

PHILATELIC TRANSLATIONS

PRODUCED

BY AND FOR

BRIAN J. BIRCH

Volume 1

List of Translations & Philat. Trans. 001 to 088

© Brian Birch

Guinot - 3166 Route de Seyches

47350 Montignac Toupinerie, France

18th January 2026

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE BOUND VOLUMES

Although this document is only intended to exist in electronic form, I find it very convenient to have a hard copy to hand. It is easier to refer to a book than wait the five or ten minutes it takes to start up and close down a computer, just to obtain a single reference or check a fact. Books also give you the big picture of the document as a whole, rather than the small-screen glimpses we have all got used to. Accordingly, I printed and had bound a copy of this document in February 2006, which I have called the First edition, for convenience. Late in the same year, I decided to extend the scope of the document to include my other philatelic translations and changed the name of the document from Index to the Philat. Trans. Series of Translations to List of Philatelic Translations Produced by Brian J. Birch. This led me to print a Second edition to record the change.

In 2011, I reset the document and eliminated some thirty blank pages. By the middle of 2012, in line with my other documents, I simplified the set-up and turned off the remove widows and orphans feature. This resulted in a reduction in length of 23 pages.

Ever since this document was first placed on the web, I added the finished translations to the site in a separate file. This gave me the problem that if I updated a translation, I had to remember to send a new version to the webmaster to replace the old one. In order to eliminate this problem and always have the latest version available, in 2014, I incorporated all of the Philat. Trans. translations into this document in their entirety, adding over a thousand pages. At the same time, I shortened the title to Philatelic Translations Produced by Brian J. Birch.

Henceforth, I will have a copy bound each January, or thereabouts, provided the document has increased in size by at least 100 pages since the previous printing. At the same time I will send an update to the web files on www.fipliterature.org, where the electronic version of this document is hosted. Since printing and binding is quite an expensive undertaking, I donate the obsolete bound volumes to important philatelic libraries round the world. Reducing the amount of white space is an ongoing process in an effort to minimise the page count whilst not compromising usability.

Following the end of Tony Virvilis' tenure as President of the FIP Literature Commission, I lost touch with the organisation, which appeared to me to have become moribund. Following a repeated request by Frank Walton, the Past President of the Royal Philatelic Society London for my works to be hosted on the Royal's web site, I agreed in January 2018. This document was never uploaded onto the Royal's web site owing to their concerns with copyright.

This edition was last printed on the eighteenth day of January 2022

1st edition, February 2006 A single bound copy of 125 pages. It was donated to the Western Philatelic Library of Sunnyvale, California, when it was replaced in my library by the 2nd edition.

2nd edition, January 2007 A single bound copy of 132 pages. It was donated to the Collectors Club of New York, when it was replaced in my library by the 3rd edition.

3rd edition, December 2008 A single bound copy of 191 pages. It was donated to the Rocky Mountain Philatelic Library of Denver, Colorado, when it was replaced in my library by the 4th edition. This edition was requested earlier than usual by Anthony Virvilis, the incoming President of the FIP Literature Commission.

4th edition, January 2010 A single bound copy of 218 pages. It was donated to the American Philatelic Research Library of Bellefonte, Pennsylvania, when it was replaced in my library by the 5th edition.

5th edition, January 2010 A single bound copy of 218 pages. It was donated to the National Philatelic Society of London, UK, when it was replaced in my library by the 6th edition. After I retired in 2009, the volumes dated 2010 were the first ones produced by a contract printer. A second copy of this document was produced in error. Rather than waste one, I bound both of the copies and designated this one the fifth edition.

6th edition, January 2012 A single bound copy of 177 pages. It was donated to the Royal Philatelic Society London, UK, when it was replaced in my library by the 7th edition.

7th edition, January 2013 A single bound copy of 178 pages. It was donated to the British Library of London, UK, when it was replaced in my library by the 8th edition.

8th edition, January 2014 A single bound copy of 189 pages. It was donated to Toms Bjäringer when it was replaced in my library by the 9th edition. (Part of lot 20057 in the sale of Tomas' library.) (Part of lot 20057 in the sale of Tomas' library.)

9th edition, January 2015 A single copy of 1,709 pages, bound in two volumes:- List of Translations & Philat. Trans. 001-400, comprising pages 1 to 814 and Philat. Trans. 401-684 & Appendices, comprising pages 815 to 1,709. It was presented to Heinz Glattli when it was replaced in my library by the 10th edition.

10th edition, January 2022 Three bound sets of 3,292 pages, bound in four volumes:- Volume 1: List of Translations & Philat. Trans. 001-088, comprising pages 1 to 933, Volume 2: Philat. Trans. 089-270 comprising pages 934 to 1650, Volume 3: Philat. Trans. 271-517 comprising pages 1651 to 2477 and Volume 4: Philat. Trans. 518-813 & S.E.P.S. Trans. Series of Translations comprising pages 2478 to 3292. Given my age (73), I expect that this will be the last printed edition although I will continue to add data to the digital version.

The first two sets will be presented to my good friends Jonas Hällström and Tomas Bjäringer, both of Sweden, who requested that this final edition be printed. The third copy will be placed in my library to replace the 9th edition.

The Author
Breakfast whilst on holiday in France, July 2011
(Sorry about the shirt)

This work is dedicated to

Betty Howarth

Over the period 1972 to 2003, Betty translated many hundreds of philatelic articles, extracts from books and even complete books for me, never once accepting any recompense. She produced the majority of the first five hundred translations which follow, including virtually all of the longer ones.

Both I and the philatelic community are forever in her debt.

Audrey Elizabeth Howarth (1928-2006)

Betty H.

Born on the 10th November 1928 at Clifton, near Manchester, to John and Edna Howarth, Betty (for she hated the name Audrey) was the third of five children, the other four being boys. Having gained a degree in Geography at the University of Birmingham, she quickly found a job there as a librarian. This vocation obviously suited her since she remained a librarian in various organisations for the rest of her life.

She moved from the University library to support the UK's effort to join the space race, then on to the Atomic Energy Authority and finally back to academia, to take charge of all of the Engineering Libraries at the University of Liverpool. She remained at Liverpool for the remainder of her working life.

It was at the University of Liverpool that I first encountered Betty in 1967. I was an eighteen-year-old Fresher, reading Metallurgy and it fell to her to induct me and my fellow students into the mysteries of Liverpool's Library system and especially the numerous Departmental Engineering Libraries for which she was responsible. To those of us who wished to use the library, she was helpful and extremely knowledgeable. However, to those who earned her displeasure, she was the Dragon Lady from Engineering and I returned more than a couple of books for colleagues who had good reason not to cross her path. Interestingly, this tendency not to suffer fools gladly was extended to the staff and she was quite openly contemptuous of some of them, even senior staff.

After receiving my Bachelor's Degree, I continued in the same Department working for a Master of Engineering Degree, by research. It was only then that I began to appreciate just how helpful Betty could be. From 1970 to 1977, when I took up a post in industry, she translated several hundred technical articles and even a few books for me and my colleagues in the Heat Treatment Research Group (HTRG) in the Department of Metallurgy (later the Department of Metallurgy and Materials Science).

Incredibly, Betty had taught herself to translate from French, German, Italian, Spanish and Russian, all of which I made good use of and the latter of which she even stretched to the odd Bulgarian item in Cyrillic for me! I learned latterly that her translating skills extended to Latin. Not surprisingly perhaps, I never found any technical or philatelic papers with which to challenge her Latin skills. Following the acquisition of my postgraduate degree, I was employed in the University on contract research for almost five years. Throughout this period, I had a continuing need of Betty's translating services, building up a significant body of important translations in my field of study. This substantial and valuable resource is still available to scientists through the British Library, where I deposited them for safe keeping. They are immediately recognisable by their translation number being prefixed HTRG.

During these halcyon days at the University, we became good friends and she even volunteered to translate some philatelic articles for me to further my researches in the field of stamp collecting. During the early 1970s, I became a librarian in my own right, but only for the Security Endorsement and Perfin Society of Great Britain (S.E.P.S.), later the Perfin Society.

Betty was responsible for the majority of the 240 or so S.E.P.S. Trans. translations which were in the Society's Library when I eventually relinquished it.

Upon my leaving the University and saying farewell, she pressed me to remember her and call upon her translating services whenever I wished. This I was only too happy to do and something like 300 of the first 500 or so translations in this volume came from her pen.

Over the years, I took my children on my visits to exchange the items she had translated for the next batch and she watched my children grow up during our regular Saturday morning visits to the University Library. She even ran into my daughter at the book shop (where else!) at the University of Liverpool where she had gone to read veterinary science, following in the footsteps of both her parents – although I had read Metallurgy and my wife (a physicist) carried out research for her PhD.

Betty retired from the University a few years before her normal retirement age, owing to ill health. The emphysema which had bothered her for quite a few years, finally got too much for her. Nothing annoyed her so much as the comment from the doctors and specialists she consulted, that it served her right for smoking – she had never smoked. Although I have no grounds for my view, I cannot help but believe that the condition was probably brought on by the dust of ages which had collected on the library's books she worked with and loved so much.

Throughout her long retirement she positively demanded that the flow of material for translation continued to keep her mind active. So it remained, until 2003 when the emphysema became too much for her to cope with and she moved into a retirement home, dying there in 2006.

One short anecdote demonstrates to me at least, the legacy of the 1,000 or so translations that Betty carried out at my request over the years. In 2009, a Finnish Steel company wished to work with my Company to look into the brittleness they found in some of their materials after Nitriding and Nitrocarburising. During my literature search, I found some interesting articles on the subject published in France in 1932. The British Library was very pleased to be able to supply me with translations of all three of these articles and, inevitably, they turned out to be HTRG 122, 123 and 124 that Betty had translated for me over half my lifetime before and of which I had lost track because they had remained at the University when I left!

Betty, on behalf of all of the engineers and philatelists who have benefited from and will continue to benefit from your translations, I thank you.

Brian John Birch

Standish, UK
21st June 2009

CONTENTS

Frontispiece	5
Dedication – Betty Howarth	6
Foreword	10
Background	11
Introduction	13
Abbreviations	15
List of Symbols	16
List of Abbreviations	18
Abbreviations for American States & Possessions	33
Abbreviations for Australian States & Territories	35
Abbreviations for Canadian Provinces & Territories	35
The List of Translations	36
Author Index	117
Book Index	145
Periodical Index	148
The Translations	173
Introduction	173
Appendix
1. List of the S.E.P.S. Trans. Series of Translations	3273

FOREWORD

In spite of my just having spent the previous three years of my life as an undergraduate in the Department of Metallurgy in the University of Liverpool, I registered for a postgraduate Master of Engineering Degree in 1970. The subject of my research was the Nitriding of steel components without a deleterious surface layer of nitrides, the so-called white layer. As it turned out, the nitriding process was very well detailed in the scientific literature and I soon amassed a large number of technical papers, many of which were published in foreign languages. Over the two years of my research, I became adept at finding existing translations of these papers, to the extent that I subsequently published an article on the subject in a specialist library periodical⁽¹⁾.

Inevitably, there were papers of which no translation existed and here I made use of the services of the Engineering Faculty's Librarian Betty Howarth who used the quiet periods of her duties, usually whilst manning the enquiry desk during the evening and at weekends, to produce translations for the Faculty staff, which included me. Unfortunately, one of the last articles I had translated, dating from the 1920s, carried much of the technical data that I had really needed on day one of my research and which I had worked so hard to reproduce. Fortunately, it did not invalidate my project and I was subsequently awarded my Master of Engineering Degree. However, It did make me rather obsessed with having translations done of any foreign-language material of even vague relevance to my philatelic researches.

Although I have found other sources for translations from the more-difficult languages, notably the American Philatelic Society's Translation Service - run for so many years by the late Dmytro Bykovetz, Betty produced the majority of the first 500 translations listed in this Listing. Accordingly, this work is dedicated to Betty Howarth with thanks from a grateful student.

Starting somewhat belatedly with Translation 400, I decided to add the translator's name to the credits on each translation. Wherever possible, I have added the appropriate name retrospectively. However, many of the American Philatelic Society's translators work anonymously which, coupled with my suspect memory, means that many entries will never have the translator's name added.

Finally, I must thank the late Francis Kiddle who offered to host this and other unpublished documents relating to my long-term projects, on the FIP Literature Commission web site at <http://hps.gr/fipliterature>.

Brian John Birch

Standish, UK
8th May 2011

BACKGROUND

Starting in the early 1970s, I began to produce two series of philatelic translations. At the time, I was the Librarian of the Security Endorsement and Perfin Society of Great Britain (subsequently renamed The Perfin Society). Thus, the first series, S.E.P.S. Trans., was comprised of translations of all of the foreign - language books and articles in the Society's Library. When I relinquished the post of Librarian in 1984, the S.E.P.S. Trans. series had reached number 246. A separate list of the first 102 of these translations has been published in the Perfin Society Bulletin⁽²⁾. The full list is available at the rear of this work.

A much more thorough introduction to philatelic translations and the background to the S.E.P.S. Trans. project can be found in my article Philatelic Translations Index, published in the Philatelic Literature Review in 1987⁽³⁾.

The second series of philatelic translations, which was started at the same time and continues to this day, consists of translations produced to further my own philatelic researches and were simply called Philat. Trans. (Philatelic Translations). With a small number of exceptions, these translations relate to the bibliographic literature of philately. The extent of the individual translations varies from a few paragraphs to complete books of some hundreds of pages. Many of the minor translations carried out were of an exploratory nature, to determine whether the publication was relevant to my researches. Even where the answer was no, the translated material was written up in Philat. Trans. format, to preserve the work carried out and make the information available to other researchers.

Some of the entries are referred to as a Translation Digest. These are translations of selected portions of a complete issue of a periodical devoted to perfins, or latterly to philatelic literature or bibliography. Generally, a Translation Digest includes a translation of all of the article titles together with complete translations of those articles which were of interest to me. Some of the earlier translations of individual articles from an issue of a philatelic literature periodical, which were originally published as individual translations, were subsequently incorporated into a Translation Digest of the whole issue.

From the earliest days, I endeavoured to ensure that the translations were available as widely as possible. Accordingly, copies were donated to various major international philatelic libraries. The following abbreviations, found with some of the earlier translations, were used to indicate which libraries had been sent copies:-

APRL	American Philatelic Research Library, Bellefonte, PA, USA
BL	British Library, London, UK
CCC	Collectors Club of Chicago, IL, USA
CCNY	Collectors Club, New York, NY, USA
FWPL	Friends of the Western Philatelic Library, Sunnyvale, CA, USA
NPS	National Philatelic Society, London, UK
RPSL	Royal Philatelic Society London, UK
WPHS	Western Postal History Society, Tucson, AZ, USA

In the fullness of time and as the list of libraries to which I sent copies grew, this seemingly minor task of dissemination became more of a chore than a labour of love. Inevitably, I fell behind in the task and a substantial backlog grew up such that I eventually gave up distributing the translations. When the FIP Literature Commission kindly agreed to host all of my unpublished works on their web site, I took the opportunity to have them upload this document and also copies of all of the translations that had been edited and typed up on computer. I still have a huge backlog of translated material awaiting processing so only just over a third of the translations have been uploaded at present (2011).

All of the translations have been made to further my own researches and not for publication, sale or any other commercial purpose. Users are urged to honour the spirit in which the translations have been made and disseminated and not infringe the copyright of the publishers of the original works.

INTRODUCTION

The translations listed in this document were produced on an ad hoc basis over some four decades, when I had the time, inclination and need for them. Some of the original-language material is vanishingly rare and took me many years to locate. In the early years, I used the services of my sister-in-law, Geraldine Birch, to type the translations up for me, the editing being carried out with the help of Tippex correcting fluid.

This bibliography was not begun until the late 1990s. By then, the translations had been dispersed throughout my library and one or two had even been lost. My policy of supplying copies to philatelic libraries paid off at this time but did nothing to reduce my embarrassment when I had to contact the American Philatelic Research library and ask for copies of my own translations.

The bibliography was compiled initially from the data I had to hand and accordingly, many of the earlier entries are incomplete and there are still some translations that I have been unable to locate in my own library in order to check the reference. As was so often the case in pre-computer days when everything had to be laboriously hand-written onto small cards, my early bibliographic work was concise rather than comprehensive. This is not surprising when one considers the forty plus years over which these translations have been compiled and the relative newness of computers.

It is the development of the personal computer which has revolutionised bibliographic works such as this and allowed the continual improvement and standardisation which typewriters denied. In 2006, I began to scan these early translations into my computer using optical character recognition software so that I could make them available in digital format on the FIP Literature Commission web site. There is a huge backlog of translations awaiting editing and although I have the will, even a short translation requires more than an hour to log and index on the computer and then check the final copy. Long translations have been known to take well in excess of 20 hours, mostly in editing the first draft translation, or worse still, an OCR version of a faint typescript.

AUTHOR INDEX AND BOOK TITLE INDEX

In order to facilitate searching the listing, I have compiled an Author Index. This lists all authors and where there is no author noted, the corporate author. Many introductions to library lists have been translated, mostly in order to determine the histories of the libraries. In view of their predominantly amateur status, most of these have very weak bibliographic control and show no author. Where known, I have listed the librarian as author.

In those instances where the author is only suspected, e.g. a journal editor, I have given their name in square brackets.

Publications to which no author can be ascribed have been listed in a Book Title Index.

PERIODICAL INDEX

A list of all translations of articles from periodicals are listed together in the periodical order. Where the name of the periodical has changed in its lifetime, I have used the latest name with a cross-reference to the earlier name.

The creation of this complete digital collection of translations is a labour of love since I could have easily extracted the information I required from the original, mostly-handwritten, documents. However, the urge not to lose the results of the many hours of effort put in by the translators, usually also as a labour of love, is the impetus behind my making them available on the FIP Literature Commission web site. This being the case, I trust that users will forgive the inevitable errors and inconsistencies that are bound to have occurred.

REFERENCES

1. Brian John Birch: Tracking down translations., ASLIB Proceedings, November 1979, Volume 31, Issue 11, pp.500-511.
2. Brian John Birch: The Perfin Society Library translations project., Perfin Society Bulletin, February 1984, Issue 209, pp.6-7; April, Issue 210, pp.8-9; June, Issue 211, pp.6-7; August, Issue 212, pp.4-5; October, Issue 213, pp.8-9 & December, Issue 214, pp.6-7.
3. Brian John Birch: Philatelic Translations Index., Philatelic Literature Review, 1987, Volume 36, Issue 4, pp.232-290.

ABBREVIATIONS

As a matter of principle, I have tried to avoid the use of abbreviations wherever possible. This has been done on two grounds: Firstly, as a one-time professional scientific researcher, I struggled valiantly with a myriad of abbreviations used in references to stand for the titles of periodicals, trying, often in vain, to understand their meaning and thereafter obtain the document referred to. It became evident to me that one man's obvious abbreviation was another man's total confusion, and this was in a field which science had attempted to control*¹. Secondly, with modern personal computers having almost unlimited storage capacity and speed, using numerous abbreviations in works such as I produce is, in my opinion, quite unnecessary. It would also seriously waste my time in continuously looking up those abbreviations not yet committed to memory. The surprisingly large number of exceptions to the above rule are listed below.

Ranks, titles and educational achievements that appear in front of a subject's name have been included in the entries wherever possible, in order to help differentiate between individuals of the same name. Abbreviations have been used here in order that long titles don't overwhelm the name and to differentiate between an honour or rank and the same word used as a name. On the Continent, particularly in Germany, it is normal to prefix a person's name with abbreviations for all of their educational achievements. This results in extreme cases such as Prof. Dr. Dr. Schmidt, for example, – for a medical Doctor with a PhD who is a Professor in a teaching hospital. As an expedient, I have adopted the English system of only recording the person's superior title which, in the above example, would be Prof. Schmidt.

Honours or Membership of important societies, generally denoted in the form of post-nominal initials, i.e. immediately following the subjects names, (such as Sir Ernest Hotson K.C.S.I., O.B.E., F.R.P.S.L.). These are generally only found in formal biographical entries, such as can be found in my volume Philatelic and Postal Bookplates and in material I have quoted. They can be denoted by the appropriate initials, either with or without the full stops, and will be found without the full stops in the Abbreviations list below.

Philatelic abbreviations which are in common use, often in the titles of periodicals, and are generally, therefore, self-evident even to non-English speakers; such as FDC, FIP, perf., TPO, wmk., etc. In spite of my considering them obvious, I have included them in the list of abbreviations for the sake of completeness*².

Company designations which are too long in their extended form to keep repeating. Since these are generally not well-known beyond their home country's own borders, I have taken the opportunity to add a basic explanation of their meaning.

Latin terms such as i.e.; etc.; e.g.; sic; and so forth, which I have found very useful in replacing whole phrases at times.

Common abbreviations such as p.; pp.; Dr.; Jr.; etc., which I use to avoid frequent repetition.

Symbols can occasionally be useful and these are given in their own list of meanings, preceding the list of abbreviations.

Names. Abbreviations or short versions of names are never used in my works but since they may be used by others, they are included in the List of Shortened, Abbreviated and Pet Names, which can be found in The Philatelic Bibliophile's Companion.

Shows. I have not provided explanations of the initials and acronyms use for stamp shows and exhibitions.

The other category of abbreviation that I have used widely is the United States Postal Service codes for the American States. In order not to make this present list of abbreviations overly long and difficult to use, I have appended these State abbreviations in their own list following the main list of abbreviations. Similarly, Canadian Territories' and Australian States' abbreviations have been added as stand alone lists.

As I began to add special features in my works, like document indexes in The Philatelic Bibliophile's Companion, and material quoted from others, such as the Bierman biographical material from the web in Biographies of Philatelists and Dealers, I found that they used additional abbreviations that I was forced to include in my list. Although I occasionally reverted rarer abbreviations back to their full text to avoid having to include an abbreviation for a single use, this undoubtedly lead me away from the basic tenants to which I was attempting to adhere. Nevertheless, and in spite of this substantial list of abbreviations, I have tried hard to minimise the number of abbreviations I use regularly.

Occasionally, I have felt the need to explain terms, particularly for users whose mother tongue is not English, which, although not abbreviations, have no other obvious place of refuge in this work. I have therefore used the abbreviation list to explain the English Sir, Latin ergo and German Graf, for example.

In order to prevent myself from using different abbreviations for the same word and to ensure consistency between my different works, I have used the same list of abbreviations in all of them, irrespective of whether any specific abbreviation is used therein.

*1 To those who would like to look into the problem of abbreviations further, I would recommend your reading James Negus: *Philatelic Literature., James Bendon, Limassol, Cyprus, 1991, pp.1-13; and particularly pp.49-51 & 207-208.

*2 Although these are not really within the purview of this Section, I have come across a list of French philatelic abbreviations that warrants a place in this work. Accordingly, I have noted it below:

W. F. Wright: French abbreviations., The Philatelic Magazine, March 1982, p.373.

➤ A concise list of abbreviations which are to be found in the French philatelic literature. Each entry is accompanied by the French equivalent and English translation.

LIST OF SYMBOLS

...	Used in material that is being quoted, to indicate that there was additional text which it has not been considered necessary to include.
&c.	& etcetera. Used in English as a way of indicating that other similar items could have been included.
~	Approximately or, when followed by a date, About.
A$	Australian Dollar. Alternatively, it can be designated by the international code AUD.
C$	Canadian Dollar. Alternatively, it can be designated by the international code CAD .

‰	Care of. (or in the care of) Used where someone is authorised to stand in for a person or organisation and receive material (such as mail or goods) on their behalf. Before the advent of word processors with their superscript and subscript capability, it was frequently found as c/o .
* Date	Date of birth.
† Date	Date of death.
$	Dollar. The currency used in the United States of America. Alternatively, it can be designated by US$ or the international code USD . Many other countries use their own dollar as their unit of currency, the value of which may differ greatly from that of the US dollar. In print, except in their own country, the dollar symbol is usually preceded by a country code (see A$ and C$ above).
≡	Equivalent. This is the international scientific symbol used to indicate that two items are interchangeable with each other.
"	inch or inches. The shortest imperial measure of length. I never use this abbreviation but have noticed it in some of the material I have quoted.
N ^o	Number. It is followed immediately by the numeral, without a space between them. It should not be used as a general abbreviation for the word number within text. It is often substituted by No. , particularly before the advent of computers with their superscript facility.
N ^{os}	Numbers. It is followed immediately by the numeral range, without a space between them. It should not be used as a general abbreviation for the word numbers within text. It is often substituted by Nos. , particularly before the advent of computers with their superscript facility.
#	Number(s). This is an American abbreviation. In general, I do not use this abbreviation but have noticed it in some of the material I have quoted. However, I have used it in the table of auction named sale pseudonyms, where I included sale numbers as an afterthought and space was at a premium.
£	Pound sterling. The currency currently used in the United Kingdom and in certain dependencies and colonies over the years.
®	Registered Trade Mark. This is an international symbol indicating that the word to which it is attached as a superscript suffix, has been officially recorded as denoting a specific product or entity.

/- Shilling(s). This symbol, preceded by a number, was formerly used throughout the Sterling currency area prior to decimalisation. The dash indicates no pence and is replaced by the appropriate number (not followed by the abbreviation d) when the amount includes pence. For example 2/6 means 2 shillings and 6 pence and could be equally shown as 2s 6d.

Note: Common currencies which are designated by letters alone will be found in the list of abbreviations.

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

	A
a. D.	außer Dienst. This is a German expression meaning Retired . It is generally found used after senior military titles.
AB	Aktiebolag. This is Swedish for Stock Company , the equivalent of the English Limited Liability Company . It is occasionally found in its extended form as Aktiebolaget , which just means The Stock Company .
Ad hoc	A Latin phrase meaning for this . It generally signifies a solution designed for a specific problem or task.
Adm.	Admiral.
AG	Aktiengesellschaft. This is German-speaking Swiss for Stock Corporation , the equivalent of the English Limited Liability Company .
Air Mar.	Air Marshall.
Air V.-M.	Air Vice-Marshal.
Ald.	Alderman. This is the English name for a member of a municipal legislative body such as a town or city council.
APS	American Philatelic Society.
APRL	American Philatelic Research Library.
Archd.	Archdeacon.
ARGE or ArGe	Arbeitsgemeinschaft. This is German for Working Group , which is roughly equivalent to the British Study Group .
A/S	Aktieselskap. This is the Danish for Stock Company , the equivalent of the English Limited Liability Company .
ASCII	American Standard Code for Information Interchange. It is generally used as an acronym and is pronounced askee . ASCII is a code for representing English characters as numbers, with each character assigned a number from 0 to 127. Most computers use ASCII codes to represent text, which makes it possible to transfer data from one computer to another.

B

Bart.	Baronet. A British hereditary honour which is not part of the peerage but entitles the holder to be called Sir .
BBC	British Broadcasting Corporation.
BEF	Belgian Franc(s). The currency which pre-dated the Euro in Belgium.
biog	biography. Used in brackets by the author (BJB) when producing indexes, to indicate that the reference to a person includes useful biographical data, although it may fall short of being a full biography.
BJB	Brian John Birch. Although my comments are always given in square brackets in order to distinguish them from the regular text, I occasionally use my initials as an indicator of my part in some action.
BNA	British North America.
Brig.	Brigadier.
Brig.-Gen.	Brigadier-General.
Bros.	Brothers. It is only used in the titles of companies in English-speaking countries.
BS	Bachelor of Science. This abbreviation is used in the USA.
Bt.	Baronet.
bv or BV	Besloten Vennootschap. This is the Dutch (and therefore Flemish) equivalent of the English Limited Liability Company . It may be found with or without a full stop after each letter.

C

c.	Sometimes found used incorrectly as an abbreviation for circa , in material I have quoted. See ca .
ca.	circa. This is the Latin for about .
Cab.	Caballero. A Spanish term originally meaning knight but now meaning gentleman of some rank .
Can.	Canon. From the Latin Canonicus , meaning an ecclesiastical person, being a member of a chapter or body of clerics living according to rule.
Capt.	Captain. This abbreviation may be equally used for a Captain in the army or of a ship.
Card.	Cardinal.
Cav.	Used in publications and merely transcribed by me. Thought to be short for Cavalier – possibly of Italian origin.
CBE	Commander of the Order of the British Empire. A British honour conferred for important services rendered to the Crown.

CD	Compact Disc or Compact Disk . A high density storage media based on a 12cm diameter reflective optical disc which can be written-to and read by a laser. CDs can hold up to 650 megabytes of data in digital form and many publications are available only in this format or in the newer and even higher capacity DVD. A pre-recorded CD is more-correctly called a CD-ROM – CD-Read Only Memory.
Cdr.	Commander.
Cdt.	Commandant.
Chev.	Chevalier.
CHF	The international abbreviation for the Swiss Franc.
Cia.	Compañía . This is Spanish for Company .
	or
	Companhia . This is Portuguese for Company .
Cie.	Compagnie . This is French for Company . The same abbreviation is used following the names of Dutch companies, with presumably the same meaning.
Cllr.	Councillor . This is the English name for a member of a legislative body (or council) that governs a city or municipality.
Co.	Company.
Col.	Colonel.
Com.	Commodore.
Crawford Catalogue	An abbreviation generally used to denote the catalogue of the philatelic section of the Earl of Crawford's Library. ([E. D. Bacon]: Bibliotheca Lindesiana Vol. VII: A Bibliography of the Writings General Special and Periodical Forming the Literature of Philately. , Aberdeen University Press, Aberdeen, UK, 1911, xi+[462]pp. {Reprinted as: [E. D. Bacon]: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, K.T. , The Philatelic Literature Society, London, UK, 1911, x+[462]pp. A supplement was published as:- E. D. Bacon : Supplement to the Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, K.T. , The Philatelic Literature Society, London, UK, 1926, v+[68]pp. An addenda was published as:- Sir Edward D. Bacon : Addenda to the "Supplement to the Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, K.T." , Supplement to The London Philatelist, March 1938, 8 pp.} {Volume VII, complete with the Supplement and Addenda, was reprinted as: [E. D. Bacon]: Catalogue of the Crawford Library of Philatelic Literature at the British Library. , The Printer's Stone, Fishkill, NY, USA, 1991, xii+[462]+v+68+8pp.})

Ct.	Count. An intermediate rank of nobility on the Continent. Generally equivalent to the English Earl, the wife of which is called a Countess, there being no female equivalent of an Earl in English nobility.
D
d.	penny (or pence). Used in the Sterling currency area as an abbreviation for the penny or its plural, pence , prior to the conversion of the currency to the decimal system. It may be found with or without the full stop. Following decimalisation, the abbreviation for the penny was changed to p .
D.	Don. This is a Spanish courtesy title given to gentlemen and members of the nobility. Although its use is not common nowadays, it can still be found in older publications.
D.Litt. D^a D^a. or D^a	Doctor of Letters. See under Litt.D. Doña. This is a Spanish courtesy title given to ladies and female members of the nobility. Although its use is not common nowadays, it can still be found in older and very formal publications.
DFC	Distinguished Flying Cross. A British military medal awarded for exemplary gallantry during active operations against the enemy in the air.
DM	Deutschmark(s). The currency which pre-dated the Euro in Germany.
Doc.	Doctor. This is really a colloquial or familiar shortening of the title rather than a formal abbreviation.
Dr.	Doctor. This title can equally be used by a Doctor of medicine, anyone having the educational award of Doctor of Philosophy (PhD), or the Degree of Doctor of Divinity (DD) and certain other academic awards. In Germany, for example, they attempt to avoid this problem by using the abbreviation Dr. med. Whilst, for the sake of clarity, I have tried to eliminate all non-medical titles since they are not universally used, I have no doubt that some will remain. Very occasionally, I have felt obliged to leave the title in place even though I was aware that the persons were not a medical doctors, simply because they were universally known by this title. e.g. Dr. Viner , who had a PhD.
Dr. Ing.	Doctor of Engineering. See the explanation under Ing. This is often used in Europe as a title.
DVD	Digital Versatile Disc but can often be found called a Digital Video Disc . A new type of CD that holds a minimum of 4.7 gigabytes and was developed with enough capacity to hold a full-length film. A pre-recorded DVD is more-correctly called a DVD-ROM (-Read only memory).

