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1
Contents.

p.2
Friedrich Heinrich Zinckgraf.
A Promoter of philatelic literature – 75 years old.

Inseparably connected with the history of the Munich library is the internationally famous art expert and gallery owner, F. H. Zinckgraf, who laid the foundations of one of the best-known specialist libraries in Europe when he presented his own philatelic library and that of the Munich Stamp Club, of which he had long been the President, to the City Library. Philatelic life in Munich would be scarcely conceivable without this Nestor of Bavarian philately, who celebrates his 75th birthday this autumn whilst remaining astonishingly youthful. We have good reason to call him “The Kalckhoff of South Germany”, since he shares with that Nestor of German philately as a whole a liking for the stepchildren of philately (cancellations, telegraph stamps, zemstvo stamps, etc).

The time when Moschkau and Haas were providing the first serious literary models for German philatelists, young collectors were using the albums supplied by Zshiesche in Munich, and the International Philatelic Society of Dresden had its own sections in St. Petersburg, Munich and overseas, Zinckgraf has been the ideal of a researcher, his knowledge and experience unselfishly at the service of all collectors and shunning any material gain from his activities. Zinckgraf has shown old and young collectors the way to ideal collecting in his many papers. His unique collection of rural stamps was an important feature of the 1924 Postage Stamp Exhibition in Munich and was the basis of the rare and unfortunately incomplete catalogue of Zemstvo stamps compiled by Carl Schmidt and A. Fabergé in St. Petersburg. Visitors to the MUPA Stamp Exhibition in Munich in 1935 had the chance of getting to know his Jubilee collections of Thurn and Taxis and the Papal States. Zinckgraf took a leading part in the reconstruction of the Bavarian State Union of Philatelic Societies after 1945, and he proves the truth of Goethe's saying that collectors are happy men.

Anyone who has heard the Rhinelander Zinckgraf speak of his chosen home in Upper Bavarian will trace in his words a harmony of soul such as few people enjoy. We hope that such natures will also develop amongst collectors of a later generation to the benefit of philately.

pp.2-5

Book reviews.

pp.5-6

Periodical survey.

p.7

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.8

Auction catalogues received.

pp.8-11

Reports from philatelic libraries.

pp.11-12

Readers' letters.

pp.12-13

Literature exchange service. (LIVEDI)

p.13

Personalities.

pp.14-25

Literature reports. (Index)

pp.26-30

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
October/December 1953, Whole number 16

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

pp.4-8

Illustrations. [of the Zinckgraf and Kalckhoff Medals.]

pp.9-17

Book reviews.

pp.18-24

Periodical survey.

pp.24-27

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.27

Auctions.

p.28

Reports from philatelic libraries.

pp.29-33

Readers' letters.

pp.33-36

Literature exchange service. (LIVEDI)

p.37

Radio philately.

pp.37-61

Literature reports. (Index)

pp.62-65

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
January/March 1954, Whole number 17

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3
Contents.

p.4
A MIHARU horse as a Japanese gift to the Munich House of Philately.
Bumpei Wada

A friend of the Munich House of Philately, Bumpei Wada, has sent us a Japanese good luck symbol in the form of the MIHARU horse, as a prototype of this year's New Year stamp. As we find from Mathieu's notes in Kurzl's Briefmarkenliste no.1/1954, these stamps show a MIHARU horse (MIHARU GOMA), a reproduction of a traditional, rather primitive wooden Japanese hobbyhorse. This is for a definite reason. The "modern" person of the West believes (or not) in the effect of the twelve changing signs of the Zodiac over the course of a year. The Japanese have a similar cycle. Every calendar year is under the sign of a particular emblem, which is repeated every twelve years. 1954 is under the sign of the horse, and so the MIHARU horse appears on the Japanese New Year stamps. An old legend, which we do not intend to keep back from our readers, has grown up around this horse. Thematic collectors may also be interested in this tale. It appears that a horse is not always a horse, and the MIHARU horse least of all. MIHARU is a place in the Fukushima Prefecture in north-east Japan. It is famous for horse breeding and tobacco growing. In the year 14 of the Enryaku dynasty (782), the famous general Sakanone-no-Tamuramaro undertook a campaign against savage tribes. As he prayed for victory in the Kiyomizu temple in Kyoto, the priest Entin, the founder of the Buddhist temple, was carving statues of the Buddha. From the material left over he carved 100 saddle horses, and gave them to the departing general as a farewell present. The general put them amongst his weapons. His first major campaign was against the mighty rebel Ohtakimaru, whose forces were so powerful that the outcome seemed to be going against the great general. At this moment of crisis, at his greatest need, 100 horses sprang from the weapons and broke into the enemy camp. Ohtakimaru's troops were taken completely unawares and overwhelmed, and Sakanone-no-Tamurnamaro gained a great victory. When the battle was over, all the horses disappeared except one, which was wounded and had to stay behind. A villager then made 99 wooden horses with the idea of transferring them to the next world. After three years the wounded horse disappeared as well. The other 99 were kept in his family from generation to generation until finally one of his descendants made more copies, which he distributed to the village children. This is the legend of the MIHARU horse. It is a simple wooden horse, painted in fairly primitive colours, usually black, red and yellow. For all that, it is one of the favourite playthings in Japan.

Hearty thanks to Bumpei Wada for this thoughtfulness.

pp.5-12

Reports from philatelic libraries.

pp.12-19

Literature reviews.

pp.20-26

Periodical reviews.

pp.26-29

Exhibitions, Congresses and other Assemblies.

pp.30-31

Auctions.

pp.31-32

Readers' letters.

Editor's note: Translated in error.

The famous author of the classic work "Old Germany under the Magnifying Glass" and "Reflections", Herr Ewald Müller-Mark of Berlin-Lankwitz wrote on 12.12.1953 "You have built yourself a monument with the Literatur-Nachrichten, which is so well known in philately that mail can reach you bearing the box number only. The most valuable feature of your LN is the positive spirit that flows through every number from the first page to the last. This is not just a good thing, it reflects the spirit of its father who is responsible for it, so that every issue comes like a fresh breeze into the house and I am proud that philately has such a literary father.

Further noteworthy letters have been received from Herr Ahrens from Sao Paulo/Brazil, Dr. Lucient Braun of Movienthal/Alsace, Peter von Hof/Mainz, Hosang/Söllingen, Kronenberg/Basle, Lenz/Stuttgart, Dr. Mathieu/Oberviechtach, Dr. Gerh. Schmidt/Berlin, and the editor of the Frimarks-Bladet of Stockholm.

The well-known editor, Dr. F. W. Gerhard Schmidt, writes in no.1/1950 of the Berufs-Philatelist (Professional Philatelist) "We have also gone in for literature in the Berufs-Philatelist, since we are of the opinion that only those who keep up with the latest findings in research can be effective advisers for the amateur philatelist. Just as a doctor has to keep up with the times, so the professional philatelist must constantly refresh and extend his specialist knowledge. Thus the Literatur-Nachrichten put out by Chr. O. Müller is of interest for the professional philatelist as well. Practically 4,000 volumes were taken for study by visitors to the Munich library in the year 1952/53. This indicates a rising interest in the scientific sources of philately. The Munich philatelic library is also used as a documentation point at home and abroad. A detailed card index enables it to answer even enquiries from abroad (source details, photocopies or abstracts of articles). The library of the Swiss Post Office refers questions it cannot answer to Munich. 540 volumes have been added to the philatelic collection during the given year, the most important being the publication of The Royal Collection.

In his paper to the 7th meeting of the Society, Ch. O. Müller mentioned that scientific libraries are now taking an interest in philatelic literature as well. It must be the aim of all German collectors (and dealers) to see at least the standard works of the German philatelic literature available in at least one library open to the public in every large German city. Only philatelists can ensure by vigorous prompting that the importance of philatelic literature is kept in mind by the public libraries.”

pp.32-36

Literature exchange service. (LIVEDI)

p.36-37

Personalities.

p.37

Radio philately.

pp.38-77

Literature reports. (Index)

pp.77-79

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
April/June 1954, Whole number 18

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

p.4

Berlin from the philatelic point of view! National postage stamp exhibition 1954 in Berlin!

Only a few months now separate us from the philatelic high point of the year 1954. The gaze of all stamp lovers near and far has been fixed on Berlin for a long time: since Berlin will again demonstrate its claim to be the metropolis of philately – a Belgian journal wrote in this connection to the “heart of philately”. The “National Postage Stamp Exhibition Berlin 1954” will take place under the patronage of Burgomeister of Berlin, Dr. Walter Schreiber, with the support of the Berlin GPO and the Society of German Philatelists and the League of Berlin Philatelic Societies in the first days of the coming August in Rooms III-V of the Exhibition Hall at the Broadcasting Centre.

As well as numerous individual meetings on specialist topics, there will be the 8th annual Society meeting and the 55th German Philatelic Congress. Berlin will help to deepen East-West friendship, and at the same time will initiate scientific co-operation, a task so close to the heart of all serious philatelists with a global outlook.

As host to the “National Postage Stamp Exhibition 1954” we ask all philatelists not to limit themselves to visiting the exhibition with philately and the promotion of youth collection in mind, but also to visit the exhibition in the Radio Tower, one of Berlin's landmarks, and personally check on the motto “Berlin, the most interesting city in Europe”.

The advertising material has already given many of the details. Keep the first days of August 1954 free for a trip to Berlin, and visit the “National Postage Stamp Exhibition 1954” in Berlin.

The Exhibition Committee

pp.5-6

Judging Philatelic Periodicals at Exhibitions.

Werner Ahrens, São Paulo.

The worthy Director of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library has dealt, in Literatur-Nachrichten no.16, p.21, and no.17, p.78, with questions of judging philatelic periodicals at exhibitions and asks for opinions. I would like to make known my personal views on this problem.

Lovers of postage stamps can be divided into collectors and philatelists. The collector just accumulates material and manages without any literature, but a collector only becomes a philatelist by zealous and continued study of the literature. Of course, it is not possible for a collector to buy and study all the monographs that appear; he will have to restrict himself to his own special field. This makes periodicals very valuable since they can cover all aspects of philately, and the reader is kept informed on all specialities outside his own, which he will naturally want to follow in every detail, and can extend his philatelic horizons at will. One can say with reason that without periodicals there can be no real philatelist, since where else can he gain his knowledge.

A collector who knows several languages is naturally much better placed than one who only has his mother tongue, since he will have a much wider range of periodicals available for study. A large number of outstanding research papers have appeared over the last decade in the Brazilian literature, but the number of readers who can cope with the Portuguese language outside Brazil and Portugal is small. However, there are many collectors interested in Brazil and the USA, who complain because so little can be found about Brazil in the English Literature, so last year an organisation called "The Friends of Brazilian Philately" was founded in New York at the insistence of A. J. Hillel of New York. It publishes a journal The Bull's Eye. This appears with the close collaboration of the Sociedade Paulista Filatelica of São Paulo, and the latest issue published an article by me on the postage stamps of the Condor syndicate. The intention is to publish numerous valuable articles from the Brazilian literature in The Bull's Eye in due course, so that the collection of Brazilian stamps in North America will receive fresh impetus.

If we now turn to judging philatelic periodicals at exhibitions, my opinion is that they should be treated exactly like collections and awarded medals. Putting them off with a paper, or certificate, for the gold or silver level or a diploma for taking part I look on as misleading. It has already been said that the periodicals are of the greatest service to philately since only by their means can real philatelists be produced, and there are those which deserve to be awarded a medal of the appropriate level at exhibitions. The decisive factor is not the publisher's own knowledge of philately but his skill in attracting valuable contributors to his paper, and keeping out weak or defective work so that the contents are as varied as possible and not allowed to develop the one-sidedness that would make it into a magazine concerned with one special topic exclusively.

If a publisher is not able to attract high-quality papers and has to write a great deal himself without having the relevant knowledge, we are left with something of the type popularly referred to as a sausage paper, and thus a periodical for an exhibition will naturally be amongst the ones that go further. In recent years a completely different basis has been established for judging the old style of collections and thematic collections, and in the same way we now absolutely need a basis for judging periodicals. The Organizing Committee of BRAPEX III has been particularly concerned with thematic collection but has also suggested medals for periodicals holding the view that these are justified. Of course, at the moment we can say nothing about how the jury will react to this problem but the writer, as a member of the jury, will do his best to put the idea over to his colleagues. “Panta Rei”, said the ancient Greeks, “all is in flux”, and so we must hope that our journals will also receive their due in the future.

p.7

Reports from philatelic libraries.

pp.7-15

Reviews of journals.

pp.15-24

Literature reviews.

pp.24-27

Exhibitions, Congresses and other Assemblies.

pp.27-28

Auctions.

pp.28-29

Voices of readers.

pp.29-32 & 82

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

pp.32-33

Persons and distinctions.

p.33

Radio philatelie.

pp.33-34

Societies.

pp.35-80

Literature Index.

pp.80-82

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
July/September 1954, Whole number 19

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3
Contents.

pp.3-5
The most important handbooks for collectors.
A. Fischer & Chr. O. Müller

Thirty years ago appeared the first part of Dr. Munk's 11th edition of the Kohl Stamp Handbook. His last volume finished at Part 40, and dealt with all countries with the initials A to I. After the death of Dr. Munk the work was carried on by Hans von Rudolphi under the title Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde (Handbook of Philately), and the 17 issues of his dealt with countries from K to Lux.

The work was carried on in the meantime under the title Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde. Issues appear alternately in series A and B. Series A went on with individual countries starting with the letter M, whilst series B carried on with the German Reich from 1925 onwards. Two issues of series B have now appeared. No. 1 covers German stamps with the Michel numbers 378-399, and No. 2 those with nos. 400-475. The first issue in series A has appeared; it deals with the Portuguese colony of Macao.

A knowledge of the contents of individual issues is important for collectors who want to get hold of the usually out-of-print issues of the Kohl and Rudolphi handbooks by bidding for them at auctions etc. Thus, in this and the following issues of Literatur Nachrichten, we shall meet repeated requests by giving a survey of the contents of the most important handbooks.

Editor's note: The following two pages list the details and contents of the first 40 volumes of the 11th edition of Kohl's Handbook.

pp.6-7 & 42
Literature reviews.

pp.8-9

Reviews of journals.

pp.9-10

Exhibitions, Congresses and other Assemblies.

p.10

Auctions.

p.11

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

pp.11-12

Persons and distinctions.

pp.12-13

Voices of readers.

pp.24-37

Literature Index.

pp.37-41

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
October/December 1954, Whole number 20

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

p.4

Philately as a remedy.

Dr. G. Hoffmann

PHILATELY AS A REMEDY

From the address of Dr. G. Hoffmann, President of the State Postal Authority, at the opening of the National Postage Stamp Exhibition on the 4th August 1954:

“It is characteristic of our age that the external course of our lives is decisively determined by technology. The thousand-fold manifestations of technology shape our daily life, and force on us a tempo of existence at which not every human constitution can thrive in the long run.

It is no more than a national reaction to this constrained way of leading our lives when people try to counter-balance the murderous tempo of their daily lives by finding an activity which makes the most meaningful use of their spare time.

The past gave rise to postage stamps, and thus to the thousand pleasures enjoyed by stamp collectors as they arrange and study their collections after the hurry of their daily lives. I am certain that for the stamp lover, collecting gives a period of true peace and recuperation which goes to regenerate his forces and thus provides true recovery from the exhaustion of his work.”

p.4

Classification of the Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde.

[Contents list of the first two volumes of the Handbook by Hans von Rudolphi.]

pp.5-14 & 15-16

Reports from philatelic libraries.

p.15

Donations by friends of philately.

pp.16-26

Literature reviews.

pp.26-32

journal reviews.

pp.33

With magnifying glass and tweezers.

[List of articles in the Stamp Corner of Der Polygraph.]

p.34

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.35

Auction catalogues received.

pp.36-36

Voices of readers.

pp.36-37

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

pp.37-38

Persons and awards.

p.39

Radio philately.

p.39

Societies.

pp.40-87

Literature index.

p.80

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
January/June 1955, Whole number 21/22

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Foreword.

Dr. Hans Schmeer

The Munich City Library is proud of its special philatelic section which thanks to help from the city, philatelic societies and private donors, plus the dedicated and untiring work of its chief, has become a unique special library of international importance.

I hope that its praiseworthy Literatur Nachrichten (Literature Reports) with its bibliographically indispensable index will receive the full support of all friends and interested parties, so that this important philatelic information organ can be kept in being.

Dr. Hans Schmeer

Director of the Munich City Library

It is very fortunate for the Philatelic Section of the Munich city Library that after the death of the cultured Professor Dr. Hald it is to be supported as before by his successor, Director Dr. Schmeer.

The Editor

p.5

Privy Councillor Dr. Kalckhoff Born 30th September 1860, Died 13th February 1955.

Ch. O. Müller

The Nestor of German philately, Privy Councillor Dr. Kalckhoff, has died in Einbeck in the 95th year of his life. Literatur Nachrichten mourns in him a zealous collaborator who was indexing a number of English periodicals in an exemplary manner for the index as late as January 1955.

The young Kalckhoff began to take an interest in philatelic literature as a fifth-form schoolboy eager for knowledge. In his reminiscences of his philatelic youth (published in Berlin in 1920) Kalckhoff described how a fellow pupil introduced him to Moschkau's Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung, and how eagerly he studied the Schaubeck catalogue of 1871. In 1878 he took out a subscription to Siegmund Friedl's Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarkenzeitung. As a chemist student working on colour changes, Kalckhoff made his first contribution to the literature in 1888 in a paper on chemical forgeries which he wrote for the society journal of the Berlin Philatelist's Club. This was preceded in 1885 by an article written in 1885 for Senf's Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal on Should provisionals find a place in an album of first original printings.

Kalckhoff pointed the way forwards research. He never looked on postage stamps simply as items of commerce, but tended towards what are called the byways of philately, where the material is cheap but not always easy to get hold of, and dealt with far more extensive ranges of research and discovery than are to be found in the broad highway of ordinary postage stamps. Other fringe areas that received attention from Kalckhoff the tireless researcher, were telegraph stamps, cancellations, revenue stamps, and receipt tickets. However, his special early love was entires. Along with the founding father of German philately, County Court President, Carl Lindenberg, he described the Petschek brothers' collection of entires, and continued Lindenberg's work on old German covers by dealing with those of Prussia (published in 1943 by Seifert in Leipzig). Kalckhoff was also concerned as Lindenberg's collaborator with the continuation of the Grosse Handbuch der Philatelie started by von Teltz and published by Ernst Heitmann. Kalckhoff was the indefatigable adviser and collaborator with Dr. Munck on the new edition of the Kohl Briefmarken-Handbuch. The section on German Empire 1872-1925 which has recently been reprinted separately, is an original work by Dr. Kalckhoff and Dr. Munck.

Even during the last days of his life Dr. Kalckhoff produced a review of Dr. Gewande's handbook on South West Africa for the DBZ. Only the bibliography of Kalckhoff's scientific writings, that remains to be prepared, could give a true impression of what the dead man has done for German philately in the literary field.

German philately expressed its great indebtedness to Dr. Kalckhoff, and created a permanent memorial to him during the lifetime by establishing the Kalckhoff Medal.

So much for the literary successes of Kalckhoff; a detailed account of the life of the Nestor of German philately has already been given by Messrs. Meyer, Renner and Vossen in the periodicals Sammler-Dienst and DBZ.

The Berlin Philatelists' Club, Kalckhoff's second home since 1888, has inherited the extensive working library of the indefatigable researcher and great philatelist Dr. Franz Kalckhoff.

Ch.O. M.

pp.6-9

Sweden and Philatelic Literature.

On the 1st July 1955 it was 100 years since the Swedish king confirmed a decree of his Parliament and introduced standard charges and postage stamps to the Land of Three Crowns. The first Swedish stamps were issued in five different values of the "Skilling-Banco" coinage.

To mark the jubilee the Swedish Post Office issued special stamps in values of 25 and 40 ore, along with a special new edition of the Skilling-Banco stamps, on the occasion of the international "Stockholmia" stamp exhibition.

When Sweden celebrated the 50th anniversary of its first postage stamps in 1905, the lively Sveriges Filatelist-Forening in collaboration with the Royal Swedish Post Office produced an impressive commemorative volume Sveriges Franktecken 1855-1905 (Swedish postage stamps 1855-1905), which contained 322 pages, eight portraits, 326 illustrations and five graphic tables. To make this standard work available also to those collectors not familiar with the Swedish language, this official Jubilee volume was put into German by Hilmer Djurling and Rudolf Krasemann. This German translation was published in 1908 by Hugo Krötzsch in Leipzig as part of the Illustrierte Handbuch des Postfreimarkenkunde (Illustrated Handbook of Postage Stamps).

Other distinguished philatelic works of literature from the AFF are Handbok över Sveriges Franktecken 1855-1946 (Stockholm 1946) (Handbook of Swedish Postage Stamps) and Handbok över Svenska Post och Makuleringsstämplar 1685-1951 (Stockholm 1951) (Handbook of Swedish Postmarks and Cancellations 1685-1951). Both handbooks received help from the Philatelic Library in Munich via the Swedish delegate to the Brunswick meeting of the BDPL, G. Sandberg.

A valuable aid for the Swedish collector is the Swedish Postal Museum publication Meddelanden från Postmuseum (Communications from the Postal Museum), 29 issues of which have appeared to date. One of them, an account of the Swedish intaglio copper plate stamps 1920-1938 by Georg Menzinsky was published again in German as issue 18 in 1939. Nils Strandell, the now 79 year old Director of the Swedish postal museum, took eight issues to describe the Hans Lagerlöf collection, which went to the Swedish postal museum as a gift.

In collaboration with H. Olsson, Strandell dealt with the Skilling Banco stamps in issue 12. A special section is devoted to the Local Post in Stockholm.

Issue 17, by Olsson, is devoted to Swedish entires under the title Swedish postal system, postcards, letter-cards and stamped envelopes.

Since "S" is amongst the later letters of the alphabet, Sweden has only a brief entry in both the Teltz-Lindenberg Handbook, and the Kohl Briefmarken-Handbuch (11th edition). However, it should be borne in mind that Dr. Gewandes's outstanding account of the stamps of the Triple Monarchy will serve as the basis for the article on Sweden in Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde (New Handbook of Philately).

Unfortunately, work on the monographs, which are generally in Swedish, calls for a knowledge of the Nordic languages. The Sweden specialist thus has to fall back on the large number of articles in the world specialist press that are written in German and English. In particular the rarest European stamp, the Swedish 3 skilling yellow-orange (instead of green) misprint of 1855 and the "20 tretio" misprint from the end of 1879 have been the subject of many scientific articles in the philatelic press.

The biggest specialist European philatelic library, the 20,000 volume Philatelic Library of the Swedish Postal Museum, has published an exhaustive Handbok över monografier m-m-I Postmuseums filatelistika bibliotek, Stockholm in five quarto volumes and 1,506 pages.

On Nils Strandell's 70th birthday on 20th May 1946, his literary work received a memorial in the form of Issue 5 of the "Meddelanden" (Bibliografi över böcker och artiklar om frimarken författade av Nils Strandell – Bibliography of books and articles on stamps written by Nils Strandell) which bears witness to the world-wide philatelic activity of the Jubilee celebrator.

Translator's note: A list of Swedish monographs and articles follows on pages 7-9.

pp.10-16

Literature Reviews.

pp.17-29

Reviews of Journals.

pp.30-31

Exhibitions and Congresses.

pp.31-32

Auctions.

pp.32-33

Persons and Distinctions.

p.33

Radio Philately.

pp.34-36

Voices of Readers.

pp.36-37

Literature Exchange. (LIVEDI)

p.38

Societies.

pp.39-108

Literature Bibliography. (Index)

108-109

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten
July/December 1955, Whole number 23/24

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Philatelic propaganda for international law.

Propaganda Stamps from the Grotius Foundation

The Grotius Foundation has taken on the task of educating the people on the principles of international law. "Atomic science without international law is atomic war" warns the Grotius Foundation: hence the special postage stamps put out by the German Federal Post to promote atomic science had to be supplemented by the admonitory stamps supplied by the International Grotius Foundation. These carried a portrait by Rubens of the humanist Hugo Grotius (1583 to 1645) and were printed in perforated sheets of 18 stamps.

They are sold by the Grotius Foundation, 17B Aussere Prinzregentenstrasse, Munich 8 (P.O. Box 99 9 99)

pp.4-5

Reports from Philatelic Libraries.

The Philatelic Section of the City Library has obtained valuable standard philatelic works from a Swiss collector, including the two volume work on Japan by A. M. Tracey Woodward, also Capman [Chapman?], which gained an award at IPOSTA 1930 and was only produced in an edition of 100 copies; the Eagle and Maximilian Stamps of Mexico, London, 1912; Linn: Mexico. The White and Green issues of Sonora, Cal. 1916. Peplow: the Postage Stamps of Buenos Aires, London, 1925.

Accessions for 1955 also included: [See page 4 for the list]

p.5

Other Reports

A House of Philately is planned for Berlin. It will contain a library, collectors' clubroom, a lecture and projection room.

Airmail literature can be borrowed as the result of an amalgamation between IAPC and Die Luftpost Berlin. Details from Kurt Dahmann, Konstanzerstrasse 9, Wilmersdorf, Berlin.

The Cologne University Library has started to collect philatelic literature at the urging of the LV chairman Schlemeer and Committee Member Dr. Lennartz. At the same time the archives of the Mid-Rhine LV have been transferred to the Cologne University Library.

The "Union" Philatelic Society has started a philatelic library in Strasbourg, and has put out a catalogue.

The city libraries of Wurzburg and Nuremburg have stated philatelic sections on the lines of the one in Munich. The driving forces were Messrs. Amann and Doberer.

The very active "Japan" group led by Karl Rist, Söflingerstrasse 154, Ulm. A D., has presented a special library of books and periodicals on Japan to the BdPh.

pp.5-6

Philatelic literature in the U.S.A.

Translator's note: Only two items which seemed interesting have been translated.

FIPEX took place in New York in May 1956, and gave outstanding opportunities to become familiar with American research in the field of philatelic literature. One good example is supplied by the Post Office Department in Washington, which publishes an outstanding annual "Description of U. S. Postage Stamps" (since 1847).

We have the "National Philatelic Museum in Philadelphia to thank for a number of publications. Of the 36 that have appeared to date, "Federal Republic of Germany" and "Bavaria" should receive particular attention in Germany. A special number is devoted to the library of the museum directed by Dr. John Freehafer. His article Research in a Philatelic Library mentions Literatur-Nachrichten, along with the indexing activity of the American Philatelist.

pp.6-20

Literature reviews.

pp.21-25

Journal reviews.

pp.25-27

Exhibitions and Congresses.

pp.27-29

Auctions.

pp.29-30

Persons and Distinctions.

p.31

Radio philately.

p.32

Voices of readers.

pp.32-33

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

pp.34-35

Societies.

pp.35-113

Literature Index.

pp.113-123

Miscellaneous.

END

Literatur Nachrichten
[January/April 1956], Whole number 25

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 2014

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

	Original page
1. The words of great men of philately	4
2. Introduction to the jubilee number (25) of Literatur Nachrichten	4
3. Finland's philatelic literature	5
4. Literature review	6
5. Journal review	10
6. Exhibitions & Congresses	14
7. Auctions	15
8. Persons and Awards	16
9. Radio philately	18
10. Readers' voices	19
11. Literature Exchange (LIVEDI)	20
12. Societies	20
13. Literature Index	21
14. Contributors	25
15. Countries	25
16. Thematic collecting	47
17. General and Miscellaneous	49
18. To the publishers of English Language periodicals	56
19. To the publishers of philatelic periodicals	56
20. Miscellaneous	57

p.4

The words of great men of philately.

In opening the Jubilee exhibition of Stamps in Bamberg, retired General Eugen Oberhäuser spoke of the exhibition as showing a "hobby" that could not be dismissed as childish. The Patron of the exhibition, the Lord Mayor of Bamberg Mr Weegmann explained that he had been a collector for a long time: if he were to be facetious, he would have to say "you really did love collecting, didn't you." The exhortation "Don't waste all the daylight" meant that people should bask in the warming rays of joy that shine under the grey light of every day. Such rays follow the stamp collector when he sees these little messengers from many foreign lands and people, can immerse himself in the history and customs of his homeland and foreign nations, thus improving not only his collection but his range of knowledge. An interest in postage stamps is a useful aid to the education of our young people.

p.4

Introduction to the jubilee number (25) of Literatur Nachrichten.

The Archive of Philatelic Literature edited by Alfred Ihm in Wunsiedel came to the end of its existence in its third year with the appearance of N°5 in May 1950. At the Munich meeting of the Society of German Philately in 1949, the director of the philatelic section of the Munich City Library, together with Dr. F. Kalckhoff, H. Posselt and Alfred Ihm founded the literature section of the society. They had co-operated in indexing the contents of German and foreign literature in the library, & realized the need to make this information more widely available by founding Literatur-Nachrichten - Philatelic Digest. The first number appeared in a modest issue of 20 pages in DIN A5 format. The last issues had run from 110 to 124 pages in DIN A4 format, i.e. twelve times the size of this first issue. Particular interest in Literatur-Nachrichten was shown abroad, where more than 50% of the subscribers come from. Literatur-Nachrichten, which gives extracts from more than 200 German and foreign philatelic journals, has received the highest commendation at 13 national and international exhibitions.

The forerunner of both Literatur-Nachrichten and the Archive was Dr. Rommel's monthly supplement to Die Post, entitled Die Philatelistische Literatur, the first number of which appeared on the 15th January 1895. Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm - a journal for the collector of philatelic literature, appeared in 1921, edited by Carl Beck of Berlin and Alexander Bungerz, appeared for 17 years: the later editors and publishers were Bosshard and Seifert.

Die philatelistische Literatur - a journal for all those interested in philatelic literature appeared in Hamburg; under the editorship of C. Schmittziel as the organ of the Society for the Friends of Philatelic Literature. This was founded in 1932, and became a supplement to the Grüne Sammler-Welt (published by Klink, Niebull) under the title Der Philatelistische Literatursammler.

In 1945, the Society for Philatelic Literature was born in Duisburg, and published the journal Die Lupe (The Magnifying Glass) - later Sammlerlupe (The Collectors Magnifying Glass) edited by Dr. Ploenes.

p.5

Finland's philatelic literature.

100 years ago, on 1st March 1856, the then Grand Duchy of Finland, united with Russia at the time, issued its first postage stamps (maps in an oval). On the occasion of the hundredth anniversary "Finlands Filatelistförbund – Suomen Filatelistiliitto" in conjunction with the Finnish Post Office and under the aegis of the "Federation Int. de Philatelie", is holding an international stamp exhibition, "FINLANDIA 56", over the period 7-15 July 1956 in a specially built exhibition hall in the centre of Helsinki. The German representative of FINLANDIA 56 is Theodor Mobs, 54 Ludwig-Landmann-Strasse, Frankfurt/Main 16.

A leading part in the philatelic life of Finland is played by the Helsingfors Frimærke-Samlare Förening (HFF) which has been in existence since 1893 and has issued outstanding philatelic publications in connection with its jubilees. The jubilee volume that appeared in 1943 contained outstanding extensions and corrections by Erik Wahlström to the work on Finland by Lt. M. von Hertzen & Dr. H. Lindberg in the Kohl-Munk Stamp Handbook, which had been the Bible of Finnish Philately for a good 25 years.

The German language work on Finland published in connection with the 40 year jubilee of this Society was produced in a sixth edition, replacing the 5th edition of 1921-23, which quickly went out of print, but also described entires, the Helsinki City Post and the Tammerfors City Post. These were given a fresh treatment by Jarl Petterson in the 1953 Jubilee volume of the HFF which also contained papers on Finnish pre-philately, the oval stamps of the 1856-59 (Wahlström) and the issues of 1860-1875 (Gustav von Möller). Old Finland newly researched was the title of Gösta von Möller's work in the Stockholm Exhibition catalogue of 1955. In 1921, the HFF published a scientific work by Björkqvist, Finnish stamps of 1875. 32 pages of detailed description of the first issues of 1856-1889/95 were supplied by Grosfils-Berger, 1947.

Finnish special catalogues are published by the firms of I. R. Parmi in Helsinki and Lauri Peltonen in Hanko.

Finnish entires were described by Richard Granberg in 1934. The first account published by Kosack, in Berlin in 1903, appeared in German as well. In 1926 Granberg contributed a paper on the first Finnish envelopes and postcards to the festschrift of the Berlin Society of Entires Collectors.

Forgeries of the first Finnish issue of 1856 were described by the author of the vademecum, F. Serrane.

Special and first-day cancellations from Finland have been catalogued by Kalle Vaaruas. First Lieutenant Ahonius has dealt with the Kenttäpostikonttor "PS" (= field post office, PS), and Finnish postmarks, Christmas and charity stamps have been dealt with by E. A. Hellmann.

Hellmann is also the author, in conjunction with Agathon Fabergé of a pamphlet published in Finnish and German: Defective colour printing on the 10 peni stamp of the year 1866 (1871).

The initial and subsequent impressions of the kopek issue of 1845-1866 in Finland were described by Leo Linder and Erik Wahlström.

In connection with the jubilee of the Finnish post office in the year 1638, a publication from the Finnish Postal authority outlined the development of the Finnish postal service.

The scientific philatelic journal Philatelia Fennica appears monthly as the organ of the "Finlands Filatelistförbund". Its contents are indexed in Literatur-Nachrichten.

Unfortunately, the organ of Finnish fiscal-stamp collectors, Libertas Filateliae, has had to cease publication.

In conclusion, some useful papers on Finland in the technical press will be listed:

Darteyre The earliest stamps of Finland. Berner B. Ztg. 1947: 3

Hanciau Finland. Berliner B. Ztg, 1908: 5
Also Gibbons Monthly Journal, Volumes 14-16.

Möbs On Finnish Postage Stamps. Ifraba-Catalogue, 1953. p.37

Möller, Gösta V. Old Finland newly researched. Stockholmia-Catalogue 1955

Mueller, Edwin European classics. Mercury Stamp Journal. 30: 121f

END

Literature Nachrichten
May/August 1956, Whole number 26

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.3

Contents.

p.4

The "Society for Philatelic Literature Inc"

Duisberg, P.O. Box 789

Decided at its general meeting on May 1st, 1966, to take Literatur-Nachrichten as its German society organ.

Amongst the special tasks of the Society are:

1. Promotion of all attempts to publish philatelic literature by advice, practical help and sales promotion. Publication of good philatelic literature for which a commercial publisher cannot be found.
2. Recommendation of valuable philatelic books and publications of all kinds.
3. Warning against trashy philatelic literature and fraudulent price lists.
4. Support for and furtherance of the literature supply service.
5. Support for the work of the Munich Philatelic Library and other libraries, furtherance of attempts to maintain and extend their scope, especially internationally. Loans service.
6. Efforts to revive the FIPP (Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatelique).
7. Guarantee of production and expansion of Literatur-Nachrichten, particularly by recruiting collaborators with a knowledge of foreign languages to index the contents of foreign magazines subscribed to. Expansion of circle of indexers.
8. Support for philatelic handbooks, encyclopaedias, and series publications of every possible type.
9. Rational division of indexing of specialist periodicals and special philatelic publications by working parties based on language knowledge.
10. Attempt to standardise abbreviations used in quoting articles especially in the index of Literatur-Nachrichten, American Philatelist and Stamp Lover.
11. Attempts to get numbering of all known catalogues standardised as far as possible, so that articles and publications relating to a particular stamp will appear together under the same index number.

12. Financial help if possible to German and international organisations for a German philatelic index and a philatelic encyclopaedia.
13. Standardisation of format and method of production of all important commercial philatelic publications with the aim of building up from them a comprehensive philatelic work in the German language.
14. Collection and storage of lectures and photos for loan purposes.
15. Clarification of points of law, and support of philatelic authors in preserving their rights.

Individuals, societies and other organisations may become members of this Society on the recommendation of a member or philatelist of standing, and as long as they are ready to support the aims of the Society.

The Committee consists of:

Chairman	Ernst Overmann , Duisberg
Vice Chairman	Christoph Otto Müller , Steinebach-a-W., Munich
Members	Otto Buchner , Duisberg (organisation) Josef Fetzer , Duisberg (foreign language matters) Emil W. Mewes , Dusseldorf (library, lectures and archive)

The more friends of philatelic literature join the Society the more successfully will its aims be met. Enquiries to the Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, P.O. Box 789, Duisberg.

p.5

From the Lives of Famous Philatelists: The Sieger prizewinner Alfred Clement

The incentive to start collecting was given to me by a big envelope that was sent to my father during the inflation period, and which was entirely covered in stamps. I had no idea of stamp collecting – I was then 10 or 11 years old – but the colourful little labels attracted me, and I tore them off and stuck them carefully down on a sheet of paper with a big blob of brown glue.

I began relatively early to restrict myself to a few countries, and soon went on to Austria and its successor states, then to collecting Air Mail stamps alone. Then I began to concentrate more and more on Austria.

The war brought a standstill, though I got pretty well all over Europe. If I had only known then what my later field of collection would be! When I came home from captivity I found my mother had kept all my letters along with their covers. Along with a publication from the Rhine-Danube Postage Cancellation Guild on field postage cancellations I found pleasure in the cancellations from the German field post, particularly as they all looked so alike, and I was delighted to find a subject for collection there.

I plunged in with zeal and forged right on. My interest grew, and there were a thousand questions to be answered. In Germany there was a field post in 1914-18 as well as 1939-45; there was actually one in Austria as well! And what about before 1914? And if one country had such an institution, surely there would be others as well.

Within a relatively short time I had got together a collection of about 15,000 different examples of field post from the time of the 1618-1648 Thirty Years' War to the latest conflicts of our own days in Indonesia, Greece, Israel, Korea and Indochina.

At the same time, however, I have collected everything in the way of literature, reports, articles and surveys on this topic, and could give you a run-down on the history and spheres of action of the field posts of practically all the countries of the world.

Now that I have managed to publish the Handbook on the German Field Posts with the sections for pre-1914 and 1937-45, and the Handbook on the Special Topic of Military Airmail, 1793-1951, my thanks are due above all for the friendly support of many collector friends in all part of the world.

pp.5-6

What is a postage stamp?

p.6

Libraries.

No. 15/1965 of Sammler-Dienst includes a report on one of the oldest philatelic libraries in North Germany, the Philatelic Section of the Gottingen City Library, which includes books from the 80s of last century to the present day.

Rudolph Bald reports on the greatest German specialist library, the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library in the 14.111.56 issue of Frankfurter Briefmarken-Plauderei.

A description of the contents of the library of the Berlin Philatelic Society is given in information circular no.7/56 of the LV.

pp.6-16

Literature review.

pp.16-19

Journal review.

pp.19-20

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.20

Auctions.

pp.20-21

Persons and Distinctions.

p.21

Radio philately.

pp.21-23

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

p.23

Museums and Collectors.

p.23

Societies.

pp.24-50

Literature Index.

Contents of journals processed.

Important Note: For the meaning of the abbreviations, see part 25 of the index.

Journals which concentrate on a special field, e.g. "Air Mail" in the Aero Philatelist Annual are also generally notes in the inclusive index group by the remark "in every issue".

pp.50-54

Miscellaneous.

p.55

Subscription terms.

END

Literature Nachrichten
September/December 1956, Whole number 27/28

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1
Contents.

p.2
Is literature on japanese philately unwanted?

The German collector no doubt looks on it as quite normal when the entire contents of his technical magazines, be they the DBZ, Sammler-Lupe or Sammler-Dienst, are devoted to the problems of the philately of Germany. Certainly we are all in one sense German collectors, but don't we also collect other countries, and do we not all remember in the term "overseas collector" the links that were broken by the War? It is taken for granted that European collecting will be dealt with in the technical press, but overseas collecting is still very much neglected by it. And we may mention what is to us the most surprising fact, that this state of affairs can be seen very clearly in the literature index in Literatur-Nachrichten.

Of course, new issues from overseas countries are dealt with very carefully, but what about the editorial section? Why is it so very rarely that even the briefest article on a topic relating to overseas collecting finds its way into a magazine? Is it due to the editors, the collectors and contributors to the magazines, or to the ignorance of us all?

Hardly! Interest in overseas collecting has risen enormously, and it is not at all clear why this topic remains a stepchild in the literature. In this connection let us just look at a country a long way away which has begun to appear in our albums over the last few years: Japan. If we check what articles on Japanese philately have appeared in the German literature, we can see very easily that only a very, very, minimal number of articles have appeared. Perhaps special mention should be given to the Kürzel Lists, which devote special attention to this country. Is it going too far to suggest that this may account for much of the popularity of the Kürzel Lists?

However, this is not the only thing to be considered, we must take into account the American journals and will be astonished to see that there overseas collecting fills many pages of the magazines. And quite rightly, since that is the only way a magazine can truly become one for philatelists. The publications on problems relating to overseas collecting reflect the openness of mind of the editors and publishers responsible.

Probably it was the lack of any help in the German periodicals that largely led to a few Japan collectors getting together in the year 1953 and forming a Working Party X/2 of the Society of German Philatelists to work on the problems of Japanese philately. It is still not certain how far they have succeeded, but one thing has been achieved in the intervening years: the lack of publicity about Japanese philately has been to some extent made good by the Working Party's publications, which are accessible to all members via internal reports. Requests and the number of our members have increased, and with them the painful lack of opportunities for publications on questions relating to the philately of Japan.

Actually there have been successes now and again, in the form of individual technical articles. There have been publications on such topics as "Japanese architecture on Postage Stamp" and "The Fine Arts of Japan", plus general and special reports in the Society's journal. However, it has not been possible to undertake scientific work such as, for example, a study of the first stamps issued in Japan after the last war: even such magazines as Sammlermode "Collecting Trends" are not helpful.

This leads us quite unwillingly to wonder whether or not we should draw the conclusion that literature on Japan is not wanted. Not wanted by whom? Collectors want it, it must be the editors pure and simple who don't.

It would be going too far to mention names: we shall stop here and withdraw the mention of Sammlermode. However, we can only succeed if collectors make use of these columns to give objective expression to their views and answer the question posed in the title.

Karl Rist

Chairman of AG X/2, Japan, of the BDPh.

p.3

Stamps can be scattered like seed-corn.

The duty of the State to use publicity material

If we look at a list of the year's new issues, we are struck by the fact that stamp issues are repeated at ever shorter intervals, a testimony to the extent to which the use of postage stamps has spread to all levels of society. Like the newspaper, they slip unobtrusively every day into every household and into the smallest village. They can spread spiritual enlightenment if they are ideally designed. The eternal symbols of labour and the toils of humanity can be shown in a wonderfully impressive way. It is the duty of the State to make suitable use of a propaganda machine circulating like its bloodstream. Postage stamps can be sown like seed-corn, and it is not difficult to find the right seeds. Postage stamps can also be educational and improving if they extol labour, education or beauty, or illustrate the work of great men. They are a magnificent means of propagating the merits of a race or causing distinguished work to be esteemed.

The more beautiful stamps become, like engraved gems, the more justified we are in collecting. It is up to us all. Promote stamp collecting!

Ouvré, Paris

p.3

Box

“Where people think and write they don’t get rusty Savages have no posts”

H. von Stephan

pp.3-5

Libraries.

Reports from philatelic libraries

Recent additions to the library of the New York Collectors’ Club are listed in issue 5/56 of the Collector-Club Philatelist.

A catalogue of its library holdings has been issued by the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies in issue 7/56 of its Mitteilungen.

The Hamburg University and City libraries have joined forces to make available the library of the Hamburg-Altona Society for Philately in Hamburg eV, and to place philatelic literature in the reading room of the City Library. Works from the Munich Philatelic Library can also be ordered via this library.

The Latvia Working Party (Chairman, R. Jacobeen, 15 Brodschrangen, Hamburg 11) is undertaking an archive of literature.

Rudolf Bald reports on the Munich Philatelic Library (Town Hall) in the 14th March 1956 issue of Frankfurter Briefmarken-Plaudereien.

A selected list of works on philately in the Cologne University and City Libraries has been issued by the “Mittelrhein” section of the BDPH.

The philatelic library of Leland Powers was auctioned by the firm of Colby, New York, in June 1956.

The Apfelbaum Library (1428 S. Penn Square, Philadelphia, USA), the property of the stamp dealer Earl P. L. Apfelbaum, is now open to the public.

St. 1250

New acquisitions of the Munich City Philatelic Library

[See the original for the list of titles.]

pp.5-21

Literature review.

pp.21-26

Journals review.

pp.27-28

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.29

Auctions.

pp.29-30

Persons and Distinctions.

p.30

Radio philately.

pp.31-43

Exchange of literature. (LIVEDI)

p.44

Museums and Collections.

pp.44-45

Societies.

pp.45-74

Index of literature.

pp.75-76

Miscellaneous.

p.76

Voices of readers.

END

Wolfgang Maassen

The sad end of the legendary Germania-Ring Library
[Das taurige ende der legendären bibliothek des Germania-Rings]
AIJP-Bulletin, March 2008, Whole number 127, pp.110-111

Translation by Brian J. Birch
Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
October 2021

THE SAD END OF THE LEGENDARY GERMANIA-RING LIBRARY

Years ago, the author once wrote an article about the former Kröttsch library, which, thanks to the generous support of C. G. Vogel, found its final resting place in the 1920s in the Deutsche Bibliothek in Leipzig. Research revealed that these were still part of the overall holdings still preserved apart from a few disposals and can still be viewed today.

At that time I didn't have the time to track down another library that was also of similar value and probably even more extensive: the library of the Germania-Ring. From this exists a "Detailed list of the central library of the "Germania-Ring" penned by Fr. Wilh. Thalmann, which he compiled in 1912. The 88 pages describe a library that no one in Germany had previously listed, so it was particularly valuable for the author that not only specialist books and magazines were listed, but also the first auction catalogues, dealer price lists and much more.

This library should actually still be in the Leipzig University Library today, because the library was donated in 1932. A gem of German philatelic literature. In 1935, as is well known, the Germania-Ring dissolved and was finally wiped out between the new Reichsbund der Philatelisten and the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten-Verbande, which was desperately resisting a takeover at home and abroad.

Coincidentally, Wolfgang Strobel - known to many for his well-researched specialist books - spent several long periods in the author's library, always on the trail of a research question relating to the 19th century. When he was no longer able to help him, and other German philatelic libraries he asked could no longer help him, the author gave him the library catalogue of the Germania-Ring with the suggestion that he should contact the university library in Leipzig, they might have more there and can provide him with what he wants. This information was also given in the hope of finally finding out more about the whereabouts and preparing accordingly for a next visit to Leipzig.

Weeks later, Wolfgang Strobel received an answer, albeit one that was completely different from what he – and the author – expected. Below is the full text of the answer from the university library, which gives a chronology of the events, which first required extensive research into the old files:

1932, 20.06:

taken over as a deposit from the library of the Germania-Ring, contractually regulated by the chairmen of the Germania-Ring and the then director of the Leipzig University Library; the property rights to the library remained with the Germania-Ring. This means that the holdings of this library are not listed in the catalogues of the Leipzig University Library. The administration of the library was in the hands of a scientific employee of the UB [UniversityLibrary] Leipzig.

1935, December 31:

Germania-Ring was dissolved, the library remained in the custody of the UB Leipzig.

1936, 02.01:

Transition or integration into the “Reichsverband der Philatelist – Landesverband Sachsen eV”. As the legal successor, it took over the library of the Germania-Ring and thus entered into the deposition contract. This was also made clear in the contract.

1941, 03.10:

The Reichsbund submitted to the “NSG Kraft durch Freude”. The “Gemeinschaft der Deutschen Sammler eV” was founded, in which the former associations of the Reichsbund as well as the KDF collector groups are combined.

1943, beginning:

Relocation of the stocks of the UB Leipzig, including the library of the former. Germania-Ring. This is evidenced by various correspondence. The stocks for philately (own UB stock + deposited stock) were probably transferred to the Balzbergwerk Plömnitz b. Bernburg. Our files also contain a list of signature groups where a collective signature “Phila.” is included. Further information, such as proof of titles and the like, could no longer be ascertained.

1945-46:

Big start of the repatriation of the outsourced UB inventory. It was established that the crates had been opened by the Soviet occupying forces and valuable or interesting stocks/groups of stocks had been plundered. Further losses occurred through theft, since the book cases were unguarded for a while.

1933-1942:

There were still various book donations. Items to supplement/complete the library of the Germania-Ring. This is also documented by correspondence in our files.

1934-1941:

Production of a new printed catalogue was planned, but was postponed due to the war. The UB employee who manages the Germania-Ring Library communicates this in a number of letters to external collectors. Unfortunately, we cannot determine whether work in this direction had actually already begun.

1933-1942:

Correspondence regarding inventory requests or loans from the Germania-Ring library. This was done by a scientific employee who, according to his function from June 1939, was responsible for supervision.

Today there are only about 40-50 titles left in the library of the Germania-Ring that are not catalogued! A multi-year retro-cataloging project has started in-house. In the course of this project, the remains of the Germania-Ring will also be recorded and then listed in our online catalogue.

S.Faja

Employee AG information

These were the message. So the famous Germania-Ring library no longer exists. Their titles, if they still exist at all, may have been scattered all over the world. This is supported by the fact that individual old books and catalogs are sometimes offered, which contain an ex libris reference to the library.

Until now, the author had always assumed that these were duplicates from the former library. However, it now seems possible that they were their originals.

By the way - it should be added: the mentioned library catalog from 1912 also shows that even then a significant number of titles were on the list of lost items, i.e. marked as "missing". A problem that all libraries, not just universities, are familiar with.

The author thanks Wolfgang Strobel for his help, even if the result in this case is not a happy one for German philately.

END

Literature Nachrichten
January/April 1957, Whole number 29

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1

Contents.

pp.2-3

Problems of Philatelic Documentation.

Barely 22 years after the introduction of the first postage stamps by Rowland Hill in England, the Strasburg bookseller and publisher Oscar Berger-Levrault started to meet the needs of an already numerous body of collectors in England, France, Germany and North America by issuing a stamp catalogue: the first philatelic publication in the world appeared on 17th October 1861. However, no-one at the time could foresee how important philatelic literature would later become within the framework of philatelic science. Apart from the fact that philatelic science is unthinkable without literature, it became more and more important after 1900, when the increasing number of new issues led many collectors to give up "general collecting" and concentrate increasingly on special areas (groups of countries, individual countries, motif and theme collections, airmail, pre-philately, precancels, first-day covers, entires, etc.) This specialization meant that the collector began to refer to researches and experiences published in the subject literature.

Now it is unfortunately the sad fact that only a fraction of all the scientific material published can appear in book form as monographs: a publisher willing to make the necessary sacrifice of the high cost of printing, raised still more by the need for illustrations, in relation to the small numbers wanted, cannot always be found. A considerable part of the scientific studies thus only ever appears as articles in the subject press, which because of its ninety-five years of existence and its international extension via philatelic libraries has at least double the range of the monographs.

In searching for sources of information, it is important for the collector to discover which periodicals (a term covering almanacs, yearbooks, calendars and the like, which publish useful articles less often, as well as actual scientific journals) will publish technical articles relating to his speciality, and in what year they have appeared. This necessitates the production of guides to the sources (bibliographies, indexes), and as early as 1891 the Austrian President of the Senate, Victor Suppantshitsch, realised this and persuaded the firm of Larisch, which still exists in Munich, to produce the “Bibliography and reference book on all the German philatelic literature from the outset to the end of 1891”. In his footsteps followed the editor of the (Mitteldeutschen) Philatelisten-Zeitung and founder of the Grossnitz Philatelic Society, A. E. Glasewald, the editor of the Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Carl Beck, the compiler of the large Lexicon of Philately, the artist Alexander Bungerz, District Judge H. Fränkel Rudolf Krasemann (Bibliography of the most important special works on the stamps of individual countries), Friedrich Leitenberger (Bibliography of the German-language literature), and Max Ton, the compiler of the Handbook of Philatelic Literature. Unfortunately the international reference work on philatelic literature Mondial (1936) started by Fritz Billig (then in Vienna, now a publisher in Jamaica, N. J.) remained incomplete, as did the projected “General Index to Philatelic Literature in the German Language” by C. Schmitt diel, who unfortunately never came home again after the last World War.

The same fate befell the “Handbook and catalogue of world philatelic literature” advertised by Karl Scharfenberg in the Magazin für Philatelistische Literatur, 1950. The “Bibliographic Repertoire of the Philatelic Press”, financed by Dr. Ing. Giulio Tedeschi of Turin in 1929-30 (he founded the International Federation for the Philatelic Press, FIPP), and edited by Professor Francis P. Renaut was very promising. It was supplied free to FIPP members along with FIPP bulletin. Unfortunately the Repertoire was discontinued after 4 issues because there were too few subscribers.

The union of the heads of the philatelic division of the Munich City Library and the Literature Section of the Society of German Philatelists in one person in 1950 made it possible for the “Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur” he had begun to continue as Literature Nachrichten – Philatelic Digest, covering the contents of more than 200 home and foreign technical journals. The favourable reception which this bibliographical organ has received in collecting circles is indicated by its recognition by the Dutch, Swedish and Swiss postal authorities and the award to it of gold and silver medals at international postage stamp exhibitions.

A rich source of information for British Empire collectors is provided by the Index to Current Philatelic Periodicals produced earlier by H. S. French, and more recently by James Negus, London, and issued as a quarterly supplement by the London magazine Stamp Lover.

With the help of a team of collaborators each of whom covers the journals in one of eight language groups, Charles Hahn produces Current Philatelic Literature: an Index as a supplement to the journal The American Philatelist.

It would be a worthy task to coordinate these indexing efforts and bring them together as one bibliographical-philatelic journal, dividing the task of indexing by language groups. A precondition for rational indexing however would be standardization of the abbreviations for the journals covered, and a unified system for numbering the stamp issues in the world catalogues of Scott, Gibbons, Yvert and Michel.

A valuable bibliographic aid will be found in the cumulative indexes compiled by R. King-Farlow, Alcock, Rolland, Kimble, Moens, Glasewald, and W. P. Costerus and covering the Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, London Philatelist, [Philatelic] Journal of Great Britain, Stamp Lover, Philatelic Adviser, The American Philatelist, Philatelisten-Zeitung, Le Timbre-Post, Nederlandsch Tijdschrift voor Postzegeltunde, Philat. Maandblad, Nederlandsch Maandblad and De Philatelist. A comprehensive coverage of the philatelic literature for research purposes was one of the principal aims of the Philatelic Division of the Munich City Library and the Literature Section of the Society of German Philatelists, which now has an index containing more than 30,000 cards. The furtherance of philatelic bibliography is one item in the programme of the Society for Philatelic Literature in Duisberg. As a supplement of their Rundbrief No. 1, they published the literature survey on Saar and Wurttemberg compiled by Herr Overmann and Baron Otto Müller.

(see Supplement)

p.3

Progress Report on New Handbook of Philately.

Dr. Karl Th Meyer & Dr. F. W. Gerhard Schmidt

Since work began on the Neuen Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, three parts of Series B have appeared (German Reich and supplement), and one part of Series A (Macao). The second part of Series A (continuation of Macao and Madagascar) is in progress under the direction of Dipl. Ing. Kricheldorf.

The new Chairman/Director, Dr. Karl Th. Meyer would really like to get on faster with the work. Since no basis exists however, everything has to be built up afresh. More emphasis than formerly must be placed on the title Briefmarkenkunde [Postage Stamp Science] he has no ambition to issue an encyclopedia on all branches of philately.

On the subject of postage stamps:

GERMAN REICH from 1935-on (Memoral issue: 100 years of German railways) – until the end of the war in 1945 – anyone who has authentic information to relate or put in the Handbook as a scientific contribution is warmly requested to participate in this contribution to world literature. Contact Dr. Karl Th. Meyer, 108 Alt-Moabit, Berlin NW 40; contribution from Michel number 577 onwards especially wanted.

The previous Berichte edited by Dr. F. W. Gerhard Schmidt were devoted not so much to topics that would come up later in the Handbook as to supplementing what had already been published in the various parts since the beginning of the 1920s by new philatelic discoveries.

It is also our wish to direct the positive forces of specialists at home and abroad towards a common purpose.

This is the aim of

COLLOQUIUM PHILATELICUM

Reports of the technical director and collaborators of the New Handbook of Postage Stamp Science, “Colloquium Philatelicum” asks for short but as far as possible “meaty” articles, with illustrations or photography suitable for reproduction, to be sent to Dr. F. W. Gerhard Schmidt, 16 Jenaer-Strasse, Berlin-Wilmersdorf.

We confidently hope that every active scientific philatelist at home and abroad is ready to take part in selfless co-operative work, so that the great task begun by Kohl and Dr. Munk can be taken steadily forward.

Dr. Karl M. Meyer

Dr. F. W. Gerhard Schmidt

Distribution Sale is in the trusty hands of Karl Bald, Wernfeld-a-Hain

pp.4-10

Literature review.

pp.11-16

Journal review.

p.16

Exhibitions & Congresses.

pp.16-17

Auctions.

p.17

Persons and Distinctions.

p.18

Literature exchange. (LIVEDI)

Museums and Collections.

pp.18-19

Societies.

pp.19-50

Literature index.

pp.50-51

Miscellaneous.

p.51

Explanation of abbreviations for the Literature index.

Important Notice!!!

Technical journals primarily devoted to a special topic (e.g. "Airmail" in the Aero Philatelist Annals) will be noted under the appropriate index group by the general entry "In every number". These journals are marked by + in the following list. (See original for list.)

END

Literature Nachrichten
May/July 1957, Whole number 30

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1

Contents.

p.2

Philately rouses high expectations.

Dr. Benno Schwaginger: From an address by the Austrian Postmaster-General

“.... However it is certain that philately has roused a series of new trains of thought in humanity. I may imagine that philately, the love of stamps is more than just a piece of paper, more than merely a selfish passion for collecting. I may think that these people who enjoy stamps look on them as more than just a work of art. Stamps provide information on other countries, peoples, States, societies and cultures. A hundred years ago the world still seemed relatively large. Over the last hundred years, and particularly over the last decades, however, it has become very much smaller. And when I look at the state of the world, it seems highly necessary to bring people together, understand them and help them to become more understanding and finally, if I may say so, promote the cause of peace.

I should like to mention another type of specialised collection in this connection, one which I think is of particular importance for the present time. We all know well enough that if the philatelist wants a beautiful, complete, perfect and noteworthy collection, he will have to spend a great deal of time. I am not even mentioning the financial aspect, I am only saying that a constant search for fresh items is necessary – I am thinking of course of thematic collectors. Let us thank Heaven that people can occupy themselves with something other than war and hatred.

We are currently puzzling our brains over what to do with people as automation gradually takes over. I know there are already plenty of theories about this. However, I think and am prepared to say that automation and the solution to all the problems it involves is a spiritual rather than a material problem. What should people do with their free time? I think that philately should not be ignored in this respect. We should make an effort to turn young people especially into philatelists. Why? The stamp as such always tells us something basic about the country it comes from. Whether it carries the head of a famous person, artist or scientist, or a landscape, or an animal, etc., it may impel young people to take an interest in the most widely varying fields of knowledge. How wonderful it is to think that in future at least some people will devote their free time to intellectual pursuits to which philately has pointed them.

And on the other hand it is unavoidable that we shall think about, look at and learn about the scientists and artists of other people, other nations and other States: everyone who takes a deep interest in other countries will develop a corresponding affection for them. Anyone who visits other countries will find the people there good and bad like us, clever and stupid like us. And everyone must then realize how stupid it is to think he is the only person that matters, the only person he need bother about, and to believe there is only one right way to think and speak - his way.

And if young people in particular learn from the outset how to get on with one another, then we have made a contribution to world peace, and I can think of nothing finer than that.”

(Die Briefmarke, Vienna, 9.3.57)

pp.3-17

Literature review.

pp.17-24

Journal review.

pp.24-26

Exhibitions and Congresses.

p.26

Auctions.

pp.27-29

Persons and Distinctions.

p.29

Literature Exchange. (LIVEDI)

p.30

Societies.

pp.31-57

Index of literature.

pp.57-59

Newsletter from libraries.

pp.59-60

Radio philately.

pp.60-61

Miscellaneous.

END

Literature Nachrichten

Whole number 31/32

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 31/32

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

REPORT OF THE LITERATURE SECTION OF THE B.D.Ph TO THE 1957 STUTTGART MEETING

The Literature Section of the BDPh has met the needs of Society members during 1956/57 to the same extent as in previous years by lending, procuring and reporting on literature, supplying photocopies of relevant literature for research purposes and bibliographic surveys, issuing the Literature Reports (Philatelic Digest), evaluating the contents of technical periodicals, extending the card index, sending out notices, etc.

As the chairmanship of Section B is now united with the direction of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library in one person, it was possible in the year covered by the report to lend 5,246 volumes to 977 readers. 432 readers used the Reading Room of the Philatelic Library.

71 public libraries took part in the "German Loans Exchange" scheme to lend philatelic literature to external borrowers in West and East Germany. 162 parcels were sent.

Literature was sent to the Austrian National Library in Vienna, the Library of the Union of Netherlands Philatelic Societies in Aruba, the Basle University Library and the Trieste City Library under the "International Loans Exchange" scheme.

Personal visits were asked for and made to the philatelic library in Munich Town Hall by collectors from 46 German towns and from the overseas countries Argentina, Belgium, Greece, Israel, Italy, Yugoslavia, England, Austria, Peru, Switzerland, United States.

1,063 items of mail were sent out during report year (reports and advice, literature requested, references).

Information was requested by collectors from 87 German places and 11 foreign countries (Australia), Belgium, Canada, France, Great Britain, Japan, Sweden, Switzerland, South Africa, Hungary and the USA): it concerned German postal rates before 1900, trial stamps, the postal history of Hamburg, the 20kopek Finland cover of 1850, stamp collecting as a capital investment (pre-philately, island post, French balloon post 1870, British Guyana no. 9, Egyptian post offices in Turkey, reverse docketts from the Principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, Auchen Workers and Soldiers' Council, Russian airmail postal order, etc.)

Information was obtained from the following bodies; Federal Ministry for Posts, Archive of the OPD, Munich, State Criminal Bureau, Munich, Praesidium of the Bavarian State Police, archives of the Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung, etc.

The value of the documentation activities provided by the Literature Section has been demonstrated in a particularly striking manner by the number of foreign collectors who have been unable to find what they wanted even in the biggest European philatelic libraries (Stockholm and Vienna) but have been helped by the Munich index.

The "Literatur-Nachrichten-Philatelic Digest", which abstracts over 200 German and foreign technical journals has been published in Coburg since 1956 with the support of the BDPh. (Nos. 25-28 appeared in the year 1956, Nos. 29-32 in the year 1957).

The documentation activities of the Literature Section were recognised by the award of a silver medal by the juries of the International Postage Stamp Exhibitions in Zagreb/Yugoslavia and Helsinki/Finland. The Finnish silver medal was accompanied by the congratulations of the jury.

Over the year the Munich Philatelic Library added 1,024 volumes to stock. 214 were purchased with City funds, 810 volumes were gifts. The value of the gifts, mainly from the Society of German Philatelists (BDPh) amounted to 2,301DM. The Society also undertook the cost of additional work in the library (106.50DM) and of the film archive (microphotos: 77DM).

In addition to the BDPh, gifts were received from the Library of the Swiss Post Office, the Swedish Postal Museum, the Croatian Philatelic Society, the Union of Netherlands Philatelic Societies, the German Federal Post, the Bamberg and Regensburg Philatelic Societies, and the estates of Schroder and Zinckgraf.

Colonel Pohl. Of Breitbrenn, left his collection of European stamps to the Philatelic Library: the editorial board of Literatur-Nachrichten valued this at 303DM.

In appreciation of the value of the Munich Philatelic Library, the German Federal Post Office presented it with an album containing unused examples of all the stamps issued in West German and West Berlin since 1945.

Collaboration between the Literature Section and the Philatelic Library in the new philatelic literature has led, during the year, to the compilation of a Saar bibliography and a Württemberg bibliography published in Circular 2 of the society for Philatelic Literature, and the production of a checklist of the abbreviations of philatelic journals as used internationally in the indexes of philatelic libraries. Source material was provided for Judge Sesar for his researches on Bavarian stamps (the Leopold and Krenzer issues, the Hasenay designs) which were printed in the "Archive for Bavarian Postal History, published by the OPS in Munich. The Literature Section also helped with the publication of the very valuable work of Ullrich Häger (Frankfurt) on the United States. A history in stamps appeared in the Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung, and was reprinted as a special issue. References to the Munich Philatelic Library appeared in the recently published textbooks by Dr. Gerhard Schmidt (Nene Briefmarkenfibel-New primer on Philately) and Schwenzfeger (Handbuch des Briefmarkensammlers- (Handbook for Stamp Collectors). The magazine "The German Postal Specialist" (Official Publication of the Germany Philatelic Society) has referred several times in its "Library Issue" (Vol. 7/10 – 1950) to the Munich Philatelic Library and spoken highly of the Literature-Nachrichten.

The classification of the contents of the Munich Philatelic Library, developed on the basis of many years' experience, was used as the model for the philatelic libraries of the Union of Netherlands Philatelic Societies, the Hungarian Philatelic Society, the Berlin Privy Councillor Kalckhoff Memorial Library and the Hallensia Library.

The Literature Supply Service (LIVEDI) of the Literature section was able in 94 cases to supply wanted philatelic literature. When the original was not available for loan, photocopies were sent to the enquirer instead.

Unfortunately, the federation Internationale de Philatelie has not been able to replace the now defunct Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatelique by setting up a literature division to carry out the urgently necessary task of coordinating documentation activity from the language point of view in the interests of uniform international philatelic bibliography and documentation.

May I, at this point, express my most sincere thanks to all the member societies and working parties of the BDPh who have supported the work of section B by making their publications available to it. Especial thanks are due to the Chairman of Section A, Research, Herr Mobs, for his valuable support.

In the interests of preserving philatelic literature, which was so badly affected by the two world wars, it would be admirable if people who own any could ensure its safety after their death by instructing their heirs to pass it on to the Literature Section of the BDPh for recording and transmission to the Munich Philatelic Library. Both are always glad to receive any type of philatelic literature (monographs, catalogues, exhibition guides, auction catalogues, magazines, etc.). Offers should be addressed to Section B (136), Steinbach au Wörthsee 84.

Chr. O. Müller

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 33/34

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 33/34

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 171x

800 YEARS OF MUNICH

100 YEARS OF PHILATELIC MUNICH

MUNICH'S IMPORTANCE FOR PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Munich's reputation as an art city, purveyor of fleshly pleasures and abode of life-enhancing gaiety all too often overshadows its fame as the birthplace of the first German postage stamps which entitles the Bavarian state capital to be known as Germany's stamps city and the metropolis of German philatelic literature.

There were as yet no postage stamps in the romantic old mail-coach days when in 1664 "pale on the yellow jackets shone the Thurn und Taxis heraldic button" and the Taxis postal service gained a foothold in Munich and the private forwarding agent-cum-postmaster-general, Johann Jakob Oexle, set up a postal service from and to Friedberg. Nor were there any in 1770 when the Taxis post office in premises at the no longer existing 3 Rindermark introduced the registration of mail to Munich. Munich's game as Germany's postage stamp city began later than that, when Germany's first "adhesive postal stamps" were produced within its walls at the house of a resident print-shop owner (7 Residenzstrasse) J. G. Weiss. The Bavarian state capital then had to show the world what its engravers and printers were in a position to do. The idea of the impressive and convenient prepaid stamp began its victorious march outwards from Munich to Saxony, Baden, Wurttemberg and the Thurn und Taxis postal region. This did not last long and Munich engravers at the Bavarian mint helped to produce federal stamps, which were printed on Pasinger paper. The father of the Swiss “Strubelis” was the creator of the popular Bavarian Ludwig Thaler, Friedrich Voigt. His colleague from the Munich mint, John Peter Ries, improved on his shock-headed Helvetia and created the cancellations for Swiss covers and the long-lived popular heraldic stamps in raised printing for Bavaria.

As postage stamps went on their victorious march through the entire world, it was not possible for them to remain the private preserve of the engravers; their artistic aspect and gradually roused the interest of such academic painters as Prince Friedrich August of Kaulbach (Bavarian Leopold stamps), Professor Firlé (Ludwig III stamps), Julius Diez (Prince Regent birthday cards, the heraldic expert Professor Otto Hupp and many well-known Munich painters of the 20th century such as Professor Ehmcke who used the child from the Munich coat of arms as the motif for the special stamp for the 1022 Industrial Exhibition.

It is also to the credit of Munich that lithography, an invention of the Munich citizen Senefelder, was increasingly used as a suitable medium for printing stamps, that the Munich fine-art printers Bruckmann blessed the Rumanian post in 1922 with a coronation series produced by the new mezzotint process, and that the Munich firm of Cousée, which had participated in the Kingdom of Bavaria jubilee issue of 1911, produced the Rumanian commemorative issue for King Ferdinand’s 60th birthday.

The air of Munich was also breathed by the air-mail concession stamps produced in 1921 for the SCADIA German-Colombian trading combine by the no longer existing printing firm of Meisenbach, Riffahot & Co. The design was also due to a Munich man, Professor Richard Klein.

The Munich postal authorities were trailblazers in the field of pneumatic post and post-office checks. A pneumatic postal installation was set up as early as 1876 in Munich. The first German installation of the type, it linked the telegraph office to the main post office. On 2st February 1910 the Munich No. 2 post office introduced the no-cash system for bulk posting, in response to a recommendation made by Ing. Baumann in 189 in his pamphlet “the replacement of the postage stamp by the post-paid mark”.

However, Munich was also from early days a productive city in the fields of postal-history and philatelic research. Much of the philatelic literature printed in Munich has become rarities in the meantime. The first German novel about postage stamps appeared in the “Fliegende Blätter” in Munich in 1863 and made fun of stamp collecting, but this is outweighed by the work of a privy councillor of the Royal and Imperial Superior Provincial Court, Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz. He produced a detailed “Bibliography” and reference book of the entire German philatelic literature from its beginning to the end of 1891. This first philatelic bibliography was published in 1892 by Anselm Larisch, the founder of the Munich stamp firm of A. Larisch, to which an auction division was added by his son Gustav in 1932. A new star then appeared in the philatelic heaven of Munich in the shape of Theodore Haas (1848-1911), the most important philatelic researcher and writer after Lindenberg. He took over the editorship of the magazines “Ver. Erdball-Mercur” (1883) and “Postwertzeichen-Kunde” (1888-1890) founded by Larisch, and allowed Larisch to publish his postcard catalogue. The handbook he published later of all postcards, letter card, etc., guides and textbooks on philately won Haas, originally a theologian, the first award of the Lindenberg Medal to a German philatelist.

The lively philatelic life of Munich in the nineties favoured the appearance of the magazine “Postwertzeichen”, which was edited by the chairman of the then most important Munich collectors’ society, the “Bayerische Philatelisten-Verein”, namely Ministerial Secretary Leon Brummer (1846-1900). This magazine managed to last for 13 years (1888-1900). The years 1891-93 produced the “History and Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of the Kingdom of Bavaria” by Cornelio Joris and Otto Sedlmayr, whilst “The special collector of cancellations in Bavaria” was produced as a book by the Munich artist A. Chelins in 1900.

A second golden age for philatelic literature was produced in Munich by the Inflation. The fortunate interplay of the entrepreneurial spirit and idealism in the persons of the energetic publisher Albert Kürzl and the painter Alexander Bungerz, the father of the “Grosse Lexikon der Philatelie” resulted in a voluminous output of philatelic literature. Bungerz was made editor by Kürzl in 1919, and his assiduity transformed the originally dull “Sammler-Woche” into the most widely-read specialist magazine in Germany within three months. Bungerz had great success with his publications “From Studio to Counter”, “Colour Designations in Philately”, “Hand Cancellation in Liban”, and the revival of Ruhl’s “Briefmarkenfreund”. Together with Carl Beck of Berlin, Bungerz founded the “Verein philatelistischer Literatursammler” in 1921, and their organ “Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm” is a rarity today. Other products of the Kürzl company were “Der Bundeskamernd”, organ of the “Union” correspondence society, the world catalogue 1921, the Kürzl stamp Catalogue 1922”, and the series “Kürzl’s Postage Stamp Library”. The Viennese colonel and academy painter Hesshaimer produced for Kürzl the “Philatelic Prints” – 13 reproductions of classic stamps with related details of their philately and postal history. The edition was limited and the items numbered consecutively. Their proceeds went to finance the “Lindenberg-Ferrary Prize” set up by Kürzl. After the “Sammler-Woche” had been transferred to the firm of “Postmarke” in Vienna (1926) the name of Kürzl reappeared after 1945 when the “Kürzl Briefmarkenliste” began to appear (it was taken over by Borek in 1957).

The level of collecting activity during the inflation period was such that a Munich daily paper, the “Münchner Zeitung” published a philatelic supplement “Der Markensammler” edited by Herold, during 1922-1931.

A long-term contributor to “Sammler-Woche” was the specialist pedagogue Franz Petersohn (now a head teacher in Cologne). In 1926 he founded the “Philatelistische Vereinsblatt” as the organ of the Munich Collectors’ Society. This published valuable scientific articles from 1927 to 1938 under the title “Sammler-Post”.

The same year saw the foundation of “Das Postwertzeichen”, edited as the organ of the League of German and Austrian Philatelic Societies by Alexander Leo, an honorary member of the Munich Stamp Club and a specialist in Wurttemberg and Great Britain. This ceased to appear in 1938 after twelve years of existence.

The first philatelic publication of any importance after the 1945 collapse was a study by a teacher at Munich University, Dr. Alfred Kurse, “The Postage Stamp as a thing of Value”, published by the Pflausen-Verlag in 1947. He followed this in 1948 with the essay “Stamp Collecting in the Modern Economy”.

The “100 years of Bavarian Stamps” jubilee led Joseph de Hesselle to publish a research study “The black einser with its 20 year old secret now uncovered in stamp pictures”, which did not go uncontradicted in the jubilee exhibition guide by the Bavarian examiner Franz Pfenniger.

A valuable contribution to the philatelic literature on Bavarian was made in 1951 by the chairman of the Munich Stamp Club, Dipl. Ing. Stud. Prof. Karl Winkler, with his “Handbook of Bavarian Cancellations”.

One prize item of the Bavarian philatelic literature that has long been out of print is the work by Ministerial Secretary Johann Brunner, "The Postage Stamps of Bavarian 1849-1920". This was printed by the Bruckmann Fine art Works and published by the Bayerland-Verlag, Munich in 1921.

The 100 year jubilee of French postage stamps in 1951 was the occasion for the publication "Monograph on the French Postage Stamps" by the Munich-based French specialist Wilhelm Hofinger. The same author produced a study of interest to laymen as well, "The oldest air mail in the world, the Parisian balloon post" (Kemper 1957). Hofinger, himself a renowned pioneer in air travel, was the leader of the working group on France in the BDPH, and produced the France letters in the "Sammler-Lupe": he also ran the International Forgeries Centre.

Another member of the Munich Stamp Club, the Munich patent lawyer, Dr. Heinsen, the librarian of the German old letter Collectors' Society, produced an interesting work on "Cancellations of the North Depart. 124, 128-131", in collaboration with the French specialist and old-letter collector Leralle. This was published in Amiens in 1957 by the firm of Yvert.

Germany specialists eagerly await the monthly appearance in Munich of Dr. Heinrich Wittmann's periodical "The German Collector".

A marginal item to be mentioned for the sake of completeness was published during Germany's darkest days in 1945. It was the Lux Young People's Readers' Guide no. 11, "Postage Stamps", a little pamphlet by the Munich collector Ch. O. Müller.

Munich has a seed-bed of Bavarian postal history in the archives of the Munich Post Office Administration and its associated Society for the Study of Postal History in Bavarian". This publishes the "Archive on Bavarian Postal History" twice a year under the editorship of Postmaster-General, Dr. Heinrich Hartmann. Dr. Hartmann is, at the same time, the editor of the "Archive on German Postal History".

A factor not to be underestimated in the economy of Munich is the Michel Stamp Catalogue – the bible of German stamps collectors, which has been published here by the firm of Schwaneberger since it was brought out of the Eastern zone by Eugen Berling. Martin Reith brought the section on Europe to a noteworthy height, and was successfully followed by Gerh. Webersink: the overseas section is in the hands of Carl Hamecher, Munich, and August Drahn, Cologne.

It is not much use for the specialist collector to know of the existence of specialist philatelic literature unless he can see it in or borrow it from a public library, if he cannot buy it. Attempts to build up the philatelic section of the German Library in Leipzig, which was based on the collection of C. G. Vogel of Pössneck, into a central pan-German philatelic library were not successful, and it remained a torso. Many changes were also lost in Berlin to use the Beck, Fränkel, Rommel, Kalckhoff, Stenger, etc., collections in the Prussia State Library as the basis for a German philatelic library, and the most important private philatelic library, the extensive collection of the Berlin Philatelic Club was a victim of the Second World War, as was the Schmittdiel Library in Hamburg. It was thus left to Munich to build up the philatelic section of the Munich City Library into a central repository for German philatelic literature.

This library began in a small way (by taking over the Zinckgraf Library, the library of the Munich Stamp Club and duplicates from the library of the Munich Entire Collectors' Society, and by bequests from Alex. Leo, the widow Harisch, Colonel Schröder, etc.) and was built up with the help of the League of German Philatelists, the Lord Mayor, the city cultural agencies, and Drs. Held, Santer and Schmeer of the board of the City Library. This development was very helped by the fact that in 1940 the founder of the Munich Philatelic Library managed by touch negotiation to secure the duplicates from the Prussian State Library for Munich. Since he had taken precautions against bomb damage in good time, he was able to accept Leo's bequest in 1946; funds then became available for the purchase of philatelic literature and there were also donations from authors and publishers. With a total stock today of over 30,000 volumes (c.16,00 of them only copies, the rest duplicates), the Munich Philatelic Library will soon rank on a level with the leading European specialist philatelic libraries in Berne (Post Office Library) and Stockholm (Postal Museum).

It is not just the number of books that determines the value of a specialist library. The particular value of the Munich Philatelic Library lies in its usefulness as a source of information because of its card index covering 35,000 entries arranged by subject and listing useful articles in periodicals, almanacs, exhibition catalogues and other magazines. Extracts from over 200 German and foreign specialist journals have appeared since 1951 in the "Literatur-Nachrichten Philatelic Digest" issued by the founder and long-time director of the library, Ch. Otto Müller, in his capacity as chairman of the literature section of the BDPh.

It should also be listed to the credit of Munich that Munich collectors have been awarded above-average numbers of gold and silver medals and special prizes at national and international stamp exhibitions. The main Italian government prize (1956) and the Kalckhoff Medal (1953) went to Munich collectors. The philatelic section of the Munich City Library, and "Literatur-Nachrichten" have also been repeatedly honoured by the jury with the top prizes when they have competed in international and national stamp exhibitions.

Chairman
Literatur-Nachrichten, 33/34

8

2. CO-OPERATION BETWEEN JAPAN AND GERMANY IN PHILATELY

The monthly journal of the "Institute for Philately" published under this heading an agreement between the President of the Institute, Mr. Takaharu Mitsui, and the leader of the AG X/2-Jpan in the BDPh, Herr Karl Kist of Ulm/Donau, in August 1957.

The essential points of this agreement relate to co-operation in philately between Japan and Germany, which should take the special form of a lively exchange of ideas on outstanding questions in these two fields of collecting.

Another point was an exchange between the specialist magazine "Der Sammler-Dienst" (which is very popular in Japan) on the one hand, and the Institute monthly "The Kitte Kenkgo" on the other.

This co-operation will enable the Japan specialists in the Bund Deutsche Philatelisten working party to answer questions relating to the philately of Japan precisely and accurately. This is of great importance in Japanese philately, since the Japanese script can be transliterated in various versions, so that the data on given topics is often erroneous.

The essential contribution made by "Der Sammler-Dienst" to this co-operation should not go unrecognised, and our most heartfelt thanks are expressed to the Editor-in Chief, Herr C. A.

Duda, herewith.

Karl Rist/Ulm/Donau
(Chairman of AG X/2-Japan, BHPH)

p.85

16.

THE NATURE AND IMPORTANCE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE – A HISTORICAL EVALUATION

Report by Ing. E. Becker, Hamburg, 11.10.1957

Every Culturally aware person knows that today it is no longer possible to be active in a branch of knowledge without keeping abreast of the relevant specialist literature.

We can obtain some interesting details on philatelic literature from Theodor Hass's "Lehrbuch der Briefmarkenkunde" of 1905:

a) The "Album Literature" begins with 1861 in France and 1862 in Germany (Leipzig), where G. Wuttig provided a "loose-leaf system" in a cardboard box for collectors. After a series of other albums and permanent albums had appeared, Carl Cl. Sauer attempted to meet the needs of the "special collectors" of his day by producing in 1889 an album which provided forms and catalogue columns for every country. Each section contained a group of associated states or a number of individual countries.

As early as 1886, a study of Greece for specialists only was published by A. E. "Erdmann", and this included an album devoted to Greece. This was later improved and greatly extended by its real author, A. E. Glasewald. He was also the compiler of an album of the German private postage stamps (1887), and another for Nordic private stamps in the year 1888, along with Dr. Vedel.

b) If we now turn from the album literature to the large group of "Periodical Literature", we find the first specialist periodical in England in the form of the Monthly Advertiser of 15.12.1862. This was followed on 1.5.1863 in Leipzig by "Das Magazin für Briefmarkensammler". On 1.1.1864 appeared the "Borsenblatt für den Briefmarken-handel" which was continued later as "Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung". From January 1866 to 1877 G. Bauschte of Leipzig gave us the "Briefmarkensammler", and the first "D.B.Z." followed on 15.10.1870 from G. Schaubek and A. Zschiesche, Dresden. A. Moschkau's "Magazin" appeared from 15.7.1871-6.1872. Finally there is the well-known "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal", by H. Werninck & Co. (Richard Senf) – Leipzig. This appeared on 1.1.1874, was taken over by Louis Senf on 1.7.1874, and appeared as from the "Brothers Senf" from 1.5.1881. In Vienna we find the "Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" by Sigmund Friedl from 15.1.1876. In Berlin was the "Berliner Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung". Then followed "Schweizer Briefmarken-Beitung", from Bern in 1879, "Der Philatelist-Dresden", editor H. Schwaneberger, from 1880 "Die Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung" from E. Heitmann, Leipzig. The editors of this were H. Schwaneberger and Alfred Moschkau, with Dr. Kalckhoff brought in as editor-in-chief in 1892. It existed from 1.1.1888-1900(end).

Finally, we must mention amongst the German journals "Die Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung", from Dr. H. Brendicke, Berlin, with Hugo Krötzsch as editor and publisher from 8.10.1896.

We will not go into any more details, but will give an extract from the “Chronology of the oldest magazines of all countries” by Theodore Haas, from a pamphlet by Viktor Suppantshitsch:

(see original for list)

We can thus see the state of affairs 60 years ago.

Theodor Haas has listed the rest of the specialist literature under the following headings:

- a) In German
 - 1. General handbooks 1863-1901
 - 2. Special works on individual countries and types of collecting 1875-1904
 - 3. Other philatelic works 1866-1899
 - b) In English:
 - 1. General handbooks 1866-1902
 - 2. Special works (see above) 1881-1901
 - 3. Other philatelic works 1863-1894
 - c) In French:
 - 1. General handbooks 1863-1904
 - 2. Special works (see above) 1863-1904
 - 3. Other philatelic works 1863-1905
 - a) In other languages:
 - Dutch 1888-1897
 - Scandinavian 1877-1901
- And finally, the Spanish, Portuguese, Italian,
Russian and Croatian works 1873-1902

The historical processes of our literature development can be appreciated so far:

Section (b) would cover the range of practical literature, which can be grouped roughly as follows:-

- b)
 - 1. Periodicals and albums, which we have already dealt with
 - 2. Catalogues and manuals
 - 3. Handbooks and monographs (works on countries)
 - 4. Jubilee volumes from groups and societies
 - 5. Catalogues of important exhibitions
 - 6. Works on printing techniques and the science of forgeries
 - 7. Histories of the post and communications of given regions

Section (c) is places where literature can be obtained

- c)
 - 1. Public libraries with philatelic sections
 - 2. Private libraries and Society libraries and the last type to be considered is
- d) Distinctions in the field of philatelic literature.

Straight forward attempts to list all the postage stamps in the world were begun in catalogues as early as 1861, when Oskar Berger-Levrault, a resident of France, published the first catalogue on 17th September 1861, though “giving only a few dozen examples” as Theodor Haas has told us. Today, however, it is also necessary to spot all forgeries quickly and act against them. Thus, the organisation of philately must always be ready to support an adequate number of connoisseurs and experts. These experts must be ready and willing all the time to put up an energetic defence of the rights of collectors.

However, none of this is possible without a fundamental and extensive knowledge of the relevant specialist literature, of philately in general and printing techniques in particular. Another basis for research is the history of a country’s posts and communications. The general public and administrative libraries and only they could, and can, help here at the outset.

“Knowledge is strength”. Small-scale and large-scale study of the literature is an unavoidable prerequisite for wide-ranging and penetrating scientific research in philately: in other words there must be an accurate and firm foundation of the literature of the subject.

Every library, either public or private, is a nursery for cultural values and cultural activities, and is often also a mirror of the provision of specialist literature. We must also express the wish that such libraries would try to attract a steady and numerous circle of readers, increasing in a convincing manner. The more accessible and multifarious such a library is, the more its circle of readers will grow.

Thus in Hamburg our collections in society and public libraries, particularly the philatelic section of City Library should attract numerous collectors of all grades and ages.

Centres for philatelic literature in West Germany are:

The “Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literature e.V.”, Duisberg/Thein, founded in 1946, whose statutes require it to use its best efforts in promoting philately. At the moment its publications cover the Saarland and Württemberg regions from the literary point of view.

However, at the moment the most important and successful library is definitely the “Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library” which extends its exchange services to the people of all countries of the world.

Its address is: Munich Town Hall, Room 365, Marienplatz.

Another source of literature that should be mentioned is in Steinbach near Munich, at the address:

“Literatur-Nachrichten” and “Lived!” – literature supply service for philately, (136) Steinbach am Wörthsee 84.

This is run by the Chairman of the Literature Section of the BDPH, Herr Christoph Otto Müller.

All these organisations serve to promote friendly, happy and above all cultural interactions between all the collectors of the world of philately.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten

Whole number 35/36

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 35/36

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 172x

THE FORGOTTEN STAMP ALBUM

by F. Schnack

It lay at the back of the lowest shelf of the cupboard, under yellowing magazines, exercise books and out-of-date novels – the old stamp album, asleep. However, the dead may rise and return to the light, and so may the forgotten stamp album. During my latest efforts at spring cleaning and getting rid of accumulated junk, it came out of its hiding place, and now it lies there on the table, giving off a musty smell. The brown calico cover is well-thumbed, torn half off, scratched and discoloured, the corners are broken and the trimming tarnished. It suddenly occurs to me that when this was closed and put away as something that had become useless and meaningless, my boyhood was at an end.

Isn't that the real and true stamp collecting: the colourful adventure of the search for countries, attractive pictures and exotica. Although the stamps of the European countries came within my scope, my real loves were the rare, unusual – often not all that unusual – stamps from overseas countries and the colonies. I never bothered about market values: the Senf catalogue, which quoted the cash values of the stamps, meant nothing at all to me. But a giraffe on the series from Nyasaland or a wild swan on the stamps from West Australia – they were important and incomparably beautiful.

And when I reopen my old stamp album, after many years of indifference and neglect towards stamps, a breath of my boyhood's lost enthusiasm comes back to me, fantastic and wonderful. This big picture-book combines wonderful colours and geographical meaning in the little perforated pictures in which countries and their postal undertakings showed themselves off.

I have forgotten from whom I got the old "Bavarias" with their silk threads and thick numerals, the black one, and its green, yellow and blue sister stamps, and whom I have to thank for the old "Baden" and the little blue "Bergedorf" from the Hamburg-Lubeck administrative areas of the year 1862. Who could have given me the Brunswick stamps with the stallion in the postmark? The old "Prussias" and "Saxons" of 1851, and above all the beautiful series of stamps from Thurn und Taxis, with their cancellations that look like the black ring of a kitchen range? Forgotten collections, forgotten chronicle of my boyhood. However these superannuated stamps from the federal states affect me now as they used to then: they show old-fashioned romanticism, with its echoes of post-horn calls and mail-coaches rolling along pretty country lanes: they have lost nothing of their silent magic that no Senf catalogue could express.

As before, I let my eye wander through my garden of stamps – through Egypt where the Sphinx crouches beside the Pyramids, and both gaze fixedly from their backgrounds, water- blue, sand-brown, yellow, orange and carmine red. Leafing on, I greet the Emperor of Ethiopia as an old acquaintance: he still wears his jewel-studded gold crown on his head and he still look negroid and bloated. And passing over many countries as if I owned Doctor Faust's flying cloak, I land in the Middle Kingdom where the horrible dragon coils over the stamps and golden junks plough through golden seas. After a short pause, as I am not too well supplied with Chinese stamps, I find myself on the other side of the ocean in Ecuador, where wonderful express locomotives steam over the brown centavo stamps. I travel on one of them to Guatemala, to the parrots on their comical marble stand and then on to Haiti to the palm-shaded cities in carmine and orange for seven, eight and ten centimes. Two cents in Hawaii gives us little sailing boats in the water with a background of mountains, and steamers travelling to Europe whilst the breeze stirs up the waves. In Honduras palms tower in solitude above a creek, green and ultramarine, and a reddish-brown one shows a man with a moustache like a wealthy baker. In Liberia though there was a wholesale stamp menageries: an elephant stamps across the veldt, a hippopotamus rolls itself out of the water and climbs up onto the land, which is coloured black and blue, an ape amuses itself with a twig and a violet crocodile wriggles through green water. And then it occurs to me, looking at the green and black 50 cent stamp, how passionately I wished in those days to travel on one of these little mail steamers guided on by a five-pointed star to the jungle world of Liberia. My wish to travel has long been buried, curious that its ghost should haunt me.

And then pass by some series from the British possessions, with waterfalls, sailing ships, breadfruit trees and the outrigger canoes of the natives. The negro chiefs of Equatorial Africa parading in their wild resplendent colours still strike me as magnificent: thick-lipped fellows, tattooed and upright as lances. The heat of the Congo lives in his ebony frame. In Martinique a shell-bedecked beauty smiles at me in brown and brown-violet for one cent, all blooming and alluring. Venus of the Isles! She has withstood the years wonderfully well, and lost none of her original charm. Still and ever – a shining splendour, a wonderful world – still and ever the long-legged long-necked giraffe browses on the palm trees of Portuguese Nyasaland in all colours. These were the first giraffes I ever saw. And the dromedaries from seventy-five to three hundred reis are still waiting in the sand to take me on along desert journey. They will still have a long time to wait: and so, as I say goodbye to my Adventureland of stamps they fix me with their arrogant gaze, as if they were vainly trying to understand me.

Literatur-Nachrichten, 35/36, p.198-101

REPORT FROM SECTION B – PHILATELIC LITERATURE ON THE OCCASION OF THE COLOGNE MEETINGS 1958

The 1st of February 1958 sees the end of a fruitful nine-year period during which the central German philatelic library in Munich and the Literature Section were under the same leadership. However my retirement will have no harmful consequences for German philatelists since the tasks associated with the Literature Section – reviews, supply of literature, documentation and publication of “Literatur-Nachrichten”, an important research tool – will be carried on by others than myself. Even as a pensioner I shall be available as a co-worker and adviser to the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library. The appointment of a specialist, Chief Inspector Merkle of Munich, a member of the committee of the Bavarian Philatelic Society will ensure that the city authorities continue to develop the philatelic library with the support of the German Philatelic Society. It will still be possible to borrow books from the German and foreign libraries via the Munich City Library and have enquiries on literature dealt with. Section B will continue to record new publications on the basis of reports in the international specialist press, and will try to ensure that as many as possible are added to the Central Philatelic Library, so that this retains its place as the greatest European specialist philatelic library. Its current stock of about 16,000 volumes and 15,000 duplicates is stored in the Munich Town Hall. A visit to this library is an absolute must for all philatelists visiting Munich. Its annual report for 1957 shows 529 volumes added to stock, 94 of them purchased by the city and the rest received as gifts. The German Philatelic Society is to be thanked for 136 books to a value of 718DM. During the year covered by the report 4,750 volumes were lent to 936 readers - 415 people used the reading room. Items were lent to 50 public libraries via the inter-library loans scheme. Literature was sent to Holland, Greece, Austria, Italy and the Saarland via the international loans service. Information was given by letter in 305 cases and by mouth in 200 cases.

Amongst those asking for information was the Archives Department of the Munich Post Office and the Federal Ministry of Posts in Bonn, who also used their influence with the Munich authorities to ensure that the librarian of the Munich Philatelic Library would again be a specialist, and the German Philatelic Society records its thanks for this as well.

During the year concerned the library sent out 678 letters and 82 parcels. The limited space available in the Town Hall makes it necessary to all off duplicate journals, price catalogues, exhibition catalogues and auction catalogues to make room for new books. Anyone interested, particularly those in charge of society and other libraries, have thus a good opportunity to enlarge their stocks and should make their wishes known to the Munich Philatelic Library as soon possible.

The literature supply service run by Section B (LEVEDI) was successful in 56 cases in supplying members with the literature they needed on favourable terms. “Literatur-Nachrichten” regularly publishes details of literature wanted and on offer.

One essential task for philatelic research is carried out by Section B in its documentary work. This is in the form of a card index with over 35,000 references – provided by correspondents – for the benefit of all special collectors, which can be seen in the Munich Philatelic Library. In the course of the next few months it will become possible to supply a print-out of the references on the old German states of Baden, Saxony, Prussia and Württemberg from these index cards to anyone interested. The other old German states will be dealt with later.

The articles from more than 200 German and foreign technical journals are listed by subject in “Literatur-Nachrichten” (“Philatelic Digest”), which appears yearly in 4 issues or 2 double issues, and can be ordered from Section B.

Literatur-Nachrichten, which also includes reviews of new philatelic publications, appears with the support of the German Philatelic Society and its contributors (Herr Baum/Dusseldorf, Dr. Engelhardt/Berlin, Dr. Gagari/Frankfurt a.M., Dr. Houwink/Zeist in Holland, Kronenberg/Binningen in Switzerland, Leitgeb/Munich, Rist/???, Wehuer/Vasturvik in Sweden, Wolters/Essen).

The last survey of literature in No. 33/34 listed no fewer than 194 new publications, with 66 detailed descriptions.

Unfortunately, the costs in time and money are not reflected in the level of interest shown by many state and local societies in Literatur-Nachrichten. The lack of appreciation of philatelic literature demonstrated by so many societies does not speak well for their philatelic level.

Unfortunately also, the Federation Internationale de Philatelie has decided not to do as it did in earlier decades and pay philatelic literature the attention needed to set up a unified international documentation and bibliography by establishing an international philatelic literature section.

It is pleasant to see the rising interest taken by public libraries in philatelic literature: in the past year both the Hamburg State and University Libraries have decided to start philatelic sections on the Munich model. The libraries of the Berlin Philatelic Society and the Frankfurt Society for Philately owe their vigorous development to the energetic book spotters Otto Raup and Ullrich Hager. The latter was recently distinguished by the award of the Baurat-Luxe medal for services to literature.

Another sign of the increasing value place on philatelic literature were the special display on Technical Press and Literature put on by the Mid-Rhine group at the Cologne meeting in 1958, and the exhibition of literature staged in Buenos Aires in connection with the Exposicion Nacional de Filatelia Tematica "TEMEX '58".

The existence of what is currently the most important private philatelic library is shown by the recent appearance of a 94-page catalogue compiled by the owner, Kronenberg of Binningen (Switzerland).

The most extensive auction in the history of philatelic literature, 2,824 lots, was held in the autumn of 1957 by the Dublin firm of Shanahan's Stamp Auctions Ltd.

Public thanks should be expressed here to all State and local societies, and working groups which have made their publications available to L.N. and the Munich City Library in answer to a suggestion from the Research Section. Thanks are also due to Committee of the German Philatelic Society for financial and moral support to the philatelic literature section.

To prevent any further senseless destruction of philatelic literature, which has suffered heavily during two world wars, we suggest that every lover of philatelic literature makes arrangements in his Will for the disposal of any that he leaves behind. The Literature Section (Steinebach a. Worthsee) will gladly make use of it if the local society is not interested.

In conclusion may I express my warmest thanks to the specialist German philatelic press, particularly Sammler-Dienst, Sammler-Lupe, Berufsphilatelist, Deutschlandsammler, DBZ, Michel-Rundschan, for their valuable support of Section B, Literatur-Nachrichten, and the Munich Philatelic Library.

Chr. Otto Müller

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1959, Whole number 37/38

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1959, Whole number 37/38

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 173x

P.103

SOCIETIES

Ten years of the Society of German Philatelists

Ten years of the Working Party on Literature of

The SGP under the Chairmanship of Ch. Otto Müller

In connection with the celebrations of the centenary of the introduction of the first German postage stamps in Bavaria, including the Jubilee Exhibition in Munich and the associated Society meeting in 1949, the Society of German Philatelists (Bund Deutscher Philatelisten) was able to extend its activities to the entire Federal Public under the chairmanship of Counsel Hermann Deninger /Frankfurt a.M. Previously it had been restricted to the British Zone. The previous chairman, Richard Renner of Hamburg, who succeeded in bringing the collectors of the British Zone together again in one organisation after the collapse of 1945, was made honorary president in recognition of his services.

Of the original officers, the following are still in service: Herr Dr. Nicodemus (Exhibition Secretary), Attorney Simmonds, Hamburg (Protection for collectors), Jan Schümann/Hamburg (Advice) and Ch. Otto Müller/Steinebach-Munich (Literature).

The administration of the Literature Section was for 9 years (1949-1958) under the case of the philatelic section of the Munich City Library, founded by Ch. Otto Müller. The beneficial collaboration between the SGP and the City Library led in January 1951 to the first appearance of the "Literatur-Nachrichten – Philatelic Digest", with its world-wide coverage. This enabled all specialist collectors and researchers to get hold of the literature they needed. The only philatelic special library, the Munich collection had a card index compiled by Ch. Otto Müller with over 35,000 references to which even foreign libraries made reference.

Of the chairmen of local societies in 1949, Herr Bögers Lansen/Wuppertal, Dr. Joerger/Karlsruhe, and Dr. Schlemmer/Cologne are still in office. Another useful post is today occupied by the then head of the Press and Publicity Section, the French specialist Wilh. Hofinger/Munich.

President Deninger, like Chairman Ch. Otto Müller, celebrates his 65th birthday this autumn and may the uniting organisation for German collectors, the SGP, wish them many more years of activity for the good of German philatelists.

The lively activities of the SGP sections were reported on the last circular by the leader of Section A – Science – Herr Th. Möbs/Frankfurt a.M., who is always ready to supply information.

The Austria Philatelic Society of New York (write to Mr. Frank Kohn, 350 Central Park West, New York City, New York/USA) is celebrating its tenth anniversary today.

A new journal from the Weltbundes St. Gabriel (International Union of St. Gabriel) has started to appear in Belgium. It is called "Bulletin St. Gabriel", address – Abbé J. Volkaerts, 89 rue de la Marne, Brussels 14.

Their own society newsletters are put out by the Bavarian Collectors' Societies in Deggendorf, Kaufbeuren, Kulmbach and Nuremberg (BCS 1891).

The Neuköllner Philat-Klub ev 1931 (New Cologne Philatelic Club) (address: Kurt Scheidemann, 29 Rohrbachst, Berlin-Lichtenrade) has honoured its Hon. President, Ernest Reorg Brugmann with a festschrift for his 65th birthday.

A review of literature and periodicals is currently published by the BSV – 1891 Nuremberg Custodian of the literature is Herr Röhl.

The Munich City Recorder had a piece on 19th June 1959 on the activities of the newest local section of the League of German Motif Collectors (Deutsche Motivsammler-Gild), section of FIPCO, chaired by Ernst Herd.

The FIPCO Central office for Motif Stamp Exchange is located in Sawbrucken at 23a Spickenerbegstrasse.

A very useful survey of the membership by profession and age is given by "Hallensia", the collectors' society of Halle a.Saale. The 702 members include 18 scientists, 2 authors and founalists, 3 artists, 7 architects, 10 musicians, 6 theologians, 3 lawyers, 3 actors and singers, 215 employees, 83 mechanics and sales people, 81 workmen, 39 doctors, 46 teachers, 50 engineers and technicians, 26 housewives, 4 chemists, etc.

Circulars 170/1 and 174 from the Deutsche Altbrief-Sammler-Verein" (Society of German old letter Collectors) contain valuable supplements in the form of papers by7 W.

Münsberg/Nuremberg on: "Saxony: postal services and postmarks of the pre-stamp era" and "Thurn und Taxis in Wüttemberg and Holenzollern".

The Society meeting in Lubeck takes place from 3-6th September 1959. The two Lubeck societies who are organising the meeting have combined to form a working group. As well as excursions to the attractive surrounding countryside, a recruitment exhibition is planned. The societies will also public a festschrift, which will include a valuable paper on Lubeck postal receipts. Two special cancellations will be available. One will show the old and sacred Holy Ghost Hospital, and the other the Mercury on the bridge made famous by the poet Seibel in his "Adamstrecht".

It is also planned to have special envelopes and postcards relating to the meeting. Further details will be available from the societies nearer the time.

"The history of German philately has seen many persistent series: Germania or presidents, Hindenberg or worker/peasant, or figures/post-horns, but none of them has had so many issues or effects as the Buildings" writes Arthur Adlo in the latest newsletter of his section. Anyone interested can reach him at 16 Grebendorf/Eschurege.

"Official Post of the Soviet Zone" – a special section has been created to study the official post in the Soviet zone. Dates given in the catalogues are to some extent contradictory, so it is hoped that systematic comparison of the material will reveal the earliest dates of use of the official stamps in print.

The same holds good for the stamps from the Central Courier Service with 10 and 20 pfennig imprints and the watermark "DDR unt Kreuzblüten" (DDR with crucifix). The Section will also deal with the special feature of the East Berlin control numbers from 1600 to 1609 (or 1610?) and will take up the new yellow control stamp. Anyone interested should get in touch direct with the section chairman, K. Heimann, 1 Cuntzeweg, Kassel-K. "Berlin" Section "Infla-Berlin", the Society of Germany Collectors (Verein der Deutschland-Sammler) invites anyone interested in collecting on "Berlin" to help to found a new section.

The following interest groups are projected: Berlin cancellations (prephilately to the present), stamps and entires from the Berlin post 1945, crisis provisionals and post war, 1948/49, stamps and entires of the Berlin Senate post, as well as railway, airmail, pneumatic, private and express posts from Berlin. Georg Sprenger has accepted the chair of the new section.

The Society News-Sheets of the "Leising" BSV, and the "Local Government Stamp Collectors' Society of Vienna" are carefully duplicated and contain many notices of interest to their members.

FIPCO and 10K FIPCO is the "Federation Internationale de Philatelie Constructive" and 10K is the International Olympic Committee. FIPCO will support the 10K in its efforts to get the Olympic emblems represented correctly on new issue, and will shortly appoint an official liaison man to help with this.

The Swiss Union of Special Collectors (President: Hermann Ritter) and the Swiss Society of Old Letter Collectors (President: Dr. H. Sprecher) held their General Meetings on the same day in Zurich and will do so again next year at La Choux-de-Fonds. The two also put out a joint News-Sheet in which Alfred Müller recently began to publish the results of his work on cancellations from the Zurich outer municipalities at the time the city was unified. The Zurich meeting closed with an interesting contribution from Kaspar Spälti (Basle) on the postal history of the Glarn region from 1520 to 1850.

21.3.59

Beermats and sugar packets. Anything can be a temptation to collect. The passion for collecting does not appear only in the realms of art, literature, stamps or coins. The Allgemeine Sammler-Bund für Verkehr und andere Gebiete" (General Collectors League for Correspondence and other Purposes) (Hindlerallee 7, NW 87) provides for the following, for example: collectors of old tickets, old picture postcards, beermats, tankards and jugs, sealing, revenue or charity stamps. "Philumenists" for example collect matchbox labels from all principal countries. Others have taken to fiscal stamps, i.e. police, weight or tax stamps. Not a few collectors are interested in wrapped sugar, the wrapping of which are the object of a lively traffic in exchanges. And who has not at least once as a child collected the series of coloured pictures issued by cigarette and chocolate firms. However, the "hobby of kings" and the "king of hobbies" continues to be stamp collecting.

International stamp exchange. Well above 12,000 young people have joined the Ring Deutscher Philatelisten Jugend (Circle of German Philatelic Youth). The extent of interest in stamps is demonstrated by a special notice inserted by the Circle in a leading German youth magazine. Our recruiting drive brought in 607 young people. Stamp collecting same after sport, music, photographs and good books in popularity, and more than 2/3rds of young people professed an interest in this lovely branch of collecting.

To give an idea of the scope of our overseas service, let us quote the following example. The Straits Times in Singapore-Malaya published a short article, and brought in 164 members. Other preparations are in hand, and more and more countries are joining in to help this good cause.

And, to please the readers of "Literatur-Nachrichten" especially, the Overseas Service will gladly supply an overseas address on receipt of return postage. Write to G. Jahreis, 28 Hohenringweg, Sillenbuch, Stuttgart. Let us all pull together. The Overseas Service is always glad to have favourable suggestions.

The illegible?? Berlin Philatelic Society has chosen the dentist Hans-Jürgen Georges, of Berlin-Nenkölle as its first Chairman in place of the deceased Werner Alonzo. The first secretary is now Kurt Dalmann, 9 Konstanzer Str., Berlin-Wilmersdorf. The offices of the ?????? Society are also at that address.

Amongst the stamps of the former German colonies, the 1 rupee with watermark from German East Africa is especially in demand. As the West German Group for Collectors of German Colonial Stamps (Westdeutsche Arbeitsgemeinschaft für Sammler deutscher Kolonial-Postwertzeichen) reported in Vol. 19 of the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten (League of German Philatelists), the 13th and 14th issues? Of a used 1 rupee stamp can be found with watermarks. The last example found was on a parcel form. The reverse of this showed an acceptance cancellation reading Tabera II – 8.7.16. The 1 rupee red of 1916 with lozenge-shaped watermark and in mint condition was quoted in the last Michel catalogue 10DM, but with cancellation at 6,000DM.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 39/40

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 39/40

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 174x

A POSTAGE STAMP REVISITED

That's how it was when we lads just noticed the appearance of a postage stamp: when we first began "collecting". And that was in the eighties when ladies still had figures, wore ribbons, ostrich feathers and halves of seagulls in their hats, and kept peacock feathers in vases over the canopy in the corner. And as that entire period was not so bad, just so, it appears to me, the postage stamps of that period were actually very nice-looking. (Which doesn't mean I am criticising those of the present day).

Yesterday I went to the Post Office in Fürstenstrasse and bought 20 postcards at 8 apiece. But the stamps were ready stuck on, and the solid, noble and really handsome profile of Postmaster-General Stephan gazed out over the card from one side. A profile from the days of Emperor Frederick, and with a certain classic Nordic-Jupiter or German-Apollo line to nose, brow and hair-do: middle-class stylish, distinctly masculine. This type of man sang bass or baritone rather than tenor, and took his arias from "Der Wuffenschmied". Was this not the case? Isn't this how our father looked? Wasn't this their style?

The laurel under the bust of Postmaster-General Stephan could indeed have been done better and an artist in typography could have justified objections to the whole think: might even put in an artistic protest. However, Father Stephan definitely earned his laurels, and it would be a bit of a joke for us to criticise this postcard in spite of the sentimental pleasure we get from it. If only all the ministers in our own century had such open faces as Father Stephan show on this postcard.

And is there nothing else to say about the stamp in the corner? With its bands of ornament, its curves and angles, the little post-horn and the surrounding inscription “Deutsche Reichspost” it strikes me as really pretty. As does the number only, the number would be better as 5 instead of 8. This magazine published an article a few months ago with the title “The Ten-Pfennig Stamp”. It expressed the wish for letter stamps to cost 10 pfennigs again in place of 15, and cards to cost 5 as they used to, instead of 8. And this article was right, since this symbol covers no less than everything. It’s a pity, and more than a pity, that the revived postcard stamps, almost like protective spirits, show an 8 on their shield instead of a 5.

I refer to the new generation of stamp albums: there is the 5, and there is – a 3. But at least as far as I can see, no 8. The 8 is a mistake.

And as we said, we may disapprove of the cards: the entire could be better. But there is still the sympathetic face of the Postmaster-General, and that nice little stamp in the top corner! Perhaps that could also be criticised: I don’t know. After all, it was a boyhood passion and relates to a happy ten years – my first! Life was no longer so carefree in the later days of the Germania stamps. Dear Post Office, couldn’t the little pink 10pf stamp with the figure and the white coat-of-arms also be given? It would be so lovely.

Wilhelm Hansenstein

(German Ambassador to Paris, winner of the Prize for Literature from the City of Munich, 1957)

*(Note: The above is obviously meant as a light, even comic piece:
I may not quite have got the point of the jokes but it is literal or as near as I can make it.)*

p.5

President of the Appeal Court, Carl Lindenberg, died 1928, wrote in 1921: “Philately, which has been a beloved companion to me for the whole of my life, must accept my thanks for countless hours of enjoyment: it has made happy times still pleasanter and been my only support in sad ones. From my early boyhood to my old age I have found its loyalty, and expect to go on doing so till my grave”.

The French and Austrian postal undertakings have begun to promote philately in schools, by sending all their new stamp issues to all their schools. This enables a stamp collection to be built up in every school (BBB 9/59).

The German Federal Post is trying out fluorescent paper (BPL 59-1: 32).

100 million higher-value stamps from the “Third Reich” are still in the custody of the Austrian Government in Vienna (BPH 59-5).

A talk on letters from the Middle Ages was given to the Society of Friends of the Bavarian Academy of Sciences by its President, Prof. Fr. Baethgen (52 8.2.59). DIA-Series can be borrowed from the Society Youth Section (Danesch, Schwelm, post-free) and the Hallensia Society of Halle, Saale.

After the aluminium stamps of Hungary (1955), the Polish Post Office has come up with a new philatelic attraction: stamps printed on silk. A limited edition of a special jubilee block celebrating “400 years of postal service” has been issued with a nominal value of 50 zloty. The same picture is used as for the special 2.50 zloty stamp, but with a change of colour to dark blue, and the block is unperforated. The stamps are printed on “Milanowek silk” using steel plates. The wide border of the block carries a jubilee inscription, and the whole thing is surrounded by a fancy border.

(Tat 7.3.59)

p.6

REPORT OF SECTION B – PHILATELIC LITERATURE – ON THE 13TH MEETING OF THE B.D.PH ON 5.9.1959 IN LUBECK

The tasks of Section B, such as reporting on and obtaining literature, documentation and the production of “Literatur-Nachrichten” for philatelic research purposes have again been carried out to the profit and satisfaction of collectors over the year just gone.

In particular, documentation has been carried on even after the break in the personal connection between Section B and the administration of the Munich Philatelic Library, and the card index of the Library, which already contained 35,000 source entries is being extended as it is considered necessary to keep going in the interests of philatelic research and easier use of the philatelic literature.

Wider publicity has been given to the subject evaluation of articles in over 200 home and foreign specialist journals by the appearance of “Literatur-Nachrichten – Philatelic Digest”. This has appeared in 38 parts over nine years, and two double issues are sent every year to 400 subscribers at home and abroad.

Our thanks are expressed here for the extensive support given to Literatur-Nachrichten by the chairman of the Society of German Philatelists who makes up for the lack of understanding of literature in philatelic circles: we also thank the people who have worked on the index (Baum/Dusseldorf, Dr. Engelhardt/Berlin, Dr. Gagarin/Frankfurt, Dr. Honwink/Zeis, Holland, Kronenberg/Binningen, Switzerland, Philippsen/Hiltrup, Rist/??, Wehuer/Västervik. Sweden), also the German and foreign press for making exchange copies available for inclusion in the Munich Philatelic Library.

Further bibliographic work carried out by our members has taken the form of an index to the literature on the old German states of Baden, Bavaria, Prussia, Saxony and Württemberg, printed as an aid to study.

The steadily increasing production of philatelic literature (monographs, catalogues, yearbooks, etc) in the Anglo-Saxon regions is clearly reflected in the review section of Literatur-Nachrichten, in number 35-38 of which the magnificent number of 587 new publications were listed and in part reviewed. To make them easier to use, the later issues of Literatur-Nachrichten have included a subject and theme key, from which it is clear that Germany, France, Great Britain, Switzerland, United States and Europe as areas of collection receive most treatment in research work.

The importance of Literatur-Nachrichten for philatelic bibliography was recognised in the year covered by this report by the award of diplomas at the Gold and Silver level by the juries of INTERPOSTA/Hamburg, TEMEX/Buenos Aires, and the national Postage Stamp Exhibition at Brunn.

In the interests of more national advances in philatelic bibliography and documentation it is necessary for the Federation Internationale de Philatalie (FIP) to make up its mind to take advantage of the experience of present-day literature specialists, and resume the work it used to carry out by reviving the absolutely necessary literature section. One indispensable task will be to nationalise the work of indexing. It is currently carried out on the same lines in a number of places, principally by Literatur-Nachrichten, the Stamp Lover, The American Philatelist and the Philatelic Literature Review, and should be divided up so that for every language region there is a chief editor with his co-workers and specialists to evaluate the Germanic, Romania, Slavic and exotic journals thematically from the same standpoint. Only in this way can a comprehensive international bibliography be produced for research.

Happily, more and more public libraries are expressing an interest in philatelic literature by starting philatelic sections on the lines of the Munich example: Hamburg, Hamm(Westphalia), cologne, Nuremberg, Johannesburg (South Africa) amongst them. Since the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library is overloaded, the philatelists in big cities at least should take steps to build up their own specialist library, containing at least the standard works on philatelic literature. This should be all the easier at the present moment as the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library is ready to give away its surplus stock because of shortage of space.

Collector's societies are advised to remind their members about disposing of their philatelic literature by Will when they die. This is the only way to avoid the further senseless destruction of philatelic literature, so much of which has already been lost in two world wars. The Literature Section – 1, Finkenurg, Steinebach a m Worthsee – will gladly give advice and valuations.

The provision of philatelic literature can be made easier by turning to the Literature Supply Service of Section B. In the report year, they were able to supply 62 people with the literature they wanted.

The loan of philatelic literature from the Munich City Library will be facilitated if local associations and large societies that have large collections of literature will let their libraries be joined into the German inter-library loans network via the Munich City Library.

In the year just gone, the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, which all philatelists visiting Munich are urged to visit, had 3,000DM available for the purchase of important philatelic works.

Section B was active as an information and advice centre in 257 cases, as the Post Journal shows.

In conclusion, I do not wish to miss this opportunity of thanking the Committee, the German specialist press, the Chairman of Section A and the Working Parties in the BDPh for their valuable support of section B and Literatur-Nachrichten.

Chr. Otto Müller

The address for ordering stamps in Great Britain is: Postal Service Department, E. C. Section Divisional Controller, St. Martins le Grand, London EC1, England.

For Ireland: Ceanuasai (Philatelic Section) P.Ch.B, Dublin, or also Department of Post and Telegraphs, Philatelic Section General Post Office, Dublin.

For Belgium: Administration Centrol des Postes, Service des Collectionneurs, 45 Boulevard Bischoffheim, Brussels.

His eminence Cardinal Friags of Cologne write in his dept pastoral letter of 1957 “People, and especially young people, should be led towards lofty and genuine enjoyments, to the enjoyment of valid sporting activities such as stamp collecting”.

Stamp collecting can relax and yet stimulate, inspire and delight.

A stamp advisory commission has now been set up by the French postal administration also. The president is the direct of the Ministerial Cabinet

Tat 18.8.59

The Du Pont Laboratories have developed which may be used to detect watermarks on stamps. Unlike benzene and carbon-tetrachloride, most widely used products for this work, Freor is non-flammable, non-toxic and virtually odourless.

Did you know that many doctors in American recommend stamp collecting as a prophylactic against managerial stress and heart attacks?

W2 28.12.59

The Swedish school authorities set four essay topics for testing the ability to write in German in the school-leaving exam. One of them was the subject “My Stamp Collection”.

Bal MP 31.5.59

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten

Whole number 41/44

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 41/44

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 175x

From "Lituratur-Nachrichten, 41-44

THE FIRST GERMAN POSTAGE STAMP NOVEL

What "Fliegende Blatter" wrote about stamp collecting 75 years ago

In a large capital city in 1863 lived the rich man Drehfelder who, in addition to an art gallery, a collection of antiques and a cabinet of coins, also owned a stamp collection. There was an infinite charm for Drehfelder in these insignificant-looking little bits of coloured paper that had been licked by foreign tongues on one side and messed by foreign fingers on the other, and were collected into a thick book in order by countries and parts of the world. The pages of Drehfelder's album were covered in the stamps of all countries, only the last page was empty, since Drehfelder had as yet no Chinese stamps. The reward for satisfying his last stamp wish was to be his only daughter Adelgunde: he had vowed to give the hand of his lovely daughter Adelgunde to the person who brought him his first Chinese stamps.

To win Adelgunde, her admirer Baron von Walfzahn, set off to the Far East. However he could find no traces of Chinese stamps anywhere in China. He was brought in chains before the Chinese emperor, who had him put in chains so that the local people could gaze at him on astonishment as a madman. Not until the death of the Emperor in 1894 did the Baron regain his freedom. Since the earliest stamps had appeared in the interval, he could now set off proudly homewards with his booty.

How surprised he was, though, to get back to his native city and find all the houses covered from top to bottom with postage stamps instead of the previous paint; his future father-in-law had meantime filled no fewer than 25,000 volumes with postage stamps but still had none from China, so he was able to triumphantly to hand over the longed-for treasure as the price of his beloved Adelgunde. How appalled he was, however, to recognise his beloved Adelgunde in an old lady!

“Hear my resolve” said the Baron to the rich man, “my love for Adelgunde, but only the young Adelgunde, first drove me to China. I wanted to gain the hand of my beloved by means of Chinese stamps. I have now gained this treasure but things are now different. I will only give you these stamps if you will release me from my sacred vow.” Next morning the Baron received the report of a double death. The rich man had died from joy at gaining his long-desired treasure, Adelgunde had died of a broken heart. August von Walfzahn, however, whose return from China with the first Chinese postage stamps had made him a legend throughout Europe, was made a full professor at the University of N, where a chair in higher philately had been established some years before. Walfzahn died on the 9th May of the year 1914 at the age of 79, as Privy Councillor for Stamp Collecting.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1961, Whole number 45/46

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1961, Whole number 45/46

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 176x

WHAT DOES THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS DO?

For a long time the Society has produced a news-sheet which has kept collectors informed of what it could accomplish provided it had the unreserved support of every individual collector. "What does the Society do?" is the question that always arises when the problem of philatelic organisation is raised, whether in reference to the Society itself, its local sections, or the Federation Internationale de Philatelie (FIP).

Far too few of its members take part in running the Society, far too little attention is paid to the existence of the Working Parties for individual fields of collection – these are supervised by Section A, Research. Too much stress cannot be laid on the usefulness of membership of these Working Parties, which costs nothing and is open to all Society members.

Most of these Working Parties put out news-sheets to regular intervals, at a charge just enough to cover the cost of production. A list of the existing Working Parties was given in Society Record No. 48 of July 1960, and the chairmen of the Working Parties, whose addresses are given there, will always be happy to accept new applications for membership.

It is easy to find out how little attention is currently paid to the Society's Literature Section. Its important organ, "Literature Reports" (Literatur-Nachrichten), is far too little read. And what a mine of information it is! Without a knowledge of the literature of special topics, our understanding of philately can only be scrappy. "Literature Reports" has published research articles which have been reprinted in an extremely wide variety of collectors' magazines at home and abroad. A glance through these magazines always reveals that most of the authors are members of the Society of German Philatelists, who make their skill and knowledge available freely to all collectors, not only those who belong to the Society. It is a great source of pride to the Society that this fact is known to and acknowledged by the editorship of many journals.

Individual local societies and groups of societies have been keen seekers after publicity in recent years. We may mention here the Exhibition of Stamp Collecting Societies in Munster (Westphalia) over the period March 22-26, 1961, held in connection with the 25th anniversary of this Society. The annual general meeting of the North Thine-Westphalia Society took place during the same period. A week later, Bremerhaven Stamp Collectors' Society held the NORDSEEPOSTA Exhibition from 31.3 to 3.4 1961 to mark its 75th anniversary, and the Weser-Ems Society had its AGM at the same time. Both these events showed only too clearly how important it is to belong to a higher organisation, so that friends new and far could come and join in. The conversations between individual collectors were stimulating and productive of a good deal of encouragement. There were probably also many more visits between the members of local societies as a result. There are, of course, Society meetings every year, which members can attend, but there is often so much formal business that there is too little time for personal contacts. The Society tries to send members to the regional meetings but, unfortunately, there have to be limits, since distances are often too great to justify the financial outlay.

The year 1961 will see more big days for the members of the Society of German Philatelists, and for philately generally. Other meetings are in prospect. The KOBRIA Exhibition will be held in Coblenz on 10.9.61 in connection with the AGM of the Mid-Rhine Society. However the high point for German philately will be the 15th Society Meeting and 62nd Philatelical Day in Nuremberg, which will be held over the period 31st August to 5th September 1961, along with an exhibition "The Letter Across Five Centuries".

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 47/48

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 47/48

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 177x

WHAT DOES THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELIST DO?

For a long time the Society has published a magazine aimed at telling collectors what the Society was aiming to do, so long as it could rely on the unreserved support of each individual collector. "What does the Society do?" that is the question which is always cropping up when the problems of philatelic organisation are discussed, whether of the Society itself, its local sections, or of the International Federation of Philately (FIP).

The members of the Society take far too little part in running it: far too little notice is taken of the existence of the working parties for the individual areas of collecting dealt with by the Society's Section A – Research. There is not enough fruitful co-operation in the activities of these working parties, which are free and open to all Society members.

The greater part of these working parties put out their own communications at regular intervals, which are priced at just enough to cover their costs. The existing working parties were listed in Society Reports (Bundesnachrichten) No. 48 of July 1960, and the leader of these working parties, whose addresses were given, would always be glad to welcome new members.

It can readily be shown how little attention is paid even today to the Literature Section. Its important, organ, Literatur-Nachrichten, is far too little read. And what a fount of inspiration it is! Philately without a knowledge of the literature on individual topics will always remain just a piecemeal affair for the collector. Literatur-Nachrichten prints details of articles published in a very wide range of collectors' periodicals at home and abroad. However, a glance through these periodicals will always show that most their authors are members of the Society of German Philatelists which gladly makes their knowledge and experience available to all collectors, even those who do not yet belong to it. That this fact is recognised and appreciated by the editorial boards of many journals is a matter of great pride to the society.

In recent years the local and special sections have been very active as regards publicity. One may recall the stamp society's exhibition in Munster (Westphalia) over the period from 22 – 26th March 1961, held in conjunction with the 25th anniversary of this Society. The North Rhine-Westphalia section held its own meeting at the same time. A week later, the Bremerhaven Stamp Collector's Society held the NORDSEEPOSTA Stamp Exhibition from 31.3. to 3.4.1961, in connection with its 75th anniversary, and the Weser-Ems Section held its meeting at the same time. Both these events showed only too clearly how important it is to belong to a wider organisation, since friends from near and far made them their rendezvous. A particularly heart-warming feature was the dialogue between individual collectors, so that every visitor received stimulating ideas in his own field. In this connection it should perhaps be pointed out that members of local societies ought to visit one another much more often. There are of course Society and philatelists meetings every year at which people can get together, but how often are these so taken up with formal reports that there is too little time for personal contacts. The society tries to send representatives to the regional meeting but, unfortunately, has to set certain limits to these as the journeys involved are often too long to justify the financial expenditure.

The year 1961 still has important meetings in store for the members of the Society of German Philatelists and for philately as a whole. The KOBRIA meeting takes place in Coblenz on 10.9.61 in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Mid-Rhine Section. However, the high point for German philately will be the 15th Society and 62nd Philatelic Meeting in Nuremberg from 31 August to 5th September 1961, along with the exhibition "The Letter in the Course of Five Centuries".

W. Munzberg

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1962, Whole number 49/50

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1962, Whole number 49/50

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 178x

3. Preface to the 50th Jubilee Number of Literature Reports

The "Archive for Philatelic Literature", edited by Alfred Ihm in Wunsiedel, ceased publication in its third year with the appearance of No. 5 in May 1960. It was then necessary for the work begun by the Archive to be carried on by the foundation of "Literature-Nachrichten-Philatelic Digest", which was started by the founder and then head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, who had collaborated with Dr. F. Kalckhoff, H. Poselt and Alfred Ihm in indexing the contents of domestic and foreign specialist journals for the Archive, and who brought about the transfer of the Literature Section of the BDPh during its Munich meeting in 1949. The first number appeared in January 1951, as a modest issue of 20 pages in DIN A5 format. The latest issue has reached twelve times the circulation of the first. Particular interest is shown abroad, which represents more than 50% of the readership of LN. Moreover, it has received the highest distinctions at 26 international and national stamp exhibitions, with its extracts from more than 200 domestic and foreign technical journals.

The forerunner of the LN and the Archive was Dr. Rommel's supplement to "Die Post" entitled "Die Philatelische Literature", the first number of which appeared on 15th January 1895. For 17 years there was "Der Philatelische Bucherwurm-Zeitschrift für Philatelische Literatursammler" (The philatelic bookworm magazine for philatelic literature and collectors) started in 1921 by Carl Beck, Berlin, and Alexander Bungerz; the later editor and publisher were Boschard and Seifert.

The organ of the “Gesellschaft philatelischer Literaturfreunde” was “Die philatelistische Literatur-Zeitschrift für die Gesamtinteressen der philatelistischen Literaure” (insert to faint to be read), published in Hamburg with C. Schmitt diel of Hamburg as editor. Under the “Der philatelische Literatursammler” (The philatelic literature collector). This publication, founded in 1932, was a supplement to “Güene Sammlerwelt” (German Collector ????) (Verlag Klink-Niebuß).

After 1945 the “Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur e V” (Society for Philatelic Literature Ltd) began life in Duisberg, and published the magazine “Die Lupe” (The Magnifying Glass), (later continued by Dr. Ploenes as “Die Sammler-Lupe” (the Collectors Magnifying Glass), plus literature surveys on the old German areas of collection Baden, Bavaria, Prussia, Saxony and Württemberg.

Valuable work in the documentation of philately is also carried out in England and the USA. “The Stamp Lover” and “The American Philatelist” publish a quarterly “Index to Current Philatelic Literature”. In 1962, James Negus was succeeded as indexer to “The Stamp Lover” by L. E. Britnor, whilst James M. Chemi, the producer of the American index, was helped by Fred Wolfe (German press), Ernest Heilbronner (French press), Mrs. Emma F. O’Brien (Italian press), Jiny Norballe (Scandinavian press), Mrs. Placida G. Smith (Spanish and Portuguese press), Frank J. Kovarik (Czechoslovak press) and Emanuel Hatzakos (Greek press). The special interests of the literature collector are served by the “Philatelic Literature Review”, the organ of the Philatelic Literature Association, 9 Thomas Street, Clifton, NJ, USA.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1962, Whole number 51/52

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1962, Whole number 51/52

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Trans 179x

THE WORK OF A YEAR IN PHILATELY:
THE SOCIETY OF GERMAN PHILATELISTS MET IN MAINZ

by P. Seguy

The meeting of the Society of German Philatelists leads more and more to the production of an annual report on outstanding efforts, the like of which it would be hard to find abroad. Three years of development work has led to the development of a management team whose range, capacity for hard work and competence has given an extraordinary impetus to German philately.

The annual report of the President and the reports of the section leaders are becoming more and more important at this yearly convention.

The session was opened by the President of the Society, Herr Konsul Deninger, with an organisational survey of the efforts made by himself and his closest collaborators over the previous years to promote bonds between organisations and societies and their own Society.

In the field of International co-operation, wide recognition was obtained by the joint France-German FRALEX exhibition in Paris, which is to be followed by a FRALEX in Bonn this Autumn. At Mainz(?) German collectors showed French stamps, and French collectors showed German stamps, and the exhibition, in which highly-placed representatives of both Ministries and postal museums took part, was the leading philatelic event of the season.

The value of German co-operation in the F.I.P. was confirmed by the three Presidents of the important commissions in the F.I.P. in which the Society participates. Herr Hefinger does not head only the Society section for combatting forgeries and testing, but also the International Test Facility and the International Section for Combatting Forgeries of the F.I.P. Herr Danesch is not only the Chairman of the Ring of German Philatelic Youth but also President of the Youth Commission of the F.I.P., and finally the author of these lines, heads not only the Publication Section of the Society of German Philatelists, but is in addition President of the F.I.P. Commission for Press and Information. President Deninger is a member of the "Council of the F.I.P., which can be looked as an extended managing committee.

The "F.I.P. Day" celebrates for the first time in Prague and to be a permanent feature of all F.I.P. Congresses (the next one in Istanbul), was suggested by the Press and Information Commission of the F.I.P.

Not satisfactory is our co-operation with the Federal Post, in the form of frequent contacts with the leading sections and increased participation in article advice. It can be said that the Federal Post meets the wishes of philatelists half-way wherever feasible. However it does not meet the wish of the Society for a special stamp for philately, the profits of which would be devoted to cultural activities, literature and youth work.

The efforts of the Society towards a stamp protection law also again found a place in this report.

An important concern of the Society is also protection of the collector from forgeries, speculative issues and similar harmful activities. A very important role is played by Bundes-Nachrichten which appears on dates to be determined. Considerable editorial effort is still needed for the correct assessment of "Bundes-Nachrichten", which at all hazards must be improved.

The President's annual report was received with applause and then Herr Belct reported on the Society's research section, which he leads and which includes over 80 working parties within the Society. A series of new working parties were set up during the past year and then publications of the existing Working Parties will be given in later volumes.

Herr Chr. O. Müller, head of the Literature Section, reported on the work of this section. It provided 276 bibliographical answers, procured out-of-print philatelic literature in 32 cases, and sent out photocopies of philatelic texts all over the world. He gave a detailed account of the founding in Prague of the Internationaler Versandes Philatelistischer Journalisten to which he, along with Herr Billig/USA, Bednov/Czech Republic and Shalit/Israel transferred the "Literature" commission work. Unfortunately Herr Müller has had to give up the editorship of "Literatur-Nachrichten", and it is a matter of the utmost urgency to find a successor for this internationally known and important work.

A successor must also be found for Herr Dr. Nicodemus, who after 13 years of dedicated work as head of the society Exhibitions Section has had to retire on the grounds of age and health. Dr. Nicodemus, who has represented Germany on the juries of many exhibitions held abroad, was the first to get in touch with foreign judges after the War. In recognition of his outstanding services to exhibition techniques, which he reorganised in Germany, and to the society of German Philatelists, he was unanimously elected as an honorary member by the assembly.

Herr Hofinger again painted a gloomy picture of things in the forgery section as long as auctioneers are not uniformly obliged to make the forgeries they handle known as such, nothing final can be done against cunning bands of forgers. Does it not happen that clearly obvious forgeries, designated as such by three or four testers, are sent to yet a fifth and a sixth tester, usually abroad, until the desired seal of approval is obtained? The director of the Auctioneers' Union have sent a letter in this connection to the Society of German Philatelists which "has led to a complaint against the board of the Auctioneers' Union". Still, some auctioneers who recognise their duty to philatelists and the purity of philately have taken on the position of "Society Philatelic Tester". Herr Hofinger named them in alphabetical order: Groke/Hanover, Mohrmann/Hamburg, Müller/Karlstube and Utesnichle/Hildesheim, Bühler/ Berlin has already accepted similar conditions.

Herr Hofinger also stated that no auctioneers would run "the slightest risk" by accepting the positions. The 1956 judgement that on 'alteration' of an item by the buyer is not permissible is in opposition to another judgement in 1960 that a 'false' cancellation on a forgery is accepted as legal. This leads Herr Hofinger to the blunt statement that "forgeries can only finally be removed from commerce when they are recognised as such. Anyone who finds this is helping forgers and their accomplices". It is for collectors themselves to recognise where their interests lie and how their advantage is to be promoted.

The justice system lacks the right handle against forgers. The means available are not enough: they are dilatory and often too late. House searches are carried out in such a way that the delinquent has plenty of time to get rid of his forgers' implements, and dangerous fraudsters are set free with a caution. A great deal needs to change so as long as suitable means of counteracting it are not found by philately.

Lesser rascals are dealt with by Dr. Schonewald, the head of the Legal Advice Section. One of them, Herr Gross, Mayor/Eifel has defrauded various collectors of a total of more 10,000DM. He was sentenced to one year in prison. However, as far as the Section is aware, the penalties are usually much smaller. Foreign collectors have also approached the Section for legal protection, and close co-operation between local societies. The Section and its trustees can produce good results.

The report of the Publications Section related principally to the production of "Bundes-Nachrichten", now appearing regularly as a basis for the urgent information of collectors. The issues should not only give a warning against fraudulent issues, but also information on the work of the international panels which are intensifying the struggle against superfluous and dangerous issues. In this connection the F.I.P Congress in Prague has taken extensive new steps which were reported in Mainz. An agreement between the International Dealers' Union, IFSDA, and the F.I.P was signed. The complete text is given below in full for the first time.

"This Agreement recommends all catalogue publishers not to include or not to price the following in their catalogues"

1. Stamps or blocks supplied on the basis of advance orders and not obtainable from the post offices of the country concerned.
2. Stamps or blocks whose distribution is contingent on issue, delivery and having a market value will above the face value.
3. Unperforated issues of stamps which are normally perforated (also blocks and small sheets).
4. Stamps with extra charges overprinted (more than 50% of the face value per stamp or series).

5. Stamps which belong to the same set and are not sold under the same conditions as the other values.
6. Stamps carrying overprints and perforations of private origin.
7. Reprints of stamps put out by someone other than the postal undertakings concerned, or even official reprints of a type deviating from the original.

This agreement is directed against speculators and agencies in the West as well as State speculation and catchpenny devices in the East. It has been drawn up in conjunction with some of the major catalogue firms, and everything seems in favour of the F.I.P. enterprise. The only thing needed now is for the list of dangerous issues compiled by the F.I.P. to be put into all hands and regularly updated, so that the F.I.P. precautions against these “stamps” can be effective at all exhibitions, from the local recruitments shows to the “Internationals”. The society of Germany Philatelists has already made a start by publishing in Bundes-Nachrichten the first complete list of dangerous issues that have appeared over more than 5 years. The Society of German Philatelists will propose a special publication of the list and its future additions, which will be sent to all organisers of exhibitions. Only in this way will the F.I.P.’s precautions have their maximum effects.

An extraordinarily important contribution to youth work in philately was made by Herr Hurtwig Danesch with the report on the activity of the “Circle of German Philatelic Youth”. He does not only try to bring young people to philately, but above all to retain their interest in it. In the long run the aims include such activities for youth as summer camps, youth hostels, etc. However a basic requirement for this work will be a thorough basic training for the youth leaders. This already covers a considerable part of the map and will be extended further. In addition to that, youth group leaders will be given free courses of instruction at weekends. This has already been done for the Schleswig-Holstein and Middle Rhine circles.

The Circle has its own photographic unit which produces series of diagrams for loan, plus an information sheet which has an edition of 10,200 copies and generally runs to 16 pages. An extraordinary amount has been done. This outstanding youth work, which could only be carried out under the aegis of a large organisation, represents a large part of the value that the society and State clubs have for philately. The young people brought to philately in this way represent the collectors of tomorrow. They will also prevent the seniors from one day having to sell their collections as waste paper.

To conclude the reports from the sections, we had the one from the section that answers readers’ enquiries. The answers are of interest not only to collectors with personal problems, but also to such groups as exchange circles and novelty, new-issue producers.

REPORT OF THE SOCIETY LITERATURE SECTION AT THE MAINZ MEETING 1962

Literature information, documentation and literature propagation were also amongst the most important tasks of Section B in the last report year. Because of the work done by the section head in the Munich Philatelic Library it was possible to answer bibliographic enquiries in 176 cases, send photocopies of requested articles to Lisbon, New York, Haifa and other places, and locate out-of-print literature in 32 cases. Thanks to the financial support of the German Society of Philatelists, the 45-50th issue of Literatur-Nachrichten appeared and was distinguished by the jury at the KOBRIA stamp exhibition in 1961. Its further appearance will depend essentially on the realisation of the proposals made by the reporter at the Nuremberg meeting.

FOUNDATION OF THE INTERNATIONAL UNION OF PHILATELIC JOURNALISTS IN PRAGUE

Issue 47-48 of Literatur-Nachrichten dealt with such points as linguistic organisation and co-ordination of documentation, uniform abbreviations, full numbering of scientific journals, contents in an international language in all journals not written in an international language, reporting of all new publications to a central literature registry, co-operation with philatelic publishers as to documentation, etc. These were the subject of consultation at a successful Conference for Editors of the Philatelic Press called by Pierre Segury, The President of the Press and Information Commission of the F.I.P during the Prague Philatelic Meeting. Of the twelve reports relating to literature, the "proposals for the better evaluation of philatelic literature" were of special interest. Unanimously selected Working commissions will deal further with the problems raised. The active members of the Working Commission on "Philatelic Literature" will be; S. Bedcas/Prague, S. Shilit/Israel, Fritz Billig/Jamaica, USA, and the reporter.

It was a very good sign that we editors, publishers and philatelic authors from 44 countries and active in the fields of the press, radio and television could get together in the Hotel International in Prague on the 19th and 20th August in this year for a productive, stimulating exchange of ideas on philatelic publishing. They chose Munich as the site of the Philatelic Documentation Centre, as this already has the largest card index available to the public, in the philatelic section of the City Library. It will also be the task of the Commission on "Literature and Bibliography" to promote "Literatur-Nachrichten", now in its 50th edition, on the International level as a Society activity, since philatelic publications have now increased to such an extent that individuals can no longer keep abreast of dealing with it. The face of many bibliographical efforts that were never finished, and the "Repertoire Bibliographique de en presse philatelique", which finished in 1930, and was published by the Fédération Internationale de la Presse Philatelique founded by Dr. Tedeschi, leads us to wonder whether in future philatelic documentation can still be carried out on an honorary basis. The postponement of the index to the winter edition of "Literatur-Nachrichten" meets the wishes of all contributors, since they have more opportunity of working on the contents of L.N during the winter months than during the summer months.

That philatelic literature is again esteemed even by large public libraries is due to the fact that over the period from 1st-31st October 1961 the Hamburg City Library, in conjunction with Dr. A. Lienam, the chairman of the Hamburg-Altona Philatelic Society, staged a special exhibition of philatelic literature from all over the world under the title "The Literature of the Postage Stamp".

In conclusion may I thank the Committee of the Society of German Philatelists, all publishers and authors, and also my co-workers, for the valuable support of the Literature Section in the past year.

Chr. Otto Muller

p.6

EXHIBITIONS AND CONGRESSES

International Congress of Philatelic Journalists in Prague 1962

Report of the Head of the Literature Commission on Proposals for a more national evaluation of philatelic literature

Now when we are celebrating a hundred years of the existence of philatelic literature and press, we might well remember the dictum of the Roman ??? ??? ??? “Habent ??? ??? ???” – Books have their fate; since it applies especially to philatelic literature when over a hundred years ago the Strasburg bookseller and printer Oscar Berger Leverault published the world’s first stamp catalogue, Jean Baptiste Moens in Brussels issued his “Manual du Collectionneur”, and Ruhl in Leipzig his “Briefmarken Journal”, no-one could have suspected what importance philatelic literature would later have for philatelic research. Apart from the fact that philatelic research is no longer thinkable without literature, its importance becomes more and more obvious, as many collectors are compelled by the increasing number of issues after 1900 to give up “general collecting” and turn more and more towards special areas such as airmail, pre-philately, advance cancellations, motif and theme collections. This specialisation turns collectors more and more towards the research results and experiences to be found in the scientific literature.