	E
e.g.	exempli gratia. This is a Latin expression meaning for the sake of example .
e.K.	Eigenkapital. This is German for self-financed and indicates that it is a one-man business.
Eng.	Engineer.
Eng.-Capt.	Engineer Captain.
ergo	The Latin term for therefore . It is widely used in English to demonstrate a link between two things or events and replaces words and phrases like hence, consequently, accordingly, for that reason , etc. Although it is not an abbreviation, it is included here for convenience.
et al.	et alia. This is a Latin expression meaning and the others . Naturally, the Latin expression would change in accordance with the gender of the others in question: et alia for neutral, et alii for masculine and et aliae for feminine things, all of which use the same abbreviation.
et seq.	et sequentes. This is a Latin expression meaning and the following . It is used to shorten references covering numerous sequential issues of a periodical.
etc.	etcetera. This is a Latin term meaning and so on or and so forth .

	F
F	Franc(s). The currency which pre-dated the Euro in France.
f.	folio. This is a Latin term meaning on the (next) page . In use, f. has no space between it and the preceding number. See also ff.
Fa.	Firma. This is a German term meaning Firm or Company . It is generally used immediately before the name of the company.
FDC	First Day Cover.
fecit	Created or executed. It is used after the name of the artist or craftsman who produced the work of art or piece of craftsmanship.
ff.	folio. This is a Latin term meaning on the (next) page . It is used to refer to the next page or pages in a citation and as such is a synonym of et seq. However, its usage has been extended to include next sections, next paragraphs, etc. and even subsequent issues of a periodical run or volumes (years) of a series still continuing. In use, ff. has no space between it and the preceding number. f. is generally used to indicate a single page, etc.

	or issue. I never use either of these abbreviations but have noticed them in some of the material I have quoted and translated.
FIP	Fédération Internationale de Philatélie. This is the French name by which the International Federation of Philately is generally known.
Fleet-Surg.	Fleet-Surgeon. A senior medical rank in the British Navy from 1875 to 1918.
FLS	Fellow of the Linnean Society. Founded in 1788 and taking its name from the Swedish naturalist Carolus Linnaeus , it is the world's premier society for the study and dissemination of taxonomy and natural history. Important scientists who are granted the honour of Fellowship are allowed to use the letters FLS after their name.
Flt.-Lt.	Flight Lieutenant.
Fr.	Father. This is a familiar way of referring to some ordained clergy. The German equivalent is Pfarrer .
“Franks”	An abbreviation generally used to denote the catalogue of the Franks collection of bookplates. (E. R. J. Gambier Howe : Catalogue of British and American Book Plates Bequeathed to the Trustees of the British Museum by Sir Augustus Woolaston Franks, K.C.B., F.R.S., P.S.A., Litt.D. , 3 Volumes, British Museum, London, UK, 1903-1904.)
Frhr.	Freiherr. This is a German title roughly equivalent to the English Baron . Before 1919 it preceded the name and is abbreviated in this document. After 1919, it tended to be placed within the name, immediately before the family name. In those cases, it is considered part of the name and given in full.
FRS	Fellow of the Royal Society. Founded in 1660, the Royal Society of London for Improving Natural Knowledge , known simply as the Royal Society , is probably the oldest scientific society in the world. Important scientists who are granted the honour of Fellowship are allowed to use the letters FRS after their name.
ft.	foot or feet. An imperial measure equal to 12 inches or 305mm.
FZS	Fellow of the Zoological Society of London. Founded in 1826 to house a zoological collection and be devoted to the worldwide conservation of animals and their habitats, it is responsible for London Zoo and Whipsnade Zoo. Important scientists who are granted the honour of Fellowship are allowed to use the letters FZS after their name.

G

GCIE	Knight Grand Commander of the Indian Empire. This was the highest class of The Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire , which was created in 1877 to reward British and native officials who served with distinction in India.
GCSI	Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India. This was the highest class of The Most Exalted Order of the Star of India , which was founded in 1861 to honour Indian Princes and Chiefs, as well as British officers who had served with distinction in India.
Gen.	General.
GM	George Medal. A British honour awarded to civilians for acts of great bravery. It is also awarded to military personnel where military honours would not normally be granted, such as acts of great bravery not in presence of the enemy.
GmbH	Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung. This is the German equivalent of Limited Liability Company . Such companies are incorporated, but their shares are not publicly traded.
GmbH & Co. KG	This is an organisation like a KG , but the entity with unlimited liability is a GmbH instead of a person. (See also KG)
GPO	General Post Office. The original name for the British Post Office.
Gr. Capt.	Group Captain.
Graf	A German title of nobility, equivalent to Earl in English. Today, it is considered to be part of the person's name.

H

HM	His Majesty's or Her Majesty's. Prefix used by many British Government organisations whose activities are carried out in the name of the Monarch.
Hnos.	Hermanos. Spanish abbreviation for Brothers . Generally found in the names of firms and equivalent to the English Bros .
Hptm.	Hauptmann. A German word usually translated as Captain when it is used as an officer's rank in the German, Austrian and Swiss armies. It also has the dated meaning of Head man .
HRH	His Royal Highness or Her Royal Highness. A style of address reserved for certain members of the British Royal Family.

I

i.e.	id est. This is Latin expression meaning that is or in other words .
ibid.	ibidem. This is a Latin term meaning in the same place . It is used in references to refer to the last work cited, to save re-typing the same details again.
illus	illustration. Used in brackets by the author (BJB) when producing indexes, to indicate that the reference is to a person or periodical in an illustration.
imperf.	imperforate. Any stamp which is found without perforations or any other means to facilitate its separation from the printed sheet. I do not use this abbreviation but have noticed it in some of the material I have quoted.
Inc.	Incorporated. This is the American equivalent of Limited Liability Company .
infra	Latin for below . It is generally used in text to call readers' attention to something that follows in the text. Sometimes preceded by vide "see". This is not a term that I use but I have noted it used by others, whose work I have quoted.
Ing.	This is the general abbreviation for professional engineer in Continental Europe. It derives from the term for engineer in the appropriate language, e.g. Ingénieur (France) or Ingenieur (Germany). This abbreviation is widely used in Europe as a title. It is often preceded by an indication of the level attained, such as Dipl. or Dr. , which I have tended to leave out in order to avoid confusion.

J

Jhr.	Jonkheer. (Belgium and Netherlands) It is an honorific title used nowadays to indicate that someone does belong to the nobility, but does not possess a title.
Jr.	Junior. Used to differentiate between a son and father who both carry the same names. There is normally a comma between the family name and Jr. I have chosen to miss this out in all cases in order not to cause confusion with the comma used after the family name when the family name provides the alphabetical order.

K

Kan.	Kanonikus. From the Latin Canonicus , meaning an ecclesiastical person, being a member of a chapter or body of clerics living according to rule.
-------------	--

KCB	Knight Commander of the Bath. This is the fourth highest British order of Chivalry and is usually awarded to senior Military Officers and Civil Servants for services rendered to the Country.
KCSI	Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India. This is the senior order of chivalry associated with the Empire of India and was given for conspicuous service in India.
KCVO	Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order. This is the second highest class of the Royal Victorian Order , membership of which is conferred on those who have performed personal service for the sovereign.
KG	Kommanditgesellschaft. This is a German expression meaning a partnership under a legal name . There must be two partners, at least one of limited liability and at least one of unlimited liability.
Kgl. Hoheit	Königliche Hoheit. This is a German expression meaning Royal Highness .

L

Litt.D.	Doctor of Letters. This is a university academic degree above the Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) and is awarded in a number of countries, particularly former British Colonies. The abbreviation is derived from the Latin Litterarum doctor and can also be denoted by D.Litt. The degree is awarded to candidates whose record of published work and research shows long, conspicuous ability and originality which constitutes a distinguished and sustained achievement.
Litt. dim.	Letters dimissory. A document granted by a bishop to an individual, born or resident in his diocese, to enable him to be ordained by another bishop, the granting bishop having already established that the individual was sufficiently qualified to be ordained. Letters dimissory are also used to provide a testimonial by the bishop on behalf of a clergyman who was leaving his diocese to seek employment elsewhere. This is not an abbreviation that I use but I have noted it used by others, whose work I have quoted.
LL.B.	Batchelor of Laws. An undergraduate degree in Law, originating in England.
LLC	Limited Liability Company. A type of American company. In the United States, Corporations typically pay taxes, then distribute the profits via dividends, on which the recipients must also pay taxes. An LLC allows for pass through taxation , which means that the profit a company makes goes directly to the owners on their tax forms, even if the profits were not actually distributed. Therefore, the profits are only taxed once.

LLD	Doctor of Laws. An academic degree in Law. The abbreviation derives from the Latin Legum Doctor . Plural abbreviations in Latin are formed by doubling the letter, hence the double L.
Lt.	Lieutenant.
Lt.-Cdr.	Lieutenant-Commander.
Lt.-Col.	Lieutenant-Colonel.
Ltd.	Limited. This is the English short form of Limited Liability Company . It is used in many countries, notably former British colonies.
LVO	Lieutenant of the Royal Victorian Order. A British honour given for personal service to the Sovereign, any members of their family, or any of their Viceroy.

M

M.	Messieur. French equivalent to the English Mr. It is frequently found followed by the person's family name and can easily be mistaken for the initial of his forename.
M.D.	Doctor of Medicine. From the Latin Medicinae Doctor meaning Doctor of Medicine. It is sometimes written today as MD , i.e. without the period after each letter.
Maj.	Major.
Maj. Gen.	Major General.
MBE	Member of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire. An honour given to those who have performed notable service for, or on behalf of, the United Kingdom
Mlle.	Mademoiselle. French equivalent to the English Miss.
MM.	Messieurs. French equivalent to the English Messrs.
Mme. or M^{me}	Madame. French equivalent to the English Mrs
MP	Member of Parliament. Generally relates to the UK only.

N

n.d.	no date. This means that the publication carries no indication as to when it was published. Where the date can be determined from the text, it is given in square brackets.
n.p.	no place. This means that the publication carries no indication as to where it was published.
n.pp.	no pagination. This means that the publication carries no printed page numbers. Where a count has been done, the number of pages, or the page number, is given in square brackets.

n/a not applicable.

Nachf.

Nachfolger. German for Successor. This term is used at the end of company names to indicate that the present company has succeeded the previous company of the same name.

nee

This is the English equivalent of the French née, meaning a woman's previous or family name before marriage. Also known as her maiden name. The French version with an accent, is sometimes found used incorrectly in English writings I have quoted.

N^o or No.

Abbreviation for Number when followed immediately by the numeral, without a space between them. It should not be used as a general abbreviation for the word number in text. No. was generally used before the advent of computers with their superscript facility.

N^{os} or Nos.

Abbreviation for Numbers when followed immediately by the numeral range, without a space between them. It should not be used as a general abbreviation for the word numbers in text. Nos. was generally used before the advent of computers with their superscript facility.

O

OBE

Officer of the Order of the British Empire. This is an order of chivalry to recognise those who made a significant and valuable contribution to the British Nation.

Oblt.

Oberleutnant. A German military rank used by all three of the country's services. It is translated as Senior Lieutenant and is roughly equivalent to First Lieutenant in the British Army.

OCR

Optical character recognition. Software that allows scanned images of printed text to be recognised and made available in word processing software so that it can be edited on computer.

op. cit.

opus citatum. This is a Latin expression meaning that the work has been cited and thus the reader can find the full citation elsewhere. It is used to avoid providing a complete citation of a work in several places. It is normally found following the name of the author whose work is being cited. This is not a term that I use but I have noted it used by others, whose work I have quoted.

OSS

Office of Strategic Services. This was a United States intelligence agency formed during World War II to coordinate espionage activities behind enemy lines for the United States Armed Forces. It was a predecessor of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA).

Oy	Osaakeyhtiö. This is Finnish equivalent of Limited Company .
OYJ	Julkinen osakeyhtiö. This is used in Finland to denote a publicly traded company with the owners having limited liability. It is equivalent to the UK's plc .

P

p.	page number , if followed by a number.
	or
	page , if preceded by the number 1.
P.O. or P. O.	Post Office. This abbreviation is primarily found in addresses involving a Post Office Box.
pdf	portable document format. It was developed by Adobe Systems to make it possible to send formatted documents and have them appear on the recipient's computer as they were intended. In order to view a pdf file (i.e. with the extension .pdf), one needs Adobe Reader, a free application distributed by Adobe Systems.
per se	This is not an abbreviation. It is a Latin phrase meaning in itself .
perf.	perforated. Any stamp which is found with perforations to facilitate its separation from the printed sheet. I do not use this abbreviation but have noticed it in some of the material I have quoted.
photo	photograph. Used in brackets by the author (BJB) when producing indexes, to indicate that the reference is to a photograph containing a picture of the person named.
plc	Public limited company. This is used in the UK to denote a publicly traded company with the owners having limited liability. A plc must have at least £50,000 in authorized capital. It is also used in Eire and some other countries.
pp.	pages.
Prof.	Professor.
PSA	President of the Society of Antiquaries. Presidents are allowed to use these post-nominal letters during their term of office. Former Presidents are accorded the post-nominal letters Hon.-VPSA (Honorary Vice-President).
pt.	point. The usual unit for measuring font size on a printed page. Nowadays, the traditional point has been supplanted by the desktop publishing point (also called the PostScript point) which was rounded to 72 points to the inch (= 0.3527 mm). In either system, there are 12 points to the pica. The general text in my works is 12 pt., with headings in 16 pt. or 14 pt. I also use 10 pt. occasionally and 8 pt. for the reverse of the title page, when there is insufficient space to use any other font size and still have all of the text on a single page. (BJB)

Sixteen point: 16 pt.: Boldface

Fourteen point: 14 pt.: Boldface

Twelve point: 12 pt.: Boldface

Ten point: 10 pt.: Boldface

Eight point: 8 pt.: Boldface

Pte.	Private. This is used in Singapore to designate a Private Company , i.e. the shares are held by an individual or small group and are not listed on a stock exchange.
Pty.	Proprietary. This is used in Australia, Singapore and South Africa is the equivalent of Limited Company .

Q

q.v.	quid videt. This is a Latin expression meaning which see . It is used to indicate that more information can be found under the heading that precedes the abbreviation.
-------------	--

R

R. Adm.	Rear Admiral.
RAAF	Royal Australian Air Force.
RAF	Royal Air Force.
Raj.	Rajah. A title conferred on a chief or ruler in India and the East Indies
Retd.	Retired.
Rev.	Reverend.
RN	Royal Navy. This abbreviation is used after a person's name, generally to indicate the relevant branch of the services, where their rank is common to two or more of the services. For Example, the rank of Captain is common to the Army, Navy and Merchant Marine.
RPSL	Royal Philatelic Society London. For many years the Society's name was shown as Royal Philatelic Society, London but the comma was dropped recently.
Rt. Hon.	Right Honourable. An honorific prefix that is traditionally applied to certain people in the United Kingdom and many other English-speaking former colonies, generally senior politicians and some nobles.

S

s.	shilling(s). Used prior to decimalisation, with or without the full stop, in the Sterling currency area as an abbreviation for the shilling. Shillings could also be denoted by adding the symbol /- (or incorrectly /=) after the number of shillings. See the example under Symbols above.
SA	Societe Anónima. This is the Portuguese and Mexican equivalent to Limited Liability Company .
SA	Société Anonyme. This is the Belgian equivalent to Limited Liability Company . This abbreviation is also used in Switzerland, presumably with the same meaning
Sen.	Senator. A politician who is a member of the Senate. Widely used as a title, especially in the United States of America.
sic	sicut. This is a Latin term meaning thus or just as that . In writing, it is placed within square brackets and usually italicized [sic] to indicate that an incorrect or unusual spelling, phrase, punctuation, or other preceding quoted material, has been reproduced verbatim from the original and is not a transcription error.
Sgt. Maj. Sir	Sergeant Major. A title of respect used before the name of knight or baronet
SpA	Società per Azioni. This is an Italian Joint Stock Company, where the share capital is divided into a number of shares. It can be found with and without full stops after the letters.
Squad. Ldr. Sr.	Squadron Leader. Senior. Used to differentiate between a son and father who both carry the same names. There is often a comma between the family name and Sr. I have chosen to miss this out in all cases in order not to cause confusion with the comma used after the family name, when the family name provides the alphabetical order.
srl	Società a Responsabilità Limitata. This is the Italian equivalent of Limited Liability Company .
Sub.-Lt. supra	Sub.-Lieutenant. Latin for above . It is generally used in text to call readers' attention to something mentioned previously in the text. Sometimes preceded by vide "see". This is not a term that I use but I have noted it used by others, whose work I have quoted.
Surg. Surg.-Capt. Surg.-Gen.	Surgeon. Surgeon-Captain. Surgeon-General.

T

TPO Travelling Post Office.

U

UPU Universal Postal Union = Union Postal Universal.

USB Universal Serial Bus. A standard cable connection interface port on personal computers and similar electronic devices. USB ports allow stand-alone electronic devices to be connected via cables to a computer (or to each other) and can also supply electric power through the cable to devices without their own power source.

V

V.-Adm. Vice-Admiral.

V.-Rev. Very Reverend. A title of respect for various ecclesiastical officials

VAT Value Added Tax

Vcte. Viscount (English) or Vicomte. (French)

Ve or Vve Veuve. French for widow. It is found in the names of firms where the widow has continued the business of her late husband. The Berger-Levrault publishing company of Strasbourg being the relevant example in philately. These abbreviations are sometimes found as V^e and V^{ve} respectively.

W

W.-Cdr. Wing-Commander.

wmk. watermark. A faint design impressed in some paper during manufacture, that is visible when held against the light. It was originally intended to identify the paper maker but in stamps was a security measure.

WO Warrant Officer. A military rank between a non-commissioned officer and a commissioned officer.

X

Y

Z

ABBREVIATIONS FOR AMERICAN STATES
& POSSESSIONS
(UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE)

AL	Alabama
AK	Alaska
AS	American Samoa
AR	Arkansas
AZ	Arizona
CA	California
CO	Colorado
CT	Connecticut
DC	District of Columbia
DE	Delaware
FL	Florida
FM	Federated States of Micronesia
GA	Georgia
GU	Guam
HI	Hawaii
IA	Iowa
ID	Idaho
IL	Illinois
IN	Indiana
KS	Kansas
KY	Kentucky
LA	Louisiana
MA	Massachusetts
MD	Maryland
ME	Maine
MH	Marshall Islands
MI	Michigan
MN	Minnesota
MO	Missouri
MP	Northern Mariana Islands
MS	Mississippi
MT	Montana

NC	North Carolina
ND	North Dakota
NE	Nebraska
NH	New Hampshire
NJ	New Jersey
NM	New Mexico
NV	Nevada
NY	New York
OH	Ohio
OK	Oklahoma
OR	Oregon
PA	Pennsylvania
PR	Puerto Rico
PW	Palau
RI	Rhode Island
SC	South Carolina
SD	South Dakota
TN	Tennessee
TX	Texas
UT	Utah
VA	Virginia
VI	Virgin Islands
VT	Vermont
WA	Washington
WV	West Virginia
WI	Wisconsin
WY	Wyoming

ABBREVIATIONS FOR AUSTRALIAN STATES
& TERRITORIES

ACT	Australian Capital Territory
NSW	New South Wales
NT	Northern Territory
QLD	Queensland
SA	South Australia
TAS	Tasmania
VIC	Victoria
WA	Western Australia

ABBREVIATIONS FOR CANADIAN PROVINCES
& TERRITORIES

Alta.	Alberta
B.C.	British Columbia
Man.	Manitoba
N.B.	New Brunswick
Nfld.	Newfoundland & Labrador
N.S.	Nova Scotia
NV	Nunavut
N.W.T.	North West Territories
Ont.	Ontario
P.E.I.	Prince Edward Island
Que.	Quebec
Sask.	Saskatchewan
Y.T.	Yukon

THE LIST OF TRANSLATIONS

The early translations were typed up in the 1970s, prior to the availability of personal computers. These are slowly being digitised and re-edited onto computer. Since these were translated on an ad hoc basis as required, when I began to look at the translations on a more-professional basis I realised that some of the early bits and pieces should have really been part of a whole periodical or book that I had translated subsequently. Accordingly, these were incorporated into the later translations with the earlier versions being moved to their proper places. This transition is noted in the affected entries.

Most of the recent translations were transcribed directly onto a computer and were becoming available on the FIP Literature Commission web site once they had been edited. However, I sometimes made additions and corrections to older translations but never updated the copies on the website.

In 2014, a decision was taken to incorporate all of the translations into this living document so that occasional, ad hoc updates would not be lost to users. The completed translations from the FIP Literature Commission web site were added to this document over the Summer of 2014. The newer translations were to be added as time allowed. However, at the beginning of 2018, around the time of my 69th birthday, I began to doubt that I had the time left to edit all of the remaining translations and make them fit to incorporate into this document. Accordingly, I added all of the remaining translations, even those in a relatively unfinished state, in the knowledge that anyone in need would be able to make sense of them. Once this is completed I will continue the slog of turning them all into finished documents.

Whilst bringing the translations in this document up to the required standard, every one was re-read and corrected. I did not bother to add a note to this effect to the affected translations.

001 Dr. R. Joany

Philatelic and Postal Glossary.

[Glossaire Philatélique et Postal.]

Etude No. 207, Le Monde des Philatélistes, Paris, France, n.d. [1976], 24pp.

{Originally published as: Dr. R. Joany: Glossaire Philatélique et Postal., Le Monde des Philatélistes, May 1975, Issue 276, p.47; June, Issue 277, p.21; July/August, Issue 278, p.18; September, Issue 279, p.27; October, Issue 280, p.27; November, Issue 281, p.27; December, Issue 282, p.27; January 1976, Issue 283, p.27; February, Issue 284, p.27; March, Issue 285, p.27; April, Issue 286, p.27; May, Issue 287, p.31; June, Issue 288, p.41; July/August, Issue 289, p.30; September, Issue 290, p.23 & October, Issue 291, p.56.}

002 H. Fraenkel

Chronological Table of German Philatelic Periodicals 1863-1893.

[Chronologische Tabelle der Deutschen Philatelistischen Zeitschriften 1863-1893.]

H. Fraenkel, Berlin, Germany, 1894, n.pp. [8pp. + 1p. corrections.]

{According to Carl Beck two different editions are known but he does not give any details: See Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1922, Volume 2, Issue 1, p.2.}

003 Max Ton

Handbook of German Philatelic Literature.

[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur.]

2nd Edition, Verlag "Die Post", Kehl (Baden), Germany, 1924, 72pp. (Although it is evidently incomplete - to Senf, Gebrüder only - it is believed to be all that was published as it was serialised in Die Post.)

{The folder includes a 16-page extract, evidently produced and distributed as a prospectus as well as a copy letter to the publisher by L. A. J. B[aker] of Harris Publications, London, asking about its price and availability. Given to me by Jim Negus who received it from Tom Morgan.}

➤ Translation of the Introduction and Abbreviations only, pp.3-5.

004 Rud. Krasemann

Bibliography of the most Important Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries.

[Bibliographie der Wichtigsten Spezialwerke über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder.]

Sveriges Filatelist-Förening, Stockholm, Sweden, 1907, 45+iiipp.

{Originally published in Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift in 1907. See Philat. Trans. 337.}

{A second, revised edition was published serially in Der Deutsche Philatelist in 1908 and issued as a pamphlet for private circulation by Der Deutsche Philatelist, Hanover, Germany, 1908. See Philat Trans 406.}

005 W. Grallert & W. Grushke

Lexicon of Philately.

[Lexikon der Philatelie.]

Werner Hornemann, Bonn, Germany, 1971, pp. 1-10 & 472-486.

➤ Translation of the Forward, Abbreviations, Directions for use, odd pages of interest to me and the Appendix; pp.1-10, 234, (see below) & 472-486.

p.107	Durchlochung
p.116	Einlochung
p.147	Firmenlochung;	Firmenumschrift
p.300	Poliziedienstmark;	POL-Lochung

006 Otto Raupp

Catalogue of the Philatelistischen Landesverband's Library, Berlin: Part II Journals.

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Landesverbands – Bibliothek, Berlin: Teil II Zeitschriften.]

Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine, Berlin, Germany, 1957, 89pp.

➤ Translation of the Contents, Foreword and Rules only, pp.2-3 & 89.

007 B. T. K. Smith

Table of Contents of the Journal Le Timbre-Poste Published in Brussels by J.-B. Moens (February 1863 - December 1900).

[Table des Matières de la Revue Le Timbre-Poste Editée a Bruxelles par J.-B. Moens (Février 1863 - Décembre 1900).]

Editions du "Philatéliste Belge", Brussels, Belgium, 1926, 36pp.

➤ Translation of the Foreword and Preface only, pp.5-7.

008 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Book List Volume 1. General, Postal History and Summary; Old Germany; Germany

[Bücherverzeichnis Band 1. Allgemeines, Postgeschichtliches und Zusammenfassendes; Altdeutschland; Deutschland]

Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg, Germany, n.d. [1979], 121pp.?

- Translation of the Contents table only, pp.[iii-iv].
- Originally included Volume 2, which was separated out and became Philat. Trans. 396.

009 Chr. Otto Muller

Aim and purpose of Literatur Nachrichten.

[Zweck und Aufgabe der LN.]

Literatur Nachrichten, January 1951, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.1-3.

- Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 025.

010 Dr. Hans Deinhardt

50 years of Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern (1925 to 1974).

[50 jahre Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern (1925 bis 1974).]

Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern, 1974, pp.?

- Translation of the Foreword only, pp.183-184.

011 Mario de Sanctis

End of the road.

[Fim da jornada.]

Boletim da Sociedade Philatelica Paulista, August 1940, Whole number 25, n.pp. ?

- Translation of the introductory text only, [pp.2-4].

012 Fritz Gaedicke

Foreword.

[Vorwort.]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Issue 62, p.1.

- Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

013 Fritz Gaedicke

Report of the Head of Section B for the Freiburg meeting.

[Bericht des leiterers der Bundesstelle B auf dem bundestag in Freiburg.]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Issue 62, p.2.

- Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

014 Report of the Working Party on the 1972 Freiburg meeting.

[Bericht des Arbeitskreis von Bundestag 1972 in Freiburg.]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Issue 62, pp.2-4.

- Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

015 Philatelic Libraries.

[Philatelistische Bibliotheken.]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Issue 62, pp.30-31.

- Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

016 Paul S. Ulrich [& Frank Heidtmann]

Where do I Find Philatelic Information?

[Wie Finde Ich Philatelistische Informationen?]

Orientierungshilfen Volume 6; Veröffentlichungen des Instituts für Bibliothekausbildung der Freien Universität Berlin Volume 16, Berlin Verlag, 1978, Berlin, Germany, 140pp.

017 C. Michaelis

- Contribution to our knowledge of German philatelic periodicals.*
 [Beiträge zur Kenntnis der Deutschen Philatelistischen Zeitschriften.]
 Literatur Nachrichten, September 1951, Whole number 4/5, pp.2-4.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 147.
- 018 The words of great men on philately.
 [Worte grosser Männer über die Philatelie.]
 Literatur Nachrichten, January/April, 1956, Whole number 25, p.4.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 164.
- 019 Introduction to the jubilee number (25) of Literatur Nachrichten.
 [Geleitworte zur Jubiläumsnummer (25) der Literatur Nachrichten.]
 Literatur Nachrichten, January/April 1956, Whole number 25, p.4.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 164.
- 020 [Foreword.]
 Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur - Rundbrief, March 1957, Issue 2, p.1.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 305.
- 021 Robert Höhn
Foreword.
 [Vorwort.]
 Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.1-2.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.
- 022 Robert Höhn
Annual report of the Federal Literature Group, 1978/79.
 Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.12-13.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.
- 023 O. Gleixner
German philatelic libraries.
 [Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg e.V. – Philatelistische Bibliothek München.]
 Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.490-495.
 ➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.
- 024 F. P. Renaut d'Oultre-Seille
Bibliographic Index of the World's Philatelic Press.
 [Répertoire Bibliographique de la Presse Philatélique Mondiale.]
 1st Semester 1929, Giulio Tedeschi for the Fédération Internationale de la Presse Philatélique, Turin, Italy, 1930, 47pp.
- 025 Translation Digest.
 Literatur Nachrichten, January 1951, Volume 1, Issue 1.
 ➤ Incorporates Philat. Trans. 009.
- 026 Translation Digest.
 Literatur Nachrichten, March 1951, Issue 2.
- 027 Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur
Symbols and Abbreviations for Philatelic Periodicals.
 [Verzeichnis und Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften.]

Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, Duisburg, Germany, 1959, pp.26
 {There was an earlier, undated edition of this pamphlet consisting of only 10 pages: Literatur-Abkürzungen: Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften. The introduction on page 1 of the earlier edition was essentially the same as in the extended version, the order of the paragraphs being slightly changed. Some years after I had the introduction to the enlarged edition translated, I found a translation of the introduction to the earlier edition in the files that came to me from James Negus. For completion, Jim's translation is given after mine.}

➤ Translation of the introductory text only, p.[2]

➤ Jim Negus' translation of the introductory text only, p.1

028 L. F. Thomen

Philatelic magazines of the Dominican Republic.