Now it is an unfortunate fact that only a fraction of all published research studies could appear on book form as monographs, since self-sacrificing publishers were not always found ready to take on the high printing costs associated with the small print runs and necessary illustrations. By far the greatest part of the research literature can thus only be found as articles in magazines. They have now been in existence for a hundred years since the appearance of the “Monthly Advertiser” in Liverpool in December 1862 and have achieved international expansion. They now take up several times the room that monographs occupy in philatelic libraries.

In searching for source evidence, it is important for the research collector to find out in which periodical – which will include the no less important articles in almanacs, yearbooks, calendars, festschrifts and exhibition catalogues as well as technical journals – he will find the results he wants, or in what year they appeared. Hence the need for philatelic documentation (production of literature references, bibliographies, indexes). The Austrian senate president, Victor Suppanschitsch, realised this as early as 1891 and so he was inspired to draw a “Bibliography and reference book of all the German philatelic literature from its origin to the end of 1871”, published in Munich by Larisch. In his footsteps followed A. E. Glasewald, the publisher of “M. Meldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung”, Carl Beck and Alexander Bungerz, the editors of “Deutsche Philat. Bücherwurm”, District Judge Heinrich Frankel, the compiler of the bibliography of the most important special works on the postage stamps of individual countries, Rudolf Krosemann, the Potsdam librarian ??? with Thalmann, the author of the monthly supplement to “Die Post” entitled “Die philat. Literatur” Dr. jur Otto Rommel and the author of the Handbook of Philat. Literature Max Ton. The Bibliography of the German-language Literature by Friedrich Leitenberger remained incomplete, as did the international philatelic reference work “Mondial” founded by Fritz Billig in Jamaica/USA(1936), and the projected “General Index to the German-language philatelic literature”, to be compiled by Carl Schmittiel, who unfortunately did not return from the last world War. The same fate befell the “Handbook and Catalogue of world Philatelic Literature” announced by Karl Scharjenberg in “Magazin für philately. Literatur” 1950. The “Repertoire bibliographique de la Presse Philatelique 1928/1930 was very promising. It was financed by Dr. Guido Tedeschi, Turin, the founder of the Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatelique, FIPP, and edited by Prof. Francis Renant, but finished after 4 issues because of a lack of sufficient subscriptions. From the year 1926 comes the “Standard Index to Philatelic Literature” by Albert H. Harris and L. A. J. Baker which appeared in London from the firm of Harris Publications Ltd. Valuable bibliographic help can be obtained from the Cumulative Index to the Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, London, London Philatelist, Journal of Great Britain, Stamp Lover, Philatelic Adviser, the American Philatelist, Philatelisten-Zeitung, Le Timbre-Poste, Nederlandsch Tijdschrift voor Postzegelkunde, Philatela Maandblad, Nederlandsch ??? and De Philatelist. It was compiled by the literature specialists King-Farlow, Alcock, Rolland, Kimble, Moens, Glasewald and W. P. Costerus.

To use philatelic literature for research it is necessary to realise that the possession of several thousand volumes is not enough. A principal concern of the philatelic Section of the Munich City Library and the Literature Section of the Society of German Philatelists is a card index of over 35,000 references to literature. Continuous assessment of philatelic publications has been carried out since 1951 by "Literatur-Nachrichten Philatelic-Digest" from the Literature Section. This is the successor to "Archiv der philat. Literatur" from ??? and appears as two double issues yearly, with extracts from over 200 home and foreign technical journals. Furtherance of philatelic bibliography is on the agenda of the Duisberg "Gesellschaft für philat. Literatur", which has to date produced literature references for Baden, Bavaria, Prussia, Saxony, Saar and Württemberg.

The needs of the English/North American collector are met especially by the Indexing work in "stamp Lover" and "The American Philatelist", and also by "Philatelic Literature Review", the organ of the North American "Philatelic Literature Association".

It would be an aim worth striving for to co-ordinate the indexing work of the periodicals named, bring them together into a single bibliographic-philatelic journal, and divide the indexing up by language. Further preconditions for more rational documentation in the age of automation would be standardisation of the abbreviations for the journals dealt with, uniform numbering of the stamp issues in the Scott, Gibbons, Yvert, Zumstein and Michel world albums so as to get unmistakeable indications of the contents of articles cited, full issue details along with the volume number on the journals, provision of an abstract in an international language (English, French or Esperanto) for all important articles in technical journals not put out in an international language. This applies especially to Scandinavian, Slavic and exotic publications. Also desirable would be reporting of all new philatelic publications to a central literature section of FIP with text and reviews, checking of some manuscripts for publication by experts from FIP or FIPCO before publication to ensure accurate treatment of the subject, reproduction of the original title in any discussion of the book, with details of the author, formation of international working parties of philatelic authors and publishers, details of price in philatelic publications and reviews.

Philatelic literature used to be a private affair, but now public libraries at home and abroad are beginning to take an interest, and this means that philatelic literature must also meet the needs of libraries. This means that the authors' surnames should appear on the title page, to aid in the correct alphabetical arrangement of the author catalogue, use of the standard formats (octavo, quarto, folio, etc.) for philatelic publications, provision of loose or easily removable indexes, so as to facilitate binding of the volume.

Since these wishes and suggestions are in the interests of a future national and efficient documentation, may be discussions at this year's Prague philatelic meeting be fruitful, so that the plans begun in Barcelona and Budapest may be finished here, and the hundred golden towers of Prague bear witness to their philatelic history. Since 1885 it has been an internationally recognised central point for valuable philatelic effort which appeared as early as the 4th German Philatelic Meeting in Prague in 1891.

I should like to close my remarks with the wish that philatelic literature in the service of peace may again make its contribution to international understanding between all people.

Ch. Otto Muller

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 53/54

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 53/54

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

ABOUT MYSELF

A resolution passed at the meeting of the "Society of German Philatelists" in Berlin 1963 elected me as the new chairman of Section B in succession to Herr Ch. Otto Müller. The actual transfer did not take place till the year 1964, as I was fully occupied with preparations for "Naposta" 1963.

For technical reason it was unfortunately not possible for the journals and other literature in the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library to be used for "Literatur-Nachrichten". The library of the League of Berlin Philatelic Societies in Berlin unfortunately does not possess the same range of material as Munich. For these reasons it became necessary to write to all philatelic publishers and ask them for specimens. The answer to this call was encouraging. However, I must point out that I did not succeed in getting examples of all the philatelic magazines published in Germany.

There have been no issues of Literatur-Nachrichten since the end of 1962 (No. 51-52). Hence I have to deal with the available philatelic magazines of the year 1963 as well as those for the current year. The amount of work was considerable, and the conclusion of the editorial task moved further and further away. I have, for purely operational reasons, brought in a fresh layout for Literatur-Nachrichten, as you will see. Reports on auctions, exhibitions, congresses and societies will only be included in Literatur-Nachrichten for the future if they relate to purely literary questions. My principal task for the future will also be to index and evaluate the philatelic journals of the entire world, and to keep you informed of new publications in philately with reviews if possible.

You will see from the present publication that just to carry out these two most important functions has produced an issue of about 100 pages. Unfortunately the literature exchange service and the periodical review have had to be left out. They will appear in the next issue. In future it will not be possible to publish more than one issue of Literatur-Nachrichten per year purely on the grounds of the work involved (the editor's post is honorary, and he can only do the work in his free time).

Today I place No.53 of V before you, and take the liberty of asking you to let me have your considered opinion what has or has not pleased you. I am always grateful for constructive criticism.

In conclusion may I express my heartfelt thanks for their support to the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library and its director, Municipal Superintendent Markle, and to the library of the League of Berlin Philatelic Societies and its director, Herr Raupp. Also, I should like to express warm thanks to my co-worker, Herr Baum of Dusseldorf, Ch. O. Müller of Steinbach and Dr. Rossberg of Berlin for their work on the index. My thanks are also due to the editor of "Bundesnachrichten", Herr Münzberg of Frankfurt/Main, for his helpful co-operation.

Fritz Gaedicke

Christoph Otto Müller: 70

A collection built up from catalogues remains a thing of bits of pieces: the philatelist needs literature of all kinds to broaden his knowledge. And anybody who needs philatelic literature will know Christoph Otto Müller and his most original life's work, the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, because they have at least borrowed from or exchanged letters with it. Anyone who also visits the business and philatelic meetings of the BDPL will know the active, friendly man with the inevitable old Briefcase, always ready to give advice or join in discussions, seldom seeking the limelight but without whom a meeting of the Society is barely conceivable. Much of his work for the benefit of philatelist was performed "off-stage", as may collectors have found to their advantage by following up certain references in periodicals when their own researches proved fruitless.

Christoph Otto Müller completed his 70th year of life on the 24th September 1964 and – though very late because of the change in location of the Literature Section – may we express again here our heartiest good wishes for a long, Healthy and happy evening to his life, an evening which we know will continue to be devoted to philately and its literature.

We will not bother here to retrace the path Christoph Otto Müller followed to make himself known in all parts of the world as "Literature Müller". We will merely recall that he has continually striven to persuade the owners or inheritors of valuable single works or whole libraries that their books would be best kept in Munich. In this way he gradually built up the big central library of which he was Honorary Director from 1938 to 1946, and then Director, as an official of the City of Munich until his retirement. Perhaps the most important task carried out by our Literature Müller was the compilation of the card index, which he began in the air-raid shelter during the War, so that a start could be made on answering questions by revealing where an article on a given topic could be found.

No less important is Literatur-Nachrichten, founded by Christoph Otto Müller in 1951: this is an enduring proof of his never-tiring creative efforts in the interests of philately and a mine of information for enquirers. He retired from the chairmanship of the Literature Section at the 1963 meeting in Berlin on the grounds of age, and since then our Literature Müller has concerned himself only with the literature supply service.

It may be surprising to realise that Christoph Otto Müller has to date received only two major honours: in 1953, the highest German distinction for services to literature in the form of the Kalckhoff Medal, and in 1963 the annual distinguished service pin of the BDPL. This is however fully in line with the life-style of this congenial “bookworm”, distinguished on the one hand by his knowledge and on the other by unerring and tireless work for the philatelic literature. Thus, along with our good wishes go sincere thanks for your selfless work, dear Christoph Otto Müller.

Ullrich Hager

2nd item on p.3 is a reminder to pay subscriptions

3rd item on p.3 records grant of an official medal to Hermann Deninger

LITERATURE REVIEW

Key to contents and subjects of recent issues (Note: figures – list no. in Section 6)

a)	Address books	128, 177
	Africa	29
	Old Germany	106
	Argentina	105
	Auctions	207
	Exhibitions	11, 54, 79, 234
	Exhibition planning	175
	Australia	12, 46
	Baden	87
	Bahamas	232
	Bavaria	110, 111, 256
	Belgium	156, 226
	Biographies	1, 30, 60
	Brazil	212, 255

END

Literature Nachrichten
Whole number 55

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Whole number 55

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

FOREWORD

Today I lay before you No.55 of Literatur-Nichrichten. You will see from the extent of our coverage that we shall soon be able to extend L. N. 52 to cover all the most important journals, so that our evaluation will be complete. This is already the case for the German journals. The English-language journals which have not already been dealt with will follow in the next issue. For the first time, the larger countries are classified in this issue so as to give a better survey.

For reasons of finance and the work involved, Literatur-Nichrichten will only appear once a year from now on. The costs of producing it are very high, and are not covered by the subscriptions. Its publication is only made possible by the generous support of the Society of German Philatelists. I should like as usual to express my thanks for the numerous letters, suggestions from which have been carried out in this issue as far as possible.

In conclusion, my thanks are due to the Head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, City Chief Inspector Markle, and also Herr Raup, Librarian of the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies for his support. I should also like to express my heartfelt thanks to my co-workers, Messrs. Baum, Duffeldorf, Danesch, Schwelm, Eilers, Stockelsdorf, Müller, Steinbach and Dr. Rossberg, Berlin, for their work on the index and the review of literature. I also wish to thank here Herr Münzberg, Frankfurt/Main for the support he has given me.

Fritz Gaedicke

The Head of the Munich Philatelic Library 60 years old

City Chief Inspector Walter Markle recently celebrated his 60th birthday quietly in his usual modest style. Everyone who has the always helpful head of the internationally famous Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library to thank for the provision of research material, information and advice will hope to see him live many more years in good health to serve German philately. It is an especially happy thing for all philately that the central German philatelic library which is also the location of international philatelic documentation should be led by a specialist who is not only a distinguished expert on stamps but has also promoted the cause of philatelic literature in his own writings (the stamps section of the hobby columns of the "Süddeutsche Zeitung, and co-author of a textbook).

Otto Raup, Berlin, 60 years old

A personality known in philatelic circles well beyond the limits of his home city of Berlin is the Librarian of the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies, who was 60 years old on the 12th September 1965.

He was badly wounded in the Second World War and spent eighteen months in hospital. His great love for his little stamps helped him over a great deal of suffering.

In 1946 he joined the New Cologne Exchange Group, and shortly afterwards started a business of his own in Berlin-Wilmersdorf. However, he was not able to keep his "little stamp shop for big requirements" going for long after the currency reform. He then joined a number of Berlin collectors' societies, taking a particular interest in youth work. Thus, in 1955/56 he became Principal Youth Leader for the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies which had been refounded in 1950.

Three washing-baskets full of philatelic books and journals, passed to him by the societies formed the basis of the Union Library. Simply by drawing in gifts, Otto Raup succeeded in building the stock up to about twelve thousand volumes by the year 1958. Naturally it was no longer possible for him to keep all these in his own dwelling.

The State Postal Authorities made a room available without charge in Post Office 15, 93 Lietconburger Strasse, after which the stock continued to increase till it numbers over twenty thousand volumes today. This will give a small idea of the work undertaken by Otto Raup on a purely voluntary basis.

Since 1959 he has also been deputy librarian of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library.

His work has received public recognition from the Society of German Philatelists by the award of the silver service pin in 1959, and the enamel pin in 1964.

Otto Raup is also a member of over ten societies at home and abroad. At times he has been the chairman or deputy chairman. In 1956 he founded the BSV Charlottenburg.

He has never neglected his stamp-collecting activities, and is still working to complete the England plates. He has done a good deal of research in the field of registered-letter labels and is head of the Berlin working Party of Registration Label Collectors.

Otto Raup has always given his advice and help to any collector who wants to do more than merely fill in the empty spaces in his album as cheaply as possible.

REPORT OF THE CHAIRMAN OF SECTION B
TO THE 1905 SOCIETY MEETING IN ESSEN

As well as procuring and supplying literature, the task of the chairman of this section is to produce Literatur-Nichrichten. This deals with all the philatelic journals that have been made available to me. New titles are also mentioned and to some extent reviewed. The result of this work is the present small issue.

As the successor to Herr Christoph Otto Müller it was necessarily hard to me to come to grips with the new materials. Unfortunately I am not a Librarian by profession, as Herr Müller was. Nevertheless I am ready to tackle the job with pleasure and enthusiasm. Perhaps I might point out that I can only be active for Section B in my spare time, and the production of Literatur-Nichrichten has called for hard work. Hence I am all the more pleased to be able to speak to you now. It is obvious that my first volume could not be as full as No.52 from Herr Müller. Moreover it was necessary to work the years 1963 and 1964 in together. This has not yet appeared, and I am currently working on the literature for this year.

For these reasons I am grateful for positive criticisms. Also I do not intend to express my opinion about letters which fail to meet the standards of courtesy usual in Middle Europe. I am sorry to say I have received a letter like this, and have allowed myself to answer it in the same tone. I know there will always be fault-finders, but nevertheless it strikes me as a poor show when freely undertaken voluntary work is rewarded only impolite letters.

As I have already mentioned in my previous report, it was necessary to write to the various publishers to get the necessary copies for indexing. This is now being done slowly. The literature in the Munich City Library is not available to me for technical reasons. However I must say that the co-operation received from the head of the philatelic section of the Munich City Library, Chief Inspector Merkel, is outstanding, and I would like to thank him here very warmly for the support he has given me.

You see that my report on Section B has turned into a report on Literatur-Nichrichten.

In conclusion it only remains for me to thank the Society of German Philatelists for the financial support without which my publication would have been impossible, and also to thank my co-workers on Literatur-Nichrichten, Herr Baum of Düsseldorf, Ch. O. Müller of Steinebach, and Dr. Rossberg, Berlin. I should also like to thank Messrs. Danesch and Eilers, who have expressed themselves as willing to help.

Finally, a request to you all to canvass for Literatur-Nichrichten. Every society should have this item in its library.

Subscriptions

Subscribers who have not yet paid for 1965 are requested to forward the amount to P.O. Box 1574 66, Berlin West – special account of F. Gaedicke. This subscription is 8.50DM for home members and 9.50DM for foreign members.

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1970, Whole number 59

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1970, Whole number 59

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1

Foreword.

Fritz Gaedicke

Today I present you the number 59 of the literature news. It is the sixth issue that I have in my tenure as head of Federal Office B (Literature) of the Association of German Philatelists e. V. published. Compared with issue No. 58, the scope has hardly changed. For the first time I included some blank pages for notes at the end of the booklet. With around 140 evaluated journals, there has been no major change here either. Nevertheless, I continue to strive to evaluate magazines that have not yet been recorded. Of course, this evaluation then takes place retrospectively from the time I took office, 1963. This is how The Airpost-Journal and The American Revenuer were evaluated. As a new employee, I was able to utilise Lipinski, who will evaluate the Polish magazines in the future.

In the future, the literature news will only be able to appear once a year because there is effectively no time to publish two issues annually. In order to be more up-to-date, I no longer set the editorial deadline to December 31st, but when the manuscript for the book began, the editorial deadline coincided. You can find 1970 magazines evaluated. - I no longer need to comment on financial questions, since the generous support of the Federation of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History ensures that the publication is guaranteed, so the sales price of the previous year can be kept. If you have already paid for your subscription, the attached invoice is illusory for you. As in the previous year, I enclosed them with every copy, since sorting them out beforehand according to paid and unpaid recipients would take a lot of time.

As always my request to you: If you like the literature news, please spread the word and promote it. If you have anything to complain about, please tell me, I am always open to constructive criticism.

Finally, I would like to thank the head of the Philatelic Department of the Munich City Library, City Inspector Gleixner, and Messrs Raupp and Neuhold of the Privy Council Kalckhoff Memorial Library for the support they have been given. I would also like to thank my collaborators, Baum from Düsseldorf, Danesch from Schwelm, Dr. Debo from Munich, Eilers from Stockelsdorf, Dr. Roßberg from Berlin and Wölffel from Helsingör for their work on the index and the literature show.

Fritz Gaedicke

pp.2-3

Report of the leaders of Bundestelle B from the Bundestag 1969 in Garmisch-Partenkirchen.
Fritz Gaedicke

pp.3-4

Postal history and philatelic library – Kalckhoff Library – in Berlin.
Neuhold

pp.5-7

The Munich Philatelic Library.
Gleixner

pp.8-82

Literature Review (Index).

pp.83-135

New Literature Review.

pp.139-148
Miscellaneous

END

V. Suppantschitsch

Attempt at a bibliography of the foreign-language philatelic periodical literature of Europe to the end of 1891

[Versuch einer bibliographie der fremdsprachigen philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur Europas bis ende 1891]

Austria-Philatelist, June, 1898, Volume 5, Issue 7, pp.114-115; October, Issue 11, p.176;
November, Issue 12, p.193; December, Issue 13, p.214; January 1899, Volume 6, Issue 1, pp.22-23 & August/September Issue 8/9, pp.96-97

(Translation of the introductory text on pp.114-115 and the end-word on p.97)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1998. (Minor editorial changes, February 2008.
Revised September and November 2010)

ATTEMPT AT A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE FOREIGN-LANGUAGE PHILATELIC PERIODICAL LITERATURE OF EUROPE
TO THE END OF 1891

I published a paper under the above title in the year 1893 in Die Postwerthzeichen-Kunde, A. Larisch's journal of Munich, which has since, unfortunately, ceased publication. I may assume that this attracted quite a lot of notice and I have also found that it was the only work published on this topic for quite a considerable time. Since then John K. Tiffany, the man of letters who died far too soon and came from St. Louis in the United States of America, published a similar treatment of philatelic literature of Great Britain under the title English Stamp Publications in the Stamp News Annual for 1894. I know no other work in this field worth mentioning, as far as philatelic literature of other countries is concerned.

Anyone who has tried to deal with the European specialist literature will know how exceptionally hard it is to get full and accurate data in this field. If I may assume that I have at least come near to this, I have only to thank the fact that I have not limited myself to investigating the literature, but have tried to deal with it directly, so that my own library has enabled me to check the accuracy of data supplied to me.

I know very well that there is a large number of loners and collectors of literature in Europe but very few of them make it the object of their research and none study it in the detailed, and dedicated manner as has the author of these lines.

I have called my work an "attempt", by which I mean I do not look on it as finished, and recognise that my results need supplementing and correcting in many respects. Moreover, if I undertake this work, I assume it will be of interest to all the people who welcomed my paper of the year 1893.

My numerous publications on the topic of philatelic literature have not, moreover, disappeared so completely within the philatelic world as one might be tempted to assume.

They have not only inspired many active collectors to set up a philatelic library, but have also moved the societies to pay more attention to their libraries, to make sure valuable items were safe, catalogue them, etc. Hence the circle of those taking an interest in our specialist literature in the present day is much wider than it was in the year 1893, and there is much more justification for publishing the present work than there was in 1893.

However, I ask any respected readers of this paper who can take no interest in this article to simply pass over it and not complain to the editor because he has published an article of no interest to them instead of a scientific article on philately, since the present article represents a plus and the reader will not find that the philatelic value of this journal has been in any way reduced.

Before I go on to the actual text, I beg leave to ask every philatelist who reads these lines to check whether or not they own any older philatelic journals - German or foreign-language - even if they are only single issues, and be good enough to send them to me.

As for the supplements and corrections, I will point out that I have followed the sequence used in my 1893 article and that the Roman numerals correspond to those in the earlier article.

p.97

In conclusion may I point out that the fifth volume of the journal Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo contains not 11, but 12 issues, the last of which appeared in December 1880. I managed to get hold of this issue (12) myself not long ago.

The many additions to the English literature can be explained by the fact that at the time when my 1893 article appeared there was chaos in the region. Even in England practically no attention was paid to the minor journals, so that even people actually working in the country had only meagre information available, most of it unreliable and some of it out and out incorrect.

Also, I have made discoveries in the older German periodical literature which have enabled me to correct some of my earlier data and I hope to report on these at another time.

Editor's note: The following was translated accidentally, being at the foot of the last page of the original.

Bookcase

We thank Messrs C. Beständig, J. Gross, H. Feltmann, J. B. Robert and Postmaster Jänisch for their help with our monthly list of new publications.

Please us letters and any kind of postal packet to the editor or publisher of Austria-Philatelist at the following address: 18 Karlsgasse, Prague.

END

Author (14pt)
Great Dictionary of Philately
[Title in original language]
Bibliographic details
(Notes)

Translated by Translator for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

GREAT DICTIONARY OF PHILATELY

INTRODUCTION

Philately is the collection and study of the tokens of postage payment – postage stamps, date and special cancellations, labels and tags, and also of envelopes and postcards with printed on or adhesive postage stamps. They have appeared roughly since the end of the first decade since 1840, when the first postage stamps were introduced in Great Britain.

After Great Britain, stamps appeared in Brazil, the Swiss cantons – Zurich and Geneva – the U.S.A., France Belgium, Bavaria and other countries. Russia joined them in 1858.

The first Soviet postage stamps were put into use on the 7th November 1918, in the first days of the Great October Socialist Revolution.

Mention of the first philatelic organisations dates from the 60s of the 19th century. Clubs and collectors' societies were set up in the cities of Canada, the U.S.A., Great Britain, Germany and other countries.

The history of philately in our own country extends over more than 100 years. The first philatelic societies in Russia sprang up in the year 1883 in Moscow and Saint Petersburg. In the year 1923 the first all-Russian philatelic society was founded, with branches in many towns of the U.S.S.R. In 1966 the All-Union Philatelic Society (VOF) was founded. This is a popular voluntary organisation with some 200,000 members in its ranks. Moreover, over 200,000 schoolboys and students at professional and technical colleges and institutes belong to circles and clubs in the youth section of the VOF. In 1967 VOF became a member of the International Federation of Philately, to which the leading philatelic organisation of more than 60 countries belong. Soviet philatelists take part in major international exhibitions, and their exhibits have deservedly gained high awards.

Essential help for philatelists, particularly those with only a limited experience of collecting, is provided by the range of literature issued by the "Radio and Communications" publishing house, by the committee of VOF, by the "Soyuzpechat" Central Philatelic Agency and other organisations and the monthly magazine "Filateliya SSSR". There are many specialist and subject catalogues, handbooks, reference books, popular books and pamphlets relating to various problems in philately, all helping to keep the philatelist's bookshelf constantly reinforced. However, there is still a need for a philatelic dictionary for a wide circle of philatelists, especially for those who have only recently been seized by this enthusiasm.

O. Ya Basin's Philatelic Dictionary, containing some 1,000 terms, was published in 1968 and 1976.

Finally in 1977 appeared a translation from the German of the Philatelic Dictionary by V. Grallert and V. Grushke (published by "Transpress" G.D.P.)

The publication of these dictionaries did not entirely meet the needs of philatelists, but in spite of that they achieved a rapid distribution and have become bibliographic rarities.

The foreign dictionaries which are sometimes used by Soviet philatelists for problems relating to the U.S.S.R. tend to be incomplete and often have inaccuracies. They pay excessive attention to commercial activities. Hence the decision was taken to undertake the publication of the new Great Philatelic Dictionary* (BFS).

The publishing section of the All-Union Philatelic Society (VOF), experienced philatelists and specialists from the Ministry of Communications of the U.S.S.R. A word-list containing over 4,000 terms was prepared by the VOF, the Moscow and Leningrad sections of the VOF, the Board of the Ukrainian section, and other organisations and active members inside the VOF.

The most experienced authors were recruited to write the articles.

The Great Philatelic Dictionary belongs to the ranks of explanatory dictionaries. It explains the various concepts likely to be encountered by collectors of philatelic literature, and used directly by busy philatelists in dealing with their colleagues and fellow enthusiasts. The dictionary contains much reference information.

It should be noted that work on the terminology of philately has not yet been brought to an end, and the treatment of the ideas will continue to undergo certain modifications, while in some cases it remains to a certain extent arbitrary and insufficiently precise.

The articles of the Great Philatelic Dictionary relate to the following basic topics:-

1. Philatelic and postal terms. Kinds of postal functions and services. Collection, sorting and delivery of correspondence. Development of postal links. Different ways of conveying post. Automatic sorting of items of post. Domestic and foreign postal organisations.
2. Tokens for payment of postage. Types of postage stamps, entires, postal forms and records. Particulars of their postal uses. Marking machines*.
3. Production of stamps and other tokens of payment of postage. Methods of printing, paper, inks, gums, water-marks, perforations. Sheets of stamps, booklets, rolls. Blocks and small sheets. Philatelic and postal souvenirs.
4. Countries that have issued postage stamps. Local and regional issues. Zemstvo post. Provisionals. Well-known postage stamps. Monetary units on postage stamps.

5. Registration of items of post. Labels and tags. Methods of cancelling signs of postal payments. Cancellation stamps and punches. Their types and sizes, nature of application.
6. Collecting. Types of philatelic collection. Philatelic equipment. Philatelic exhibitions.
7. History of home and foreign posts. Philatelic research. Forgery of philatelic and postal materials. Restoration of postage stamps.
8. History of the philatelic movement. Philatelic organisations. Philatelic literature and periodical publications.

The articles in the dictionary are given in alphabetic order: terms consisting of two or more words are given in the first place under the one most closely related to the overall concept. The dictionary retains all the distinctive philatelic terminology. For example, under the term “shtempel”* is given not only the meaning “postmark” but its other meanings, and under “kollektсионированые shtempelei”, is given just the separate collection of postmarks. The word “izyat” used in the text means that a given issue has been taken out of postal circulation.

Also to facilitate the use of the dictionary, words which appear in different combinations and in relation to various philatelic concepts such as, for example, “paper”, “perforation”, “overprint”, “stamps”, “cover”, “card”, “postmark”, are “nested” together. This “nesting” of a word means that the articles on different aspects and kinds of paper, perforations, stamps, perforations, cards, cancellations, etc., are brought together. Under “semstvo post” are brought together all articles on the work of rural posts in the different administrative regions of Russia, these then being arranged in alphabetical order by the name of the regions.

The articles on the monetary symbols that appear on postal items are written solely on the basis of monetary units. The descriptions of the monetary units give the periods during which they were in circulation. If the monetary unit has not been changed, no period of circulation is shown. The articles on changes in monetary units are of a reference nature.

The articles on countries and territories have a short historical introduction related only to the period of their issue of stamps. Changes of a political or administrative nature not reflected in postal publications, and merely historical information, are given minimum coverage. The names of countries as a rule follow the Soviet Encyclopedic Dictionary (1983) and the Guide to the Countries of the world (Politizdat, 1985). In addition, the names of countries, towns, etc., are reproduced as they appear on their postal material.

The geographical names in the dictionary are given as they were at the period of issue of the postal material. A second, contemporary name is given where necessary. All contemporary names and their spellings are shown on an atlas of the world. Foreign and military issues are dealt with either in the articles on the countries which issued them, or in the articles on the countries in which these issues were put into circulation.

Difficulties of a polygraphic nature make it impossible to give the inscriptions and overprints on postage stamps in the appropriate language. All those in the dictionary are given in the Russian language and in contemporary orthography. Inscriptions in ideograms, cuneiform, ornamental scripts, etc., are also not reproduced.

In the text articles, the numbers of the stamps from the R.S.F.S.R. and the U.S.S.R. are taken from the T.S.F.A. catalogue, and those of foreign stamps from the Yuert catalogue (Yuert et Tellier: Catalogue der Timbres-Poste) the year given for a series with the details of any postal edition, is the year of issue.

The bibliographical articles give the information needed for location.

Words in italics refer to separate articles (if the name of a country consists of more than one word, it may be necessary to transpose them). If the text contains a reference of the type “stamps of the British Postal Undertaking in Eastern Arabia”*, the reader should turn to the articles on “Great Britain” or “Eastern Arabia”.

The Great Philatelic Dictionary is the first publication of its kind in our country. Hence, the publishers would be interested to have readers’ opinions on its layout, contents and format. All suggestions and remarks should be sent to this address: P.O. Box a/y 693, Moscow 10100.

END

Philat. Trans. 185
(Incorporating Philat. Trans. 012; Philat. Trans. 013; Philat. Trans. 014 & Philat. Trans. 015)

Literature Nachrichten
1973, Whole number 62

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
Original translations undated, ca. 1978

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1973, Whole number 62

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles

p.1

Foreword

Fritz Gaedicke, Berlin-Spandau, September 1973.
(Formerly Philat. Trans. 012)

Today I am able to send you no. 62 of the Literatur Nachrichten. This is the tenth issue since I took over the Society's Literature Section. At the time I had no idea what an enormous load of work I was taking on. When you leaf through this issue you will see that Literatur Nachrichten has again widened its scope, but some Journals are still lacking. The Danish magazines, the Wiener Briefmarken-Spiegel and the Rundbriefe der Arbeitsgemeinschaft Bautenserie are not covered. Unfortunately, Dr. Debo and Mr. Hüttl have not been able to get round to indexing these because of pressure of work. The Wiener Briefmarken-Spiegel was left out accidentally. Of course, an account of these magazines will appear in a future issue of Literatur Nachrichten. From the next issue onwards, we shall add to our account details of the language in which the magazines are written. This was not possible in the present issue due to a lack of time.

Over the last year I have managed to recruit new co-workers to evaluate the magazines. All the same, if you have the time and the inclination, may I ask you to come in and help as well. However, as often pointed out, the only honorarium I can afford is a free copy of Literatur Nachrichten.

For reasons of expense I am compelled to pass the costs of postage on to the subscribers. The cost of the Journal is unaltered at 10 DM. Treasurers of societies who send in the purchase price are urgently requested to quote the name of the society on the envelope enclosing their remittance.

May I offer my sincere thanks to all my colleagues, the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten and the ladies and gentlemen of the philatelic libraries in Berlin, Hamburg and Munich for their support for my work.

Now, as usual, the final acknowledgements. If you subscribe to Literatur Nachrichten, you are indispensable for serious philatelists, for whom we gladly carry out this work.

p.2

Report of the head of Section B for the Freiburg meeting

Fritz Gaedicke

(Formerly Philat. Trans. 013)

As in every annual report I have given so far, Literatur Nachrichten (Literature Reports) will play the principal part in this year's. As I have said since I began, it is the signpost of the League of German Philatelists. I am continually trying to include new journals, but unfortunately there have to be limits. The work load has slowly become almost unbearable. The Section Head alone has about 150 journals to cover, without thinking of book reviews. I am constantly trying to recruit helpers, but have not found many so far. In the past year at the working session of the Science and Literature Section in Kassel I put forward the proposal that every working party that publishes anything should let us have the details. Unfortunately, nothing has been done about this yet. I intend to bring this problem up again at the Freiburg meeting. In my opinion it should be no trouble for everyone to produce three or four index cards describing their own publications. This would be a distinct reduction of the load on the Section Head's less industrious colleagues.

I was late starting on production of the new issue this year. In the first place, I had to wait for approval of support from the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, and in the second place I had to take care of certain honorary posts which, e.g. the Inflation Testing Station at Berlin, also meant a great deal of work. Also, I had to look after my team of writers, who produced work for me in their own time. A paid writing team would be quite out of the question, because the cost would be too high.

This is the report on Literatur Nachrichten which, if I may say so, again enjoys a very good reputation internationally. The special work of the Section will be extended when possible to answering enquiries, but I must ask to be excused at present.

In conclusion, as in former years, my thanks go to the governing committee of the League of German Philatelists for their help, to the Foundation for Philately and Postal History for valuable financial support, and to all who have helped me to make Literatur Nachrichten more extensive by sending in literature. My heartfelt thanks to my co-workers, Messers Danesch, Dr. Debo, Divisch, Kensing, Dr. Rossberg and Wölffel.

pp.2-4

Report of the Working Group on the 1972 Freiburg meeting

(Formerly Philat. Trans. 014)

Working Group I (Science and Literature) included about 50 ladies and gentlemen. 22 of them were the heads of groups, and represented about 2,000 active philatelists.

At the beginning of the meeting those present were given the names and details of the people who were to give papers, along with a summary of the 15 points from Kassel, so that everyone's memory was refreshed as to the speakers, their subjects and the "Kassel points".

The leader of the Working Group (Dr. Hanfland) gave his opinion as to ratification of the 15 Kassel points. Vigorous discussion was provoked by Point 8 Exchange of literature with the German Democratic Republic, which had not hitherto been explained satisfactorily. President Kahler reported on his own efforts in this direction at the recent FTP conference.

Known members of the younger generation of philatelists with modern interests were secured as speakers by the Working Group. The first was Winfried Berger of Frankweiler/Pfalz, who dealt with research problems from the point of view of society and working group members. He mentioned problems which many leaders of such groups have had to deal with.

The range of problems encountered in modern collecting was dealt with in further papers by Wolfgang Schultz of Fredeburg, (Working Group on Marginal Coloured Markings i.e. "traffic lights") and Willi Oschewsky of Linter, (Working Group on Automation of Letter Post). Both referred in their papers to the fact that work done on a national basis only leads to partial results and that full success can only come by crossing borders. Both speakers bore witness to the fact that modern fields of collecting are becoming very popular and are finding their appropriate place alongside classical philatelic studies. Schultz dealt in particular with the concerns of the head of a junior philatelists' club.

The head of the Research Section, Ernest Zimmer pointed out in his paper that the sections must back up the working groups by word and deed, but not try to take them over. Urgent priority must be given to establishing a set of model rules and setting up an arbitration body. The aim should be to set up research groups for as many fields of collecting as possible, and thus get optimum collector activity. New and heavy financial burdens will be unavoidable in this connection. This will call for the continuous publication of details of the sections' finances, as Zimmer would agree. On a motion, Zimmer was supported with one dissenting voice.

The second session of the meeting was opened at 14.00 hrs. and the main emphasis was now on the literature. Members of the Working Group on Publications came in for the first paper, so that about 80 people were present. Günther Welter of Camberg, spoke on the subject Does a society really need its own journal. His arguments so convinced his hearers that no opposing views were put forward. Members decided to retain their present publication - Bundesnachrichten (Federation Reports).

The question spontaneously raised by Emil Mewes of Dusseldorf, as to continuation of the "New Handbook of Philately" also received a positive reply. The discussion indicated that the handbook should be slanted mainly towards German interests. Monographs and works of the handbook type should not be "all lumped in together".

The problems of the philatelic section of the Munich City Library were described by its director, Otto Gleixner of Emmering, who asked for understanding over the prolonged ban on loans, since it was thought more important to do the cataloguing. It was good to hear from Mrs. Renato Brandt of Hamburg that the Philatelic Library in Hamburg had recorded increased activity since the loss of Munich.

A warm reception was given to the paper by Fritz Gaedicke of Berlin, head of the Literature Section, who reported that Whole number 61 of Literatur Nachrichten has now appeared and has been classified in the light of the most recent findings, so that a given article can be found by subject as well as by country. The evaluation of over 150 journals in this report gives over 4,000 sources of information for the reader.

Everybody who took part in the meeting of this Working Group will again be quite convinced that research and Literature are the Alpha and Omega of philately.

pp.30-31

Philatelic libraries

(Formerly Philat. Trans. 015)

Two important libraries are available to the collector at the moment. I often receive letters expressing an interest in philatelic literature, and so I give the addresses and loan regulations here.

1. Berlin Post and Telegraph Museum, Library of Postal History and Philately, 1 Lübecker Strasse, Berlin 21. This is available without charge to anyone interested. Readers not on the spot can only borrow via the usual system, i.e. the request has to come via a library in the German inter-library loans network. The books can be kept for three weeks as a rule.
2. Philatelic Library of Hamburg e.V., Poststr. 33, Hamburg 2. Here again the loan period is three weeks as a rule. Books can be consulted without charge on the premises. The same applies to members of the library. The charge to members of affiliated societies is 0.50 DM per book, and 1.00 DM for all other users. Out of town users are also expected to pay the postage costs. The detailed catalogue can be purchased at a price of 3.00 DM.

END

Literature Nachrichten
1974, Whole number 63

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1974, Whole number 63

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

FOREWORD

Vol. 63 of Literatur-Nachrichten lies in front of you. Various factors have prevented it from appearing before now. A new typewriter was needed to produce the manuscript, and it took some time to get this, moreover the means of publication did not become available till late, my contribution was rather too late, and my health is not too good at the moment so that my evening work on Literatur-Nachrichten has had to be frequently interrupted. Apart from that, I am pleased to issue is now ready. I have managed to find new collaborators so that for the first time you will find numerous locations for Spain, as we now have a gentleman who will survey the literature. Whereas in the last issue almost seven sides were left blank for your own notes, the present issue is full up with locations and descriptions of the literature. If only a few issues of certain journals have been included this is because I could not get hold of any more. I must depend for this on the goodwill of publishers as I have no funds for acquiring literature.

However most of the working groups in the Society of German Philatelists have agreed to index their own publications. This makes the documentation more precise and lightens my work to some extent. Moreover I have again managed to recruit two new helpers to assist me with the indexing, so now I have to deal with "only" about 100 journals myself.

As I mentioned above, my state of health is not the best and I absolutely must go away for treatment. The next issue will thus take somewhat longer to produce. If my doctor should forbid this voluntary activity (I have hardly any free time left after my professional activities for days on end), I hope to be able to find a worthy successor.

As usual, I should like to thank all my co-workers for their support and help in producing this issue. Thanks also to the Society of German Philatelists and the ladies and gentlemen of the Philatelic Bookshops in Berlin, Hamburg and Munich for the assistance they have given me.

I hope you will again find this issue of the Literatur-Nachrichten of good use for your philatelic studies.

Berlin-Spandau, February 1975

Fritz Gaedicke

Report of the Confederation for Philatelic Literature

I am writing this report at the beginning of June and cannot say at the moment whether Literatur-Nachrichten no.63 will appear in time for the meeting at Bad Homburg. The 30th June is the closing date for publication. As you will know from my last report, the work in the field of literature is every-increasing. Literatur-Nachrichten, founded by my co-worker and myself, has found international acceptance as is also proved by the fact that more and more philatelic journals and foreign societies are sending me material to cover. Hence, as in previous years I would like to recruit helpers for Literatur-Nachrichten. I cannot pay any honorarium apart from the free copies. Even in these money-hungry days it may be possible to find a few voluntary helpers. In particular I need collaborators for the literature of Finland and South America. I have been very glad to find willing helpers in individual sections of the Society of German Philatelists. With the aid of Herr Hütth, the head of the Scientific Section, I have managed to get many groups to index their own publications. It would be desirable for all groups to do the same. Of all the journals that reach the Literature Confederation there are over 170 different ones to be dealt with, which is quite a burden for me.

On the recommendation of the Executive Committee of the Society of German Philatelists, the print run for the next issue of Literatur-Nachrichten will be increased so that every affiliated society will be able to have a free copy.

The other work of the Confederation is also steadily increasing, and I am always getting enquiries about the literature on various topics. I should like to say that I will do my best to supply the information wanted. I might be asked for example, when the topic comes up, to recommend scientific literature on Butterflies or send an enquirer a list of all the philatelic literature published in Germany. I must also ask for return postage to be sent, which most people forget.

As in every report, I should like to thank all the co-workers and friends for their help with Literatur-Nachrichten. Particular thanks are due to the Executive Committee of the Society of German Philatelists for the support which is always forthcoming when needed.

Fritz Gaedicke

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

END

Philat. Trans. 187
(Incorporates Philat. Trans. 021, Philat. Trans. 022
& Philat. Trans. 023)

Literature Nachrichten
1975/1976, Whole number 64/65

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

1975/1976, Whole number 64/65

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Philat. Trans. 21

FOREWORD

by

R. Hohn

Literatur Nachrichten, 1975-76, (64/65), 1-2

Translation produced by B. J. Birch, 16 Redwood,
Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, U.K. (1983)

FOREWORD

The gap has been closed. Literature Reports is now available for the two missing years 1975 and 1976 in the form of the double volume no. 64/65.

This volume has been published with the aid of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History. It has appeared in conjunction with the Hamburg and Munich Libraries.

Book reviews have been omitted for reasons of time. However, they will appear as usual in the next volume for 1978/79.

The method introduced in vol. 66 of dividing the text by the digital system has proved useful and has been widely accepted. The numerical code has been worked out so that every field of collection (by country or subject) will appear under the same series of numbers every year. It could thus be retained by and large, and further expansion was only needed under the section "America" (7.3.1.3) for the sake of clarity. The section 7.3.1.7 "Arctic" could also go under point 6, "U.S. Arctic", and section 7.3.1.8 "Antarctic" could also go under sections 11 and 12, "New Zealand Antarctic" and "South African Antarctic". Section 12 in 7.3.5 "Miscellaneous" could also include material on home and foreign postal museums.

The short register (7.2) has been expanded by a volume showing where the journal concerned (or copies from it) may be borrowed. However, this information is not available for all journals. Any still lacking will be given in the next volume. In this volume, o means the Munich library and x the Hamburg Library. Loans forms for the Munich Library can be obtained from the Federal Literature Group. Loans can be made direct from the Hamburg Library.

In enumerating the journals (7.1.3) I have given the publisher's address whenever possible. I request the missing addresses to be sent to me if possible, so that I can include them in the next volume.

This volume comes to you under the headings countries, motifs, types of post, special topics and miscellaneous, and includes 9000 references to articles in philatelic journals from 26 countries, in newsletters from societies and in exhibition catalogues.

The number of newsletters and journals has been increased to about 200 by the inclusion of new titles, especially from Poland and Australia (1977: 127).

Also, the journals BnBZ, Ned MPh and MonCl, which were missed out of vol. 66, are included in this one. I must thank the publishers of the Berner Briefmarkenzeiting (Berne Stamp Journal) and the Moniteur du Collectionneur (Collector's Monitor) (Luxembourg) for sending me their back issues without charge.

As far as possible, the titles are quoted in the original language. If I only have them in a German translation, the original language is given in brackets.

My hearty thanks for support and co-operation with this Literature Report are due to all my co-workers in the League of German Philatelists and the Foundation, and to the ladies and gentlemen of the Hamburg and Munich philatelic libraries.

It only remains for me to hope that this volume too will be a useful aide in your philatelic work.

_____)

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE FEDERAL LITERATURE GROUP, 1978/79

by

R. Hohn

Literatur Nachrichten, 1975-76, (64/65), 12-13

Translation produced by B. J. Birch, 16 Redwood,
Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, U.K. (1983)

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE FEDERAL LITERATURE GROUP, 1978/89

Due to the resignation of Herr Martner, his replacement, Herr Robert Hohn was asked at the meeting in Frankfurt in 1978 to take over the chair till the next election.

The main task for this year was to produce the missing year 1875-1977 of the Literature Reports.

Vol. 66 (1977) for which some 50 subscriptions had been received from home and foreign libraries and private individuals, was produced and ready for issue by October 1979. Every society, working group, library and publishing house that had made their publications available to us, received a copy free. Others are still available from the Group at 15DM, + 2DM for post and packing.

As usual, the first part of this volume gives details of about 100 new books, and the second lists some 4000 papers and publications in 127 journals and society circulars from all over the world. About half of the societies abstracted their circulars themselves. Some 40 of the journals were dealt with by the Group, and the foreign ones were handled by Herr Danesch, Dr. Debo and Dr. Rossberg, and the Philatelic Library in Munich. Hearty thanks are expressed to all these helpers. In future, the Group will have less work to do in producing later volumes, since more societies have agreed to index and abstract their own publications.

For the first time, a digital system of indexing the literature is used in vol. 66. Each country and subject is allotted a given numerical code, which will remain the same in later volumes so that it should be easier to trace literature on a given topic.

The two years 1975 and 1876 have been dealt with together, and 1980 will appear in the same way, so that there will again be no gaps in Literature Reports. The only thing missing from this volume is the book reviews, because of lack of time.

The years 1978 and 1979, on which work is already in hand, will also appear as a double volume.

In the course of its operational year, the Federal Group has dealt with approximately 120 questions on philatelic literature from German and overseas societies and private individuals. Most could be answered satisfactorily or passed on to an appropriate authority.

Mention should also be made of our good co-operation with the Federal Research Group and the philatelic libraries of Hamburg and Munich.

At the 2nd International Postage Stamp Fair in Essen, the two Federal groups for Research and Literature share the same information stand, and were able to deepen their contacts with members of the groups by personal conversation. Visitors to the stand gained an idea of the work of both groups. Questions and orders for literature were passed on to the libraries and booksellers.

At the end of April the Group took part in the 5th Soest? Colloquium, and were able to solve important problems, such as that of increased collaboration in the production of Literatur – Nachrichten by personal contact.

Last but not least, the Group's thanks must go to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without whose financial help and support our work would not have been possible.

Robert Hohn

Philat. Trans. 23

GERMAN PHILATELIC LIBRARIES

by

O. Gleixner

Literatur Nachrichten, 1974-75, (64/65), 490-495

Translation produced by B. J. Birch, 16 Redwood,
Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, U.K. (1983)

HAMBURG PHILATELIC LIBRARY, HAMBURG e.V.

10 Hohenfelder Strasse, 2000 Hamburg 76
PSE Hamburg 3361-203

You will find in the Hamburg Philatelic Library:

- books on all topics relating to philately and postal history
- periodicals on philately and postal history from all over the world and for all periods
- newsletters and report from practically all active societies
- catalogues of German and foreign publishers, also previous and antiquarian issues
- exhibition catalogues and guides, so long as they contain articles on philately and postal history
- auction catalogues from auction firms all over the world, also from earlier periods

You may visit us every Tuesday and Thursday from 17-19 hours, and on Saturday from 10-13 hours, and:

- read and study during this period

- borrow all books, journals and catalogues on the shelf
- use our card index to more than 40,000 articles
- use our outside loan arrangements and let us know your wants in writing
- buy our catalogue of books, which is constantly being updated
- take out membership as well

To be a member needs only a yearly subscription of 30DM for adults and 10DM for juveniles, and there are then no loan charges.

For non-members, there is a charge of 1DM towards postage, payable when we send you the item requested. We ask you to:

- help by becoming members – the sum is deductible from your taxes:
- help us with donations, so that we can serve you better
- help with our work

We thank you for your attention and are happy to have the chance to help with your studies in philately and postal history. Please bear in mind we only have honorary and voluntary helpers, and are not a State of municipal library that can make use of official resources.

P.491 Library of Postal History & Philately of the Berlin Postal Museum:

1 Lubecker Strasse, 1000 Berlin 21, (Tel. 030-46081)

Opening hours: Monday 10-18 hrs.

Holdings of journals and books about 30,000

P.492 Philatelic Library

2 Pestalozzi Strasse, 8000 Munich 5, (Tel. 12/8464)

Opening hours: Monday 0800-1200

Tuesday 1200-1900

Thursday/Friday 0800-1530

Annual Report 1979

1. Personnel

a) The library has now reached its planned establishment of 3½ staff:

(1) Head; (2) Assistants; ½ Auxiliary

b) The new half-day arrangements were put into effect on 19.9. No improvement in the precarious overall situation has been brought about by such factors as the considerable rise in loans.

c) Two of the three auxiliaries provided by the Welfare office were withdrawn and not replaced at the beginning and end of the year. As we now have only one auxiliary the personnel situation is now worse than it was a year ago.

2. Organisation changes and their consequences

a) The scheme for external loans begun in Spring 1978 has been working flat out during the past year with 1711 books sent out. This meant making up about 800 packets and parcels, and naturally undoing the same later.

A large number of requests for loans and information could be met by photocopies. This meant preparing and sending out 5526 copies. Most of these went to stamp collectors in the German Philatelists' Society.

b) The precipitate introduction of the EVD(?) in July 1978 brought considerable problems, not all of which have been solved to date, mainly because no staff are available to carry out all the extra work.

- i. We could no longer all the labels in the books
- ii. Errors in input, corrections for 1978 and supplements for 1979 have not been dealt with by the EVD yet.
- iii. We prepared a catalogue of the new intake for last year, but it has not yet been inserted into the EVD.

It was particularly tragic that the introduction of the EVD rendered the existing catalogue of some 2,400 titles completely useless. It will have to be re-done and c.1500 titles have already been dealt with. It was not necessary to re-label them.

The introduction of the EVD has, so far, meant only a great deal of extra work for the Philatelic Library, without the corresponding extra staff being made available to do it.

3. Publicity

On 28.4 I gave a paper at the "5th Soest Colloquium" of the German Philatelists Society on the subject of "Periodical Documentation – its Production and Use". At the same time, contact was made with various societies and the Federal Literature Group.

This personal visit did not give scope for any deliberate attempt at publicity.

4. Education and Training

a) 3 girl assistants worked in the library for three weeks as part of their training. They were entrusted with the most important tasks, but more especially with the correspondence and external loans.

b) Subject Group 1 was informed as to important literature for libraries.

5. Important Events, Developments, Operations

a) The exorbitant rate of rise in use brought the library to the edge of a breakdown. On the one hand the users were making steadily increasing demands, but on the other the workload within the library could only be reduced to a slight extent.

The death of George T. Turner on 14.8.1979 in the U.S.A. and the auctioning off of his library (the largest in existence) leaves the Philatelic Section of the city Library as the second largest philatelic library in the world. It is also the largest one open to the public, since the still bigger library of the Collectors Club in New York is really only available to members. What this means in respect to holdings and service deserves another mention.

b) Some 650 items were added to stock to bring the total up to 24,205. An exact figure cannot be given, as only monographs could be catalogued.

The increasing national and international importance of the library is also reflected in the acquisition of 2 German and 7 foreign journals, total holdings 269. During the past year auction catalogues were newly obtained from 28 firms at home and abroad, total holdings 112.

c) For practically the first time in the history of the library sufficient funds for book purchase were available. As a result, 285 books were bought as well as various journals. 168 individual bills for books and 52 for journals – from many countries – were paid at a cost of 9,376.73DM.

Gifts continue to fall off- from German authors and publishers as well.

It should be borne in mind that every book has to be ordered individually from the author or publisher. This meant sending 376 letters to many countries.

The publications of the Working Parties of the German Philatelists Society were received at irregular intervals, and bound by years. The Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History also let us have free copies of the works they funded.

d) Conclusion – in spite of the abrupt rise in loans, cataloguing went ahead according to plan. All incoming new books were catalogued right away and shown in the Library catalogue. It has not yet been possible to give title entries for the old stock, the journals and the catalogues.

Books catalogued	446
Of these	186	were in German
	163	were in English
	32	were in French
	23	were in Italian
	11	were in Danish
	31	were in 9 other languages
	260
Cross references	74
Subject catalogue	1,013
Keyword catalogue	862
Relabelling	c.1500

A total of 13,460 cards were filed.

e) Care of books; after the book repair station had been set up and staffed (half-time), the additional work caused by the EVD could be taken up again. More conservation work will be needed in the future because some of our rare, even unique, items are in poor condition.

External loans caused a great deal of work: there were at least 3 parcels in and out every working day.

f) Loans – the figures for 1979 are very much above those for the previous year. A further rise must be expected.

	1978	1979	Increase
Registered readers	1,018	2,471	+242%
User of reading room	9,436	10,863	+ 15%

On the spot loans	9,389	12,184	+ 29.7%
External loans	587	1,711	+291%
Total loans	22,057	30,144	+ 36.6%
Photocopies (total)	20,530	35,800

7. Brief Summary

A considerable increase in loans led to the best figures for usage since the library was founded. Because of this and the extra work caused by the EVD, very little progress has been made with cataloguing the old stock. The new intake of monographs was catalogued on receipt and entries appeared in the library catalogue in the shortest possible time.

The library suffers from a permanent staff shortage.

I took over as head of the Philatelic Library on 10.3.1969. To give an idea of my activity in this post, I may quote the following figures:

	1969	1979
Users of reading room	1,921	10,863	+565%
On the spot loans	3,653	12,184	+333%
Total loans	5,061	30,144	+595%
Registered readers	315	2,471	+784%
Personal enquiries	681	c.6,300	+925%
Books added	171	653	+381%
Photocopies	-	35,800
Book fund	DM2,000	DM35,800
Staff:

2 Full-time; 3 part-time

– one of whom is paid for by the German Philatelists Society

Otto Gleixner

END

Dr. Fritz Haubner

North German Postal District in the Mirror of Literature

[Norddeutscher Postbezirk im Spiegel der Literatur]

Germany

(Notes)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

NORTH GERMAN POSTAL DISTRICT IN THE MIRROR OF LITERATURE

END

EDITOR'S PREFACE

After the bibliographies on Brunswick and Hanover, for which their author, Dr. Fritz Haubner, has already been awarded the 1986 Sieger Prize, he has now produced a new work:-

The North German Postal District,
Alsace-Lorraine and Field Post 1870/71

The entire literature in these fields has been surveyed with extraordinary thoroughness and indexed concisely and pertinently. This work gives the researcher a rapid means of locating the literature he needs.

We thank Dr. Fritz Haubner for this detailed bibliography which makes a detailed survey of the literature available to our members and friends for the first time.

Thanks are also due to those members of the Section who have readily made interesting items from their own collections available to illustrate this book. This has enabled the theory to be illustrated by relevant material in an almost ideal manner.

We need this book – it will be the key to new and valuable findings for other people than research collectors!

Heinrich Lahrman

Chairman of the North German Postal District Section

CONTENTS

Page

Preface	3
A. History of the postal service	4-8
B. Post administration:
a) North German postal district	9-17
b) Alsace-Lorraine	18-23
C. Bibliographies	24-25
D. Standard works (catalogues, etc.)	26-29
E. Special handbooks	30-36
F. Literature with different content:
a) North German postal district	37-43
b) Alsace-Lorraine	44-48
G. Stamps:
I: Generalities on postage stamps
a) North German postal district	49-52
b) Alsace-Lorraine	52-56
II: Individual stamps
a) North German postal district	57-64
b) Alsace-Lorraine	65-68
III: Stamp forgeries	69-71
H. Entires (“pasted over”)	72-77
I. Trials, reprints and new issues	78-81
K. Date-stamps(Postmarks) and other cancellations:
a) North German postal district	82-87
b) Alsace-Lorraine	88-95
L. Special cancellations(postmarks):
I: Horseshoe cancellations(postmarks)	96-97
II: Post-paid cancellations(postmarks)	98-101
M. Cancellations used later and used again	102-108
N. Forged cancellations	109-111
O. Field post	112-117
P. Postcards	118-125
Appendix:
Abbreviations for abstracts of philatelic literature	126-129
Author index	130-139

PREFACE

This bibliography, which covers some 300 authors and 600 publications (50 in French) is an attempt to bring together as far as possible all the literature that has appeared to date on the subject of "The North-German Postal District".

The bibliography is arranged chronologically and differs from similar works in that every title has a brief abstract of its contents, as well as the details of author and source. The work makes no claim as to entire completeness, but should afford a more detailed survey of the numerous and varied publications, and serve as a basis and aid for further researches. When the author of an item is recorded as not known, it is often simply a short contribution or note from the editor of the periodical concerned. In general it should be noted that terminology and incomplete sentences, and the style and spelling of the older items, have usually been copied from the original.

A large part of the publications relate to Alsace-Lorraine. Since this is not always subsumed under "North German Postal District", the use of the special heading "Alsace-Lorraine" is justified.

Finally, I must not omit to thank my colleagues of the North German Postal District Group for their friendly support, and also the Director and staff of the Philatelic Library in Munich for all the trouble they took to get the mass of material.

The work was closed at 1st April 1986.

Dr. Fritz Haubuer

Research and Literature
[Forschung und Literatur]
7th Soester Gespräche, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, 1985,
(Notes)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

RESEARCH AND LITERATURE

MINUTES

7. SOEST SYMPOSIUM
17-19 May 1985 in the Kolping Rooms, Soest 4770

Committee: Emil W. Meures, Dusseldorf
Gerhart Hüttl, Leverkusen
Robert Höhn, Cologne

About 75 active societies were represented at the 7th Soest Colloquium, the guests including chairmen and presidents of societies, Federal inspectors and authors of philatelic works.

1. Meeting of Section Heads

On Friday, 17th May 1985, there was a meeting of the Science & Literature section heads. Results:

- a) leaders reported on the situation in the provincial societies
- b) current topics were discussed
- c) a working party was set up, to meet in Soest on 5/6th July 1985

The next section leaders' meeting will be 22/24th November 1985 in the Hause Hotel, Soest.

2. Lectures and Lecturers

After a welcome from the director of the Kolping Rooms, Dr. Gunter Boecken, the chairman of the Soest Philatelic Club, Franz K. Linduer, the Vice-President of the BDPh, Emil w. Meures, Dusseldorf, and the Mayor of Soest, Helmut Busmann, the following people delivered lectures:

- a) Gerhard Hüttl:
Society research – much derided and much praised – a balance sheet
- b) Reiner Wyszomirski:
Modern history from the philatelic point of view using the example of West Berlin.

- c) Gerhard Binder:
Modern philately from the standpoint of a theme collector
- d) Hans Findeisen:
Modern philately – also in danger of forgeries
- e) Dr. Walter Möbs:
What we expect from the Research & Literature Section

The lectures secured the hearty approval of the participants and all gave rise to a subsequent discussion.

3. Meetings in Working Circles

Discussion took place in working circles for the first time at the Soest Colloquium. The following working circles were set up:

- a) State collections – Rolf Ritter
- b) Special viewpoints – Prof. Dr. Hans-Jeachim Anderson
- c) Theme philately – Gerhard Binder

4. Results from Working Circles

The results from these working circles were presented on Sunday morning and then discussed by the full meeting.

a) Working circle on State Collections:

After the report on the discussion had been presented, the following conclusions were reached:

- i. The question of whether to send a deputation to the BDPH Research section will be discussed again at the Baden-Baden meeting.
- ii. The recommendation to hold the Soest Colloquia every two years is impracticable. A three-yearly meeting should be retained.
- iii. The information of the Research Section should appear twice a year in future and be sent to only two people in each working party.
- iv. The distribution of the Working Party circulars gave rise to vigorous controversy. The Circle meeting in Soest on 5/6 July is empowered to put forward recommendations.
- v. Participants welcomed the idea of making research collections available on microfilm in future. Suggestions for doing this are wanted.
- vi. Participants were surprised to learn that most people hear about literature first via the DBZ. Even those involved in the production and distribution of literature would have liked to know about this earlier.

The point rating system for the heading “own research, etc”, at exhibitions was deplored. Participants were of the opinion that points redistribution would be better for the fields of research and literature.

b) Special Viewpoints

- i. The term “special viewpoints” must obviously be limited to State Collections. A special viewpoint collection is one which to a large extent goes beyond postal undertakings/postal authorities.
- ii. The problem of finding qualified testers for the field of special viewpoints could not be solved. Testing is currently based entirely on the Michel numbers.
- iii. Cancellations designated as in “Anderson” – this aroused vigorous dissent in some quarters. However no scheme was put forward which would produce the same result, namely a uniform language throughout philately. Definitions used by the Federal Post are based on totally different criteria and suppositions from those used in philately.
- iv. The format of the titled pages of exhibition catalogues need drastic improvement. Dr. Anderson expressed himself as willing to suggest a pattern of how a title page should appear. The aim is to ensure that these catalogues can be located in the archives at a later date.
- v. One basic problem was stated to be; what constitutes a source? Even a philatelic cover can be a historical source when no relevant decree or the like is available. Suitable conclusions may be drawn from original sources, even if apparently contradicted by other sources.

c) Theme Philately

- i. The working party on theme philately was opposed to representation in the Research section.
- ii. It was stated that many circulars needed improvement. In particular, research contents must be clearly differentiated from internal report.
- iii. The Federal subsidy to circulars must be kept up; a basic contribution should be considered.
- iv. There must be some control of membership. It must be guaranteed in future that all members of a working party of the BDPh are also members of this society.
- v. The points rating system at exhibitions needs general improvement, e.g. by rearrangement (especially for thematic exhibits). Exhibition techniques should be discussed with the Society people.

Because of the detailed and intensive discussions, Herr Meures’s paper could not be given for lack of time. However it will be included in the “working log” to be issued very shortly by the Research Section.

Work in small groups has proved valuable. It showed once more that when knowledgeable participants eager for discussion take part in such meetings, there are likely to be many more contributions, proposals and ideas.

Only this made it possible to deal with so many subjects and problems during the final session on Sunday morning.

We must not fail to mention that there was an agreeable ladies’ programme, a small but select exhibition with interesting items from the period since 1945, special cancellations and printed-matter programmes, an exhibition catalogue and a quantity of literature, for loan as well as in glass cases.

The fact that the Kolping Rooms made it possible “to meet, eat, discuss, enjoy and sleep” – all under one roof, certainly added to the success of this meeting. And those who did not have the opportunity to take part personally in the 7th Soest Colloquium can still get a sight of it by watching the video film taken by Wilhelm van Loo.

Stop Press: It has been decided the next (8th) Soest Colloquium will take place three years from now.

Afterword

The 7th Soest Colloquium, which took place from 17/19th May 1985, is now over. However its contents do not belong only to the past, since it produced results for the future, passed stimulating hints to other societies and considered and solved the problems that arose. Philatelically speaking this meeting was a total success.

It is thus my especial task to express my warmest thanks to the city of Soest and its mayor, Helmut Busmann. Although he had a full calendar related to the Soest Border Day, he did not fail to greet the delegates personally. He mentioned the special position of research and literature, and stated that philately is now more than just a hobby, it is a duty!

My thanks must also go to Herr Dr. Gunther Baecken, the director of the Kolping Rooms, and his colleagues, who not only made available all the space we needed, but were always ready to help with advice and action in a most exemplary manner.

The speakers also deserve my thanks and acknowledgements for the outstanding way in which their contributions have helped to give the meeting its special tone. Not the least of my pleasure has been the lively way in which people took part in the discussions, which led to first-class results in spite of the restricted time.

My personal thanks are due to Dr. Wilhelm van Loo, who covered the Conference for three days with the video-camera and has already produced an outstanding record in colour and sound.

Praise for outstanding and distinguished work and organisation must go to the Soest Philatelic Club, many anonymous helpers and their wives and to my own co-workers.

The Soest Colloquia have proved to be a milestone in the field of philatelic research and literature.

Initial Lecture

Society Research – Much Derided and Much Praised – a Balance Sheet

Before I joined the Society's Research Section more than 12 years ago, I had already formulated clear ideas of what was necessary and desirable.

I had had plenty of opportunity to do this, partly as Chairman of one of the bigger Federal societies, whose members were split into about 50 working parties, and partly as Chairman of a working Party with about 500 members in 17 countries of the world. I thus had plenty of practical experience.

I had already had misgivings since the founding of a Research Section was discussed by the Administration of the society from 1947 to 1973 in Krefeld. This in full knowledge of the fact that philately today depends on the activity of the working parties in the fields of research, literature and anti-forgery procedures, and draws its sustenance from them (I do not mean materially, of course).

I put forward my views in a talk at Krefeld under the title “Aims of Philatelic Research”. The problems to be solved within a short time – only three years – were as follows: one-man working is no longer possible.

Organised division of labour took place after 1973.

Financial questions:

From 1970-1973 my predecessors had 6,000DM a year at their disposal, which was hardly enough to cover the costs of printing and posting the announcements. The contribution has now been increased more than tenfold.

Publicity-Recruitment:

By comparison with other sections, there is always room for improvement as regards publicity/exhibitions. Fortunately Herr Octeler has now taken this in hand and I am confident these deficiencies are now made good.

We shelved the following:

Recruiting literature at exhibitions
Purchase of 30 examples of publications

In spite of years of brain-beating, the following requirements from 1973 have still not been properly solved:

Ensuring that home members of Working Parties are also members of the main Society. Some Working Parties have managed this in a spectacular fashion, although a possible considerable loss of membership had to be taken into account. Others only got active in this respect, unfortunately, when we turned off the money tap.

Two striking examples may be quoted in this connection:

1. Herr Engelhardt from Detmold ran his group under the title of “MRA Working Party”, and himself a member of a State society, wrote as follows in his news-sheet:

“Compulsory membership of an umbrella organisation?”

This does not apply to our Working Party. We have absolutely nothing to spare, and are under no obligations to anybody. Members of ours do not need to belong to any other Society.

The BDPh Working Party on rolls of stamps, books of stamps, stamps from machines, chaired by Herr Daniel Cart of Baste, has acted as the agent- by correspondence – for membership of the Society for its own members living in Germany, and has taken into account loss of any members who did not wish to join the Society.

An example of a collector-oriented and reasonably priced offer of ATM covers by Herr Engelhardt at the Hanover Fair, May 85, INFO 3/85, offer only for members, quotations included – cover fronted with 20pf and cancelled automatically:

Total insert for 1 collection DM 3.70

- + costs for 15 covers
- + 1 large white sheet
- + 2 ? ? with machine number 0000
- + 1 ? (not officially issued)

The covers are from 01 and 02 automatic per day x 1x.

Single occasion? for DM 80-- + 5 DM postage.

2. Belgium Working Party, Dr. Rosberg, Berlin:

It had been accepted for years for various reasons that publications would appear in a specialist journal. In 1984 there were complaints from many sides that the Chairman was not answering letters for months, in spite of return postage and numerous reminders. My own letters and enquiries also went unanswered. Hence on 30th November 1984 he was removed from office Chairman and replace by a new one.

On 4th December 1984 came the answer – an extract is quoted: “I founded the new Working Party on Belgium on 1st August 1979 – I merely reported my intention to the Society – affiliation to be Society did not take place since some of our members did not belong to the Society and I claimed no contribution, but existed on donations. Copy of circular 1-9 were sent to the Literature Section (unfortunately Herr Höhn does not agree) – the group was founded by me personally, I was not nominated by anyone, and so not by the Society, and therefore I cannot be deposed by them. I intend to go on leading the Working Party”. End of quotation.

However for years Dr. Rosberg had made no objection to the Society treating him as the Chairman of a Working Party, and sending him the reported from the Science & Literature Sections without charge and post-paid. A sample of really stylish behaviour. Meanwhile we have had to shelve the problem of the archives.

Meanwhile we are struggling in Leverkusen with the mountain of paper left outstanding behind; that still coming in is being dealt with currently and Herr Lindauer here in Soest has taken it under his wing.

Another long-term subject for discussion is still on the table; criteria for accepting Working Parties and how to confirm them.

However, we are still waiting for this to be thrashed out thoroughly at a higher level.

Something else that is still unsatisfactory and in our view inexplicable is the failure to exchange information between Working Parties dealing with similar topics. Many, but unfortunately not yet all, Working Parties use the facilities for interchange of information.

Our attempt of some years ago to fill in this gap centrally by circulating literature could unfortunately not be kept up. We, like you, are fighting on our own. The amount of publications coming in, in recent years, has exceeded the time and effort we have available in Leverkusen, alas. We also got such charming letters as the following: “I have not asked you to send me this batch of circulars, so you can collect it yourself, I shall not send it on any further”!

And now to the intermediate period (6-9 years)

Concentration on lowering costs of printing. We only found a partial solution here. We located, tested and booked a cost-effective printer. About 1/3rd of all Working Parties have used it.

The ideal solution I suggested 12 years ago of having 1 or 2 printers for all working Party publications has not been attained for various reasons. To have a printing unit under the direct control of the Society is not a possibility within any foreseeable time, though it would save an estimated 1 million DM and more on the printing costs.

We have, in fact, a Society publishing section which is very effective, but what I think would be theoretically desirable, the concentration of the output of all the Working Parties in and through this section is regrettably not attainable on an honorary basis.

The problem of recruiting for the Working Parties and cost-free presentations at exhibitions has been solved, however. Publicity materials are presently here in Soest in the Society's archives under the care of Herr Lindauer, and will be distributed and set up from here. Unfortunately, so far not even 50% of the Working Parties have yet made use of this facility: 1 ring binder and 12 exhibition packs along with softener-free packing are available at no charge, in DINAU format.

Long-term problems (over 10 years)

My long-term aims as laid down 12 years ago in Krefeld were as follows: "Reconstruction of the ?? Personal costs to be taken over in part by the Society since many problems, e.g. detection of forgeries, literature, research are of "open interest".

You all know that this was not achieved.

Now for the present state of affairs and the comparison between the beginning in 1973 and things as they are now.

I hope that the balance is at least equal.

Many co-workers and speakers at the Colloquia have helped with work and deed, for which I wish now to convey my heartiest official thanks. Some have trodden on my toes and given their opinions unasked. People are entitled to criticize and I will accept it if justified, but I have no time for constant arguments or to keep on presenting the philosopher's stone. I have tried to keep everything that concerns us well to the fore and have always struggled without compromise for the Society where necessary. I even did this when I had to implement decisions not fully in line with my own opinions.

What should happen now, and what problems are to be solved in the next few years:

1. For me there is no question that the Working Party must be brought under the aegis of the main Society section on Research & Literature. I have more than 100 reports yearly from the Working Party but there are only 52 weekends at most. Organisational problems must, in future, be solved at State level.

The only query is whether a State society will refuse to set up a section on Research & Literature.

2. Require written proof of Society membership for people at home. Perhaps also to secure discounts on Working Party deletions?

3. Finance and purchase of 30 copies: It will be never be possible to cover the rising costs of paper and printing by raising the subscriptions. This is not the business of the State society either, at least not primarily.

Some working Parties have made their publications available to us without charge for quite a period – years in some cases. Amongst them are those from the Rhine-Danube Cancellations Society, the USA/Canada working Party and some from the Ships & Voyages Theme Group. I am glad to have this opportunity of thanking them.

Our future aim must be to use the Society's funds only to meet deficits on the printing of special publications, and thus be in a better position to afford fundamental works. If a local or State society sends 30 copies in to the central point, without charge, there should be at least a little financial help. Time and money have been saved by the Working Party. A new solution can thus be related to the size of the Working Party and also to the level of its yearly contribution.

3. Action against forgeries and to protect collectors: Two interconnected and inter-dependent topics, like research and literature.

The Working Parties should, and indeed must, do more in this direction since only they – apart from the Society checkers – are in a position to act and anticipate. This includes checking the adverts in magazines, auction catalogues, etc. Please draw your members' attention to these things very positively and in writing, and remember to send these pages at least as examples to the Society sections on collector protection and action against forgeries. Only if we all work together shall we manage to stem the tide of roguery.

Some Working Parties are already doing this in exemplary fashion: two may be quoted as representative of them all: Württemberg and KOLNOT.

4. Co-operation and Flow of Information. All sections of the Society are in the same boat, that is a platitude, and all members understand that all problems are more or less interconnected and affect one another, only it has not always been possible, for various reasons, to keep each other informed. I personally am sorry to say I have been going to Society meetings for 12 years, but of the five Working Parties have generally managed to visit only my own, since the afternoon is generally wasted on housekeeping – taking care of reports of meetings, etc. My wish is for the chairmen and representatives of the Society sections to get together for a weekend once a year and exchange their problems and experiences. Thus the Working Parties could carry out the basic work and the sections could get a centralised exchange of information going.

I would like to conclude my report at this point for today. Some of you will certainly ask what is the point, all these topics have been brought up again and again in our news-sheets over the past years. Plenty of people have written to me to say I should stop “whingeing” and give a little more credit - that would be better. However, my experience of more than ten years shows and proves that anything said and written today will be forgotten by about 50% of all readers after 3 months at the latest. This then means we have to go over it all again, to get you who are interested up to the foot of the palm-tree. Since I won't be there, will you who are lovers of coconuts please chuck a few in my direction!

Now please allow me to add a few more personal words.

Always and at every time I have defended the interests of the Society and our own group in word and writing. In recent years there has quite rightly been a demand for new young philatelists to step into leading positions. After the Society's spokesman on research and literature, my friend, Emil W. Meures, had announced his candidature in Baden-Baden up to 1988, the situation arose that he was stepping down in Berlin at the same time as myself.

Since this is neither in our own interest, nor in that of the Society, as regards trouble-free working, I shall stand down in Baden-Baden and no longer be a candidate.

This was not an easy decision to reach, but I can assure you that a newer, younger section leader for research under the outstanding leadership of my friend, Emil W. Meures, can do such good work for the three years that when the spokesman changes the new one will be able to reply on a well-in, well-experienced chairman of the Society section.

Gerhard Hütte

MODERN PHILATELY FROM THE STANDPOINT OF A THEME COLLECTOR

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen!

I would like to divide my talk into three parts:

1. My very personal encounters with modern philately.
2. How does the nature of theme philately relate to modern philately, and
3. What conclusions may we draw for national and theme collection?

Lecture

I am to speak to you today on the topic "What a Working Party expects from the Society section on Research and Literature".

In spring of last year I chanced to hear a discussion between two philatelists, Messrs. Meures and Oeleker on this very topic, which apparently had nothing to do with me. All at once I was asked the question "What does a Working Party expect from the Research Section". After some hesitation I retorted "May my answer be provocative?" Once this had been confirmed, I said "Do the Working Parties really need the Research Section?"

And thus today's subject was born, and I was committed to this lecture. However, I do not want to treat this subject provocatively, despite what you might think from my answer, but to deal dispassionately with the question.

When I began to go more closely into my subject, I soon realised that I would come up against a boundary as soon as I asked the question whether there is any scope for this Section.

In my own profession I am accustomed to have available sources of information and answers, so that people are not operating in the dark.

However, I cannot find anything of that type here, unfortunately. All I have is an “Organisational Chart for the Research Section”, published in the brochure for the 1st Research Conference, 3-5th April 1970. This does answer some questions but is by no means clear and straight-forward. In my opinion, it deals almost entirely in generalities.

Thus, I must start right at the bottom in answering the questions posed in my talk.

Let us start with the collector. He is a member of a Society which belongs to the State federation, which in its turn is a member of the BDPh. Consequently, at the AGM of this society he helps to elect the committee and chairman of his society. At least once a year the Committee must give him a balance sheet and put itself up for re-election. Then, if necessary, any pressure can be exerted on this administration, the Society committee in its turn elects the State Committee at given intervals.

The BDPh Committee is normally elected by the State committees but every society can make its voice heard directly if it so wishes, even though it is not a direct member of the BDPh. This structure thus gives truly democratic conditions. All office holders are open to review, and are chosen or rejected at the appropriate meetings.

Now if our collector friend has begun to specialise, he will eventually feel the need to get together with fellow-specialists for discussions. This gives rise to the nucleus of a Working Party. There are already Working Parties for most special topics.

As in the local societies, special collectors will have exchange days, regional meetings, discussions and general meetings at which the Committee is elected. So far this is all the same as for the local societies. However, there is no upper level organisation of the same sort. There is only the BDPh on the next level. The working parties have almost no influence on its constitution, nor on that of the State societies in which they may have an interest. The ones I am referring to are those for research, literature and possibly forgeries and security for collectors.

Just as a local society can get along more or less badly without membership of its State society and thus of the BDPh, a Working Party can also get by without an umbrella organisation. Why should it need one?

This is a very provocative question. Working Parties certainly have contacts with “neighbours”. I would like to quote the “Prussia” Working Party as an example, as I am active in it. We have friendly contacts with the Working Parties for Schleswig-Holstein, Hanover, and Thurn-und-Taxis. We value these contacts as we are linked to a certain extent by Prussian postal history.

Individual Working Parties naturally focus on different subjects, thus they cannot all be forced into one pattern.

This leads back to the question of whether the present set-up is the optimum, or whether we should stress further contacts and extend them to other domains.

Allow me to answer this now. I will return at the end of my lecture to the question of what form the organisation should take.

Further consideration of my topic now raises the question of what problems I think the Working Parties should deal with, and what should belong to the Society Research Section. Which are the essential points, which are the relationships and the possible areas of overlap?

I would like to stress that in my opinion the Working Parties should come first, and then the Society Research Section.

At the moment we have in the BDPh about 150 Working Parties with the most widely differing range of aims and objectives. Certainly every Working Party has a different aim. However, perhaps we can find a couple for which we can detect likenesses.

We shall now try to work out these likenesses.

I have made a first attempt and am sure and confident that the ensuing discussion will turn up further points that we could take together.

A Working Party is:

- a union of philatelists with special fields of interest

Its aims include:

- promotion of the study of postal history
- research on philately
- supply of information and experience
- ideally, help individual members in building up their own collections
- keeping members informed about forgeries and counterfeits
- action against forgeries
- help with the supply of philatelic materials such as special cancellations, motif stamps, etc.
- support of arbitrators by supplying them with essential scientific information
- making older, out-of-print literature available to members
- putting out news-sheets (circulars) etc., with up-to-date information on new discoveries/research results, forgeries, new special literature
- etc.

On the other hand, I see the role of the Society Research & Literature Sections as being intermediaries between the Society's top brass and the Working Parties. This means they should have the confidence of most of the working Parties and their officers.

Their tasks should be:

- to promote the work of the Working Parties
- the production of model rules
- publicity for the Working Parties, e.g. at philatelic exhibitions
- collection of literature, including foreign literature

Everyone familiar with Literatur-Nachrichten is very grateful to Herr Höhn for it. In my opinion this should not be supplied free to all societies and Working Parties, but should be made available to interested collectors at a special price.

I think that most of the literature given out free never reaches those who would really be interested in it, but just gets overlooked. "You don't value what you haven't paid for!!"

- advice to Working Parties about publications

- financial aid to Working Parties (from the Society's funds), particularly for issuing periodicals (in this case a relationship should be sought and found between the number of members, the scope of publications (apart from purely internal ones) and the regularity of their appearance).

Many collectors would like to be in several Working Parties but cannot on the grounds of cost. Help should be given here, and the watering-can principle should not be involved.

If you have followed my ideas and agree with them or at least agree with most of them, we can reach only the following conclusion:

A Working Party can exist without the Society Research Section. Many societies outside the BDPh do so. But let us be honest; these "freeloaders" or "running-board-riders" profit from the work of the BDPh and its organisation, including its sections, just as collectors who do not belong to any society profit from the work of the BDPh.

From the other point of view – that of the Society sections – a research section without Working Parties is merely a torso. The only logical conclusion is that both sides must get together, work together and feel confidence in one another.

A forum for their common efforts could be the Soest Colloquia in a slightly different form perhaps. These Soest Colloquia must become the "annual congress" of the Working Parties.

What form should the organisation now take?

One possible solution would be for the chairmen of the sections to be nominated by the BDPh Committee, to make sure these chairmen had the confidence of the BDPh. There should then be an advisory body, chosen by the Working Parties and representing them, e.g. an advisory body with 3 members, perhaps one to represent the subject working parties, one for special points of view, and one from the working parties on special places. However, any other composition is also possible, and I will go into this later.

The section chairmen could not put out any "instructions" without the agreement of the advisory body.

An example of a rule reached by agreement occurred at the Ingalstadt meeting. A working group (who was actually entitled to vote?) passed on rules for the conduct of the Working Parties and sent them as a formal proposal to the Society.

I have submitted a proposal which has been widely approved in recent years – though not by an advisory body.

It more and more strikes me as essential that all the work done by groups and societies should receive the confirmation, mutual support and help of the higher ranks. We are all working towards the same end: to make our hobby still more interesting and attractive.

Possibly, more attractive Working Parties and effective co-operation would draw more collectors into the BDPh and its societies. Membership of a Working Party must be desirable and affordable, and an obvious necessity for collectors and philatelists.

I said during this lecture that in conclusion I would once more go into the question of whether another type of organisation would be preferable. Let me say in conclusion:

The Working Parties need the Society Sections on Research and Literature, and they can only be strong if they all work together.

I hope these frank and sometimes critical remarks will have proved stimulating, and that you will take acceptable and realisable suggestions back to your Working Parties.

END

Survey of articles

[Title in original language]

Postmarke, 9th February 1925, Volume 7, Whole number 89, p.39

(Notes)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

SURVEY OF ARTICLES

From now on we shall give in this place every month a short survey of the most important articles published in the world-wide specialist press, arranged by the countries to which the articles refer. This should enable everyone to locate the periodicals containing articles relating to their areas of interest. We have compiled the present survey from all the journals we have received, some 120 in all, and we believe we have covered pretty well all the world's specialist press that has any value for research, with the exception of a few English and American periodicals.

For lack of space we are unable to give the addresses of all the periodicals as well. Reference should be made to the advertising section of our magazine, where numerous adverts for specialist journals will be found. If an address cannot be located there, we will gladly supply it on receipt of the return postage.

END

KOUWENBERG, K.
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part III
[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel III)]
De Postzak, December 1963, Issue 66, pp.57-61

Translated by Wim Dykshoorn, Beach Park, IL for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
October 1996

THE PIONEERS OF DUTCH PHILATELY - PART III.

(Translator's Note: The translation is not literal since the original was a bit flowery and I have tightened it up a bit.)

CORNELIS VAN RINSUM

(See the picture on page 58.)

Van Rinsum is the first among equals of the troika that served in the early days of Dutch Philately.

He was born on the 18th May 1853 in Amsterdam, his mother was of French descent, his father was a stockbroker.

Cornelis was not the easiest of the eight Van Rinsum children. He was shy, difficult to approach and did not have many friends. He contracted an eye disease at an early age and had to wear glasses.

He spent his happiest times with his grandparents where he, far from the noisy, busy family, spent time with his stamps. Van Rinsum had discovered those fascinating little pieces of paper at an early age and never let go of them.

His father decided that he should be trained for the stockbrokerage business, which was a mistake because Van Rinsum had no interest in stocks and bonds. He had but one interest, stamps!

However, he had to obey his father's commands and started the study. His interest in stamps became stronger, his collection grew and his knowledge of philately increased after he discovered philatelic literature in 1867, at the age of 14.

There were four leading philatelic magazines in 1867; Le Timbre Poste, by J. B. Moens in Brussels, Le Timbrophile, by Pierre Mahe in Paris, Das Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, (sic) by Zschiesche & Köder, Leipzig, which ceased publication in April 1867 and in the English language, The Stamp Collector's Magazine, by Alfred Smith in Bath. The Philatelist, by Stafford Smith began publication in December 1866.

It is known that Van Rinsum had a subscription to The Stamp Collector's Magazine but he must have been interested in the French magazines because he was fluent in that language through the teachings of his mother.

Between his studies he began to deal in stamps; friends and relatives are his first customers. Business was good and early 1868 Van Rinsum and his friend Jan Christoffel van Schaik started a stamp business, J. Chr. van Schaik & Co.; Van Rinsum is the Co. Both entrepreneurs are 15 years of age. The business is located in the Egelantiersgracht 502, Amsterdam, the Schaik residence

The first advertisement of the new firm appears in The Stamp Collector's Magazine⁽¹⁾, offering Dutch stamps, amongst them the 50c gold for 11 shillings per dozen. Their profit was not excessive!

That they had to learn a few things about stamps is shown in the "Answers to Correspondents" in subsequent issues of the magazine. Van Rinsum's claim that he has found two rare stamps is refuted by the editor who shows that the 4/4 shilling Mecklenburg-Schwerin "darkbrown" is a chemical forgery and that his Japanese stamp is nothing more than the selvege of the India 1 anna.

In June 1868 the name is changed to: C. van Rinsum & Co. (formerly: J. Chr. van Schaik en Co.), Keizersgracht 216, Amsterdam. After September 1868 van Rinsum deals only under his own name. There are advertisements in The Philatelist⁽²⁾. He does a lot of advertising and business is good.

By the end of 1868 van Rinsum decides to publish a stamp magazine. Just about every other dealer did that, but van Rinsum overlooked the fact that most of those ventures never published more than a few issues, for lack of capital and ignorance of the finer points of philately. Late in 1868 an advertisement appears in The Stamp Collector's Magazine⁽³⁾ and The Philatelist⁽⁴⁾:

THE CONTINENTAL PHILATELIC MAGAZINE

Printed in English. The cheapest magazine for advertising. No. 1, January 1869. Used stamp gratis! Subscription 4/- a year.

This is the first Dutch philatelic magazine, even though it is printed in English. Why it was printed in English is not clear. Perhaps he thought that the market in Holland was not big enough, or he was impressed by the success of The Philatelist.

The first edition of The Continental Philatelic Magazine appeared on 15th January 1869. The promised free stamp was the 1 cent black of 1869! A picture of the title page is shown in the so called "Jubileumboek" of the Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie of 1932 and in "Het Maandblad" of September 1961.

Reviews of the first edition were presented in The Stamp Collector's Magazine and The Philatelist. The Stamp Collector's Magazine writes: "We hope that the first edition of Van Rinsum's publication is not the best. It is too dry, and it presents nothing new. The articles about "The Postage Stamps of Mexico" and "The Postage Stamps of the Dutch East Indies" are nothing but summaries of well known stamps. They are promising a lot, the next issue will have an article by Pemberton, so we assume that future issues will be more interesting"

The Philatelist is less charitable. The editor writes: "A very entertaining publication. Cheap considering the many words of wisdom one finds there and a source of entertainment." The editor presents a few summaries and pokes fun at the grammatical errors and poor writing style of Van Rinsum. "What on earth induces foreigners to fancy they can write English" exclaims the editor.

Indeed van Rinsum's English was childish and had many errors of style, but what does one expect, the author was 15 years old!

Meanwhile van Rinsum published a stamp album. It contained 200 pages with text in four languages. C. van Rinsum's Permanent Stamp Album cost 10 shilling.

The second issue of The Continental Philatelic Magazine is more interesting than the first one, it contains an article by van Rinsum "Later Stamp Forgeries". Part of this is an excerpt of an article by De Rive de Seines from "Le Timbre Poste" with the title "Les faussaires d'aujourd'hui—d'hui ". Van Rinsum cautions against sheets of stamps in the windows of booksellers in Amsterdam who know nothing about stamps. The sheets are entitled "Aux choix, 15 cts la piece". and are distributed by a French stamp dealer, Monsieur CR. Neuilly. They are all forgeries made by Spiro and van Rinsum describes the forgeries.

The editor of "The Stamp Collector's Magazine" compliments Van Rinsum for that article and encourages him to continue the work. The English text is much improved. "The Philatelist" remains silent. Van Rinsum is angry with the editor of that magazine and had not sent him a copy of the second issue. "Le Timbre Poste" and "Le Timbrophile" have until now ignored Van Rinsum's magazine.

Meanwhile Van Rinsum's father got tired of his son's stamp business and shipped him off to Heidelberg to complete his studies. In May 1869 he moves in with a P. Nippold and quietly continues his stamp business.

On April 15 the 3rd issue of the "The Continental Philatelic Magazine" appears. Van Rinsum was upset by the criticism from "The Philatelist" and went on the offense with some comments about the March issue of his competitor:

"We can be brief about this subject. Collectors allow us a few words to the publisher of this magazine. Your magazine is worthless! In our opinion a philatelic magazine should contain articles about philately. We expect that you should pay some attention to your own magazine before you criticize us.

3

Does the article in the March the Brighton Postoffice" have "Puzzles for stampcollectors", The only thing worth reading in

The lead article in the 3rd issue of by E.L. Pemberton, "Boston Forgeries", of Van Rinsum's "Continental Philatelic issue, "Saint Valentine's Day in anything to do with "philately"? is that "philately"? your magazine is the gossip column.

Van Rinsum is a contribution which brought about the demise of Magazine"
(To Be Continued)

END

Georges Brunel
The State of Philately in 1867
[Ce qu'était la Philatélie en 1867]
Yvert, Amiens, France, 1930, 37pp.

Originally published as:

Georges Brunel: La Philatélie en 1867. [Philately in 1867.], L'Écho de la Timbrologie, 15th January 1930, Whole number 817, pp.3-6; 15th March, Whole number 821, pp.288-291. A note in whole number 818 of the 31st January 1930 (La philatelie en 1867, page 77) advises that a reader takes issue with Brunel for his severe criticism of Moens and Hanciau, given their publishing efforts for over a third of a century
{The two parts above cover only the last two thirds of the book. On page 3 of the above, there is a note directing readers to whole number 809 of the magazine, presumably for the earlier part. However, I have checked every page of the numbers from 806 to 816 and found nothing. I also checked the Indexes for both 1929 and 1930 and found only the references to whole numbers 817, 818 and 821.}

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
12th December 2000

THE STATE OF PHILATELY IN 1867

For several years I have enumerated the stamps that have appeared in the course of a year, in L'Écho de la Timbrologie.

At the end of my statistical account of the 1927 issues, published on the 15th January 1928, I announced to its faithful readers that I was preparing a study of the first ages of stamp collecting.

It took me longer than I expected to get my documents together and draw up a fairly complete picture of the state of Timbrophily, as it was then called. I may add that I have known personally almost all of the people mentioned in this study.

It was about 1860 that a real mania for collecting began to spread. At first it was young people, schoolboys, who took an interest in stamps. To them, these little pictures, coming from sometimes very distant countries, were extraordinary curiosities. The Cape, Victoria, Brazil, Van Diemen's Land, were all rare phenomena, and the taste for collecting these stamps manifested itself everywhere. It attracted well-known people; these were numismatists, general collectors, and collectors of stamped papers who took to philately, as can be seen from the series of great collectors which we shall try to outline in these notes.

From 1860 onwards there was a stamp bourse at the Tuileries, at Midday on Thursdays and Sundays, near the statue of Diana and later on behind the merry-go-round. This bourse became at once famous and accepted, for in the Petit Journal of the 23rd September 1863 the famous columnist Timotée Trimm devoted a Premier-Paris to it:

Fashion is not always silly.

The current folly is not bound to be absurd. Popular crazes always have a lesson and a reason.

The observer should look for these.

For several years there has been a rage for collecting postage stamps.

Not just the stamps of France; but especially those of more distant countries.

This little fantasy of a great nation began as a children's pastime.

The first open-air stamp bourse was held at the Tuileries at Little Provence.

Trading, sale and exchange took place.

This charming girl, who would never voluntarily have bothered with geography, was trying to swap a Haiti stamp for one from the East Indies.

The entire world, with its arms, mottoes, the portraits of its various sovereigns, became an instructive plaything in the form of postage stamps, which can teach adults about the world better than a professor from the Sorbonne.

The Tuileries are the favourite meeting place of rich children.

Not during the Summer – they have their fathers' country houses, but in winter, then the public park is a universal blessing.

Thus, there were the two daughter of the Marquise de M..., who had some American stamps.

And the little son of Lieutenant General N..., who was annoying his pals with stamps from Greenland.

There was an outburst of jealous fury amongst the young dealers.

Each wanted a rare stamp from his parents.

They received them ..., they promised to behave, and the parents made it a question of pride and sympathy.
To please these demanding young people, they walk about everywhere.
They incensed public officials to get envelopes with rare stamps on. They fussed round bankers, ministers, Heads of Departments, the Postmaster especially, who have used envelopes to dispose of.
Society ladies who would never have agreed to ask any authority for anything, would lower themselves to get an envelope from Batavia or the Siberian provinces.
The children's craze won over their fathers. Collecting stamps was found to be quite clever.
Every family took to it with rage, with frenzy, at any price.
Up to 100 francs was paid for certain stamps.
Finally, speculation took over and the stamp trade was organised.
Ordinary used stamps had already had a vogue because of a bizarre will.
It is said that an Englishman left an income of fifty thousand pounds to the first young lady to give his solicitor a million old postage stamps from all nations.
They were sought for everywhere: in Belgium, in Germany, in France.
They cost 25 centimes a thousand in Paris. And enough were not found.
Today, old French stamps are without value.
The first young lady to arrive would have got the inheritance.
Speculation in postage stamps thus took hold of the public.
Albums were made – some were sold for up to a thousand francs, if complete and well presented.
Every great family wanted the honour of placing on a table in its reception room a bound collection of these costly emblems, embellished with its coat of arms.
A young man, a student originally from Perche who had fallen out with his family, took up this trade.
He became the supplier to the Susses, the Bahots, the Giroux. He was really good at it.
He could get you a Kamchatka stamp in eight days, a Javanese in six weeks, a Chinese in two months, and any country wanted, without exception.
The extent of his connections was amazing. People marvelled at the richness of his stock -till one fine day - the secret of his opulence was revealed.
Our young man sent the following prepaid letter to a merchant every week: I want to spend a million on the goods of your country. Will you be my agent. Please answer.
He got replies from all over. The student never bought anything, but he got replies.
And the desired stamp was on the letter sent back to him.
Today, the stamp album has become a classic. It is sold with notices signed by the most learned members of our Institute.
It is not a plaything, it is a dictionary.

Then, the Stamp Bourse was mentioned again in 1865 in a celebrated piece La Famille Benoîton⁽¹⁾, by Victorien Sardou, which was presented at the Gymnase Theatre. This gives an amusing picture of these meetings of Timbromanes⁽²⁾:

Fanfan⁽³⁾: Yes, I've got to get down to the Bourse right away.
Champrose (astounded): He's going to the Bourse; (to Fanfan) What Bourse?
Fanfan (pointing to the window): Look, in the garden. You know perfectly well, there along with the waffle seller! It's the little Bourse.
Champrose: Bourse for what?

Fanfan: Postage stamps of course! (aside) Doesn't he know anything? You don't know anything! Little Musot, big Lassalle and me, we've organised this at the Tuileries.

Champrose (astounded): What a lad! (to Fanfan) And is that what you do? Little Musot, big ...

Fanfan: At two o'clock, and we do the Bourse ... You know ... do you know? Because we've got stamps from all over the place, because of our daddies! Now, the three of us know all the little speculators (laughing) and we fix them!

Champrose: Go on

Fanfan (standing up and pulling him to the front of the stage): I'm going to have a lovely month, you'll see, because of the American business.

Champrose (interested): Oh, OK, how's that?

Fanfan: Papa told me one day when he came home - Fanfan, the Federals⁽⁴⁾ have won... Get going. I went to the bourse, I bought all the Southern stamps there were, instead of my English and Italians, Bibi Lassalle, who didn't know, said Is he cracked, this Fanfan, cornering all the Southern stamps like that But at half-past o'clock he really did his nut, when he knew there would be no more Southern stamps. I sold mine at a profit. Weren't the others mad! Oh, they're not a match for me!

Notes:

- (1) A famous play, one expression from which is still current in the language: Madame Benoiton has gone out. In fact, she is mentioned but never appears on stage.
- (2) This was the term generally used at this time
- (3) He is the Benoiton's son
- (4) Allusion to the American Civil War, which finished in 1865 with the defeat of the South.

The Stamp Bourse in the Tuileries Gardens, about 1860.

In 1864, The Stamp Bourse was taking place every Thursday and Sunday. Three to four hundred people turned up, and even at that date schoolboys were not the bulk of the clientele.

However, these crowds annoyed the authorities. The stamp people were hunted out, chased off, and getting tired of the bother, they met in the Luxembourg Gardens. However, the authorities there were not willing to put up with the philatelists either. Finally, they found Marigny Square, off the Champs-Élysées, near the Guiguols, and since that period the Bourse has had no more incarnations.

The main periodicals did not disdain to deal with philately, since in 1842 one could read in The Times, the weighty English daily, A young lady wishes to cover the walls of her dressing room with used postage stamps, and her numerous friends have encouraged her in this idea, and she has managed to collect 16,000. But it is not enough. She would be grateful to anyone kind enough to send her all they can find. Send to M. Buttler, glover, Leadenhall St., London.

And the comic paper Punch (which still appears as I have the latest number in my hands at the moment) made fun at about the same time of ladies who hunted for penny stamps to decorate their cushions and furniture.

The Potiquet catalogue appeared in June 1861, quickly followed by the Lallier stamp manual, and in 1864 by the Maury catalogue. In July 1864 came the first large-size issue of Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, and on 15th November of the same year, the famous Timbrophile from Pierre Mahé.

On the 15th November 1864 the term philately was created by Herpin, in an unsigned article published in the Collectionneur, and from then on Maury took the side of the new word, though he was covered in sarcasm by Mahé father and son, [Dr.] Magnus and plenty of others. Philately has now made its way in the world, it has been adopted in all countries and appears in all the dictionaries (we shall come back to Herpin further on and will give an extract from this celebrated article).

The first stamp album appeared in June 1862, from Lallier.

From 1865 on, Dr. Magnus (Dr. Legrand) set out the principles of philatelic science in a very full series of articles on watermarks (Timbrophile, number 6). Even in this distant epoch of philately, essays were being collected and the main collections (Saulcy, Donatis, Herpin, Primoli, Berger-Levrault) had large numbers of them.

What were the collections worth? We have found an index: in 1864, there was an advertisement for a very fine collection of postage stamps, consisting of 1,177 stamps in a Lallier album for 1,200 francs, from Girardot, stationer, 174 Rue St. Jacques. This was quite a sum for the period, particularly for postage stamps which were neither very fashionable nor very much appreciated.

Finally, there were already stamp sales; as for instance on Monday, 29th December 1865, at one o'clock, postage stamps belonging to M. E... [Josef W. Elb] were sold in Room 10 of the Hotel de la Rue Drouot. Not a very large collection as he has not bothered with it for some time, it produced 800-1,000 francs. Posters announcing the event attracted all the merchants of Paris and the bidding went well above what we had expected, to the great astonishment of the idlers and bric-a-brac merchants, who could not get over seeing gold given for a few little squares of paper that the auctioneer carried about on a huge plate. The honours of the session went to the essays and proofs of M. Riesler, which were knocked down at a relatively high price.

By 1867 there were large numbers of collectors of postage stamps. We have been led to believe that during the first ages of philately, only young people went in for postage stamps, as a childish pastime: we have read as much many times. What a mistake! Right off the cuff, here is a gallery of eminent collectors, with their social situations added: this will show how old the passion for postage stamps really is.

Herpin was a numismatist, who rapidly took to stamp collecting, and since he joined a good literary style to his qualities of erudition, he published well-documented articles in the Collectionneur, but he is famous above all for creating the word philately in 1864, despite the bawling of those who stuck by the barbarous and hybrid word timbrology. Philately is the word now adopted by the entire world. What a disgrace for those still alive who have seen how infantile their stubbornness was. Herpin collected unused stamps. He sold his collection to Philbrick, an English lawyer, for 10,000 francs, despite admitting that it was inferior to that of his English colleague.

Here is Herpin's celebrated article, entitled Baptism:

Isn't it strange that for six or seven years we have been studying and researching postage stamps but have never thought of giving a name to this attractive occupation which brings pleasure to some and fortune to others. It is impossible to look on the word timbromanie as an acceptable term. This is really a slightly derogatory term which certain people, trying to be funny, pronounce with a sarcastic tone, though quite innocently. This is why it has been used to date, for want of a better, but it is time to banish it ignominiously, and question its very existence... Everyone has noticed that most new words have their roots in ancient words and that neologisms borrow their elements from Latin and Greek, so we shall try an excursion into one of these two languages.

Since numismatics derived its name from the Latin numisma (medal) and sphragistics (study of seals) from the Greek σφραγίζω (I seal), we may in view of the richness of this language, suggest PHILATÉLIE as expressing the idea that the odious term stigmatised above seeks to ridicule.

Philately is formed from two Greek words: φίλος (friend, lover) and ατελές (frank, free, when speaking of an object), the noun being ατελεία. Thus philately means love of studying everything connected with prepayment.

Now since the word has been released and the newly-born has seen the light, we will ask our young and charming lady readers to be its godmothers. What!, you will say, talking Greek to young ladies? This is a queer way of pleasing them and asking for their patronage. Who knows if the very strangeness of the request will not be its best recommendation. From whom can a new idea, a new word, ask help and protection if not from young ladies who like novelties in everything, and whose generosity is rarely implored in vain by the weak. Moreover, in the name of Greek, we shall not use any of the silly affectations of Vadius or of our Molière. Thus without impudence, but also without embarrassment we ask the approval of the most beautiful half of the human race, sure that if we obtain it, we shall have that of the other half.

Dr. Legrand is the founder of philatelic science: he in fact was the first to study watermarks and perforations, thus permitting a rational classification of issues. To measure perforations, he invented a little device whose success has been unabated: the Odontomètre (Perforation gauge). Alas, inventors and precursors tend to be forgotten or unrecognised. I have never seen one of these devices carrying the inscription invented by Dr. Legrand, though that would only be fair!

Under the transparent pseudonym of Dr. Magnus, Dr. Legrand wrote a large number of articles of the greatest interest. He owned a very fine philatelic library, and founded the still existing Société Française de Timbrologie, along with Baron Arthur de Rothschild.

But he had one whim, he hung on to his word timbrologie. I have had epic discussions with him on the subject. One day, I set him a poser: Good heavens, I have forgotten my Greek, but told me but I have a dictionary upstairs. I climbed upstairs, and found a venerable old book, bound in powdery full calf. I told him We shall laugh and I'm going to prove to you that from the analysis point of view you ought to say philately. I will not repeat my arguments (you can read them above in the article by Herpin), but he refused to give in, on the pretext that in Greek the expressions Free, Free of charge cannot be applied to correspondence! How does he know? He knew that the Greeks wrote often and at length, and that couriers carried the messages. There must have been some which were not paid for, and the addressee had to meet the cost of the journey, and others which were sent prepaid, hence the need for putting a mark on the tablet? My reasoning had no success with the good doctor, and as I am the same, we simply looked at one another and burst out laughing; that was really something!

Dr. Legrand was a likeable and courteous man with a deep love of timbrologie; when he became too old, he sold his collection for a very nice sum and devoted himself to his library. He died in June 1892 [actually 1912] at the age of 92 years.

Count Durrieu, then treasurer-paymaster general at Strasburg and later a member of the Institute, put together one of the finest collections in France. He died quite recently.

Finally, we must give some space to the king of collectors past and present, Philippe de Ferrari.

He was one of the outstanding lovers of stamps, and at the same time an eccentric par excellence. He belonged to an old Genoese family. The Marquis de Ferrari, a major financier and director of railway companies, lived in France from the beginning of 19th century. On leaving his native city, he made a gift of forty millions to improve the port of Genoa and so the King made him Prince of Lucedio and the Pope made him Duke of Galliera⁽¹⁾.

He married the daughter of the Marquis de Brignollo, former ambassador of Sardinia to France, born in 1812. In 1848 she brought into the world a feeble being who was held at the baptismal font by Louis Philippe, King of the French. This was a peculiar omen: a child of adultery, his godfather was the most morose and philistine sovereign of history. When a pupil at the Lycée Louis-le-Grand, he developed a liking for stamps. His mother had inherited a trifling 110 millions from her husband and was herself rich to the tune of a hundred million, and so could indulge her son's passion without danger. She often accompanied the young man to the Rue des Canettes, to a merchant who has since become famous: Pierre Mahé. This was about 1864.

Obviously the relationship was a cordial one, since in 1874 the son of the Duchess of Galliera named Mahé as the curator of his collections, with the agreeable task of building them up. I don't think anyone has landed such a patronage since the days of Augustus! This collaboration resulted in a fabulous collection, the sale of which at the Hôtel Drouot after the war produced twenty-six million francs.

- (1) Galliera! This name will mean nothing to many readers. Allow me to point out a little-known historical fact. After the battle of Lutzen (2nd May 1813), Napoleon wished to give his stepson Eugène de Beauharnais (already Viceroy of Italy) a new proof of his affection, and so issued the following decree (14th May): Wishing to give a striking and signal proof of our attachment to our well-loved (adoptive) son, Prince Eugène Napoleon, for the constant proofs of attachment he has given us and the services he has rendered us, we decree as follows: Our palace at Bologna and the land of Galliera belonging to our private domain are elevated to the status of a Duchy and this Duchy of Galliera is given in full ownership to the Princess of Bologna, Joséphine-Maximilienne-Napoleone, elder daughter of the Prince Viceroy. This Josephine went on to marry King Oscar and become Queen of Sweden. Philippe de Ferrari, Duke of Galliera, closed the history of this Duchy in a philatelic manner quite uncommon, as even a historian must agree.

How did Ferrari buy? Was it with discernment? We may doubt it from his way of going on. He arrived at a dealers (either Mahé or Robert generally). They would rush to him (with good reason) – Good-day, Mr. Philippe, they would say, for he did not like his title ever to be used (he had his reasons), they would show him a portfolio, expecting him to examine some rare specimens. Well he didn't want to know. With a trembling hand, he would slip all the stamps out of their holders, turn the pages, would cull all the stamps, and heap them all up without regard, and when he thought the heap was big enough he would say How much is that? But M. Philippe they would say we shall have to reckon them up!.

No point, tell me how much and at the same time he would start pulling 10-20-50 and 100 franc gold pieces out of his pockets, and make a heap of them as well, and when he thought the heap of gold equalled in value the heap of stamps, he would say There you are, then he began picking up the stamps in handfuls and stuffing them into the pockets of his overcoat and trousers without bothering about creasing or damaging them. He didn't care whether he got a strip of Mauritius or a view of Sydney. His operation finished, he left without a word!

Once he got home, he threw everything into a cardboard box and left it to his assistant to sort his acquisitions out. He was told about all the rare items: they were forged for him if necessary. He made a show of being concerned: How much – that's a lot – that's dear, sir, that's dear he would say a dozen times, but he would take the item, pay for it and sneak out like a thief or a schoolboy afraid of being scolded by his grandmother because he had spent the money intended for his savings bank on buying his fancies. This was the mentality of the famous great collector.

As for the physiological aspect of the individual, think of an almost beardless man, with scanty hair, pale eyes, avoiding eye contact, with a dull, expressionless face, going step by step along the pavement, wearing espadrilles over which fell the frayed bottoms of a shabby pair of trousers. He was wrapped in an old greenish overcoat, and his head was covered according to the season, with a Swiss admiral's cap or a Catalan beret. Under his arm he lugged an umbrella covered in a cheap cotton fabric, a bazaar article costing about 2fr.95.

Let us follow him: he walks uncertainly; he stops, hesitates about which way he ought to go, and when it comes to crossing the road he never knows whether to step off on the left foot or the right. Then he stands still, looking vague, his head slightly backwards, isolated in the midst of the bustle of Paris. Obviously, to a man of science he has all the characteristics of psychic cerebropathy; perhaps even a polyneuritic, in any event he exhibits the well-known signs of mental psychosis: he is obviously paramimetic and moreover he carries the signs, the stigmata of sexual perversion. Ecce Homo!

This description is not painted too black. I have seen him, I have studied him, I have judged him. He was simply cracked up as an eminent amateur by those who were living off him, and it was an accepted thing for them and the whole of the Press to praise the philatelic science of this good M. Philippe. What, this neurotic, always absent-minded, seeming to waken out of a nightmare when anyone spoke to him, with a flagrant disassociation between his ideas and his actions; what, this lunatic, dealing, buying, paying without seeming to know what he was doing, apparently only acting by reflex, could he have built up this fabulous collection? Never! There was somebody in the wings, and above all there were the three hundred thousand francs his mother gave him every month for his amusements.

He lived in the magnificent town mansion in the Rue de Varenne, with its gardens extending along the Rue Vaneau, which had belonged to the Prince of Monaco, where Cavaignac had lived in 1848, and which the Duchess of Galliera had placed at the disposal of the Comte de Paris.

Again, we may give a few historical facts. It was in this house that Princess Amélia of Orleans married the Prince of Braganza, the future King of Portugal, but this was done with such show, such ostentation, and the royalists were so insolent that the Government had to take severe action. A few days later, the law exiling princes who had reigned in France was in force.

The proud Duchess took fright this time; she broke off with all the princes and all the personages who had been dreaming of a new restoration, and even cancelled the legacy she had destined for Princess Amélia.

She then devoted herself to philanthropic work, and poured out money to build the museum of art behind the Trocadero that carries her name. At Clamart she built an orphanage, and there were many other liberalities which meant that when she died in 1888 her fabulous fortune had been reduced to some ten million, which she left to the Empress Victoria of Germany (widow of Frederick III). Her mansion in the Rue de Varenne was given to Austria-Hungary as a residence for their ambassador. This was a tactful way of recognising and returning the hospitality she had received in France.

She reserved a detached residence for her son on the first floor, above the stables, and it was there Ferrari lived. It must be said that he expressed profound contempt for his mother's fortune, and for a while even tried to live by means of his technical knowledge, for he was a student of the Ecole Centrale but he was too unsettled a character to do anything with the little he knew: he gave lessons as a private tutor and was even for a brief period an unpaid teacher at the Ecole des Sciences Politiques, but all that was at the beginning of his adult life.

He lived as if he were bearing the remorse for a whole family, and to give an idea of his mentality, we may say that he did not attend the funeral of the mother who had been so kind and generous to him. Was this in the first place a protest against the presence as leading mourners of the ambassadors of Germany and Austria, or because he could not pardon his illegitimate birth? However that may be, he broke off with his family and arranged to be adopted by an Austrian officer, the Count de la Rénatière von Kriegsfeld. He thus acquired Austrian nationality. He died during the war, on 20th May 1917 at Lausanne, bequeathing his collection to the Berlin Museum! Happily, a large part of his collection had been sequestered on the outbreak of war.

How could an intelligent patriot such as Pierre Mahé, who was at his side all his life, have failed to instil into him a love for France, and inspire him to leave his treasure in the country where he had studied, where he had lived almost all his life, in France in fact! Moreover, Ferrari himself wrote one day Mahé and Moens are my gods. Basically this was claptrap, he knew for certain they were fleecing him and making a fool of him. They called him a great stamp collector, and he appeared to live with this halo, but he did not take himself seriously. Moreover, he never looked at his stamps and if Mahé had not been there to sort and arrange them, they would have stayed pell-mell. What an insoluble enigma was the life of this Philippe de Ferrari, what a cruel enigma said the pragmatic Paul Bourget.

The Caillebotte brothers deserve to appear in our gallery. First there was Martial, the musician, and then his brother the artist. They possessed a considerable fortune and built up a very fine collection. Suffice it to say that after the death of the artist, Martial sold his collection for 100,000 francs to Tapling, a rich English manufacturer. The purchaser died shortly afterwards at the early age of thirty-five, and left his magnificent collection of postage stamps in his Will to the Kensington Museum in London. Superbly arranged, it is available to all visitors who can thus in one place study all the rare issues without risk of damaging the stamps (they are under glass). The two Post Office stamps are only shown by special request.

We will next enumerate the following important people: Count Primoli, one of the familiars of Napoleon III, Court Counsellor Rousset, State Counsellor de Bosredon, the author of the work on telegraphic stamps, and of the Bibliographie Timbrologique de France et Belgique, the famous oculist Sichet, Natalis Rondot (Armand Martin), journalist, to whom we owe a series of well-documented articles that appeared in Magazin Pittoresque from 1862 to 1866, and Donatis, the director of an insurance company. All of them possessed very fine collections.

Berger-Levrault a publisher of Strasburg (of Nancy after the war of 1870), was an outstanding and erudite collector, as witnessed by the Methodical and Descriptive Catalogue of all Postage Stamps which he issued in 1867. The stamps were classified in chronological order, with the very slightest variations in design, colours, paper, watermarks and perforation. Hence, at that period he was referred to as the prince of philatelic science. The only drawback of his catalogue is that the enumerations were not set out in columns but in continuous lines. This was a printer's dodge to use less space. Before he issued his work, he showed it to de Ferrari and Dr. Magnus. This work was prefaced by an article on the organisation of a collection and a table of currency (it had xiii+147 pages, and sold for Fr3.25). Berger-Levrault had one fad: with imperforate stamps, he would take a block and cut away part of the stamps surrounding the one he wished to keep, so as to make quite plain that it was not perforated. He died at the age of 78, in September 1903. He was a member of the Académie Stanislas, of Nancy.

Cover page (reduced) of the Catalogue of Berger-Levrault.

Ernest Régnard, a fine collector, wrote some remarkable articles, and he it was who edited the catalogue of Mme. Nicholas, one of the first stamp merchants. The banker, Mirabaud, later a governor of the Bank of France, collected from 1867 onwards. He left a magnificent collection, which however very few people saw because of the difficulty of managing it. He died on 13th May 1908. His collection was sold at the Hôtel Drouot. He published a major work on the Swiss Cantonals: he possessed entire reconstituted sheets of these rare stamps.

Potiquet was an erudite amateur, who compiled the first stamp catalogue on the 21st December 1861, published by Lacroix (who was one of my own first publishers). This catalogue went to two editions: the first containing 1,080 stamps and 130 envelopes, the second (March 1862), 1,088 stamps and 165 envelopes.

Arthur de Rothschild began collecting stamps quite young, when he was still at high school, and then he got in touch with Laplante to get new issues (already!). He was soon the possessor of a fine collection including two Post Offices that he had bought from Moens for 1,000 francs! He is the author of a very interesting work: History of the Letter Post, the first edition of which was published in 1873 by Calman-Levy.

Justin Lallier, a collector and philatelic writer, was the author of the first album that appeared in 1863. A fifth edition was announced as early as 1865: it had coloured armorial bearings, was bound in linen, and cost 8 francs (by Lenégre, a Paris publisher). I possess the 8th edition, printed in brown and the elementary album that appeared in 1869.

Pierre Zaccone was concerned especially with everything relating to postal history, postmarks and cancellations. In 1867 he published in Paris Anecdotal and Pictorial Post which has some very interesting information. He was well-placed to write this work, since he was deputy head of the Central Postal Administration, Rue Jean-Jacques Rousseau.

We shall now go on to those who were the first to have the ingenious idea of making the new craze into a line of commerce. A very original figure from the beginnings of philately is that of Moens: he is worth looking at for a moment. He offers an obvious problem for the psychologist. Moens was quite uneducated, he could barely write his name. Nevertheless he acquired a reputation second to none as a writer. He was one of the greatest pseudo-authors that one could name along with Shakespeare. He was a born business man: he acquired a tidy fortune by selling postage stamps, but would have done just as well selling jam. He had two things going for him: he arrived at the right moment, then he met Hanciau, an accurate author who during his whole life placed his pen and his intelligence at the service of Moens; without Hanciau, the journal Timbre-Poste would never have appeared and, consequently, no big dealer.

I knew Moens as a second-hand bookseller in the Galerie Bortier in Brussels. It was a small shop: there were boxes of cheap books, Liège Almanacs, with various other stuff on the shelves. Sheets of white paper displaying postage stamps were stuck up in the windows.

Moens was born in 1833 at Tournai, and, given a job in a bookshop when he was quite young. He then opened a little shop in 1850 where he sold bargain books. Not without resourcefulness, he tried selling stamps, his first attempts were successful and he got the idea of importing new issues from their country of origin. He found in Hanciau an assiduous hard worker, a modest and devoted collaborator willing to sink his own personality to the extent that the philatelic works that appeared carried the name of Moens alone.

Timbre-Poste was the intermediary via which all the philatelic hopes of the epoch converged on Brussels. We must admit it had a fabulous success but we must regret that it was inspired by a not very Francophile spirit. Moens had a constant tendency to denigrate everything French, everything done, printed or stated in France. Moreover, he got it accepted as gospel that only he had the right to announce new issues and write about stamps. How many erroneous articles have found their way into the columns of this curious periodical. And one should read with relish the slanging matches he had with Pierre Mahé, who did at least write himself all the articles he signed, and with Arthur Maury, who wrote articles of the greatest interest and had the modesty not to sign them.

All this period has a crazy gaiety for the researcher who can read and understand, and who also knows something about the underbelly of philately ...

Moens died in 1908. He gave up business from 1900 onwards: the liquidation of his business in 1899 produced more than a million!

We now come to Pierre Mahé, who was one of the first and most celebrated of stamp merchants. During his life he enjoyed the reputation of an eminent philatelist. Born into a modest family in Paris in January 1833, he had to go to work at the age of thirteen. He started as an errand boy with a music publisher in the Boulevard Bonne-Nouvelle, then he joined Maison Turgis, a maker of religious images. Very active, intelligent and studious, whilst learning the trade, he read a great deal and attempted to complete his somewhat rudimentary education. He became head of manufacturing, but he soon gave that up to set up on his own account as stamp merchant in a flat in the Rue des Canettes in 1861. His audacity was met by success ... audaces fortunat juvat [Audacity favours the young], and he had the good fortune to number amongst his first clients Philippe de Ferrari, who accompanied by his mother the Duchess of Galliera came buying stamps on a magnificent scale. Moreover, M. Philippe later made him curator of his collection, and his habitual supplier. After living in the Rue de Châteaudun, then the Rue de Clichy, he installed himself in the Rue de Varenne, two steps from the Hôtel de Monaco which housed the famous collection.

Mahé was man of great loyalty, and absolute integrity in his dealings; he studied stamps and wrote with a facile pen. In excellent articles written with verve, he managed several times to pillory that unbearable Hanciau, otherwise Moens, whose howlers ceased to count.

He founded Timbrophile, a journal for postage stamps, the first number of which appeared on the 15th November 1864. It contains remarkable articles signed by Lallier, Magnus (Dr. Legrand), and himself, since he did not shy from literary work. In 1892, he started the Questionneur Timbrophilique, a question-and-answer publication which did not have the success he had the right to expect. In 1863, he published the Manual for Stamp Collectors, and in 1908, a very interesting book of reminiscences: Stamp Merchants of Yesterday, now out of print.

He was one of my first contributors when I started the Timbre-Poste with the lamented Charles Mendel, but he was old and difficult in technical discussions. He often took his wishes for realities.

Mahé was an outstanding philatelic figure, and had the esteem of all collectors, but, an odd thing, he had a horror of philatelists and philately: suum cuique! [to each his own!]

He died, comfortably off, at the age of 82 in March 1893.

Baillieu, a bookseller at 43 Quai des Grands-Augustins, was the author of a catalogue published in 1863 under the title Guide to Postage Stamps for Collectors, or Nomenclature of Postage-Stamps Adopted in the Various Countries of the Universe (sic). This catalogue listed the 1,057 stamps issued up to 1862, but did not give their sale prices. There were soon a second and third edition (1865); this last indicated the prices for each category. The Cape wood engravings were given at 4 francs apiece, all the first imperforate Ceylon stamps were priced from 25 centimes to 5 francs for the two-shilling issue. The Baton Rouge from the United States was worth 25 centimes. The 1849 stamps of France were 10 centimes to 50 centimes for the 1 franc carmine. All the stamps from the European states varied between 25 centimes and 3 francs. This third edition gave 2,120 stamps. Bailleu's shop soon had lots of customers. He was one of the first to have the bright idea of writing to French Consuls abroad to send him the new issues. This was a success.

Mme. Nicolas is another interesting figure from this remote epoch (for philately, of course). She ran a reading room in Rue Taitbout, and her collector readers prompted her to get in some stamps. She got together a clientele and amongst her fervent supporters were Potiquet and Herpin. She even published a catalogue from the pen of Régnard.

Roussin worked as a stamp merchant from 1863. An overseer of the Temple Bourse, he had occasion to buy a job lot of stamps of all nations amongst a heap of old papers, so went straight on to be a merchant. He assiduously frequented the Stamp Bourse at the Tuileries and built up a stock. He first set up in the Boulevard Barbès and then transferred to Passage de Havre, where I knew him. In January 1874 he founded Ami des Timbres, which did not close till the death of this excellent man, of rare probity, whose loss was regretted by all his friends (1902).

Edard de Laplante was employed at the Prefecture of Police. He had a fine collection of stamps which he showed at the 1867 Exhibition (in class 1889). He was curator of the celebrated de Saulcy Collection. Saulcy was an eminent polytechnician and archaeologist, a member of the Institute, to whom we owe some absolutely remarkable works. He owned practically at the stamps known at this date, in the unused state. de Saulcy died in 1880.

Edard de Laplante was a Marseilles man with ideas. To be the first in the dealer's yearbook, he had the ingenious idea of modifying his name and calling himself Adard. He was an unremitting numismatist, and came naturally to stamp collecting. He published a synoptic catalogue in 1863; it only went to one edition. He finished his days growing vines in Algeria. He was a rather difficult character, for Régnard speaks of him as follows in little-known documents: Don't think I want to tell you he was pleasant to deal with or that he scattered rare stamps amongst his clients with a generous hand. No, on the contrary, I cannot hide it from you that he was generally in an unbearable mood and you can be sure you will never find in his home anything whose possession could excite the least ardent of your desires. But then, you will say, why recommend him? Precisely because he was insupportable, and because it is rare to meet a dealer with this quality, and he was so awful that it was really worth the trouble of studying him at close quarters with attention. He was a curiosity. (Le Timbre-Poste, June 1913).

Valette was a nice old fellow, a dealer in antiquities established at 32 Rue Saint-Sulpice. Erudite and a scholar, he contributed to the magazines Science and the Bazar Parizer. He came by chance to philately, and sold stamps in a happy-go-lucky way without bothering too much about their degree of rarity. He is the author of a Manual for the Collector of Postage Stamps, which deserves a moment's attention if only from the point of view of pure curiosity. Moreover, he signed his manual in this way: Fois V, of the Ministry of the Interior, author of researches on the study and natural and prognostical classification of human knowledge.

This manual was in two parts. In the first we read chapters devoted to the following matters:

1. a work on the origin of postage stamps and the taste for collecting
2. collectors and collections
3. the commercial price of stamps

4. frauds, and counterfeits practiced in the stamp trade⁽¹⁾
5. exchanges and the petty trade of stamp lovers
6. how to clean old or stuck-down postage stamps and get them into a fit state to be placed in a collection
7. the classification of postage stamps – a word on the form to be given to albums for collections.

(1) Already!

The second part is a general, analytical and alphabetical nomenclature of the postage stamps issued by the various states of the world. This nomenclature, in tabular form (we reproduce a page of it as a curiosity) only mentions the stamps in vague terms and says nothing about their commercial value, but in the end it does give some idea, and at this date it was easy to build up an almost complete collection at a very low cost. The brochure finishes with genealogical trees absolutely as if it were a question of a Tree of Jesse. We reproduce the one for France.

— 35 —

ÉTATS qui ont créé des timbres-poste.	NOMBRE des timbres qui y ont cours	EFFIGIES et EMBLÈMES		VALEUR d'émission de ch. timbre.	FORME et couleur de l'impression des timbres et du papier.
		des timbr.- poste propre- dits.	des timbres- enre- loppes.
BRUNSWICK (DUCHÉ DE).	43	Nom, ar- moiries.	"	1, 2, 3 silb.	R. Rose, bleu et brique.
		"	"	1/4, 1/3, 1, 2, 3 s.	Cach., blanc, orange, bleu rose.
		"	"	4/4, 1 s.	Cachou, jaun
		Armoi- ries.	"	1, 2, 3 silb.	Jaune, bleu, rose.
BRUNSWICK (NOUVEAU). Possess. angl. de l'Amér. du Nord.	9	Nom, ar- moiries.	"	3, 6 p., 1 sh..	R. bistre, jaune, viol.
		c. de fer.	"	1 c.	Noir.
		Effig. de la reine.	"	5, 10 c.	Vert, rouge.
		b. à yap.	"	124/2 c.	Bleu.
		Pr. de Galles.	"	174/2 c.	Noir.
BUENOS-AYRES , et Voy. Argentine (Con- fédération.)	10	Nom et vaiss.	"	1, 2, 4, 5 peso.	R. Pap. blan. Bleu, bleu, rouge, brun.
		"	"	1, 4, 5 peso.	Bistre, sien- ne, brun.
		Effigie, liberté.	"	1, 2 p., 4 r.	Bleu, rouge, vert.
CALÉDONIE (NOUVELLE). Col. fr. de l'Océanie.	4	Nom et effigie.	"	10 cent.	R. Papier blanc. Noir.
		"	"	"	"
CANADA Possess. angl. de l'Amér. du Nord.	49	Nom et effigie.	"	1/2 p., 6, 6 p., 10 p.	R. rose, noir, vert, bleu.
		Castor.	"	3 p. 5 c.	Rouge, roug.
		"	"	1, 10, 12	Rose, noir, vert, bleu.
		"	"	1/2, 1/7 c.	vert, bleu.
		Effigie.	"	5, 10, 12 1/2 c.	Marron, bleu, noir.

Page from the Valette catalogue, showing the classification of issues

But there was also an attempt at colour classification; this difficult problem⁽²⁾ which has concerned people for so long is very curious from two points of view: the first is that colours were already very difficult for the editors of catalogues to describe clearly, and the second shows the pointlessness of the attempt.

- (2) The Stanley Gibbons Company published a table of colours. For the classification of Greek stamps, the author of this article has provided a simple and easy to construct classification.

As for the text, it has points of interest, especially from the retrospective point of view: it will be seen that many of his reflections have not been replaced even today.

The author first seems to evaluate the quantity of stamps:

It results from researches carried out to date that about twelve hundred different postage stamps are known and exist today. They are distributed amongst a hundred and twenty-five nations or possessions of the various countries of the world, but we do not know any collection, even those with the highest reputations and the greatest numbers, that has reached this number.

We have seen collections formed at great expense and with the greatest pains, which illustrate the good taste and persistence of their possessor, but none of them has reached the figure of a thousand, and we should be very grateful for and would look on as very remarkable, any collection which could show us more than a thousand different stamps. It goes without saying we do not mean those made up solely of variants on the same stamp, nor of essays, but simply of differences in shapes, values and positive colours.

How Valette gave the table for a country's issues

He then goes on to deal with the commercial price of postage stamps:

In considering the most rational bases to use for determining the sale price of postage stamps, we have the following facts:

There are two natural divisions or distinct categories: 1. New stamps, i.e. bought at their face value as determined by the issuing government; 2. Used stamps, i.e. those that have been cancelled or stamped by employees of the Administration, and hence cannot be used any more except in collections.

In general, and for stamps in the first category, it seems to us that the price of each new stamp ought to be the nominal and intrinsic value put on it by the issuing government, plus charges for obtaining them, correspondence and commission, which will depend on how far away the country is, and the difficulty of getting hold of the stamps.

We now have to decide and determine as reasonably as possible the price for old or withdrawn stamps, whether obsolete or used, and which are often the most expensive in the collection.

A priori, we think the price the collector should pay for this category of stamps should be fixed in general at half the original price of issue, and at least should not exceed this value.

However, since there is no rule without exception, we admit that the rarity, age, or even novelty of a stamp and above all the eagerness, the impatience to be ahead of everyone else in possessing it, can help to increase the price arbitrarily. But it is no less true that cupidity has often exploited these circumstances in an indecent way, with certain old or new stamps supposedly rare, being sold at totally exaggerated prices.

To sum up, we believe that the price of cancelled stamps, even the rarest, should not exceed two francs, and this figure is already being used as the basis for postage stamp sales at the collector's shop, 32 Rue Saint-Sulpice, instead of the 4, 5, 10, 20 and even 35 francs at which certain rare stamps have been sold in both Brussels and Paris. Hence, we advise collectors, whenever they are faced with an exaggerated price for a stamp, i.e. one exceeding 2 francs, to wait for another chance which will not be long in coming.

Even at this primitive epoch of philately, when the number of stamps was so minimal, forgers had appeared and were seeking a living through fraud.

Since old stamps had become rare, means of counterfeiting them were sought. We cannot warn collectors too strongly against frauds and counterfeits of all kinds with which industry and cupidity will try to dupe them. Though the stamp trade is new, it is far from exempt from this sort of thing.

And this is one of the reasons why we have eliminated from our general nomenclature, all essays and recommend their elimination from all collections: 1. Because they were never issued, and remain valueless; 2. Because this kind of stamp is easiest to counterfeit, and most profitable and riskless. One should also be on guard against what are called Austrian stamps, since these are amongst the easiest to counterfeit.

How Valette classified stamps

Though no exchange societies had appeared, exchanges were used in building up collections.

Exchange being above all a convention, all this is conditional, and depends on the personal interest and the reciprocal convenience of each exchanger.

It even happens that both are satisfied and feel they have gained by the exchange, even though one of them has almost always lost materially.

Let us give an example to show what we mean. Someone offered us an old Brazilian stamp for a 10 centimes French Republic. Obviously the one who gave up the Brazilian lost by it, and the one who gave the ten-centimes gained; but the giver of the Brazil happened to have fifty others in reserve, whereas the 10-centimes Republic was missing from his collection. Obviously, he was also the gainer and had reason to be satisfied.

But Man is the same everywhere, from Paris to Pekin, and his childhood days are marked by the same weaknesses, the same mistakes, the same faults. The most useful and praiseworthy things are almost always open to criticism, since they always have their vulnerable side, that is to say their abuses, their defeats and their vices.

And this is what he says about the famous Stamp Bourse:

Like the Stock Market in the Rue Vivienne, where the financial destiny of France is controlled, the Tuileries and Luxembourg Gardens have meetings, on Thursdays as a rule, of dealers in and exchangers of stamps, whose faces and bearing offer a piquant interest to the observer who wishes to understand human nature.

And even though the doings in these garden bourses are much less dangerous, and do not involve the often fatal consequences of the Paris Stock Market, they are no less interesting to study, since this little bourse for juveniles is in its way a path to the bourse for older people, middle-aged and upwards.

How do you put a stamp into your collection and in what state?

A stamp can only get dirtied in two ways: 1. By stamping with oil or crossing-out with ink by public employees; 2. By dust, mud or other foreign substances which have soiled it accidentally.

We know of amateurs who try to get rid of both sorts of soiling. However, to get rid of oil and ink they are obliged to use acids and active salts such as Epsom Salts, bleaching liquid, chlorine, etc., it is to be feared that the colour of the stamp will be fundamentally altered during this delicate operation, which calls for great attentiveness and careful proportioning and duration of the action, or of the bath into which the soiled stamps are put.

Hence our advice is to leave oil marks on stamps as they are, since they are generally not extensive, are neat and well-preserved. However, if a stamp has been marked by fingers, dust, or mud, it should always be cleaned, first with plain water, and if that does not do the trick, with a little Javel [weak bleach]. In this case, as before, it should be rubbed gently, even in a bath, with the skin of the finger. It should never be touched with the nails, or with any hard object, for fear of tearing it.

When the stamp has been cleaned and dried between two sheet of blotting paper, it should be mounted.

Finally, the question of the substratum does not escape the editor of the brochure:

We cannot finish this first part of the Manual without saying something about our ideas of the form to be given to albums devoted to stamp collections.

We have noticed that in general the form commonly used for this is the oblong shape of small music albums, opened horizontally instead of vertically (like ordinary octavo volumes). This oblong shape is good for albums of drawings or music, but is not the most suitable or the most attractive for stamp albums.

We thus believe it should be completely abandoned and replaced by a large 8° format. This is also the one we have adopted for the tables or examples of special classifications given at the end of the book.

It might perhaps be both useful and desirable for stamp albums to be made with loose leaves⁽¹⁾ which can be changed about at will and enable all the alterations and additions to be made which discoveries and successive additions render necessary.

(1) This has been done by Yvert & Cie, we know with what success.

Stanley Gibbons began to deal in stamps in about 1854. He worked in the shop of his father, a pharmacist in Plymouth. The latter followed with an attentive eye the doings of his son and heir. Then, seeing that his trade was growing, gave him a corner of the counter and a window to show his merchandise. Thus began what grew into the largest firm in Great Britain. Soon this business exceeded that of the chemist, and when papa Gibbons died his premises were sold and young Stanley went and set up farther off. He had extraordinary luck: in 1863, some sailors arrived from the Cape and brought him a bag of old triangular stamps which they had won in a lottery: he paid them a handsome 125 francs. What he had there was a real treasure trove. There were numerous wood engravings with errors. At that period the prices for Capes were as follows: the 1, 4 and 6 pence were worth a franc a dozen, the 1 and 4 as wood engravings, four francs a dozen, finally the 2 errors, 1p blue and 4p red, five francs apiece! These stamps cost 30,000 francs now. It is worth noting that you could have as many as you wanted of regular stamps or errors: a fact which leads us to suppose that the stamps of 1861 were printed in large numbers. Stanley Gibbons claimed to have made 12,500 francs profit on this purchase!

Another time, the Postmaster-General of Western Australia sent him a batch of stamps and included, with apologies, 120 of the 2 pence stamps printed by mistake in the colour of the 6 pence, for which he asked sixty centimes each (number 17a, price 5,000 francs). He sold these specimens for 6 francs at first, but in a short time they went up to 50 francs. There was already a liking for errors at this period.

In 1894 Stanley Gibbons transferred to London, to the Strand, where for 36 years he actively carried on this extraordinary trade, creating remarkable publications like Stanley Gibbons Monthly and Weekly, and a catalogue which is a miracle of accuracy and philatelic information. He retired in 1890 and died at the age of 72 in 1913.

Arthur Maury began to feel the mania for collecting when he was quite young, barely out of childhood. He admitted it himself: in his desk at boarding school he had a complete menagerie fitted: a field-mouse, a sparrow, a lizard and some snails!, he even had a fish in a bottle! One day at the Stamp Bourse a friend asked whether his father got letters from abroad, and in which case, could he have the stamps, and thus his interest was all at once aroused. A short while afterwards he saw a street placard for the Postage Stamp Manual (the one by Potiquet); he got it, read it, and his path was settled: he resolved to start collecting and soon, to start dealing. He asked his father to let him have part of a window to show his duplicates. This little trade was most profitable, and so he gave up glove making to devote himself entirely to stamp dealing. He settled first at 5 Rue de Richelieu, then when given notice, from there he moved to 25 Rue Le Peletier [Actually number 23] (opposite the Opera, where he had a very busy little shop). Finally, at the end of 1869, he moved to 80 Rue Saint-Lazare (where the Maison Pavoille stands today) which became a centre for all collectors. In 1864 he founded the Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, which still appears and thus finds itself in the position of the oldest philatelic journal. In July 1891 he opened a huge shop on the Boulevard Montmartre, to the stupefaction of all of the shopkeepers of the quarter, who could not imagine that such a big place was needed to sell little squares of paper. His first catalogue, dated December 1864, carried the notation from Maury Junior, 5, Rue de Richelieu, with a branch at 52, Rue Napoléon, Boulogne-sur-Mer!

The name of Maury became a symbol: for a long time he personified philately since he was one of the first people to adopt this term. The variety of albums he created attracted a large clientele of young people who later became major collectors.

He was a pleasant, polite man, an unremitting worker, with a great deal of intelligence and sharpness, sufficiently skilful with the language to publish interesting articles from time to time. He published a large number of remarkable studies, such as his History of the French Postage Stamp, his Catalogue of Postmarks and a historical study on the Gallic Cock, since he had an obsession: he wanted the cock to become the emblem of France on all stamps. He died, very rich, on 1st December 1907.

Vervelle, born in 1842, began as a stationer in the Rue Jacob; as he had a rather large shop window, one of his friends, a keen stamp collector asked him to exhibit some of his duplicates and act as his go-between. After a few days, the bystanders were amazed to see a display of four to five hundred stamps. This was mentioned at the Stamp Bourse and there was a rush on the stationer's shop which he did not appreciate. Vervelle did not hesitate, he became a dealer, ordered some headed paper, and by the 1867 Exhibition he was already very well known and was doing a really nice amount of business. In 1874, he was the cause of a lively row: he asked for admission to the Société Française de Timbrologie, but they did not want to accept dealers! He insisted, and so did others, such as Roussin and Gruat, and finally they were admitted.

Vervelle is famous throughout the world for having discovered the 1 franc pale vermilion which bears his name. Here is this story in brief: when Hulot died in 1892, his son was bothered by all the papers he found at his father's. Sheets of stamps, essays, proof sheets, etc. At this time, Hulot was secretary to the numismatist Hoffmann. He got in touch with Hulot junior and finally suggested Vervelle should buy the whole lot of papers for 25,000 francs. This was accepted, because nobody really knew what was in there. There was in particular a sheet of 145 of the 1 franc vermilion, dull in colour, with the tête-bêche. The block of eight stamps that included this rarity was sold to Philippe de Ferrari for 3,800 francs*.

* See for the history of postage stamps, the work by Georges Brunel Issues of French postage stamps from 1849 to 1900 (published by Emile Pavoille).

Vervelle died in August 1916. He left the reputation of being loyal, capable in business, and very affable. He was a great authority on surcharged stamps from the French colonies, since he followed them as they were issued.

Vervelle. A caricature by Eugène Ringot

From the first appearance of Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste and Timbrophile in 1864, these periodicals published well-documented articles of the greatest possible interest. We may cite from Collectionneur: Essays; Unused and cancelled; Studies on the Philippines and the island of Mauritius, by Herpin, an article on watermarks by Maury, and above all the article on the creation of the word Philately by Herpin (See earlier). Return stamps by Dr. Magnus. As early as 1866 Maury published the memoirs of a stamp dealer! From Timbrophile, remarkable articles by Dr. Magnus (Dr. Legrand), On the watermarks and papers used in the fabrication of postage stamps; On the classification of the stamps of Victoria; On the stamps of Natal; Reprints, The arrangement of an album; by Philippe de Ferrari, On Cape stamps unused and cancelled; by Régnard, and numerous articles by Pierre Mahé and Rives de Seine (pseudonym of Captain Belleville).

Polemics broke out between Mahé and Moens, first on the topic of watermarks, and then on a mass of other subjects. The issue for June 1867 contained the epistolary duel between Mahé and Moens on the stamps of Moresnet (see L'Écho, number 563 of 31st October 1918: Story of two prophets.)

To give yet another idea of the flourishing state of Philately in 1867, we will give a summary view of what appeared at the Universal Exhibition.

Great Britain: in the showcase of De La Rue & Co., one could see the stamps of Bermuda, Vancouver, Ceylon, Natal, Malta, New South Wales, Jamaica, British Columbia, Italy, Belgium, Hong Kong; plus fiscal stamps with those of Joubert; fiscal stamps with embossed engravings. Statistics for the colonies indicate the letters received and sent:

In 1851 – 90,000 and 67,000

In 1865 – 980,000 and 930,000

For newspapers:

In 1851 – 117,000 and 60,000

In 1865 – 1,800,000 and 1,110,000

The American Bank Note [Co.] of New York showed stamps from Hidalgo in Mexico, The United States, El Salvador, Brazil, and bank-notes.

The Sandwich Islands showed their first stamps.

Finland, Russia and Germany, showed postage stamps, local stamps and envelopes. There were three stamps in use for the Low Countries at that time, Belgium being a little richer.