[Revistas filatélicas de la República Dominicana.]

Boletín del Archivo General de la Nación, 1956, Whole number 90, pp.256-259 & plate.

{Reprinted as a pamphlet: Luis F. Thomen: Revistas Filatélicas de la República Dominicana., Editora Montalvo, Ciudad Trujillo, Dominica, 1956, 6pp.}

029 R. Leroy

Bibliography of Philately in Belgium.

[Bibliografie van de Filatelie in België = Bibliographie de la Philatélie en Belgique]

Robert Leroy, Ostende, Belgium, 1973, 256pp.

➤ Introduction only, pp.7-8.

030 Translation Digest.

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften, November 1948, Volume 1, Issue 2.

031 Translation Digest.

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften, December 1948, Volume 1, Issue 3.

032 C. Schmitt diel

Periodical review.

[Zeitschriftenschau.]

Philatelistische Literatur, January 1934, Volume 3, Issue 1, pp.7-9.

➤ Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 044.

033 Translation Digest.

Philatelistischer Briefdienst über Briefmarken-Zeitungen, 1949, Volume 2, Issue 1, Whole number 4.

034 Translation Digest.

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften, February 1949 Volume 2, [Issue 2], Whole number 5. [Also found as: Philatelistischer Briefdienst über Briefmarken-Zeitungen.]

035 Translation Digest.

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, January 1950, Volume 3, Issue 1, [Whole number 6].

036 A. van der Flier

The history of the Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie.
 [De gescheidenis van het Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie]
 Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie, July/August 1972, Volume 49, pp.362-374.

037 Albert Gottschalk

German philatelic literature 1894/97.
 [Die Deutsche philatelistische litteratur 1894/97.]
 in: Festschrift zur Feier des Zehnjährigen Bestehens des Berliner Philatelisten-Club., Berliner Philatelisten-Club, Berlin, Germany, 1898, pp.100-118.
 {May also have been available separately as an offprint or reprint.}

038 S. Babintsev

Philatelic Bibliography: A Guide to Basic Literature (Books and Periodicals) on Postal History, Postage Stamps and Philately, Published in the Russian Language over 125 Years: 1843-1968.
 [Filatelisticheskaya Bibliografiya: Ukazatel' osnovnoi literatury (knig i dzhurnal'nykh statei) po istorii pochty, znakov pochtovoi oplaty i filatelii, opublikovannykh na Russkom yazke za 125 let (1843-1968)]
 Izdatel'stvo Suyas', Moscow, Russia, 127pp.
 ➤ Translation of the Introduction and Contents only, pp.3-5 & 125-127.

039 E. Gainsborg

A French opinion [on the desirability of a philatelic index].
 Ewen's Weekly Stamp News, 6th August 1904, Volume 13, Whole number 254, p.754.

040 H. Leutwyler

The Swiss Hotel Post and Hotel Telegraph and Telephone Service in the 19th Century.
 [Title in original language.]
 2nd edition, H. Leutwyler, Berne, Switzerland, 1962, 31pp.

041 F. Billig

Mondial.
 [Mondial.]
 Fritz Billig, Vienna, Austria, 1936/37.
 {Issued in Parts according to language and subject.}
 ➤ Translation of the Foreword, Introduction and Contents only, p.Id, IId &? {I have lost the original Collectors Club Contents page}.

042 Otto Rommel

Philatelic literature of the year 1894.
 [Die philatelistische literatur des jahres 1894.]
 Der Philatelist, January 1895, Volume 16, Issue 1, pp.19-23; February, Issue 2, pp.59-63 & March, Issue 3, pp.100-104.
 ➤ Translation of the introductory text only, pp.19-20.

043 Victor Suppantshitsch

Bibliography and Reference Book on all German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the End of 1891 Including an Outline of the History of Philately with Special Reference to Germany and a Short History of German Philatelic Literature.
 [Bibliographie zugleich Nachschlagebuch der gesammten Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Entstehen bis Ende 1891 Nebst einem Abriss der Geschichte der Philatelie mit Besonderer Berücksichtigung Deutschland's und einer Kurzen

Geschichte der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur.
16 Parts, A. Larisch, Munich, Germany, 1892-94, 749pp.

- 044 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, January 1934, Volume 3, Issue 1, Whole number 19.
➤ Incorporates Philat. Trans. 032.
- 045 A. Marx
Dr. Wilhelm Blank is 65 years old.
[Dr. Wilhelm Blank 65 jahre.]
Der Sammler Dienst, 9th August 1969, Volume 20, Issue 16, p.1019.
- 046 Alfredo Alabiso
Cumulative index to Il Collezionista Italia-Filatelica 1951-1985. 35 Years of Philatelic Journalism.
[Indice bibliografico di Il Collezionista Italia-Filatelica 1951-1985. 35 Anni di Giornalismo Filatelico]
Edizioni S.C.O.T., Turin, Italy, 1986, 14pp.
➤ Translation of the Introduction only, p.3.
- 047 Carl Beck
Bibliography of German monographs on the postage stamps of individual countries.
[Bibliographie der wichtigsten Deutschen sonderschriften über die postwertzeichen einzelner länder.]
2nd edition, Carl Beck, Berlin, Germany, 1919, 16pp.
➤ Translation of the Foreword only, p.3.
The work was originally published in: Germania-Berichte, October 1915, Volume 12, Issue 9/10, pp.129-130; February 1916, Volume 13, Issue 1/2, pp.14-16; March, Issue 3/4, pp.44-45 & June, Issue 5/6, pp.70-71.
- 048 M. Bloch
General Index - 1919.
[General Index - 1919.]
Weltpost-Echo, Teplitz-Schonau, Germany, 1920, ?pp.
➤ Translation of the Preface & Abbreviations only, pp.3-4.
- 049 L. Piloni
Il Bollettino Filatelico d'Italia - a half century of life.
[Title in original language.]
Il Bollettino Filatelico d'Italia, Firenze, Italy, 1960, ?pp.
➤ Translation of the Foreword & Introduction only, pp.7-14.
- 050 O. M. Giordano
The philatelic press in Argentina.
[La prensa filatélica en la Argentina.]
Prenfil '88 Bulletin 2, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 1988, pp.16-21.
- 051 Alexander Bungerz
The German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1921.
[Die Deutschsprachliche Philatelistische Literatur im Jahre 1921.]
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923, 12pp.
Foreword and [Introduction] only pp.[i]+1-3.

- 052 Alexander Bungerz
The German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1922.
 [Die Deutschsprachliche Philatelistische Literatur im Jahre 1922.]
 Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923, 13pp.
 Foreword and [Introduction] only pp.4-6.
- 053 Dr. Fritz Haubner
Index to the Philatelic Literature on the Old German Field of Collecting: Hanover.
 [Verzeichnis der Philatelistischen Literatur über das altdeutsche Sammelgebiet: Hannover.]
 Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, Soest, Germany, 1984, pp.3 & [221].
 Translation of the Foreword (p.3) & Contents [p.221] only.
- 054 Dr. Franz Kalckhoff: Obituary.
 [Dr. Franz Kalckhoff †.]
 Sammler - Express, 15th March 1955, Volume 9, Issue 6, p.95.
- 055 Translation Digest.
 Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, February 1950, Volume 3, Issue 2.
- 056 Translation Digest.
 Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, March 1950, Volume 3, Issue 3.
- 057 C. Bruhl
History of Philately.
 2 Volumes, Georg Olms Verlag, Hildesheim, Germany, 1985.
 Large parts of this work which are of interest for my researches have been translated. I have not tried to make a complete translation of the two volumes. Details will be found on the translation itself, later in this volume.
- 058 Translation Digest.
 Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, April 1950, Volume 3, Issue 4.
- 059 Editrice Filatèlica
Philatelic Bibliographical Index (Complete to the end of 1924).
Indice Bibliografico Filatelico (Fino a tutto il 1924)
 Editrice Filatèlica, Turin, Italy, 1925, 14pp.
- 060 Bibliography of German-language philatelic literature.
 [Bibliographie der philatelistischen literatur in Deutscher sprache.]
 Sammler - Dienst, 30th August 1958, Volume 9, Issue 18, p.776.
- 061 Translation Digest.
 Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, May 1950, Volume 3, Issue 5.
- 062 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek
Catalogue Part 1: Germany and German Area.
 [Katalog. Teil 1: Deutschland und deutsche Gebiet.]
 Stadtbibliothek Munchen Philatelistische Bibliothek, Munich, Germany, n.d. [1966].
 Translation of the Foreword only.

- 063 Alfons Off
Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek: Catalogue Part 1: Germany and German Area.
 [Katalog. Teil 1: Deutschland und Deutsche Gebiet.]
 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek, Munich, Germany, 1975.
 Translation of the Foreword only, pp.5-7.
- 064 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek
Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Munich State Library. Part 1.
 [Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek der Stadtbibliothek München. Teil 1.]
 3rd edition, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Bad Ems, Germany, 1983, 76pp.
 (3rd edition, 2nd reprint, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1990, 76pp. This reprint omits the endnote on page 75.)
 Translation of the introductory text and endnote only, pp.6 & 75.
 First published in September 1983. Revised and extended in June 1999.
 September 1991 (BL)
- 065 B. Wincewicz & T. Wincewicz
Bibliography of the Contents of Polish Philatelic Periodicals, 1894-1939.
 [Bibliografia Zawartosci Polskich Czasopism Filatelistycznych 1894-1939.]
 Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1985.
 Translation of the Preface only, pp.7-8.
 (BL)
- 066 Nils Strandell
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1908.
 [Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachliteratur im jahre 1908.]
 Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, March 1909, Volume 16, Issue 3, pp.I-IV; April, Issue 4, pp.V-VIII & May, Issue 5, p.IX.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.I.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 067 Nils Strandell
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1909.
 [Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachliteratur im jahre 1909.]
 Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, May 1910, Volume 17, Issue 5, pp.I-IV & June, Issue 6, pp.V-VIII.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.I.
 A translation of the list of periodicals indexed and the bibliographic listing was published as follows:- Gleanings from the foreign press. Philatelic West, October 1910, Volume 49, Issue 3, n.pp. [4pp.]; January 1911, Volume 50, Issue 3, n.pp [2pp.] & Volume 51, Issue 1, n.pp. [3pp.]
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 068 Nils Strandell
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1910.
 [Verzeichnis über die Europäische, periodische fachliteratur im jahre 1910.]
 Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, July 1911, Volume 17, Issue 7, pp.I-IV & August, Issue 8, pp.V-IX.
 Translation of the introductory and closing text only, pp.I & IX.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

- 069 C. Schmittziel
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature. Part 1 - Instructions for Compilers.
 Robert Noske, Leipzig, Germany, 1937.
 Introductory text only.
- 070 P. -I. Litschke
Philatelic periodicals covered by the philatelic reference organs "Literatur-Nachrichten" to 1960 and "Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur" (AphL).
 Sammler-Dienst, 12th July 1975, Volume 26, Issue 14, pp.991-992 & 26th July, Issue 15, pp.1021-1022.
- 071 Friedrich Leitenberger
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925.
 [Bibliographie der Deutschsprachlichen Philatelistischen Literatur – 1925.]
 J. K. G. Wagnerische Buchdruckerei, Neustadt an der Orla, Germany, 1925, paginated in sections. [47pp.]
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.III-V.
- 072 Friedrich Leitenberger
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925.
 [Bibliographie der Deutschsprachlichen Philatelistischen Literatur - 1925.]
 Circular accompanying a review copy of the second part of the Bibliography, J. K. G. Wagnersche Buchdruckerei, Neustadt an der Orla, Germany, March 1925, 3pp.
- 073 Subscriptions - charge.
 Philatelistische Presse, 1887, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1.
- 074 Translation Digest.
 Die Philat. Litteratur, January 1894, Volume 1, Issue 1.
- 075 Translation Digest.
 Die Philat. Litteratur, February 1894, Volume 1, Issue 2.
- 076 J. A. Bosshard & Fritz Seifert
Well-known philatelists.
 [Bekannte philatelisten.]
 In: Deutsches Philatelistisches Jahrbuch 1928: Wer? Wie? Was? Wann? und Wo? in der Philatelie. [German Philatelic Year Book 1928: Who? What? Where? When? and How? in Philately.], Fritz Seifert, Leipzig, Germany, 1928, pp.91-123.
 Only the following entry has been translated: Otto Rommel, p.110.
- 077 [Untitled extract]
 Deutsche Briefmarken - Zeitung, January 1916, Volume 27, Issue 1, pp.2-3.
- 078 New Year's Eve 1916
 [Silvester 1916]
 Deutsche Briefmarken - Zeitung, January, 1917, Volume 28, Issue 1, pp.1-3.
 (Translation of an untitled paragraph about Literature on page 3, column 2 only)
- 079 W. Thalmann
Index of subject articles appearing in philatelic journals (year 1910) and of handbooks appearing in the years 1908 to 1910.

Germania Berichte, 1911, Supplement to 6-10.

- 080 Here it is - Grüne Sammler-Welt (Green Collectors World).
Grüne Sammler-Welt, March 1930, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1.
- 081 Alexander Bungerz
The German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1920.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923.
- 082 V. Suppantschitsch
On philatelic libraries.
[Ueber philatelistische bibliotheken.]
Austria Philatelist, January, 1895, Volume 2, Issue 1, pp.7-9; February, Issue 2, pp.57-58; March, Issue 3, pp.108-110; April, Issue 4, pp.161-163; May, Issue 5, pp.202-204; June, Issue 6, pp.249-251; July, Issue 7, pp.293-295; August, Issue 8, pp.342-344; October, Issue 10, pp.422-423; November, Issue 11, pp.460-462; December, Issue 12, pp.504-506; 15th February 1896, Volume 3, Issue 4, pp.51-53; 1st March, Issue 5, pp.97-98; 1st April, Issue 7, pp.145-147; 15th May, Issue 10, pp.211-212; 15th June, Issue 12, p.254; 15th July, Issue 14, pp.290-291; 1st September, Issue 17, pp.341-353; 15th October, Issue 20, pp.395-396; 15th January 1897, Volume 4, Issue 2, pp.25-26; 1st March, Issue 5, pp.82-84; 1st June, Issue 11, pp.177-178; 15th June, Issue 12, pp.197-199 & July, Issue 13, pp.213-214.
Only the introductory and final text is translated. The remainder of the article comprises lists of literature which do not require translation to be accessible.
- 083 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, August 1933, Volume 2, Issue 8.
- 084 Translation Digest.
Information, December 1992, Issue 8.
- 085 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatolie - Bulletin, Issue 11.
- 086 Arno Köth & Christian Springer
Dr.Phil. Alfred Moschkau: A Life for Philately, 1848–1912.
[Dr.Phil. Alfred Moschkau: Ein Leben für die Philatelie, 1848 1912.]
Beiträge zur Sächsischen Postgeschichte und Philatelie, Volume 6, Verlag Christian Springer, Cologne, Germany, 1983, 60pp.
- 087 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 58.
- 088 Pascal Rabier
The French Philatelic Press.
[Regard sur la Presse Philatélique Française.]
2 Volumes, Diplôme d'Etudes Supérieures Spécialisées, University of Paris, Institut National de Gestion des PTT d'Evry, Paris, 1986. Second (revised) edition, Pascal Rabier, 1987, i + 586pp.
- 089 Dr. A. Legrand

Catalogue of philatelic literature.

[Catalogue de littérature Philatélique.]

La Circulaire Philatélique, May 1907, Volume 10, Whole number 58, pp.73-77; June, Whole number 59, pp.93-98; August, Whole number 60, pp.113-119; September, Whole number 61, pp.138-142; October, Whole number 62, pp.157-160; November, Whole number 63, pp.178-181; December, Whole number 64, pp.200-201; January 1908, Volume 11, Whole number 65, pp.9-12; February, Whole number 66, pp.40-43; March, Whole number 67, pp.64-66; April, Whole number 68, pp.88-91; May, Whole number 69, pp.115-117 & June, Whole number 70, pp.146-148; November, Whole number 73, p.230; December, Whole number 74, pp.265-266 & February 1909, Whole number 76, pp.45-46.

Translation of the text only, not the whole catalogue.

090 K. K. Doberer

Literatur Nachrichten.

Sammler-Dienst, 26th January 1974, Volume 25, Issue 2, p.79.

091 Marino Carnévalé-Mauzan

A Glance at Philatelic Literature in France.

[Coup d'oeil sur la littérature Philatélique en France.]

MILANO '82 Prima Mostra Mondiale di Letteratura Filatelica., Catalogue 3, pp.35-38.

092 Dr. Phil. Wilhelm Blank

Philately in the Specialist and Daily Press.

[Philatelie in Fach- und Tagespresse.]

Doctoral Dissertation, Faculty of Philosophy, University of Leipzig, Leipzig, Germany, 1930, 109pp. (Soft bound)

Also available as a hard bound reprint of 108pp., with the Curriculum Vitae omitted.

093 36th meeting, Leverkusen

094 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, December 1933, Volume 2, Issue 12.

095 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Litteratur, June 1897, Volume 3, Issue 6.

096 Ph. K. [Philipp Kosack (Publisher)]

Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford K. T.

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1911, Volume 7, Issue 7, p.167.

This is a book review.

➤ Revised March 2008, August 2010.

097 O. Rommel

Periodical chronicle.

[Zeitungs-chronik.]

Der Philatelist, February 1898, Volume 19, Issue 2, p.70.

Translation of the introductory text and end note only.

098 Translation Digest.

Utopia Berichte, March 1991, Issue 3.

- 099 Translation Digest.
Utopia Berichte, September 1988, Issue 2.
- 100 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1968, Whole number 57.
- 101 Translation Digest.
Information, 1989, Issue 3.
- 102 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1922, Volume 2, Issue 1.
- 103 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, July 1933, Volume 2, Issue 7.
- 104 Translation Digest.
Information, 1990, Issue 4.
- 105 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1990, Issue 4.
- 106 Dr. Wilhelm Blank is 70 years old.
[Dr Wilhelm Blank 70 Jahre.]
Der Sammler-Dienst, 7th September 1974, Volume 25, Issue 18, p.1239.
- 107 Carl Beck
Victor Suppantshitsch †.
Briefmarkensammler, April 1919, Volume 3, Issue 4, p.144.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 108 O. Y. Basin
Philatelic Dictionary.
[Filatelisticheski Slovar.]
USSR, 1968, pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.2-4.
- 109 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1990.
- 110 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1992, Issue 10.
- 111 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1992, Issue 9.
- 112 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1989.
- 113 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Issue 85.
- 114 Translation Digest.

- Literature Nachrichten, 1986, Issue 82/83.
- 115 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1986, Issue 84.
- 116 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1981, Issue 67/68.
- 117 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1984, Issue 69/81.
- 118 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1923, Volume 3, Issue 2.
- 119 Translation Digest.
Utopia Berichte, March 1988, Issue 1.
- 120 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1923, Volume 3, Issue 1.
- 121 Alfred Moschkau
The philatelic literature of Germany.
[Die Philatelistische Literatur Deutschlands.]
Supplement to A. Moschkau's Magazin für Markensammler, March 1872, Issue 9, 2pp.
- 122 Max Ton
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature.
[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur.]
Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins Dresden, Dresden, Germany, 1916, 152 columns.
Translation of the introductory text, n.pp. (iii & v-vi) & last page.
Original held
- 123 Libraries.
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, February 1913, Volume 24, Issue 2, p.44.
- 124 Victor Suppantshitsch.
Austria-Philatelist, 1st December 1893, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.3-4 & plate.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 125 Peter Riedl
Otto Rommel.
Austria-Philatelist, 1st February 1895, Volume 2, Issue 2, pp.53-54 & Photograph.
- 126 Alfred Koch
References on the German Postal System; Supplement 1500-1964.
[Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen Nachtrag 1500-1964.]
R. V. Decker's Verlag/G. Schenck, Hamburg/Berlin, Germany, 1969, pp.?
Translation of the introductory text only, 3pp. (unnumbered).
- 127 Internationale Philatelisten-Verein
A reference work (Bibliography) of the German philatelic literature.
[Ein nachschlagewerk (Bibliographie) der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur.]

Philatelisten-Zeitung, July 1915, Volume 24, Issue 6, pp.83-84.

128 Dr. O. Rommel

The philatelic periodical literature.

[Die philatelistische zeitungsliteratur.]

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1911, Volume 7, Issue 8, pp.188-190.

129 V. Suppantisch

Rarities of the philatelic periodical literature to the end of 1900.

[Die seltenheiten der philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur bis ende 1900.]

Der Philatelist, June 1903, Volume 24, Issue 6, pp.160-162; July, Issue 7, pp.194-196; August/September, Issue 8/9, pp.229-230; October, Issue 10, pp.258-259; November, Issue 11, pp.297-298; December, Issue 12, pp.330-331; January 1904, Volume 25, Issue 1, p.8 & February, Issue 2, pp. 39-41.

Also available as a offprint of 12pp.

130 S. de V.

Serious bibliography.

[Bibliographie serieuse.]

La Circulaire Philatélique, October/November 1930, Volume 20, Issue 208, pp.167-168.

131 Giovanni Riggi

Analysis of a degradation.

[Analyse d'une dégradation.]

Catalogo 3, Prima Mostra Mondiale di Letteratura Filatelica - Milano '82., Milan, Italy, 1982, pp.41-42. (A version in Italian: Analisi di un degrado is available on pages 39-40.)

132 Alfred Koch

References on the German Postal System, 1871-1964.

R. V. Decker's Verlag/G. Schenck, Hamburg/Berlin, Germany, 1966, pp.v & vii.

133 Ullrich Häger

Quo vadis - philatelic literature?

[Quo vadis – philatelistische literatur?]

Sammler-Dienst, 25th April 1964, Volume 15, Issue 9, pp.446-447; 9th May, Issue 10, pp.504-506 & 23rd May, Issue 11, pp.561-564.

134 Ullrich Häger

We glance through an old journal.

[Wir blättern in einer alten zeitschrift.]

Sammler-Dienst, 26th November 1966, Volume 17, Issue 24, pp.1412-1414; 10th December, Issue 25, pp.1474-1477 & 24th December, Issue 26, pp.1544-1546.

135 Ullrich Häger

The rise of philatelic literature.

[Vom werden der philatelistischen literatur.]

Sammler-Dienst, 13th October 1962, Volume 13, Issue 21, pp.964-970.

136 R. Glasewald

100 years of literature on stamps.

[100 Jahre Briefmarken-Literatur.]

Sammler-Dienst, 13th October 1962, Volume 13, Issue 21, pp.963-964.

➤ Revised March 2008.

137 K. K. Doberer

Literature promotes literature.

[Literatur fördert literatur.]

Der Sammler-Dienst, 19th December 1964, Volume 15, Issue 26, pp.1440-1441.

➤ Revised March 2008.

138 Translation Digest.

Philaprilistische Bücherwurm, 1st April 1922, Only Volume, Only Issue.

139 Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1991, Issue 6.

140 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1922, Volume 2, Issue 4.

141 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1971, Issue 60.

142 Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1990, Issue 5.

143 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler, 10th February 1907, Volume 1, Issue 3.

144 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler, 1st May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 4.

145 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler, 11th May 1907, Volume 1, Issue 5.

146 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1951, Whole number 6.

147 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1951, Whole number 4/5.

148 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1951, Whole number 3.

149 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1952, Whole number 7.

150 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1952, Whole number 8.

151 Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1952, Whole number 9.

- 152 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1952, Whole number 10.
- 153 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1952?, Whole number 11/12.
- 154 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, January/March 1953, Whole number 13.
- 155 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, April/June 1953, Whole number 14.
- 156 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, July/September 1953, Whole number 15.
- 157 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, October/December 1953, Whole number 16.
- 158 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, January/March 1954, Whole number 17.
- 159 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, April/June 1954, Whole number 18.
- 160 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, July/September 1954, Whole number 19.
- 161 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, October/December 1954, Whole number 20.
- 162 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, January/July 1955, Whole number 21/22.
- 163 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, July/December 1955, Whole number 23/24.
- 164 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, [January/April] 1956, Whole number 25.
➤ Incorporated Philat. Trans. 018 & Philat. Trans. 019.
- 165 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, May/August 1956, Whole number 26.
- 166 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, September/December 1956, Whole number 27/28.
- 167 Wolfgang Maassen
The sad end of the legendary Germania-Rings Library.
[Das taurige ende der legendären bibliothek des Germania-Rings.]
AIJP-Bulletin, March 2008, Whole number 127, pp.110-111.
- 168 Translation Digest.

- Literature Nachrichten, January/April 1957, Whole number 29.
- 169 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, May/July 1957, Whole number 30.
- 170 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 31/32.
- 171 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 33/34.
- 172 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 35/36.
- 173 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1959, Whole number 37/38.
- 174 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 39/40.
- 175 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 41/44.
- 176 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1961, Whole number 45/46.
- 177 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 47/48.
- 178 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1962, Whole number 49/50.
- 179 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1962, Whole number 51/52.
- 180 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 53/54.
- 181 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Whole number 55.
- 182 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1970, Whole number 59, 152pp.
- 183 Victor Suppantschitsch
Attempt at a bibliography of the foreign-language philatelic periodical literature of Europe to the end of 1891.
[Versuch einer bibliographie der fremdsprachigen philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur Europas bis ende 1891.]
Austria-Philatelist, June, 1898, Volume 5, Issue 7, pp.114-115; October, Issue 11, p.176; November, Issue 12, p.193; December, Issue 13, p.214; January 1899, Volume 6, Issue 1, pp.22-23 & August/September Issue 8/9, pp.96-97.

Translation of the introductory text on pp.114-115 and the final word on p.97.

184

Great Dictionary of Philately.

185

Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1973, Whole number 62.

Incorporates Philat. Trans. 12; 13; 14; & 15.

186

Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1974, Whole number 63.

187

Translation Digest.

Literature Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65.

Incorporates Philat. Trans. 21; 22 & 23.

188

Dr. Fritz Haubner

Norddeutscher Postbezirk im Spiegel der Literatur.

Germany

189

Forschung und Literatur.

7th Soester Gespräche, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, 1985,

190

Survey of articles.

Postmarke, 9th February 1925, Volume 7, Issue 89, p.39.

191

K. Kouwenberg

The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part III.

[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel III).]

De Postzak, December 1963, Issue 66, pp.57-61.

192

Georges Brunel

The State of Philately in 1867.

[Ce Qu'était la Philatélie en 1867.]

Yvert, Amiens, France, 1930, 37pp.

{Originally published as: Georges Brunel: La Philatélie en 1867. [Philately in 1867.], L'Écho de la Timbrologie, 15th January 1930, Whole number 817, pp.3-6; 15th March, Whole number 821, pp.288-291. A note in whole number 818 of the 31st January 1930 (La philatelie en 1867, page 77) advises that a reader takes issue with Brunel for his severe criticism of Moens and Hanciau, given their publishing efforts for over a third of a century.}

{The two parts above cover only the last two thirds of the book. On page 3 of the above, there is a note directing readers to whole number 809 of the magazine, presumably for the earlier part. However, I have checked every page of the numbers from 806 to 816 and found nothing. I also checked the Indexes for both 1929 and 1930 and found only the references to numbers 817, 818 and 821.}

193

Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, New Series, 1995, Issue 5.

194

Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, New Series, 199?, Issue 6.

- 195 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, New Series, 1993, Issue 2.
- 196 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, New Series, 1993, Issue 1.
- 197 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1992.
- 198 Richard Krause
From yellowed pages II. Obituaries of journals.
- 199 [H. Fraenkel]
The German philatelic literature 1892/93.
[Die Deutsche philatelistische litteratur 1892/93.]
Deutsche Briefmarken - Zeitung, 1st September 1893, Volume 3, Issue 12, pp.174-177.
- 200 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, January 1895, Volume 1, Issue 1.
- 201 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, February 1895, Volume 1, Issue 2.
- 202 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, March 1895, Volume 1, Issue 3.
- 203 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, April 1895, Volume 1, Issue 4.
- 204 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, May 1895, Volume 1, Issue 5.
- 205 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, June 1895, Volume 1, Issue 6.
- 206 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, July 1895, Volume 1, Issue 7.
- 207 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, January 1990, Issue 1.1.
- 208 Translation Digest.
Information, May 1988, Issue 1.
- 209 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, August 1895, Volume 1, Issue 8.
- 210 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1921, Volume 1, Issue 1.
- 211 Translation Digest.

- Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1921, Volume 1, Issue 2.
- 212 Translation Digest.
Information, 1988, Issue 2.
- 213 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, September 1895, Volume 1, Issue 9.
- 214 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, Issue 2.
- 215 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, Issue 56.
- 216 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1921, Volume 1, Issue 3.
- 217 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, May 1933, Volume 2, Issue 5.
- 218 Emil-W. Mewes
Philatelic Literature - not the Stepchild of Philately.
Forum Philatelie, 1986?, p.3.
- 219 Giuseppe Leoni
Philatelic Bibliography of Italy. Notes for the compilation of a catalogue [Bibliografia timbrologica dell'Italia. Note per la compilazione d'un catalogo]
Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo, October 1877, Volume 2, Whole number 16, pp.127-130 & November, Whole number 17, pp.135-137.
Translation of the Introduction only, p.127.
- 220 A. Kreuzer
On the History of the Philatelic Press.
Sammler Dienst, 12th December 1970, Volume 21, Issue 25, p.1654.
- 221 A Leclercq & G. Waroquiers
Jean-Baptiste Moens 1833-1908. The Catalogue of his Works with Criteria of Rarity.
- 222 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, January 1896, Volume 2, Issue 1.
- 223 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1922, Volume 2, Issue 3.
- 224 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, Issue 7.
- 225 Norbert Röhm
A Source for Philately: The "Literarische Museum".
Philatelie und Postgeschichte, 1990, Issue 115, pp.36-46.
- 226 Translation Digest.