M. Barre and Hulot showed French and Greek postage stamps, with essays, matrices and galvanoplastic plates.

In the equipment class, there were many interesting items, engraving rollers, perforators, plates and copper-plate machines, lever presses.

To return to our study, we have drawn up a chronological table of the earliest remarkable events in Philately. This will show what efforts of classification, organization, popularisation and publication had already been made at the dawn of stamp collecting.

Calendar of Sensational Events up to 1867

1837	First work on postage stamps by Rowland Hill : the Penny Postage
1840: 5 th May	The first stamped envelope is issued in England
1840: 6 th May	The first postage stamp is issued in England
1841	The first collector appears to be M. Vetzels , of Lille, who began collecting postage stamps right from their origin
1847: October	The first error is that of the Post Office [Mauritius]
1849	The first tête-bêche appears in the French issue
1852	The first stamp exhibition is organised at Brussels by Van der Meulen
1854: 8 April	The first surcharge is made in Mauritius
1857	The first stamped band (wrapper) is used in the United States
1860	Collecting develops amongst schoolboys particularly, and a Stamp Bourse is set up at the Tuileries on Sundays, first near the statue of Diana, then behind the merry-go-round
1861	The first telegraph stamp is used in the English Indies
1861	The first catalogue, from Potiquet , appears in Paris, announced by posters all over Paris

- 1861 Actual date for the start of stamp collecting
- 1862: June In the Magazin Pittoresque, Natalis Rondot begins a long study of the postage stamps of all nations of the globe, and carries it on till 1867. The amount of information already given at this date is surprising. It should be pointed out that the name given for the author is the pseudonym of Armand Martin, a top ranking employee of the postal administration
- 1862: June The first issue appears of Moen's Timbre-Poste, which will not cease publication till 1900.
- 1862: June The first edition of the Lallier album appears in Paris, from the publisher Lenègre, 35 Rue Bonaparte.
- 1862 In London, the first philatelic journal is The Monthly Advertiser.
- 1862 The first book on philately appears in Brussels, Falsification of Postage Stamps, by Moens.
- 1863 The first guide for collectors was that of Baillieu (this was in effect a catalogue)
- 1864: June Arthur Maury launches his large-format Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste. It appears like this for three issues, then from the fourth it appears in square octavo, and the three first numbers are reprinted in this format. This magazine is still current, and is thus the oldest, since it is the only one that has lasted
- 1864: 15th Pierre Mahé publishes his famous Timbrophile, containing very important articles as we have seen above
- 1864: 15th Herpin, in a very discerning article, creates the word Philately (c.f. Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, number 5)
- 1864 The first advertisement offering a collection of stamps appears in a catalogue of autographs published by M. Laverdat
- 1865 The Pierre Mahé catalogue appears
- 1865 Hippolyte Boyer, receiver of posts at Marennnes, publishes a historical account of postage stamps
- 1865 A group of young people in Nevers founds the first philatelic exchange society
- 1865 M. Philbrick, an English lawyer, buys the Herpin collection for 10,000 francs
- 1865: July The French Philatelic Society is founded in Paris, with M. de Sauley as Honorary President, Herpin as President, and Régnard as Secretary
- 1865: 29 First sale by auction at the Hôtel Drouot. Essays were knocked down at high prices
- 1866 The English catalogue is published in London. It was due to Dr Gray, Director of the British Museum
- 1866 Hulot, printer of the first French postage stamps, retires this year
- 1867: Berger-Levrault issues his systematic catalogue of 3,500 stamps, preceded by a brief account of the organisation of a collection, and containing a table of currencies
- 1867 At the Universal Exhibition in Paris, there were many exhibits relating to posts and stamps
- 1867 Arthur Maury recommends little hinges for keeping stamps in albums

The study of Philately does not take place without its economic aspect. In the following table we have listed some hundred good stamps, for which we give the prices from 1868 to 1928. Our calculations are based on:

- a) The constant rise in the price of the stamps
- b) Comparison of the capital sums used to purchase these stamps

Thus, in 1868, their actual value was about 1,000 francs. Ten years later, this sum was already ten times as large, reaching 40,000 francs in 1908 and 760,000 francs in 1928.

The progression is thus – 1, 10, 40, 760.

Interest on capital: 1,000 francs would have produced 2,650 francs in 1888, 7,050 francs in 1908 and 18,700 francs in 1928.

Stamps known in (Numbers from Yvert & Tellier Catalogue)	1868	1888	1908	1928
Antigua: 2, 3	2	6	5	300
Argentina: 8, 9, 10	10	30	300	15,000
Argentina: 11, 12, 13	2	5	15	500
Australia, West: 2, 3, 4, 4b	16	60	300	11,000
Australia, South: 1, 2, 3, 4	6	10	100	5,000
Bavaria: 1, 7, 8	2	8	35	2,000
Bremen: 1 to 6, 8, 9	5	30	270	5,600
Brazil: 1, 2, 3	17	20	60	2,000
Buenos-Aires: 1 to 5	80	300	1,500	42,000
Cape: 7, 8, 7b, 8b	60	200	5,000	75,000
Two Sicilies, Naples: 8, 9	60	150	500	17,000
Spain: 1 to 5	75	110	150	7,000
Finland: 1, 2	20	5	75	3,000
France: 1 to 7	20	100	300	10,000
Greece: 1 to 6	3	12	60	2,500
British Guyana: 2, 3, 4	90	400	2,000	45,000
British Guyana: 5, 6, 13, 14	120	1,000	3,000	25,000
Hamburg: 1 to 7	3	10	240	1,200
English Indies: 26	1	10	20	200
Luxemburg: 1, 2, 3 to 11	5	15	60	3,000
Mauritius: 3 and 4	10	300	600	15,000
Mexico: 1 to 5	20	20	20	1,200
Moldavia: 1 to 4	25	2,500	10,000	190,000
Montevideo: 1, 2, 3	20	100	250	10,000
Natal: 1 to 7	50	1,200	3,000	70,000
New Brunswick: 1, 2, 3	30	200	500	13,000
New Grenada (Columbia): 1, 2, 3	10	20	25	800
New Grenada (Columbia): 10 to 14	10	10	150	3,500
Oldenburg: 1 to 4	3	10	60	3,200
Peru: 1 to 3	30	15	65	4,000
Philippines: 1 to 4	70	100	250	12,000

Reunion: 1, 2	200	500	2,400	80,000
St. Thomas-La Guaira: 1, 2	1	2	5	500
St. Vincent: 1, 2, 3, 5	3	10	35	1,000
Saxony: 1	3	50	150	9,000
Schleswig: 1, 2	1	15	70	1,500
Shanghai 1 to 5	6	15	150	3,500
Switzerland (Basle)	3	50	125	6,000
Switzerland (Zurich): 9, 10	2	80	300	10,000
Newfoundland: 1 to 9	20	2,000	3,000	50,000
Newfoundland: 22	1	2	25	400
Trinidad: 7, 8, 9	30	70	180	4,500
Turkey: 1, 2, 3	4	80	50	850
Victoria: 1, 2, 3	5	12	25	1,500
Wurttemberg: 1 to 5	3	4	25	1,500
Rounded Totals	1,000	10,000	40,000	760,000

We can appreciate these enormous differences better if we look at the following figures:

	1868	1888	1908	1928
Value of the stamps	1	10	40	760
Value of the capital invested with compound interest	1	2.65	7	18.7

Collecting stamps is therefore, as well as one of the most instructive and interesting occupations, one of the best investments, but we must bear in mind following maxim:

Care, Patience, Perseverance.

— 35 —

Tableau A

Progression in value of a collection valued at 1,000 francs in 1867, for 1888, 1908, 1928.

Tableau B

Progression of a collection valued at 10,000 francs in 1888 to 1928. [I am at a loss to understand how this differs from Tableau A.]

Tableau C

Progression at compound interest of 1,000 francs invested at 5% for the above periods.

HERPIN

D^r LEGRAND

Martial CAILLEBOTTE

Philippe de FERRARI

BERGER-LEVRULT

MOENS

de SAULCY

Pierre MAHÉ

INDEX

This document contains a mass of historical data about early philatelists, but lacks an index. Accordingly, I have compiled an index to the personalities mentioned in the translation. Wherever possible, I have omitted non-philatelists but have included those persons about whom I am not certain. If the reference includes informative biographical material, the reference is followed by (biog) and if a photograph is provided (photo). If the reference is to the illustration, it is followed by (illus). The page numbering refers to the translation page numbers at the top left of each page. Data in square brackets to complete names have been added by me (BJB).

A
American Bank Note Company	23
B
Baillieu, [Alexander]	13, 24
Barre, [Albert]	23
Belleville, Capt.	22
Benoiton, Fanfan	3, 4
Berger-Levrault, [François]	5, 11 (biog), (illus), 24, 29 (photo)
Bosredon, [Phillipe] de	10
Boyer, Hippolyte	24
C
Caillebotte, [Georges]	10
Caillebotte, Martial	10, 28 (photo)
Calman-Levy,	12
D
De La Rue & Company	23
Donatis, [A.]	5, 10
Durrieu, Count	7
E
Elb, Josef W.	5
F
Ferrari, Philippe de	7 (biog), 11, 13, 21, 22, 28 (photo)
G
Gibbons, Stanley (-1913)	20 (biog)
Girardot,	5
Gray, Dr.	24
Gruat, [Père]	21
H
Hanciau, [Louis]	12, 13
Herpin, [G.]	5, 6 (biog), 14, 22, 24, 28 (photo)
Hulot,	21, 23, 24
J
Joubert, [J. Ferdinand]	23
L
Lacroix,	11
Lallier, Justin	12, 13, 24
Laplante, Adard de (pseudonym of Edard de Laplante)
Laplante, Edard de	12, 14 (biog)
Laverdat,	24

Legrand, Dr. Jacques A.		5, 7 (biog), 11, 13, 22, 28 (photo)
Lenégre,		12
M
Magnus, Dr.	(pseudonym of Dr. Jacques A. Legrand)
Mahé, Pierre	(-1893)	5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 13 (biog), 22, 24, 29 (photo)
Martin, Armand		10 (illus), 24
Maury, Arthur	(-1907)	5, 12, 20 (biog), 22, 24
Mendel, Charles		13
Meulen, Van der		23
Mirabaud, [Paul]	(-1908)	11 (biog)
Moens, [Jean-Baptiste]	(-1908)	12 (biog), 13, 22, 24, 29 (photo)
N
Nicholas, Madam		11, 14
P
Philbrick, Frederick A.		6, 24
Potiquet, [Alfred]		11, 14, 23
Primoli, Count		5, 10
R
Régnard, Ernest [not Renard]		11, 14, 22, 24
Riesler,		5
Ringot, Eugène		22 (illus)
Rives de Seine	(pseudonym of Capt. Belleville)
Robert,		8
Rondot, Natalis	(pseudonym of Armand Martin)
Rothschild, Baron Arthur de		6, 12
Rousset,		10
Roussin, [Charles]	(-1902)	14 (biog), 21
S
Sardou, Victorien		3
Saulcy, [F.] de	(-1880)	5, 14, 24, 29 (photo)
Sichet,		10
Stanley Gibbons Company		15
T
Tapling, Thomas K.		10
Trimm, Timotée		2
V
V., Fois	(pseudonym of François Valette)
Valette, François		14 (biog), 15 (illus), 16 (illus), 18 (illus)
Vervelle, [Ernest]		21 (biog), 22 (illus)
Vetzel,		23
Z
Zaccone, Pierre		12

END

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
New Series, 1995, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

SOCIÉTÉ BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

New Series, 1995, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile,

The year 1994 is already just a memory, and it is with joy that we wish you a good and happy 1995. May it be full of happiness for you, and give you lots of philatelic pleasures.

In Chapter III you will find a special members' sales of selected items. Anyone who has works to put in should let us know now. The next sale of books will take place towards March 1995.

We hope you will have much pleasure in reading the present bulletin.

Olivier SIMONS
President of the S.B.B.

Note from the Editors

The index to “Philatéliste Belge” is available now. Subscribing members will receive a copy herewith.

Correspondence

All correspondence including secretarial and financial, should be sent to Mr. Eric Miesse, 26 Av. Des Tarins, Bierges 30.

The present committee of the SBB would like to expand. Anyone seriously interested should propose his candidature to the President.

Subscriptions 1994/95

The amount of the subscription for the year 1994/95 is fixed at 500BF (750BF for abroad). This covers the bulletins, plus a copy of the index to “Philatéliste Belge”. Send to Account No. 000-1304282-20, Société Belge de Bibliophilately, 30 Armendijlaau, Sternebeest 1933.

END

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin
New Series, 199?, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

SOCIÉTÉ BELGIQUE DE LA BIBLIOPHILATELIE – BULLETIN

New Series, 199?, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile,

The last auction sales have closed amid general enthusiasm, and many philatelists have transferred their holidays so as to take part in the last competitions in July.

For many of us, this period is synonymous with rest, sun or distant voyages.

For those who cannot get away, now is perhaps the time to put their stamp collection into some of kind of order.

Consequently, we thought it a good idea to put out a mini-bulletin before our well-earned rest. You will find in it an article by our Secretary on the first Belgian issue, the “e paulettes”.

After the holidays we shall publish a bulletin with a new article on the first Naples issue, a subject your humble servant is mad about, and which we hope will make you the same.

We hope you will have much pleasure in reading the present issue.

Olivier SIMONS
President of the S.B.B.

Correspondence

All correspondence, including secretarial and financial, should be sent to Mr. Eric Miesse, 26 Av. Des Tarins, Bierges 1301.

SBB Committee

The present Committee of the ABB would like to expand. Anyone seriously interested should propose his candidature to the President.

END

Title (14pt)

Date, Volume & Issue

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, New Series, 1993, Issue 2.

Translation Digest

Translated by Translator for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

TITLE (14pt)

Date, Volume & Issue

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.1-2

Title.

Author

Literature Review

A: Periodicals

B: Books, etc.

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile,

It is already a month since I took over from Monsieur Loontjeis. I hope with all my heart to keep up to my predecessor's high stands and not to disappoint you in my new post.

This end-of-year bulletin gives you a selection of philatelic literature. Look at the list carefully – some could be a judicious acquisition.

Apart from this philatelic literature, we hope to familiarise you with Egyptian postage stamps as well as the postal history of this country with its fascinating past.

I cannot conclude this editorial without wishing you, on behalf of the SBB, happy end-of-year holidays.

Eric Miesse
Secretary of the SBB

Correspondence

All to Eric Miesse, 26 Av. Des Tarins, Bierges 1301

Subscriptions 1992/93 – Reminder

The subscription for the year 1992/93 was lowered to 500BF (750BF abroad). This covers the bulletins, plus a copy of the index to “Philatelite Belge”. Send to account number 000-1304282-20, Société Belge de Bibliophilatélie, 30 Armendijlaan, Sterrebeck 1933, before 30th December 1993 at the latest.

If there is a red cross in the adjoining box, it means we have not yet received your subscription.

p.2

I. NEW MEMBERS

We have had the pleasure of receiving requests for membership from M. M. O. Mellinger (USA) and Dr. Coupatez (Brussels). We welcome them to the bosom of the SBB.

II. LITERARY TOPICS

HAFNIA 94, international show of philatelic literature, will take place at Copenhagen (Denmark), from 27-30th January 1994, in the “Bella” hall. Some 400 books, magazines and catalogues will be exhibited.

Also, an exhibition on modern philately (stamps issued during the last ten years) will take place in the same hall.

Anyone interested in a visit to Copenhagen, or wishing for more information, may contact us. We shall try to get there.

III. SUBJECT OF THE MONTH

This month we shall try to collect all the articles relating to Egyptian postage stamps and the postal history of that country. Here are some of the references we have on this subject:

p.3

We hope that many of you will be able to give us fuller information. In this connection, anyone now without bibliographical file slips can request them from us. We shall be glad to supply them.

Last Month, we asked members for documentations relating to disinfected post. The following articles have been reported.

IV. SALE BY OFFER OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE: Without Limits or withdrawals

For the end-of-year festival, we offer you a selection of philatelic literature. The books are listed in alphabetical order of authors or the names of magazines. All items are, unless otherwise stated, TB and unbound. At the end of each description is a suggested price, purely as a basis for offers. Bids could be accepted below these prices, as there is no reserve on any item. Nevertheless, we think these are realistic market prices.

The items can be seen by arrangement (ring O. Simons, 02/782.17.46) or at the Residence Palace (1st meeting in January, excluding the two sets).

Numbered offers (number of the items, title (underlined) and maximum orders) should be sent either to the President, Mr. Olivier Simons, 20 Armendijlaan, Sterrebeck 1933, or to the secretary, Mr. Eric Miesse, 26 Av. Des Tarins, Bierges 1301, before 15th January 1994.

END

Dear Member and Philatelist,

It has been a long time since you received a bulletin, and for a good reason. In fact, the year 1993 was one of multiple changes within the SBB.

Firstly, the subscription rate has been changed. The reduced committee, i.e. Mr. Loontjeis and myself, has decided during December to lower the subscription for the year 1993/94 to 500BF. This will cover the cost of printing two numbers and will entitle members to a free copy of the index of the "Philatelite Belge".

This meant considerable work, which I was only able to finish in June – it was originally planned for the end of January – and also explains the late appearance of the present bulletin. In this connection I will take the opportunity of thanking Mr. Laurent Detourney who helped me with the work of compiling this index.

Also, as you will have seen, we have decided to start a new numbering sequence, starting with this number. We are now following the academic year instead of the civil year.

Finally I must state with regret that in view of the numerous activities that Mr. Loontjeis and I have to attend to, we have been forced to abandon the existing format. I shall thus decide on future activities, probably an annual meeting and the production of 2, or maybe 3, numbers to which Dr. Bigaion will occasionally contribute.

The work of the secretary and treasurer, along with all correspondence will be carried out from now on by Mr. Eric Miesse, 26 Av. des Tarins, Bierges 1301. Hence he should be contacted on all questions relating to subscriptions, sending out of bulletins and secretariat.

We thank him in advance for so kindly taking up the torch which Mr. Loontjeis has carried with so much brio since the foundation of our society. It was he who helped us to get the SBB on its feet, and was the lynchpin of the first 8 bulletins which we published.

He will, of course, stay with us, and will certainly still help us at exceptional moments. In return for his devotion, we have decided to make him an honorary member of our society.

p.2

I. COMPUTER FORUM

The continuation of the translation of the article "Philately and Computers" by Charles J. Peterson will appear in a forthcoming number.

II. LITERARY TOPICS

For all lovers of philatelic literature, HAFNIA 94 in Denmark is a meeting important enough not to be missed. This international show of philatelic literature will take place 27-30th January 1994. We will come back to this topic but, for the present, note this event!

III. SUBJECT OF THE MONTH

This month, we are trying to collect all information on disinfected mail. A study will be carried out later by Dr. Bigaigon and myself on this subject. Do not hesitate to send us all useful information: and amongst others, descriptive cards on works you possess.

Anyone who has run out of cards can ask us for more. We will gladly supply them.

p.4

LIBRARY

During the Christmas holidays we shall organise a sale of philatelic literature. In this connection we shall, from now on, accept anything you want us to dispose of. By way of example, here are some of the titles on offer:

INTRODUCTION

You now have before you a new volume of Literatur-Nachrichten. It gives convincing proof of how successful German philately has been in the philatelic literature section in the year 1992. Particular attention should be paid to the outstanding accomplishments of the BDPh e.V. working parties, without whose ground-breaking research studies such a multitude of publications of all sorts would not have been possible. Obviously there are simply inexhaustible sources yet to be uncovered and evaluated by philatelic researchers. I, myself, am certain there will be plenty for subsequent volumes of Literatur-Nachrichten to profit from.

This year's Literatur-Nachrichten will also be the first to appear in electronic data bases. I think we have all become accustomed in the meantime to having it on computer as a regular thing as well as in printed form. This new way of reading with the help of the fluorescent screen is definitely not the same as the oft-mentioned "end of the book". The printed book will continue to hold its predominant place: but the electronic media will offer many new possibilities of getting data in and out faster and more accurately. The BDPh has responded to the wishes of many users of Literatur-Nachrichten and opened this new path for them.

This edition of Literatur-Nachrichten reaches the societies and working parties of the BDPh thanks to the generous support of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History e.V.

However, very special thanks must go to the editor, the chairman of our Research and Literature Section, Franz-Josef Lindauer, Soest. How often in past years has he given up his valuable free time to bring the colossal amount of data into a usable form. We all know how to value his services.

Soest, 20th May 1996

Franz-Karl Lindner
Bund Deutscher Philatelisten e.V.

p.672

AFTERWORD

Dear User of this Literatur-Nachrichten,

As you have already learned from the introduction, this and the 1991 edition of Literatur-Nachrichten can be accessed electronically at Phil.Creativ Verlag, BDPh.Phila.Schop, Postfach 10, 41366 Schwalmtal.

Although many of my lady colleagues – foremost Frau Johanna Finger – and my own dear wife have made it their business to correct all mistakes, but one can be sure there are more to be found.

Hence, I invite users to let me know of any errors of fact or typography that they find. If an issue of a journal or an article has not been reviewed or included, please let me know this as well. These errors can then be corrected on the electronic data base.

Hearty thanks in advance to all who write in.

Finally, may I thank all my helpers in the Working Party who have helped in the appraisal of the publications, namely Messrs. Hartwig Danesch, Schwelm, Ulrich Jobsky, Wiehl, Rainer von Scharpen, Mainz, Gerhard Trogel, Leverkusen, and Jurgen Zalaszewski, Mauching, who have been responsible for many foreign journals. Without your work, Literatur-Nachrichten would only be half as valuable.

Once more thanks,
Franz-Josef Lindauer

Chairman, Research and Literature Section

FROM YELLOWED PAGES

by RICHARD KRAUSE

II. OBITUARIES OF JOURNALS

Since I took up philatelic authorship, four specialist journals in which I was active have fallen into the shadows. They are "Schweizer Illustr. Briefmarken-Zeitung" (Rob. Deyhle, Berne), "Germania" (Dr. A. Moschkau, Oybin), "Moniteur des Timbrophiles" (Jules Capelle, Ghent), and "Weltpost" (Sigmund Friedl, Vienna); Switzerland, Germany, Belgium and Austria have suffered losses in the philatelic sense. Worst affected is Switzerland, which has now gone totally quiet.

1. Schweizer Illustr. Briefmarken-Zeitung

This journal really was a treasure chest. A really knowledgeable editorial board, often with sharp pens, but that still accomplished a great deal. Paper and printing excellent! Illustrations brilliant. It is a real pity that Deyhle's magazine had to close. With what happiness I used to take off the wrapper, so as to open and read each eagerly awaited issue. Then came increasingly large gaps in its appearance before it finally closed completely. Robert Deyhle is a character and a philatelist through and through; he wrote with a sharp pen à la Dr. Sigl of Munich, but expressed himself much more temperately. He was his own most diligent worker but, strangely, this beautiful and superior Schweizer Illustr. Briefmarken-Zeitung could not build up a body of reliable co-workers. Perhaps I was the only person who unequivocally supported Deyhle's magazine; with regard to poetry, which also sprouted there, there was one C. F. R. who provided much of solid worth in conjunction with Deyhle.

There was a fresh, happy feeling through the whole paper from the start, and right up to its dying hour one could be sure that Deyhle would do everything to embellish his magazine and make it more attractive, in which he was successful. The uncommonly sharp and beautiful pictures of stamps and the initial letters of articles cleverly ornamented with stamps, were splendid additions to the outstanding contents, which related in the main to Swiss postage stamps and essays. Perhaps the time will come when this journal is awakened from what one might call its cataleptic trance, to the joy and instruction of the entire collecting world. In conclusion, if I had to find fault with anything about this journal, it would be its neglect of the "Chronicle".

2. Germania

This journal, founded by Dr. Alfred Moschkau in Oybin in the year 1885 is as regards its external appearance the total opposite of its Swiss fellow-sufferer. Completely different as regards paper and printing, it was liable to come apart in its readers' hands. In view of its modest format and unattractive appearance, "Germania" contributed to its own death, since the modern world unfortunately judges so much by appearances. The contents were entirely different; its sterling qualities left nothing to be desired. Authors of repute published their best work there, and philately would have found one of its noblest offshoots in "Germania" if its poor external appearance had not deterred collectors from subscribing in any numbers.

Of course, Dr. Moschkau could not measure up to Deyhle in “snappiness”, since our old master was relatively very modest about his learning, and rejected any sort of stylistic flourishes in his “science”. In any event, Dr. Moschkau is not in the first place a businessman else he would certainly not have failed to give his “Germania” more ‘trimmings’ to make it more society-minded. However, I worked willingly for this magazine and, for example, my article on “Fake E. U. from Columbia Registro” was reprinted by two other magazines that in point of view of layout were far above “Germania”, but from the intellectual point of view were much inferior. That a paper which has such a distinguished editor and publisher as Dr. Moschkau has had to close is a sad sign of the times.

3. Le Moniteur des Timbrophiles

It was a bold undertaking in Belgium, the “land of Timbre-Poste and the famous Moens”, to bring out a rival magazine to struggle against this “Bismarck of Stamps”. However, Herr Jules Capelle, an otherwise estimable person I believe, had not the ability for it. His magazine did have tolerable paper, good printers’ ink and copious illustrations; he also gave away free stamps and also recorded new issues in great detail, but that was all! The fare provided was too one-sided, since it consisted for the most part of the history of posts and postage stamps, with other important questions being very much neglected. “History of the Stamps of the Kingdom of Saxony” by Dr. Kloss (a translation) is indeed interesting, as is “History of the Postal Service”, though this can interest in the main only postal officials and essays collectors, and so I, in my ‘Pro futuro’ and “History taught from postage stamps” tried to bring in something a little different, until the magazine shut down for want of subscribers.

4. Weltpost

This lives, but is still dead, this “Weltpost”. In earlier days it was the biggest, most important and most impressive specialist journal of Austria, with a host of important and sometimes famous contributors in train, but it was now dwindled into an advertising sheet, and must be counted amongst the “deceased” as a serious journal. One Ferd. Meyer was a regular contributor, a “crackpot”, and always a witty joker. In its scientific part, “Weltpost” showed high scientific endeavour and noteworthy seriousness. It was joy every month to read the best names under the technical articles, and though it was also the organ of the “Vienna Philatelists@ Club”, this did not take up too much space, which made a favourable impression. It is time it got into many struggles with other specialist papers, which did not completely avoid unpleasant expressions. These often gave rise to legal proceedings, so that the banner of philately often threatened to sink, but a time of peace of composure came and “Weltpost” again dominated the situation in its accustomed manner. The “News” section could be taken as a pattern, since it covered “bypost” and rural stamps as well. The layout was adequate, if not as artistic as that of the Schweizer Illustr. Briefmarken-Zeitung, and the still flourishing “Illustr. Briefmarken-Journal”. Paper and printing were good, though the illustrations of stamps generally left much to be desired. Friedl himself appears extremely rarely in editorial guise, which leads to the supposition that he was only the manager, and left the “philatelic” editing to other people. However, it must be acknowledged that in his “Postage Stamp Museum” at Vienna (Unterdöbling) he has given philately a worthy home and shown himself to be a promoter of our science in his way.

At the time when Dr. Moschkau was acting as editor of “Weltpost”, the “First Public Exhibition of the Stamps of All Nations in Vienna” took place. This enjoyed the recognition of imperial princes, and its importance for our science should not be underestimated. When the Vienna Philatelists' Club left "Weltpost" to publish its own "Communications", the magazine became steadily thinner and poorer, until it only ran to three sheets and ceased to be a specialist journal at the end of 1884. It now appears as an advertising organ. Thus we have lost an excellent magazine that always respected knowledge. It is possible it might be revived in fresh strength. All philatelists will wish for it. The "Society Communications" with their restricted nature intended for the information of the members alone, have brought this about.

[H. Fraenkel]

The German philatelic literature 1892/93

[Die Deutsche philatelistische litteratur 1892/93]

Deutsche Briefmarken - Zeitung, 1st September 1893, Volume 3, Issue 12, pp.174-177

The anonymous author is identified by Albert Gottschalk - See Philat. Trans. 037

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca. 1999

THE GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE 1892/93

The fifth German Philatelists' Meeting gives us the opportunity to design a short survey of scientific publications on our hobby in the German language, which have appeared in the years 1892 and 1893. This limitation as to time has been accepted on the one hand because of the restrictions of a short article, and on the other because the bibliography by Supreme Court Counsellor Suppantschitsch for the period up to and including the year 1891 gives abundant material and a relatively full survey.

We do not in the least intend to supply a continuation of this excellent work. Rather, we only intend as stated in the introduction to give a brief mention of the most outstanding items in our specialist literature, and give a survey of the periodicals. We make no claim to completeness.

We cannot, unfortunately, show anything to compare with all the works in the field of philately, such as are done abroad in such things as the Moens' catalogue, Barbarin's catalogue, the new edition of the Stanley Gibbons catalogue, and the slow but steadily progressing catalogue for advanced collectors by Collin and Calman.

In 1892 there was the eighth supplement to F. Meyer's Handbook (from Dr. Kloss). A good book, but limited to stamps.

The "Grosse Handbuch" is unfortunately not being proceeded with. We would not like to decide on whom to place the blame for this: "Iliacos intra muros peccatur et extra" (Both sides are to be blamed).

On the other hand, both the last two years have brought us a new edition of the well-known Larisch catalogue, in enlarged and improved formats. Above all though, 1892 saw the first, and 1893 the second edition of the epoch-making catalogue from the Senf Brothers. Both catalogues stand well above all other German ones, of which we only have poor extracts from familiar albums with arbitrarily determined prices. Better than these is the small catalogue from Paul Kohl, which is the prototype for an album, though so far it only covers Germany.

The familiar albums have appeared in new and improved editions. Generally speaking, each has its advantages and drawbacks, and the saying is again true that "one does not suit all". It must be left to the individual to choose between Baumbach, Schwaneberger, Schaubek and Zschiesche, and decide on the old system or the new. The Köppe album is really only for advanced collectors, but will suit them very well. The Sauer album, in loose cardboard binders, was planned on a large scale but seems to have stopped after the first instalments, and nothing has been heard about the Schlegel album (St. Gallen) either. The albums produced without spaces for stamps and entires do not really belong here; however, we will mention at least the first-rate Senf entires issue, and the cardboard folders from Maasch (Berlin). More recently, a permanent album has been put on the market by Krötzsch – Leipzig, and quarterly supplements and current information sheets on new issues, forgeries, cancellations, etc., should follow. The first specimen of a confidential correspondence sheet is very promising, like the name of its author, Herr Rommel.

Germany has produced more than foreign countries in the field of individual special topics in 1892/93.

Suppantschitsch mentions in his introduction to the bibliography of our specialist literature that it will run to 11 parts. New issues were dealt with by Dr. Kalckhoff in a little book translated into English. Reinheimer followed Part I of his German Cancellations with a Part II with much further interesting material, amongst which we cannot include however cancellations by a stroke of the pen

Other special topics have been covered by: Rommel, in his work on Bergedorf; Lindenberg, in his monographs on envelopes of the German States, of which the ones on Brunswick. The two Mecklenburgs, Lübeck, Thurn-und-Taxis, North German Postal Region & Oldenburg have appeared, and we must hope for more soon. We also have a pamphlet from Ludwig Berger on Brunswick in prospect, and we greet this happily before it appears. The Brunswick roulette has also been the subject of the well-known pamphlet from the Frankfurt Society for Philately, this puts the energetic work of this Society against unrealities and for the protection of its members in the best possible light.

Offprints from journals have included a study by Riise on Denmark, Bochmann's outstanding work on Russian stamps and their cancellations, and recently from the firm of A. Larisch, the very commendable work of Ginsewald on the oldest Swiss stamps. A controversial article from our magazine Oesterreichische Dioskuren has also appeared as an offprint, and the work of Herr Bernhard Blaukuth on the leading characteristics of the Bremen stamps has been specially reprinted from No. 7 1893 of Der Philatelist. We mention simply as a curiosity that Markenmüller's humorous philatelic reports have been reprinted from the gossip columns of the Illustr. Briefmarken-Journal.

We hope we have not missed anything, but will be glad to hear of anything else, and will now go on to the periodical literature in which the German-language area is so rich.

The proceedings mentioned by Suppantschitsch of the Berlin Philatelists' Club, the Society of Brunswick Stamp Collectors, the Elberfeld Exchange Union, Globus, the Lubeck Society for Philately and the International Society of Stamp Dealers come less into consideration here, since they are only available to a restricted circle, although the proceedings of the first-named club contain much of interest, and Herr Ludwig Berger now and then contributes an interesting paper to the proceedings of the second. As far as we know, all these proceedings are still appearing. To them we can add the Proceedings of the Voigtland Philatelic Society in 1892, and of the Wüttemberg Philatelic Society in 1893.

The Moniteur du Collectionneur which Suppantshitsch also mentions is more French than German; however, for the sake of completeness we will record that it still exists.

Moreover, Suppantshitsch mentions the following journals as existing at the end of 1891 and still appearing:

1. Beitrage zur Postwertzeichenkunde (Senf, Leipzig – 4 issues per year)
2. Der Briefmarkensammler (Morbes, Bremen – monthly)
3. Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung (Brendicke, Berlin – monthly)
4. Fortuna (Wenzel, Cöpenick – monthly)
5. General-Anzeiger für Philatelie (Sauerland, Hemer – semi-monthly)
6. Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung (Heitmann, Leipzig – semi monthly)
7. Illustrierte Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung mit Universum (Dauth, Frankfurt-a-M – monthly).
8. Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal (Senf, Leipzig, with offers sheet – monthly)
9. Internationales Briefmarken-Journal (Jeran, Breslau – monthly)
10. Mitteilungen des Oesterreichischen Philatelisten-Club (Vienna – monthly)
11. Neueste Privatpostnachrichten (Glasewald, Gössnitz – monthly)
12. Philatelist (International Philatelic Society, Dresden, with Proceedings of the Int. Phil. Soc – recently monthly)
13. Philatelisten-Zeitung (Meier, Stade – monthly)
14. Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier (Sauer-Mährisch, Ostrau – semi-monthly)
15. Das Postwerthzeichen (Bavarian Philatelic Society, Munich – monthly)
16. Die Postwertzeichenkunde (Larisch, Munich, with Ver. Erdball-Merkur – monthly)
17. Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal (Kirchhofer, Lausanne – monthly)
18. Vertrauliches Korrespondenzblatt Philatelistischer Vereine (Union, Strasburg – monthly)
19. Wegweiser für Sammler (Stefke-Leipzig – semi-monthly)
20. Weltpost (Friedl, Vienna – irregular)

All these are still in existence today, apart from Philatelistenzeitung, which apparently only lasted till the end of 1892, and possible also Fortuna, of which we have had nothing since No. 4 (April) of this year. At the beginning of 1892 it passed into the ownership of Josef Bergmann – Oedenburg. The Beitrage zur Postwerthzeichenkunde completed its first volume in 1892 and 2 numbers of its second volume are to hand. All the other have kept to the rate of appearance shown in brackets (monthly – semi-monthly); however, Fortuna, Ill Frankf. Zeitung, Intern. Briefmarken-Journal are distinguished by the more or less frequent appearance of double issues.

We must list the following as the most outstanding of these journals, as we can obviously not include our own opinion, in alphabetical order:

- 1) Illustrierte Briefmarkenzeitung
- 2) Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal (with Beitrage zur Postwertzeichenkunde)
- 3) Philatelist
- 4) Postwertzeichenkunde

Of the noteworthy larger original works appearing in 1892/93, we may name:

- From (1): Kalckhoff, new issues (1892) and supplements (1893); North German field postcards, Rural post of Baden. Friederich, Spanish habilitade stamps, Spanish war taxation stamps, Don Carlos stamps. Von Bochmann, Russian stamps and their cancellations S.; Indian tributary states. Beilicke, German postcards. Schneider, Alsace-Lorraine (appeared earlier in Proceedings of the Berlin Philat. Club). Heitmann, Wüttemberg (stamps and covers), Saxony (covers).
- From (2): Haas, more information on nominal types of Moldavian stamps, on the St. Andrew's Cross, on the stamps of Mauritius 1858/59. Anheisser; Cancellation of German postage stamps, of which subject the author has unfortunately to date dealt only with stamps from the field Post Offices of the North German postal region during the war of 1870/71. Vorwald, various papers on Japan. Cermak, various papers on Austria, Hungary. Haas, Postcards of Cuba. Lindenberg, Prussian octagonal. Lenzdel, money order covers from Wüttemberg.
- From (3): Kunkel, types of the stamps of France. Beilicke, Spanish postcards. Von Neulinger, on Turkish postage stamps. Blauhuth, stamps of Bremen. Reinheimer, cancellation stamps from Austria, etc. Anonymous, characteristics of the Hamburg stamps.
- From (4): Riise, Denmark. Otto, legal questions from philatelic business life (unfortunately not continued). Rommel, Lübek. Suppantisch, non-German magazines. Von Ginsewald, older Swiss stamps. Von Horrak, Rumania.

III. Briefmarken-Journal continues to publish its offers sheet, to which it has added since 1893 the Vereinsbote (Society Messenger), which deals with Society reports. As before, Erdball-Merkur continues to accompany Postwertzeichenkunde, and society reports have still been separated from Philatelist as they have since 1891. Its supplement "Philatelia Humoristica" appeared up to No. 2 which dealt with the previous year's philatelic meetings, but we have unfortunately not seen it since then.

We will add to these journals Postwertzeichen, the organ of the Bavarian Philatelic Society and the Proceedings of the Austrian Philatelic Club. Both continue to be outstanding and contain much interesting material. The first has this year published several articles from the pen of its active new editor, Herr Brummer. We have little to say about the other journals. The Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal has appeared since the beginning of 1893 in Basle under the auspices of that city's society. The advertising papers continue to be Der General-Anzeiger, Der Wegweiser für Sammler, Die Weltpost, Illustrierte Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung. As we know Vertrauliche Korrespondenzblatt continues to pursue its own ends, to which it is drawing steadily nearer. The latest private post magazines follow a special direction. It is best to remain silent about the contents of the remaining journals.

To replace the two journals that have stopped, the following have appeared:

1. 15th December 1891, Suddeutsche Briefmarken-Journal (Wolf, Munich) which fortunately ceased as soon as No. 5.
2. January 1892, Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung (Koch, Vienna). This came out as a continuation of the old Koch journal which ceased with No. 6 of Vol. XI, 1890 and was numbered as its Vol. XIII. 12 issues (6 double issues) were dated from 1892, the last in summer of that year. The publisher intends to keep it going.

3. January 1892, Die Briefmarken-Börse (Marbes, Bremen) contains only exchange offers and may well have ceased with No. 5.
4. 25th January 1892, Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt (Vogel, Poesneck). Adverts only, 12 issues in 1892, 7 so far in 1893.
5. 1st February 1892, Der Globus (Globus, Berlin), published 12 issues in 1892, 6 this year. Since then it has published only reports for members of the Globus Society.
6. 28th April 1892, Philatelistische Jugendschrift (Bruchsaal School Philatelic Society), with supplements "Society Messenger" and "Exchange Offers". As far as we know, only 4 printed issues appeared. Afterwards it became a magazine for the members of the Leipzig section of the "Chalmers" Society for Young Stamp Collectors. The number of issues is not known to us.
7. 15th May 1891, Senf's Briefe (W. A. Louis Senf & Co., Leipzig). It stopped at this issue.
8. 1st July 1892, Die Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung (Glasewald, Gössnitz), which has since acquired Neueste Privatpostnachrichten as a no-longer independent supplement. This magazine appears monthly.
9. 15th July 1892, Sud-America (Mittelmann, Czernowicz) adverts journal, was supposed to appear quarterly but we have only had the issues for 15th July 1892 and 15th January 1893. Again, we are not eager for more.
10. October 1892(?), Das Echo der Postwerthzeichenkunde (Wehrheim, Stuttgart). This is mainly an advertising sheet and appears irregularly. We never saw numbers 1 and 2 and the last was the double issue 9/10 (April-May 1893).
11. 15th October 1892, Correspondenz Seyfried (Seyfried, Prague), 9 issue to 15th February 1893 have appeared since No. 10 under the title Oesterreichische Correspondenz" and is merely an advertising sheet.
12. The San Marino Philatelist (Bickel, San Marino) appeared in three languages (German, English, French) in 12 issues during 1892 and will be continued as a circular by its publisher.

The year 1893 has so far also given us (apart from the name change of Oesterreichische Correspondenz) the following:

1. Wiener Briefmarken-Journal (Szabó, Vienna). No. 1 of 18th February 1893 (doubtful whether any more will appear); a small paper, almost comic in view of its littleness and get-up.
2. Internationaler Briefmarken-Anzeiger (Hofmann-Bockenheim, Frankfurt am Main). We have found out nothing more about this advertising sheet either.
3. Universum (Weissmann, Budapest). Advertising sheet. No. 1 dated 15th April 1893, then seems to have folded.
4. Deutsche Briefmarken-Post (Greeff, Barmen), mainly advertising, No. 1 of 1st June 1893, Nos. 2 and 3 1st July and 1st August.

We should be very thankful to hear of and receive issues not listed here.

We cannot say that any of these magazines, with the possible exception of Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung is much of a gain to our literature. Zeal and youthful enthusiasm alone, as exhibited notably by "Globus" does not guarantee a good magazine. The numerous advertising sheets add nothing to our knowledge and are, to be frank, harmful. They show our hobby in the least favourable light, since the preponderance of such papers must give the idea that we are mainly interested in exchange, buying and selling, or in one word – business.

Hence it could happen that a well-known humorist could poke fun at our trading, in terms of an apocryphal project to rig the stamp market, and that since Sardou (with the Bewiton family) the number of satirical articles in the political etc papers sneering at our petty trading and begging as regards stamps has become ever greater. Of recent years, we remember the trenchant satire in No. 39 of Gegenwart (1892), and the amusing article on the supply of Columbus stamps, which has been reprinted by a number of specialist papers from the Kölnische Zeitung.

However, on the other hand we do get fair-minded appraisals of our hobby: in Illustrierte Welt, Moderne Kunst, Nationalzeitung amongst others. It is up to collectors and dealers as well to eliminate, or at least stand out against such abuses (e.g. Jubilee stamps and cards) as can rightly be charged against them. A vigorous stand must be made against the countless advertising sheets: no adverts should be placed in them. Our prime purpose must be study, not petty trading, not investing money nor making money. Then the article in this year's Gartenlaube, quite justifiably warning parents and teachers about allowing young people to get the spirit of hucksterism from stamp collecting, would lose its applicability. We would then finally see the end of the articles on "Stamp collecting as an insurance" or "Speculation in postage stamps", predictions of price rises, etc., then not so many of our better collectors would not give up their collections in disgust.

May the next philatelic meeting be able to welcome some real progress in this direction.

END

Philatelistische Litteratur
January 1895, Volume 1, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.I-II

Our programme

The number of philatelic periodicals that appear regularly is so great that the production of a new one calls for special reasons and justification, especially when, as in this case, it is only a regular supplement to an existing journal, as this will always be.

The idea is steadily gaining ground with private individuals as well as societies that the collection of postage stamps must be accompanied by their serious study, if it is to amount to anything more than building up a series of pretty little pictures. Thus, there can be hardly a single person who does not read one or more magazines and seek to learn from them; and many of them (though regrettably still not nearly enough) get hold of the treatments in monograph form of individual topics in collecting that have begun to appear in recent years, so as to get as firm a foundation as possible for their knowledge.

We must also be quite clear that the philatelic press, and especially the German section of it, designed in the first place for the German reader, is fully aware of its task, and makes every attempt to cover everything and from all sides, but we must not fail to appreciate that the older literary productions are still indispensable for a really thorough study. Anyone who has begun to use them will know how much valuable knowledge they contain.

Moreover, anyone who wants to do some writing of his own will absolutely have to refer to the older literature: he will not only find subjects and material for good articles, but will also make some of the older treasures available that would otherwise stay hidden away.

These are essentially the considerations that at the start of this decade impelled Provincial Court Counsel Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz to compile a bibliography of the German philatelic literature up to the end of 1891. He did not limit himself to listing the journals that had appeared, but checked their entire contents with amazing diligence and ability and made them clearly available.

This outstanding work fulfills many purposes: it gives an impetus to the foundation of collections of magazines and pamphlets, libraries in other words, and provides a handy means of locating the references on a particular topic scattered throughout the literature and finding out where to get them.

And in fact, since Suppantshitsch's epoch-making work, current literature has very often contained references to the older literature, apart from uncontrolled studies by individuals which never get into print.

And more and more societies and individual philatelists are making haste to repair their negligence and start a library. Of course, this is like starting a stamp collection; the older items that were only issued in limited numbers are very hard if not impossible to find.

One especially limiting factor is the lack of a centre for the lovers and collectors of literature, where they can get up-to-date information on newly-discovered and newly-published items from philatelic publishers at home and abroad, where they can get guidelines as to prices, for the older literature especially, and where philatelic bibliophiles can get together to buy, sell and exchange their wants.

This is the aim of

Die Philatelistische Litteratur

It will also include objective descriptions of periodical literature, monographs, catalogues etc., and will when necessary give collections of press comments on the lines of the bibliography mentioned above, that cover the period since 1891, as this bibliography does not relate to that period.

We thus hope to provide a paper the like of which has not previously existed in Germany or anywhere else, and hope to provide an outstanding service to the ever-growing number of philatelic bibliophiles; we shall also try to give lists of the prices of the older periodical literature, the costs of which have so far been only available haphazardly from their respective publishers.

We also cherish the hope that all collectors and lovers of literature will make this their first choice for their adverts, and that publishers will also send their announcements to us, and by sending us their current issues will keep us up-to-date, since we make no secret of the fact that otherwise our attempts will not meet with the designed success.

We have managed to recruit several leading philatelic bibliophiles as regular contributors to Philatelistische Litteratur, so that our new enterprise rests on firm foundations in this respect.

Leipzig, Jan. 1895

The Editors of Philatelistische Litteratur

pp.II-III

*Chronicle of changes in the literary field

It should be noted that it was never my intention that this bibliographic data should be translated. My instructions to the translator must have been very deficient. I have therefore not bothered to edit these thoroughly.

Germany

Schleswig-Holsteinische Briefmarken Zeitung, published by Wil. L. Knutz in Barrup, printed by A. Carstensen, Gravenstein: No. 1 dated 10 Sept-1894, then monthly. Contents: adverts and some text. Terms of purchase: No. 1-, 1.25 marks: from No. 4 reduced to .50 marks, .75 M yearly.

Norddeutsches Postwertzeichen-Offertenblatt, published by Marian Notzel in Sianowo bei Carthaus in West Prussia, printed by P. Raczkiewicz in Danzig. No. 1 dated October 1894, then monthly. Contents: adverts. Terms of purchase: .50 .75 annually.

Norddeutsche Briefmarkenpost, published by Julius Helm in Hamburg, printed by Otto Fuhrmann in Stendal. No. 1 dated 1 November 1894, then monthly, but came to an end with No. 2 of December 1894. Contents: adverts. Terms of purchase -.50 marks, -.75 m annually.

Interessantes Briefmarkenblatt, published by R. Wiering in Hamburg. Contents: adverts and some text, the latter gossiping and of no philatelic interest. No. 1 dated November 1894, then half-monthly. Subscription price 3- marks, 4- marks. I do not know if any more have been issued.

Internationales Briefmarkenblatt "Concordia", published by A. Herter in Leipa. No. 1 unknown, No. 2 should appear on 15 Jan. 1895. Contents: adverts, specialist articles etc. Terms of purchase 1- m. annually.

Allgemeiner Anzeiger für Postwertzeichen-Sammelkunde, should have been published on 1 January 1895 by Assistant Postmaster-General C. Dickmann-Munster, as the society magazine for stamp collectors' societies in Westphalia and the Rhineland, but it has not yet appeared.

* We do not claim to give in this issue a full survey of the new periodicals of 1894: also in this first issue we had to step back a little and not restrict ourselves just to things reported in that period.

Journal für Markenkunde, published by Arthur Wulbern-Hamburg in 12 numbers during 1894 (Nos. 3/4 and 11/12 double numbers) has ceased.

Internationales Briefmarken-Journal, published by Oscar Jeran in Lieguitz as a continuation of "Internationale Briefmarken-Zeitung" ceased in 1894 (Vol VI of both journals appeared together), but is continued by the "Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung" published by Robert Karst, Berlin. No. 1 of this appeared on 20 October 1894: thereafter monthly. Terms of purchase: 2-m, 2.40 M annually.

Austria-Hungary

Philatelistischer Borsen-Courier, ceased in its IX year with no. 18 of 25 September 1894. It was published by Julius Kittel in Mährisch-Ostrau.

Neue Briefmarken-Zeitung, published by E. Gruneberg in Karlsbad, printed by Hans Feller in Karlsbad. Began on 1 September 1894, then semi-monthly. Contents: technical articles, especially relating to zemstvo stamps, and adverts. Terms of purchase: 4- M annually, 4.80 M., also quartely subscriptions.

Scandinavia

Filatelisten, an advertising sheet published by Martin Ludwig Holm in Alesund, began with No. 1 on 10 May 1894, and ceased after three issues. It was succeeded on 10-15 January 1895 by Nordisk Frimarke Tidende, same publisher, an adverts sheet in German and Norweigian-Danish.

Italy

El Araldo Filatelico e Numismatico, published by Maria Rosa Tommasi in Milan, began with nos. 1 on 1 December 1894, then monthly. Contents: good technical articles. Terms of purchase: 1.50 - 2- lire Publicite Philatelique, no. 1 appeared on 10 November 1894 as a purely French-language advertising sheet in Padua. Publisher, printer etc. not known. Sent out free.

Il Corriere dei Francobolli, issued since November 1894 by Vittorio Durani & Co. in Turin. Contents: technical articles. Terms of purchase: 1.50 lire annually.

Switzerland

Le Philateliste Suisse issued by E. Nicolet-Fils in Chaux-de-Fonds. No. 1 dated 1 December 1894.

Spain

Tarraco Filatelico, published by Ricardo Besses in Tarragona. No. 1 in October 1894.

Espania Postal, should have appeared on 1 January 1895 in Malaga, but has not done so yet.

Portugal

O Philatelista, published by Faustino A. Martins in Lisbon. No. 1 of IIIrd series in October 1894. The first series covered the years 1887, 1888 and the second series 1891 and 1892.

Le Portugal Philatelique, its appearance was announced for 1 January 1895 in Aveiro, but it has not come out yet.

France

Le Mercuriale, stopped publishing in June 1893 with no. 6, and began again with no. 7 at the end of December 1894. The reason for the break was the death of its publisher, Leon Bresson of Paris, but his widow has now begun to issue it.

Great Britain

The Philatelic Advertiser, in London, an adverts sheet on the lines of the "Generalanzeiger für Philatelie" or the "Internationale Briefmarken-Offertenblatt".

The Universal Stamp Review, London, was announced for January 1895 but has not appeared yet.

United States of America

The Philatelic Review of Reviews, was published in August 1894 by H. E. Tuttle and Co. in Osage, Iowa. Subscription price 2.10 marks annually.

Also appeared:

The Philatelic Sun, in Taunton, Massachusetts.

The Weekly Philatelic Era, weekly in Portland, Maine.

The Northan Philatelist, not known where.

The Occident, in Washington D.C.

The Lone Star State Philatelist, not known where.

The Pipestone Philatelist, in Pipestone, Minnesota.

The Weekly Philatelist, in New Chester, ceased on 12 September 1894 and was replaced by The Weekly Philatelic Era mentioned before.

Canada

The Canadian Philatelist, suffered a break in publication from February to September 1894.

The Canadian Philatelic Magazine, which appeared earlier in Halifax (Nova Scotia), began its second series with no. 1 on 15 September in Toronto.

The Pet Philatelist, appeared in 1894, not known where.

British India

The Indian Postal Stamp News appeared at the end of 1894 in Bombay.

Signs of Times an older political journal in Calcutta has included articles on philately in every issue since the end of 1894.

Australia

The Australian Stamp News Quarterly has been the title since December 1894 of the earlier Australian Stamp News. It now has an octavo format and only appears every quarter.

Argentina

Revista de la Sociedad Argentina, was issued in November 1894 by the Sociedad Filatelica Argentina in Buenos-Ayres. Contents: good technical articles. Terms of purchase: 7.50 gold francs.

El Argentina Filatelico, published by Madame A. R. de Bousquet in Rosario: No. 1 on 15 September 1894, then monthly.

Costa Rica

Costa-Rica-Postal, appeared at the end of 1894 as an undistinguished adverts sheet.

Venezuela

El Arte Filatelico, No. 2 appeared in Valencia in Sept. 1894, after No. 1 had appeared in November 1892.

Where the foregoing data are incomplete, we hope to complete, and if necessary correct them in later issues.

Just before we went to press there appeared:

Die Briefumschläge von Hannover, Part 11 and 12 of C. Lindenberg's work on "Die Briefumschläge der Deutschen Staaten". A description of this 176-page number must be held over to our next issue.

p.IV

Philatelic review

(All magazines for which mention in our Review is desired must be sent to us free and regularly.)

Die Postwertzeichenkunde. 1894. No. 12 contains an interesting paper by Fr. Weber on cancellations from the former independent German states on stamps from the North German Postal Region and the German Reich. The old cancellation stamps are described which were used before 1866 in the various small German States and went on being used later in the North German League and occasionally even in the Reich. The series on the art of the European postcard by Dr.  is continued, then follows Chronicle and Miscellaneous.

Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung. 1894. No. 12. A compact account, accompanied by illustrations, of the new issues is given. A. E. Glasewald describes a dangerous forgery of the French 40c blue postage stamp, and forged imprints of the I. R. official 2½p. stamp from England, and the German Levant 2½p.

Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal. 1895. No. 1 Woemos continues his humorous articles with "Gaily altogether".

Th. Haas begins with a study of familiar and unfamiliar varieties/variants, which is of great interest to the special collector. H. Fidora publishes a detailed account of the Italian recognition stamps, and prints documents to show these in the right light. Then follows a well-edited "chronicle", a description of a forgery from the Russian Levant, and then something about the testing of stamps under "Questions of the Day".

Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift. 1894. No. 24 prints a list of American covers, then illustrates the manner and methods of various philatelic Dark men, and warns against them. A list of new issues, without illustrations, concludes the editorial section. Society reports make up the rest of the issue.

L'Echo de la Timbrologie. 1894 No. 48 begins by printing the petition from the President of the Philatelic Society to the Chief Public Prosecutor, which goes into details of the damage inflicted on dealers and collectors by the various forgers, and asks for the vigorous protection of the State and the prosecution of the forgers. This is followed by a detailed treatment of the Congo from its political and economic aspects, and finally there are pictures of the new stamps. A fairly good "Chronicle" closes the number.

L'Avenir des Timbres-Poste. 1895. No. 1. The old master Moens opens the first number of his 33rd volume with a list of new issues as excellent and detailed as ever. This is followed by the conclusion of his study on the stamps of Bergedorff: he then gives a little comentary on almost all the special issues and reports in political journalism on collecting the late Tsar Alexander.

The Australian Philatelist. 1894. No. 24 starts with a survey of the month, including a list of new issues. There is a very detailed treatment of the stamps of the Cook Islands, a report which is the beginning of the "Oceania Catalogue".

The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain. 1894 No. 48. This extremely well-edited journal introduces its readers to the work of Herr von Neulinger on the Turkish stamps, in a good translation. The list of new issues is very correct and is treated in detail. The supplement "Philatelic Review of Reviews" discusses the most outstanding philatelic journals from all nations.

p.IV

Prices of older philatelic literature

Journal für Markenkunde. The editor A. Wulbern of Hamburg offers the complete year 1894 with all the free supplements post-paid for 3- marks (cf. "Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung", I, 3, p. 53, Vogel's "Intern. Briefm-Offerten-Blatt" III no. 51, p. 689, where 5 marks are asked for - pehaps by mistake).

Il Francobollo. Year I complete can be obtained from the publisher at Via Torino 2, Piazza del Duomo, Milan, for 2.40 marks, plus postage (cf. "Il Francobollo", II, 22, p.221).

La Posta Universale, otherwise La Poste Universelle. Nos. 1-7 (complete) available from the publisher, 1 Via Capuano, Trieste, post free, for .80 marks. 3 Columbus stamps, 1 Tunis. 1 Obock and the 15, 20, 30 and 50 soldi Hungarian stamps will be included free. (cf. Il Francobollo, II, 22, p. 218).

L'Echo de la Timbrologie is on offer post-free from its publisher M. Fremy, No. 7 Rue de l'Abbaye-des-Pres, Douai (Nord):

1887/88	(vols. I and II)	Nos. 1-14	2.40 marks
1889	(vol. III)	Nos. 15-26	2.40 "
1890	(vol IV)	Nos. 27-38	2.40 "
1891	(vol V)	Nos. 39-50	1.60 "
1892	(vol VI)	Nos. 51-65	1.60 "

Austria Philatelist. Vol II, no. 1, p.28 contains the following offer, open to subscribers to Vol. II only:

Vol. I (1893/4), complete, unbound, post-free for 4 marks.
 " " " complete, bound, " " for 6 marks.

p. 41 of the same issue offers the special issue relating to the Vienna exhibition free to anyone on request.

END

Philatelistische Litteratur
February 1895, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.I-II

Chronicle of changes occurring in the literary world

German Empire

Deutsche Briefmarken-Post was published in 7 or 4 (?) numbers during 1893 and 1894 by Hermann Greff, Barmen, and then finished. At the end of December 1895 no. 12 of vol III of a magazine with the same name suddenly appeared from C. G. Vogel-Plauen (in Voigtland). This could well be a continuation of the earlier one, though it is not stated to be so, and is very different from, and better than the other in form and content. Contents: scientific articles etc. Subscription rates: For Germany and Austria-Hungary via the post or the book trade, 1.50 M (1 gulden); sent direct, 2 M.

Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger für Postwertzeichen-Sammelkunde. Society magazine for stamp collectors' societies in Westphalia and the Rhineland. (cf. no 1, p.II of Phil. Lit). This is not published by C. Dieckmann (Munster) but by Rob. von Gangreben in Dortmund, and edited with the help of C. Dieckmann. No. 1 appeared on 1st February 1895. Subscription price for 12 numbers (instead of the 24 originally envisaged) is 1.50 M for Germany and 2.50 M abroad.

Briefmarken Anzeiger edited and published by Otto Pfaffe in Stettin and printed by S. Salomon in Stettin. No. 1 appeared in December 1894, no. 2 was undated, but followed on the 19th January 1895. Contains only advertisements: subscription rate: post-free 50 pfennings, abroad 1 Mark, for which 1-10 stamps with a catalogue value of 1M in total will be forwarded.

Austria-Hungary

Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier whose cessation was announced in No. 1, p.II of Phil. Lit., will probably appear again shortly under the personal supervision of Karl Cl. Sauer, currently of Vienna, if certain difficulties can be overcome.

Polski Filatelista passed into the ownership of its editor M. Urbanski of Kracow from no. 89.

Italy

Trinacria is the title of a new free advertising sheet, which according to a notice dated 15th February 1895 from Cocorulla & Co., 113 Salvator Rosa, Naples.

San Marino is a monthly from Sperati of Pistoia, appearing since the 15th January 1895 and sent out from San Marino. A year's foreign subscription costs 1 franc.

Finland

Finska Filatelisten, organ of the Helsingfors Frimaerks-Samlare Förenig has published its number 0 (specimen issue). Contents: scientific articles etc. The actual magazine will appear monthly with the exception of July and August.

France

Le Questionneur Timbrophilique, from Pierre Mahé in Paris, published no. 9 for September 1894 along with no. 10 in December 1894: no. 11 followed in January 1895. The apparent cessation of this magazine seems to have been due merely to its irregular appearance, brought about by overwork and illness of the publisher.

Le Philatliste Lyonnais is announced as a monthly specialist journal from an unnamed publisher in Lyons, Place Tabareau, for the middle of March 1895. A three-month's trial subscription can be had for merely a prepaid postcard: beyond this, it will be 75 marks for France and its colonies

Great Britain

The Philatelic Advertiser, which we mentioned in No. 1, p.III of Phil. Lit. appears monthly from R. Bragger & Co., 4, Harrow Road, Woodfield, London W. It is an advertising sheet and costs 6 pence yearly.

General Advertiser for Philatelists should have appeared as a sixpenny monthly advertising sheet on the 15th December 1894 from Eastoe & Co., 3 Ferndale Road, Upton, Essex, but has not reached us.

The Monthly Advertiser should appear shortly in England (where? unknown) and be sent gratis to 5,000 prominent philatelists.

The Stamp Collectors Monthly Magazine, which was called The Stamp Collectors Monthly from No. 5 on and was published by H. Marryat & Co. in Richmond as a respected scientific journal, has been bought by Harry Hilkes of London and consequently ceased to appear, since Hilkes intends to amalgamate it with The Stamp Collectors Fortnightly which he has published since Autumn 1894.

Philatelic Rail Splitter is the title of a new humorous magazine, about which no other details are yet known.

Philatelic Journal of Great Britain from William Brown of Salisbury has transferred its editorship to Miss Ethell Scott Stokes.

Rumania

Le Philatliste Romain No. 1 appeared on 15th/27th January 1895 from Virgile Budescu & N. G. Budescu in Braila. Monthly advertising sheet with some text (new issues). Subscription price Fr.1.50, foreign 2 francs.

United States of America

The Philatelic Visitor, a small advertising sheet, is published by W. Gregory in New York.

The Lone Star State Philatelist, whose appearance we recorded in no. 1, p.III of Phil. Litt. is published every month by Roy Bradley in Abilene (Texas) at an annual cost of 25 cents.

The Philatelic Sun, which we also reported in No. I, p.III, appears monthly from the Philatelic Sun Publishing Co., F. W. Kaupp, in Taunton, Massachusetts. A three-months' subscription costs only 5 cents, an entire year 15 cents.

The Weekly Philatelic Era, again recorded in No. 1, p.III of Phil. Litt., is published every Sunday by W. W. Jewett, 502 Congress St., Portland (Maine). Yearly subscription for the US., Canada and Mexico 50 cents, 1 dollar for other countries. Three-monthly trial subscription for the first group of countries: 10 cents.

PHILATELIC REVIEW

(Magazines which it is wished to have mentioned in our review must be sent to us free, in duplicate).

Austria Philatelist. 1895 no. 1. This outstanding journal begins its second year with the following: biography of Ludwig Schwarz, then continuation of The Postage Stamps of Austria-Hungary and Lombardy by Hans Kropf. Suppantchitsch writes on Philatelic Libraries. The story A real Post-Office Mauritius for sale. Where? to be continued. New issues are given good illustrations.

At the start of No. 2 we welcome the biography with attached portrait of our distinguished collaborator Dr. Otto Rommel. The postage stamps of Austria-Hungary and Lombardy is continued, and V. Suppantchitsch writes more about Philatelic Libraries. The author makes a suggestion, according with our own view, that societies should begin to build up their own book collections Russian Zemstvo stamps and their history, by S. Koprowski, is translated from Polski Filatelista. Dr. Rommel writes on the essays of Thurn and Taxis. The new issues are exhaustive, and the mixture good.

Der Philatelist 1895 no. 1. To begin with, the well-known album producer Oscar Koeppe congratulates the Old Master of philately, Dr. A. Moschkau, on his silver jubilee as a philatelic editor. We add our wishes to those of Koeppe on this point, and hope Dr. Moschkau may be long spared to serve philately. News for the Collector is as always sound reporting and contains much of interest. The monthly gossip column mentions amongst other things the steadily increasing chaos surrounding the still-appearing Chinese private postage stamps. We must also regret that philately is burdened with this nuisance, rather like that of the German private stamps. The monopoly-Trinidad-Kingdom are criticized. The Special Account of Turkish Postage Stamps is continued, and the accompanying pictures are very instructive. Under the title Imprints on Postage Stamps begins a very interesting article in the "History" section: the origin of and reasons for many imprints are made clear. Dr. O. Rommel writes on The Philatelic Literature of the Year 1894, and in conclusion we again have the reprint from the Wiener Neuen Tageblatt on Austrian misprints.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung. 1894 No. 3 starts with the continuation of Bochmann's paper on The Stamps of the Tropics. The translation of Moens' work on The Postage Stamps of Bergedorf is continued, with a freshly produced photogravure sheet for better understanding. A miscellany closes the number. No. 4. Continuations of Tropics and Bergedorf, then miscellaneous and literary. A list of new issues concludes the number.

Der Briefmarken-Sammler. 1895. No. 1 starts the new volume with an article by L. Muller entitled Once more the testing of Stamps; this is followed by a list of new issues and a list of forgeries.

Die Briefmarke. Exchange and offers paper for South Germany. No. 8. Society reports and a remarkable number of adverts (17 sides) fill up the issue.

Briefmarken-Anzeiger. 1895 No. 2. Purely an advertising sheet: we wish the undertaking all the best.

Das Postwertzeichen: 1895. No. 1. The editor, L. Brummer, greets us with a call from the mountains: Hollorio. He then follows with: Contributions to Bavarian postal history, etc. The new issues are well done. Miscellaneous and Society reports form the conclusion.

Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung. 1895 No. 1. This journal published the previous number in French, whereas this is in German: Postage as an item in international trade, A new type of postage stamp to collect, Society Reports; Why not all in German?

Die Postwertzeichenkunde, 1895 No. 1. Max Thier writes very clearly about Wurttemberg issues of 1851 and the new state issue. Philatelic letters contains a war of words, Berger against Remheimer. The diary is good, but the illustrations could be improved. The Miscellany is edited with affection.

Norddeutsches Postwerthzeichen-Offertenblatt, 1895, No. 4. Advertising only magazine.

Neue Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung. 1894, No. 3 contains a comprehensive article on Heligoland prices by Hartmann (Berlin), in which the author attempts to use mathematical calculations to relate the prices correctly to the size of the issue of the various values. Then comes a continuation of Examining postage stamps for genuineness, new issues and miscellany. 1895 no. 4 again gives us Hartmann's favourite subject of Heligoland, along with photographs. The new issues are well presented. Miscellany and Talking Points again relate almost entirely to Heligoland.

Norddeutsche Briefmarken-Post, 1895, No. 3. Actually, nothing but adverts with an older list of new issues and a miscellany. 4 sides of adverts, octavo format, edition of 5000 claimed, which strikes us as dubious.

Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung 1895, No. 2 begins with a very instructive article on The Post Offices of the German Knightly Orders. Then follows a detailed, review. No 3 contains From German Postal Statistics, and a good, very well edited list of new issues. In No. 4, Hans Miller writes on German Colonial Cancellations, then follows a very up-to-date Miscellany, and New Issues concludes the part.

Allgemeiner Anzeiger Magazine for the propagation of philately. 1895, No. 1. This new magazine attempts to bring the collectors of Westphalia and the Rhineland under one roof. The contents of this first issue include some statistics, miscellany, letters and Society reports.

Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal 1895, No. 2. The gossip column One thing after another is as always interesting and easy to read. Then follows a report on the Austrian misprint cards, taken more or less verbatim from the Neuen Wiener Journal, the list of new issues is as exact as ever; forgeries and postal news to finish off. No. 3, like every issue of this magazine, starts with the gossip column by Woemos. Then Theodor Haas writes on a newly discovered US Carrier Stamp, list of new issues, something on the Wurttemberg 70 Kreuzer then forgeries. The Forum contains A cry for help from abroad, and Is there any point in describing forgeries? to conclude.

Polski Filatelista 1895, No. 1. The organ of the Polish club in Kracow begins its second volume with this issue. Contents: introduction, continuation of Koprovsky's study of the Russia zemstvo stamps. A nicely illustrated list of new issues and society reports conclude the number.

Araldo Filatelico e Numismatico, 1894 No. 1. Another Italian specialist journal. No. 1 contains the prospectus: A study of the Earliest Stamps of Uruguay, then Numismatics, new issues and literature. In No. 2, Tommasi writes on the use of the word Philately, then begins a very interesting paper with the title Pseudo-Stamps. The remainder consists of new issues, continuation of the Uruguay article, and numismatics.

Le Moniteur du Collectionneur 1895, No. 1. This too describes the chaotic state of the Chinese local posts, then follow well-illustrated new issues, society reports, literature, and miscellaneous closes the issue.

L'Écho de la Timbrologie 1895 No. 50. V. Flandrin's nice and gossipy article on A collection of French stamps is concluded, then follows new issues, miscellaneous and adverts.

La Revue Postale 1895, No. 15 starts its New Year number with a description of the year just gone and perspectives on the coming year. Under Messieurs les Américains is a cry of woe to our colleagues across the great water. The author pours out his heart over the way we in Europe accept everything that comes to us from over there from Monopol etc., only to have our own valuable productions taken in return and often not even paid for. Detailed reports are then given on the legal proceedings in Brussels about the forgery of U.S. 1890, Monaco and the Congo 5 francs. New issues and adverts follow.

Publicite' Philatelique 1895 No. 1. An out-of-date list of new issues, then adverts.

L'Annonce Timbrologique 1894 No. 58. Victor Flandrin expresses his views forcibly on Sunday stamps, then comes the conclusion of the list of Belgian postcards, and a miscellany with much new information.

Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste 1894 No. 170. This number once more starts with gossip about the latest philatelic happenings. The diary and the catalogue of the latest issues are well illustrated. Then follows the conclusion of the French stamps and their cancellations, something about forgeries (Naples, Ceylon), and in conclusion, the coats of arms of Italy and Media on different stamps are described.

L'Avenir des Timbres-Poste 1895 No. 14 contains a rather outdated list of new issues and some adverts.

L'Intermediaire de la Timbrologie 1894 No. 21 short account of new issues, a little gossip, and adverts.

La Mercuriale, Bulletin Mensuel, Donnant la Hausse et la Baisse des Timbres. 1895 No. 8. The whole little paper is nothing more than a price list for the items the publisher has in stock.

L'Annonce Philatelique 1895 No. 1. Is simply an advertising sheet that has appeared in Geneva since the 15th January this year.

Le Philatélie Helvétique 1895, No. 8 starts by printing the new law no. 38 on Post-Office monopoly that came into force on the 1st January of this year. This is followed by a very detailed account of the prices made by cantonal and other stamps at Swiss auctions in recent years. In conclusion an account is given of the latest, acid-produced forgeries of the rare blue-grey 100 and 500 C excess-postage stamps, and a warning against buying them given.