- 227 Victor Suppantschitsch.
Wegweiser für Verkehrswerthzeichen-Sammler (Philatelisten-Fibel). [Guide for Commercial Stamp Collectors (Philatelists' Primer).], Oscar Jéran, Berlin, Germany, 1890, p.20.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 228 K. K. Doberer
Recommendations to the Editors of "Literatur-Nachrichten".
Sammler-Dienst, 22nd August 1970, Volume 21, Issue 17, pp.1103-1104.
- 229 Walter B. L. Bose
Argentine Philatelic Literature. (Bibliographic Index).
[Literatura filatélica Argentina. (Indice Bibliográfico).]
Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica Argentina, May/June 1938, Volume 41, Issue 3, Whole number 300, pp.74-77; July/August, Issue 4, Whole number 301, pp.102-106; September/October, Issue 5, Whole number 302, pp.152-157; November/December, Issue 6, Whole number 303, pp.195-200; February 1939, Volume 42, Issue 1, Whole number 304, pp.14-15; June/August, Issue 4, Whole number 307, pp.111-118; September/December, Issue 5, Whole numbers 308/309, pp.156-160; February 1940, Volume 43, Issue 1, Whole number 310, pp.18-23; March/April, Issue 2, Whole number 311, pp.50-54; May/June, Issue 3, Whole number 312, pp.99-100; July/August, Issue 3, Whole number 313, pp.128-132; September/October, Issue 5, Whole number 314, pp.167-168 & November/December Issue 6, Whole number 315, pp.193-198.
- 230 Alexander Bungerz
Grosses Lexicon der Philatelie.
- 231 Alexander Bungerz
The German Language Philatelic Literature of the Year 1923.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1925.
- 232 Translation Digest.
Information, 1992, Issue 7.
- 233 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1991, Issue 8.
- 234 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, [1979], Issue 66.
- 235 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, November 1933, Volume 2, Issue 11.
- 236 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, May 1897, Volume 3, Issue 5.
- 237 Joachim Dufner
Dr. Otto Rommel's library donated to the Prussian State Library.
Letter to BJB about the donation of Dr. Otto Rommel's philatelic library to the Prussian State library. It includes a copy of the following document as an attachment:

Review and new reports.

[Umschau und neue nachrichten.]

Zentralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, 1915, Volume 32, pp.172-173.

238 H. F. [H. Fränkel]

Literature.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1895, Volume 5, Issue 4, pp.55-56

239 C. Schmittziel

Prospectus for a Possible Handbook of all the German Language Philatelic Literature that has Appeared to Date (Handbooks, Monographs, Pamphlets, etc. excluding Periodicals).

[Verzeichnis evtl. Handbuch der bisher in deutscher Sprache erschienenen Philatelistischen Literatur (Handbücher, Monographien, Brochuren, usw. ausschliesslich Zeitschriften).]

C. Schmittziel, Hamburg, Germany, n.d. [ca. 1933], n.pp. [2pp.]

➤ Revised March 2008.

240 Phil* Biblio: the media programme.

Phil* Soft - und Literatur-News, 1996, Issue 1, pp.3-4.

241 V. Suppantisch

Chronological table of German philatelic periodicals 1863-1893

[Chronologische tabelle der Deutschen philatelisten zeitschriften 1863-1893]

Austria Philatelist, March 1895, Volume 2, Issue 3, pp.123-124.

(Review)

242 M. Bloch General-Index 1919.

Philatelisten-Zeitung, June 1920, Volume 29, Issue 5/6, p.60.

243 Wolfram Grallert

125 years of philatelic literature in Leipzig.

Arbeitsmaterial des Arbeitskreises Postgeschichte des Stadtverbandes Leipzig, Philatelistenverband im Kulturbund der DDR, East Germany, 1988, pp.50-56.

244 K. M.

A collector of 1852.

Sammlerfreund, February 1934, Volume 8, Issue 2, pp.5-7.

245 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1924, Volume 4, Issue 1.

246 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1923, Volume 3, Issue 4.

247 Doctor Thebussem

The philatelic Periodicals of Spain.

[]

Madrid Filatelico, October 1901, Volume 5, pp.149-150.

248 K. Kouwenberg

The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part III.

- [De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel III).]
Postzak, March 1965, Issue 71, pp.3-8.
- 249 Translation Digest.
Information, [1990], Issue 5.
- 250 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1972, Issue 61.
- 251 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, February 1896, Volume 2, Issue 2.
- 252 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, November 1895, Volume 1, Issue 11.
- 253 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1895, Volume 1, Issue 10.
- 254 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, April 1897, Volume 3, Issue 3.
- 255 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, September 1933, Volume 2, Issue 9.
- 256 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, June 1933, Volume 2, Issue 6.
- 257 Translation Digest.
Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, 1990, Issue 3.
- 258 Translation Digest.
Archiv für Philatelistische Literatur, March 1972, Volume 1, Issue 1.
- 259 Translation Digest.
Information, [1991], Issue 6.
- 260 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatursammler, October 1933, Volume 2, Issue 10.
- 261 U. M.
“Research and Literature in Philately” Salon.
Philatelie und Postgeschichte, 1993, Issue 69, pp.13-14.
- 262 Forschung und Literatur.
6th Soester Gespräche, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, 1983,
- 263 Dissertations on the subject of the Post and Telecommunications and related areas as of 15th November 1951.
[Dissertationen über themen aus den Post- und Fernmeldewesen und aus verwandten gebieten nach dem stande vom 15. November 1951.]
Archiv für das Post- und Fernmeldewesen, February 1952, Volume 4, Issue 2, pp.65-92.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.65.

➤ Revised March 2008.

264 Ulrich Felzmann

Philatelic literature: Roland Library – Part 2.

[Philatelistische literatur: Roland-Bibliothek – Teil 2.]

Auction 90, Ulrich Felzmann, 27th August 1999, Dusseldorf, Germany, 1999.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.6.

➤ Revised March 2008.

265 P. -I. Litschke

The treatment of colour printing controls in the philatelic literature since 1965.

Sammler-Dienst, 19th February 1972, Volume 23, Issue 4, pp.258-261.

266 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1923, Volume 3, Issue 3.

267 Hugo Krötzsch

Victor Suppantshitsch.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, November 1918, Volume 29, Issue 11/12, pp.77-78.

268 Translation Digest.

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1924, Volume 4, Issue 2.

269 Translation Digest.

Information, [1996], Issue 9.

270 Carl Beck

Bibliography of the Most Important German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries.

[Bibliographie der Wichtigsten Deutschen Sonderschriften über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder.]

3rd edition, Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923, pp.3 & 27.

Translation of the introductory text only, pp.?.

271 L. Tröndle

The development of philatelic literature in Germany in the 19th Century.

Sammler-Dienst, 19 October 1974, Volume 25, Issue 21, pp.1458-1461 & 2 November, Issue 22, pp.1533-1535.

272 Doctor Thebussem

Philatelic Literature in Spain: Notes for Compiling a Catalogue.

[Literature Philatélica en España: Apuntes para la Redaccion de un Catalogo.]

Doctor Thebussem, Seville, Spain, 1876, xiii+33pp.

Translation of the Foreword and Notes only, pp.vii-xiii & [33].

273 Doctor Thebussem

Fourth Set of Articles.

[Cuarta Ración de Artículos.]

Doctor Thebussem, Madrid, Spain, 1902, pp.xi-xii + 55-78.

274 The philatelic and cartophilatelic press of all countries.

Annuaire "Berry" de la Carte Postal Illustrée & du Timbre-Poste, Paris, France, 1904, pp.145-150.

275 Victor Suppantschitsch

Supplement to the Bibliography and Reference Book of the Whole German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the end of 1891. Published by A. Larisch, Munich 1892-1893.

[Ergänzung der Bibliographie zugleich Nachschlagebuch der gesamten deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Entstehen bis Ende 1891. München 1892-1893. Verlag von A. Larisch.]

Postwertzeichen-Kunde, January 1897, Volume 8, Issue 1, pp.1-2; February, Issue 2, pp.23-24; March, Issue 3, pp.37-38; April, Issue 4, pp.46-47; May, Issue 5, pp.61-62; June, Issue 6, pp.73-74; July, Issue 7, pp.86-87; August, Issue 8, pp.97-98; September/October, Issue 9/10, pp.111-112; November, Issue 11, pp.129-131 & December, Issue 12, pp.147-149.

(Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-2.)

276 Dr. O. Rommel

Survey of articles etc. on the postage stamps of the German States appearing in the periodical literature of the year 1897 and of monographs on the same topic published in the same period of time.

[Uebersicht der in der zeitungsliteratur des jahres 1897 über die postwerthzeichen der Deutschen Staaten enthaltenen aufsätze etc., sowie der über diese in dem gleichen zeitraum erschienenen monographien.]

Der Philatelist, February 1898, Volume 19, Issue 2, pp.74-77; March, Issue 3, pp.117-120; April, Issue 4, pp.169-172; May, Issue 5, pp.216-219 & June, Issue 6, pp.248-251.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.74.

277 Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, May 1911, Volume 22, Issue 5, p.100.

This is a book review.

➤ Revised March 2008.

278 Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie - Bulletin, September 1994, Issue 4.

279 Max Bloch

Philatelic literature - a proposal for co-operation.

[Philatelistische literatur - ein vorschlag zur mitarbeit.]

Der Briefmarkensammler, April 1919, Volume 3, Issue 4, pp.144-147.

280 Dr. Rommel

The Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford compiled by E. D. Bacon.

[Der Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek des Earl of Crawford zusammengestellt von E. D. Bacon.]

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, 30th June 1911, Volume 7, Issue 12, pp.285-287.

281 [Untitled extract]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1913, Volume 24, Issue 1, p.8.

282 H. E. [H. Eigner]

The Lindenberg - Medal.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, February 1913, Volume 24, Issue 2, pp.33-34.

283 Max Bloch

The postage stamps of Austria in the German philatelic literature of the year 1918.

[Die postwertzeichen Oesterreichs in der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur des jahres 1918.]

Der Briefmarkensammler, February 1919, Volume 3, Issue 2, pp.53-56.

➤ Revised March 2008.

284 Dr. F. Kalckhoff

25 years of the "D.B.Z."

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1915, Volume 26, Issue 4, pp.1-3.

285 Hugo Krötzsch

The formation of an international philatelic library.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1913, Volume 24, Issue 4, pp.71-72.

286 Horst Hille

Pioneers of Philately.

287 Victor Suppantshitsch.

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1919, Volume 30, Issue 4/5, pp.35-36.

➤ Revised March 2008.

288 Translation Digest.

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatolie - Bulletin, Issue 11

289 Arno Köth & Christian Springer

Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau: A Life for Philately, 1848-1912.

[Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau: Ein Leben für die Philatelie, 1848-1912.]

Beiträge zur Sächsischen Postgeschichte und Philatelie, Volume 6, Verlag Christian Springer, Cologne, Germany, 1983, 60pp.

290 †Christoph Otto Müller.

Sammler-Dienst, 10th June 1967, Volume 18, Issue 12, p.690.

291 Vito Salierno

Survey of the Italian philatelic press.

[Rassegna della stampa filatelica Italiana.]

VENEZIA 1979, Italy, 1979, n.pp. [8pp.]

292 Marino Carnévalé-Mauzan

A glance at philatelic literature in France.

Venezia 1979, Italy, 1979.

293 Emil-W. Mewes

Philatelic literature in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Venezia 1979, Italy, 1979.

294 Emil-W. Mewes

Memories of Dr. Herbert Munk in Lugano, 19th April 1953.

- Venezia 1979, Italy, 1979.
- 295 Hermann Schmirler
The state of Austrian philatelic literature.
 Venezia 1979, Italy, 1979.
- 296 Juhani Olamo
Index of Philatelic Literature in Philatelic Exhibition Catalogues 1950-1991.
[Postimerkkinäyttelyluetteloissa Olevien Filateelisten Kirjoitusten Hakemisto 1950-1991.]
 Juhani Olamo, Helsinki, Finland, 1992, 38pp.
- 297 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part I.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel I).]
 Postzak, December 1960, Issue 57, pp.80-85.
- 298 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part II.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel II).]
 Postzak, August/September 1962, Issue 62, pp.21-25; 35 & 37.
- 299 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Netherlands philately - Part II.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel II).]
 Postzak, December 1962, Issue 63, pp.46-49.
- 300 Dr. Legrand
Letter from Doctor Legrand.
[Lettre du Docteur Legrand.]
 L'Annonce Timbrologique, October 1891, Volume 2, Whole number 20, p.214.
- 301 Dr. Legrand
Studies on philatelic bibliography.
[Etudes de Bibliographie Timbrologique.]
 L'Annonce Timbrologique, November 1891, Volume 2, Whole number 21, pp.225-227; December, Whole number 22, p.243; January 1892, Volume 3, Whole number 23, pp.253-255; February Whole number 24, p.271; April, Whole number 26, pp.299-300 & May, Whole number 27, pp.315-316.
- 302 Ed. Blossfeldt
What will be the best way to a German bibliographic work on philately.
[Wie gelangt man am sichersten zu einem deutschen bibliographischen werke der philatelie.]
 Der Philatelist, July 1889, Volume 10, Issue 10, pp.140-141.
 Reprinted in: Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 1st August 1889, Volume 2, Issue 15, pp.220-221.
- 303 Hamburg-Altonaer Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg
100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature.
 Hamburg-Altonaer Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg, Germany, 1962.
 Translation of the introductory text only.

- 304 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1994.
- 305 Translation Digest.
Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur - Rundbrief, March 1957, Issue 2.
Incorporates Philat. Trans 20.
- 306 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part III.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse Filatelie. (Deel III).]
Postzak, June 1965, Issue 72, pp.26-29.
- 307 Walter Kindermann
Philately in Hamburg 1862-1900.
[Die Philatelie in Hamburg 1862-1900.]
[100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature.], Hamburg-Altonaer Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg, Hamburg, Germany, 1962, pp.10-13.
- 308 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1993.
- 309 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 1991.
- 310 Eduard Blossfeldt
Critical considerations on the present state of philatelic societies as regards philately.
Der Philatelist, 1st August 1888, Volume 9, Issue 11, pp.175-177; 15th August, Issue 12, pp.187-188; 15th September, Issue 13, pp.196-198 & 15th October, Issue 14,
pp.211-213.
- 311 A. E. Glasewald
Our literature and its critics.
[Unsere literatur und deren kritiker.]
Der Philatelist, October 1889, Volume 10 Issue 13, pp.192-194.
- 312 Karl Cl. Sauer
Bibliography of German philatelic literature.
[Bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur.]
Der Philatelist, 15th June 1891, Volume 12, Issue 9, pp.164-165.
- 313 Otto Gleixner & Robert Binner
New Director for the Munich Philatelic Library.
Nachrichtenblatt des Briefmarkenhandels, April 1997, Volume 52, Issue 4, p.85
- 314 Alexander Bungerz
The stamp magazines of Germany and Austria including German-speaking Hungary and Switzerland 1914/1919.
[*Die briefmarkenzeitungen Deutschlands und Oesterreichs sowie die
Deutschsprachlichen Ungarns und der Schweiz 1914/1919.*]
Supplement to Die Postmarke, 1920, Issue 12, 6pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-2.

Note: Two reprints of this paper exist: Vienna, Austria, 1920, n.pp. [6pp.] & Tegernsee, Germany, 1919, n.pp. [4pp.], according to Die Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Volume 2, Issue 1, pp.1-2.

- 315 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part I.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse filatelie (Deel I).]
 De Postzak, March/April 1961, Issue 58, pp.8-13.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

- 316 K. Kouwenberg
The pioneers of Dutch philately - Part I.
[De pioniers der Nederlandse filatelie. (Deel I).]
 De Postzak, July/August 1961, Issue 59, pp.31-33 & 38-39.

- 317 Hugo Krötzsch
Catalogue of the Philatelic Section in the German State Library of Leipzig.
[Katalog zur Abteilung Philatelie in der Deutschen Bücherei zu Leipzig.]
 Vogel-Verlag, Pössnek, Germany, 1928.

- 318 C. Schmittdiel
Library Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of C. Schmittdiel, Hamburg.
[Bibliothekskatalog Philatelistische Bibliothek C. Schmittdiel, Hamburg.]
 C. Schmittdiel, Hamburg, Germany, 1936, iv+32pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.i-ii.

- 319 Berliner Philatelisten-Club
Membership List [of the Berliner Philatelisten-Club] as of 31st March 1890.
[Mitglieder-Verzeichniss. Stand vom 31. März 1890.]
Vereinsmittheilungen I. und II. Jahrgang (No. 1-21) 1888-1889., Berliner Philatelisten-Club, Berlin, Germany, n.d. [1890], pp.VI-VIII.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

- 320 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg
Directions for External Loans.
[Hinweise zur Fernausleihe.]
 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg, Hamburg, Germany, n.d. (ca. 1980), 4pp.

- 321 Dr. N.
[Ueber anlegung von Bibliotheken.]
 Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, September 1895, Volume 5, Issue 12, pp.180-182.

- 322 Georges Argyropoulos
The Bern Philatelic Library.
[Die Berner Philatelistische Bibliothek.]
 Der Sammler-Dienst, 8th July 1961, Volume 12, Issue 14, p.642.

- 323 L. Tröndle
The Munich Philatelic Library.
[Die Philatelistische Bibliothek München.]
 Sammler-Dienst, 9th February 1974, Volume 25, Issue 3, pp.183-185.

- 324 Translation Digest.
Utopia Berichte, December 1997, Issue 7.
- 325 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek
Instructions for External Loans.
[Hinweise für Fernleihe.]
Münchner Stadtbibliothek, Philatelistische Bibliothek, Munich, Germany, n.d. (ca. 1990), 4pp.
- 326 Stefan Fiajas
Library of the Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji at Wrocław.
[Biblioteka Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji we Wrocław.]
Rocznik Muzealny, 1992, Issue 7, pp.37-42.
➤ Translation of the French resume only.
- 327 Rudolf Krasemann †.
Der Deutsche Philatelist, October 1908, Volume 2, Issue 10, p.97.
- 328 Alfred Lüdtke
Our library is in the making.
[Unsere Bücherei ist im warden.]
Sammler Express, 15th July 1952, Volume 6, Issue 14, p.223.
- 329 A. Moschkau [A.M.]
Contribution to the science of stamps.
[Beiträge zur markenkunde.]
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, August 1871, Volume 1, Issue 11, pp.88-89 & September, Issue 12, pp.95-97.
- 330 Emilio Diena
A reference book about philatelic literature.
[Ein nachschlagebuch über philatelistische litteratur.]
Das Postwerthzeichen, January 1888, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.4-6 & February, Issue 2, pp.1-2.
- 331 [Ch. Lemierre (Editor)]
Philately.
[La Philatélie.]
La Circulaire Philatélique, September 1907, Volume 9, Whole number 61, pp.137-138.
- 332 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, July 1897, Volume 3, Issue 7.
- 333 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1924, Volume 4, Issue 3.
- 334 Karl Scharfenberg
Literatur-Angebot Nr. 53/1.
“Philak”, Karl Scharfenberg, Berlin, Germany, n.d., 24pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.
- 335 V. Suppantschitsch

Austro-Hungarian philatelic literature in the 19th Century.
 [Die philatelistische literatur Oesterreich-Ungarns im XIX. Jahrhundert.]
 Der Philatelist, February 1909, Volume 30, Issue 2, pp.44-46; March, Issue 3, pp.76-77; April, Issue 4, pp.108-111 & May, Issue 5, pp.143-144.
 Also available as an offprint of 8pp.
 (Translation of the introductory text only, p.44.)

336 Pentti Anttila

Aihefilatelisti periodical general index 1960-79.
 [Aihefilatelisti-lehden yleishakemisto 1960-79.]

337 Rudolf Krasemann

Bibliography of the most Important Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries.
 [Bibliografi öfver de viktigaste specialverken rörande de olika ländernas postvärdetecken.]
 Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift, 1907, Volume 8, Issue 3, pp.47-50; Issue 5, pp.97-100; Issue 6, pp.115-117 & Issue 7, pp.131-134.
 {Reprinted in booklet form in two editions. See Philat. Trans. 004 & Philat. Trans. 406.}

338 Ph. de Bosredon

Philatelic Bibliography of France and of Belgium.
 [Bibliographie Timbrologique de la France et de la Belgique.]
 Bibliothèque Timbrologique, J. B. Moens, Brussels, Belgium, 1878, xii+74pp.
 Also published on the Memoires de la Timbrologie web site:
<http://memoires.timbrologie.online.fr>, 23pp.
 Translation of the Foreword only, pp.V-XII.

339 Emmanuel Blanc

Postal and Philatelic Bibliography of France.
 [Bibliographie Française des Postes et de la Philatélie.]
 Éditions Berger-Levrault, Paris, France, 1949, 169pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.v-xiv.

340 Carl Beck

Bibliography of the Most Important German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries.
 [Bibliographie der Wichtigsten Deutschen Sonderschriften über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder.]
 1st edition, Carl Beck, Leipzig-Breslau, Germany, 1915, 16pp.
 Reprinted without the introductory text in: Germania-Berichte, October 1915, Volume 12, Issue 9/10, pp.129-130; February 1916, Volume 13, Issue 1/2, pp.14-16; March, Issue 3/4, pp.44-45 & June, Issue 5/6, pp.70-71.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-3.
 ➤ Revised March 2008 & May 2011.

341 Cimon Morin

Canadian philatelic literature.
 [La littérature philatélique Canadienne.]
 La Philatélie au Québec, April 1978, Volume 4, Issue 8, p.14 & May, Issue 9, p.15.
 Translation of the introductory text only.

- 342 Walter B. L. Bose
Twenty Years of Historical Work (1924-1944).
 [Veinte Años de Labor Historiografica (1924-1944).]
 Walter B. L. Bose, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 1945, 63pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.3-4.
 ➤ February 2000. Revised March 2008.
- 343 Translation Digest.
 Information, 1999, Issue 10.
- 344 Natalis Rondot
The Postage Stamps of all the Countries of the World in 1862.
 [Les Timbres-poste de tous les Etats du Globe en 1862.]
 Philatelisme, Antwerp, Belgium, 1935, 207pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.8-10.
- 345 Stephan Fransius
List of Swedish Philatelic Literature in the Philatelic Library of the Postal Museum.
 [Förteckning över Svensk Filatelistisk Litteratur I Postmusei Filatelistiska Bibliotek.]
 No bibliographic details are given in the document although I believe that Fransius was the Librarian at the Swedish Postal Museum and, presumably, this was therefore a Museum handout, n.p. [Sweden], n.d. [1987], 33pp.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 346 Ph. de Bosredon
Philatelic Bibliography of France (and of Belgium).
 [Bibliographie Timbrologique de la France (et de la Belgique).]
 Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, July 1876, Volume 1, Issue 4, pp.101-105; September, Issue 5, pp.131-137; June 1877, Issue 8, pp.221-227 & January 1878, Issue 10, pp.283-287. {Reprinted on the Mémoires de la Timbrologie web site: <http://memoires.timbrologie.online.fr>, as of April 2021, 22pp.}
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.101-102 & 221-222.
- 347 Jens Peter Jørgensen
West Library: The Library's Card Catalogue Index 1984.
 [Bibliotek Vest: Biblioteksfortegnelse 1984.]
 Jens Peter Jørgensen (for Danmarks Filatelist Forbund), Østbirk, Denmark, 1984, 36pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.0-00.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 348 Translation Digest.
 Utopia Berichte, August 1991, Issue 4.
- 349 Translation Digest.
 Utopia Berichte, August 1992, Issue 5.
- 350 Bodo Bode
Central Catalogue of Philatelic and Postal History Literature in the Public Libraries of the DDR: Nordic Countries
 [Zentralkatalog der in den Öffentlichen Bibliotheken der DDR Vorhanden Philatelistischen und Postgeschichtlichen Literatur: Nordische Staaten.]

Bodo Bode, Minsleben, Germany, 1972, 19pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.2-3.

351 Ruprecht Glasewald

Index of the Glasewald Library. Part 1. German Language Items.

[Verzeichnis der Bücherei Glasewald. Teil 1. Die Deutschsprachigen Einzelschriften.]

2nd edition, Ruprecht Glasewald, Verlag der Philatelisten-Zeitung, Gössnitz, Germany, 1931, 19pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.

➤ Revised March 2008.

352 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Catalogue of the Hamburg Philatelic Library. [Part 1.]

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bücherei Hamburg. (Teil 1.)]

DBZ Sonderschriften Nr. 10, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1988, 74pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, Title page & p.3.

353 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Catalogue of the Hamburg Philatelic Library. Part 2.

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek Hamburg. Teil 2.]

DBZ Sonderschriften Nr. 13, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1992, 62pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, Title page & p.6.

354 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Catalogue of the Hamburg Philatelic Library. Parts 3 & 4.

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek Hamburg. Teil 3 & Teil 4.]

DBZ-Paul Parey Verlag, Singhofen, Germany, 1997, 66pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.6.

➤ Revised March 2008.

355 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek

Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Munich State Library. Part 1.

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek der Stadtbibliothek München. Teil 1.]

3rd edition, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Bad Ems, Germany, 1983, 76pp.

(3rd edition, 2nd reprint, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 7, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1990, 76pp. This reprint omits the endnote on page 75.)

Translation of the introductory text only, p.6 & 75.

356 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek

Catalogue of the Munich Philatelic Library. Part 2.

[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek München. Teil 2.]

3rd edition, DBZ-Sonderschrift Nr. 11, DBZ-Verlag, Nassau, Germany, 1990, 72pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.6.

357 Deutsche Altbriefsammler-Verein

Library Index.

[Bibliothekverzeichnis.]

Deutsche Altbriefsammler-Verein, Germany, 1987, 117pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.

➤ Revised March 2008.

358 Jens Peter Jørgensen

West Library: Supplement to the Library's Card Catalogue Index 1984-1992.
 [Bibliotek Vest: Supplement til Biblioteksfortegnelse 1984-1992.]
 Jens Peter Jørgensen (for Danmarks Filatelist Forbund), Østbirk, Denmark, n.d. [1992], 14pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.2.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

359 [Victor] Suppantchitsch

About irregularities in publication, errors and violations in the Numbering, Dating and Page numbering of philatelic periodicals up to the end of 1900.

[Ueber Unregelmässigkeiten bei Herausgabe, sowie über Irrungen und Verstösse in der Nummerirung, Datirung und Paginirung der Philatelistischen Zeitungsliteratur bis Ende 1900.]

Der Philatelist, April 1905, Volume 26, Issue 4, pp.114-116; May, Issue 5, pp.148-149; June, Issue 6, pp.181-182; July, Issue 7, pp.212-214; December, Issue 12, pp.378-379; January 1906, Volume 27, Issue 1, pp.12-13; March, Issue 3, pp.83-84; December, Issue 12, pp.381-383; January 1907, Volume 28, Issue 1, pp.19-20; February, Issue 2, pp.64-65; March, Issue 3, pp.100-101; April, Issue 4, pp.144-145; May, Issue 5, pp.186-187; June, Issue 6, pp.230-231; September/October, Issue 9/10, pp.358-359; November, Issue 11, pp.408-409; December, Issue 12, pp.455-457; January 1908, Volume 29, Issue 1, pp.20-21; February, Issue 2, pp.61-62; March, Issue 3, pp.110-111; April, Issue 4, pp.150-151 & May, Issue 5, pp.196-197.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.114.

{A critique of the work was published as Dr. Rommel: Berichtigungen und Ergänzungen zu Suppantchitschs Aufsatz über die Unregelmässigkeiten der Philatelistischen Zeitungs-Literatur. [Corrections and additions to Suppantchitsch's article on the irregularities of the philatelic periodical literature.], Der Philatelist, June 1910, Volume 31, Issue 6, pp.147-150 & July, Issue 7, pp.177-178. See Philat. Trans. 366.}

360 [Victor] Suppantchitsch

The Origin and Development of Philatelic Literature in the Second Half of the 19th Century.

[Die Entstehung und Entwicklung der Philatelistischen Literatur in der Zweiten Hälfte des XIX Jahrhunderts.]

Victor Suppantchitsch, Vienna, Austria, 1901, pp. (Only 150 examples issued.)

My copy is number 38.

361 Dr. O. Rommel

Scandinavian philatelic periodical literature.

[Die philatelistische zeitungsliteratur Skandinaviens.]

Der Philatelist, January 1903, Volume 24, Issue 1, pp.11-12 & February, Issue 2, pp.42-43.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.11.

362 Dr. Otto Rommel

Scandinavian philatelic periodical literature.

[Den filatelistiske tidsskrift-literatur i Norden.]

Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, February 1903, Volume 10, Issue 2, pp.17-20.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.17.

➤ Revised March 2008.

- 363 Dr. Otto Rommel
The philatelic periodical literature of the World in the years 1901-1903.
 [Die philatelistische zeitungslitteratur der Welt in den jahren 1901-1903.]
 Der Philatelist, March 1904, Volume 25, Issue 3, pp.71-73; April, Issue 4, pp.108-109; June, Issue 6, pp.162-163; July, Issue 7, pp.182-183; August, Issue 8, pp.208-209; October, Issue 9/10, pp.240-241; November, Issue 11, pp.277-278 & December, Issue 12, pp.320-321.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.71-72.
- 364 Dr. A. Moschkau
The philatelic literature of Germany.
 [Die philatelistische literatur Deutschlands.]
 Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, May 1874, Volume 1, Issue 5, pp.38-39.
 Translation of the introductory text only.
- 365 Dr. Otto Rommel
List of philatelic periodicals published at the beginning of 1908.
 [Verzeichnis der zu beginn des jahres 1908 erscheinenden philatelistischen zeitungen.]
 Der Philatelist, February 1908, Volume 29, Issue 2, pp.62-64.
 Translation of the epilogue only, p.64.
- 366 Dr. Otto Rommel
Corrections and additions to Suppanschitsch's essay on the irregularities of philatelic periodical literature
 [Berichtigungen und ergänzungen zu Suppanschitsch's aufsatz über die unregelmässigkeiten der philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur.]
 Der Philatelist, August 1906, Volume 27, Issue 8, pp.250-252.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.250.
- 367 Ludwig König
On philatelic literature.
 [Ueber philatelistische literatur.]
 In Stenographischer Bericht über den XVII. Deutschen Philatelistentag und den IX. Bundestag des Bundes Deutscher und Oesterreichischer Philatelisten-Vereine in Regensburg vom 21.-24. Juli 1905., pp.36-57. Supplement to: Vertrauliches Korrespondenz-Blatt Philatelistischer Vereine, November 1905, Volume 15, Issue 11.
 [May also be available as a reprint.]
 Also published in: Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, November 1905, Volume 16, Issue 11, pp.161-165 & December, Issue 12, pp.172-179.
 Also published in: Der Philatelist, November 1905, Volume 26, Issue 11, pp.330-347.
- 368 Dr. A. Moschkau
Germany's philatelic literature.
 [Deutschlands philatelistische literatur.]
 Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, June 1876, Volume 3, Whole number 30, pp.52-55; September, Whole number 33, p.78 & December, Whole number 36, pp.98-100.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.52-53.
- 369 Otto Gleixner
Why and how do I find philatelic literature?
 [Wie und wo finde ich philatelistische literatur?]
 Mitteilungsblätter – Bundestellen Forschung und Literatur, 1998, Issue 15, pp.19-22.