Revue Philatélique 1894 No. 54. Under the title Postage Stamps of Today parallels are drawn from the artistic standpoint between former times and now. Society reports are followed by a well-compiled diary, which deals with bill-stamps as well. Under the heading Some countries from my collection, individual stamps are described (in all details): this is followed by a listing of French post offices abroad, and the concluding item is a translation of Lindenberg's statistical data on the postage stamps of Heligoland.

Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina. 1894 No. 1 has appeared since November last year, and is merely a Society organ. Contents: on the Argentina Philatelic Society; some chat about Rowland Hill. Description of dangerous forgeries of the Uruguay diligence. A little on cancellations, and miscellaneous.

The Philatelic Record 1894. No. 192 starts with a description of the first catalogues for the years 1861 to 1864, then comes the new issues and special discoveries, the continuation of the article on the stamps of Baden in a good translation, and the last article is a little essay by Westoby on the English Inland Revenue stamps of 1860. Finally, notes on various perforations and a description of the stamp exhibition in Victoria.

The Philatelic Review of Reviews 1894 No. 3 contains: introduction by the editor, followed by extracts from and descriptions of the leading periodicals No. 4 begins with a study of colour differences in U.S. stamps. Finally, literature reviews that are in general impartial and detailed.

Philatelic Advertiser 1895. No. 6 is simply an advertising sheet. We prophesy a future for this English advertising magazine.

The Stamp News 1894. No. 103 contains the continuation of The London Philatelic Society, or Twenty-Five Years of Philatelic Study. This is followed by an exhaustive diary, then a continuation of The seamy side of philately, an interesting account of methods of forgery, plus an entertaining miscellany. No. 104. Continuation of The London Philatelic Society, New Issues, and the reprint of a very faulty list of the philatelic societies of the world from the Metropolitan Philatelist. Then follows a miscellany, and a reprint of an interesting paper on India, first issue, the pointed bust variety, a report on a stamp exhibition in New Zealand, and society reports conclude the number.

The Stamp Chronicle and British Philatelist, 1894 No. 10. Opening chit-chat then continuation of The Stamps of the United States, a paper containing much new material, adverts to conclude.

Monthly Bulletin of the Postal-Card Society. 1895, No. 11. Is simply a society magazine, contents include short reports and list of members.

The Philatelic Advertiser. 1895 No. 5. Adverts only.

Indian Philatelist, 1894 No. 7. Benton discusses philatelic price rises and their causes, then Laharry describes the ways and means of preparing stamp issues. Very well written.

Monthly Bulletin of the Postal Card Society. 1894. No. 10. Contains only society report and a short but well produced chronicle of postcards.

The Metropolitan Philatelist 1894 No. 8. The nature and methods of the American auctions are described under the title Auction Buying. The list of societies is very defective, apart from the American ones. The chronicle with its elegantly reduced illustrations, is very well produced.

The Stamp Collectors Fortnightly 1894 No. 7. John Clifford breaks a lance for the collecting of English plate numbers. Specializing in Errors is a very interesting study of the different types of misprint. The black list contains two forgeries from England and Argentina and describes forgeries of Russian levant and Italian additional-charge stamps. The editorial work of this new magazine is outstanding.

Prices of older philatelic literature

Tidning for Frimarksamlare, 29 Gamla Kungsholmsbrog, Stockholm is on offer as follows in "Nordisk, Filatelistisk Tidskrift" 1894 No. 23, post-free with payment in advance:

1891 (V year) No. 1-12 complete for	2.81 M
1892 (VI year) No. 1-12 " "	2.25 "
1893 (VII year) No. 1-12 " "	2.25 "
All three years (V-VII) post-free	6.75 "

Nordisk Frimaerkeblad is on offer from G. O Ulleberg, Kristiana, in "Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidskrift" 1894 No. 16. Post-free payment in advance:

1892 (vol. I)	No. 1-12 complete for	3.37 M
1893 (vol. II)	No. 1-12 " "	3.37 M

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
March 1895, Volume 1, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.IX-XI

Survey.

O. Rommel

Survey of articles on the postage stamps of the German States appearing in the periodical literature during the year 1894 and the monographs that have appeared on this topic in the same period by

Dr. Rommel - Leipzig.

There was not too much that would help with my task of capturing the interest of the great mass of people who merely collect, and the extent of whose reading is a preprinted album and a catalogue, and helping them in their pursuit of knowledge. Those who take only a single magazine and do little more than glance through it could easily ignore my puny efforts if they do not want to be bored: Die Philatelistische Litteratur is simply not the right reading matter for them.

However, those who collect and appreciate literature and by calling or inclination and place their pens at the service of philately, will, I hope, be pleased to know that I have spent an entire year summarizing all the books and magazines with a philatelic content that have come into my hands, so as to be able to give an orderly evaluation of what has been written in 1894 on the postage stamps of the German States.

My model has been Victor Suppantschitsch's outstanding bibliography, part IV, section II: however, as will be seen from the heading, my subject is in some ways wider and in some ways narrower: narrower because I limit myself to publications on German postage stamps: wider because I took foreign-language literature into the scope of my work: The reason for both is the same: the overriding interest taken by German philatelists in German postage stamps.

I would not dare to claim my work is all-embracing: in particular, I did not manage to cover all the foreign literature. However I hope my work is essentially complete enough to make it useful and to satisfy the critics. However, I ask for criticism - sharp but accurate - in the interests of research.

I will note further that I have used brackets to relate reprints or translations to the original. The straightforward use of other people's work has not been acknowledged.

p.XII

Advertisement

Exchanges of philatelic literature wanted. complete volumes of older philatelic magazines will be bought by Dr. Rommel, 17 Turnerstrasse, Leipzig. I ask all admirers and collectors of literature to get in touch with me so that closer relationships can be built up.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
April 1895, Volume 1, Issue 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XIII-XVI

Philatelic Review.

(If you want to be mentioned in our newsletter, you must send us two copies of your magazine free of charge.)

p.XVI

Prices of old philatelic literature.

p.XVI

Advertisement

Exchanges of philatelic literature wanted. complete volumes of older philatelic magazines will be bought by Dr. Rommel, 17 Turnerstrasse, Leipzig. I ask all admirers and collectors of literature to get in touch with me so that closer relationships can be built up.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
May 1895, Volume 1, Issue 5

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XVII-XVIII

Survey.

Dr. O. Rommel

Survey of the literature of the year 1894 on the postage stamps of the German States etc. by Dr. Rommel - Leipzig (continuation)

pp.XIX-XX

Chronicle.

Chronicle of changes that have occurred in the literary field.

German Empire

Monatsschrift für Sammler illustrirter Postkarten appeared on the 15th of February of this year from Alfred Mello of Goggingen by Augsburg. Annual subscription 2 marks, including an illustrated postcard with every issue. Specimen copy 20 pfennigs.

Internationales Briefmarkenblatt "Concordia". No 2 of this was announced in Philat. Litteratur No. 1, p.II of 15th January of this year, but has not yet appeared. According to more recent information, No. 1 will be published by Oscar Jäger of Leipa (not A. Herter) on 15th April: only 8 to 10 issues will appear instead of 8 to 11, and the subscription price is reduced from 1 mark to 75 pfennigs, or 1 mark for abroad. On the other hand, Father Jäger writes to say that "his young Oscar" has to give up stamp dealing, so that the appearance of this magazine appears questionable to say the least.*

* No. 1 has since appeared carrying the date of 16th April.

Briefmarken-Anzeiger from Otto Pfaffle. We must correct our earlier report in No 2, p.V: No. 1 of this appeared on 4th January of this year, No. 2 on 19th January, and since then it has appeared regularly on the 19th of every month. From April onwards it has appeared in Berlin instead of Stettin, as Pfaffle has moved. New address. 26, Perlebergerstrasse. In 1894 a Christmas number appeared as a specimen issue.

Austria - Hungary

Neue Briefmarken-Zeitung, reported in No. 1, p.III, has ceased publication after only 4 issues had appeared (1st and 15th September, 1st and 15th October 1894). The publisher, E. Grüneberg of Karlsbad, disappeared on 15th January, and since then has been sought in vain by his creditors. His whereabouts are not known in his home town, Finsterwalde, near Frankfurt-am-Oder.

Luxembourg

Les Petites Affiches is the title of an advertising supplement to Moniteur du Collectionneur; it appeared as a double issue 1/2 in February of this year. It is sent out free to subscribers to the Moniteur, and also to 3-6000 different collectors.

Switzerland

L'Annonce Philatélique started with No. 1 on 15th December 1894 as an advertising sheet from 26, Boulevard Plainpalais, Geneva.

Italy

El Araldo Filatelico e Numismatico, reported on p.III of No. 1, changed its title to El Araldo Timbrologico e Numismatico with No. 3.

Il Consigliere Filatelico appeared as No. 1 on 10th January of this year from 16 Vicolo Brugno, Palermo.

Trinacria was reported on p.V of No. 2. No. 1 of this appeared on 15th February, No. 2 on 15th March of the current year. These contained nothing but adverts, most of them in the German language. The responsible editor is F. de Cesare, we will report the publisher soon. It is sent out free on request.

Romania

Internationales Rumanisches Offertenblatt should have appeared on 13th January of the current year and its publication was then put back to March, but it does not appear to have been published to date. Annual subscription 80pf. for Rumania, 1 mark for abroad.

France

Le Philatéliste Lyonnais, reported on p.V of No. 2, appeared on the 25th March. Only paying subscribers get the free premium, not those who have claimed a three-month subscription against an international reply-paid postcard. Owner of the magazine is Agence Philatelique of 7, Place Taberan, Lyon. Subscription: 1,75 francs annually.

Le Timbrophile Poitevin. No. 1 appeared on 1st March of this year from Raoul Tétéix of Villa des Roses, Poitiers.

La Reclame Philatélique should have appeared in Havre on 10th March of this year, but has not done so yet.

La Timbrologie Méridionale was announced from Montpellier for the end of March this year, but has also failed to turn up.

Le Timbrophile Lorraine appeared in Chef-Haut according to a report in "L'Annuaire Timbrologique". No other details known.

L'Union des Timbrophile of which a total of 8 volumes and 93 (?) issues appeared from 1884-1894, and was published by J. Nales, Paris, has ceased and been amalgamated with Anvers Philatélique (see below).

Belgium

Anvers Philatélique, published since 1892 by Polydore Puissant in Antwerp has absorbed L'Union des Timbrophile (see above).

Great Britain

The Philatelic Times and Stamp World started with No. 1 in December 1894, from Robert Groome of Church Street, Tewkesbury, and costs 6 pence a year.

General-Advertiser for Philatelists, reported an p.V of No. 2, appeared punctually with No. 1 on 15th December last year. Name of the publisher and other details have already been given.

Spain

España Postal reported in No. 1, p.III, appeared on 1st January of the current year.

La Ilustracion Postal No 1 appeared on 8th December 1894, and afterwards three times a month. It is intended in the first place for officials of the Post Office, but also relates to philately, and is distinguished by its elegant make-up.

Portugal

Le Portugal Philatélique, reported on p.III of No. 1, appeared on 1st January of the current year from Mario Duarte, 60 Rue de la Vera Cruz, Aveiro.

United States of America

The Rocky Mountain Stamp appeared in January this year from the R.M.S. Publishing Co. (C. C. Harrington), 5301 Wynkoop Street, Denver. (Colorado).

The Michigan Philatelist appears to have ceased publication.

Costa Rica

Costa Rica Postal, reported in No. 1, p.III, is published by G. Lehmann, in San José.

Argentina

Buenos-Aires-Postal. According to a communication from its editor, Maurice Juhel Renoy of Buenos Aires, this only ran to Nos. 1 and 2/3. Its subscriptions were then transferred to Herr Mattel's El Filatelista Sud-Americano. Anyone not pleased with this arrangement can have his subscription back.

China

The Hong-Kong Philatelic Journal is a good specialist magazine published monthly since the beginning of 1895 by E. J. Figueirado at 5 Caine Road, Hong Kong.

p.XX

Books received by the editor

Dr Rommel: Die Postwertzeichen von Lubeck. Reprint from Postwertzeichenkunde, 1892 to 1894. Appeared March 1895. Printed by G. Schul and Co. of Munich. Price 1 mark. The entire edition has passed into the ownership of the Dresdener Internationalen Philatelisten Vereins.

G. Lindenberg: Die Briefumschläge von Bayern is part 13 of Lindenberg's collected work on Die Briefumschläge der Deutschen Staaten. Berlin 1895, Dr. H. Brendicke Co. Price 1.50 marks.

p.XX

Price of old philatelic literature

Not translated.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
June 1895, Volume 1, Issue 6

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XXI-XXIV

Survey.

Dr. O. Rommel

Of articles appearing in the literature of the year 1894 containing information on the postage stamps of the German states etc., by Dr. Rommel - Leipzig.
(Continuation)

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
July 1895, Volume 1, Issue 7

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XXV-XXVI
Chronicle.

Of changes occurring in the literature field.

German Empire

Markenwart, a registered philatelic journal covering both adverts and exchanges, has been published since the 1st April of the current year by Max Werner in Apolda. 12 issues per year, 50 pfennings for Germany and Austria, 75 pfennings for the World Postal Union. Printed by Franz Janssen in Apolda. 3 issues have appeared so far.

Sächsisches Postwerthzeichen-Offertenblatt has appeared in Bautzen since the 1st March of this year.

Briefmarkenbörse des Internationalen Verbandes für Semstvomarken-Sammler is a new title reported. No more details available to date.

Mitteilungen des Württembergischen Philatelisten-Vereins Stuttgart has ceased publication after two years existence with No. 12 of the 2nd year, in April of the current year.

Schleswig-Holsteinische Briefmarken-Zeitung passed from No. 4 1895 into the ownership of the printer A. Carstensen of Gravenstein, and now costs 70 or 50 pfennings per year (cf p.II)

Internationales Briefmarkenblatt Concordia (cf p.II & XIX) started with No. 1 on the 16th April of the current year. The publisher is the editor, Emanuel Jäger of Böhmisch-Leipa.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Post (cf. p.V), has appeared, as we note by way of correction, as follows - 7 numbers in 1893, 8 in 1894 from H. Graeff of Barmen. Nos. 9-11 appeared from September 1894 and no. 12 ff. from January 1895 from C. G. Vogel of Plauen.

Switzerland

Internationaler Briefmarken-Anzeiger appeared with No. 1 on the 15th May of the current year from Friedr. Girard in Zurich III. Advertisement sheet with prices: 12 issues per year on the 15th of the month, costs 1 or 1.50 francs. Published by Arnold Bopps, 3 Zengkausstrasse, Zurich.

Züricher Briefmarken-Borsen-Zeitung is published by F. Menke of Zurich, and has appeared since 1894, with No. 5 dated the 25th of February of the current year. Subscription price 1.50 francs, individual issues 15 centimes. Contents: auction reports, sale notices, letter box and adverts.

La Philatélique Helvétique has issued two numbers in January 1895: that marked as No. 1 should really be No. 9 of the 25th February 1895, and should have the pages numbered 29-32 (instead of 1-4).

Romania

Union, an advertising sheet, was announced to appear from the 1st April this year from Garabet Aslan in Focsani, gratis and post-free, but did not appear.

Ecoul Marcilor was published in 1894 by Garabet Aslan of Focsani, but appears to have closed after two issues (of the 25th July and the 10th September 1894)

Le Philatelist Roumain has appeared since 15th/27th January from Virgile & G. Budescu in Braila. It was stated in the March number that No. 4 would not appear until the 1st/13th May, but it has not yet come out (see p.VI of the Philatelistische Litteratur).

Posta Romana was supposed to appear on the 27th of the current year in Focsani. Nothing else is known.

Internationales Rumänisches Offertenblatt (cf. p.XIX) is published by P. Buzdugan & Co. at 49, Strada Cucu, Jassy.

France

Le Publicateur Philatélique was announced for June of this year by L. Sardá of Beziers.

L'Intermédiaire de la Timbrologie changed its format to small octavo with No. 26 of May 1895. The adverts are in a supplement with separate pagination. Issue 3 – edition of 8000!

La Timbrologie Méridionale (cf. p.XIX) is published as a large advertising sheet by E. Portae of Montpellier.

Finland

Finska Filatelista reported on p.V, costs 2 marks annually (10 issues). Subscriptions via L. Wasenius of Helsinki, secretary of the Helsingfors Frimaerken-samelave Foerening.

Spain

La Union Filatelica published in Barcelona since 1893 by Hermangildo Prats has changed its title to La Ilustracion Filatelica Hispano Colonial.

Araldo Timbrologico has appeared recently in Seville as an advertising sheet.

Portugal

Evova Postal which merged with O Internacional in 1894 has again appeared independently since Spring 1895 as the organ of the Société Portugaise de Timbrologie and now contains only society reports and adverts (mainly in French).

Netherlands

De Postzegel-Courant is described as a “special organ for stamp collectors” and can be obtained from F. H. Brinkmann in Amsterdam for 1 mark per year.

Great Britain

The Million, an established magazine, has for some time published philatelic articles regularly. Pearson's Weekly has recently started to do the same.

Bulgaria

Balkan has appeared since the 1st July of this year from J. Willheimer in Sofia.

Turkey

Poste Oriental can be ordered from J. Dimitracopoulo & A. Rossolimos, 7 Rue Tepe Bochi, Pera, Constantinople.

Egypt

Le Timbrophile Egyptien is published by Isaac M. Aboulatia in Alexandria.

United States Of America

Briefmarked-Verkehr is issued by A. Paimann in New York, as a price-list in the form of a magazine and is sent out free. No. 2 appeared in March of this year, after No. 1 had appeared on the 1st April 1894.

The Boston Stamp Book started with No. 1 on the 20th May this year from A. J. Cassino & Co., Boston, Mass, published by J. L. Kilbon. Yearly subscription (12 issues) 50 or 60 cents.

The Philatelic Advertiser started with No. 1 in March of this year in Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

The Michigan Philatelist, a namesake of the one listed as ceased publication on p.XX, has been released in Coldwater.

The Bay State Philatelist is supposed to be appearing in Massopon, Massachusetts.

The Golden Philatelist, a supposed new publication about which nothing more is known.

Argentina

El Filatelista Sud-Americana was acquired by Louis Sobrino of Buenos-Aires: the previous owner was A. Mette.

pp.XXVI

Philatelic Review.

(If you want to be mentioned in our newsletter, you must send us two copies of your magazine free of charge.)

END

SOCIETE BELGE DE BIBLIOPHILATELIE, Jan. 1990, 1.1

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile

Our first meeting will take place on Thursday 25 January at 7 p.m. in the hall on the 1st floor of the Maison du Luxembourg Belge, 12, Rue Marie de Bourgogne, Brussels 1050. We regret that the day and time may perhaps not be convenient for everybody, but we would be grateful if everyone would make a special effort to be present at this first get-together.

These are the philatelists who have given us the pleasure of joining the Societe Belge de Bibliophilatelie; we thank them and hope we shall be able to achieve something really useful together:

Messrs. DEBAST, J.
 DE RAM, Gaston
 LEJEUNE d' ALLEGEERSHECQUE
 LOONT JENS, Renaud
 PUFFET, Philippe
 SIMONS Olivier,
 SOETEMAN, C
 VAN DEN PANHUYZEN, E
 VAN PAMEL
 VATLET, A VERPOORT, Roger

- 1) Programme for the meeting of 25 January
 - a word from the President.
 - some details as to the organization of the next meetings (dates and places).
 - talk by M. Vincent SCHOUBERECHTS on one of the fathers of philately: Andre de COCK.
 - round table on the topic of the day: works and articles dealing with the "Epaulettes" issue (see Item 6).
- 2) Rules

Our Society was legally constituted on the 2nd November 1989. Constitution in the form of a legal association enables us to conduct our day to day business much less formally than if we were an ASBL. Nevertheless during our two preliminary meetings we have managed to draw up internal rules, a copy of which will be supplied to any member on request to the secretary.

3) Members' Bulletin

After each meeting we shall try to send a bulletin to all members.

Its pages will be open to everyone: do you want to let other members share your bibliophilatelic discoveries, publish a research article, a review of someone else's work, or just a short anecdote, ask for information or put out a few suggestions? Do not hesitate to get in contact with the secretary.

4) Bank of Bibliophilatelic Facts

We cherish the design of building up a bank of informed facts: this will include references to philatelic books and articles of particular interest to Belgium in the first place, and to philately as a whole in the second place. Of course this cannot be done overnight, and we shall try to keep you regularly informed of the progress of this great project.

Paul de SMETH's group has recently acquired a PC to administer the group progressively. Our member, and President of the Paul de SMETH group, M. E. VAN DEN PANHUYZEN, seems in favour of letting the SBB use this PC as well. This means we shall have the hardware needed to set up our data bank: it only remains to work out a programme for bibliographical research on the basis of words or a key code. We are thinking about this.

5) Conferences

One of the objectives of the SBB is to study everything relating to books and philatelic editions. This is why we hope all five of our yearly meetings will include a chat on one bibliographical subject or another.

At this first meeting, M. V. SCHOUBERECHTS will talk to us about Andre de COCK, founder and once conservator of the postal museum.

If you too would like to share with us your knowledge of a subject dear to you, let our President, Olivier SIMONS, know. Also; if you would like to tell other members about a rare or special book which you are lucky enough to own, do not hesitate to bring it along to one of the meetings.

6) Topic of the Day

We hope at each meeting to concentrate on one philatelic topic. As a first attempt we shall give honour where it is due and begin with our celebrated "Epaulettes".

This is how we propose to organize our researches: we shall ask our members to be good enough to immerse themselves in their own libraries, or those of the philatelic clubs to which they belong. Search through your old or recent documents and find books and serious articles which either deal exclusively with the research topic, or devote an important section to it.

To avoid everyone going through the multiple volumes of the leading Belgian periodicals we will exclude from our researches the "Revue Postale", the "Philatliste Belge" and the "Balasse Magazine", all three of which will be scanned later.

Apart from these three famous periodicals, we hope we shall in this way get all the references worth having relating to the philatelic topic of the day.

In practice, we ask you to draw up a list of the references you know about: this is the information needed to get our data bank going:

- author, title, editor, place and year, number of pages and, which is important, size of the issue if known.

- + for articles, name of the periodical, issue, date of publication and number of pages.

- if the title is not entirely representative of the contents, a few words about the principal chapters concerned.

- if possible, in the case of older hard-to-find material, the club, association or private* library where it may be consulted.

- * if the owner so wishes, this fact can be kept confidential.

if you do not think you will manage to attend the meeting, please send this list to the present several days in advance. Otherwise, please bring it to the meeting: we will go into the subject at the meeting.

We wish to draw the attention of our members to one point: this is a project of some scope: for it to succeed, everyone must give a little of his time to it, but we are convinced that it is in the long run an enterprise in favour of philately as a whole, and of every philatelist in particular. We count on your collaboration.

We wish you an excellent year in 1990, and of course many philatelic joys.....

END

INFORMATION 1

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

Part 1/1988May 1988

Page 1/2	Title/Publication Details/Contents
3	The Committee reports:
4/7	PHILATELY + RESEARCH
	"Research in philately
8	Introduction to NAPOSTA 89 and IPHILA 89
9	Introduction to members' meeting 1988
10/12	The bookworm says:
13/14	Advice on using the philatelic library
14/16	Rules for use
17/18	From the treasure chest:
19/20	Notices (Lighthouse, D. M. G. North Germany).

p. 3. The Committee Reports:

Dear Member,

We hope very much you are pleased with your "pretty package" as an introduction to membership. We hope to achieve two things with this "Information":

1. Better communication between the Library and its members.
2. to make the Library more attractive to existing members and attract new ones by means of a range of offers and information.

All the Library staff are currently busy preparing a new library catalogue, which will then be published in successive issues of the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung (D.B.Z.) (second half of 1988). Our "Information" will then tell you about the new accessions, so that an up-to-date catalogue will always be available.

The numerous duplications in our stock will be offered to our members "from the treasure chest" at reasonable prices. The proceeds will be used to buy new philatelic literature for the use of our members.

Under "Philately and Research" the editors will print interesting - old and new - reports on this topic, and will be very interested in further articles in this direction.

It is generally accepted that parents look on their "first-born" very subjectively, and so it would help us very much to have your criticisms, good advice and wishes for the future of our first baby.

We can live with the working title "Information..." but we ask all members for their suggestions as to another and better title. A little tribunal will award prizes to the three best titles.

We hope you will find this entertaining, and hope that "Information..." will inspire you to pay a personal visit to your Philatelic Library..

With hearty greetings
Committee/Editorial
(Dieter Huweler

Notes to title-page (photo-montage)

Top left: Frau Brandt opens the Philatelic Library in Poststrasse.
Top right: workspace/visitors' room in Poststrasse.
Middle: Hilde Ramm in action: Head of Library (deceased).
Bottom left: Frau Weil (Head) at the Hamburg Philatelic Library's new premises in Hohenfelder Strasse.
Bottom right: Christmas party 1987 for the honorary members of the Library. (Frau Brandt, Frau Weil, Herr Langer, Herr Biss, Frau Grell etc.)

p.9HAMBURG PHILATELIC LIBRARY e V

10 Hohenfelder Strasse,
2000 Hamburg 76.
May 15, 1988

Dear Member,

We invite you herewith to this year's

Annual General Meeting on Tuesday 21 June 1988 at 8.30 in the "Rhodos" restaurant, 119 Linbecker Strasse. (between Guntherstrasse and Kabelstieg) 200 Hamburg 76. We ask you to turn up punctually!

AGENDA

- TOP
1. Chairman's introduction and report
 2. Report from Head of Library
 3. Determination of quorum
 4. Approval of minutes of Annual General Meeting of 3.11.1987

5. Treasurer's report
6. Auditor's report
7. Release of treasurer
8. Alterations to rules
 - 1 Name, place....
 - OLD: The Society will have the name Philatelistische Bucherei Hamburg e.v
 - NEW: The Society will have the name Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg e.v
 - 7 Addition (after ... his representative).
 - NEW: Only members of the Society can be elected to the Committee
9. Selection of committee
10. Selection of auditor
11. Balance-sheet 1988 (supplement) and balance-sheet 1989
12. Determination of subscription from 1.1.1989
13. Motions
14. A.O.B.
15. Close and members' meeting (finish 21.00hrs).

In accordance with the rules, motions to be put before the meeting must be given to the Committee in writing two weeks before the A.G.M.

With friendly greetings
 The Committee
 (Dieter Huweler)

p. 13 Advice on Using the Hamburg Philatelic Library

Dear Lady Reader, Dear Gentleman Reader,

The Hamburg Philatelic Library is a society for the public benefit, maintained by the members of the Library. Our thanks for this!

The library is conducted on the standard lines for scientific libraries. 60% of its stock is on open access, which means you can get the book you want from the shelves yourself; to read in the library or borrow. Unfortunately, we have to keep the other 40% of the stock on reserve for reasons of space. These can only be obtained on request.

Most of the library stock has been catalogued. The permanent catalogue consists of an A-Z subject index, Old Germany, Germany, Europe, overseas and motifs/thematic. There are also indexes to society publications, and to the German and foreign-language journals. All catalogues may be purchased.

The following catalogues are available in the library:

Systematic catalogue
 Alphabetic catalogue
 Year of publication catalogue

The Systematic Catalogue will help you when you want to know what books are available on a given country (e.g. China) or a given topic (e.g. postal censorship). Relevant literature is brought together here in the way you will also find it on the shelf.

The Alphabetic Catalogue lists the books by author, title and/or corporate body.

For research work it may be of great interest to know when the books appeared. The catalogue has a sequence in which all titles are grouped by their year of publication. This catalogue begins for example with the year 1796: Genealogical and Postal Calendar for the Leap Year.

All catalogues are available in printed form and can be supplied at cost price. Further catalogues are in preparation.

We have simplified external lending so that we can supply your books more quickly and simply in future. Every user of the Library will need a borrower's card. For this we need a copy of your personal identity card (the side with the personal details). Let us know your borrowing requirements in writing, with your signature, the author and the title. Your order is taken as acceptance of the regulations for users.

As a member of the Hamburg Philatelic Library you need only send a contribution to the postage of DM5 in unused current postage stamps. You may order up to 12 titles and have them delivered by post. They must be returned in the same manner in in the same packing (registered packet or prepaid packet).

Articles from magazines, short items and small sections from a work can be supplied in photocopy form (copyright permitting). It is also possible for you to have sections from the keyword catalogue which lists the contents of journals and reports by their subjects. The old material from about 1890 is predominantly listed. For photocopies we charge you 0.30 per A4 sheet, plus postage.

We shall be happy to assist you in your work on philately and postal history.

Doris Weil.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
August 1895, Volume 1, Issue 8

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XXVII-XXX

Survey.

Dr. O. Rommel

Of articles appearing in the literature of the year 1894 containing information on the postage stamps of the German states etc., by Dr. Rommel - Leipzig.
(Conclusion follows)

END

PHILAT. TRANS 210

THE PHILATELIC BOOKWORM

Journal of the Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors

Editorial Board: Alexander Bungerz - Tegernsee and Carl Beck - Berlin.

Publisher: Carl Beck, 38 Kochhannstr, Berlin O (P.O. Box Berlin 46690).

Annual subscription: M.25, including Journal.

Single specimen of journal sent on receipt of 5 Marks.

Vol. 1 Berlin 20 July 1921 No. 1

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

INTRODUCTION

The collection and care of philatelic literature has grown in such a satisfactory way over recent years that it is now possible to think of issuing a magazine devoted to it, if only within a limited circle initially. I have thus decided, in conjunction with my old friend Carl Beck, one of the leading specialists in this type of material, to put out a little magazine of information for the benefit of everyone who cares about philatelic literature. The first aim of the magazine will be to bring together all collectors of literature as a society, and will report on all new publications in this field. This is the only way in which everyone interested can get to know about new journals, books, pamphlets, special publications etc., which have become numerous in recent years and now appear almost daily. Furthermore the collector will be given the opportunity to enlarge his library by advertisements and requests, and to get rid of duplicates. We will reserve some pages of the magazine for this: otherwise it will contain only articles on philatelic literature and everything connected with it.

To keep abreast of matters in every direction, we ask all collectors of literature, all editors in particular, to send us new publications as soon as they get to know about them. Members of the Society are urged in the first place to let us have a certain number of anything new they publish, even the smallest special item, to be exchanged for others, so that our member's can acquire them for their own libraries. Only if we take the standpoint of one for all and all for one can our organization meet the ideals it has set itself.

In the interests of better relationships with foreign countries, the Society is also in a position to look after foreign books, pamphlets, magazines etc. For the year 1922 it will be possible to supply the German magazines to members at a preferential price: Herr Carl Beck asks you to let him know your wishes in this direction as soon as possible.

Collectors, editors and publishers, support our efforts!

With collectors' greetings.
Alexander Bungerz

On Philatelic Libraries

by Carl Beck

Interest in philatelic literature has generally increased in recent years. This is apparent from large numbers of new books which sell out soon after their publication, and the large number of specialist journals now appearing - there must currently be several dozen in the German language alone. This is a very good thing, since it is absolutely necessary for every collector with a serious concern for his treasured stamps to know about the work of other researchers and subject specialists, especially in these days when one new publication follows hard on the heels of another. As with all sciences, every hobby deserves serious study, and as there are at the moment no courses or chairs in philately, this can only be done by reading and studying the relevant literature. A short time ago I had a visit from a gentleman who had long before given up stamp collecting and to whom the word "philately" meant only a childish pastime. In a short time he had taken up to contrary attitude and expressed his amazement at the extent and significance of our hobby. I did not bring about this change of mind by showing him a collection of stamps: this would not have made the slightest impression on him. No, it was the Earl of Crawford's library catalogue that led my visitor to a better way of thinking.

Anybody like myself who is the owner of a large philatelic library and also has the advantage of visiting some of the largest ones such as that of my old friend Alex Bungerz in Tegernsee, will certainly be amazed by the progress and development made by philatelic literature in the short period of their existence. Nothing similar has taken place in so short a time - the first printed work on philately is known to have appeared on the 17th September 1861 - in any other field of human science and research. The enormous amount of work, difficulty, money and disappointment that it takes to build up such a library can only be appreciated by those who have tried to collect the older philatelic papers, magazines and books year by year and issue by issue. It is easier today to collect a full set of old German stamps, providing one has the necessary capital, than to build up complete sets of the ten most important philatelic magazines. With many journals it is necessary first to enquire, write round and research to find out what actually exists and which numbers did appear, once a magazine has ceased publication, and so on. For example, one may be absolutely certain that a given issue of a particular journal was published in multiple copies, but still not be able even a single one. It is often hard to explain why this should be. And this was also the reason why we decided to set up the "Verein philatelistischer Litteratursammler" with its society organ "Der philatelistische Bucherwurm". The aim of the society is to care for philatelic literature, extend knowledge of it, and thus appreciation of it. Now if we can act as one for all and all for one, the "Verein philatelistischer Litteratursammler" will meet in full the ideal on which its founders have based it. It will be open to all societies and also to individual philatelists to join the "Verein philatelistischer Litteratursammler". We in Germany and Austria may really congratulate ourselves that individual societies have for decades applied their attention to the formation of philatelic libraries. We need only mention the outstanding libraries of the societies in Dresden, Berlin, Frankfurt-am-Main, Hamburg, Vienna, Graz etc. However, it is quite a different question whether we, i.e. each one of us individually, has given philatelic literature the attention and support it deserves and might reasonably expect. And I think I must answer this question with a flat NO. Unfortunately!

For most people it is "too boring", they "only collect for pleasure", they "take no interest in that", and a whole range of other justifications, excuses and apologies that one gets used to hearing. One even hears it often from people who think themselves very clever and discerning, imagine they know it all and have nothing more to learn, and can find the money for anything rather than - the specialist literature. This may be hard to believe, but it really is so. How short-sighted this approach can be was demonstrated recently by a case from real life. A collector had built up a special collection on Heligoland, and devoted several thousand marks to it over a number of years. Then circumstance arose that compelled the gentleman to sell his collection, and what happened: a large part of his collection turned out to consist of forgeries, new impressions, offprints, false cancellations etc., that he had bought in good faith for lack of knowledge that such things exist. If this collector had paid only a slight amount of attention to the philatelic literature; if he had read the works of Moens-Frankel, Pirl, Wulbern, etc., he would certainly have saved himself these losses. However, what happened to this gentleman could happen tomorrow with another collection. We call this to the attention of all those collectors who only take a little interest in the philatelic literature. The money you spend on the literature is certainly not wasted: it is only a slight addition to the costs of your hobby, and will repay you a usurers' interest without coming into conflict with the law.

Everybody must have time to read the specialist literature, at least as much time as it would take to read the usually quite pointless gossip columns in the daily paper. Possibly not every collector can be expected to build himself up a big library, and will not have the time to read, or the space to store, a large collection, but nevertheless every serious collector on a larger scale really should possess a little set of reference handbooks. This absolutely is in his own interest. How much money is thrown away that could be better spent, how much annoyance could be saved, if more philatelic knowledge were to find its way into the wide levels of our collectors' circles. Forgers and cheats would not enjoy so much success for so long. This can however only be achieved by a more active use of our rich specialist literature. The question now arises of what should go into this reference library. There must be various specialist periodicals that form the basis of every philatelic library, accompanied by the principal handbooks and catalogues. Monographs relating to one's own country and any possible earlier postal undertakings should naturally not be lacking. Thus the library should contain, in addition to the periodicals and monographs mentioned:

Kohl's Handbook, the catalogues on Senf, and Michel and the S. W. of Alex. Bunkerz. Collectors of wartime stamps will also need the Kumin-Beul catalogue and Dr. Weinert's on the Daunbe post. Also Haas: Textbook of Philately; Krotzsch, Illustrated Exhaustive Catalogue of German Postage Stamps; Ohrt, Handbook of all Known New Issues, etc.

The periodicals should be accompanied by the books and special publications relating to the collector's preferred topic. Monographs deal with their chosen subject in more detail than is generally the case with the periodicals. For example, every old Germany collector should have the Krotzsche Handbook, and every specialist on Austria must have Kropf's book. The writings of Miraband and Reuterskiold and Zumstein are indispensable for the collector of Swiss stamps, just as every collector of entires needs Lindenberg's work on envelopes. If he collects cancellations, he will find quite a selection of other special works, by Reinheimer, Glasewald, Orth, Jaggli-Weber etc.

As was said before, the collector can build on these foundations according to his interests and means. Of course, the contents of these books and magazines must not only be read: they must be thought about, and useful conclusions drawn from them, otherwise there is no point in having them; literature can only be the collector's best friend and adviser when he makes use of it in every context, and does not just read it, but tries to understand it as well. The stamp collector should always bear this in mind, since it is specially true in our case that "Reading Gives Knowledge" and "Knowledge is Strength". All this should be well-known to the serious philatelist, who gives his attention to all the specialist literature available to him, gets hold of and studies every book on his favourite topics and studies them; no magazine is too trivial for him, whatever its scope. This knowledge will protect him against cheating, whilst on the other hand he may for obvious reasons be given the chance to purchase defective objects at a low price, so that the money he has paid out for the specialist literature proves to be a good investment. The literature on our hobby would be much richer if it were rated according to its usefulness. However, when the publisher has to be pleased when with toil and trouble he manages to cover his costs, and when the author has to be satisfied with a few free copies, this is simply not good for our hobby, and the main sufferer will be the collector himself if he is then far too easily taken in by cheats and forgers.

Every collector who wants to help in the development of our common interest, everyone willing to support the initial researches in which our guarantees for the future reside, anyone who is truly a collector, will support the specialist literature with all his might.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

By Alexander Bungerz

Many things that apparently hardly need proving do need explanation now and again. This is the case with philatelic literature, whose value is doubted by nobody and truly understood by very few. The average collector is satisfied as a rule to buy the latest catalogue, so that he can get the current price of his treasures and work out what it would cost to buy in the stamps he still needs. If he takes a monthly magazine as well, he thinks he is meeting all his present-day requirements. How short-sighted this behaviour is, can be seen from the simple fact that he reads only one catalogue and one magazine, so that his information will always be one-sided. However, most people will say they lack the time, and perhaps also the desire, to look at a number of magazines. However, if he sits evening after evening in front of his album before he can find the right place for his stamps, or spends months over a given stamp trying to make certain that the stamp itself, its printing, cancellation etc., are all genuine, without finally coming to any conclusion, - then this time would have been spent better and more usefully in reading an essay, a pamphlet, a monograph or a series of articles on the stamp in question. What he learned in this way would always be more useful than his own fruitless researches, which hardly deserve to be called that.

Almost as soon as a stamp appears, there will be such an endless number of forgeries that it is really almost impossible to read all that is written about them. However, most people do not collect everything, they restrict themselves to a more or less closely defined field of collecting, and they should be able to keep themselves informed about the relevant forgeries, to save themselves from damage. Only an exact knowledge of stamps, imprints and cancellations can save one from the risk of being occasionally "had". Thus, a study of the literature is necessary merely in view of forgeries.

The collector of new issues is better off in this respect, so long as he always gets them from a reputable source, but even so he should take at least a couple of specialist magazines, so as to keep abreast of the new issues from all over the place. It often turns out later that a particular issue was only very small and the collector had to make sure of it in good time: he can only do this however by comparing the reports, adverts etc. in a number of magazines.

Finally, the species collector absolutely must look at a greater number of publications. What is not in one article he will find in another, new types, species, varieties will be reported on and described; the collector will get to know which type is rarest, and which is to be met with more often. The catalogue often leaves him in the lurch as to these points, and it will be worth his while to read carefully through all the articles and pamphlets. Then, when exchange packets etc. are sent round he may often pick up a good stamp marked cheaply because the owner did not realize what it was, and thus his pains and labour will be repaid.

The literature will also supply information on questionable issues, and on those which are purely speculative, fraudulent or chimerical. People in the know will thus not waste money on stamps which are not stamps at all, but have been offered to him with the assurance that they are "very rare" and "not in any catalogue".

Finally, I will mention the great men of philately, the outstanding researchers, authors etc. who have built up great libraries, often with great effort. The authorities considered it absolutely essential to possess a wide range of literature, and the same is true to a lesser extent for the beginner and average collector. Not everyone will want to do research and publish articles, but anyone seriously interested in his stamps, who does not want to be taken in by every barefaced forgery who wants to be informed about all new issues, size of issues, prices, types and rarities, who wants a correct idea of the market position, in short someone who wants to go beyond the mere sticking-in of stamps and take a serious interest in philately, absolutely must read a number of journals, including foreign ones, and study good books and pamphlets.

For reasons of space I cannot deal with this subject in more detail here, but I hope these short sentences will have made clear the importance of owning and studying good philatelic literature.

LITERARY ADVERTISER

From Studio to Counter - Postage Stamps' Progress
By Alexander Bungerz

Introduction, design, types of printing, print, gumming and perforating, the colours, the paper, the watermark, sheets of stamps, ways of dividing, misprints, printing errors and plate errors, types and varieties, edition, outlay, issue. Profusely illustrated. Paper covers. 19 : 27 cm, 60 pages. Price 15 M for standard edition, 50 M for luxury edition. 100% extra for abroad, due to high rate of exchange. To be obtained from the author in Tegernsee.

.... issued under the title "Die Postmarke, Universal-Auzeiger für Briefmarkenkunde und Sammelwesen". Special price from September to December 4 M. Address: 11, Beatrixgasse, Vienna III.

VEREIN PHILATELISTISCHER LITERATURSAMMLER
(Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors)

The Executive Committee for the current year 1921 consists of the following:

Alex Bungerz, Tegernsee, Chairman.
Carl Beck, 38 Kochhannstrasse, Berlin, Secretary and Treasurer.
H. Rohm, 13, Roderichstasse, Rodelheim, Frankfurt-am-Main,
Committee member.
Fr. W. Thalmann, 21, Teltowerstrasse, Potsdam.
Committee member

The following have been accepted as founder members of the Society:

_

The Society will be represented at the 27th German Day of Philately in Nuremberg by its chairman, Herr Alex. Bungerz of Tegernsee, and Herr Carl Beck of Berlin has agreed to be our representative at the 21st meeting of the "Germania-Ring" in Hanover.

We urgently request all members to take an active part in establishing the Society's journal. It is absolutely necessary for each individual member to co-operate and play his part by sending in short articles, reports, questions or answers.

PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Complete works only always bought by Karl Gal - Bratislava.
P.O. Box 188
Czechoslovakia.

Bibliography of specialist German Writings on the Postage Stamps of individual countries
By Carl Beck - Berlin

Germany's leading philatelist, Appeal Court President C. Lindenberg, writes as follows:

"The work that appears in the second edition (the first came out in Autumn 1915) is meritorious. The author sets out all the articles that have appeared in German, alphabetically by country. It can be seen from him how poorly some countries have been treated, whilst there is a rich literature for others. The researcher looking for material on special areas will find valuable starting-points in this compilation; the great catalogue of the Earl of Crawford's book collection, the most important work in this field, cannot belong to everybody. It is particularly stressed that the Beck bibliography has only appeared in 50 numbered parts".

A few copies of the work are available - to Society members only - from the author (38 Kochhannstrasse, Berlin 0.) at a price of 12 M, post-free. 100% currency supplement for overseas.

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BUCHERWURM

Journal of the Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors.
Editors: Alexander Bungerz - Tegernsee and Carl Beck - Berlin.
Publisher: Carl Beck, 38 Kojchhannstrasse, Berlin O (P.O. Box 46690).
Annual subscription = 25 M including Society Journal.
Specimen issue of journal sent only on receipt of 5 M.

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

Vol.1.Berlin, 1 October 1921No. 2

What Do People Think of our Efforts?

The Danzig "Briefmarken-Rundschau" writes in No. 32 of 11 August.

"In the first place we should like today to draw the attention of all serious philatelists to the new journal from the Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors, the first issue of which appeared on 20th July. It is not printed as yet, but appears in good lithographic reproduction. It is called "Der Philatelistische Bucherwurm", and appears under the editorship of Messrs. A. Bungerz, Tegernsee, and Carl Beck, Berlin. As A. Bungerz explains in the preface, it is aimed in the first place at bringing together all collectors of philatelic literature and will report on all new publications in this field. The first issue contains amongst other things a very interesting and readable article by Carl Beck on "Philatelic Libraries", and a contribution from one of his colleagues on "The Importance of Philatelic Literature". We also get a subject bibliographical guide to new periodical and book literature, and a list of the founder members of the Society, who number 35, some of them very well-known.

The next number is expected to appear at the beginning of December.

A WORD ON THE PLANNED NEW EDITION OF THE KOHL STAMP HANDBOOK

By Curator J. Dorfler - Vienna.

Issue No. 1, of 1 May, of the current volume of "Sammler-Woche" brings us the tidings that a rumour which has been in the air for a long time has taken tangible shape. The Kohl "Briefmarken-handbuch" is to appear in a new edition. The basic principles on which this new edition is based have been set out in detail by Dr. Herbert Munk, who has undertaken the general editorship of this work.

This announcement will undoubtedly be welcomed with joy by all serious philatelists. However, every pleasure has its drop of gall, and so it is in this case.

The material to which the Kohl handbook relates has increased quite enormously since the last edition. As a result, a considerable growth in the size of this work must be provided for. The cost of paper, typesetting, plates, printing and wages has already reached ridiculous heights, and are still moving in the upwards direction. The last edition cost 16.50 marks - about 20 Austro-Hungarian crowns, but the new one will have to cost very much more, and will be beyond the means of the majority of collectors.

Thus, the great majority of average collectors will not be able to think of the Kohl handbook. They will have to be satisfied with one of the existing less detailed catalogues. However, it will remain a valuable source of information and an indispensable text and reference book, for all the hundred thousand serious "big" collectors. However, not all of them will need all of it. For who today can seriously undertake to be a general collector, who can even think of specializing as a general collector? Only a very few people have unlimited money available as well as sufficient time. This circumstance has compelled most of the earlier general collectors to become specialists, who have picked out individual countries or groups of countries as their field of collection.

And this brings me to the main part of my remarks.

It is very questionable whether the Kohl handbook will fulfil its purpose if it is made available as a complete whole. I would rather think it would be incomparably more use to philately if every collector could get hold of just the individual sections of special interest to him, or in other words, if the new edition of this work could be broken down into small sections which could be purchased individually.

A breakdown into, say, Europe and overseas would not be enough, nor would a division into five sections for the five continents. I am thinking rather in terms of a division into individual countries, or ever groups of associated countries.

For example Germany. One section could include: German Reich, Bavaria and Wurttemberg - German colonies, German post-offices abroad and German occupation issues during the World War - old German states. Or better still, three successive sections as marked by the dashes here. Also Belgium, Denmark, France, England etc. with their colonies could be issued as one or two, perhaps even three sections. The same could apply to Italy and its colonies, San Marino and the small former Italian states: these could be given in one, three or four successive issues, naturally unified by a predetermined arrangement.

Thus above all an exact scheme needs to be drawn up as to how many and which sections the overall catalogue should be split into, each section forming a whole complete in itself. Pagination should be continuous, but it does not matter much whether the sections follow in an alphabetical sequence or are grouped by continents. It does not matter either that a division by countries, or groups of countries would deviate from the purely alphabetical arrangement usual in stamp catalogues. The Kohl Handbook is not a pocket-book, nor is it designed to act purely as a price or missing/defects list from which one can so to speak get what one needs at a glance, without first referring to the index.

I thus look on the Kohl Handbook as a collection of monographs on the postage stamps of all nations, each one of which has a section to itself, whilst the whole thing adds up to a unified handbook.

I think of each section having a stiff paper cover on which the title-page appears, each section separately paged, with the name of the country in heavy type at the top, and at the left top or bottom of the first page the details of the publisher, the year of publication and the month in which the manuscript was concluded. Naturally, the compiler of the section should be named. Thus to take an example at random, let us look at Section 8 "German Reich, Bavaria and Wurttemberg", I would like to see a title-page as in the sketch given.

So as not to decrease the usefulness of the work as a whole by paginating each section separately, each page number should be preceded by the number of the section in heavy type. For example, page 15 of Section 8 should appear as: 8, 15. This would make it easy to draw up an index to the work as a whole. For example, the following keywords would appear in the general index for our special case:

Bavaria	8, 12
German Reich	8, 1
Wurttemberg	8, 25

A break with the rigid system of an indivisible Kohl Handbook in the manner shown would be of extraordinary advantage for the work itself, for the publisher, and for all special collectors.

All bibliophiles, and everyone interested in the work as a whole, will subscribe to this. They would as usual get a reduced subscription price. The far longer proportion of the hundred thousand special collectors, who cannot afford the complete work and "with one happy and one sad eye" must be satisfied with the knowledge that such an expensive special work exists, will gladly seize the opportunity to buy the individual sections that particularly interest them, even at a higher sectional price. And what a real advantage this will be for the work itself. The more use can be made of it, the more interest specialist collectors will take in the further development of the handbook.

Another quite considerable advantage of my proposal for the publisher - apart from the certainty of much higher stakes - is that there would be simply no need to begin printing at the letter A. The manuscripts that are ready, and which will have had their section numbers assigned beforehand, can be got into print in any order, always with the fixed aim of bringing the entire work to a conclusion at given point in time.

Furthermore, the enormously complex apparatus required by a new edition of the entire work could be dispensed with for the future. The individual sections would only have to be reissued as the need and demand arose, so that the work as a whole would always be up to date.

Once the complete work had been put out in sections, there would be nothing to prevent it being published as a complete handbook in X volumes with a general title-page and comprehensive geographical and subject indexes. It might be better, once the volumes have been issued arithmetically, to issue the index as an independent last section with maps inserted by the publisher, so that it can be exchanged with a section published later as a new edition.

I might finally mention, quite incidentally, that a slightly larger format and correspondingly larger print would be highly desirable for the new edition of the Kohl Handbook.

It might be objected, obviously, that suggestions like these should be sent direct to the publisher, and that it is for him to decide whether to adapt his work to these or any other up-to-date requirements. However, the projected issue of a new edition of the Kohl Handbook can simply not be looked on as a purely internal matter for the publisher concerned. It is rather a philatelic event of such importance that I feel obliged to go public with my proposals so as to open a discussion of this affair of importance to all special collectors and awaken their interest in it.

Our main aim must be to make the new edition of the Kohl Postage Stamps Handbook a standard work accessible to the whole body of special collectors, not just to a favoured few.

p.6. We address a heartfelt request to all Society members to play a regular part in the appearance of the Society journal. It is absolutely necessary for every individual member to co-operate and do his share by sending in short articles, announcements, questions or answers.

INFORMATION 2

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

JUST A WORD

Dear Friends of the Philatelic Library,

Things have been moving with us over the last five months. As the title page shows, the entire book-stock has been r-done on the latest lines, and adapted by computer for the "new catalogue". May we take this opportunity of thanking all our voluntary helpers most sincerely for their enormous input.

The catalogue is planned to appear currently in the Deutsche-Briefmarken-Zeitung (DBZ) from no. 24 on, and should also be available to anyone interested as a reprint in about the 1st quarter of 1989.

The 1988 Annual General Meeting decided unanimously on raising the subscription from DM 30 to DM 40 (school pupils/students from DM 10 to DM 15) from 1 Jan. 1989. We hope this first increase for a good many years will also meet with the approval of members who were not present. Our Treasurer will send the bills out in January 1989, and we trust that all members will then pay them during the 1st quarter of 1989. (As provided for in the Rules.)

From 1st November 1988 we shall have new and extended opening hours: Tuesdays from 14.00 - 18.00 hr. Thursdays 14.00 - 19.00 hr. and 9.00 - 12.00 hr. every first Saturday in the month.

We have increased the times available for borrowing from 30 to 39 hours a month, with the interests of school pupils/students and retired people in mind especially.

In conclusion a word on our own behalf;

We are desperately in need of voluntary helpers, to work in the Library or at home and cover many fields of philately currently left in abeyance!!!!

Ring us or call in at the Library!!!!

With friendly greetings, I remain,
Chairman/Editor.
Dieter Huweler.

Library, Hamburg e.V, on 21.6.1988, at the Rhodos Restaurant.

Present were 12 individual members and the representatives of 3 Societies, i.e. 15 entitled to vote.

Item 1.

Herr Huweler opened the meeting at 18.35 hr. and greeted members present. Frau Weil had unfortunately had to go into hospital suddenly and was not present. We hope it is nothing serious, and wish her a good and speedy recovery.

Herr Huweler thanked Frau Weil and the voluntary helpers for their efforts. Particular thanks were also expressed to the Stiftung zur Forderung der Philatelie. We have received a higher contribution for 1988 than for the previous year, and hope this will be kept up in the future.

The membership pattern has barely altered. Individual membership has risen by 16 to 152, the number of Societies has remained constant at 26. This number is very low, as over 60 societies belong to our LV.

The period just gone was distinguished by a survey of the book-stock. Preparations are in hand to print our new catalogue in the DBZ. The manuscript will go to the DBZ within the next few days, who will decide in what form the new catalogue, which is very detailed, will appear during the last quarter of 1988.

It was said at the last AGM that we ought to find a legal adviser. The Chairman drew up a list with recommendations. It now remains for the meeting to take the proposal further.

Meantime, there have been alterations in the Library, and another display rack for periodicals has been provided. Furthermore, we have been allotted more space in the basement, so that books for which there is no room in the library can at least be near at hand.

The first "Information" was put out. We aim to issue this publication four times a year.

Item 2.

Frau Weil's report was read by Frau Fullrich. The meeting had no questions to ask about this report.

Item 3.

The meeting was declared quorate.

Item 4.

All members have received the minutes of the previous AGM and have had the opportunity to read them. No discussion was called for, and the minutes were accepted nem con.

Item 5.

The last financial year was relatively steady. Individually it should be pointed out that costs such as rent and heating, lighting and air-conditioning had risen. On the credit side, the Foundation had provided DM 39,000, and further gifts from the State Society totalling DM

1,500. There were no queries on the treasurer's report. Herr Huweler asked Herr Schnell to audit the report.

Item 6.

Frau Dettmann is unfortunately in hospital, she will undertake an audit. Herr Schnell has done it for two years. He has looked at the debits and credits, and there is nothing to object to in the two years.

Item 7.

Herr Kroog wished to resign as treasurer, and this was accepted unanimously.

Item 8.

Frau Weil proposed a change in name from "Bucherei" to "Bibliothek". This was thrown open for discussion. After a lively argument a vote gave 7 for, 8 against the change, so the proposal was rejected.

A further change to Rule 7 "Only members of the Society can serve on the Committee" was passed unanimously with 15 "aye" votes.

Item 9.

12 individuals and societies have been proposed for the Committee, 8 of whom have agreed to serve. Other resolutions/proposals were requested by the Committee: Herr Schmidt put another one forward. Herr Shnell asked what a legal adviser would do. Herr Huweler answered that the adviser would advise the committee. He would not take over any Committee or control functions. To Frau Brandt's question as to whether the adviser would be an individual or a Society, Herr Huweler replied that the present chairman of a Society or an individual would be chosen. When a chairman retired his successor would automatically be the advisor till a new one was appointed. Herr Huweler's request for an overall choice of advisers was passed with 13 votes for, and 2 against. The ballot gave 12 votes for, 2 against, and 1 abstention for the adviser proposed. Those elected were:

- | | | |
|----|--|---|
| 1. | Herr Wolfgang Schmidt,
Norderstedt. | Long-standing member and voluntary helper. |
| 2. | Herr Detlev Ehlers,
Norderstedt. | Long-standing member. |
| 3. | Frau Inge Riese, Hamburg. | Voluntary helper. |
| 4. | Herr Gunter Thonn, Hamburg. | Voluntary helper. |
| 5. | Herr Dieter Brocks, Hamburg. | Chairman of the BUW. |
| 6. | Frau Renate Brandt, Hamburg. | Chairman of Hamburg Verein f. Bank. |
| 7. | Herr Prof. G-A. Albers, Hamburg. | Chairman of Bergedorf BV. |
| 8. | Herr H.-M. Dettmann, Glinde | LR DPhJ Hamburg. |
| 9. | Herr Harry v. Hofmann,
Hamburg. | Long-standing member and ex
president. |

Item 10.

No election needed, as both Frau Dettmann and Herr Schnell will be in office for another year.

Item 11.

The report for 1988 was before the members. There are changes that must be made. To avoid this in future, we must increase the subscription and make more effort to increase the membership.

Item 12.

The Committee proposes an increase in the subscription for 1989 by DM 5,-- for individual members. Herr Schmidt proposed raising it by DM 10,--, and was supported by Frau Brandt and Herren Kroog and Schnell. An increase to DM 40,-- for individual members and DM for pupils and students as from 1.1.1989 was put to the vote. It was passed unanimously.

An idea for the Society subscription was put to the meeting by the Chairman. Herr Schnell suggested that Societies should contribute at a rate of 1 DM per member: this would be in line with the existing rules. Frau Brandt suggested that a decision as to the Society subscription should not be taken unilaterally over the heads of their Chairmen. Her Society had decided to limit its contribution to DM 250,--, and before she could agree to a different subscription, she would have to study the books. Herr Schmidt pointed out that it was inappropriate to come to a decision since most Societies were not represented. Herr Huweler ended the discussion by saying that the Societies had been contacted and the proposal explained to them. The motion was carried with 9 votes for, 3 abstentions and 2 against. Frau Brandt invited Herr Huweler to her Society's committee meeting, at which this point would be discussed.

Item 13.

No motions put forward.

Item 14.

Herr Schmidt suggested that the proposal to sell duplicate books at fixed prices did not correspond to the interests of the Society. Such books should be offered in return for gifts in future.

Item 15.

Herr Huweler thanked everyone heartily for attending the meeting, and wished them a safe journey. Meeting closed at 20.15.

Signed D. Huweler, Signed J. Fullrich, Chairman. Secretary.

p. 30 Report on Meeting of Members of the Philatelic Library
Hamburg, on 21.6.1988

Dear Library Member,

The most important and labour-intensive task of the report period just gone was photographing the titles of the entire book stock. About 4,800 books have now been put onto the catalogue, and with multiple copies the number rises to 6,000. The catalogues are not yet included in the title capture, nor is the national literature.

The next period will thus involve title capture for the catalogues, national literature, journals, working parities, auction catalogues and exhibition guides (most of these being of home origin). This should be about the same in extent as the book stock.

60% of our stock is on open access, i.e. the reader can personally take the book from the shelves, read it in the Library or borrow it. Unfortunately, the other 40% of the stock has had to go into store for reasons of space. Loans are then only possible on request.

Open access has great advantages for the reader, but does entail providing the corresponding amount of space for readers within the Library - which we do not do. Our space for readers is definitely too small, and at times it reaches the point where not every reader can always find a seat.

Thanks to the title capture of the book stock, the reader now has the following catalogues available for his use in the Library:

Subject catalogue
Alphabetical catalogue
Year of publication catalogue

The subject catalogue gives information when you want to know what books are available on a given country or topic. Associated literature is thus brought together here in the order it will be found on the shelves.

The alphabetical catalogue lists the available literature by author, title and/or corporate body.

For scientific studies it can be of great interest to know when the books appeared. The catalogue helps here by arranging all titles by the year of their publication.

All the catalogues are available in printed form, and copies can be obtained at cost price. Further catalogues are in preparation.

We have simplified our external loans system. A new permission system of borrowing had to be worked out.

The numbers of external and on-the-spot loans have increased, but more members are still urgently needed.

In the past, our budget for new books made it possible to buy even such works as Feuser's "Vorphilatelie". However, our principal method of obtaining new stock is that of free copies. We subscribe to magazines which we cannot get free.

The auction catalogues have been sorted in Bergedorf and related to specific auction houses.

As in earlier years, the Library had had a stand at exhibitions, such as Nordposta in Hamburg, the Grade 2 exhibition on Elmshorn and a publicity show in Harburg.

I have taken part in Society and philatelic meetings, in the Soester colloquia, the State Society meeting, and 2 sittings of the committee.

I would like to express my sincerest thanks to all members, since without them the activities mentioned would not be possible.

Signed Doris Weil.

p. 34 "Informationen" appears at irregular intervals 2-4 times a year, and is supplied without charge to all members of the Hamburg Philatelic Library. Reprints with acknowledgement of the source are permitted: all rights are reserved. Contributions by named authors do not necessarily represent the views of the editors.

No. 2/1988

p. 3	Just a word!
14/16	PHILATELIE + RESEARCH
	"Research into motif philately"
17/19	The bookworm speaks:
	Recent additions to the Philatelic Library
20	Invitation to NAPOSTA 89 and IPHLA 89
21/22	Research into motif philately (continued)
23/25	Literature information (new books)
26/29	Report on members' meeting 21.6.1988
30/31	Report of the Hamburg Philatelic Library
32/33	From the treasure chest:
	offers to our members
34	Tail piece

We draw special attention to the adverts from the firms of Ehrengut, Buchholz & Brocks on pages 2, 35 and 36.

END

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
September 1895, Volume 1, Issue 9

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.XXXI-XXXIII

The philatelic periodical literature of Central and South America from its beginning to the end of 1893.

Higher Regional Court Councillor Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz.

As far as I know, this subject has never yet received an exhaustive treatment in the philatelic press. I know of only a single article dealing with the South American periodical literature, and this was limited to a single country. This was a listing of the stamp magazines appearing in the Argentine Republic, published by Abel Fontaine in his 14th letter (Argentine letter) in No. 48 of L'Announce Timbrologique. I therefore feel safe in assuming that this article will be welcome to lovers of philatelic literature whose interest extends to foreign, and especially extra-European literature.

Even the famous work by the American Pressophilist John K. Tiffany, The Philatelic Library gives no information on this topic, for the simple reason that when the author finished his manuscript and sent it to press (July 1874), no specialist journal had yet appeared in Central and South America.

Stamp collecting began relatively late in these countries, and hence it also came about that the first literature appeared at a much later date than in, for example, the countries of the northern half of this great tract of the world. The first periodical in British North America appeared in Montreal, Canada in February 1964 - i.e. not much more than a year after the first magazines had appeared in Europe, and on the 15th December 1864 the first specialist journal, The Stamp Collector's Record appeared at Albany in the United States, but it took a full decade before South America followed this example. However, even when literary activity did begin in South America, only occasional literary items appeared for a long time.

Not till the year 1886 did things become a little more active in the literary field, until finally, by the year 1892 - thus in very recent times - a real flood of specialist journals is coming in from South America. The national language of all the countries of Central and South America is Spanish, with the sole exception of Brazil, where it is Portuguese. Consequently the magazines from Brazil are in Portuguese, and all the rest in Spanish, with just two exceptions. These are a magazine in German which began to appear in Argentina in the year 1891, and one in French, which appeared in Brazil during the same year.

Only a few of the papers from Central and South America have any great literary value, and a great number of them have only survived for a few numbers. By far the most outstanding is the Guia del Coleccionista de Sellos de Correos", which lasted for seven full years and 84 issues over the period 1878-1884. The service of issuing this journal was performed by Enrico Conrad Eberhardt of Valparaiso., who owned a printing works, was one of the outstanding South American philatelists, also edited the magazine himself and in the year 1890 put out a textbook, Historia de la Filatelia.

I now give a list of the philatelic journals of Central and South America in chronological order to the end of 1893, and though I obviously cannot claim it is absolutely complete, I do guarantee that it is nearly so. I have added notes where possible.

Titles marked with † have ceased publication.

* Translator's note: I have not translated the list of periodicals.

[End note]

Apart from these, the Gazeta Postal, published by Raul d'Azevedo, is still appearing in Pará, but this has no philatelic content, especially in its early numbers, and cannot really be classed as a philatelic journal.

Thus, the whole of Central and South America has produced only 43 different journals with a total of 462 issues up to the end of 1893.

I shall always be grateful for additions and corrections.

pp.XXXIII-XXXIV

News from the book trade

“Der Grune Senf” With its usual military precision, the new Senf appeared exactly “after Pentecost”, after being awaited with suspense. Undue importance is often foolishly ascribed in collecting circles to the Senf notations, although during the past year everyone has had the chance to see that Senf's prices only act as guidelines for the market even when they are based on fact; where however they are the artificial products of speculative stamp firms, they do not apply in wider circles. It is just as stupid to try to evaluate a work such as the Senf catalogue merely on the basis of the “prices”. Of 10 firms which have quoted for a particular stamp, only 2 give exactly the same price whether collectors or dealers are involved, and whether the example is in fine condition or not so fine, perhaps also whether the sale is taking place in the North or the South of our Fatherland, not to mention foreign countries. Which price is the more correct? Anyone who wants to sell will say the higher one, anyone who wants to buy will say the lower one, but the Senf is always the wrong one. Since the firm of Senf does not (unfortunately) sell at the noted prices, its quotations are subjective estimates, lacking a basis in reality. Hence, in determining the price of a stamp, the offer from any big dealer is more valid than the Senf catalogue. So what use is the Senf catalogue if nobody uses its prices.

In spite of its colour, this year's Senf is well ahead of its older brothers. It has been much enlarged by useful notes and appendixes - the collaboration of reliable specialists is visible overall. It was a good idea to co-opt the authorities in the various fields. The text of the work has been much improved thereby. This can be seen on all sides.

Although the "planned regular scheme of purchasing" mentioned in the foreword seems to have been given up, and there is no longer any reason to keep the estimated values of the stamps at their previous low level, it does appear from the wanted notices in the advertising sheets that many prices are deliberately held within limits. Used Heligoland for example is fundamentally wrong.

However, in general it must be accepted that this edition is a distinct improvement on its predecessors, and the notations correspond with actuality far more frequently. There is no point in picking out individual cases where individual retailers do not agree with the notations. Senf is not a normal catalogue and never will be: we can only warn the collector once more against taking the prices as anything but the subjective view of an individual strongly affected by his own interests.

It will be of interest to our readers to hear the opinion of Mr. Phillips of the firm of Stanley Gibbons, from their Monthly Journal. He writes: "First and foremost we are of the opinion that a dealer's catalogue should only be a price list of what he has for sale, and not a list with prices of every stamp whether it is in stock or not. A price catalogue with the actual market value of every stamp would be useful without a doubt, but can anyone produce such a work? We doubt it very much. And although an attempt is made in the Senf catalogue to put a price on varieties, we hold to our fast opinion that in hundreds and hundreds of cases the price is well wide of the true value, with the aim of helping dealers to purchase the stamps in question.

This is a serious accusation to make against a firm, and we only do it because we have the most extensive proof of what we assert and believe, that it is high time for German collectors to realize that this catalogue is not a reliable guide and stop relying on it as they have done in the past.

At the meeting of German philatelists in Mannheim, one of the leading collectors recently spoke to Richard Senf about the low prices quoted for many varieties Senf answered but what do you expect, stamps have to be bought as well as sold! So the publisher himself admitted that his prices are made low so that his firm can buy stamps.

We will add a few more examples, which you can all check if you need to:

Prussia 1857. 2 Sgr. plain ground. Senf catalogue 400 Mk (unused). Herr Senf offered one for sale in Mannheim, not a particularly fine one, for 600 Mk, and that in the same week as the catalogue appeared.

St. Vincent 1869. 4p yellow. Senf catalogue 40 marks, used. The firm of Senf had already ordered 10 of these from a London firm at 50 marks.

Nevis. 6p, lithog. Senf price 190 marks. 14 days before the appearance of this catalogue the firm ordered 4 from us at a price of 200 marks net.

Ceylon. 1st issue, 4p. unused, Senf 750 marks. It was recently sold at 2600 marks at auction. Other rarities are underestimated in the same way.

Bavaria. Here is the best evidence that stamps are priced cheaply for purchase: we refer to the 6 kr brown in a broken circle, put down at 100 marks unused. This is an extremely rare variety, and practically every German dealer would gladly buy it for 3 times the price.

We will not tire our readers with further examples, all pointing to the fact that the firm of Senf, partly deliberately and partly through ignorance have given prices incorrectly. People may make of it what they like, and we will simply note that it is not particularly difficult to look at 40,000 prices and pick out a dozen that do not correspond with reality and thus demonstrate the unreliability of a catalogue, especially when its good aspects are totally ignored.

However, the opinion may be expressed as to the prices that the real rarities are priced low, and current items are relatively dear.

Lückes Victoria-Edition of the Schaubek-Album A patented novelty which is of particular utility, not to the collector, who will not find space in it for a single stamp more than previously (on the contrary), but to the firm of Senf Brothers, who by this cunning idea release their catalogue plates to the dealer. So much for the patent fee! It should be noted that these new issues (in the price range from 50 pfg. to 3 Mk) contain only the stamps, and leave the perforations/cancellations completely ignored.

END

BULLETIN 2

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile Friend,

It is already several months since the Societe Belge de Bibliophilatelie was set up, and it is time to take a first look at how matters stand. These are the members who have enrolled during the last few weeks:

Madame	A. MOSSIAT of Namur
Messrs	BORGNIET, F, of Brussels
	BURLET, P, of Natoye
	CECE, P, (CPR de Roselies) of Aiseau
	CLAEYS, D. of Boom
	DECRE, A, of Overijse
	HAVRENNE, H, of Brussels
	GEORGES-PIRSON, of Gembloux
	LAMBERT-SCHWARTZ, M, of Thiaumont
	NOEL, J. P., Kinshasa, Rep of Zaire
	MICHEL, R, of Brussels
	SIMONS, A, of Brussels
	Doctor STIBBE of Brussels
	VAN DAMME, J. P., of Bruges
	VERVISCHÉ, R, of Brussels

L'Alliance Philatelique OFAC, of Marloie.

This brings the number of members to 27, which is very encouraging for a new association when one considers what a specialized topic bibliophilately is.

We thank all these people for the confidence they have shown in us, and hope that together we will do good work.

1) Proceedings of the meeting on January 25th.

What can be said about our first meeting? It took place as arranged on Thursday January 25th, a day which will be remembered in the annals of Belgian meteorology. You will remember that this was the day the god of the winds was unleashed on the capital, and the storm winds blowing on Brussels reached almost 170 km/h at the Uccle observatory. Understandably, this unfortunate set of circumstances prevented more than one person from turning out.

This did not prevent this first meeting from being very constructive, particularly as regards the exchange of numerous opinions as to the functioning and organization of the society.