- 370 Table of Contents of the First Volume (Issues 1-15) of Syllectiki Epitheorisis.
Published with the January ? issue of Syllectiki Epitheorisis, 4pp.
This is a translation of the front page only in an effort to determine exactly what this document is.
- 371 [Georges Herpin]
Baptism.
[Baptême.]
Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, 15th November 1864, Volume 1, Issue 5, pp.20-21.
➤ Reprinted in French in:
 - From the original source., The Montreal Philatelist, March 1902, Volume 4, Issue 9, pp.70-71.
 - Georges Brunel: Ce qu'était la Philatélie en 1867., Yvert, Amiens, France, 1930, pp.11-12.
 - Carlrichard Bruhl: Geschichte der Philatelie., Two Volumes, George Olms Verlag, Hildesheim, Germany, 1985, p.24.
➤ The following translations have been found since I had the original article translated:
 - C. H. Mekeel: Philately., The Philatelic Journal of America, March 1886, Volume 2, Issue 1, pp.1-2.
 - M. T. Mills: Baptême: The baptism of stamp collecting., The Stamp Collector, June 1910, Volume 14, Issue 6, pp.79-80.
 - F. J. Peplow: The origin of the word, 'Philately'., The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, April 1915, Volume 8, Issue 2, pp.14-15.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 372 A. Kreuzer
Philatelic and postal history literature in Westfalian libraries.
[Philatelistische und postgeschichtliche literatur in Westfälischen bibliotheken.]
Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 1968, Volume 43, Issue 24, pp.4813-4814.
Translation of the introductory text only, p.4813.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 373 A. Reinheimer
The first postage stamp exhibition.
[Die erste postwerthzeichen-Austellung.]
Der Philatelist, August 1906, Volume 27, Issue 8, pp.249-250.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 374 [Dr. Emilio Diena]
Literary.
[Litterarisches.]
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, November 1894, Volume 5, Issue 2, p.21.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 375 Nino Barberis
Aicam Flash : Final number.
[Aicam Flash: Ultimo numero.]
Aicam Flash, October 1996, Issue 59/60, pp.1-2.
➤ Revised March 2008.

- 376 Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji
Polish Postal and Philatelic Periodicals.
 [Krajowe Czasopisma Pocztowe i Filatelistyczne. = Les Périodiques Postaux et Philatéliques Polonais.]
 Volume 3, Katalogi Zbiorów Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji we Wrocławiu., Seria E, Biblioteka., Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1990, pp.7-8.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 377 Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji
Polish Philatelic Periodicals.
 [Polskie Czasopisma Filatelistyczne. = Les Périodiques Philatéliques Polonais.]
 Volume 1, Katalogi Zbiorów Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji we Wrocławiu., Seria E, Biblioteka., Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1984, pp.6-15.
- 378 Aleksander Śnieżko
Philatelic Bookplates.
 [Ekslibrisy Filatelistyczne.]
 Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1957, 57pp.
- 379 Franz-Karl Lindner
Introduction.
 [Zum geleit.]
 IBRA-Bibliothekskatalog., Bund Deutscher Philatelisten/IBRA Philatelie, Forschheim, Germany, 1999, p.3.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 380 Wolfgang Massen
Preface.
 [Zum geleit.]
 in: Der Bazar für Briefmarken-Sammler., Reprint edition, Phil*Creativ, Schwalmtal, Germany, 1999, Unnumbered introductory page.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 381 Hubert Tretner
Introduction.
 [Zum geleit.]
 Katalog der Philatelistischen Fachbibliothek., Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Zeitz von 1880, Zeitz, Germany, 1993, pp.1-2.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 382 Alfred Schürgers
 [Zum Geleit.]
 Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek: Teil V – Ausstellungen, Jubiläen, Bundes- und Philatelistentage., Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 e. V., Germany, 1992, p.v.
- 383 G. van der Velden
Library Catalogue.
 [Catalogus der Bibliothek.]
 International Vereeniging “Philatelica”, S-Gravenhage, Netherlands, 1946, 24pp.
 Translation of the Introduction only, p.2.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

- 384 Osmanisches Reich/Türkei
Library List.
 [Literatur – Bestandsverzeichnis.]
 Arbeitsgemeinschaft Osmanisches Reich/Türkei im Bund Deutscher Philatelisten e.V.,
 Germany, 1994, n.p. (p.1).
 Translation of the Introduction only.
- 385 Osmanisches Reich/Türkei
Library List.
 [Bestandsverzeichnis = Library List.]
 Arbeitsgemeinschaft Osmanisches Reich/Türkei, Germany, 1996, 72pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 386 Alfons Ott
Foreword.
 [Vorwort.]
 Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek Katalog: Übersee., J.
 Gotteswinter, Munich, Germany, 1975, pp.5-6.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 387 Museo Postal y Telegráfico
Postal and Telegraphic Museum Library Philatelic Catalogue.
 [Biblioteca Museo Postal y Telegráfico Catálogo de Filatelia.]
 Museo Postal y Telgráfico, Madrid, Spain, n.d. [1997], 44pp.
 Translation of the Introductory text only, pp.i-ii.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 388 L. Lipinska
Summary.
 [Résumé.]
 Katalogi Zbiorów Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji we Wrocławiu., Seria D
 (Archiwum), Dokumenty., Volume 2, Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1988, pp.9-11.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 389 Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji
Foreign Postal and Philatelic Periodicals.
 [Zagraniczne Czasopisma Filatelistyczne i Pocztowe. = Les Périodiques Philatéliques et Postaux Étrangers.]
 Katalogi Zbiorów Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji we Wrocławiu., Seria E, Biblioteka., Volume 2, Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1988,
 88pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.7-8.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 390 Verbandes Schweizerischer Philatelistenvereine
Foreword.
 [Vorwort.]
 Katalog der Zentralbibliothek des Verbandes Schweizerischer Philatelistenvereine. =
 Catalogue de la Bibliothèque Centrale de l'Union Suisse des Associations Philatéliques. Generaldirektion PTT, Bern, Switzerland, 1951, p.2.

- Revised March 2008.
- 391 H. L. J. Weidema
Foreword.
 [Voorwoord.]
Catalogus van de Bibliotheek van de Nederlandse Bond van Filatelistenverenigingen.,
 Nederlandse Bond van Filatelistenverenigingen, Netherlands, 1962, n.pp. [pp.3-4].
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 392 Joh. van de Ven
Catalogue of the Library of the Nederlandsche Bond van Verenigingen van Postzegelverzamelaars.
 [Catalogus van de Bibliotheek van de Nederlandsche Bond van Verenigingen van Postzegelverzamelaars.]
 Nederlandsche Bond van Verenigingen van Postzegelverzamelaars, Netherlands, 1952, n.p. (p.3).
 Translation of the Introduction only.
- 393 A. S. Doorman
Catalogue of the Library of the Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars.
 [Catalogus van de Bibliotheek der Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars.]
 Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars, Netherlands, 1933, p.1.
- 394 W. F. Smit
Foreword.
 [Voorwoord.]
Catalogus Bondsbibliotheek - 1974., Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen,
 Netherlands, 1974, p.01.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 395 C. Spoelman
Foreword to the 4th supplement.
 [Voorwoord bij de 4e aanvulling.]
4e aanvulling [Catalogus Bondsbibliotheek – 1974]. Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen, Netherlands, 1979, n.p. (p.1).
- 396 Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg
Contents.
 [Inhalt.]
Bücherverzeichnis Band 2. Europa, Übersee, Motive., Philatelistische Bücherei
 Hamburg, Germany, n.d. [1979], [pp.ii-iv] & 36-38.
 ➤ Formerly incorporated into Philat. Trans. 8.
 ➤ Revised March 2008 and pages 36-38 added February 2014.
- 397 Schwanke & Sohn's literature auction No. 258, 5th March 1999.
 [5. 3. 1999: 258. Auktion Schwanke & Sohn (Literatur).]
 Auction No. 259, Schwanke & Sohn, 2nd-4th September 1999, n.p.
 Reprinted from DBZ/SE, May 1999, Volume 74, Issue 10, pp.62-63.
- 398 Translation Digest.
 Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, July 1932, Volume 1, Issue 1.

- 399 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, January 1933, Volume 2, Issue 1.
- 400 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, February 1933, Volume 2, Issue 2.
- 401 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, March 1933, Volume 2, Issue 3.
- 402 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, April 1933, Volume 2, Issue 4.
- 403 Dr. Legrand
Meeting of the 3rd October 1889.
[Séance du 3 Octobre 1889.]
Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, December 1889, Volume 4, Whole number 50, pp.97-98.
- 404 Rudolf Krasemann
Overview of philatelic literature from its beginning to today.
[Öfversikt af den filatelistiska litteraturen från dess uppkomst till nutiden.]
Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift, 1906, Volume 7, Issue 4, pp.62-64; Issue 5, pp.82-85; Issue 6, pp.102-104 & Issue 7, pp.116-117.
- 405 Wilhelm Faber
To our readers.
[An unsere Leser.]
Bazar für Briefmarkensammler, July 1869, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 406 Rud. Krasemann
Bibliography of the most important monographs on the postage stamps and postal stationery of individual countries.
[Bibliographie der wichtigsten Spezialwerke über die Postwertzeichen einzelner Länder.]
Der Deutsche Philatelist, January 1908, Volume 2, Issue 1, pp.6-8; February, Issue 2, pp.20-22; April, Issue 4, pp.43-45; May, Issue 5, pp.53-54; June, Issue 6, pp.60-61; July, Issue 7, pp.70-72; August, Issue 8, pp.80-82; October, Issue 10, pp.98-99 & November, Issue 11, pp.111-112.
{This comprises a translation of the additions to the original Stockholm edition of 1907 only. A complete translation of the latter can be found as Philat. Trans. 004. This translation was originally made available as an Appendix to Philat. Trans. 004.}
{Reprinted on both thin and thick, oversize paper as a: Second, extended and much improved edition, Der Deutsche Philatelist, Hanover, Germany, 1908, 40pp. This special edition of only 100 copies was made for the requirements of the author and not for sale.}
- 407 Gerd Gnewuch
Hermann Deninger Library.
[Hermann Deninger-Bibliothek.]
Stiftung zur Förderung der Philatelie und Postgeschichte, Germany, 1990, n.pp. [60pp.]

Translation of the introductory text only, n.pp. [p.2].

408 Martin Strack

Library Catalogue 1999.

[Bibliotheksverzeichnis 1999.]

Forschungsgemeinschaft Grossbritannien, Germany, 1999, 107pp.

Translation of the Foreword and introductory text only, pp.iii & 1

409 Nordische Staaten

Regarding the Use of the Holdings of the Library of the Research Group Scandinavian Countries e. V.

[Zum Umgang mit den Bestandslisten der Bücherei der Forschungsgemeinschaft Nordische Staaten e.V.]

Forschungsgemeinschaft Nordische Staaten, Germany, n.d. [1987], n.pp. [20pp.]

Translation of the introductory text only, p.[1].

410 Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes

Library Index of the Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes. (As at the 1st July 1897.)

[Bibliotheks-Verzeichniss des Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes. (Stand am 1. Juli 1897.)]

Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes, Germany, 1897, 8pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.

411 Sabine Schwanke & Hans-Joachim Schwanke

"Alicante" Library.

[Bibliothek "Alicante".]

Philatelistische Literatur., Sale 263, Schwanke & Sohn Briefmarkenauktionen, Hamburg, Germany, 10th March 2000, n.pp. [p.3].

➤ Revised March 2008.

412 Dr. Legrand

Catalogue of the International Postage Stamp Exhibition: Paris September 1892.

[Catalogue de L'Exposition Internationale de Timbres-Poste: Paris Septembre 1892.]

A. –M. Beaudelot, Paris, France, 1892.

Translation of the Foreword and Philatelic Bibliography sections, pp.3-13 & 50.

413 Pierre Jullien

The adventure continues.

[L'aventure continue.]

Timbres Magazine, April 2000, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.5.

414 Philatelic mish-mash.

[Philatelistischer Kladderadatsch.]

Briefmarken Spiegel, March 2000, Volume 40, Issue 3, p.15.

415 Postal Museum library is temporarily closed.

[Postmuseums-Bibliothek vorübergehend geschlossen.]

Michel-Rundschau, August 1998, Issue 8, p.676.

416 Ch. Holm

Library Catalogue.

[Katalog over Biblioteket.]

Københavns Philatelistklub, Copenhagen, Denmark, 1931, 95pp.
Translation of the Foreword only, p.iii.

- 417 H.-H. Mette & P. Tiberius
Catalogue of the Philatelic Library: Part I German Language Periodicals.
Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek: Teil I Deutschsprachige Periodika.
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1988, 53pp.
Translation of the Introduction only, p.I.
- 418 Friedo Giese, Petros Tiberius & Hans-Joachim Thiele
Philatelic Library Catalogue: Part I German Periodicals; Part II Foreign Periodicals.
[Phila-Bibliothek Katalog: Teil I Deutsche Periodika Teil II Ausländische Periodika.]
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878, Frankfurt am Main, Germany, 1998, 153pp.
Translation of the Introduction only, pp.v-vi.
- 419 Library Catalogue (Books).
[Bibliothekskatalog (Bücher).]
2nd edition, Verbandes Österreichischer Philatelistenvereine, Vienna, Austria, 1993,
224pp.
Translation of the Foreword only, p.1
- 420 A. Kreuzer
Outstanding German philatelists.
[Bedeutende philatelisten Deutschlands.]
Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 5th December 1970, Volume 45, Issue 23,
p.4497.
- 421 Panagioti D. Kagelari
Dictionary of Greek Philatelists.
Athens, Greece, 1982, 112pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.6-14.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 422 Paulo [de Oliveira] Sá Machado
Personalities of Philately I.
[Vultos da Filatelia I.]
Federação Postal Portuguesa, Porto, Portugal, 1995, n.pp. [111pp.]
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.[3 & 5].
- 423 Paulo [de Oliveira] Sá Machado
Personalities of Philately II.
[Vultos da Filatelia II.]
Federação Postal Portuguesa, Porto, Portugal, 1998, n.pp. [114pp.]
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.[3 & 5].
- 424 Paulo [de Oliveira] Sá Machado
Personalities of Philately III.
[Vultos da Filatelia III.]
Federação Postal Portuguesa, Porto, Portugal, 1998, n.pp. [114pp.]
Translation of the foreword only, p.[3].
- 425 Wolfgang Maassen

Who is Who in Philately?

[Wer ist Wer in der Philatelie?]

Phil*Creativ Verlag, Schwalmtal, Germany, 1999, 240pp.

Only the introductory pages and those pages containing biographies of philatelists of interest to myself have been translated:- pp.2-4, 9-10, 14-15, 90, 171-172 & 207-208.

426 Alfred Moschkau

Outline of a history of postage stamps and of stamp collecting (Philately).

[Abriss einer Geschichte der Briefmarken und des Briefmarkensammelwesens (Philatelie).]

in: Die Wasserzeichen auf den Seit 1818 bis Dato Emittirten Briefmarken und Couverts nebst Abriss einer Geschichte der Briefmarken und des Briefmarkensammelwesens (Philatelie)., First edition, Philatelistische Bibliothek Volume 1, C. E. Dietze, Dresden, Germany, 1871, pp.vii-viii & 1-14.

427 Alfred Moschkau

Outline of a history of postage stamps and of stamp collecting (Philately).

[Abriss einer Geschichte der Briefmarken und des Briefmarkensammelwesens (Philatelie).]

in: Die Wasserzeichen auf den Seit 1818 bis Dato Emittirten Briefmarken und Couverts nebst Abriss einer Geschichte der Briefmarken und des Briefmarkensammelwesens (Philatelie)., Second edition, Philatelistische Bibliothek Volume 1, C. E. Dietze, Dresden, Germany, 1872, pp.vii-viii & 4-14.

428 Francisco Aracil

Historia de la Literatura Filatélica Española.

[History of Spanish Philatelic Literature.]

Exposición Nacional de Literatura Filatélica., Biblioteca National, Ministerio de Cultura, Madrid, Spain, 10th September to 1st October 1993, pp.41-175.

429 Dr. phil. Alfred Moschkau

Zur Geschichte der Philatelie.

[The History of Philately.]

Verlag Louis Senf, Leipzig, Germany, 1879.

Translation of the Foreword only, n.pp. [1p.]

430 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August 1925, Volume 5, Issue 3.

431 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1925, Volume 5, Issue 4.

432 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April/June 1926, Volume 6, Issue 2.

433 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November 1926, Volume 6, Issue 4.

434 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1927, Volume 7, Issue 1.

435 Translation Digest.

- Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1927, Volume 7, Issue 2.
- 436 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, May 1927, Volume 7, Issue 3.
- 437 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1927, Volume 7, Issue 4.
- 438 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September 1927, Volume 7, Issue 5.
- 439 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November 1927, Volume 7, Issue 6.
- 440 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1928, Volume 8, Issue 1.
- 441 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1928, Volume 8, Issue 2.
- 442 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1928, Volume 8, Issue 3.
- 443 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, June 1928, Volume 8, Issue 4.
- 444 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August 1928, Volume 8, Issue 5.
- 445 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November 1928, Volume 8, Issue 6/7.
- 446 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1929, Volume 9, Issue 1.
- 447 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1929, Volume 9, Issue 2.
- 448 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1930, Volume 10, Issue 1.
- 449 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, June 1930, Volume 10, Issue 2.
- 450 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September 1930, Volume 10, Issue 3.
- 451 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1930, Volume 10, Issue 4.
- 452 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1934, Volume 14, Issue 5.

- 453 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, May 1934, Volume 3, Issue 5.
- 454 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, April 1934, Volume 3, Issue 4.
- 455 Translation Digest.
Literatur-Nachrichten, 1997, Issue 97, pp.4 & 1059.
- 456 Translation Digest.
Literatur-Nachrichten, 1998, Volume 98.
- 457 Translation Digest.
Literatur-Nachrichten, 1996, Whole number 96, pp.4 & 806.
- 458 Dr. Otto Carl Alfred Moschkau
Geschichte der Philatelie (Briefmarkenkunde).
[History of Philately (Stamp Collecting).]
Geschichte der Briefmarken und der Philatelie (Briefmarkenkunde). Nebst einer Beschreibung aller Bekannten Wasserzeichen auf Briefmarken, Couverts etc., Third edition, Philatelistische Bibliothek, First Volume, Louis Senf, Leipzig, Germany, 1878, pp.iv-v & 18-68.
- 459 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Litteratur, 15th August 1897, Volume 3, Issue 8.
- 460 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Litteratur, 1st September 1897, Volume 3, Issue 9.
- 461 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Litteratur, 1st October 1897, Volume 3, Issue 10.
- 462 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Litteratur, 15th October 1897, Volume 3, Issue 11.
- 463 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Litteratur, 15th November 1897, Volume 3, Issue 12.
- 464 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1924, Volume 4, Issue 4.
- 465 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1925, Volume 5, Issue 1.
- 466 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1925, Volume 5, Issue 2.
- 467 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, May 1937, Volume 17, Issue 5.
- 468 Dr. Johannes Schubert

Philatelic libraries: History, formation and use.

[Philatelistische Bibliotheken. Geschichte, Aufstellung und Benutzung.]

Reprinted from Die Philatelistische Literatur, 1934, Volume 3, pp.13-16; pp.22-23; pp.30-31 & pp.30-40.

469 C. Schmitt diel

Various documents relating to the formation and early days of the Interessengemeinschaft Phil. Literatursammler [Society for those Interested in Philatelic Literature], which evolved into the Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde [Philatelic Literature Society], Germany, 1932-1933.

Document 1

C. Schmitt diel

Foundation Protocol.

[Gründungsprotokoll.]

1st October 1932, n.pp. [1pp.]

[Proposal for the establishment of a Society for Literature Collectors, written on Der Philatelistische Literatursammler letter heading.]

Document 2

- a. Society for Collectors of Philatelic literature.(missing)
[Interessengemeinschaft Philatelistischer Literatursammler.]
Notice sent out to prospective members with a copy of the projected work program attached, n.d. [1932], 2pp.
- g. Der Philatelistische Literatursammler.
Two sample pages from the new magazine, Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, to be published as a supplement to the Grüne Sammler-Welt, June 1932, 2pp.
- h. Post Inspector Paul Simson. (Missing)
[Herrn Postinspektor Paul Simson.]
Letter to Paul Simson, 14th September 1932, 1p.
- j. [Notice to the members.]
Interessengemeinschaft Philatelistischer Literaturesammler, 27th September 1933, 1p.
- k. Invitation.
[Einladung.]
Gesellschaft der Philatelistischen Literaturfreunde, 1st October 1932, 2pp.
- l. [Notice to the Members.]
Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde, 1st August 1935, 1p.
- m. Mr. Paul Simson.
[Herrn Paul Simson.]
Letter to Paul Simson, 26th September 1935, 1p.+attachment.
- n. l. [Notice to the Members.]
Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde, n.d., 2pp.

470 Translation Digest.

Literatur - Nachrichten, 1995, Volume 95.

471 Wolfram Buddensieg & Jurgen Jänecke

Index to the Bahnpost Berichte 1973-1998.

[Index der Berichte Bahnpost 1973-1998.]

Schriftenreihe Heft 1, Bundesarbeitsgemeinschaft Bahnpost im Bund Deutscher Philatelisten e.V., 2000, Germany.
Translation of the index and captions to the illustrations.

472 Eduardo Escalada-Goicoechea

The Organisation of the Carlist Post (1873-1876).

[La Organización del Correo Carlista (1873-1876).]

Discursos Académicos Volume 11, Academia Hispánica de Filatelia, Madrid, Spain, 2000.

Translation of the author's biography only, pp.5-6.

473 Adalbert W. Wiederholt

Infothek.

Internationale Forschungsgemeinschaft Kirchenstaat mit Vorphilatelie und Vatikanstaat, Germany, 2000.

Translation of the Introduction only, pp.(i) + 1-2.

474 Alexander Bungerz

The Sale of the Herbert Clark Library.

[Die Versteigerung der Bibliothek von Herbert Clark.]

Verlag der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1924, 17pp.

Translation of the introductory and explanatory text only, pp.1 & 16-17.

475 Jürgen Andriesen

Inventory List of Literature.

[Bestandsliste der Literaturstelle.]

Arbeitsgemeinschaft Deutsche Notmassnahmen ab 1945, Germany, 1997, 32pp.

Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-2.

476 W. H. Hertfelder

Library Catalogue.

[Bibliotheks-Verzeichnis.]

Arbeitsgemeinschaft R+V-Zettel, Germany, 1987.

Translation of the introductory page only, n.pp. [p.1].

477 Ulrich Felzmann

Library: Emil W. Mewes.

Bibliothek "Emil W. Mewes"., Auction 97, 2nd May 2001, Ulrich Felzmann Briefmarken-Auktionen, Germany.

Translation of the Foreword only, n.pp. [p.1].

478 Corneille Soeteman

The Corneille Soeteman Library.

Part I, La Philatélie Corneille Soeteman, Postal auction, 26th September 2001, Brussels, Belgium.

Translation of the introductory page only, n.pp. [p.1].

479 Hans-Jürgen Dobiak

Foreword to the 1st edition.

[Vorwort zur 1. Lieferung.]

Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek Wuppertal e.V., Wuppertal, Germany, n.d. (ca.2001), n.pp. [p.1].

- 480 Abel Fontaine.
[Abel Fontaine.]
Cronista Filatélico, August 2001, Issue 240, pp.25-30.
This is one page of an article entitled Dia de la prensa filatélica. [Philatelic press day.], p.25.
- 481 Burkhard Schneider
Literature Offer N°12 with the "Taunus Library" Part 4.
[Literaturangebot Nr. 12 mit "Taunus-Bibliothek" 4. Teil.]
Burkhard Schneider, Gelnhausen, Germany, 2001, n.pp. [pp.i-ii.]
- 482 [Alfred Montader (Editor)]
Philatelic literature.
[Littérature philatélique.]
Le Postillon, 1st March 1908, Volume 7, Whole number 322, pp.97-100.
- 483 Translation Digest.
Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur - Rundbrief, September 1956, Issue 1.
- 484 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, June 1934, Volume 3, Issue 6.
- 485 Translation Digest.
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September 1926, Volume 6, Issue 3.
- 486 Dr. A. Moschkau
Philatelic Bibliography.
[Philatelistische Bibliographie.]
Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, 3rd March 1888, Volume 15, Issue 5, pp.75-76.
- 487 John Siewert
Exchange.
[Sprechsaal.]
Der Philatelist, December 1887, Volume 8, Issue 12, p.151.
- 488 Bibliography of the German philatelic literature.
[Bibliographie der deutschen philatelistischen literatur.]
Der Philatelist, June 1891, Volume 12, Issue 9, p.170.
- 489 Gustav Weicke
The significance of the specialist literature of our science for the stamp collector.
[Die wichtigkeiit der fach-literatur unserer wissenschaft für den briefmarkensammler.] Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, 1st July 1884, Volume 11, Issue 13, pp.183-185.
- 490 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, July 1934, Volume 3, Issue 7.
- 491 Burkhard Schneider
Dispersion of the "Taunus Library" Part 5.
[Auflösung der "Taunus-Bibliothek" 5. Teil.]
Literaturangebot Nr. 14 mit "Taunus-Bibliothek" 5. Teil.

Burkhard Schneider, Gelnhausen, Germany, 2002, n.pp. [Inside front cover].

492 Burkhard Schneider

Dispersion of the "Taunus Library" Part 2.

[Auflösung der "Taunus-Bibliothek" 2 teil.]

Literaturangebot Nr. 10 mit "Taunus-Bibliothek" 2. Teil., Burkhard Schneider, Gelnhausen, Germany, 2001, [p.ii].

493 Dr. A. Moschkau

Geschichte der Briefmarken und der Philatelie (Briefmarkenkunde).

[History of Postage Stamps and of Philately (Stamp Collecting).] in: Die Wasserzeichen auf Briefmarken, Couverts, Postkarten etc. Nebst einer Geschichte der Briefmarken und des Briefmarkensammelwesens (Philatelie). Fourth edition, Philatelistische Bibliothek, Volume 1, Louis Senf, Leipzig, Germany, 1880, pp.vi & 18-77.

494 Burkhard Schneider

Dispersion of the "Taunus Library" Part 6.

[Auflösung der "Taunus-Bibliothek" 6 teil.]

in: Literaturangebot Nr. 15 mit "Taunus-Bibliothek" 6. Letzter Teil.

Burkhard Schneider, Gelnhausen, Germany, September 2002, [p.ii.]

495 Dr. R. Schätzler

Bookplates also delight the collector's heart.

[Auch das exlibris erfreut des sammlers herz.]

Sammler-Express, November 1947, Volume 1, Issue 17, p.262.

496 H. A. Gerhard Tag

On collecting bookplates by topic.

[Über das motivsammeln von exlibris.]

Sammler-Express, April 1954, Volume 8, Issue 8, p.121.

497 H. A. Gerhard Tag

Small bookplates – Servants of a great cause.

[Kleines exlibris – Diener eines grossen ziele.]

Sammler-Express, December 1954, Volume 8, Issue 23, p.371.

➤ In spite of being published in a philatelic magazine, this article relates to bookplates only and has no philatelic content.

➤ Revised March 2008.

498 Dr. A. Moschkau

Philatelic Bibliography.

[Philatelistische Bibliographie.]

Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 1st September 1889, Volume 2, Issue 17, pp.251-252.

499 Dr. A. Moschkau

Bibliography of philately.

[Bibliographie der Briefmarkenkunde.]

Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 15th November 1888, Volume 1, Issue 22, pp.318-319.

500 Victor Suppantchitsch

A bibliography of German philatelic literature.

[Eine bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur.]

Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 15th August 1891, Volume 4, Issue 16, pp.330-331.

501 Hermann Mittelman

Specialist periodicals no longer published.

[Eingegangene fachblätter.]

Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 1st June 1891, Volume 4, Issue 11, pp.226-228.

Translation of the introductory text only.

➤ Revised March 2008.

502 Karl von Gündel

The projected appearance of a bibliography of German philatelic literature.

[Das in aussicht stehende erscheinen einer bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen litteratur.]

Illustrierte Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung mit Universum, June 1891, Volume 10, Issue 6, n.pp. [3pp.]

503 Translation Digest.

Magazin für Philatelistische Literature, June 1950, Volume 1, Issue 1.

504 Corneille Soeteman

The Corneille Soeteman Library.

Part II, Vente sur Offres [Postal auction], 26th February 2003, La Philatélie Corneille Soeteman, Brussels, Belgium.

Translation of the introductory page only, n.pp. [p.9].

➤ Revised March 2008.

505 Editorial.

[Éditorial.]

Filatelica, 1929, pp.iii-iv.

506 Ernst Roschlau (Editor)

Postage stamp literature.

[Die briefmarkenliterature.]

Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1st October 1864, Volume 1, Issue 7, pp.57-58; 1st November, Issue 9, pp.73-74; 1st December, Issue 11, p.89 & 15th December, Issue 12, pp.93-94.

507 The Library.

[Die Bibliothek.]

Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888 – Mitteilungen, June 1988, Neue folge 62, pp.9-10.

508 Sabine Schwanke & Hans-Joachim Schwanke

Very esteemed ladies and gentlemen.

[Sehr geehrte damen und herren.]

Philatelistische Literatur., Auction 277, Schwanke Briefmarkenauktionen, 22nd March 2002, Hamburg, Germany, n.pp.

Translation of the introductory page only.

509 Gerhard Tag

Bookplates of women and for women.

- [Exlibris von frauen und für frauen.]
 Sammler-Express, March 1960, Volume 14, Issue 5, p.99.
 ➤ In spite of being published in a philatelic magazine, this article relates to bookplates only and has no philatelic content.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 510 Dr. E. Diena
A reference book about philatelic literature.
 [Ein nachschlagebuch über philatelistische litteratur.]
 Das Postwertzeichen, July 1889, Volume 2, Issue 7, pp.66-67 & August, Issue 8, pp.80-81.
- 511 Corneille Soeteman
The Corneille Soeteman Library.
 Part III, Postal Auction, La Philatélie Corneille Soeteman, 12th May 2004, Brussels, Belgium, n.pp. [1p.]
 Translation of the introductory text only.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 512 Ulrich Felzmann
Literature Auction "Roland" Library.
 [Literatur-Auktion "Roland"-Bibliothek.]
 Auction No. 87, Ulrich Felzmann, 16th January 1999, Dusseldorf, Germany, 1999, p.6.
 Translation of the introductory text only.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 513 Jadwiga Bartków-Domagala
Bookplates on Postal Subjects: Catalogue 1977.
 [Ex Libris o Tematyce Pocztovej: Katalog 1977.]
 Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji, Wrocław, Poland, 1977.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.4.
- 514 Victor Suppantshitsch
A bibliography of German philatelic literature.
 [Eine bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur.]
 Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier, May 1891, Volume 6, Issue 9, pp.75-77 & August, Issue 15, p.132. (The final page is a note from the editor about the state of subscriptions to the Bibliography.)
- 515 Adr. Brinkoff
Notes: 2 – Johan Karel Koning.
 [Anmerkungen: 2 - Johan Karel Koning.]
 Arbeitsgemeinschaft Niederlande Rundbrief, 1981, Issue 100, p.63.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 516 Dr. Gerardo Álvarez
A short history of the Rivadavia Library of Cañada de Gómez.
 [Breve Historia de la Biblioteca Rivadavia de Cañada de Gómez.]
 Litfil Cañada de Gómez 2004., Asociación de Cronistas Filatélicos de la Argentina, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 2004, pp.14-16.
 In the event, this turned out to have no relevance to philately.

- 517 Dr. R. Sch[ätzler],
Coloured copper-plate engraving – a very appealing collecting topic.
 [Der farbige kupferstich – ein reizvolles sammelgebiet.]
 Sammler-Express, 1960, Volume 14, Issue 6, p.119.
 This also includes a translation of the text under the bookplate illustrated within the article, although the bookplate is not related to the article.
 ➤ In spite of being published in a philatelic magazine, this article relates to bookplates only and has no philatelic content.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 518 Wolfgang Maassen
Literature Collecting – Building Libraries: Tips for Those who Enjoy Books and Those who Love to Own Books.
 [Literatur Sammeln – Bibliotheken Pflegen: Tipps für Bücherfreunde und Bücherliehaber.]
 Ratgeber für Briefmarkensammler Band 4, Phil*Creativ Verlag, Schwalmtal, Germany, 2004, pp.3-14.
 Translation of the Contents, Foreword and Introduction only.
- 519 Wolfgang Maassen
Philatelic Libraries - of collectors and for collectors!
 [Philatelistische bibliotheken – von sammeln und für sammler!]
 Häuser der Philatelie: Eine Heimat für Sammler., Schriftenreihe zur Geschichte der Philatelie in Deutschland N°. 4, Consilium Philatelicum, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, Bonn, Germany, 2004, pp.53-64.
- 520 Translation Digest.
 Der Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler, October 1909, Volume 3, Issue 3. (Whole number 10.)
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 521 Translation Digest.
 Der Philatelistische Litteratur-Sammler, June 1909, Volume 3, Issue 1. (Whole number 8.)
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 522 Aleksander Sniezko
Polish philatelic bookplates.
 [Polnische philatelistische exlibris.]
 Sammler Express, 1st February 1957, Volume 11, Issue 3, p.43.
- 523 H. A. Gerhard-Tag
Bookplate.
 [Exlibris.]
 Sammler-Express, 1951, Volume 5, Issue 16, p.251.
- 524 Wolfgang Maassen
Chronicle of German Philately: 2002.
 [Chronik der Deutschen Philatelie: 2002.]
 Phil*Creativ Verlag, Schwalmtal, Germany, 2003.
 Translation of the Foreword only, pp.3-6.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.

- 525 To the memory of Michel Fingesten.
[Zur Erinnerung an Michel Fingesten.]
Sammler-Express, 1959, Volume 13, Issue 11, p.224.
- 526 Gerhard Tag
Our Bookplate=express.
[Unser exlibris=express.]
Sammler-Express, 1959, Volume 13, Issue 20, p.404.
- 527 Gerhard Tag
Our bookplate=express.
[Unser exlibris=express.]
Sammler-Express, 1959, Volume 13, Issue 8, p.164.
- 528 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum, Mitglieder-Rundschreiben
February 1943, Issue 1.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 529 Translation Digest.
Deutsche Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum-Mitglieder-Rundschreiben, 1st
April 1943, Issue 2.
- 530 Alexander Bungerz
About Circuits and Exchanges.
[Über Rundsendungen und Tauschverbindungen.]
2nd enlarged edition of Wie Behandelt man Rundsendungen? [How Does One Handle Circuits?], Verlag der "Sammler Woche", Munich, Germany, n.d. [ca.1921], p.3.
Translation of the Foreword only.
- 531 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literaturschau, December 1948, Volume 1, Issue 1.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 532 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literaturschau, January 1949, Volume 1, Issue 2.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 533 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literaturschau, February/March 1949, Volume 1, Issue 3.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 534 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literaturschau, April/May 1949, Volume 1, Issue 4.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 535 Franz Himmelbauer
A partisan of Sir Pearson Hill.
[Ein Parteigänger Sir Pearson Hill's.]
Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier, 10th November 1891, Volume 6, Issue 21, pp.175-176
& Issue 22, pp.205-207.

➤ Revised March 2008.

- 536 K. Scharfenberg
Bylaws of the German Society for Philatelic Literature.
[Satzung der Deutschen Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum.]
Deutschen Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum, Berlin, 22nd November 1942,
6pp.
Translation of the introductory text only, p.1.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 537 Directeur Générale des Postes et des Télégraphes
[A letter to Patrick Chalmers]
Paris, France, 16th April 1891, 1p.
- 538 Patrick Chalmers
The Adhesive Postage Stamp.
[A letter from Patrick Chalmers to J.-B. Moens of Brussels.]
[Le Timbre-Poste Adhésif.]
Wimbledon, UK, 7th August 1890, 1p.
- 539 Patrick Chalmers
The Adhesive Postage Stamp.
[Le Timbre-Poste Adhésif.]
Wimbledon, UK, 26th May 1890, 1p.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 540 Patrick Chalmers
The Adhesive Postage Stamp: To the Editor in Chief of Timbre-Poste
[Le Timbre Adhésif: Au Rédacteur en Chef du Timbre-Poste]
Wimbledon, UK, 5th August 1890, 4pp.
- 541 P. Stettiner
[Letter to Patrick Chalmers.]
Librarian, Ministero delle Poste dei Telegrafi, Rome, Italy, 1p.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 542 Philatelistenclub Berlin-Mitte
Club Journal: Reports and Communications of the Philatelisten-Club Berlin-Mitte with the “DDR-Spezial” Working Group: Index, Hefte 1-30, 1995-2002.
[Clubjournal: Berichte und Mitteilungen des Philatelisten-Clubs Berlin-Mitte mit der Arbeitsgemeinschaft “DDR-Spezial”: Index Heft 1-30, 1995-2002.]
Philatelistenclub Berlin-Mitte, Berlin, Germany, n.d. [ca.2003], p.12.
Translation of the explanatory text only.
- 543 J. Vellekoop
Open doors - doors open: An overview of articles published in Dutch exhibition catalogues appearing between 1952 and 1985.
[Open deuren – deuren open: Een overzicht van tussen 1952 en 1985 in Nederlandse tentoonstellingscatalogi verschenen artikelen.]
C. Stapel (Editor): Postmerken 86., Nederandse Vereniging van Poststukken- en Poststempelverzamelaars, Assen, Netherlands, 1986, pp.381-382

- 544 Rev. Naumann
In commemoration of A. E. Glasewald Senior.
 [A. E. Glasewald sen. zum gedächtnis.]
 Philatelisten-Zeitung, October 1927, Volume 35, Issue 10, pp.121 & 128.
 ➤ Revised March 2008.
- 545 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 1st March 1904, Issue 1.
- 546 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 2nd March 1904, Issue 2.
- 547 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 1st April 1904, Issue 3.
- 548 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 2nd April 1904, Issue 4.
- 549 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 1st May 1904, Issue 5.
- 550 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 12th May 1904, Issue 6.
- 551 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 1st June 1904, Issue 7.
- 552 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 2nd June 1904, Issue 8.
- 553 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 7th June 1904, Issue 9.
- 554 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 10th June 1904, Issue 10.
- 555 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 15th September 1904, Issue 11/12.
- 556 Translation Digest.
 Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 31st December

1904, Issue 13.

- 557 Translation Digest.
Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 6th January 1905, Issue 14.
- 558 Translation Digest.
Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 25th March 1905, Issue 15/16.
- 559 Translation Digest.
Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk, 30th June 1905, Issue 17.
- 560 André de Cock
René Poncelet's Library.
[La Bibliothèque René Poncelet.]
61st Public Auction, Willy Balasse, Brussels, Belgium, 7th, 9th & 14th July 1945, pp.41-42.
- 561 André de Cock
The Bruck library.
[La Bibliothèque Bruck.]
78th Auction Sale, Willy Balasse, Brussels, Belgium, 5th April 1947, [p.75].
- 562 Otto Gleixner
The philatelic library in Munich.
[Die Philatelistische Bibliothek in München.]
Berner Briefmarken Zeitung, May/June 1995, Volume 87, Issue 5/6, pp.95-96.
- 563 Christoph Otto Müller
Catalogue of the Philatelic Section of the Munich State Library, 13 Weinstrasse.
[Katalog der Philatelistischen Abteilung der Stadtbibliothek München, Weinstrasse 13.]
Philatelistischen Abteilung der Stadtbibliothek München, Germany, 1938.
Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-6.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 564 Wolfgang Maassen
"This man never loses his composure, he is a rock in the midst of a storm"
Reminiscences following the 300th Schwanke auction in Hamburg
["Der Mann hat einfach die Ruhe weg, er ist ein Fels im Sturmgebräus" Reminiszenzen zur 300. Schwanke-Auktion in Hamburg.]
Philatelie, November 2005, Volume 57, pp.14, 16 & 18.
- 565. H. F. [H. Fränkel]
The Trojan War in philately.
[Der Trojanische Krieg in der Philatelie.]
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1891, Volume 1, Issue 4, pp.37-39.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 566 [Dr. Hans Brendicke (Editor)]
On the Chalmers-Hill-question.

- [Zur Chalmers-Hill-frage.]
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, August 1891, Volume 1, Issue 11, p.143.
- 567 “Philatelica” and “Wereldpost”.
[“Philatelica” en “Wereldpost”.]
Wereldpost, December 1919, Volume 1, Issue 12, p.153.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 568 Christoph Otto Müller
From the memoirs of a professional philatelic librarian.
[Aus den erinnerungen eines philatelistischen berufsbibliothekars.]
Der Sammler-Lupe, June 1953, Volume 8, Issue 12, p.182.
- 569 Ch. Otto Müller
Announcement from the Federal Office for Philatelic Literature.
[Bekanntgabe der Bundesstelle Philatelistische Literature.]
Die Sammler-Lupe, May 1950, Volume 5, Issue 10, p.161.
- 570 State Post Central Office/ Research Organization of the DRP
[Reichpostzentramt/Forschungsanstalt der DRP]
From an unknown source, pp.35-36.
- 571 The German philatelic press
[Die Deutsche, philatelistische presse.]
Philatelisten-Zeitung, May 1927, Volume 35, Issue 5, pp.70-72.
Translation of the introductory text only.
➤ Revised March 2008.
- 572 The German philatelic press.
[Die Deutsche, philatelistische presse.]
Philatelisten-Zeitung, June 1927, Volume 35, Issue 6, pp.82-83.
- 573 Bibliography: Periodicals.
[Bibliografie: Tijdschriften.]
De Philatelist, May 1928, Volume 3, Issue 5, p.112.
Translation of the introductory text only.
- 574 Argentine philatelic bibliography.
[Bibliografia filatelica Argentina.]
Cronista Filatélico, April 2003, Whole number 245, pp.6-8.
- 575 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, August 1934, Volume 3, Issue 8.
Reprinted from Der Deutsche Inflationsmarken-Sammler, Whole number 36.
- 576 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, September 1934, Volume 3, Issue 9.
- 577 Translation Digest.
Die Philatelistische Literatur, October 1934, Volume 3, Issue 10.
- 578 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Literatur, November 1934, Volume 3, Issue 11.

579 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Literatur, December 1934, Volume 3, Issue 12.

580 Otto Lindekam

The removal of bookplates from books.

[Das herauslösen von exlibris aus büchern.]

Sammler Express, November 1949, Volume 3, Issue 22, p.342.

- In spite of being published in a philatelic magazine, this article relates to bookplates only and has no philatelic content.
- Revised March 2008.

581 H. A. Gerhard Tag

From the bookplate world.

[Aus der welt des exlibris.]

Sammler Express, 15th March 1957, Volume 11, Issue 6, p.95.

582 G. Tag

From the bookplate world.

[Aus der welt des exlibris.]

Sammler Express, December 1958, Volume 12, Issue 23, p.424.

583 G. Tag

From the bookplate world.

[Aus der welt des exlibris.]

Sammler Express, December 1958, Volume 12, Issue 24, p.440.

584 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Literatur, March 1934, Volume 3, Issue 3.

585 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Literatur, February 1934, Volume 3, Issue 2.

586 V. Suppantischitsch

Bibliography of important articles and notes published in the German philatelic literature in the years 1892 through 1910 inclusive, relating to postal stationery.

[Bibliographie der in den jahren 1892 bis einschliesslich 1910 in der Deutschen philatelistischen literatur erschienenen, die ganzsachen betreffenden werke und wichtigeren zeitungsartikel und notizen.]

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, 10th January 1914, Volume 10, Issue 1, pp.62-63; 21st March, Issue 6, pp.154-155; 25th April, Issue 8, pp.205-206; 6th June, Issue 11, pp.287-289; 14th November, Issues 19/20, p.438; 13th February 1915, Volume 11, Issue 3, p.61; 11th December, Issue 23, p.521; 9th December 1916, Volume 12, Issue 23, p.518; 21st April 1917, Volume 13, Issues 7/8, p.162 & 18th May 1918, Volume 14, Issues 9/10, p.115.

Translation of the introduction only, p.62.

Note: The listings appeared irregularly after the middle of 1914 and only reached the letter N: Norddeutscher Postbezirk, presumably owing to the author's ill health prior to his death on the 31st October 1918.

587 Max Ton

Handbook of German Philatelic Literature.
[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur.]
Der Philatelist, 15th September 1915, Volume 36, Issue 9, pp.189-191.

588 Max Ton

Handbook of German Philatelic Literature.
[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur.]
Der Philatelist, 15th October 1915, Volume 36, Issue 10, pp.208-209.

589 Collecting bookplates.

[La colección de ex-libris.]
El Coleccionista, February 1905, Volume 1, Issue 6, p.1.

590 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Litteratur Sammler, September 1909, Volume 3, Issue 2, (Whole number 9).

591 Norbert Röhm

[Letter to Brian Birch.]
Auf der Zeil 27, 56154 Boppard, Germany, 7th October 2000, 2pp.

592 Valeria Vaccari

Philatelic literature in competitive exhibitions.
[La letteratura filatelica nelle esposizioni a concorso.]
Vaccari Magazine, November 2001, Volume 8, Whole number 26, pp.72-76.

593 W. Hughes Hughes

An English Collector.
[Un Anglais Collectionneur.]
Revue Française de la Philatélie Universelle, November 1891, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.7.

594 Dr. Legrand

Dr. Legrand.
Beiblatt zur Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung, February 1901, Volume 14, Issue 2, n.pp.
[1p.]
This is an advertisement for literature. It is to be found in several other issues of this periodical around this time.

595 H. Mittelmann

Of what benefit is a philatelic reference book based on the Dr. Diena system?
[Von welchem nutzen ist ein philatelistisches nachschlagebuch nach dem system Dr. Diena?] Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier, March 1889, Volume 4, Issue 3, pp.26-27.

596 Karl v. Gündel

A bibliography of German philatelic literature in sight.
[Eine bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen litteratur in sicht.]
Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde, July 1891, Volume 2, Issue 7, pp.87-89.

597 Bonn Foundation purchases John Duggan library.

[Bonner stiftung kauft John Duggan-Bibliothek.]
Philatelie, July 2008, Volume 60, Whole number 373, p.14.

- 598 Rüdiger Krenkel
Library Catalogue 2007.
 [Bibliothekskatalog 2007.]
 Stiftung zur Förderung der Philatelie und Postgeschichte, Bonn, Germany, 2007.
 Translation of the Foreword only, p.3.
- 599. Friedrich Writzel
Library Catalogue of Philatelic Books and other Media.
 [Bibliothekskatalog über Philatelistische Bücher und andere Medien.]
 4th edition, Verbandes Österreichischer Philatelistenvereine, Vienna, Austria. 2000.
 Translation of the Foreword only, p.3.
- 600 Martin Strack
Library Index 2007.
 [Bibliotheksverzeichnis 2007.]
 Forschungsgemeinschaft Grossbritannien, Germany, 2007, 122pp.
 Translation of the Foreword only, p.v.
- 601 Index of philatelic articles in available journals.
 [Nachweis philatelistischer aufsätze in den vorhandenen zeitschriften.]
 Jahres-Bericht des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Kiel 1898/99, Kiel, Germany, 1900,
 pp.37-60 & 32-36.
 Translation of the introductory text on page thirty-seven.
- 602 Translation Digest.
 Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1922, Volume 2, Issue 2.
- 603 Translation Digest.
 Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January/March 1926, Volume 6, Issue 1.
- 604 [Wolfgang Maassen]
Bibliographies - Inexhaustible resources for researching philatelists.
 [Bibliografien – Unererschöpfliche fundgruben für forschende philatelisten.]
 AIJP Bulletin, 2008, Issue 2, Whole number 126, pp.71-80.
 Translation of the introductory text and end text only, pp.71 & 80.
- 605 Franz-Karl Lindner
“Who’s Who in Philately” A new edition on the Internet.
 [“Wer ist Wer in der Philatelie?” – Eine neuauflage im internet.]
 AIJP-Bulletin, 2008, Whole number 127, pp.108-109.
- 606 Gerhard Tag
Our bookplate=express.
 [Unser exlibris=express.]
 Sammler-Express, 1st January 1959, Volume 13, Issue 1, p.19.
- 607 H. Schenkel
Photographic bookplates.
 [Fotographische exlibris.]
 Sammler-Express, 1st January 1959, Volume 13, Issue 1, p.19.

- 608 Osvaldo Mario Giordano
The Argentine philatelic press: From the earliest times to date.
 [La prensa filatélica Argentina: Allá en el tiempo y ahora.]
 Catalogo 2 Espamer '81., Buenos Aires, 13th-22nd November 1981, pp. 74-82.
- 609 J. Vellekoop
100 years of collecting.
 [100 jaar verzamelen.]
 In: Catalogus., FILACENTO, 6th-9th September 1984, Den Haag, Netherlands, pp.125-132.
- 610 Einar Ebe
Collectors live longer! A richer life.
 [Samlare lever längre! Ett rikare liv.]
 Bältespännaren, August 1981, Volume 16, Issue 1, pp.20-21.
- 611 Åke Torkelstam
Einar Ebe: A living cultural legend.
 [Einar Ebe: En levande kulturlegend.]
 Bältespännaren, August 1981, Volume 16, Issue 1, pp.22-25
- 612 Walter B. L. Bose
Abel Fontaine (1849-1926): First chronicler of Argentine philatelic literature.
 [Abel Fontaine (1849-1926): Primer cronista de literatura filatélica Argentina.]
 Catalogo., PRENFIL '88, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 1988, pp.29-33.
- 613 Society history from 1890-97.
 [Vereinsgeschichte von 1890-97.]
 Jahres-Bericht des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Kiel 1898/99, pp.3-5.
- 614 Translation Digest.
 Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1931, Volume 11, Issue 1.
- 615 A. Maury
Memoires of a stamp dealer.
 [Mémoires d'un marchand de timbres-poste.]
 Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, August 1866, Volume 3, Whole number 26, pp.204-206; September, Whole number 27, pp.212-213; October, Whole number 28, pp.220-221; January 1867, Volume 4, Whole number 31, pp.245-246; August, Whole number 33, pp.344-345 & October Whole number 35, pp.360-362.
- 616 [Victor] Suppantschitsch
The philatelic periodicals of the United States of America.
 [Die philatelistische zeitungen der Vereinigten Staaten von Nordamerika.]
 Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde, May 1891, Volume 2, Issue 5, pp.58-60; June, Issue 6, pp.78-80 & July, Issue 7, pp.91-93.
- 617 Wilhelm Müller
On foreign specialist periodicals.
 [Ueber ausländische fachzeitschriften.]
 Der Philatelist, May 1897, Volume 18, Issue 5, pp.183-184.

- 618 [Victor] Suppantisch
Postage stamp exhibitions and philatelic literature.
 [Die briefmarkenausstellungen und die philatelistische literatur.]
 Der Philatelist, 15th January 1899, Volume 20, Issue 1, pp.10-12.
- 619 Translation Digest.
 Interessengemeinschaft Phil. Literatursammler – Rundschreiben, no date (probably 1932), no number (probably Issue 1).
- 620 Translation Digest.
 [Interessengemeinschaft Phil. Literatursammler] – Rundschreiben, no date (probably 1932), Issue 2.
- 621 Translation Digest.
 Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde – Rundschreiben, no date (probably 1932), Issue 3.
- 622 C. Schmitt
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler.
 Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, June 1932, n.pp. [2pp.]
 [Prospectus for the forthcoming publication, including a Sample Sheet, inviting people to advertise in it and subscribe to it.]
 Translation of the Prospectus only.
- 623 General Table of Contents of the “Philatelic Echo” from its First Publication to December 1968 (Issues 1 - 45).
 Philatelic Society of Piraeus, Piraeus, Greece, n.d. [ca. 1969], 12pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, p.1
- 624 Max Ton
Who is the philatelist? Biographical Almanac.
 [Wer ist der philatelist? Biographischer Almanach.]
 Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, December 1935, Volume 11, Issue 12, p.254.
 Translation of the introductory text only.
 For the sake of completion, although they have no text in need of translation, I give below the details of all of the articles in this series including the above:
 Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde:
- | | | |
|--|-----------|-----------|
| December 1935, Volume 11, Issue 12, p.254 | Aarts | Altwig |
| January 1936, Volume 12, Issue 1, p.42 | Alves | Anschütz |
| February 1936, Volume 12, Issue 2, pp.76-77 | Anschütz | Arp |
| March 1936, Volume 12, Issue 3, p.112 | Arx | Ayala |
| April 1936, Volume 12, Issue 4, p.148 | Bach | Beck |
| June 1936, Volume 12, Issue 6, p.236 | Becker | Bormann |
| September 1936, Volume 12, Issue 9, p.341 | Bosshard | Bungerz |
| November 1936, Volume 12, Issue 11, p.452 | Bütow | Crawford |
| April 1937, Volume 13, Issue 4, p.146 | Dassler | Dauth |
| May 1937, Volume 13, Issue 5, p.196 | Denner | Donat |
| June 1937, Volume 13, Issue 6, p.226 | Donath | Dulac |
| July 1936, Volume 13, Issue 7, p.268 | Dünnebeil | Ewald |
| September 1937, Volume 13, Issue 9, p.340 | Fabbri | Figuera |
| October 1937, Volume 13, Issue 10, p.396 | Ferrari | Fleischer |
| December 1937, Volume 13, Issue 12, pp.491-492 | Fleischer | Frey |

January 1938, Volume 14, Issue 1, p.16	Freyse	Friedl
June 1938, Volume 14, Issue 6, p.260	Friedl	Fuch
September 1938, Volume 14, Issue 9, p.428	Fuchs	Ghozlan

- 625 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literatur-Sammler, November 1907, Volume 1, Issue 6.
- 626 G. Tag
All kinds of birds on bookplates.
[Allerlei vögel auf exlibris.]
Sammler Express, 1959, Volume 13, Issue 11, p.224.
- 627 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, May 1931, Volume 11, Issue 2.
- 628 Something about Philatelic Libraries.
[Något om filatelistiska bibliotek.]
Filatelistiska Meddelanden, January 1921, Volume 3, Issue 1, pp.8-9.
(Originally published in the Deutschösterreichische Briefmarken Zeitung.)
- 629 Dr. Schroeder
The end of the F. I. P. P.: Philately is becoming superficial.
[Das ende der F. I. P. P.: Zunehmende verflachung der philatelie.]
Die Lupe, September 1948, Volume 3, Whole number 29/30, p.185.
- 630 Special offers of literature at auctions garner response!
[Literatur-angebote bei auktionen finden resonanz!]
Philatelie, September 2009, Volume 61, Whole number 387, p.8.
- 631 Dr. Erhard Mörschel
Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Marburg/Lahn 1892 e.V.
[Katalog der Philatelistischen Bibliothek des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Marburg/Lahn 1892 e.V.]
Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Marburg/Lahn 1892., Marburg, Germany, 1993, paginated in sections.
Translation of the Foreword only, [p.1].
- 632 V. Suppantchitsch
Attempt at a bibliography of European foreign-language periodical literature to the end of 1891.
[Versuch einer bibliographie der fremdsprachigen philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur Europa's bis ende 1891.]
Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde, February 1893, Volume 4, Issue 2, pp.15-17; March, Issue 3, pp.32-35; pp.56-59; July, Issue 7, pp.103-105; September, Issue 9, pp.137-139; October, Issue 10, pp.151-153; November, Issue 11, pp.161-164 & December, Issue 12, pp.177-179.
Translation of the introductory text, pp.15-35 & 56-57 and end note, p.179.
- 633 Walter Petrausch
In the realm of stamp collecting literature: A short walk.
[Im reiche der briefmarkenkunflichen literatur: Ein kleiner spaziergang.]

Die Postwertzeichen – Der Poststempel, June 1937, Volume 11, Issue 6, p.158.

634 Dr. Moschkau

About society libraries.

[Ueber vereinsbibliotheken.]

Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, 2nd August 1884, Volume 11, Issue 15, p.215.

635 P. C. [Patrick Chalmers]

The Adhesive Postage Stamp.

[Le Timbre-Poste Adhésif.]

Wimbledon, UK, September 1890, 1p.

636 Through the Exhibitions. The Exhibition of Postage Stamps.

[À Travers les Expositions. L'Exposition des Timbres-Poste]

(From: Le Courier de Londres et de L'Europe, 18th May 1890)

[Patrick Chalmers, Wimbledon, UK, 1890], 1p.

637 Schwanke Auktionen

Another special part of Auktion 338 is dedicated to philatelic literature. "We have the most beautiful library in the world ..." - .. at least for a few weeks! [Ein weiterer Sonderteil unserer 338.Auktion widmet sich der Philatelistischen Literatur. „Wir haben die schönste Bibliothek der Welt...“ - ..zumindest für einige Wochen!]

Schwanke web site: <http://www.schwanke-auktionen.de>, 22nd November 2012, 3pp.

638 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1931, Volume 11, Issue 3.

639 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September 1931, Volume 11, Issue 4.

640 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1931, Volume 11, Issue 5.

641 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1931, Volume 11, Issue 6.

642 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1932, Volume 12, Issue 1.

643 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1932, Volume 12, Issue 2.

644 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August 1932, Volume 12, Issue 3.

645 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November 1932, Volume 12, Issue 4.

646 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1932, Volume 12, Issue 5/6.

647 Translation Digest.

- Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1933, Volume 13, Issue 1.
- 648 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1933, Volume 13, Issue 2.
- 649 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1933, Volume 13, Issue 3.
- 650 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September 1933, Volume 13, Issue 4.
- 651 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1933, Volume 13, Issue 5.
- 652 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1933, Volume 13, Issue 6.
- 653 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1934, Volume 14, Issue 1.
- 654 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April 1934, Volume 14, Issue 2.
- 655 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, June 1934, Volume 14, Issue 3.
- 656 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August 1934, Volume 14, Issue 4.
- 657 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1934, Volume 14, Issue 6.
- 658 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January/February 1935, Volume 15, Issue 1.
- 659 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March/April 1935, Volume 15, Issue 2.
- 660 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, May/June 1935, Volume 15, Issue 3.
- 661 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July/August 1935, Volume 15, Issue 4.
- 662 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September/December 1935, Volume 15, Issue 5/6.
- 663 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January/February 1936, Volume 16, Issue 1/2.

- 664 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March 1936, Volume 16, Issue 3.
- 665 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, April/May 1936, Volume 16, Issue 4/5.
- 666 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, June 1936, Volume 16, Issue 6.
- 667 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1936, Volume 16, Issue 7.
- 668 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August/September 1936, Volume 16, Issue 8/9.
- 669 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1936, Volume 16, Issue 10.
- 670 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November/December 1936, Volume 16, Issue 11/12.
- 671 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, January 1937, Volume 17, Issue 1.
- 672 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1937, Volume 17, Issue 2.
- 673 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, March/April 1937, Volume 17, Issue 3/4.
- 674 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, June 1937, Volume 17, Issue 6.
- 675 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, July 1937, Volume 17, Issue 7.
- 676 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, August 1937, Volume 17, Issue 8.
- 677 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, September/October 1937, Volume 17, Issue 9/10.
- 678 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, November 1937, Volume 17, Issue 11.
- 679 Translation Digest.
Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1937, Volume 17, Issue 12.

- 680 Winfried Leist
The fate of Carl Lindenberg's library.
 [Das schicksal der Bibliothek Carl Lindenburgs.]
 The Philatelic Journalist, June 2012, Whole number 138, pp.33-34.
- 681 Fritz Billig
Mondial: Billig's International Philatelic Literature Reference Work.
 [Mondial: Billig's Internationales Philatelistisches Literature-Nachschlagewerk.]
 Fritz Billig, Vienna, Austria, n.d. [ca.1930], n.pp. [1p.]
 This is the introduction to and sales-pitch for the publication, found in many of Billig's pamphlets and price lists of the era.
- 682 Klaus-Dietrich Gerlach
The PHILA-Bibliothek Heinrich Köhler gives thanks.
 [Die PHILA-Bibliothek Heinrich Köhler dankt.]
 Philatelie, August 2012, Volume 64, Whole number 422, p.6.
- 683 Dr. Otto Rommel
Directory of the Most Important Philatelic Works and Treatises, from both Domestic and International Sources, Excluding Items from Periodicals.
 [Verzeichnis der Wichtigsten Philatelistischen Werke und Abhandlungen des In- und Auslandes mit Ausschluss der Zeitungsliteratur.]
 Paul Kohl, Chemnitz, Germany, 1907 [1908], 16pp.
 Translation of the Foreword on p.2 and the few notes preceeding the list on page 3.
 A deluxe edition was also published on thicker paper and with the addition of a green card cover. I have two different versions of the card-covered issue.
- 684 Wolfgang Maassen
Inventory of the WM Photograph Archive.
 [Inventarisierung des WM-Foto-Archivs.]
 Wolfgang Maassen, Phil*Creativ, Schwalmthal, Germany, 2013, 88pp.
 Translation of the introductory text only, pp.1-2.
- 685 V. Suppantschitsch
On the history and statistics of the worldwide philatelic periodical literature to end of 1893.
 [Zur geschichte und statistik der philatelistischen zeitungsliteratur der erde bis ende 1893.]
 Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde, February 1895, Volume 6, Issue 2, pp.13-15; March, Issue 3, pp.33-35; April, Issue 4, pp.47-49; May, Issue 5, pp.65-67 & June, Issue 6, pp.77-78.
- 686 Personalia: J. C. Auf der Heide S.H.D.
 De Philatelist, April 1931, Volume 6, Issue 4, p.75.
- 687 Paul H. Jensen
Pleasure and benefits of philatelic literature.
 [Glede og nytte av Filatelistisk litteratur.]
 Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, December 1993, Volume 100, Issue 4, pp.156-159.
- 688 Concerning the Bibliography of German-Language Philatelic Literature by Friedrich Leitenberger.
 [Bibliographie der Deutschsprachlichen Philatelistischen Literatur von Friedrich

Leitenberger betreffend.]