The talk by V. SCHOUBERECHTS about Andre' de COCK also proved to be of great interest and was apparently appreciated by the members present. In fact, there was almost no time left to show the works dealing with the "Epaulettes", which certain bibliophiles had brought.

Several members who were compelled to stay at home by the storm have enquired subsequently if it would be possible to repeat the talk about Andre' de COCK. In view of the people present, this does not strike us as very likely, at least in the immediate future. Nevertheless, you will find a brief summary in this bulletin, and there will be a more searching analysis (photos, reproduction of original documents, and official papers) in the annual report.

2) Invitation

We invite you to attend our next meeting, which will be held this time on a Saturday, 24th March at 14.30 h. Before long we shall have a regular meeting-place, but in the meantime Mr. A. STAGIER is kind enough to have us at his home, 22 Annegijdboslaan, Overijse. Do not hesitate to contact the president if getting there will cause you any problem.

Please consult the map attached.

3) Talk and Subject of the Meeting.

The talk on March 24th will be devoted to one of the greatest forgers in philately: SPERATI. Himself the subject of many articles attempting to prove his genius and skill, he is also the author of a work entitled "Philately without Experts". Madame MOSSIAT will give us an account of this figure of philately.

The subject for the day belongs to the same order of ideas, as it is forgeries in philatelie. Do not hesitate to bring along any documentation you have on this subject, as it is rich and exciting...

4) Thanks

We thank Mr. Leo DE CLERCQ, who has offered the SBB the complete series (nos 1 to 64) of the bulletin of the Academie de Philatelie de Belgique, and take this opportunity to wish him a speedy recovery.

5) Organization of a Catalogue of Club Libraries

We shall try to get in contact with most of the circles that have a philatelic library. We hope to be able to get hold of a copy of their library catalogue, which will be most useful for following up our research work and advising philatelists on theirs.

Here is the list of catalogues in our possession:

- l'Amicale Philaztelique de Bruxelles.
- le Cercle Paul DE SMETH de Bruxelles.
- de Koninklijke postzegel vereniging van het land van Waas St Niklaas.
- de VBP Studiekring d'Anvers.
- la Federation Royale.
- la Societe Philatelique de Belgique.
- l'Academie de Philatelie de Belgique.

We ask any members who belong to any club or association that has a philatelic library to let us have its details, or better still, get us access to the catalogue. On this subject, we have to thank Mr. P. BURLET of Natoye, who has spontaneously sent us the catalogue of the well-supplied library of the philatelic circle "Les amis reunis du Condroz". On our side, we shall continue to search for material.

5) Bank of Bibliophilatelic Facts

The project is coming along nicely. We are in the process of drawing up the flowchart for this data bank, and have made contact with people who can help us to draw up the programme. When we have clearly understood the potentialities of our equipment, we shall draw up a list of keywords.

Each reference would then receive 3 numerical "key codes", so that any one document could be targeted by three different searches, according to its content.

Let us take an example: a work devoted to Epaulettes, and divided into three long chapters relating to the stamps themselves, their method of printing, and the types of cancellation in use at the time. This book could be picked up on the basis of three different searches.

- Epaulettes
- the production of postage stamps
- marcology: line cancellations

Obviously, this does not stop us from going ahead with our bibliographic inventory on the basis of slips. This would make all this information available as from now, and ready to go into the computer when the data bank is operational.

6) Subject "Epaulettes"

Here is the list of publications on Epaulettes as received at our round table of the 25th January.

For the moment we do not intend to take into account the articles that have appeared in the periodicals Balasse Magazine, Revue Postale and Philatliste Belge.

This list is doubtless not exhaustive: if you have other old or recent books, or background articles dealing with Epaulettes which are not mentioned above, your collaboration will be useful to us.

To do this, we have attached to this bulletin some bibliographical slips for you to fill in for each new reference. You will understand that this is to ensure uniformity, which will be very useful when we come to put these references on the computer. Extra sheets can of course be obtained on request if they are needed. We ask you to fill in these slips as carefully as possible for each new reference and send them to the secretary who will file them centrally.

Remember that a few minutes devoted to this task now will be useful to everyone in future. Thanks in advance.

Andre' de COCK 1880-1964*

The fantastic life of the man who was one of the founding fathers of the Brussels Postal Museum, is, we believe, well worthy of the honour of the first account we had last month. Here as promised is an account of him which Mr. Vincent Schouberechts has been kind enough to give us.

Born at Ledeberg on 12 July 1880, Andre Emile de Cock took up a career in administration after distinguishing himself as a student. Assistant magistrate, ordinary councillor, administrator of the Red Cross for East Flanders, our man worked during the First World War on the reorganization and management of the military hospital at Gand: then, thanks to his knowledge of the German language, he took part in the struggle against the enemy. In fact he worked in an important military information service till 1918.

Once the war was over, he became secretary to Mr. Lippens, then governor of East Flanders. In 1921 he became head of the special secretariat of the governor-general of the Congo, at Boma. Returning to Belgium in 1923, he then became administrator of colonial societies.

At the same time however A. de Cock was also rapidly becoming a personality in philately. After working for the creation of the Musee Postal - this saw daylight on the 6th of November 1936 - he became its linch-pin and curator. He managed to extract from the archives of the Administration the enormous stocks of postage stamps that had been collected there. He made a special impression of all the coins and all the sheets of Belgian stamps that he could find.

A great philatelist and Government commissioner-general for international exhibitions, Mr. de Cock was also an enthusiastic author whose works are still often consulted at the present day. Moreover, he had a fabulous collection which formed the first-rate documentation for the works he published: "The Belgian Congo and its Postage Stamps" (1931), "The Atlas of Belgian cancellations" (1937), "English post offices abroad and their cancellations" (1940), "Cancellations on Hong Kong stamps" (1940), along with a "Study of the stamps, their precursors, and the postal entires of Baden and Their cancellations" (1950) (this was written in collaboration with L. Herlant and Dr. J. Stibbe).

A. De Cock was indeed an amateur of the classic postage stamps - he moreover had a most impressive collection of dates on medallions (this collection belongs to the Postal Museum today) - he was also a first-rank collector of entires. Along with his tireless activity as a conference delegate, he worked at the editorship of numerous magazines such as "Le Philatliste Belge" or "L'Entier Postal". Finally, one of his ambitions was to pass on all his learning and love of stamps. Thus, did he not say that "We must spread the taste for philately, especially amongst young people, and teach them about the numerous craftsmen who helped to create and develop the post in Belgium. We must pay homage to our predecessors and show the adolescent the path that has been travelled so that he will have a better idea what is available now, and what awaits us in the future.

* See Balasse Magazine, no. 4, and "L'Entier Postale" no. 12.

 Balasse Magazine no. 14, 1936.

END

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

FOREWORD

Today I lay before you Part 56 of Literatur-Nachrichten. A survey of the index of literature will show you that we evaluate over 100 different philatelic journals. Also, the division has been improved for the larger countries. I would like to point out that an f) in the data for location means that the work is continued in subsequent issues of this journal.

As was said last year, for the time being Literatur-Nachrichten can only appear once a year, for operational as well as financial reasons. The costs of production are considerable, and are not covered by the subscription money: they have to be supported by the Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History. I would like to express my thanks for all the letters. The suggestions in them will be followed as far as possible.

In conclusion, my thanks are again due to the Head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, Herr Senior Municipal Inspector Merkle, and to Herr Raupp, head of the library of the Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies, for their support. I should also like to express my heartfelt thanks to my co-workers, Herr Baum of Dusseldorf, Danesch of Schwelm, Eilers of Stockelsdorf, Muller of Steinebach, and Dr. Rossberg of Berlin, for their work on the index and the Review of Literature.

Fritz Gaedicke

Christoph Otto Muller

Born 27th September 1894 - died 7 May 1967

Christoph Otto Muller lives no more, quietly, as he lived and worked, Christoph Otto Muller went from us on 7th May 1967.

Ch. O. Muller was born in Munich on 27th September 1894. His youth was passed in Bad Reichenhall. His father was inspector of the Bavarian salt-mines there. When Ch. O. Muller had finished at the Max-Gymnasium, he entered the service of the City of Munich in 1914. Postage stamps were his hobby even in his childhood days, along with philatelic literature, and so in 1924 he was given the post of librarian of the Tauma Society. He was soon able to put together an important library by combining the libraries of the Tauma Society and the Munich Society of Entire Collectors, plus the philatelic literature collection of F. H. Zinckgraf, then chairman of the Munich Stamp Club. Then came a legacy from Berta Larisch in the form of the library of the defunct magazine "Das Postwertzeichen", along with her own book collection. He managed to get his store of literature housed in a room at the Munich City Library, so that it became the foundation of the present large Philatelic Section. Ch. O. Muller was honorary head of the Philatelic Library from 1938-1946, then he took over as official head and so was able to unite his employment with his hobby.

Probably the most important task performed by Ch. O. Muller was the preparation of the card index, which he began in the air-raid shelter during the war, and which made it possible to answer enquiries by tracing where an article on a given topic was to be found.

In 1951 at the annual meeting of the Society of German Philatelists in Munich, he was chosen to head the Society's "philatelic literature" section. The right man had been chosen here, since Ch. O. Muller shortly afterwards began Literatur-Nachrichten, and undertook the laborious task of evaluating 120 German and foreign philatelic journals. He transferred this to younger hands at the annual meeting in Berlin in 1963. However even then he did not take his ease, but took over the literature exchange service.

In spite of his great services, Ch. O. Muller received only two major honours. The Kalckhoff Medal, the highest German award for services to literature, in 1953, and in 1963 the enamel distinguished service pin from the Society of German Philatelists e.v. However, philatelists in Germany and beyond will have a permanent memorial to Ch. O. Muller, since without his work in the Philatelic Library and his efforts in setting up Literatur-Nachrichten, philately would be merely a piecemeal affair. Every philatelist needs the literature to deepen his understanding. What Ch. O. Muller began with love and diligence will be carried on by me, his successor, on the lines he laid down, so giving him a living memorial.

Fritz Gaedicke

Report of the Head of Section B at the 1966 Annual Meeting in Hanover.

As I told you in my report of last year, my principal task as Head of the Section is to produce Literatur-Nachrichten. About a month ago I was able to get Part 55 out. You will appreciate that, because of all the work involved, Literatur-Nachrichten has not appeared for two years, so that this issue is 50% bigger than the previous one. Nevertheless, a few magazines from the years 1963 and 1964 still remain to be dealt with. The mere cost of printing has risen from about 1,300 DM for no. 53/54 to 2,300 DM for no. 55, because of the increased number of pages and also the higher cost of printing. It would hardly be possible to publish without considerable financial help from the Society of German Philatelists. About 100 subscribers have received almost twice that number of copies free. Nevertheless I do not intend to increase the price. I look on the subscription price as merely a token contribution, since to be truly economical an issue would have to cost at least 20 DM, and I get only 8.5 DM including postage.

I thought by printing an account of it in the Society Reports to expand the numbers. I hoped that many collectors who need the Society Reports would recommend Literatur-Nachrichten to the chairmen of their own societies, and in this way I would get new subscribers. However, ladies and gentlemen, I really must have been too much of an optimist, since not a single enquiry reached me. I then made a second attempt by getting in touch with the societies direct. Since I had only a limited number to give out as samples, I wrote firsts to every State union of 7 societies. I asked in my covering letter for the matter to be brought up at a society meeting, and also wrote that Literatur-Nachrichten belonged in a society library. It gives exactly what the research philatelist needs, a list of everything published on his topic in the specialist magazines.

The success of this action was overwhelming: one single society ordered Literatur-Nachrichten from me. Despite this lack of success, I have written to other societies this year enclosing the new number of Literatur-Nachrichten. I have been active in philatelic literature for some years now, but I am staggered by the societies lack of interest.

At the moment we index about 100 journals. The German-language journals are dealt with entire. Unfortunately I do not receive all their publications from the various Working Parties. I ask you to let me have working copies in future. I also ask those in charge of exhibitions to let me have a copy of the exhibition catalogue to review. This literature will not be discarded, but will always find a place in the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library.

As regards the literature survey, the request has been made for a judgement as to value to be included with the other details. This is unfortunately not possible, since we can hardly expect our few co-workers to read all the new publications and be experts in every branch of knowledge. If anyone cares to join in and let me have his opinion on a work within his own sphere of expertise, I shall accept it gladly. It is however really too much to expect me to write to an expert about every new work and ask for his co-operation. As there are some 200 new publications per year, I should do nothing but write letters.

I have included for the first time in Literatur-Nachrichten an offers list from Herr. Ch. O. Muller's literature exchange service. I hope that many subscribers will find something for themselves in this list, which runs to more than 10 pages.

The response to Literatur-Nachrichten of the year 1965 was good. I was very pleased by the number of letters. No. 55 also met a warm reception. At least, my predecessor Herr. Ch. O. Muller wrote to me from Steinebach to say I am on the right road to restoring Literatur-Nachrichten to its original level. I was especially pleased by this letter. I have still another request to make to the critics, when they are evaluating a work they should differentiate between the work of a professional journalist and that of an amateur. The latter can be expected to make more mistakes, since there is a great difference between waking up to a task in the morning and having to start on it in the evening after a strenuous days' work. I am therefore ready to criticize errors and omissions, but I do bear in mind that the results of freely undertaken voluntary work must be looked at with a benevolent eye.

This was my report on Literatur-Nachrichten. The other activities of Section B are hardly worth mentioning. Questions and answers have been dealt with by me and my co-workers. As usual, I shall conclude my remarks with thanks, thanks to the German Society of Philatelists for their financial support. I must also thank my co-workers, Messrs. Baum of Dusseldorf, Danesch of Schwelm, Eilers of Stockelsdorf, Chr. O. Muller of Steinebach and Dr. Rossberg of Berlin. My especial thanks go to the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, City Chief Inspector Merkle, who has given energetic support to all my efforts. I also thank the librarian of the State League of Berlin Philatelic Societies, Herr Raup, for his support and co-operation. Although I have already said too much about new subscribers in my report, in conclusion I do ask you all to try to obtain them in your societies and circles of friends.

Fritz Gaedicke

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BUCHERWURM

1, no. 3, 5 December 1921

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

No. 1000

By Alexander Bungerz

At the present time, when we have grown used to counting in high numbers, and our debts are reckoned in billions, the number 1000 has shrunk considerably from its former significance. And yet, if we look at it in the right way, it is still a considerable amount. A thousand marks, crowns, or even roubles strike one as being quite moderate sums, but 1000 issues of a specialist journal - a thousand different issues of a stamp magazine following one after the other - that means the work, worry, attention, exertions and application of an entire generation!

Our hobby of philately is still very young as compared with other objects of collection such as paintings, coins, seals etc., and can only point to three magazines that have been able to print the number 1000 at the head of their pages. The first was the "General-Anzeiger für Philatelie", which was able to mount this proud number on the 5th June 1920, in the 38th year of its existence, unnoticed by most of its readers and without calling special attention to it. The first number of the "General-Anzeiger" appeared on the 10th April 1883, published by Gustav Kirchhoff & Co. in Iserlohn, and ran to 6 pages. From no. 10 of the year 1887 this was taken over by Ch. Sauerland of Hemer, now of Ludwigslust, and this firm has continued to bring it out in the familiar format. Each year now forms an impressive volume.

The second magazine to reach its jubilee number is actually the oldest existing philatelic journal, the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" first issued on 1 January 1874 by Wernick & Co. in Leipzig in a slightly larger format than today. From No. 7 of the first volume it passed into the ownership of Louis Senf, and from No. 121 (vol. 11, 1884) into that of the Senf Brothers in Leipzig. Vols. 1-4 were published in the format mentioned, vols. 5-10 in a much bigger one, and then from vol. 11 1884 onwards the well-known format still in use today was adopted. The magazine reached its 1000th issue on 20th August of the year 1920, only 6 weeks later than the General-Anzeiger. A sight of the long run of volumes, a quick glance through them and better still a careful study will reveal what this magazine means for German philately. Even though it shrank in size and numbers during the war years, so that some of these years are hardly obtainable any more, it has today resumed its position as the German philatelic journal with the largest issue figures.

The third of the group is the "Internationale Postwertzeichen-Markt" which adopted this title from no. 936 of the 1st July 1920. Earlier called "Internationales Briefmarken-Offertenblatt", it was started as a four-page advertising sheet on the 25th January 1892 by C. G. Vogel. Its place of issue was originally Possneck, became Plauen for nos. 36-78, and went back to Possneck from No. 79 onwards. No other advertising journal, whether in German or a foreign language, can compare today with the importance of the I.B.M. No. 1000 appeared in Vol. 30, on the 22 September 1921, with a laurel wreath on its cover and a congratulatory message from Walter Wolf.

A fourth German journal reaching this high number is not to be expected in the near future. The next will be "Mitteilungen des Internat. Handler-Vereins", Berlin, which had got to 600 by the end of 1921, and "Der Philatelist", Dresden, which has reached about 500. However in conclusion, Germans enthusiastic about their native language will express the usual wish to the three jubilee celebrations.

ad multos annos!

The next issue is expected to appear at the end of January 1922.

Question Box

Wiener Briefmarken-Offertenblatt (Internationale Philatelisten-Zeitung).

This magazine appeared in 4ø, first from Friedrich Schiller, later (from no. 13) from Josef Mayer, Wien. Vol. 1 contained nos. 1-3, Vol. 2 nos. 4-15, the last dated 15 December 1919. According to the publisher the magazine should have finished with no. 16, that very likely appeared at the end of December 1919. This however does not make sense, as I have nos. 17, 23 and 30/31, all dated 1920. In spite of many requests neither the first nor the second publisher has given any more information, so I ask Society members, particularly in Austria, for clarification. I want to buy nos. 16, 18-22, 24-29, 32? etc., at a good price, and ask for them to be sent to Tegernsee. Otherwise I should be very grateful for any information relating to the magazine.

A. Bungerz.

Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors

New members accepted into the Society are Messrs:

- 56) A Schwabe, Wurzen.
- 57) Dr. Emilio Diena, Rome.
- 58) Horst Vollmer, Architect, Berlin - Steglitz.
- 59) Georg H. Jaeger, Libau, Latvia.
- 60) W. J. Harrsen, Book Dealer, Hamburg.

In view of the steadily rising costs of labour, paper and printing, the subscription will have to be increased for the year 1922. It will thus become for:

Members in Germany and Austria	M	40.-
--------------------------------	---	------

" " Sweden	Kr	5.-
" " Italy	L	10.-
" " Holland	G1	3.-
" " France	Francs	12.-
" " America	Dollar	1.-

Members in Germany and Austria are asked to remit the amount direct to my P.O. Box (Berlin 46, 690). Members abroad will do best to send the amount in banknotes of their own country in registered letters to my address. Postage stamps will not count!

Journals Service for the Year 1922. Esteemed members can obtain the following journals for 1922 at the preferential prices shown.

Orders with the correct amount should be sent to me by the 20th December. All money should be sent to me (P.O. Box Berlin 46, 690), and not to the magazine concerned. There is a handling charge of M. 1.50 for every order (several magazines ordered by one member count as one order). Orders not accompanied by cash cannot be accepted. All enquiries must be accompanied by the return postage.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, 2. no. 5, May 1933

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

PHILATELIC LITERATURE IN THE LEIPZIG UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

By Dr. Phil Johannes Schubert, University Librarian.

So far only a few public and scientific libraries have bothered with philatelic literature. It is moreover certainly very difficult to get together a complete collection of philatelic works. The main reason for this is that writing on this topic is usually not dealt with by the book trade, and tends to appear very irregularly and in very small editions. Of course, many libraries have some philatelic books and some philatelic journals but no effective collections of a systematic nature. Rather, individual collectors, dealers or philatelic societies tend to build up regular collections. However, these initially purely private undertakings have been the source or starting point responsible for the presence of the few existing special collections in open libraries. After the death of their first owner or the winding up of a society and the like, many such collections are auctioned off and scattered to the winds - I am thinking for example of the library of Herbert Clark, which was auctioned by H. R. Harmer on the 18 and 19 February 1924 - but some have met what must be accounted a better fate, by getting bought in by an open library, or being presented to one. One great acquisition, for example was the take-over of the book collection of Dr. jur. Jul. Rommel by the Prussian State Library in Berlin: outstanding gifts are that of the Library of the Earl of Crawford to the British Museum in London, and that of Herr C. G. Vogel (The Krotzsch collection) to the German Library in Leipzig.

Another way of ensuring the systematic and continuous upkeep of originally private collections is for the societies to give them to a public library to look after. This has the advantage of ensuring that the stock can be as widely used as possible and thus fulfil its main purpose.

The collection of philatelic literature in the Leipzig University Library belongs to this last type. By meeting the Director half-way - transfers of this kind are not a foregone thing - it was possible during last year for two large German philatelic societies to hand their collections over to the library for maintenance and the widest possible utilization. On the 26th May 1932 the literature collection of the Verein Leipziger Briefmarkenbörse was transferred to the Library building, and this was followed on 20th June 1932 by the Library of the Germania-Ring, the Union of German Stamp Collectors' Societies. Accounts of how and why the two societies decided to transfer their collections to the University Library, and detailed data on their use will be found in the society magazines, the "Berichte des Vereins Leipziger Briefmarkenbörse e. V." (192, pp. 37, 103-104), and "Germania-Berichten" (1932, p. 70/71). Here we will give merely - and briefly - an account of what the libraries contain.

The collection of each of the two societies was special to it, and systematically built up. Two card indexes, which are still being kept up at present, give a survey of the two collections in the form of an alphabetic and a subject index. The subject index is arranged so that already existing and newly appearing philatelic literature can be readily handled. Independent monographs, journals, and offprints of individual magazine articles are covered.

Figures given below are rounded:

In the first group are introductory and encyclopedic works. It includes, for example, general introductions to stamp collecting (such as Haas: Lehrbuch der Briefmarkenkunde", Leipzig 1905; ibid., "Leitfaden der Briefmarkenkunde", Leipzig 1914; Suppantchitsch, "Leitfaden der Philatelie", 1880; ibid. "Grundzuge der Briefmarkenkunde" 1895 etc.; dictionaries of philatelic terminology, collectors' address books, collectors' pocket books, almanacs and calendars for stamp collectors. To add to these are the general philatelic lexica (e.g. Bungerz: Grosses Lexikon der Philatelie, 1923 etc.) and philatelic atlases (such as Lucke's "Atlas der Briefmarken-Geographie", Leipzig 1917 etc.) This group totals 45 works.

Bibliographical Works and Writings on Philatelic Librarianship form a second group with some 40 items currently. Prominent here are, obviously, the older but distinguished bibliographical works of Suppantchitsch, and amongst more recent writings, Max Ton's book "Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur", Dresden 1916, which leaves nothing to be desired from the librarians standpoint, especially as regards its listing of titles. Amongst the foreign works I should like to mention Ricketts: "The Philatelic Literature Bibliography Index ... from 1863 to 1912", Forty-Fort P.a., 1912 and Anderson and Smith: "Early English Philatelic Literature, 1862-1865", London 1912. This group includes the catalogues of philatelic literature collections, such as the catalogue of the Earl of Crawford's library (which by the way includes works that were never in this collection!), the older Index to the Library of the Germania-Ring, and the catalogue of the Philatelic Section (Vogel Foundation) of the German Library in Leipzig.

Biographical Works, of which not too many exist, form another division. I am thinking only of accounts of the life of such people as Alexander Bungerz, or recollections of their philatelic youth by Kalckhoff and the like.

Another group still rather poorly represented is that of works on the History of Philately. At the minute there are only four individual works, usually English tracts on the Chalmers-Hill dispute. Of course, much of the material in this group exists in fragmentary form in the magazines and individual textbooks and handbooks.

The items on Philatelic Societies, with their rules, programmes, reports of meetings, notice-board, publicity material and individual exhibitions amount to some 100 in all. To them must be added reports on philatelic assemblies, (with stenographers' reports, lectures and the like).

Another group comprises Collected Works and Handbooks. To the first belong such things as the undertaking of the eighties by W. A. Louis Senf, Leipzig ("Philatelistische Bibliothek", in which the principal works of Alfred Moschkau are included, and the "Bibliothek fur Postwerthzeichensammler"), by Brendicke of Berlin ("Bibliothek fur Sammler"), and by Moens of Brussels ("Bibliothèque des timbrophiles", which also includes the outstanding monographs by Tiffany and Coster on the old stamps of the United States). Examples of more recent collections are "Kurzls Briefmarken-Bucherei", Munich, the monographs from the Paul Kohl TG

.m.bh.H, Chemnitz; and amongst foreign series, "Nankivell's Philatelic Handbooks" (later title "The Postage Stamp Handbooks"), "Melville Stamp Books", the "W.E.P. (i.e. West End Philatelist) Series of Philatelic Handbooks" etc. The handbooks are distinguished by names such as Ferdinand Meyer, Paul Lietzow, Krotzsh, and Pemberton. "Stamp Collectors Handbook", London 1878, amongst foreigners. This group totals 25 series, 10 of them from abroad.

(Continuation follows.)

REVIEW

Medical Councillor Dr. Paul Pirl 60 years old. The well-known philatelist Med-Rat Dr. Paul Pirl, Berlin celebrated his 60th birthday on 23 March of this year, and we express our heartiest good wishes a little late. Over the years we have received a series of fundamental papers on various topics from his pen, especially on Japan, Central America, Luxemburg and the Transvaal. However his particular speciality is Heligoland, the stamps, cancellations, forgeries and new issues of which have received his special attention. Dr. Pirl is working on a Heligoland section for the Kohl Handbook at the moment. However, his services to philately have not been of a purely literary nature. He has been outstanding in the struggle against forgeries, and his ability as a tester is well-known. His services in organizing and running various meetings and exhibitions, and his activity as a judge should not go unmentioned. We can only hope and wish that this meritorious celebrant will be spared to us for many years yet.

Albert Friedemann T. The well-known philatelist and researcher on the postage stamps and cancellations of the German colonies and overseas post offices died on March 17th of this year in Leipzig after a prolonged illness resulting from inflammation of the lung, at the age of 66 years. Friedemann's principal service to philately lay in his wide knowledge in the domain of German colonial philately, a knowledge he has left to us in the form of many publications. Along with other great philatelists such as Kalckhoff, Kleebig, Pirl, Stenger et. al., he published the "Handbook of Postage Stamps and Cancellations from German Post Offices in the Protectorates and Abroad". Specialist collectors can hardly do without this fundamental work. However this is not the only thing that kept up informed of the rich results of Friedemann's research: he kept us up-to-day for the study of German colonial stamps. I should also be mentioned that he was working on a special catalogue of the German colonial postage stamps as early as 1907. When he completed his 60th year, the Friedemann medal was established in his honour by the Germania-Ring, and he was its first recipient. Philately has suffered a bitter loss. May his memory be honoured!

SOCIETY FOR FRIENDS OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Association for the Care and Promotion of Philatelic Literature.

Annual subscription 3 D.M, including journal.

P.O. Box Hamburg 68046 (under Carl Schmittdiel).

Members can obtain bibliographical works mentioned at reduced prices.

The following new members have been accepted:

56. Herr Fr. Polomski, Berlin - Charlottenburg.
57. Herr Hermann E. Sieger, Lorch, (Wurttemberg).
58. Herr Karl Th. Meyer, cand. med., Berlin.

Lovers of literature who wish to know more about our Society can obtain detailed information by contacting C. Schmittiel, 45 Tornquiststrasse, Hamberg 19.

JOURNALS REVIEW

Listed under this heading are only the journals regularly sent to the Editors.

Abbreviations used are those of the Deutsche Philatelistische Jahrbuch as far as possible. New abbreviations not in the Yearbook will be adopted for a future new edition of this.

The following journals have been received by the Editors:

SURVEY OF CONTENTS

Prepared by Korner, Preuss, Schmittiel.

The abbreviations for the journals are as used in the Journals Review. The first figure gives the year, the second the part number, and the third the page number of the issue concerned.

END

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue,

Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

FORUM PHILATELY

Philatelic literature - not the "stepchild" of philately

As part of its attempt to extend the range of philately to all fields the Society of German Philatelists has decided to grant philatelic literature its rightful place, since without the information it supplies about present and past ages not only our own exhibitions but absolutely all philatelic exhibitions within the overall range of international philately would be left incomplete. And since the papers and publications of the various working parties and special sections of the S.G.P., and the works of great individual philatelic authors are tending to get more and more international recognition, it was a sensible and well-considered step to apply for an exhibition of philatelic literature to be included in the plans for the international exhibition of modern philately at MOPHILA '85 in Hamburg by the F.I.P. (Federation Internationale de Philatelie". At the F.I.P. Congress in Rome the delegates from over 60 countries were unanimously in favour of such a project, and the green light was given for the preparation of this second international exhibition of literature, IPHLA '89, in Frankfurt-am-Main. Its predecessor, MILANO '82, was held in the magnificent surroundings of the Trivulziani Library with its store of medieval art, in one of the most beautiful and noteworthy Italian buildings, the Castello Sforza. More than 600 literature fans from all over the world competed with well over a hundred authors from the SGP, and the number of publications they exhibited was not only high in line with the level of participation but also reached noteworthy heights in the medal competitions. The rebuilt Opera House in Frankfurt will be as worthy a setting for this significant world competition as the Milanese Castello Sforza, and may hope to attract as many entries in the various categories of handbooks and monographs, catalogues, magazines and periodicals, articles from the latter, from the SGP and its various working parties and special sections. Anybody who has noted the latest trends towards entires and postal history will have also noted with interest the number of new publications in the German language which can now be judged in competition with others.

And since, as is so often said, great events cast their shadows before, the Union of ? Philatelists has arranged a fore-runner, PHILIBRI '87, in the period from 20 to 22.11.1987, for which we are pleased to say well over 100 participants have already registered. There will be a parallel one-day seminar for the editors and publishers of periodicals from the SGP working parties and special sections, to help them to get the optimum format for their publications. The SGP is fortunate enough to have the full support of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and

Postal History in this undertaking. The Federal Minister for Posts and Telegraphs and patron of IPHLA '89, Dr. Christion Schwarz-Schilling, says in his foreword to Info 1 for IPHLA '89:

"I see it as one of the most important tasks of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History to help to preserve philatelic literature and that of postal history"

With a promise like this behind us, the tasks which the SGP and its sections have undertaken with regard to the presentation of philatelic literature will certainly be overcome. The enthusiastic participation of many idealists will make another contribution here.

END

Giuseppe Leoni

Philatelic Bibliography of Italy. Notes for the compilation of a catalogue [Bibliografia timbrologica dell'Italia. Note per la compilazione d'un catalogo]
Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo, October 1877, Volume 2, Whole number 16, pp.127-130 &
November, Whole number 17, pp.135-137.

(Translation of the Introduction only, p.127)

Translation by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca. 1999

PHILATELIC BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ITALY

NOTES FOR THE COMPILATION OF A CATALOGUE

France, Spain, Belgium, the United States of America and other countries already have their philatelic bibliographies, and at the moment the French society is busy compiling one for Italy.

Our country alas cuts a poor figure compared with others as regards the small quantity and very low quality of the publications that have seen the light of day here: it may be noted in this respect that although the suggestion was made by the Honorary Secretary of the French Society, we have not been able so far to make up our minds to undertake this work. However, now that the eminent Ph. de Bosredon has decided to do it, and has honoured us with a request for our feeble assistance, there is no longer any way of preventing the poverty of Italy in this respect from being brought to public notice, and we have decided to help by publishing in this journal some preparatory notes for the compilation of a bibliographical catalogue, in the hope that the list can be improved. We have to hand a certain number of Italian publications: however we know there must be others, such as the stamp catalogue by Ulisse Franchi of Florence, believed to be the oldest published in Italy. We also lack the various price-lists issued by E. Carlo Usigli and Nicolo Gavilli of Florence. We have applied to these two latter to obtain them, but our requests could only be satisfied in part. Hence we urgently request any reader who owns these publications, or any others not mentioned in our list, to let us have them for recording, and we will return them as quickly as possible.

It should go without saying how important it is for this Bibliography to be as complete as possible, and we are sure that everyone who has the honour of our country at heart will favour us with extensive communications. Meanwhile, here is as much as we have been able to get together so far, and we should be pleased to have any comments you may care to make*, and these will be published in later numbers.

* Letters should be sent direct to the author of this note.

END

From: Sammler - Dienst, Coburg, 21 (25), p.1645, Dec. 12th 1970

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue,

Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

ON THE HISTORY OF THE PHILATELIC PRESS

A. Kreuzer

On the 14th November 1897 appeared no. 1 of the first volume of the Communications of Germania, the society circle for German stamp collectors.

This number contained an excerpt from the general rules of the Germania-Circle. Its aim was to support philately and promote interest in stamp-collecting. Reference was made to the special sections of the Circle: Information, Books for Sale, Literature, Testing, Exchanges, Insurance. The German Collectors' Day brought contributions from P. Ohrt on "Photography and Projection in the Service of Philately", and from L. Burger on "Steamship Line Stamps - Are they collectable?"

The new magazine contains valuable articles, which we list as follows:

P. Ohrt: "The Hamburg stamps of the 1« and 1¬ schilling 1866 issues, and the 2« schilling 1867 issue".

H. Krotzsch: "Contributions to the history of the Brunswick trial printings".

L. Burger: "The first letter cards".

Lowenhagen: "Contributions on the postage stamps of Uruguay".

L. Brummer: "Bavarian cancellations 'Kronach, Pruefening, Weiden' and products with postmarks on letters".

L. Brummer: "The place of philately with respect to the "Bund" and the opposition in theory and practice aroused by its foundation".

P. Ohrt: "More exact dating of Austrian Mercury type".

L. Burger: "The position of philately from 1865 to the present day".

L. Burger: "The specialist press in today's philately".

END

JEAN-BAPTISTE MOENS 1833-1908

The Catalogue of his Works with Criteria of Rarity

By A. Leclercq and G. Waroquiers

Translation produced by:

Brian J. Birch,

33 Boar's Head Avenue,
Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

Preface

We believe the work we publish today will answer a wish often expressed by collectors of the works of Moens, the bibliophiles and lovers of 19th century philately.

In 1878 Philippe de Bosredon wrote the first philatelic bibliography of France and Belgium, which was published by J. B. Moens and followed in 1906 by the work of Quinet.

Nevertheless we must give the first place to the admirable "Catalogue of the philatelic library of the Earl of Crawford" by E. D. BACON.

In spite of all the works that have followed, no-one has published a complete catalogue of the works of Jean-Baptiste Moens, with criteria of rarity.

We have not given money estimates, since it is impossible for us to alter the prices annually as is done in stamp catalogues. To keep this book always useful, we have opted for the expression of "criteria of rarity". Market fluctuations or devaluations will have no effect on the value of the present work.

It is important to keep the idea of criteria of rarity in perspective, since two objects both quoted as (oooo) may have very different commercial values.

Example: The review "Le Timbre-Poste" complete in 38 volumes was put up for public sale by W. Balasse in April 1975 at a price of 15,000 francs plus post and packing.

No 303 in the present work can be estimated at ñ 5,000 francs.

These examples give a good idea of the commercial difference which may exist between two items both graded as (oooo).

We have devoted three years of incessant labour to this work. It was whilst editing this catalogue that we came fully to realize the difficulties encountered in the attempt to achieve a synthesis at all complete and instructive.

Although we have checked our working files as scrupulously as possible, we have several times had to give up trying to find references for certain things which were not in our personal libraries or which we could not locate in any of those which we have been allowed to consult.

We cannot disguise the fact that in spite of all the attention given to editing and correcting this work, it may still contain errors and omissions which we should be grateful if our readers could point out.

Finally, we are happy to express our entire gratitude to those whose advice was valuable in enabling us to bring our work to a satisfactory conclusion. We thank the "Royal Philatelic Society of London" and the "Federation des Cercles Philateliques de Belgique" for permission to publish the "Table of contents to Timbre-Poste" by Bertram T. K. Smith.

The Authors

JEAN-BAPTISTE MOENS

1833-1908

Everything appears to have been said about Jean-Baptise Moens. If all the articles that mention this remarkable man (countless journals, periodicals, reviews and philatelic works of all kinds) could be collected, there would be enough to fill several respectably-sized books.

Let us recall what Emmanuel Blanc published in 1949 (editions Berger-Lavault):

"J. B. Moens was one of the first and most erudite philatelic authors. Under his name will be found an impressive file of volumes, very hard to collect together, since only 150 copies of most were ever published".

It is very true that his output is impressive, and the catalogue we shall produce will be a major revelation for many philatelists. However, nothing at the outset pointed to his name becoming famous and connected for ever with philately.

In 1848 he opened a second-hand bookshop at 7 Galerie Bortier in Brussels.

At the same time he began a collection of postal vignettes which became one of the most important in the world. In 1852 he decided to start a "stamp business".

The lack of philatelic publications made this a very rudimentary business, and he sold his postage stamps at a "single price".

When philatelic publications started in 1862, J. B. Moens took the lion's part and produced an impressive literary output in a completely new science. He took every chance and let nothing stop him from reaching the highest peaks of his profession and obtaining the highest distinctions in spite of himself.

His list of honours speaks for itself:

- 1862 - worlds' first professional catalogue
- 1862 - worlds' first brochure on falsifications
- 1863 - first philatelic journal in the French language
- 1864 - worlds' first illustrated catalogue.

He cannot be accused of copying when it comes to brochures and specialist studies. His list of firsts speaks for itself. Here are some examples.

No individual could have created this enormous body of work without the help of co-workers. We thus take this opportunity of paying homage to Mr. Louis Hanciau who directed the administrative side of the Moens publications with a masterly hand for 38 years.

Need we recall that Hanciau was also a very talented philatelist, and that his book on postage stamps always enjoyed a well-merited success.

Jean-Baptiste Moens was a great patriot. He was in succession an officer in the Chasseurs Eclaireurs then Communal Councillor of Ixelles for 28 years.

He was elected President of the first international postage stamp exhibition at Anvers in 1887. He was made an honorary member of the "Philatelic Society of London" and numerous European and American societies.

His work harvested the highest rewards in the shape of prizes of honour, plus gold, gilt and silver medals.

Rene' Poncelet, who knew him well, published a biographical article in "Philatliste Belge" of 15-2-1925, and we reproduce the following passage from this:

"Naturally a firm as important as that of J. B. Moens must have a history. Celebrated in the old and new world, recording and regulating the sale of postage stamps because of the high value universally placed on its publications and catalogues, it had the glory of seeing the world's greatest rarities, such as the first Hawaiian, British Guava, and Mauritius Post Office stamps come to rest in its files."

It is astounding to find today that Moens of the Galerie Bortier in Brussels, has traded eleven of the twenty-three "Post office" Mauritius stamps known in the world, and nowadays every time one of these is put up for sale the fact is reported in the press and often on the television of the entire world.

On the 1st of November 1899 he announced in his journal "Le Timbre-Poste" that the hour of retreat had struck and that he was going to liquidate his very considerable philatelic stock. On the 1st of April 1900 he announced that the liquidation was a fait accompli, and that he had sold all his stamps to Monsieur Edu. Ruben of Copenhagen for the sum of 800,000 francs (hardly believable for that epoch).

Moreover, Moens's private philatelic library was acquired by an American collector for the sum of 251 pounds sterling.

In his last issue of December 1900 we find the following words. "Let no-one think that we have taken this decision out of lightness of heart. Quite on the contrary, we bitterly regret the need to separate from our readers and from these beloved stamps which have given us moments so pleasant we almost forgot we were in trade."

On the death of J. B. Moens, which took place at the Boulevard de la Cambre on the 28th April 1908, the entire philatelic press and even the daily papers sang the praises of a man whom one of them referred to as "one of the glories of, a very Pope of, philately."

On the 15th October 1973, on the 50th anniversary of the Chamber of Trade for Stamp Dealers, the Postal Administration put out a special stamp carrying a picture of J. B. Moens designed by J. Van Noten, the well-known Belgian painter. It was printed in copper-plate by J. de Vos in the stamp workshop at Malines. This stamp was paired with one representing a planisphere on which was an outline map of Belgium and two inscriptions, 1923-1973 Chambre Syndicale Belge des Negociants en timbres-poste. Both in the Belgian and the foreign press, this anniversary was made the occasion for a series of illustrated articles giving high praise to the first philatelist and stamp dealer in Belgium.

In 1947, under the auspices of the International Philatelic Exhibition, a marble plaque was attached to the facade of no. 42 rue de Florence, Ixelles. It was dedicated to the memory of J. B. Moens who in 1863 founded the first French-language philatelic journal and the first philatelic researches. It carried the following inscription:

"Philatelists faithfully retain the memory of J. B. Moens, Communal Councillor and benefactor of the poor, who lived in this house from 1871 to 1907."

KEY TO BOOK

The list of the works by J. B. Moens includes all those of which he is author, co-author or simply editor.

As the list is extensive, we have tried to make it as easy as possible to consult by dividing the classification into nine sections as follows:

Moreover, we have tried to meet the needs of collectors at least in part by giving criteria of rarity for each work: we hope in this way to meet an often expressed wish.

o	=	rare
oo	=	very rare
ooo	=	extremely rare
oooo	=	(only 1 to 5 examples known)

Today, when it is already more than 100 years since the appearance of most of his works, none of his catalogues or brochures is easy to find, and thus the minimum ranking will always be (o). The degree of rarity will only apply to entirely complete and original works, containing all the text and illustrations. For this reason, we mention whenever possible the number of pages and plates in each volume.

The state of preservation will also obviously come into the picture, and period bindings, a celebrated book-plate or an exceptionally clean condition might all result in an increased value.

COMMERCIAL PHILATELIC PUBLICITY

Philatelic publicity really turned the corner in 1862, that being the year when philately developed in all fields.

Collecting did go on before 1862 of course, but its development was slow. Stamps were collected but without organization. This was moreover the period when the same stamps would be found on letters for years on end.

In particular, this was the year when various people in the trade realized that the rising level of public interest called for initiation and information.

As the present work confirms, the year 1862 saw the beginning of a wide diversity of philatelic publications.

In 1862 as well, Jean-Baptiste Moens foresaw all the possibilities and the great future ahead of stamps, and flung himself resolutely into philatelic publicity.

The envelope reproduced in colour shows clearly that he neglected no possibility of making his firm known.

This envelope was sent from Brussels on 12/9/1862 and reached London on 13/9/1862. It is addressed to C. W. VINER, who made an English translation of Moens's first illustrated catalogue in 1864, and of some of his albums also. The following publicity material appears on the envelope "Stamps for collecting", and it is stamped with the 6th Belgian stamp (?) (this stamp is actually catalogued as no. 12, but at that period watermarks were not taken into account).

The second envelope reproduced was posted on 2/11/1863. You will note the abundance of Moens's philatelic work in the course of a year, and the use he made of the verse of his publicity envelopes.

During this same year Moens photographed plates of stamps and reduced them to the format of a visiting card reported used for the first time by Ph. de Bosredon.

We know of the following "visiting cards":-

- 1) Special offices in the United States and confederate states of North America.
108 types of stamp.
- 2) America - 31 types of stamp.
The name of each stamp is given at the bottom of the visiting card.
- 3) Principal postage stamps of Europe
176 types of stamp.
The name of each stamp is given at the bottom of the visiting card.
- 4) Universal heraldic.
72 different types.

This is only a small selection, but it is obvious that he exploited anything that could be exploited in this direction from the point of view of commercial publicity.

This list is only by way of illustration, and is certainly not definitive.

Articles on J. B. Moens can also be found in most of the philatelic journals of the entire world.

As examples we may list the following journals:

L'annonce timbrologique Balasse magazine (includes articles by G. Waroquiers documenting certain mistakes which are very persistent) The Metropolitan Philatelist of New York (Monthly Journal). Nederlandsche Vereniging van Postzegels verzamelaars. The Philatelic Journal of America. La Revue Philatelique. Le courrier du Timbre-Poste. La Revue Postale. Le Timbre. L'Union Postale. Il Collezionista. La Gazette Philatelique de Belgique. The Philatelic Record. Philatelie de Paris. The Stamps Collection Magazine etc., etc.

Die Philatelistische Litteratur
January 1896, Volume 2, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1999

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.I-III

Survey

Dr. Rommel, Leipzig

Survey off articles, etc. appearing in the periodical literature of the year 1895 on the postage stamps of the German States, and of monographs on this material published during the same period.

As in the previous year, I begin to publish the bibliographical notices that have reached me during the year 1895. Once more, no claim is made to absolute completeness. I hope to provide a useful service to researchers, whether or not they are active as writers.

p.IV

Prices of monographs.

p.IV

Philatelic Review.

(If you want to be mentioned in our newsletter, you must send us two copies of your magazine free of charge.)

END

DER PHILATELISTISCHE BUCHERWURM., II no. 3 Mid June 1922

Translation produced by: Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue,

Standish,
Wigan,
WN6 OBH
U.K.

MY PHILATELIC LIBRARY

By Nils Strandell - Stockholm
(Reprint from "Nordist Filatelistisk Tidskrift, no. 5, 1921)

At the moment my library contains about 500 items. I have concentrated in the first place on the collection of modern literature, and must possess most of the works published during the last fifteen years. In making my purchases I go by the rule that the work must offer something useful from the study point of view, and I have only in exceptional cases gone in for bibliographical rarities, i.e. the oldest philatelic publications such as price lists from the fifties and sixties of last century. These lists, such as the French Potiquet and Berger-Levrault, The English Boothby Grey etc., were only printed in small quantities, and only odd examples have survived into the later world of philately. The obvious result has been that very high prices arefor these publications, and those by the type of collector who wants to have his library as complete as possible. However, these things really have little to offer from the point of view of modern studies, though it may be very interesting to work out from them how our present-day "major canons" were rated in the childhood of stamp collecting. Instead of paying relatively large sums for such philatelic "incunabulae", I have always preferred to add to my library such standard works as could be used for study and reference.

On the other hand I willingly admit that my purchases have included modern rarities which appeared in limited numbers, and of which I have obtained outstanding examples from their author-researchers in both the old and the new worlds. This kind of rarity usually is not only of bibliophilic value, but is often also very useful in philatelic studies and investigations of stamps of the countries concerned. "Rarities" like this, which have been published during the last two decades in editions of from 25 to 200, are well represented in my collection.

A library is known to require a great deal of space, and for this reason I have had to break mine up. For the same reason I have over the years only had bound the most important and useful journals. Bound volumes of journals are known to give a very monotonous effect in a library. To get a little variety here, and at the same time ensure that periodicals from different countries can be distinguished at a glance, I chose different colours from the outset: grey-green for German magazines, dark red for English, salmon pink for French, blue-grey for Scandinavian, etc. All the volumes are bound in linen, with leather title panels on the back.

A special room holds about a thousand bundles, containing principally magazines, price lists and exhibition catalogues. These bundles are numbered and arranged so that with the aid of the card index I can locate the desired bundle by number and take what I need.

Recording

This is done with the help of a card index, kept in English so that the record will be more useful. The entries are made on the same principle as used for the great Crawford collection in the British Museum in London; they can be seen in the only existing catalogue of this collection by Mr. E. D. Bacon. Here follows an example:

Lindenberg C: Die Briefmarken von Baden, unter Benutzung amtlicher Quellen bearbeitet von C. L. Berlin. Dr. Brendicke, 1894. 4 3/4 x 7 1/4 in. in VI - (2) - 171 - (1) pp., 1 plate. Coloured paper wrapper.

The entries are divided up by guide cards as follows:

1. Monographs i.e. special treatments on the philatelic publications of all countries. Different cards all used for different countries. Thus on the card for e.g. Baden, will be entered all the handbooks relating to that country, and so on. The cards for countries all arranged in alphabetical order.
2. General Handbooks All "elementary" philatelic textbooks and similar works are recorded here, i.e. everything that provides a general introduction to philately. The arrangement in this section is alphabetical by the name of the author. Special cards for each letter.
3. Handbooks on new issues
4. Handbooks etc. on trials
5. Handbooks etc. on forgeries
6. Handbooks etc. on literature
7. Handbooks etc. on postal history and postal matters
8. Handbooks on colours including colour charts

Nos. 3 to 8 are recorded as Section 2.

9. Reports on exhibitions and meetings are recorded by country.
10. Society rules, lists of members etc. are recorded by country, and arranged under the different societies within the country.
11. Calendars and address books
12. Miscellaneous - used for anything which cannot be fitted into any of the above divisions.

Sections 11 and 12 are recorded like Section 2

Note: When a book deals with more topics than its main one, it is recorded bibliographically under the one taken as the most important, with cross-references ("cross cards") used for the other topics concerned, so that there is a simple pointer to the card with the bibliographic record.

13. Auction catalogues This section has guide cards for the different countries, within which the index cards are arranged alphabetically by the name of the firm.

In view of the great importance which the modern auction literature has for the study of philately, and because the extraordinarily accurate depiction of rarities often form a valuable starting-point for checking the genuineness of stamps, I make for convenience of reference short notes for every auction to say which countries are particularly well represented.

The record takes the following form: (example under "GERMANY").

Kohler, Heinrich, Berlin

6" x 9" in coloured paper wrapper to each. Lists for prices attached. No. 1. 23 - 26/3 1913. 39-(1) pp 6 plates. (German States and Colonies superb). No. 2 3-6/6. 47 - (1) pp. 8 plates (Europe, superb) etc.

14. Catalogues and Price Lists This very extensive section of the literature is arranged like Section 13, i.e. by country. Within the various countries the cards are arranged alphabetically by the names of firms.

NB If we are dealing with special catalogues of particular countries or groups of countries, the actual bibliographic record will go under "Catalogues" but there will be "cross reference cards" under "Monographs" for the country or countries concerned.

15. Periodical Publications This is the biggest section of the collection. These are guide cards for the individual countries, and within this the journals are arranged alphabetically by their titles.

NB Non-essential parts of the title such as "Der", "The", "Le" are ignored in recording the main title, since this makes the journal easier to locate. However, the full title is given directly after the recorded title.

Example (under "Africa") (journal which has ceased): South African Stamp Collector. The South African Stamp Collector Kimberley, Cecil M. Henderson, 1916-1917.

5" x 8" in. Coloured paper wrapper to each number.

Vol I July - Dec. 1916. Nos 1-6.

Vol II Jan. - May/June 1917. Nos 7-9.

Example (under "Sweden") (journal still appearing).

Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift Svensk filatelistisk tidskrift

Stockholm, Frimarkensamlareforeningen etc., 1900 -

6 x 9 in Paper or coloured paper wrapper to each number.

Title-page and index to each year.

1st year January 10 - Dec. 10 1900. Nos. 1-12. 2 plates etc.

When a magazine changes its title, which we know happens quite often, the new one will be recorded on the same card as the old one. The new title will have a "cross-reference card" to direct to the old name.

On binding my journals - This rule naturally applies to all the literature - I have then done so as to contain all covers and enclosures exactly as they come from the printer. Trimming may be allowed on the upper edge, but only very carefully, but not at the sides or bottom because of dust.

Completing Philatelic Libraries

By Paul Simson, Berlin - Schoneberg

Many people who collect philatelic literature would very much like to fill the gaps in their collections. However the chance to acquire anything comes very rarely : philatelic literature is more sought after than supplied. the recent publications may be easy to obtain, but the older ones are comparatively difficult. It is possible even today to buy in older publication if one has plenty of money, but to do real collecting with limited means is very difficult and calls for perseverance and determination.

We must also distinguish between two types of literature collector : the one who uses his library for his own instruction and improvement, and the one who wants to bring together as wide and comprehensive a collection as possible of all types of philatelic publication. For the first, advertising papers, most society journals and many catalogues have practically no value. They ignore such literature.

Everyone who has begun to collect literature will now have gaps in his volumes. He will lack not just complete years, but often also individual numbers and parts, which they are now trying to obtain. Individual parts are often sold out of their publisher's and can only be obtained at a relatively high cost. On the other hand he often has many issues superfluous to his needs, which he would gladly exchange for the ones he lacks. An advert is very often useless, and usually produces nothing, since very many collectors have their duplicates packed away in no sort of order in chests etc., and to get them out is another deterrent.

I now propose an exchange of duplicates. Various literature collectors have set up exchange points.

There are for example:

Point 1 The exchange of older or defunct journals.

Point 2 The exchange of the Berliner Briefmarken Zeitung, the Deutsche Briefmarken zeitung, Der Gauzsache, the Germania-Berichte and the Philatelist.

Point 3 The exchange of Der Post, the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal, The Sammler-Woche, The Philatelistische Zeitung and the Internationale Philatelistische Zeitung.

Part 4 The exchange of other journals.

The points, which have been published on "Philatelistische Bucherwurm" can naturally be otherwise defined.

Collectors send these points a list of their duplicates with prices. When individual issues of philatelic journals are available free of charge, or for a low charge, I think it as well to put the collectors who wish to exchange in direct contact with one another. The points supply individual issues as cheaply as possible. Postage has naturally to be repaid. People who have duplicates available are especially catered for. I expect that these points of collectors who want to get rid of their journals after a shorter or longer time will transfer many individual issues without charge.

Since I myself have many duplicates, I am quite ready to take over one of these points.

Perhaps other collectors will comment on my suggestions.

A short visit to Jeremias Klebefalz by J. Dorfler, is an offprint from "Die Postmarke". The same author has also been kind enough to send us:

The Kurzl, Weka and Zumstein Catalogue.

an offprint from the "Internationale Briefmarken-Courier".

MISCELLANEOUS

Stamp Exhibition in Berlin 1922

We have received the conditions and prospectus for the "Berlin Stamp Exhibition 1922", to be held under the distinguished chairmanship of President of the Court of Appeal D. Lindenberg. The exhibition will take place from 15-22 October in the Zoological Gardens, and is supported by the major Berlin collectors' societies. Various leading stamp collectors have arranged to exhibit their outstanding items. Further details can be obtained from the treasurer, Paul Funke, 7 Dortmunderstrasse, N.W.

Warnings

On 27.12.1920 I sent the money for an advert to "Die Postmarke", Vienna 3. As the advert did not appear in either no. 1 or no. 2, I asked for an explanation. Not till my second request did I get a postcard dated 30.3.21, promising that my advert would appear in the next issue. This has not happened to date. After no. 5 has appeared, I wrote that I found the behaviour of the magazine peculiar and therefore would have to advise everyone against sending money in future to "Die Postmarke". I have had no answer to this. I took the trouble to try and get the matter settled by contacting the editor. This was useless, in spite of his promise to repay me. On 22.2.22 I again reminded them to send me no. 12 of the "Postmarke", which had not reached me. I got a postcard dated 21.3.22 saying that no. 12 was out of print, and that the non-appearance of my advert was the fault of an employee who had been dismissed at the end of July 1921.

Not a word about refunding my money and my many postal expenses. I publicize this behaviour of the people behind "Die Postmarke" as a warning.

Paul Simson, Berlin-Schöneberg,
16 Königsweg.

SOCIETY OF PHILATELIC LITERATURE COLLECTORS

The following were received as new members:

- 74) J. Leseticky, Prague.
- 75) German Society for State and Private Philately, Berlin-Steglitz.
- 76) Norbert Frischer, Wien.
- 77) Emil Peter, Wollersdorf.
- 78) Paukert & Co., Innsbruck.
- 79) E. Heinze, Consul-General, Wildpark bei Potsdam.

Herr Rohm, Rodenheim, Frankfurt-a-M, has resigned from his post on the Committee.

Members who have not paid their subscriptions for this year are asked to send the amount direct to my P.O. Box (Berlin 46 690). Foreign members will do best to send the amount in banknotes of their own country to my address in a registered envelope. Stamps cannot be accepted in payment! If this warning proves ineffective, we shall regretfully be compelled to remind these dilatory gentlemen of their obligations by publishing their names in our journal.

SOCIETE BELGE DE BIBLIOPHILATELIE - BULLETIN
ISSUE 7

TRANSLATION DIGEST

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 OBH, UK
June 1995

SOCIETE BELGE DE BIBLIOPHILATELIE - BULLETIN, ISSUE 7

Note: A Translation Digest includes translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and provides full translations of any articles of special interest.

EDITORIAL

Let us for a moment think of the biblio-philatelist as a strange person animated by one of the most eclectic curiosities. He is curious about everything closely or remotely related to philately, and above all scorns to let himself be enclosed within the over-narrow limits of a highly specialised collection.

In a word, he is above all a lover of wide historical horizons at the same time as he cultivates a passion for the beautiful.

But what is he really? - A philatelist, or actually a bibliophile ... a bit of both at the same time, there is no doubt.

Some people collect rare books: they are sensitive to the intrinsic beauty of a work. A morocco binding, gilding along the edges, fine engravings in illustrated chapters, all go to transform a book into a work of art in their eyes. What could be better than a bookcase made of rare woods in which rare volumes and editions are lined up? However, such a bookcase will not simply give aesthetic satisfaction but is equally a living witness to a passion for reading.

And the bibliophilatelists' passion is for... philately. He dreams of knowing everything, understanding everything, possessing everything - an impossible dream. If he cannot possess the legendary items, he will build up a gallery of reproductions: if he cannot know everything at least he knows where to find the answers to all his questions.

His passions for books and philately overlap, and lead him towards other space-time topics. He will become interested in turn in the evolution of printing, the Industrial Revolution, the epic of the railways, the adventure of the air, polar expeditions, maritime journeys and many other subjects more or less related to postal history.

What ultimately is a postage stamp but the witness to an age of all its features. Perhaps in the end, the postage stamp is only a pretext for the discovery of History...

R. L.

Dear Member and Bibliophilatelist,

During these sunny summer months, most philatelic activities are going on in low gear. This is not, however, the case with us, and we have decided to send you a bulletin which will delight all those who have not been able to get away on a holiday.

As most people are back now, we have tried to bring you up to date on everything going on in the next few weeks.

First of all, our first meeting for the academic year 1991-1992, Saturday, 5th October 1990, will include a sale of philatelic literature. Details of this will appear in the next bulletin for September, as will a summary of the talk given to us by Mr. Bigaignon during our meeting last June at the Hotel Astoria. We may recall that this dealt with postal relations in the Mediterranean and disinfection stamps.

For the moment, however, you will find in the present bulletin a supplement to our bibliographic notes on the philatelic literature, along with very interest details on a new edition of the famous Crawford catalogue, a must for philatelists.

Finally, you will find the usual information on the Library, old articles along with much useful information.

Good reading to you all
O. SIMONS

p.4

As this is one of the most important works for the bibliophilatelist, we propose to buy at least one copy for the Society. If a number of people are interested, they should get in touch with me as soon as possible so that we can place a bulk order. We could, perhaps, get a better price.

Also, I suggest you add the following titles to the section in the last bulletin on philatelic bibliographers.

p.10

VII. A specialist Library

We learned some time ago of the existence in Germany of a Library specialising in philatelic literature.

As many of our members do not know about it, the S. B. B. have made contact with it. Here is the most up-to-date information on this subject.

The "Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg e.V." consists on the one hand of about 19,700 books and, on the other, of numerous philatelic periodicals coming from all part of the world and all epochs. A very important point is that it will lend by post.

The annual subscription is 40DM for individual members, or 50DM for a society, and apart from borrowing this subscription covers the regular receipt of an information bulletin.

Lending is free to members and only postage costs of 5DM have to be paid: lending is always limited to 12 items at a time. Also, photocopies can be obtained at an average of 0.30DM plus postage.

We are looking at the possibility of affiliating the S. B. B. with this Hamburg Library if this would be useful to our members. But we would like above all to know their views; they should let us know if they wish us to take this initiative. We await your comments.

For any further information, write to:-

Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg e.V.
Hohenfelder Strasse, 10
D-2000 Hamburg 76

The catalogue can be obtained from there for 9.50DM plus postage.

VIII. Wanted

Mr. Marc Smets, 24 Av. Massenet, Brussels 1190, Tel: 085/84.13.80 (WE: 02/343.33.44), seeks any philatelic literature (research studies, catalogues of public sales, etc.) relating to the United States and territories administered by them at a given point in their history.

A SOURCE FOR PHILATELY: THE “LITERARY MUSEUM”
Philatelie und Postgeschichte, 1990, Issue 115, pp.36-46

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar’s Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1995

A SOURCE FOR PHILATELY: THE “LITERARY MUSEUM”

by

Norbert Röhm, Aachen

Over a hundred years ago, the “Literarische Museum” was for many decades a feature of Leipzig. Right from the start of philately it served stamp collectors for more than twenty years with albums, catalogues, and a specialist magazine.

This began at the end of the fifties of last century with the buying, selling and even the exchange of postage stamps. Up to the eighties of last century these activities had become practically an institution.

It is not quite certain who should have the honour of being the first to concern himself with the stamp collectors of Leipzig, of Saxony as a whole, and then of those in Prussia as well.

It is only certain that the Leipzig “Literary Museum” was one of the forerunners and founders of a comprehensive specialist service for stamp collectors.

The Coin Dealers Take the Initiative

The coin dealership of Zschiesche and Köder, founded in Leipzig in the late summer of 1855, has the reputation of being the first to turn its commercial attention to postage stamps. The Saxon medallions with the portrait of King Johann I were also looked on as a development of the Saxon monetary system. The owners of the business, Carl C. Zschiesche and Carl Eduard Köder (died 4.9.1880) were neither of them young at this period, but were both up to date in their thinking.

As early as the sixties, they had added the sale of stamps to collectors to their coin and antiquities business in the Leipzig Königsstrasse. To underpin their sales effort and bring in new stamp collectors they put out the “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” from 1st May 1863 to 1st April 1867. This was the oldest philatelic journal to appear in the German language.

Only 48 issues were published. The closure of the journal was sudden, completely groundless as far as its readers were concerned, and without plausible explanation. Nine years later the whole enterprise was bought out.

Gustav Wittig's Readers' Circle

The "Literarische Museum" proved more durable. Gustav Wittig, a bookseller born about 1915, was its proprietor. He ran his grandiloquently named "Literarische Museum" in the "Hofmann Hotel", in Petersstrasse, near the old Town Hall in Leipzig.

He ran a lending library and a readers' circle on the first floor of this building. His customers could read popular German and foreign-language magazines of all types in return for a small subscription. Older men especially would sit there all afternoon reading the magazines.

The young Wittig bought the "Literarische Museum" from Anton Phillip Reclam in 1837, a time of great political upheaval. At that time the "Museum" was still located in Grimmaische Strasse in Leipzig, near the Auersbach Hotel. The business sold books, magazines and stationery. A lending library was attached.

Anton Phillip Reclam

It is not known when and by whom the "Literarische Museum" was founded. Anton Phillip Reclam (1807-1896) acquired the "Literary Museum for the Friends of the Sciences, the Fine Arts and Literature" on 1st April 1828, using his father's motto 'Watch without fear' and on 1st October 1828 he founded on this basis the "Publishing House for the Literary Museum of Leipzig in the Kingdom of Saxony".

Today it is no longer possible to find out who was the previous owner of the "Literarische Museum". In any event, Anton Phillip did not want to cross the path of his father Carl Heinrich Reclam, who had been the first bookseller of the family, operating a bookshop and publishing firm in Leipzig from 1802 onwards. The Reclams, originally Reclans, were Huguenots who arrived in Berlin during the 18th century. They included merchants, clergymen, and the court jeweller to Frederick the Great.

To distinguish himself from his father's business, the son later called his firm Phillip Reclam junior. Anton Phillip passed his apprenticeship with his uncle Friedrich Vieweg in Brunswick, where he had a publishing house for the classics, along with a type-founding works and a book-binding. Using 3,000 thalers lent by his father, Anton Phillip bought the "Literarische Museum" in his 21st year. At that time, Literary Museums were not museums in the strict sense. They were reading rooms for all kinds of people, including those who had not been able to find work. They attracted people interest in all kinds of political, scientific and cultural topics. Above all they offered warm premises for discussions that provided the most up to date reading material from Germany and abroad.

The "Literarische Museum of Grimmaische Strasse

The reading room in Grimmaische Strasse, near the Provision Market, in what was called the Journalists' Quarter, took 78 newspapers and periodicals. The most recent literature in the German, French, English and Italian languages was taken in the lending library.

Banned texts were smuggled into it for onwards transmission or covert reading. It was the period of the Restoration and the Karlsbad Decrees, and hence of Government censorship.

There was fear of a popular revolution. Hence the universities were supervised and the press restricted.

All writings below 20 sheets and the newspapers were censored before publication for demagogic agitation. Intellectuals from the Young Germany movement, authors and refugees from the censorship in Metternich's Austria met one another in Reclam's reading room.

Thomas Mann said of it 'the so-called museum was actually not so much a museum as a risky lively place for lectures, discussions, criticism, opposed to everything false and hypocritical in Leipzig, where for a small entrance fee writers and citizens could read German and foreign newspapers, use the extensive lending library, and devote themselves to the pleasant task of meditation.

In a Guide to the Principal Cities of Saxony, Ferdinand Stolle wrote in 1934: "The Literary Museum is a place of resort for readers of all kinds of political literary and belles-lettres publications. It is located on the first floor of a building in the Provision Market, and is light and pleasant, if not very spacious. The journal stock includes about eighty papers of partly political, partly literary content. The journals could be selected more carefully ... so that important items from the Fatherland are not missed.

The visitors to the Museum include many of the most learned and prominent men of Leipzig. Since the Museum unfortunately has no lecture room, the conversing voices in the Reading room often become loud, which may be tiresome and annoying for many people. The most widely varying political views and opinions are aired there, and one is sure that the 'juste milieu' has found a relatively stable footing in the Museum."

(The 'juste milieu' is a political slogan used since 1830, and means "neutral environment" in this connection).

This was the lively state of affairs in the "Literarische Museum" in Grimmaische Strasse when Gustav Wittig bought it from Phillip Reclam on 1st July 1837.

Removal

Shortly afterwards Wittig gave up the premises in the Provision Market and moved the entire enterprise to Hofmann's Hotel in the more centrally located Petersstrasse.

One of the later prominent philatelists of the first period, Alexander Treichel (1837-1901) wrote verse about this Quarter and called it "the Hofmann-House alley".

One the political situation had begun to settle down after the storms of the years 1848/49, the number of visitors to the Leipzig Fairs rose noticeably over the ensuing decades till the 1860s. There were then three fairs a year, two weeks at the Yew Year, three weeks at Easter and three weeks at Michelmas. The many visitors from Germany and abroad were naturally short of up to date information from their home towns and countries of origin.

Discussions on National Information

Thus a national information service developed from these fair visitors who could read their usual magazines in the "Literarische Museum", as matters stood in the house. A whole series of these visitors also entered into correspondence with Wittig, and maintained their connection with him for years on end. Thus Wittig was led quite early, in the fifties, to the collection of postage stamps. Moreover his correspondents let him know that stamps were already being collected on a large scale in London and Paris, and that regular postage stamp markets already existed.

Wittig was pleased with this idea, since he saw in it a possible extension of his business. He asked every Fair visitor who turned up at his place, and naturally also his regular clients, to send him presents of postage stamps and so built up an important collection. The discussions constantly going on in his premises enabled Wittig to make these requests without embarrassment. By these activities a small group of stamp collectors was gradually built up, to exchange or even purchase their duplicates.

In the “Hofmann-House Alley”

In course of time, Wittig copied the Parisian example and held a stamp market every Sunday morning in Hofmann’s Hotel, between the New Market and Petersstrasse. Stamp lovers of every age and condition gathered there to exchange and dispose of their stamps under Wittig’s auspices. For Wittig this had the practical result of keeping the open stamp market entirely under control. Thus, no interesting offer could pass him by. His later successors, Gustav Bauschke and Julius Kümmel kept to this line of actions.

Meantime, high politics ceased to play any great part in his readers’ circle. Also Wittig was not the man to resist this. Hence, his stamp dealing activities were a lucrative compensation.

The First Album

One of his visitors from France or England to the 1862 Michelmas Fair in Leipzig gave him a probably French stamp album. A clever bookseller and printer like Wittig immediately decided to copy this example with his own “Album of Postage Stamps”. In the hurry to get the first edition on the market, it was issued as loose sheets in a folder. This first edition sold out within a short time.

Such a startling commercial success – for 1862 – led to the second edition appearing in book form. In the august 1863 issue of the “Magazin für Briefmarken Sammler” he announced the sixth edition of his stamp album in five different formats up to a leather binding. By January 1864 he had reached the eighth edition, and the second edition was predated to the year 1863. The predating of albums and catalogues has remained common since then.

Co-operation

In contradiction to an earlier statement which is corrected here, the Dürr bookshop in Leipzig also sold the Wittig album from the start. This is plain from an advert by G. Wittig of the 25th January 1864 in “Magazin für Briefmarken Sammler” which has just come to my notice. In it Wittig offered his album as very soon available “to be charged to commercial accounts” at the lively Dürr bookshop.

However things went with this joint project, Dürr saw a greater opportunity in the publication of their own album after a year.

Machinations

In January 1864, to Wittig’s very great annoyance, the Dürr bookshop inserted a notice in a book trade journal to the effect that the Wittig album would thenceforward be available only from Wittig. And in the “Magazin” for 1st February 1984, followed an announcement that the “forthcoming stamp album” by Richard Claudius would be available from the Dürr bookshop.

Wittig, a frequent advertiser in this first specialist journal, declared in the same issue of the “Magazin” that this was an inconsiderate encroachment on his own rights. Naturally he must have been afraid of the effect on his own extensive album trade, figures for which have unfortunately not come down to us.

This literary “batter of the counting house”, from which he practically never recovered, prevented Wittig in the future from acting as the publisher of his own album.

The “Best” Arranged Album

The unbound pages of the first edition of Wittig’s album were divided into sections and contained neither the names of countries nor special text. In the following editions, numbered sections printed in red appeared on the right-hand side of the album. On the left-hand side was the associated text in catalogue form with the corresponding running numbers.

The initial 60 loose pages soon became 130 in quarto format, which could be obtained in four different bindings up to one in shagreen leather with gilt edgings and snap-lock. The few new facts were naturally added as supplements to keep the work up to date.

The new Dürr album by Richard Claudius, on the other-hand was notable for its imposing folio format. The sections on its 128 pages were printed in blue. The detailed descriptions of the stamps were now on the right side and the stamps were stuck on the left. Only three styles of binding were available, but any other type of binding could be ordered specially. The new Dürr album ‘gave you more’.