Die Philatelie, 1925, Volume 2, Issue 9, p.180.

689 Library sale.

[Bibliothek-verkauf.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, March 1912, Volume 23, Issue 3, p.59.

690 Albert Gottschalk

Philatelic libraries.

[Philatelistische Bibliotheken.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, August 1906, Volume 17, Issue 8, pp.114-115.

691 Philatelic library.

[Philatelistische Bibliothek.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, April 1907, Volume 18, Issue 4, p.75.

692 Orphaned library.

[Verwaiste Bibliothek.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, December 1907, Volume 18, Issue 12, p.202.

693 Library.

[Bibliothek.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, January 1908, Volume 19, Issue 1, p.19.

694 Libraries.

[Bibliotheken.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, August 1908, Volume 19, Issue 8, pp.132-133.

695 Libraries.

[Bibliotheken.]

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, October 1908, Volume 19, Issue 10, p.166.

696 Philately in 1862.

[La philatelie en 1862.]

L'Écho de la Timbrologie, 15th December 1928, Volume 42, Whole number 791, p.1816. {Reprinted in Story Post, March 1969, Whole number 69, p.7.}

697 Max Bloch

The philatelic literature of the year 1919.

[Die philatelistische literatur des jahres 1919.]

Weltpost-Echo, January 1920, Issue 1, pp.114-115.

698 “General Index 1919” appears in February. Orders to the “W-E” Verlag.

[“General-Index 1919” erscheint Feber. Bestellungen an der “W-E”-Verlag.]

Weltpost-Echo, January 1920, Issue 2, p.166.

699 Gerhard Tag

Our bookplate=express.

[Unser exlibris=express.]

Sammler-Express, 1959, Volume 13, Issue 3, p.58.

700 Again a new column.

- [Weer een nieuwe rubriek.]
De Philatelist, March 1928, Volume 3, Issue 3, p.51.
- 701 Auction of a large philatelic library.
[Auktion einer grossen philatelistischen-bibliothek.]
Philatelistische Miscellen, September 1907, Volume 4, Issue 9, p.89.
- 702 Dr. E. W. Floyd's philatelic library.
[Dr. E. W. Floyds philatelistische bibliothek.]
Deutsche Briefmarken-Post, May 1930, Issue 5, p.87.
- 703 [Anton Bachl (Editor)]
A bibliography of the German philatelic literature.
[Eine bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen litteratur.]
Das Postwertzeichen, August 1891, Volume 4, Issue 8, pp.64-65.
- 704 Literature: Bibliography of the German philatelic literature.
[Literatur: Bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen litteratur.]
Welt-Post, May/June 1891, Whole number 35, p.372.
- 705 Karl v. Gündel
The first part of a bibliography of the German philatelic literature published.
[Das 1. heft einer bibliographie der Deutschen philatelistischen litteratur erschienen.] Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier, 10th August 1892, Volume 7, Issue 15, pp.155-157.
- 706 Hans Meyer
Philatelic libraries and catalogues.
[Philatelistische bibliotheken und kataloge.]
In: Die Philatelie im "Dritten Reich": Die Organisationen der Sammler und Händler 1933-1945., Mironde Verlag, Germany, 2006, pp.285-294.
- 707 Victor Marsh
Philatelic souvenirs: Which, from your philatelic memories, is the one that you find most valuable, or consider the most fun?
[Souvenirs philatéliques: Quel est, parmi vos souvenirs de philatéliste, celui qui vous est le plus précieux, ou que vous considérez comme le plus amusant?]
La Revue Philatélique Française, June 1913, Volume 24, Whole number 257, pp.127-128.
- 708 The large philatelic library.
[Die grosse philatelistische bibliothek.]
Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, 10th March 1917, Volume 13, Issue 5, p.109.
- 709 Abel Fontaine
The philatelic press in the Republic of Argentina.
[La prensa filatélica en la República Argentina.]
El Coleccionista, April 1904, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.3-4; June, Issue 3, pp.2-3; September, Issue 4, pp.4-5 & December, Issue 5, p.5.
➤ Translation of the introduction only, p.?
- 710 Carl Beck
Organising Philatelic Libraries.

[Die Anlage Philatelistischer Bibliotheken.]

Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1924, 7pp.

{Lecture given at the 5th German Philatelists' Day, Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia (Now Karlovy Vary, Czech Republic), 17th August 1924.}

{Reprinted in Sammler-Woche, 1924, Whole number 41, pp.8-10.}

711 Dr. Legrand

Minutes of the meetings of the Society. Meeting of the 12th January 1888.

[Compte-rendu des séances de la Société. Séance du 12 Janvier 1888.]

Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, June 1888, Volume 4, Whole number 47, pp.39-40.

712 Phillipp von Ferrary

[Letter to the editor.]

Der Philatelist, December 1883, Volume 4, Issue 12, p.114.

The translation is preceded by a translation of the part of the article in the preceding issue, about which Ferrary wrote: Der Philatelist, November 1883, Volume 4, Issue 11, p.103.

713 Dr. Moschkau

Philipp la Rénotière von Ferrary

Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1st August 1888, Volume 1, Issue 15, pp.217-218.

714 [Sigmund Friedl]

Mosaic.

[Mosaik.]

Welt-Post, April 1887, Volume 12, Issue 13, pp.117-119 & June, Issue 14, p.130.

➤ Only the part relating to the arrangement of Ferrary's collection has been translated in full. The postscript about the Caillebotte Brothers' collection has also been translated.

715 P. von Ferrary

Miscellaneous.

[Vermischtes.]

Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung, November 1883, Volume 6, Whole number 62, pp.301-303.

➤ Only Ferrary's letter has been translated, starting at the bottom of page 301.

716 P. von Ferrari

Extract from the Register of Births.

[Extrait du Registre des Actes de Naissance.]

Copy provided by the Archives de Paris, 1st February 1985, 2pp.

717 Sandro Tanga

To whom will Carter give back the postage stamps contested by the two Germanies?

[A chi restituirà Carter i francobolli contesti dalle due Germanie?]

Il Collezionista - Italia Filatelica, 31st December 1977, Volume 33, Issue 24, pp.5-6.

{This translation was found as a typescript in a copy of the issue of the Italian magazine carrying the original article. I included it in this work to preserve it for posterity.}

718 P. von Ferrary

Various documents

- 719 Abel Fontaine
Obituary.
 [Necrología.]
 Madrid Filatelico, 1917, Volume 20, Issue 8, pp.113-114.
- 720 Ricardo D. Eliçabe; Dr, Máximo Castro & Dr. Antonio Dellepiane
Doctor José Marcó del Pont: Died in Buenos Aires on the 11th July 1917.
 [Doctor José Marcó del Pont: † en Buenos Aires el 11 de Julio de 1917.]
 Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica Argentina, July/August 1917, Volume 21, Issue 4,
 Whole number 121, pp.71-75.
- 721 Otto Sedlmayr, Ant[on] Bacht [actually Bache] & J.-B. Moens
Munich philatelic exhibition.
 [Exposition philatélique de Munich.]
 Le Timbre-Poste, December 1889, Volume 27, Whole number 324, p.106.
- 722 M. P. Castle [& Louis François Hanciau(Editor)]
The Munich philatelic exhibition.
 [L'exposition philatélique de Munich.]
 Le Timbre-Poste, February 1890, Volume 28, Whole number 326, pp.15-16.
- 723 Personalities.
 [Personalien.]
 Deutsch Briefmarken-Zeitung, June 1895, Volume 5, Issue 9, p.139.
- 724 L. Hanciau
Yesterday and today.
 [Autrefois et aujourd'hui.]
 Le Philatéliste Belge, July 1921, Volume 1, Issue 10, pp.224-227 & September, Issue
 12, pp.277-279.
- 725 Philippe de Ferrary & A. Maury
Correspondence.
 [Correspondance.]
 Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, January 1866, Volume 3, Issue 1, pp.150-151.
- 726 Special 175th Anniversary of the Birth of Doctor Thebussem.
 [Especial 175 Aniversario del Nacimiento del Doctor Thebussem.] Puerta del Sol, December 2003, Volume 3, Issue 8, ?pp. (Taken from the copy on the magazine's web site: www.revistapuertadelsol.com in 2014, which had no pagination.)

CONTENTS

1. Cover page and Editorial. Doctor Thebussem. [Portada y Editorial: Doctor Thebussem.]
2. Yolanda Estefanía Aparicio:
Doctor Thebussem and the Post. [El Doctor Thebussem y el Correo.]
3. Ramón Pérez Montero:
The geniality of the eccentric. [La genialidad del excéntrico.]
4. José Amosa Utrera
My affection for books. [Mi afición a los libros.]
5. Jesus Romero Valiente
Doctor Thebussem's genealogical notes. [Las notas genealógicas del Doctor

Thebussem.]

6. Jesús M.^a Armengol Butrón de Mújica
Doctor Thebussem writer on bullfighting. [El Doctor Thebussem escritor taurine.]
7. Back cover photograph. [Fotografía contraportada.]

- 727 Dr. A. M[oschkau]
Philately (Stamp collecting).
[Philatelie (Briefmarkenkunde).]
Welt-Post, 1881, Volume 6, Issue 11, pp.93-94.
- 728 Michael Trost
Vagrant, Tramp or even a “King”?
[Clochard, Penner oder gar ein “König”?]
Philatelie, October 2016, Volume 68, Whole number 472, p.17.
- 729 Translation Digest.
Literature Nachrichten, 2001, Volume 101.
- 730 Joaquin Amado
The written flame of philately.
[La llama escrita de la filatelia.]
Exposición Nacional de Literatura Filatélica., Madrid, Spain, 10th September-1st October 1993, pp.33-40.
- 731 Enzo Diena
A great sadness for philately: The death of Leon V. Rapkin.
[Un grave lutto per la filatelia: La scomparsa di Leon V. Rapkin.]
Il Collezionista Italia Filatelica, November 1991, Volume 47, Issue 11, p.16.
{This translation was found as a typescript in a copy of the issue of the Italian magazine carrying the original article. I included it in this work to preserve it for posterity.}
- 732 Gerhard Lang-Valchs
The Engravers of Jean-Baptiste Moens.
[Los Grabadores de Jean-Baptiste Moens.]
El Eco Filatélico y Numismático, September 2017, Volume 73, pp.28-30 & October, pp.25-27.
- 733 H. Edgar Weston
A note on J. B. Moens’s Catalogue Prix-Courant of 1868.
The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, October 1912, Volume 5, Issue 4, pp.61-62.
{Although the article is given in its entirety, only the letters from L. Hanciau and J. van der Maelen, which were quoted in their original French, have been translated.}
- 734 Louis Ottinger
The stamp trade in Paris under the second empire.
[Le commerce des timbres à Paris sous le second empire.]
Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, July/September 1964, Volume 100, Whole number 716, pp.1-3.
- 735 Elena Catena de Vindel

Correspondence between Menéndez Pelayo and Thebussem.
 [Correspondencia Menéndez Pelayo y Thebussem.]
 Coleccionismo, August 1959, Volume 46, Issue 3, Whole number 224, pp.8-12.

- 736 S. F. [Sigmund Friedl]
James Chalmers, the inventor of the postage stamp.
 [James Chalmers, der erfinder der Briefmarke.]
 Welt-Post, August 1887, Volume 12, Whole number 15, pp.137-138.
- 737 [Arthur Maury]
English stamps with punctured initial letters.
 [Les timbres Anglais avec lettres initiales piquées.]
 Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, January 1874, Whole number 42, p.396.
- 738 Dr. Legrand
Meeting of the 1st March 1888.
 [Séance du 1^{er} Mars 1888.]
 Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, June 1888, Volume 4, Whole number 47, pp.41-42.
- 739 J. Majó Tocabens & Andrés Majó Díaz
"Natalis Rondot", pseudonym of Armán Martín.
 ["Natalis Rondot", Seudónimo de Armán Martín.]
 In: Postas y Filatelia en la Barcelona del XIX., Editorial Ramón Sopens, Barcelona, Spain, 1975, pp.90-92.
- 740 J. Majó Tocabens & Andrés Majó Díaz
A great idea by James Chalmers put into practice by Rowland Hill.
 [Una idea genial de James Chalmers puesta en practica por Rowland Hill.]
 In: Postas y Filatelia en la Barcelona del XIX., Editorial Ramón Sopens, Barcelona, Spain, 1975, pp.57-62.
- 741 Arthur Maury recounts a day in his memoirs.
 [Arthur Maury racontait un jour dans ses mémoires.]
 Story Post, October 1973, Whole number 124, p.3.
- 742 J. Siewert
On the Chalmers-Hill question.
 [Zur Chalmers-Hill frage.]
 Der Philatelist, 1st December 1890, Volume 11, Issue 17, pp.261-263.
- 743 Karl v. Gündel
The Chalmers essay in the Postwerthzeichen-Museum.
 [Das Chalmers'sche essai im Postwerthzeichen-Museum.]
 Welt-Post, November 1892, Volume 17, Whole number 43, pp.474-475 & January 1893, Volume 18, Whole number 44, pp.483-485.
- 744 L. Bernard
The third sale of the Ferrary collection.
 [La troisième vente de la collection Ferrari.]
 La Philatélie Française, March 1922, Volume 4, Whole number 29, p.54.

- 745 The Ferrary collection: Third sale.
 [La collection Ferrari: Troisième vente.]
 La Philatélie Française, May 1922, Volume 4, Whole number 31, p.94.
- 746 V. Suppantschitsch
An old, apparently lost postage stamp catalogue.
 [Ein alter, anscheinend verschollener briefmarken-katalog.]
 Die Postwertzeichen-Kunde, November 1891, Volume 2, Issue 11, pp.160-161.
- 747 K. Kouwenberg
Postage Stamp Exhibitions in the 19th century.
 [Postzegeltentoonstellingen in de 19e eeuw.]
 in: Filatelie Informatief, Samson Uitgeverij, Netherlands, November 1981, Section 6010, pp.1-10.
- 748 [Louis François Hanciau (Editor)]
A word on the origin of postage stamps.
 [Un mot sur l'origin des timbres-poste.]
 Le Timbre-Poste, March 1863, Volume 1, Issue 2, p.1 & April, Issue 3, [p.2].
 {Y reprinted in 1867 without the advertisements. The article can be found on pages 21-24 with an illustration that was not provided with the original article.}
 {The reprinted volume was itself reprinted by Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica and published as a supplement to Issue 5 of 7th March 1970.}
- 749 [Louis François Hanciau (Editor)]
About Stamp Collecting. Its origin and development.
 [De la Timbromanie. Son origine et son développement.]
 Le Timbre-Poste, June 1863, Volume 1, Issue 5, [pp.1-2], August, Issue 7, [p.2] & October, Issue 9, [p.2].
 {The first volume was re-set in the then-current smaller size and reprinted in 1867 without the advertisements. The article can be found on pages 27-31.}
 {The reprinted volume was itself reprinted by Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica and published as a supplement to Issue 5 of 7th March 1970.}
- 750 S[igmund] F[riedl]
Small messages.
 [Kleine Mittheilungen.]
 Welt-Post, June 1887, Volume 12, Whole number 14, p.132.
 (There are two entries under this title: The Viennese philatelic literature society and James Chalmers, the inventor of the postage stamp)
- 751 Wolfgang Fendler
Hans Wagner.
 in: Bund Deutscher und Österreichischer Philatelisten-Vereine (1896-1924): Die Bundes- und Philatelistentage., Band 9 der Schriftenreihe zur Geschichte der Philatelie in Deutschland, Consilium Philaticum, Bonn, Germany, 2006, p.6.
- 752 Italian Collectors: The lost "Greats" - Philipp de Ferrary.
Collezionisti Italiani: I "Grand" scomparsi - Filippo De Ferrari.
 Il Collezionista Italia Filatelica, 16th October 1976, Volume 32, Issue 19, p.10.
 {A correction was published as: P. Panini: La nascita di De Ferrari. [The birth of De Ferrari], Il Collezionista Italia Filatelica, 27th November 1976, Volume 32, Issue 22,

p.27.}

- 753 Jean-Baptiste Moens 1833-1908: Founder of Philatelic Commerce.
[Jean-Baptiste Moens 1833-1908: Fondateur du Commerce Philatelique.]
In: Collection Jean-Baptiste Moens de Mr Georges Waroquiers., 223rd Auction Sale, Maison Williams, Brussels, Belgium, 8th February 2003, n.pp. [pp.3-4].
- 754 Wolfgang Maassen
Wer ist Wer in der Philatelie? [Who is Who in Philately?]
3rd edition, Volume 1: A-D, Phil*Creativ, Schwalmatal, Germany, 2011, 328pp.; Volume 2: E-H, 2017, 371pp.; Volume 3, I-L, 2020, 319pp.; Volume 4, M-R, 2020, 358pp.; Volume 5, S, 2022, 318pp. & Volume 6, T-Z, 2022, 244pp.
Only the Foreword to each volume and On the method have been translated as follows:
Volume 1, pp.3-11; Volume 2, pp.4-6; Volume 3, pp.3-4; Volume 4, p.3; Volume 5, p.3; & Volume 6, p.3.
Some biographies of individual philatelists of interest to myself have also been translated:-
Volume 1: Dr. Ulrich Brunnert (p.197); George B. Duerst (pp.301-302)
Volume 2: Heinrich Fränkel (Fraenkel) (pp.104-106)
Volume 3: Dr Ludwig König (p.133); Justin Henri Lallier (204)
Volume 4: Otto Rommel (p.321); Ernst Roschlau (p.325)
Volume 6: Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann (pp.17-18); Dr. Victor Weinert (p.131)
- 755 Wolfgang Maassen
Who is Who in Philately?
[Wer ist Wer in der Philatelie?]
2nd edition, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten web site: www.bdpd.de, 23rd January 2010, 1p.
- 756 Otto Hornung
Second Guyana one cent: Doubt remains. Results of experts contradict each other.
[Tweede Guyana one cent: Twijfel blijft. Resultaten van expertises spreken elkaar tegen.]
Filatelie, February 2000, Volume 78, Issue 2, pp.102-104
- 757 A few words about stamp collecting.
[Dos palabras acerca de timbrologia.]
La Revista Filatelica, August 1874, Volume 1, Issue 1, p.1.
- 758 "Filatelia" and its appearance.
["Filatelia" y su aparición.]
El Macanador Filatélico, May 1904, p.1.
- 759 Paul Lietzow
The Olympian of philatelie: J. B. Moens of Brussels.
[Der Olympier der philatelie: J. B. Moens in Brussel.]
Jahresbericht der Internationale Postwertzeichenhändler-Verein zu Berlin, 1899, pp.3-6.
- 760 Generally ignored Franchise stamps.
[Timbres de Franchises généralement ignores.]
L'Écho Postal, April 1925, Volume 11, Whole number 81, pp.248-249.

- 761 Socrate
Who is thanked as inventor of the postage stamp?
[Qui est donc l'inventeur du timbre-poste?]
 Timbres Magazine, May 2015, Whole number 167, p.110.
- 762 William Chenevard
Essay on postal bibliography.
[Essai de bibliographie postale.]
 La Revue Postale, February 1898, Volume 1, Issue 2, pp.17-21.
- 763 Dr. Heinz Schmidt
The "Father of the German Philatelists days" Hans Wagner and his Verein für Briefmarkenkunde von 1885 e.V. Mainz.
[Der "Vater der Deutschen Philatelistentage" Hans Wagner und sein Verein für Briefmarkenkunde von 1885 e.V. Mainz.]
 In: 100 Jahre Deutsche Philatelisten-Tage 1889 - Mainz - 1989., Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, Ingelheim, Germany, 1989, pp.7-14.
- 764 Friedhelm Knappen
Hans Wagner and the Hans-Wagner-Medal.
[Hans Wagner und die Hans-Wagner-Medaille.]
 In: 100 Jahre Deutsche Philatelisten-Tage 1889 - Mainz - 1989., Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, Ingelheim, Germany, 1989, pp.15-23.
- 765 A. Schoeller [& A. Donatis]
Société Française de Timbrologie. Summary report of the meeting of the 8th March 1894.
[Société Française de Timbrologie. Compte-rendu sommaire de la séance du 8 Mars 1894.]
 Revue Philatélique, March 1894, Volume 5, Whole number 47, pp.54-55.
- 766 Legrand letter
- 767 Eduardo Escalada Goicoechea
The first Spanish philatelic bibliography.
[La primera bibliografía Filatélica Española.]
 Atalaya Filatélica, April 2003, Whole number 100, pp.76-77.
- 768 Obituary.
[Necrologie.]
 Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, December 1907, Whole number 326, Cover & p.1.
- 769 Henri Leroux André Maurice, Roger North & René Poulain
The Centenary of the House of Arthur Maury 1860-1960.
[Le centenaire de la maison Arthur Maury 1860-1960.]
 Translation of the pages relating to Arthur Maury only: pp.7-9 & 28-29.
- 770 Translation Digest.
 Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, October 1938, Volume 18, Issue 10, [16]pp.
- 771 Translation Digest.

Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, December 1938, Volume 18, Issue 12, [16]pp.

- 772 [Raymond Poulain (Editor)]
The first postage stamp catalogue in France "The Potiquet".
[Le premier catalogue de timbres-poste en France: "Le Potiquet".]
Le Philatéliste Bibliophile, January 1996, Number 0, p.3.
- 773 Karl v. Gündel
A bibliography of the German philatelic literature.
[Eine bibliographie der Deutschen Philatelistischen literatur.]
Welt-Post, September/October 1891, Volume 16, Whole number 37, p.394.
- 774 Dr. Moschkau
Ch. Diena.
Illustrierte Briefmarken Zeitung, 1st August 1889, Volume 2, Issue 15, pp.219-220.
- 775 Who are you, Alfred Potiquet?
[Qui êtes-vous, Alfred Potiquet?]
Delcampe Magazine, September 2017, Whole number 15, Cover & pp.16-18.
- 776 Paul Friedrich
"Magasin Pittoresque"
Reflexionen über Philatelie, July 1946, Whole number 84, pp.60-62.
- 777 Konrad Ferdinand Meyer
Chalmers, Hill, Kosir and the Countess of Longueville.
[Chalmers, Hill, Kosir und die Herzogin von Longueville.]
Schweizer Briefmarken Rundschau, September 1949, Volume 25, Issue 9, p.154.
- 778 Jan Špiryt.
Filatelie, December 1973, Volume 23, Issue 24, p.750.
- 779 Peter Fischer, Dr. Heinz Jaeger, Wolfgang Maassen & Renate Springer
From the Early Days of German Philately.
[Aus der Frühzeit Deutscher Philatelie.]
Schriftenreihe zur Geschichte der Philatelie in Deutschland, Consilium Philatelicum,
Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, Bonn, Germany,
(Translation of the Contents page only)
- 780 Max Bloch
The Philatelic literature of the year 1919.
[Die philatelistische literatur des jahres 1919:]
Weltpost-Echo, January 1920, Issue 1, pp.114-115 & Issue 2, p.166.
- 781 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2013, Issue 1, 179pp.
- 782 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, May 2013, Issue 2, 251pp.
- 783 Translation Digest.

- Phila Historica, August 2013, Issue 3, 300pp.
- 784 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, November 2013, Issue 4, 247pp.
- 785 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2014, Issue 1, 389pp.
- 786 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2014, Issue 2, 204pp.
- 787 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, October 2014, Issue 3, 176pp.
- 788 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2014, Issue 4, 254pp.
- 789 Victor Suppantschitsch
The oldest known printed philatelic work in the World.
[Das ältest bekannt philatelistische druckwerk der erde.]
Die Post, 15th April 1895, Volume 2, Issue 8, pp.63-64 & 1st May, Issue 8, p.73.
- 790 Emil W. Mewes
40 years of Literatur Nachrichten.
[40 jahre Literaturnachrichten.]
Mitteilungsblätter der Bundestellen Forschung und Literatur im BDPh e.V., 1991,
Whole number 12, pp.8-13.
- 791 Claudia Maassen
Dear Members of the AIJP.
[Liebe Mitgleider der AIJP.]
Circular to all members of the Association Internationale des Journalistes Philatéliques, [March 2011], 70pp.
- 792 Translation Digest.
Literatur-Nachrichten, 1999, Volume 99.
- 793 J. M. Pos
The pioneers of philately.
[De pioniers in de philatelie.]
Het Philatelistisch Maandblad, April 1916, Volume 5, Whole number 52, pp.56-57;
May, Whole number 53, pp.70-71; June, Whole number 54, p.89; July, Whole number 55, pp.106-107; August, Whole number 56, pp.120-121 & September, Whole number
57, pp.135-136.
- 794 Emilio Simonazzi
The Philatelic Trade in Italy. The Evolution over Two Centuries.
[Il Commercio Filatelico in Italia. L'Evoluzione a Cavallo di Due Secoli.]
Unificato, Commercianti Italiani Filatelici, Milan, Italy, 2017, 132pp.
Translation of the Introduction only, pp.11-13.
- 795 [Arthur Maury (Editor)]

Public sale of postage stamps.

[Vente publique de timbres poste.]

Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, January 1866, Whole number 19, p.151.

796 Wolfgang Maassen

150 years ago the first philatelic literature appeared.

[Vor 150 Jahren erschien die erste philatelistische literatur.]

Philatelie, February 2012, Volume 64, Whole number 416, pp.42-45.

797 Justin Lallier (1823-1873).

Mémoires de la Timbrologie web site: <http://memoires.timbrologie.online.fr>, 1st April, 2021, 5pp.

798 Meeting of the 1st April 1875.

[Séance du 1^{er} Avril 1875.]

Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, 1975, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.12-14.

799 Philippe de Bosredon (1827-1906).

On the Mémoires de la Timbrologie web site: <http://memoires.timbrologie.online.fr>, as of April 2021, 3pp.

800 Carl Lund

Foreign stamp literature.

[Udenlandsk frimærkelitteratur.]

Nordisk Frimærketidende:

Frimærketidender.[Stamp magazines.], December 1867, Issue 5, pp.34-37;
February 1868, Issue 6, pp.41-43.

Cataloger og Hjælpeskrifter.[Catalogues and auxiliary writings.], March Issue
7, pp.49-50; 5th May, Issue 8/9, pp.57-59.

Albums., 5th May, Issue 8/9, pp.59-60.

Diversa. [Various.], 31st May, Issue 10, p.69 & 30th June, Issue 11/12, p.85

Translation of various pages and paragraphs I judged to be of interest to me including the Editor's introduction on pages 1-2.

801 Ch. O. Muller & James Negus

802 Rudolf Buschhaus

The book as a collector's item.

[Das buch als sammelobjekt.]

Ingo Susemihl (Editor): 1971-2021 Festschrift zum 50-Jährigen Bestehen der Philatelistischen Bibliothek Hamburg e.V., Philatelistische Bibliothek Hamburg, Germany, 2021, p.40.

803 Alexander Bungerz

Carl Beck †

Germania-Berichte, July 1929, Volume 26, Issue 7, Whole number 335, pp.79-80.

804 Miscellaneous: Our Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann.

[Vermischtes: Unserem Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann.]

Germania-Berichte, October 1930, Volume 27, Issue 10, Whole number 350, p.133.

805 Miscellaneous: Jubilee. Friedr. Wilh. Thalmann.

[Vermischtes: Jubiläum. Friedr. Wilh. Thalmann.]

Germania-Berichte, December 1932, Volume 29, Issue 11, Whole number 375, p.143.

806 Miscellaneous:Max Ton.

[Vermischtes: Max Ton.]

Germania-Berichte, March 1932, Volume 29, Issue 3, Whole number 367, p.36.

807 † In Memoriam †- Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann, Berlin †.

[† Zum Gedächtnis †- Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann, Berlin †.]

Das Postwertzeichen-Der Poststempel, February 1938, Volume 12, Issue 2, p.52.

808 E. Régnard & Pierre Mahé

The Collection of H[erpin].

[La collection H.....]

Le Timbrophile, July 1866, Volume 2, Whole number 21, pp.174-175.

809 Sft. [Fritz Seifert]

Fritz Leitenberger †

Germania-Berichte, September 1933, Volume 30, Issue 8, Whole number 383, p.99.

810 Karl Rist

The philatelist and the Literatur-Nachrichten.

[Der philatelist und die "Literatur-Nachrichten".]

Die Sammler-Lupe, August 1961, Volume 16, Issue 16, 360.

811 Christian Boyer

Articles on Arthur Maury.

[Articles sur Arthur Maury.]

Christian Boyer's web site: www.christianboyer.com/philatelie, accessed on the 18th January 2022, 4pp.

One article and extracts from two books presenting of the life of Arthur Maury:

Nécrologie., Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Postes, 1st December 1907, Cover & p.1.

(Obituary published immediately after his death in the periodical he founded.)

Georges Brunel: Ce qu'était la Philatélie en 1867., 1930.

(Biography written by someone who knew him personally.)

Henri Leroux, André Maurice, Roger North & René Poulain: Le Centenaire de la Maison Arthur Maury 1860-1960., Louis Schneider, France, 1961, pp.7-9 & 28-29.

(Excerpts from the book written for the Centenary of the House.)

812 Carl Beck

Bibliography of the German-language philatelic literature.

[Bibliographie der deutschsprachlichen philatelistischen literatur.]

Germania-Berichte, October 1925, Volume 22, Issue 10, Whole number 290, p.167.

(Appreciation after it had ceased publication.)

813 Carl Beck

Bibliography of the German-language philat. literature 1925.

[Bibliographie der deutschsprachigen philat. literatur 1925.]

Germania-Berichte, February 1925, Volume 22, Issue 2, Whole number 282)p.36.

(Review when it was published.)

814 Enr. Conr. Eberhardt

History of Philately by which I mean the Science of Collecting Postage Stamps.
[Historia de la Filotelia o sea la Ciencia de Coleccionar Sellos de Correo.] Imprenta Gutenberg, Santiago, Chile, 1890, 173pp.

815 Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau

About the History of Philately. Collected Contributions to the History of Postage Stamps and Postage Stamp Collecting.