Fad or Interest?

We do not today understand what these album systems and their by no means cheap formats meant at that time. Our great-great-grandfathers did, however, offer some explanation of how they appeared in their own time.

Thus, Zschiesche and Köder, in the first issue of their “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” made it plain that possession of a stamp album was not generally looked on as a necessity.

However, in the higher ranks of society in England, France, Belgium and to some extent in Germany, at that time it was looked on as good taste to have a beautifully-bound, elegant, stamp album containing examples of rarities on the “round boudoir table in the drawing room” along with the latest literary productions. “Anyone who doubts the future of the postage-stamp mania is overlooking the indirect influence of this very considerable factor”, wrote Carl Zschiesche at that time in an article in the “Magazin”. The importance of the fashion and interest in such wide-ranging objects thus went hand in hand.

The Successful Team

Gustav Wittig had two employees in his “Literary Museum”, Gustav Bauschke and Julius Kümmel. Both were professional men. Bauschke was an uncommonly adaptable, intelligent and enquiring man, a child of his time, known as a writer chiefly in Silesia, but to some extent also in Breslau.

Bauschke concerned himself especially with the greatly increased trade in stamps, and realised above all that it needed bringing into strict order. A beginning to this was made in October 1862 with the publication of the Dürer's bookshop Handbook. Bauschke seemed however to have the ambition to publish a stamp catalogue for the firm. Wittig was also for this.

Zschiesche and Köder had already put out a first "Postage Stamp Survey" at the end of 1862, and a second improved edition followed in August 1863. The second edition of the Dürer Handbook came on the market at the same time.

Gustav Bauschke used the first Zschiesche and Köder survey as a model, and based on it his "Survey of all postage stamps known from 1840 to August 1863, most of which are available in quantity and at competitive prices from G. Wittig".

Reference is lacking to the Literarische Museum

This survey was also published by Leopold Priebatsch in Breslau at the same time and under the same title, but without the information about "available in quantity". There was an art dealership there, which had "always an extensive stock of rare stamps and albums". Bauschke and Priebatsch both came from Breslau and seem to have trained together there, so that the friends helped one another.

Gustav Wittig lent his name to this "Survey", however it was Bauschke who drew it up using others as models.

The Breslau publication seems to have been only a trial balloon. Soon, no more was heard about Leopold Priebatsch's catalogue. Collecting must not yet have begun there.

In Leipzig on the other hand, this "Survey" was followed by two more editions acting as Wittig's house catalogue. The "third", revised and extended imprint" however appeared without any reference to the Literary Museum.

Change of Generations

Gustav Wittig was no longer in the best of health and did not feel equal to the daily pursuit of business, hence he soon made the entire stamp trade, including the Sunday market, more or less entirely over to the Bauschke and Kümmel.

Possibly as a compensatory activity, he acted as co-editor on the journal "Allgemeine deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung", published by the brothers Ernst and Ferdinand Roschlau in Coburg. It only appeared from 1st July 1864 to 15th December 1864.

In 1865 Wittig gave up the "Literarische Museum" and sold it to his employee Gustav Bauschke. Kümmel and Bauschke always got on well together. This extended to their work, though Bauschke always took the lead. Kümmel, the younger of the two, remained subordinate to Bauschke even after the "Literarische Museum" had changed ownership. Both had a very good general culture and an outstanding amount of philatelic knowledge for that period. Hence, soon after their take-over of the "Literarische Museum" they had the idea of starting their own philatelic magazine.

Reading Material

In Germany there was only the “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” from Zschiesche & Köder. This appeared monthly from 1st May 1863, and contained 8-16 pages with short articles on ethnographical, postal and often geographical topics. New stamps were described as far as they were known, individually or in small series. The magazine was very entertaining on the whole and had done much since 1863 to extend philately in Germany.

For two and a half years the “Magazin” was the only source of information for collectors. Naturally one great difficulty for a philatelic journal at that time was to get up to date information that would interest the stamp collector.

Der Briefmarken-Sammler

The “Literary Museum” had a considerable advantage, since its reading room subscribed to the latest English and French specialist journals. Since France had its “Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste” and England “The Stamp Collector’s Magazine”, Bauschke and Kümmel simply christened their new journal “Der Briefmarken-Sammler” with the addition “organ for everyone interested in philately”.

The “Briefmarken-Sammler” was distinguished from the “Magazin” by a better form and livelier contents. It carried only its own advertisements and used the French and English sources much better so as to be something different from a coin dealership. It was in every way philatelic, even when it did no more than reproduce foreign articles.

Because of their background, Bauschke and Kümmel were also in a position to pick out the interesting material, whilst Zschiesche and Köder were not so exclusively devoted to their journal. From January 1866 onwards they put out “Briefmarken-Sammler” from Bauschke’s “Literary Museum” firm after Wittig’s withdrawal. The magazine appeared twice quarterly during the year 1866, then ten times a year from 1867 onwards, until the Franco-German War which gave a sharp initial reverse to stamp collecting, especially in Germany.

Division of Labour

Zschiesche and Köder soon realised they could no longer keep up. When Carl C. Zschiesche stopped publication of his “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler” in April 1867, the “Briefmarken-Sammler” from the “Literarische Museum” publishing house was left as the only specialist German journal.

Julius Kümmel took on the task of looking after the “Briefmarken-Sammler”, whilst Gustav Bauschke appears as the publisher. Bauschke did indeed collaborate on contributions to “Briefmarken-Sammler” but the overall form of the journal was Kümmel’s task.

Albums also made Work

Gustav Bauschke concered himself with the albums and catalogue. In November 1864, Bauschke published the ninth edition of Wittig’s album from the “Literary Museum” publishing house: eight editions had appeared up to April 1864. Beauschke now appeared as editor “with the assistance of g. Wittig”. The following notice appeared in the November number of the “Magazin”: “this ninth edition has been carefully revised, and is distinguished from all other albums in existence by the avoidance of the extensive mistakes that appear in them. G. Wittig, Literarische Museum in Leipzig”.

Now, after the purchase of the “Museum”, a tenth edition appeared in the middle of December 1865 under the same title “Album für Briefmarken”. Bauschke laid out the album so that the left-hand pages of text, and especially the four corners, carried pictures of the main types of stamp of the countries concerned.

How things were, 1865

The edition of the album was really something. Bauschke inserted a tenth completely improved and expanded edition, acknowledged to be the best album, the most practically arranged and most elegantly produced. It was edited by G. Bauschke. The same edition appeared in French, Quarto format, in the following issues:

- Boxed, 15 Ngr
- i. Bound in calico with pressing and gold title 25 Ngr
- ii. Bound in calico with rich gilded binding and gilt edges. 1 Thaler 5 Ngr
- iii. Bound in extra-fine leather with the richest gilding, gilt edges, closure and many supplementary sheets. 2 Thalers 22½ Ngr
- iv. Bound in extra-fine morocco and a highly luxurious format, 5 Thalers 20 Ngr Editions 2 and 4 were printed on cartridge paper.

Catalogues were also Involved

During the year 1866 more attention was paid to the catalogues, so that only the eleventh edition of the album had appeared by the end of the year. The reverse occurred the following year. New editions of the catalogue, the XII, XIII, XIV, appeared in February, July and August, in time for the Michaelmas Fair.

The last edition of the album from the “Literarische Museum”, the fifteenth, appeared at the New Year’s Fair in 1868. The catalogues were Bauschke’s second baby after the albums. Gustav Wittig’s catalogue appeared in autumn 1863 without any reference to the Literary Museum (it is simply not known why this detail was left off, perhaps because of Zschiesche?), then a publication from the “Literary Museum in Leipzig” followed at the beginning of 1864: “Catalogue of all known stamps published from the Literary Museum in Leipzig at the prices given”.

If we ascribe the first three “Survey” catalogues to Wittig, this fourth catalogue from the “Literarische Museum” will be Bauschke’s first. It is generally looked on as such.

As early as spring 1864 appeared the third edition of this Bauschke catalogue, including stamps issued up to April 1864. It also appeared in the Dutch language under the editorship of W. F. Danneufelser, the translator of the Möens handbook “Manuel du Collectionneur”.

However, only this simple edition is known to exist under this name.

Work for the Collaborators

The fourth edition was published “with the friendly co-operation of the leading authorities W. Th. Clausuis, Dr. Joseph and W. T. Israel, edited by G. Bauschke for the Literary Museum”.

This catalogue had grown to 130 pages by the middle of 1865. It came out at the beginning of 1866 as “Catalogue of all existing postage stamps, containing nine proof sheets and some 3,000 items, along with details of existing forgeries and their locations, also including geographical, statistical, genealogical and historical details of every country along with currencies. Price only 6 neugroschen. Purchasers of the 1st impression of our catalogue will be sent the supplements (1 proof sheet) separately for 1 neugroschen”.

As with the albums, no pains were spared with the catalogues. However, the gap in time from its predecessor was so great that the edition was not sufficient. The urgent demand led to the publication of the V, VI and VII editions within the same year.

Authorities

The authorities named were well-known collectors of the time. Theodor Clausius resided in Frankfurt-am-Main; the influence of the Leipzig philatelists extended so far. Like Wittig, he was for many years a contributor to Roschlau's Briefmarken-Zeitung in Coburg. Dr. Joseph practiced medicine in Breslau. According to Priebatsch he was the second person from Breslau to collaborate with Bauschke. A special interest of Dr. Joseph's from the present day standpoint was the Finnish “double-cover”, i.e. Finnish envelopes of the 1856 issue with a cancellation on the flap, and then another cancellation of the 1860 issue on the other side. The merchant Theodor Israel lived in Eibau near the source of the Spree. Over the years 1862 to 1866 he had the largest stamp collection in Germany.

The philatelic literature does not contain a photo of either Gustav Bauschke or Julius Kümmel. However, there is a humorous “self-portrait” of the “living Literary Museum”. They had fun with it.

The “Briefmarken-Sammler of March 1868 carries a valuable account of the two of them by the Dresdener “D. P.” which is full of information. He went to Leipzig on Sunday, 23rd February 1868, since he did not want to celebrate Carnival in “Cologne or golden Mainz”, but in Leipzig.

Naturally the first thing a good philatelist did on leaving the station early on Sunday morning was to go to the Literary Museum to transact some quick business. He went there right away. In the Hofmann House “within the branching halls”, everything was being got ready for the removal in the following March. “Two beard-bedecked gentlemen welcomed him with the greatest cordiality” but the “worthy Literary Museum” of Messrs. Bauschke and Kümmel was in transit. There was no longer anyone even remotely interested in chatting about philately. (It was noted that the gentlemen were in their office. At that time business was still carried out on Sunday mornings).

“Carnival” was on the programme for this Sunday morning. So the Dresdener went out on the town with the two of them, a walking Literary Museum. The Dresdener was amazed at the “eagerness with which a respectable Literary Museum sank several pints of “Dresdener Castle”. After the third they forgot about “the whole of philately”.

Another day Carnival Monday was also free of work for the two happy revellers of the Literary Museum. They had agreed to do the “crazy course”. However there was such a crowd on the Rossplatz that getting through was impossible for “fatties like us”. On the third day they consoled themselves with an extended beer trip as far as Auerbach's Cellar. By Tuesday morning “the hardened warriors had been laid low by Fate... I admit I was going on about wet feet”. Obviously the weather was involved.

Need for Room

In 1867, a good year for albums, there was only room for one edition of the catalogue, the eighth, in February 1867. This was followed in the year 1868 by three enlarged and improved editions. The ninth in February, the tenth in March for the Easter Fair, and the eleventh in August for the Michaelmas Fair. This eleventh edition was no longer prepared by Bauschke himself.

Putting together the albums called for a great deal of space. The established old address at Hofmann's Hotel in Peterstrasse became too small, and had to be given up. The "Literarische Museum" removed on 1st April 1868 to larger premises on the ground floor of No. 5 Lindenstrasse.

Bauschke Bows Out

In the early summer of 1868, Bauschke became suddenly and quite seriously ill. This led to his selling the "Literarische Museum" to Julius Kümmel at this time. Bauschke left Leipzig and went first to Riesa, then to Dresden. Thus on 20th July 1868 Julius Kümmel took over the entire publishing business, the editorship of "Briefmarken-Sammler", the albums and the catalogues.

The catalogues and albums suffered under the change. The twelfth catalogue appeared belatedly in April 1869, and the thirteenth in April 1870. The fourteenth – and as it turned out the last – catalogue was constantly announced from April to the end of 1870, but did not actually appear until 1871.

Things were slightly better with the albums. The fifteenth edition appeared in January 1868, still under Bauschke, and in September 1869 Kümmel announced what he called the eighteenth edition. The sixteenth and Seventeenth seem to have appeared as unchanged album editions under the imprint of the "Literarische Museum".

Not to be Overlooked

Kümmel published the following notice in the June issue of "Briefmarken-Sammler": "Not to be overlooked. Partly because of changes in his staff, partly because of illness in himself and his family, and partly because of urgent work within his publishing house, the undersigned must with regret postpone the issue of publications announced and the production of the catalogue. He asks for your kind indulgence in this matter".

On 27 September 1870, Kümmel's young wife Luise died. Things went downhill for Kümmel from then on. In January 1871 he again advertised the appearance of what was by then the 19th edition of his "Album für Briefmarken". This was the last edition of the old Wittig album of 1862. Only six further issues of "Der Briefmarken-Sammler" appeared up to 25th March 1871.

Reports

The old master Louis Senf (02.08.1856-17.01.1941) who knew Julius Kümmel as no-one else did, described him as an indolent and by no means progressive businessman.

Bauschke had a livelier temperament than Kümmel and was a brighter, happier man. He knew more about stamps than Kümmel, and at the beginning of the 70s he ranked as the leading authority after Moschkau. In the mid-seventies he began to suffer a mental disturbance that gradually got worse and worse. Kümmel began to drink heavily, Louis Senf said he became rather loose-living "his happy contacts with his fellow-humans made up for the fact that he gradually lost all his goods and chattels and went off to America practically penniless". Alcohol did most to ruin his philatelic publishing activities. At that time he was in his forties and migrated to America at the end of 1878, where he disappeared. However his name should not be forgotten from the history of German philately.

Schaubek

In the meantime, Gustav Bauschke was publishing his own albums from autumn 1870 onwards. Since he could hardly put his own name on them without directly harming Kümmel and the “Literarische Museum”, he used the pen-name Schaubek. This was the reversal of the syllables of his real name, Bauschke. The idea for it came from his father, Moritz Gustav Bauschke of Breslau, who had worked as an author during the years 1828 to 1834 under the pseudonym “Schauke, B.”.

In about 1872 Kümmel lost his last place of business with the “Literarische Museum” at 5 Lindenstrasse. He moved to 3/4 Inselstrasse. Under his regime it made steady progress as a business undertaking.

In September 1878 Louis Senf acquired the “Literarische Museum” from Kümmel, along with the rights to the Bauschke and Kümmel albums and moved into Inselstrasse. Alfred Moschkau, of whom Louis Senf said later in an interview that he “wanted to make a gnat out of an elephant” was his closest collaborator there.

Moschkau Reports

The working space of the “Literarische Museum” in Inselstrasse took up the whole of the building. Twelve people were employed there. On the ground floor were the stamp store, the office, a storeroom for the stamp albums and the packing room. On the first floor were the “wholesale stamp store” and a working and sorting room in which eight girls sorted stamps and stuck them onto sheets. These sheets were supplied to more than 150 commission points at home and abroad. The first floor also contained other rooms for the managers and a small office for the supervisor. The entire second storey consisted of rooms in which the albums were put together and got ready for dispatch.

Louis Senf had the intention of building up the “Literarische Museum” and its albums still further with Moschkau’s help. He had been making preparations for this for a long time. However things turned out not to be as easy as he thought.

Joint Account

In August 1876 Louis Senf bought the Schaubek album from a publisher friend of Bauschke, Herr Eduard Wartig of Hospitalstrasse, Leipzig. Bauschke had had him as a supplier and half-owner. This arrangement had begun with Gustav Bauschke of Dresden, then becoming mentally ill, as author and co-owner.

The first edition of the Schaubek album appeared in August 1870. It had no illustrations and was only printed on one side. Up to 1876 there were three editions of about 10,000 copies each. The third and last, still produced by Bauschke himself, appeared in 1873.

Louis Senf brought the album completely up to date and put out the fourth edition on 10th October 1877. Shortly afterwards, Bauschke’s new employer, the stamp dealer Ernst Wilhelm Grossman of 8 Salzgasse, Dresden, who had published the “Allgemeine Briefmarken-Anzeiger” there since 1877, came forward with a claim to have rights in the Schaubek album.

Along with the trusteeship for the new mentally incompetent Bauschke, an action was started against Louis Senf with the aim of making it invalid for him to sell the Schaubek album. The lawsuit between Bauschke's trustee and Louis Senf was finally settled in Senf's favour on 22nd January 1979???.

On 20th March 1879, Louis Senf recorded that Bauschke had renounced all claims to revision of the original, and had agreed to refund the costs of the action. Thus, Bauschke was still alive then. Because of a misunderstanding in the reports, it was long thought that he had died as early as autumn 1876.

Louis Senf's idea that the acquisition of the Schaubek album would put some of the competition of the running was successful, if only in a roundabout way. The Schaubek album was only published in German up to 1873, there was, however, a need for a multilingual album.

Internationales Briefmarken-Album

Thus, Senf took the old Wittig-Bauschke album, which was very suitable for this, and published it under the imprint of the "Literarische Museum" in German, French, English and Spanish as the "Internationales Briefmarken-Album". This appeared at the end of 1878 as the twentieth edition of the original German album and appeared in three editions of 10,000 copies each up to its last appearance in the year 1880. Prof. Booch-Arkossy was responsible for the translation of the text. The album was in a large quarto format and included 70 national coats of arms, about 400 illustrations of stamps and a map of the world. The cover of the album was designed by R. Gerhold's Graphic Institution in Leipzig. The binding was done by the firm of Hübel & Densk, a recent neighbour of "Literarische Museum" at 14-16 Inselstrasse. The editor was Alfred Moschkau.

Real White Parchment

A really well-made stamp album was never cheap. This one appeared in seven formats: the cheapest cost 4.50M, then 5, 6, and 7 marks, up to 15 marks with gilt lettering and edges, in leather at 36 marks, and then at the top, one in real white parchment at 60 gold marks, with hand-gilding and black etching, the spine with six bands. The bookbinder had never turned out anything like it. Master C. Friedrich Hübel's (*1847) bookbinding was first started in 1872, next door to No. 2 Lindenstrasse. He hardly knew how to cope with original parchment with a large cover. Parchment bonds only poorly with paper and moreover has to withstand small stresses when in the form of stamp albums. Hence, there were week-long supply holdups. Moreover, since such a high price for just an album was very hard to obtain, not ten copies of this prestige object were sold at the time.

The parchment format was offered for Senf's fourth edition of the Schaubek album, with the same lack of success. Louis Senf was rather fond of luxury. The Schaubek album first reappeared in its fifth edition in September 1883, and regularly from then on. Parchment copies were never offered by album publishers after that. The problem was recognised.

The Last Quarter

On 1st August 1881 the "Literarische Museum" moved yet again, this time to 31 Thalstrasse. The "Louis Senf" firm occupied the same building. Senf's "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" of July 1881 published a full page "Clearance sale of stamps on offer from the Literary Museum. Cash must accompany order. Nothing sent post payment/cash on delivery". Trade was not very lively under these stringent conditions. The notice had to be repeated at the end of 1881 and the beginning of 1882. Meanwhile, “The stamp dealership of the Literary Museum of Leipzig” had decided to put out a new, simpler and cheaper magazine, the “Deutsche Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung; illustrated journal for the promotion of philately. Issued and owned by the Literary Museum of Leipzig”. This was sent out free at readers request. Ten issues appeared in the year 1883.

In January 1884 this “Deutsche Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung” was merged with the Senf brothers’ “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal”. In the first issue of this completely revamped journal appeared for the last time a mention of the “Literary Museum”: “Price list of our stock and cheap stamps sent free”.

Thus, the “Literarische Museum of Leipzig” came to a peaceful end in 1884. In the middle of the nineties Louis Senf let his “Literarische Museum” firm disappear from the trade directories, clearly in some disappointment. He regretted this closure right to his death in the year 1941.

Norbert Röhm, Aachen

Translation of first page of “Der Briefmarken-Sammler”, No. 1, reproduced on p.41

WHAT WE INTEND

This magazine intends to provide a detailed description of all interesting publications in the various fields of philately, naturally in line with current events. It will keep the collector promptly informed of all new issues, and will give accurate reproductions of them as far as space permits. The same will be done from time to time with rare and, therefore, interesting stamps. Furthermore, notice will be taken of all new forgeries that come to lights, so that the collector will be warned in good time against these deceptive speculations. All fresh changes in postal regulations will be reported in the hope that most collectors will welcome this information. The latest statistical material and current events, so long as they are of philatelic interest, will also find a place, and all this should form a useful supplement for users of our albums and catalogues. Finally, our best efforts must be made to satisfy the lively interest in geography and ethnography that exists in practically all collecting circles. This may mean taking more from the richer supply of English travel literature, and no blame should attach to this. However, we shall not give compilations from conversation lexicons: our readers would find them boring.

SOCIETE BELGE DE BIBLIOPHILATELIE - BULLETIN
APRIL 1994, ISSUE 3

TRANSLATION DIGEST

Translation produced by Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1994

SOCIETE BELGE DE BIBLIOPHILATELIE - BULLETIN, April 1994, Issue 3 -
Translation Digest

(Note: A Translation Digest includes translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and provides full translations of any articles of special interest.)

Trans 226x

EDITORIAL

Dear Philatelist and Bibliophile,

You will find in this bulletin an appreciable number of new references on the previous topic: Egypt. Thanks to this information, you can now improve your understanding of the postal history of this marvellous country.

We also announce a grand sale of philatelic literature. Many interesting items, covering a multitude of the most diverse subjects, should meet the needs of the most awkward person.

We wish you much pleasure in reading the bulletin.

Eric Miesse
Secretary of the S.B.B.

Correspondence

Secretarial and accounting work, along with all correspondence will henceforth be dealt with by Mr. Eric Miesse, 26 Av. des Tarius, Bierges 1301.

Subscriptions 1992/93 – Last Reminder

The amount of the subscription for the year 1992/93 is reduced to 500BF (750BF for foreigners). This covers the cost of the bulletins, and entitles subscribers to receive one copy of the contents list of "Philatéliste Belge". It should be sent to account number 000-13404282-20, Société Belge de Bibliophilately, Armendijlaan 30.

I. New Members

We have had the pleasure of receiving applications for membership from Messrs. P. Yans (Argentean), and Pottiez (Perulwez). We welcome them to the ranks of our membership.

II. Topic of the Month

This month we attempt to collate all information relating to national and international postal rates. Here for the moment are some references we have obtained on this subject.

We hope that many of you will react by sending us fuller information. In this connection, anyone who has run out of index slips should ask us. We will be happy to supply them with some.

Last month, we asked members to let us have documentation relating to Egyptian postage stamps and postal history. Here are the works we can add to the previous list (in this connection we thank Mr. Smith (of Ann Arbor) for his co-operation: he has agreed we may use his bibliographic references.

Victor Suppantschitsch
In Wegweiser für Verkherwerthzeichen-Sammler (Philatelisten-Fibel)
Oscar Jéran, Berlin, Germany, 1890, p.20

Translation produced for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1998 (Minor editorial changes, February 2008)

VICTOR SUPPANTSCHITSCH

Victor Suppantschitsch was born in Laibach on 31 October 1838, the son of a merchant, completed his studies at the High School there and then, after finishing trips to Germany, Switzerland and Italy, entered the University of Vienna in 1858. He graduated from the Faculty of Law and Political Studies there with a degree in juridical-political studies. In August 1862 he entered State service as an assistant in the Royal and Imperial Supreme Court in Graz and was married in the year 1863. He was interested in scientific collecting from his youth, became a philatelist in 1864 and has remained true to his favourite occupation up to the present day. His literary activity began in the year 1877. From then on, practically every issue in the leading philatelic journals in Austria and Germany had a contribution from his pen and it could be said that the philatelists of Germany relied on his judgement as on no-one else's. This period showed the beginning of his association with Ferdinand Mayer, with whom, in the course of time, he developed the most intimate ties of friendship that were only broken by the sudden death of Mayer in December 1882. At the beginning of 1880, Suppantschitsch had his famous Leitfaden der Philatelie [Guidelines to Philately] published by Wartig in Leipzig. This quickly became known wherever the German language was spoken and was awarded a bronze medal by the Société de Timbrologie of Paris. In the year 1883, a small album for beginners was published by Moriz Schauenburg of Lahr and in 1885 came his great world stamp album, the second edition of which appeared in 1887.

Suppantschitsch is one of the oldest members of the Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins, an honorary member of the former Hamburger Philatelisten-Clubs and has taken part in his time in the exhibitions at Vienna and Dresden. Many of the ideas formed in his writings were ahead of their time and have now found general acceptance. In the year 1869, he became a Deputy at the Supreme Court in Laibach, in 1873 Deputy Official Prosecutor and in 1874 District Judge in Adelsberg. At the beginning of 1883, he was appointed to the Council of the Provincial Court of Kärnten in Klagenfurt, a post he retains to the present day.

END

RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE EDITORS OF "LITERATUR-NACHRICHTEN"

by

K. K. Doberer

It is easy to praise a journal which has been distinguished by the award of gold and silver medals from the juries of 27 national and international stamp exhibitions, even with restricting oneself to the issue under discussion, No. 58 of 1969. The people who work for it are idealists, who do everything free whilst carrying on their own professions. The Society of German Philatelists and the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History give the undertaking valuable support. Three thousand index cards have been produced, and the acting editor, Fritz Gaedicke, must put in at least two hours work every day throughout the year to produce this "Literatur-Nachrichten". Printing the 152 pages of the annual volume alone costs 10DM, whereas its purchase price, including postage, is only 9.50DM.

So why is it that "Literatur-Nachrichten" receives so little recognition within the organisation? Is it the general reluctance to make use of philatelic literature. Or are there reasons within the format of "Literatur-Nachrichten" itself? This is certainly a very important question, and deserves to have more time devoted to it by a qualified panel than is available to a reviewer who is given only a limited space in the journal that publishes his review.

Before I try to put forward a few suggestions in this direction, may I raise the question of whether the leading German philatelic journals – and the German philatelic journals are the absolute basis for the German Literatur-Nachrichten – receive a quite uniform treatment. Since L-N is supported by the published media, every German journal can require this. It would be the first task of the editors to check on this. A check through a small ten pages of the subject index showed me: 143 entries for DBZ, 42 for "Sammler-Lupe", 16 for "Sammler-Express" (DDR), 8 for Sammler-Dienst, Coburg, 2 for "Briefmarken-Spiegel", 0 for "Interphila Courier". A more precise statistical study would be needed to determine the accuracy of this sample. There does seem to be a need for a check on the uniformity and equal weighting of the survey of the German periodicals.

Let us now look at the problem from another angle. Let us assume that a member of a specialist group of philatelists – one which is also very interested in philatelic literature – which collects the stamps of Bavaria, wants to check on the year's literature and refers to "Literatur-Nachrichten". Amongst the thousands of entries he will find a total of three entries on Bavaria. He will soon have finished, and will say "it appears hardly anyone is writing about the more difficult old German states today, so there must be nobody bothering about them although the material is in more and more demand, as the auctions show". However, I doubt if this is the right answer.

Since I am not the panel to deal with the statistics, I can only speak from my own experience. As an example, the index to Vol. 58 of "Literatur-Nachrichten" includes my cultural history of the postage stamp, "Black one, red three".

Simply this title ought to have led to the assumption that the stamps of Bavaria would be dealt with. In fact, as well as a microscopically accurate picture of a thirty-five strip of the black one, there is amongst other things an entire chapter giving all details of the production of the Bavarian Leopold issue. My conclusion that instead of indexing the contents of foreign-language periodicals from all over the world, "Literatur-Nachrichten" should index those of books appearing in Germany.

As it happens, my book was very well reviewed in the volume of "Literatur-Nachrichten". This I have nothing to complain about personally, the critique is the outstanding one given to the book by Ulrich Höger in the April Issue of "Bundesnachrichten".

Thus, a critical function has been taken over for books, although the aim of "Literatur-Nachrichten" is to record and index material.

To return to the example of Bavaria. It thus appears questionable to me whether the three articles recorded are really all the material that has been published in the journals listed as indexed.

Again, I can only speak of my own experiences with the recording of papers. In April 1968 I published, in a German technical paper listed as indexed by "Literatur-Nachrichten", an illustrated article on "Tunisian philately", which I cannot find under Tunis, where again only three entries from the DBZ are listed. One more example. In June 1968 I wrote, again in a German philatelic society magazine also listed as being indexed, a basic profusely-illustrated article on "The philately of Czechoslovakia". This does not appear amongst the 54 entries in "Literatur-Nachrichten", most of which clearly refer to Czechoslovak journals which are hardly available to the readers of "Literatur-Nachrichten", and would hardly be understandable in any case.

This is an example of German cosmopolitanism at work, always ready to gaze across boundaries but not knowing how to keep its own house in order. And now a request to close with. This criticism is offered in a friendly, positive spirit of wishing to help.

I know how much work is involved here. I only want it to be more profitable. Anyone who claims money from the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History – a public body which is not an administrative sub-division of the Society of German Philately – must be able to face open criticism.

My suggestions are obvious: Uniform treatment of at least all philatelic journals from German societies, even where that involves difficulties. Preferential treatment of important material on philately and postal history. Under the many motif entries I find all too many under such headings as Zoology which would be better and more fully described in the first place from Brehm's Life of Animals. The "Literatur-Nachrichten" gives all too little about "Ornithological Rarities from Tristan da Cunha".

The book literature must be indexed and recorded. Reprinting of book reviews is not a substitute for this.

If obtaining such literature means going outside the limits of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, this would be quite legitimate, and within the remit of the Institute. I admire the work done by the contributors to "Literatur-Nachrichten", but it is unfortunately a fact that it is not the extent of an activity that counts but the usefulness and applicability of the product. The result must be half-way commensurate with the effort expended.

ARGENTINE PHILATELIC LITERATURE
(BIBLIOGRAPHIC INDEX)

by

Walter B. L. Bose

Philatelic literature records the work of collecting in a particular country. It is the medium for expressing and preserving the studies of a historical nature carried out in the philatelic field, its serious nature and scientific methodology entitle it to be looked on as an auxiliary to the cultural history of nations. Also, it records the activities of the societies and philatelic centres, and affords interesting data on trade, exchanges and auctions.

For both simple collector and the scientific philatelist, a knowledge of the literature relating to his speciality is of great importance, and it is for this reason I have decided to compile the present “Bibliographical Index”, with the aim of supplying information on all the works that deal with Argentine philately since there are only a few specialised bibliographies.

I decided to include the two fundamental aspects of this “Index”:

- I. Philatelic publications printed in the Republic of Argentina, whatever their subject or the form in which they appeared, and
- II. All studies and commentaries on philatelic subjects, Argentine postage stamps, postal history, etc., classified by “subject” and “author”, whether they were published in the country or abroad.

Given the extent of the second aspect, I have been obliged to limit myself for the moment to Part I, i.e. publications appearing in Argentina.

For this I had available an extensive collection of Argentine philatelic publications that originally belonged to Don Abel Fontaine, a Belgian journalist who lived in Buenos Aires from 1888 – where he collected periodicals and other publications. He was a prominent member of the Argentine Philatelic Society and an agent for numerous philatelic journals and, thus, was enabled to build up the most important collection of his generation.

On his death his collection passed into the hands of his young friend Don Pablo E. Busch, who in 1926 edited a short “Catalogue of Philatelic and Cartophilic Journals of the Republic of Argentina (1874-1926)” – a work which is the only fairly extensive treatment of the material.

In 1933 I acquired this collection, along with numerous other Argentine philatelic publications which I have supplemented since then with numerous older and, more recent publications, which were lacking from it. I, therefore, believe my bibliographic material is complete enough to serve as the basis for the present “Bibliographic Index”.

To aid classification I have divided the First Part of this study – comprising works published in this country – into four main groups:

- A) Books and pamphlets
- B) Reviews and periodicals
- C) Catalogues and handbooks
- D) Miscellaneous publications

The “Books and Pamphlets” section (A) covers the specialist philatelic studies published in an independent form, plus the reprints (“separates”) of the same nature or on postal history of material that has appeared in the philatelic reviews.

The “Reviews and Periodicals) section (B), like the “Catalogues and Handbooks” (C) includes those which have been put out by philatelic societies or merchants in the field.

The “Miscellaneous Publications” (D) have three subdivisions:

1. Publications from philatelic societies (statues, rules, circulars, etc)
2. Publications issued for special purposes (circulars, etc)
3. Material put out by stamp dealers (price lists, auctions, advertising sheets, etc.)

The Second Part of this study will cover “studies and commentaries” on Argentine postage stamps published in any part of the world and classified by author and subject. This will have to wait for another opportunity, given its extent and the difficulty of compiling data on papers published in foreign periodicals.

Philatelic literature began in Europe by the year 1860 when stamp collections were beginning to be formed and researchers began carrying out historical studies on them. The technique of these studies was improved and became more detailed, and scientific study began of printing, issues, watermarks, papers, etc., and also of the historical events that led to the issue of the various stamps.

The search for rare examples was the foundation of the stamp trade, which very rapidly reached large proportions, especially in Europe and North America. The same trade was set up in our midst as well towards the end of the last century, and its extent has increased with time.

The gradual rise in interest in collections and philatelic investigations – especially amongst people of wide cultures (lawyers, doctors, engineers, etc.) – led to the formation of associations, centres and societies which began to publish reviews and periodicals, catalogues and specialist guides to the material, in which was recorded all the scientific and historical information obtained.

In the 75 years from their beginning, the number of philatelic publications of all types has reached many thousands of volumes, which together would constitute a respectable library of no little bibliographic value, including some items of extreme rarity.

In the Argentine Republic “La Revista Filatelica” (Buenos Aires 1874) marks the beginning of the series of publications which appeared in increasing numbers in the country. It was followed in 1888 by the Argentine Philatelic Society with its first printed “statutes”.

There were years of real enthusiasm during which numerous reviews and pamphlets were published – the last decade of the previous century being outstanding in this respect. They were followed immediately by an alarming decrease over the years 1903 to 1915, which another rise after the World War.

A great deal could still be said about this material from the historical point of view, since a bibliographical collection will, without doubt, be found to contain much interesting material when one starts to analyse their contents and the activities of the people and organisations that brought it into being. However, I do not think this is the place to go into these details. Let us go on to the First Part of the “Bibliographical Index to Argentine Philatelic Literature” dealing with “publications appearing in this country”.

Buenos Aires, May 1938

Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina, 301, 1935

(B)
REVIEWS AND PERIODICALS

This group includes all the philatelic “Reviews and Periodicals” published by societies, private individuals or stamp dealers, but not including those publications which have occasionally published philatelic sections or articles.

To facilitate their classification and description, we have given them in strictly chronological order with progressive numbering, grouping them alphabetically by states, arranged in the place of their appearance. The dates given go as far as the month of May 1938.

Order of Appearance No.	Number and place of publication	Appeared From – To (Month – Year)	Total of numbers of circulars appearing
-------------------------------	---------------------------------------	---	---

(C)
CATALOGUES AND HANDBOOKS

The third group includes the “catalogues and philatelic handbooks”, which can be divided into four sections according to their principal characteristics:

- I. Philatelic handbooks
- II. Catalogues of postage stamps
- III. Catalogues of fiscal/revenue stamps
- IV. Catalogues of philatelic publications

Each of these sections is given in chronological order, and the annotations extend to the months of May 1938.

(D)
MISCELLANEOUS PUBLICATIONS

The fourth group consists of miscellaneous philatelic publications which, for greater convenience, may be sub-divided into three sections according to their principal characteristics:

- I. Publications from philatelic societies (including their statutes, rules, circulars, principal forms, notebooks, etc.)
- II. Publications from individual collectors (including reports, circulars, etc.)

III. Publications from stamp dealers (including current price lists, circulars, trade cards, advertising sheets, auctions, etc.)

As far as the first section is concerned, we have restricted this “Index” to the principal publications, although we often have many different editions of them, and though we are quite sure we have not (even remotely) collected all the publications in this field.

The section comprises few publications, whilst the third, on the other hand, is very extensive. Thus, as with the first section, we have only given a part of the bibliographical material to illustrate the variety and number of the publications.

Thus, we have listed all the publications that we possess or of which we have certain knowledge, down to May of 1938.

GROSSLEXIKON DER PHILATEILIEA. Bungerz*FOREWORD

Attempts to produce a philatelic reference work in the form of a lexicon are almost as old as philatelic literature itself. The “Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler”, the oldest German specialist journal, began a “Postage Stamp Dictionary” in its issue No. 32 of 1st December 1865 with the words: “Enquiries constantly reach us as to what the inscription on this or that foreign stamp actually means. We cannot look on such requests for information as frivolous, since stamp lovers want to know every detail about their beloved hobby so as to qualify to be called philatelists. We thus think it appropriate to give our readers the meanings of the foreign terms in German and, where necessary, to give extended notes and the foreign pronunciation. We shall ignore terms whose meanings are obvious, but will give German equivalents for the very many which are not familiar. We ask your indulgence for the pretentious-sounding title, but it could not be expressed more briefly”. The arrangement is then as follows: Great Britain, its colonies, North American, France, French-speaking Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Central and South American republics and Spanish origin, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, Danubian principalities, Greece and the Ionic Islands, arranged alphabetically.

The “Guide Through the Labyrinth of Stamps that have appeared so far” by G. W. Schubert, which appeared in 1867, gives about 680 keywords as a “special index to figurative pictures, portraits and other designs such as allegories and coats of arms on postage stamps and covers, foreign designations of value (given in German) and national symbols on stamps”.

In 1880 in the “Lecture Room”, on p.109 of the Viennese “Welt-Post”, reported the production of a “Hand Lexicon for Stamp Collectors”, which would include, for example, “Biographies of prominent collectors, and people who have given services to philately, the geographical whereabouts of all the countries of the world, the current head of state, the rate of exchange, the time and exact circumstances of the first issue of postage stamps, and changes since; the philatelic literature and societies of all countries, with their current presidents, number of members and field of activity of the individual societies: all the specialist literature of the world, its scope, date of foundation, subscription price, advertisement rate, how often it appears etc; the bigger stamp dealers, their rating, price lists and catalogues, forgers and forgeries, how to determine if stamps are genuine, stamp albums and how they laid out, which are the best and cheapest and their publishers, telephone stamps, revenue stamps, postal services, telegraphy, pneumatic post, commercial section especially, the value and introduction of postage stamps, in short everything worth knowing for a stamp collector”.

Another proposal is found in “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal”, 1884, p.143, Ernst Lange wrote as follows on “Postal Terminology”: Every day the lack of a solid work on postal and philatelic terminology is felt more and more keenly by philatelists and postal officials, and we may say that the need for such a work rises geometrically, whilst the possibility of meeting it only increases arithmetically. Younger people with less experience often come across expressions which they do not know and the meaning of which is not intrinsically clear. Thus, a complete glossary has become practically indispensable for the exact understanding of the philatelic literature.

This lexicon will be of inestimable value as it gives a parallel listing of the equivalent English and French expressions. This will enable the philatelist to understand technical works in the relevant languages; yes, even a person who knows nothing of the language concerned could easily read the kind of work that consists principally of technical terms, such as catalogues, the text of albums, etc. The best form for such a work would be a lexicon. All kinds of usually disregarded details could come within the scope of a "Postal-Philatelic Lexicon", whilst others could be dealt with in much more detail. The possibility of a supplement with further details would also be a great advantage.

In the 1866 "Philology in Philately", by Oskar Kausch, there is a "Lexicographic Survey of the Technical Terms used in Philately, with Scientific Explanations". The author gives 934 key words, which had expanded to about 1,350 in the second edition of 1985.

Also, the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung" from No. 13, 1899, to No. 23-24 of 1900 gave a "Philatelic Dictionary", containing about 1,567 words some with illustrations. For foreign subscribers to their catalogue, the Senf Brothers published an "Alphabetical Table of Translations of the Philatelic Terms used in the Senf Catalogue, from German into French, English, Spanish and Esperanto". Finally, we find 98 key words under "Abbreviations and Technical Terms" in Louis Senf's 1921 publication "Guidelines for Stamp Collectors". This exhausts the attempts at the German-language lexicon of technical terms that I have found in my library.

In the French literature I have found "Terms Relating to Stamps", by Dr. Magnus (Dr. A. Legrand), in "Gazette des Timbres", II, 1874, containing 423 key words.

There appeared in English in 1894 "Stamps and Stamp Collecting, a Glossary of Philatelic Terms", by Major Edward B. Evans, then in 1912 "A Glossary of Philatelic Terms" by E. D. Bacon, W. Dorning Beckton, F. A. Bellamy, P.C. Bishop, E. B. Evans, L. W. Fulcher, F. J. Melville and C. J. Phillips, both containing about 250 key words. A more detailed work was the "Dictionary of Stamp Collecting" by Percy L. Bishop and A. B. Creeke, Jr., in "Stamp Collectors Fortnightly", which began in No. 460 of October 1912 and broke off in No. 512 of October 1914 at M (thousandth of an escudo). It has not been taken up again since. The similar work by Bertram W. H. Poole "A Philatelic Dictionary", which appeared in posts with illustrations, got only as far as G (Gwalior). Some continuations appeared in "Mekeels Weekly Stamp News". "How to Collect Stamps" by Bertram T. K. Smith contains 12 keywords under the heading "Some Terms used in Philately".

In Swedish, the Swedish Philatelic Society published a "Philatelic Dictionary", which gives the most useful terms in German-Swedish, English-Swedish and French-Swedish. In the year 1920 there also appeared a Hungarian-German and German-Hungarian "Bélyeggyujtok Szakszotara" by Felcete Karoly; also the "International Code for Exchanges" by Josphe Pougé in French, English, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese and Dutch.

If I now venture to put out the "Grand Lexicon of Philately², I am fully aware of its shortcomings and must ask my readers for their indulgence; I had to deal with the whole mass of material alone, as the nature of plan of the lexicon excluded outside help. It is, however, my pleasant duty to express my heartiest thanks to the two gentlemen who have given me their valuable help in correcting, expanding and eliminating mistakes, State Councillor Dr. Franz Kalckhoff, my tireless teacher and advisor, and Carl Beck, who has helped me with many literary and biographical references.

Alexander Bungerz

FOREWORD

We supply herewith the fifth special issue "The German-Language philatelic Literature of the Year 1923". The importance of our special issues can be appreciated from the fact that each of the previous two was awarded a bronze medal at the Vienna International Philatelic Exhibition 1923, which gave us the incentive to continue on our chosen path.

The difficult and time-consuming work involved becomes harder from year to year, not because of the work itself, but because of the time it takes. If we could only get prompt and enthusiastic information from the various publishers on request things would be a thousand times easier than they are now, quite apart from the cost of the enquiries. At the minute it needs enormous patience to persist with our enquiries: even though we regularly send the return postage, not many of them will take the trouble to give the simplest answer, not even the details of number and date, or the supply of a wanted issue along with a bill.

Under these conditions the researcher's work is difficult, and there are bound to be omissions. Some earlier issues have indeed been included, but it is questionable whether all the 1923 journals have been recorded. The aim of our workers is to check everything carefully, and to record any possible missing numbers. At least, we have always expressed this intention in previous years without having received a single correction. If we liked we could rest on our laurels in the belief that our special issues were flawless and beyond criticism, but such is unfortunately not the case, as witness for example our current supplements reporting on magazines from 1921 and 1922. Thus we will again ask for corrections in the interests of our statistics, so that later researchers and statisticians will find no gaps in the range of the German philatelic literature, and we Germans can maintain our place in the international world of collectors.

Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors
Berlin, May 1925

p.5

"The King is dead, long live the King". Another year has sunk into the bosom of time, and another new one has started: again some journals have ceased to publish and new ones have appeared, again part of the specialist press has died, and another part has been born.

We have been talking for years of the troubles of the press, of deaths amongst German magazines and many magazines have indeed been compelled to close. However, others have come to the light of day and have taken the risk of appearing in these difficult times and joining in the struggle for existence. It is a great pity when even a simple specialist paper has to close, but it is equally welcome and remarkable when another new one appears and puts forward for our attention.

If we ignored the really major magazines, all of which appeared in 1923, we find that only smaller ones, which had generally only been in existence for a short time, had to bow to mortality. The major ones all survived this year, in contrast to 1922 when we had to mourn the loss of familiar journals. Only "Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung" ceased to appear during the year. Also no longer appearing in 1923 were "Briefmarken und Gauzsachen", Rost & Gruber, “Berichte des Vereius Leipziger Bóree”, “Der Sarg der Philateli” Dortmund, “Der Sammlerfreund”, Oranienburg, “Der Unkraine & Philatelist” Berlin, “Mitteilungen der deutschen Gesellschaft für Staatsund Privatmarkenkünde” Berlin, “Mitteilungen der Sammlervereinigung Briefmarkenbörse Stuttgart”, “Mitteilungsblatt des Weltsammlerrings Wesari” Stuttgart, “Monatsberichte Hamburg 1995”. New ones to be included are “Atlas-Post” (has been appearing since 1921), “Berlina”, “Briefmarken-Anzeiger” Hanover, “Briefmarken-Umschau” Leipzig, “Cosmos” Magdeburg. “Der Briefmarkenbote” (has been appearing since 1922), “Der Briefmarkenfreund” W. Hecker, “Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Grossist” Seigmar, “Der Deutschland-Sammler” Berlin, “Der Vereinsbote” Langewiesen, “Die Auslands-Post” Seigmar, “Die Weltpost Siegmar, “Frankonia-Berichte “ Wunsiedel, “Internationale Briefmarken-Sammler-Welt” Benthü, “Internationale Export-Rundschan der Philatelie” Königsberg, “Mainpost” Würzburg (has been appearing since 1922), “Memeler Briefmarken-Zeitung”, “Mitteilungen des Vereins Sächsischer Briefmarkenhändler” Leipzig, “Mitteilungen und Anzeigenblatt” Greiz, “Neueste Briefmarken-Rundschan” Danzig, “Philatelistische Blätter” Berlin, “Sammlerwelt” Rendsburg, “Union” Magdeburg, “Windt’s Offertenblatt für Philatelie” Magdeburg, “Windt’s Reklame-Auswahl Lefte” (has been appearing since 1922), “Württembergische Sammler-Rundschan” Mergentheim.

Austria lost “Der Briefmarkenbote” Bisamberg, but gained “Mitteilungen der Briefmarken-Sammler Vereinigung Tirol” in Innsbruck, and “Briefmarken-Rundschan der Wiener Mittags-Zeitung”, whereas “Sammlerhund Sabu” appeared again after a year’s break.

In Switzerland “Der Schweizer Philatelist” of E. Houby no longer appeared and in Hungary “Tabularium” and “Ungarische Briefmarken-Zeitung” of M. Goldfinger ceased, but a new title began – “A Magyar Bélyeg – Die Unparische Briefmarke”.

Bulgaria’s only magazine in the German language “Erste Bulgarische Briefmarken-Zeitung” did not appear but “The Baltic Philatelist” Started up in Latvia, and “Jugoslavische Philatelistische Beutrale” in Yugoslavia. There was also one brief new journal in the United States – “C.T.P. Stamp Advertiser”. The other changes and supplements can be seen from the record.

Germany can look back with pride on an anniversary in 1923: in this year the “Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal” completed 50 years of unbroken publication. This is the first such case in all philatelic literature, from which we can see that in spite of the difficult years Germany is still capable of holding the peaks! There is in fact a French magazine “Le Collectionneur de timbres-Poste” which denotes 1923 as its 58th year, but it cannot look back on 50 years of unbroken publication. It was founded on 15th July 1864 by M. Maury junior, and appeared as a magazine till 1874 (No. 47). Nos. 48-50 were merely price lists; No. 51 appeared on 15th January 1885, and thereafter the magazine appeared regularly. Thus the number of volumes is in fact fifty.

As far as the books, etc., published are concerned, Germany has again made progress, as anyone will realise who reads the reviews given in home and foreign literature to my “Grosse Lexikon der Philatelie”. I might describe it as the “densest” book that has appeared in the German language since the turn of the century. In Switzerland appeared the third edition of Zumstein’s magnificent work, the “Spezialkatalog und Handbuch über die Briefmarken der Schweizerischen Eidgenossenschaft”. See the record for other new publications.

At the International Philatelic Exhibition in Vienna, 31st august to 7th September 1923:

Gold-plated Medal:

Albert Friedemann for “Post-paid stamps and cancellations from German post offices in the Protectorates and abroad”.

Silver Medal:

“Die Postmarke”, Vienna, Philipp Kosack for “Postage Stamps of the Kingdom of Hungary” by Béla Payer, Albert Kürzl for “Grosses Lexikon der Philatelie” by Alexander Bungerz.

Bronze Medals:

Albert Kürzl for “Die Sammler-Woche”, Zumstein & Co., for “Der Deutsche Philatelist”, Carl Beck for “Bibliography of German special writings on the postage stamps of individual countries”, A. Bungerz for “German-language literature in the year 1921”, Zumstein & Co., for “Europa-Katalog”.

Diplomas:

Georg H. Jaeger for “Der Baltische Philatelist”, Verein Philatelistischer Literatursammler für “Der Philatelische Bücherwurm”, Albert Kürzl for the “S. W.” and “Kürzl Katalog”.

The Siegerpreis for Philatelic Literature was awarded to the “Grosse Lexikon für Philatelie”, the Lindenberg Medal to Herr Hugo Griebert for his works.

I now give an exact record of the periodicals, books, etc., appearing in the German language during the year 1923 as far as I have been able to find them, with some supplements.

A FOREWORD

During the first half of the year 1892 the second part of and a supplement to our Library Catalogue was published in the DBZ. This work is now concluded. By autumn this part should also be available in printed form. The separate parts have already roused considerable interest, as enquiries to the Library have shown. You will find more detailed information in the report of the Library management on p.8 of this information.

This issue will see the beginning of an attempt to give societies and working parties a chance of making themselves and their work known.

The Editors would also be pleased if individual members would report on their special interest or a particular topic. We will publish such articles as far as possible.

The Library is ready, in connection with such work, to recommend suitable literature from the Library's stock.

In this issue we have a paper on post and post-paid stamps. We thank the author, Erich Bayartz of Aachen, for his manuscript.

In another contribution Herbert Körting Dessau, report on "Cancellations on entire-postcards of the German State Post". My thanks to him as well.

I hope our members enjoy their summer holidays and hope you will find some time for our "Info 7".

Yours, J.-J. Förster

WARNING

We have taken all the care possible – the printer unfortunately didn't

p.2

Contents	Page
Foreword	2
Impression	2
Minutes of the AGM	3
Report of the Library 1991	8
Erich Bayartz:
Komusina – Post-paid Stamps	14
Herbert Körting:
Cancellation of Entires – Postcards of the German State Post	18

p.8

Annual report of the Hamburg Philatelic Library e.V., 1991

The opening hours of the Library remained unchanged:

Tuesday	1400 – 1800 hours
Thursday	1400 – 1900 hours
1 Saturday in month	0900 – 1200 hours

The Library was closed from 01.07 - 10.08.1991 and from 16.12.1991 - 05.01.1992.

1991, like the previous year, was a year of great activity. A complete revision of the stock took place during the summer closure.

This produced the following data: in July 1991 the Library consisted of 8,781 volumes. Another 68 volumes came up as missing, since they could not be located after careful searching.

A possible reason for this is that not all items are booked out by readers in accordance with the rules. We knew that such occurrences are not unknown in other Libraries. However, since some valuable items were amongst the missing, we felt obliged to make a slight change in our procedures.

To give the staff better control over the issues, since the end of the year, when readers take a book into the Reading Room they have to give in their reader's permit along with the book card. Reaction to this innovation has been overwhelmingly positive.

In the field of publication work came to the publication of the long-awaited second part of the Library Catalogue. This consisted of a supplement to the main part that appeared in 1988, plus about 2,200 new entries. After two proof-readings, printing began in No. 22 of the DBZ. The series is expected to run till spring 1992. A complete offprint is also planned.

Printing this brought a sharp increase in requests for inter-Library loans. Over the period from 29.10 – 05.12.1991 there were an extra 43 enquiries relating to the external loan conditions and the main catalogue.

Installation of the new computer saved a great deal of work. It makes all information about titles readily available and title enquiries were much easier. It is also very important for our future plans as regards exhibition guides and auction catalogues.

Our honorary staff put in about 1,500 hours of work for the Library. Without their constant help smooth operation would be possible and a great deal of work could not be covered.

We would like to thank the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without whose financial contribution the external loans service could not be kept up.

Statistics

In 1991, 246 books were recorded as new stock. The fact that the cost was not very high may be attributed mainly to gifts of literature from publishers and authors, and we should like to thank them once more for their support.

124 new reader passes were issued.

During only 100 days of opening (477 hours of opening), 683 users were recorded in the library. 251 of them borrowed a total of 745 volumes, and 1,443 copies were prepared for 84 readers.

1,124 volumes were sent on external loan, and 1,315 copies were supplied.

Thus a total of 1,869 volumes were loaned and 2,758 copies prepared.

Stefanie Töppe
For the Library Management

p.12

The following book was donated to the Philatelic Library in March 1992 by the Luneburg Stamp Collectors' Society: A Magyar posta bélyegelőtti bérmentesítéseinak és bélyegzőinek kézikönyve: Handbook of Hungarian Prephilately, edited by A. Bér (Hungarian, German, English). TEKA 456p. Printer: Tibor. DU-B 20

We were very pleased to receive this unsolicited gift, and find the gesture worth calling to notice. Without philatelic literature you might as well live on the moon!

p.13

Call for Assistance

Have you perhaps already visited the Hamburg Philatelic Library e.V., or have you maybe made a call on its external loans service? Then you have possibly got to know one or even more of our honorary workers, since they are regularly involved with the external loans service.

The tasks in the Library are very diverse, so that everyone can help: e.g. with on-the-spot or external loans, in recording the journals and cataloguing new books. Moreover there is a great deal to do in maintaining the stock of periodicals and books.

Help from honorary workers is essential (in 1991 they gave about 1,500 hours to the Library). Only in this way can the Library continue in its present form.

Perhaps one or other of you has thought of helping yourself with this voluntary work in the Library. Possibly you have thought "A Library, that could be in my line..". Moreover you would have the chance to find out something useful for your own collection, and there is a cup of coffee waiting for you.

Don't delay any longer, your help is needed. Just come along and speak to us. We should be delighted.

BULLETIN 8

Dear Member and Bibliophilatelist,

You have in your hands a new bulletin from the SBB. Briefly, and as promised, a summary of the talk given to us by Monsieur Bigaignon at our meeting last June.

In addition to being a study of maritime post in the Mediterranean, Monsieur Bigaignon's article was original in that it criticised several works frequently consulted on this topic: it also reproduces several carefully selected documents along with an already complete list of bibliographical reference on the subject.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to Monsieur Bigaignon for his careful work.

This bulletin moreover describes our public sale for philatelic literature. This will take place on 5th October 1991 at 1430 hours in the Savoy Room of the Pullman Astoria Hotel, 103 Rue Royale, Brussels.

We are aware that the months of September and October are traditionally devoted to markets and other public sales, but we hope that most of you will nevertheless find this date convenient. If, however, you cannot be with us on that date, do not hesitate to send in an order: it will be dealt with with your best interests in mind.

THE LOTS WILL BE ON DISPLAY AT THE RESIDENCE PALACE ON SUNDAY, 29TH SEPTEMBER

Subscription 1991/92

May we remind you that the annual subscription has risen to 750BF, to be sent to Account 000-1304282-20 of the Société Belge de Bibliophilatelie.

FOREWORD

Today I am happy to be able at last to let you have Volume No. 66 of Literatur-Nachrichten (year 1977). This volume has been produced by a collaboration between the Literature Section of the Society of German Philatelists and the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library. Pressure of work in the Literature Section and the sickness of Mr. Martner have led to the delay, for which I ask your indulgence.

I am now working on the year 1975 and 1976 and will issue Volumes 64/65 as a double volume, so that L.N. will again be free of gaps.

As usual, the first part of this volume gives reviews of the new books (C.100) published in 1977. Most of these were done by Mr. Martner (symbol Ma): I have copied some of them from philatelic journals. I would like to tender warm thanks to the editors of these journals for permission to do so.

Thanks are also due to all the working parties who have given valuable assistance by listing the contents of their circulars and publications and, in particular, to our external helpers, Mr. Danesch, Mrs. Debo, Pahls, Rossberg and many others.

The book reviews are arranged (1) alphabetically by working parties and (2) by authors. All alphabetical index by subject will be found at the beginning, to make it easier to find particular topics under their authors or working parties.

The second part of this volume is devoted to the contents of 127 philatelic journals from all over the world. Almost 4,000 references are covered. First comes a survey of the societies and the publications they issue, with details of the country of publication, followed by an alphabetical index to abbreviations. A novelty in this volume is the classification of the literature by a digital system. Each country and topic is assigned a particular numerical code, which is given at the top of every page, so that every desired topic can be easily located.

It only remains for me to hope that you will again find this volume of "Literatur-Nachrichten" a useful aid in your work on philately, just as we have all found the earlier volumes issue by Herr Gaedicke so valuable.

p.3

Annual Report 1977/78

First I must thank our co-workers in Leverkusen, and our external collaborators, without whose help the task could never have been completed. These warm thanks must also be extended to our wives, who have tolerated with so much understanding our constant work at home and our frequent absences in connection with exhibitions.

Information Sheet No. 1 of the Literature Section was issued in August 1977. It contained amongst other things a guide to the correct way of writing out the catalogue cards which are used as manuscripts for "Literatur-Nachrichten" before being sent to the central catalogue of The Philatelic Library in Munich. A start can now be made on the next volume of "Literatur-Nachrichten". Part of the material is already available in the form of index cards for the literature.

Too much of our working capacity is taken up by correspondence. In future I shall be forced to cut down on this often all too obvious enquiries, so as not to get in arrears with other parts of the work. I am not referring here to the necessary exchange of letters and information with the various societies, but to the many requests for information which the enquirer could find for himself.

The Chairman of the Literature Section was asked to give a paper to the North Rhine-Westphalia Society in Essen on the 15th and 16th October 1977 as part of a seminar on the development of appraisal(?). His 14-page paper, available as a special issue, dealt with the present state of "Literature at Philatelic Exhibitions", and possible ways of improving the situation.

The jury of NAPOSTA 1978 at Frankfurt in May chose the Chairman of the Literature Section to judge the literature exhibits. This co-operation in judging at a national stamp exhibition was a useful spur to further activities in the section (e.g. more effective presentation of the literature class, establishment of rules for special exhibitions on literature and guidelines for judging them, similar to the ones for judging philatelic collections: this in concert with the Exhibition's section). We see the topic "Literature at Exhibitions" as presenting problems which urgently require solution.

There is a happy co-operative relationship between the specialist press and the philatelic libraries. The Munich Philatelic Library extended its external loans service to the chairmen of the various societies at the beginning of 1978. Soon afterwards this service was extended to all members of the Society of German Philatelists, so that full use can now be made of the most important German philatelic library.

There continues to be the closest relationship between the Literature and Scientific sections of the Society (the chairman, deputy chairman and treasurer of the Literature section are active in the Scientific section as well). At NAPOSTA 78 in Frankfurt the two sections again ran a joint information stand along with the "New Handbook" company, the Hamburg Philatelic Library and the Munich Philatelic Library – a "literary bloc" such as has not been seen before.

A joint stand between the Scientific and Literature sections is also planned for the 2nd International Postage Stamp Fair in Essen in November. These costly undertakings are only possible because of the financial help of the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, to whom we tender heartfelt thanks.

Erwin L. Martner

p. 11

Literature at Philatelic Exhibitions

Literature at philatelic exhibitions – the carefully detailed exhibition arrangements of the Society of German Philatelists allots a comparatively modest amount of room to literature. Is this symptomatic of the value placed on philatelic literature in Germany? No – that must, I think, be the answer after experiences in the most recent times.

Section 8.1 of the exhibition rules names literature as an independent discipline amongst the groups that form the exhibition classes.

Section 9.2 groups exhibits of literature on postal undertakings and literature of bibliographical value more than 5 years old as “hors concours”.

Exhibitions held under the SGP’s rules may include only exhibits with a philatelic content. Thus permissible exhibits come under Section 11.1, philatelic writings.

Section 11.4 of the rules states that manuscripts are not allowed in the literature competition group. I agree with this. Literature in this sense means technical writing in a given field, namely philately. A manuscript, however good, has not entered the literature: this only comes on publication. Work describing or amounting to research should be published and thus made generally available. Research - in philately as anywhere else – is not an aim in itself. Research is not just meant to discover new knowledge, but to make this knowledge available to all by publication and appraisal. The publication of one’s results and their presentation as printed literature is part of research. The half-baked” manuscript is rightly excluded from competition as philatelic literature.

Consequently, it would also be necessary to discuss the admission or non-admission of any publications which – like an as-yet unprinted manuscript – have not met the criteria of being made available by open publication. This would include individual publications whose issue is restricted to members of certain societies. The rules, to be discussed later, for international exhibitions of literature under the auspices of the BDPh, deal with this question.

To prevent misunderstandings I will mention that “unpublished writings” do not include the periodicals from our Working Parties.

I may mention here that some Working Parties and societies working on the same supra-national level have found very good solutions to the problem of the layout of their circulars. They contain society matters on the one hand, plus a scientific section which counts as literature in the true sense. The whole is made up as a circular, but is printed on separate sheets with corresponding titles. Moreover, these issues are simply stuck into their covers in such a way that the section of permanent value can easily be detached from the members-only part. The convenient separation of circulars is a point that should be given a positive rating by a prize jury.

For the minimum preliminary ranking controlling the admission of exhibits to the various grades of the exhibition, Section 13.3 states that preliminary ranking is not needed for the literature exhibits. In principle, literature in Grade III is to be judged no differently from that in Grade I.

Since most Grade III exhibitions have no literature classes (according to the exhibition rules, Section 25.2 they must not have), the exhibitor of literature often begins in Grade II, if not right away in Grade I. Here the Philatelic Commission has to act as the sieve for the admission or non-admission according to degree. I am assuming that the Philatelic Commission for regional and national events at least will include someone familiar with literature.

On evaluating exhibits it is stated under Section 19.4 that writing associated with a collection being exhibited at the same time by the author may be evaluated along with this collection. The way this works in practice is that if the literary part is not judged separately, the collection may get a higher rating in the form of plus points for “philatelic knowledge” and “own research” because of the literary background and the proof it gives of intense devotion to the subject.

For example, the Jury of the National Postage Stamp Exhibition of 1976 in Wuppertal in three cases treated collections and literature as a unit though they had been sent in as separate items (one of them got a gold medal).

I quote Section 20.4 of the Exhibition Rules verbatim:

Literature exhibits are judged from the following standpoints:

- research work by individuals or societies
- content, clarity and intelligibility of text and illustrations

This is all. In contrast to the specific points laid down for judging the collection categories, the Exhibition Rules of the BDPh have no concrete criteria for judging the category “literature”.

The “Exhibitions” Working group associated with the BDPh meeting of 1975 in Berlin recommended the experts on literature to work out a specific set of rules with concrete standards for assessment of the “Literature” category, these to become part of the BDPh exhibition rules.

The Society Literature Section did not take part in working out these special rules for literature. Since then an agreement has been reached with the Exhibition section to get together and work out a solution to this problem, with the aim of getting codified rules for judging literature.

The chapter on “Awards” in the exhibition rules specifies cups as additional awards for specially interesting and philatelically valuable exhibits. Extra cups were awarded for example by the prize jury of NAPOSTA 1976 in Wuppertal in several cases for the outstanding importance and quality of the literature presented.

According to Section 23.1, medal and diplomas will only be given to the holder of the exhibition pass for literary work from societies: joint authors will get merely a diploma. I take this to be a sensible and justifiable rule. Think of the numerous co-authors often concerned with a working party’s handbook. Giving medals to every one of them in such cases could cause the organizers difficulty because of the cost. Or, what would be possible but not good, the organizers of an exhibition could tell the prize jury to be “sparing” with medals in the literature class (which is contrary to Section 22.1 of the exhibition rules).

Section 23.2 states that at local exhibitions where as a rule only diplomas are given instead of medals, every co-author should have a diploma by way of award.

As for the awards procedure, Section 24.3 recommends that the exhibitor should get hold of the BDPh evaluation sheets showing standing evaluations by the prize jury for the individual features, and the resulting overall assessment.

This rule has been applied to collections since the new exhibition rules were adopted in 1975. However, evaluation sheet are not yet available for literature exhibits - in my opinion, the production of one needs to be speeded up. The Exhibitions and Literature sections of the BDPh are currently working together on this also.

Rule 25.2 states that a literature class must be provided at national and regional exhibitions. This inclusion of literature displays should be promoted in local exhibitions.

This regulation shows how aware the BDPh is of the importance of literature and thus of philatelic research. Research in philately without literature is inconceivable, hence literature, the life-blood of philately must take its due place in every exhibition. In every exhibition, for Grade III is our first wish and aim.

Not enough has yet been done to set up the literature classes desired for Grade III and prescribed for Grades I and II. The type of presentation is decisive. All the right conditions can be fully created when the visitor to an exhibition has two example of every work for his attention: one in a showcase and the other in the reading room where it can be picked up and scanned through.

Moreover, the display of literature should not be lodged in some dead-end corner with inadequate lighting. It belongs in an easily accessible location in the main flow of traffic where visitors are bound to pass it.

If a good and satisfactory presentation of literature could be guaranteed in our exhibitions, and if the exhibition rules made it clear in what form the works were to be presented, it would help to make authors and publishers more friendly towards exhibitions.

Another gain for exhibitors of literature and visitors to exhibitions would certainly be a reader's aid in the exhibition hall. This should consist of at most 12 pages of DIN A4 or 24 pages of DIN A5, which should be carefully selected so as to give an informative impression of the work. More than one page per work should not be allowed. This sheet should be struck to a white board of a predetermined size and sent to the organisers. This will also, I believe, prevent the organisers from being burdened with unacceptable charges by allowing them to calculate the average fee for a space for each exhibitor of literature. A test run of this form of presentation – perhaps a sympathetic exhibition organizer could be found – would demonstrate the practicability of my proposals.

I stress that the exhibition of literature must have different aims from the exhibition of a collection of postage stamps.

Literature at exhibitions should not just be judged but should above all be explained and offered to collectors. Unlike collections in a competition, which are not on sale, literature on exhibition is a commercially available product. It would be wrong to look on literature at philatelic exhibitions simply as prize objects for the jury.

The ideal task for literature is the propagation of philately. Without literature, philately cannot be taken seriously. However those exhibiting literature should bear in mind the task they have to fulfil. They must choose with reference to commerce, since only the purchase of books and periodicals will make it possible to publish others.

Proposal: In a staffed(!) reading room, prospectuses and order forms for the books and periodicals on display could be made available. This possibility could be set out in the exhibition rules.

Above all: It is not enough for the exhibition guide to give only the author and title of the literature on display. Visitors and purchasers of the exhibition catalogue have the right to expect to be given the most important bibliographical data, such as publisher, place and year of publication, number pages, price, and above all the cost of a subscription. The exhibitor should let the Organisers have this information in the special literature report sheets about which I have yet to speak. The catalogue of the International Exhibition of Philatelic Literature in Lugano, June 1977, is a first step in this direction.

I am also pleased to state my opinion that organisers can no longer expect exhibitors to present them with the works on show for nothing at the end of the exhibition. Philatelic writings are printed in such small numbers and useful handbooks cost so much that this is unreasonable, and has already caused many authors to avoid exhibitions.

The exhibitor must be sure of getting back the works he has put in. He can be given the option of presenting the reading room copy, or both of them, to a library named in the report in return for a free pass. In any event, though, the common earlier practice of commandeering the exhibits is no longer permissible.

To round off the subject, I will mention the inclusion of loanable material in exhibitions. At the large exhibitions of recent years, the two society sections on Research and Literature and the Hamburg Philatelic Library have had joint information stands at which some of the borrowable items from their stock have been available. Such an on-the-spot offer of books for loan may be the first contact that many collectors have with the scientific philatelic literature. My ideal would be to have a spatially unified complex of a display of literature with space for readers along with information stands from the Research and Literature sections plus a stand for the philatelic libraries taking part.

Now a word about the effective propagation of philatelic literature. In 1971 in Dusseldorf I saw an exhibition on "Literature and Philately", a significant event which unfortunately has not been copied. The interaction of collecting and literature and scientific collecting as the outcome of an intensive study of the literature on the one hand, and good philatelic writing as the literary outcome of special and research collecting on the other has never been so clearly and decisively illustrated.

The Society and Philatelic meeting for 1982 has been invited to Leverkusen. The programme will include a seminar on "Research and Literature in Philately". Leverkusen however makes no claim to exclusivity. Quite the contrary – we are pleased to make it known in advance.

Section 28.2 directs organisers to let members of the Prize Jury have a list of the exhibits they will have to judge at least four weeks before the end of the exhibition. Expert reports on the literature exhibits should be prepared. This point about the expert reports needs further elucidation on the jury's instructions. This would seem to be another task for the Literature Section. In "Duties of the Exhibitor", Section 30.3 recommends them all to use the relevant BDPH pamphlet.

According to Section 31.2, literature exhibits should be sent to the organiser at least a month before the opening of the exhibition. The reason for this requirement is clear. Books to be entered in a competition cannot be made available just on the day before the competition.

Such are the rules of the Society of German Philatelists for the exhibition of philatelic literature.

However, just another look at Section 30.3: use of the pamphlet for exhibitions.

The BDPH has so far had no special recommendations for the exhibition of literature. I saw such a recommendation for literature in connection with the International Exhibition of Philatelic Literature in Lugano in 1977, but this guide was capable of improvement.

There would be one advantage for the organiser in having a uniform set of rules for literature that would apply to all exhibitions. The requirements stipulated could be read to make clear what would be allowed into competition. I have already dealt with the other aspects.