[Zur Geschichte der Philatelie. Gesammelte Beiträge zur Geschichte der Briefmarken und der Briefmarkenkunde.]

Philatelistische Bibliothek Volume IV, Louis Senf, Leipzig, Germany 1879, i +80pp.

816 Ch. O. Müller & James Negus

Four letters from Müller to Negus about indexing with a copy of the final response from Negus. 19th August 1955 to 11th August 1956.

817 J. A. Bosshard & Fritz Seifert

Well-known philatelists.

[Bekannte philatelisten.]

In: Deutsche Philatelistische Jahrbuch 1931: Wer Wie Was Wann und Wo in der Philatelie? [German Philatelic Year Book 1931: Who What Where When and How in Philately?], Fritz Seifert, Leipzig, Germany, 1930, pp.91-143.

Only the following entry has been translated: Otto Rommel, p.117.

818 Dr. Tillfried Cernajsek

Karl Franz Stock Deceased: Obituary.

[Karl Franz Stock Verstorben: Obituary.]

Austria Forum web site: <https://austria-forum.org>, Accessed 18th July 2023, 4pp.

Translation of the obituary only.

819 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, August 1932, Volume 1, Issue 2.

820 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, September 1932, Volume 1, Issue 3.

821 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, October 1932, Volume 1, Issue 4.

822 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, November 1932, Volume 1, Issue 5.

823 Translation Digest.

Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, December 1932, Volume 1, Issue 6.

824 Translation Digest.

Die Philatelistische Literatur, January 1935, Volume 4, Issue 1; Whole number 31.

825 Wolfgang Maassen

The Fascination of Writing: Tips for Authors, Editors and Bookmakers.

[Faszination Schreiben: Tipps für Autoren, Redakteure und Büchermacher.]

Ratgeber für Briefmarkensammler Volume 5, Phil*Creativ Verlag, Schwalmtal, Germany, 2005, 214pp.

Translation of the Contents and Introduction only.

- 826 Wolfgang Maassen
Personality and Copyright: A Guide for Authors and Editors of Print and Digital Media.
[Persönlichkeits-und Urheberrechte: Ein Leitfaden für Autoren und Redakteure der Print und Digitalmedien.]
Ratgeber für Briefmarkensammler Volume 10, Phil*Creativ Verlag, Schwalmtal, Germany, 2015, 118pp.
- 827 Horst Hille
The sufferings of the young (and old) Moschkau.
[Die leiden des jungen (und alten) Moschkaus.]
Neue Lipsia Rundschau, 1985, Volume 18, Issue 2, Whole number 102.
- 828 Jan Ulrich Clauss
Memorial of the 75th Birthday of Wolfgang Maassen RDP FRPSL AiJP CPh on the 25th January 2024.
[Festschrift zum 75. Geburtstag von Wolfgang Maassen RDP FRPSL AiJP CPh am 25. Januar 2024.]
Drukfrey, Neulingen, Germany, 2024, 140pp.
Translation of the Contents and Introduction only, pp.3-7.
- 829 Hans Wagner
Dr. med. Ludwig König †.
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, March 1915, Volume 26, Issue 3, p.33-34.
- 830 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, December 1895, Volume 1, Issue 12.
- 831 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 10.
- 832 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 4.
- 833 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 5.
- 834 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 6.
- 835 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 7.
- 836 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 8.
- 837 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 9.
- 838 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 10.

- 839 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 11.
- 840 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 2, Issue 12.
- 841 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 3, Issue 1.
- 842 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 3, Issue 2.
- 843 Translation Digest.
Philatelistische Literature, October 1896, Volume 3, Issue 4.
- 844 Dr. Weinert is dead.
[Dr. Weinert gestorben.]
Sammler-Woche, 5th July 1942, Volume 25, Issue 13/14, pp.103-104.
- 845 Pierre Mahé
The Stamp Dealers of the Olden Days and Their Catalogues.
[Les Marchands de Timbres-Poste d'Autrefois et Leurs Catalogues.]
Yvert & Tellier, Amiens, France, 1908, 371pp.
Foreword, pp.viii-xii.
- 846 Hermann Mittelmann
Catalogue of Current Philatelic Periodicals.
[Katalog der Existierenden Briefmarken-Zeitungen.]
Julius kittl, Mährish-Ostrau, Moravia, Austro-Hungary, 1889, 32pp.
- 847 Wolfgang Maassen
Philately: Insights – Outlooks - Perspectives: Lectures and unpublished studies 1999-2012.
[Philatelie: Einblicke – Ausblicke – Durchblicke: Vorträge und unveröffentlichte studien 1999-2012.]
Phil*Creativ, Schwalmthal, Germany, 2012, 653pp.
Translation of the Contents and introductory notes on pages 3-9.
- 848 O. Bogh
Danish philately 70 years ago.
[Dansk Filateli for 70 aar siden.]
Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, June 1956, pp.86-87.
- 849 Ole Steen Jacobsen
Stamp collecting in Denmark 1840-1899. Erik Ritzau – founder of Danish philately.
[Frimærkesamleriet i Danmark 1840-1899. Erik Ritzau – Grundlægger af dansk filateli.]
Post-Historisk Tidsskrift, August 1993, Issue 3, pp.90-102.
- 850 Victor Suppantshitsch
New from the book market: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford

K.T. by E. D. Bacon, London.

[Neues vom büchermarkt: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford K.T. by E. D. Bacon, London.]

Der Philatelist, 15th March 1912, Volume 33, Issue 3, pp.86-87.

(Review)

851 Victor Suppantschitsch

Philatelic Literature Bibliography Index von William Ricketts.

Der Philatelist, October 1912, Volume 33, Issue 10, p.276.

(Review)

852 Heinz Glättli & Walter Stamm

“Basler Taube” Foundation. Forseeable dissolution of the Foundation.

[Stiftung “Basler Taube”. Absehbare Auflösung der Stiftung Dissolution prévisible de la fondation “Basler Taube”]

Schweizer Briefmarken Zeitung, March 2024, Volume 136, Issue 4, pp.8-9.

853 Markus Winkler

Hermann Mittelmann (1869–1916): Profession, Writer, Civil Servant.

[Hermann Mittelmann (1869-1916): Beruf, Schriftsteller, Beamter.]

Bukovina Portal: www.bukowina-portal.de

(This site included several of what appeared to be title pages of Mittelmann’s publications but they would not print out reasonably so I left them out)

854 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, March 2015, Issue 1.

855 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, June 2015, Issue 2.

856 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, September 2015, Issue 3.

857 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, December 2015, Issue 4.

858 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, March 2016, Issue 1.

859 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, June 2016, Issue 2.

860 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, September 2016, Issue 3.

861 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, December 2016, Issue 4.

862 Translation Digest.

Phila Historica, March 2017, Issue 1.

863 Translation Digest.

- Phila Historica, June 2017, Issue 2.
- 864 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2017, Issue 3.
- 865 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2017, Issue 4.
- 866 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2018, Issue 1.
- 867 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2018, Issue 2.
- 868 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2018, Issue 3.
- 869 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2018, Issue 4.
- 870 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2019, Issue 1.
- 871 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2019, Issue 2.
- 872 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2019, Issue 3.
- 873 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2019, Issue 4.
- 874 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2020, Issue 1.
- 875 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2020, Issue 2.
- 876 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2020, Issue 3.
- 877 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2020, Issue 4.
- 878 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2021, Issue 1.
- 879 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2021, Issue 2.
- 880 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2021, Issue 3.

- 881 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2021, Issue 4.
- 882 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2022, Issue 1.
- 883 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2022, Issue 2.
- 884 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2022, Issue 3.
- 885 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2022, Issue 4.
- 886 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2023, Issue 1.
- 887 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2023, Issue 2.
- 888 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2023, Issue 3.
- 889 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2023, Issue 4.
- 890 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2024, Issue 1.
- 891 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2024, Issue 2.
- 892 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2024, Issue 3.
- 893 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2024, Issue 4.
- 894 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, March 2025, Issue 1.
- 895 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, June 2025, Issue 2.
- 896 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, September 2025, Issue 3.
- 897 Translation Digest.
Phila Historica, December 2025, Issue 4.

ZZZZZ

AUTHOR INDEX

INTRODUCTION

This index lists all of the authors and co-authors of individual translations. It also includes the authors of articles fully translated in those periodicals listed as Translation Digests. In the absence of a specific author, a corporate author (i.e. the society or organisation publishing, or responsible for the document) is given wherever possible. Library catalogues which have an introduction by a named librarian, are listed under the name of the librarian and of the library owner, generally a philatelic society. Many minor items and short articles are only identified by initials, which were presumably easily identifiable at the time of publication. These are included in the index with cross-references to the full names where I have been able to identify them. Data I have inserted which was not included in the original article is given in square brackets. Where the authorship of an article has been ascribed to the editor or publisher of a publication, this is identified, by a note to that effect. Editorials are not included in this index unless they are effectively articles.

Book or article titles, shortened where appropriate, are included to differentiate between the various articles of prolific authors. It must be borne in mind that many of the titles have been translated by a non-philatelist, Betty Howarth, formerly the Librarian of the Engineering Faculty of the University of Liverpool, or a non-linguist (me) using a dictionary and may not equate exactly to the title in the original language. Furthermore, the titles given may not be the actual titles since the original articles are from a wide variety of sources some of which are untitled. In addition, a number of entries are translations of portions of an article or publication which have had to have their titles created or augmented to improve understanding or to differentiate between duplicated titles. In addition, generic titles, such as Foreword or Introduction are generally followed by an indication of their source document. Where such a title of convenience or augmentation has been used, it is generally enclosed in square brackets. For authors with more than one entry, the titles are in alphabetical order.

German society names generally ignore the titles like Arbeitsgemeinschaft (Working Group), Bundesarbeitsgemeinschaft (State Working Group) and Forschungsgemeinschaft (Study Group) and are listed under the specialty or country in order to avoid a large number of entries under these general titles.

AAAA

Ahrens, Werner
Judging philatelic periodicals at exhibitions	159
Alabiso, Alfredo
Cumulative index to "Il Collezionista Italia Filatelica" 1951-1985	046
Álvarez, Dr. Gerardo
A short history of the Rivadavia Library of Cañada de Gómez	516
Amado, Joaquin
The written flame of philately	730
Andriesen, Jürgen
Inventory List of Literature	475

Anttila, Pentti
Aihefilatelisti periodical general index 1960-79	336
Aparicio, Yolanda Estefanía
Doctor Thebussem and the Post	726
Aracil, Francisco
History of Spanish Philatelic Literature	428
Arbeitsgemeinschaft ...
See under the Society's name
Argyropoulos, Georges
The Bern Philatelic Library	322
BBBB
Babintsev, S.
Philatelic Bibliography: A Guide to Basic Literature (Books and Periodicals) on Postal History, Postage Stamps and Philately, Published in the Russian Language over 125 Years: 1843-1968	038
Bache, Anton
A bibliography of German philatelic literature	703
Exposition philatélique de Munich	721
Baker, L. A. J.
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature [2nd edition]	003
Barberis, Nino
Aicam Flash : Final number
Bartków-Domagala, Jadwiga
Bookplates on Postal Subjects: Catalogue 1977	513
Basin, O. Y.
Philatelic Dictionary	108
Beck, Carl
See also: Carl Beck & Alexander Bungerz
Bibliographic works in the German philatelic literature	102
Bibliography of the Most Important German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries (1 st edition, 1915)	340
Bibliography of German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries (2 nd edition, 1919)	047
Bibliography of the German-language philatelic literature. (Review)	812
Bibliography of the German-language philatelic literature. (Review)	813
Bibliography of the Most Important German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries (3 rd edition, 1923)	270
Carl Lindenberg	444
J. Schütte: Library Catalogue (Book review)	436
Literature at the postage stamp exhibition in Dortmund, 1926	485

Marvels of philatelic literature	465, 466
Organising Philatelic Libraries	710
The problem of the Leipzig world treasury	436
Victor Suppantshitsch †	107
Beck, Carl & Bungerz, Alexander
Literature at International Exhibitions	443
Becker, E.
The literature of Memel philately	044, 400
Berliner Philatelisten-Club [von 1888]
Membership List as of 31st March 1890	319
The Library	507
Bernard, L.
The third sale of the Ferrary collection	744
Bibliotheken der DDR
Library Catalogue, 1972	350
Billig, Fritz
Mondial Foreword	041
Mondial: Billig's International Philatelic Literature Reference Work	681
Binner, Robert
New Director for the Munich Philatelic Library	313
Birnbach, Heinrich
Strasburg Letter [about the exhibition of 1927]	437
Blanc, Emmanuel
French literature in the year 1949	035
Postal and Philatelic Bibliography of France	339
Blank, Dr. Phil. Wilhelm
A home for philately in the German Library	445
Authors and the specialist press: The tragedy part two	442
Philately in the Specialist and Daily Press	092
Bloch, Max.
General Index – 1919	048
Philatelic literature – a proposal for co-operation	279
Philatelic literature of the year 1919	697
Postage Stamps of Austria in the German Philatelic Literature of the year 1918	283
Blossfeldt, Eduard
Critical considerations on the present state of philatelic societies as regards philately	310
What will be the best way to a German bibliographic work on philately?	302

Bode, Bodo
[Zentralkatalog der in den Öffentlichen Bibliotheken]	350
Bogh, O.
Danish philately 70 years ago	848
Borger, F.
The importance of international postage stamp exhibitions, particularly WIPA, for philatelic literature	402
Bose, Walter B. L.
Abel Fontaine (1849-1926): First chronicler of Argentine philatelic literature	612
Argentine Philatelic Literature. (Bibliographic Index)	229
Twenty Years of Historical Work (1924-1944)	342
Bosredon, Ph. De
Philatelic Bibliography of France and Belgium (1876/1878)	346
Philatelic Bibliography of France and Belgium (1878)	338
Bosshard, J. A.
Authors and the philatelic press	439
Criticism and the philatelic press	603
Libraries	627
Potpourri	644
Review [of the state of philatelic publishing in 1930]	451
The literature at the International Stamp Exhibition, Frankfurt-a/M. 1926	432
This and that	614
Bosshard, J. A. & Fritz Seifert
Well-known philatelists.	076, 817
Boyer, Christian
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
Brendicke, Dr. Hans
On the Chalmers-Hill Question	566
Brinkhoff, Adr.
Johan Karel Koning	515
Bruhl, C.
History of Philately	057
Brunel, Georges
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
State of Philately in 1867, The	192 & 785
Buddensieg, Wolfram
Index to the Bahnpost Berichte 1973-1998	471

Bungerz, AlexanderSee also: Carl Beck & Alexander Bungerz

About Circuits and Exchanges	530
Auction of the library of Herbert Clark	783
Carl Beck †	803
German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1920	081
German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1921	051
German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1922	052
German Language Philatelic Literature of the Year 1923	231
Grosses Lexicon der Philatelie	230
Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler	434
Sale of the Herbert Clark Library	474
Stamp magazines of Germany and Austria including German-Speaking Hungary and Switzerland 1914/1919	314
The First Catalogue from J. B. Moens	433

Buschhaus, Rudolf

The book as a collector's item	802
--------------------------------	-----

CCCCC., P.See Patrick Chalmers*Carnévalé-Mauzan, Marino

Glance at Philatelic Literature in France [1979]	292
Glance at Philatelic Literature in France [1982]	091

Castle, Marcellus Purnell

The Munich Philatelic Exhibition	722
----------------------------------	-----

Castro, Dr. Máximo

Doctor José Marcó del Pont: Died in Buenos Aires on the 11 th July 1917.	720
---	-----

Cernajsek, Dr. Tillfried

Karl Franz Stock Verstorben: Obituary	818
---------------------------------------	-----

Chalmers, PatrickHe also used the initials P. C.

The Adhesive Postage Stamp	539, 635
The Adhesive Postage Stamp [A letter to J.-B. Moens]	538
The Adhesive Postage Stamp: To the Editor in Chief of Timbre-Poste	540
Through the Exhibitions. The Exhibition of Postage Stamps	636

Chenevard, William

Essay on postal bibliography	762
------------------------------	-----

Clauss, Jan Ulrich

Memorial of the 75 th Birthday of Wolfgang Maassen RDP FRPSL AiJP CPh on the 25 th January 2024.	828
---	-----

Clement, Alfred

The Sieger Prizewinner: Alfred Clement	165
Cock, André de
The Bruck library	561
René Poncelet's Library	560
Copenhagen Philatelic Club
See Københavns Philatelistklub
	DDDD
Danmarks Filatelist Forbund
Library Catalogue, West Library, 1984	347
Library Catalogue, West Library, 1984-1992	358
Deinhart, Dr. Hans
50 years of Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern (1925-1974)	010
Dellepiane, Dr. Antonio
Doctor José Marcó del Pont: Died in Buenos Aires on the 11 th July 1917.	720
Deninger, Hermann
See also Hermann Denninger Library
Introductory words [100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature]	303
Deutsche Altbriefsammler-Verein
Library Catalogue, 1987	357
Deutsche Notmassnahmen nach 1945
Library Catalogue, 1997	475
Deutschen Bücherei zu Leipzig
Library Catalogue, 1928	317
Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes
Library Catalogue, 1897	410
Deutschen Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum
	536
Díaz, A. Majó & J. Majó Tocabens
"Natalis Rondot", pseudonym of Armán Martín	739
A great idea by James Chalmers put into practice by Rowland Hill	740
Diena, Dr. Emilio
A reference book about philatelic literature (1888)	330
A reference book about philatelic literature (1889)	510
Literary - Der Briefmarkensammler	374
Meeting of the 3 rd October 1889 (Société Française de Timbrologie)	403
Diena, Enzo
A great sadness for philately: The death of Leon V. Rapkin	731

Directeur Générale des Postes et des Télégraphes
Letter to Patrick Chalmers dated 16 th April 1891	537
Doberer, K. K.
Literatur Nachrichten	090
Literature promotes literature	137
Recommendations to the Editors of "Literatur-Nachrichten"	228
Dobiat, Hans-Jürgen
Catalogue of the Wuppertal Philatelic Library – Foreword to the 1 st edition	479
Donatis, A.
Letter to Dr. Legrand	765
Doorman, A. S.
Catalogue of the Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars Library	393
Duffner, Joachim
Dr. Otto Rommel's library donated to the Prussian State Library	237
EEEE
Ebe, Einar
Collectors live longer! A richer life	610
Eberhardt, Enr. Conr.
History of Philately by which I mean the Science of Collecting Postage Stamps.	814
Editrice Filatelica
Philatelic Bibliographical Index (Complete to the end of 1924)	059
Eliçabe, Ricardo D.
Doctor José Marcó del Pont: Died in Buenos Aires on the 11 th July 1917.	720
Engelhardt, H.-H.
Where do you stand on philatelic literature?	035
Engelhardt, Dr. Wilhelm
Statistics on the proportions of different groups of subjects in philatelic literature	154
Escalada-Goicoechea, Eduardo
Biography from The Organisation of the Carlist Post (1873-1876)	472
First Spanish philatelic bibliography	767
FFFF
F., H.
See Heinrich Fränkel	238

F., S.	736
See Sigmund Friedl
Faber, Wilhelm
To our readers [of the Bazar für Briefmarkensammler]	405
Felzmann, Ulrich
Library: Emil W. Mewes	477
Philatelic literature: Roland Library	512
Philatelic literature: Roland Library – Part 2	264
Fendler, Wolfgang
Hans Wagner	751
Ferrary, Philipp von (Philippe de Ferrary)
Extract from the Register of Births	716
[Letter to the editor of Der Philatelist]	712
[Letter to the editor of the Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung]	715
Correspondence [Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste]	725
Fiajas, Stefan
Library of the Muzeum Poczty i Telekomunikacji at Wrocław	326
Fischer, A.
The most important handbooks for collectors	160
Fischer, Peter
From the Early Days of German Philately	779
Flier, A. van der
History of the Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie	036
Fontaine, Abel
The philatelic press in the Argentine Republic	709
Fraenkel, H.
See Heinrich Fränkel
Fränkel, Heinrich
Chronological Table of German Philatelic Periodicals 1863-1893	002
German philatelic literature 1892/93	199
Literature	238
The Trojan War in philately	565
Fransius, Stephan
List of Swedish Philatelic Literature in the Philatelic Library of the Postal Museum	345
Friedl, Sigmund
James Chalmers, the inventor of the postage stamp	736
Mosaic	714

Small messages	750
Friedrich, Paul
Appeal to the German philatelic community [for support of indexing project]	056
Magasin Pittoresque	776
GGGG
Gaedicke, F.
Foreword [Literatur Nachrichten, Whole number 2] (Article)	185
Report of the Head of Section B for the Freiburg meeting (Article)	185
Gainsborg, E.
French opinion [on the desirability of a philatelic index]	039
Gerhard-Tag, H. A.
I have only come across his name hyphenated once and therefore assume that it was an error. See under H. A. Gerhard Tag
Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur
Symbols and Abbreviations for Philatelic Periodicals	027
Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde
The Library of the Society of Friends of Philatelic Literature e. V., Hamburg	484
Gewande, Dr. H. W.
A wake-up call to all friends of literature	055
Giese, Friedo
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 - Library Catalogue - 1998	418
Giordano, Osvaldo Mario
Argentine philatelic press	608
Philatelic press in Argentina	050
Glasewald, A. E.
Our literature and its critics	311
Glasewald, Ruprecht
Index of the Glasewald Library	351
100 years of literature on stamps	136
Glättli, Heinz
“Basler Taube” Foundation. Forseeable dissolution of the Foundation.	852
Gleixner, Otto
Foreword (Catalogue of the Munich Philatelic Library - 1983)	064
Foreword (Catalogue of the Munich Philatelic Library - 1990)	356
German philatelic libraries (Article)	187
New Director for the Munich Philatelic Library	313
The Philatelic Library in Munich	562

Why and how do I find philatelic literature?	369
Gnewuch, Gerd For the User (Hermann Deninger Library)	407
Goicoechea, Eduardo Escalada See under Eduardo Escalada-Goicoechea
Gottschalk, Albert Commentary on the literature history German philatelic literature 1894/97 Philatelic libraries	546 037 690
Grallert, Wolfram Lexicon of Philately 125 years of philatelic literature in Leipzig	005 243
Grossbritannien Library Catalogue, 1999 Library Catalogue, 2007	408 600
Gruschke, W. Lexicon of Philately	005
Gündel, Karl von A bibliography of the German philatelic literature A bibliography of German philatelic literature in sight The Chalmers essay in the Postwerthzeichen-Museum The first part of a bibliography of German philatelic literature published The projected appearance of a bibliography of German philatelic literature	773 596 743 705 502
HHHH
H., E. Lindenberg – Medal	282
Häger, Ullrich Quo vadis – philatelic literature? Rise of philatelic literature We glance through an old journal	133 135 134
Hamburg-Altonaer Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg 100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature	303
Hanciau, Louis François A note on J. B. Moens's Catalogue Prix-Courant of 1868 A word on the origin of postage stamps About Stamp Collecting. Its origin and development The Munich Philatelic Exhibition Yesterday and today	733 748 749 722 724
Haubner, Dr. Fritz

Index to the Philatelic Literature in the Old German Field of Collecting:	053
Hanover
Norddeutscher Postbezirk im Spiegel der Literatur	188
Heidtmann, Frank
Where do I Find Philatelic Information?	016
Hermann Deninger Library
Library catalogue, 1990	407
Herpin, G.
Baptism	371
Hertfelder, W. H.
Library Catalogue - R+V-Zettel	476
Heusch, G.
Library Index of the Deutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes	410
Hille, Horst
Pioneers of Philately	286
The sufferings of the young (and old) Moschkau	827
Himmelbauer, Franz
A partisan of Sir Pearson Hill	535
Hoffmann, Dr. G.
Philately as a remedy	161
Höhn, Robert
Annual report of the Federal Literature Group, 1978/79 (Article)	187
Foreword [Literatur Nachrichten Whole number 64/65] (Article)	187
Holm, Christian
Foreword – Library Catalogue	416
Hornung, Otto
Second Guyana one cent: Doubts remain. Results of experts differ	756
Horodisch, Dr. A.
Thoughts on the methodology of a bibliography on postal stationery	401
Hughes, W. Hughes
An English Collector	593
Huick, Karl
The development of stamp newspapers	445
III
Ihm, Adolf
Interest in philatelic literature is being aroused	058

Place of philatelic literature in stamp exhibitions	061
Survey of the contents of German & foreign postage stamp journals	061
International Vereeniging “Philatelica”
Library Catalogue, 1946	383
Internationale Philatelisten-Verein, Dresden
Reference work (Bibliography) of the German philatelic literature	127
JJJJ
Jacobsen, Ole Steen
Stamp collecting in Denmark 1840-1899. Erik Ritzau – founder of Danish philately	849
Jacques, Manfred
Foreword (Deutsche Altbriefsammler-Verein Library Index)	357
Jaeger, Dr. Heinz
From the Early Days of German Philately	779
Jähnig
Rescue society for the German philatelic literature	058
Jänecke, Jurgen
Index to the Bahnpost Berichte 1973-1998	471
Jensen, Paul H.
Pleasure and benefits of philatelic literature	687
Joany, Dr. R.
Philatelic and Postal Glossary	001
Jørgensen, Jens Peter
West Library: The Library’s Card Catalogue Index 1984	347
West Library: Supplement to the Library’s Card Catalogue Index 1984-1992	358
Jullien, Pierre
The adventure continues	413
KKKK
K., Ph.	096
See Philipp Kosack
Kagelari, Panagioti D.
Dictionary of Greek Philatelists	421
Kähler,
Introductory words [100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature]	303

Kalckhoff, Dr. F.
Contents of domestic and foreign philatelic journals	058
Preface (To Die Philatelistische Literatur)	044
Survey of the contents of German & foreign postage stamp journals	061
25 years of the "D.B.Z."	284
Kindermann, Walter
Philately in Hamburg 1862-1900	307
Kirchenstaat mit Vorphilatelie und Vatikanstaat
Library catalogue, 2000	473
Knappen, Friedhelm
Hans Wagner and the Hans-Wagner-Medal	764
Københavns Philatelistklub
Library catalogue, 1931	416
Kobold, Gustav
Excerpts from the literature on inflation stamps	575
Koch, Alfred
References on the German Postal System, 1871-1964	132
References on the German Postal System; Supplement 1500-1964	126
König, Ludwig
On philatelic literature	367
Körner, R.
Contents overview	044
Kosack, Philipp
Catalogue of the philatelic library of the Earl of Crawford K. T.	096
Köth, Arno
Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau: A Life for Philately, 1848-1912	289
Kouwenberg, K.
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part Ia)	297
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part Ib)	315
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part Ic)	316
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part IIa)	298
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part IIb)	299
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part IIIa)	191
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part IIIb)	248
Pioneers of Dutch philately (Part IIIc)	306
Postage stamp exhibitions in the 19 th century	747
Krasemann, Rudolf
Bibliography of the most Important Monographs on the Postage Stamps of individual countries (1907 – in Swedish)	337

Bibliography of the most Important Monographs on the Postage Stamps of individual countries (1907 – in German)	004
Bibliography of the most important monographs on the postage stamps and postal stationery of individual countries. (1908 – in German)	406
Overview of philatelic literature from its beginning to today	404
Krause, Richard
From yellowed pages II. Obituaries of journals	198
Krenkel, Rüdiger
Library Catalogue 2007	598
Kreuzer, Alfred
History of the philatelic press	220
Outstanding German philatelists	420
Krötzsch, Hugo
Catalogue of the Philatelic Section in the German State Library of Leipzig	317
Formation of an international philatelic library	285
Krug, Hansmichael
Foreword - Library Catalogue	418
LLLL
Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine
Catalogue of the Philatelic Landesverband's Library, Berlin: Part II Journals	006
Lang-Valchs, Gerhard
The Records of Jean-Baptiste Moens	732
Leclercq, A.
Jean-Baptiste Moens 1833-1908. The Catalogue of his Works with Criteria of Rarity	221
Legrand, Dr. Jacques Amable [Dr. Magnus]
Catalogue of Philatelic Literature	089
Dr. Legrand	594
Foreword & Philatelic Bibliography (Philatelic Exhibition, Paris 1892)	412
Letter from Doctor Legrand	300
Meeting of the 1 st March 1888	738
Minutes of the meetings of the Society. Meeting of the 3 rd October 1889	403
Minutes of the meetings of the Society. Meeting of the 12 th January 1888	711
Studies on philatelic bibliography	301
Leipzig
See Deutschen Bücherei zu Leipzig
Leist, Winfried
The fate of Carl Lindenberg's library	680

Leitenberger, Friedrich
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925	071
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature - 1925. Circular accompanying a review copy of the second part of the Bibliography.	072
Concerning the Bibliography of German-Language Philatelic Literature by Friedrich Leitenberger	688
Lemierre, Ch.
Philately	331
Leo, Alexander
3 rd meeting of the International Federation of the Philatelic Press (F.I.P.P.)	577
Leoni, Giuseppe
Philatelic Bibliography of Italy	219
Leroux, Henri
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
The Centenary of the House of Maury 1860-1960	769
Leroy, R.
Bibliography of Philately in Belgium	029
Leutwyler, H.
Swiss Hotel Post, Hotel Telegraph and Telephone Service in the 19 th Century	040
Lienau, Dr. Arnold
Introductory words [100 Years of Scientific Philatelic Literature]	303
Lietzow, Paul
The Olympian of philately: J. B. Moens of Brussels	759
Lindauer, Franz-Joseph
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 1993]	308
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 1994]	304
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 1996]	457
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 1997]	455
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 1998]	456
Epilogue [Literatur Nachrichten, 2001]	729
Lindekam, Otto
The removal of bookplates from books	580
Lindner, Franz-Karl
To our members [Literatur Nachrichten, 1991]	309
Introduction [Literatur Nachrichten, 1993]	308
Introduction [Literatur Nachrichten, 1994]	304
Introduction [Literatur Nachrichten, 1996]	457
Introduction [Literatur Nachrichten, 1997]	455
Introduction [Literatur Nachrichten, 1998]	456

[IBRA-Bibliothekskatalog]	379
“Who’s Who in Philately” A new edition on the internet	605
Foreword [Literatur Nachrichten, 2001]	729
Lipinska, L.
Summary – Museum Poczty I Telekomunikacji Library catalogue	388
Litschke, Peer-Ingo
Philatelic periodicals covered by the philatelic reference organs “Literatur-Nachrichten” to 1960 & “Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur”	070
Treatment of colour printing controls in the philatelic literature since 1965	265
Lüdtke, Alfred
Our library is in the making	328
Lund, Carl
Foreign stamp literature	800
	MMMM
M., K.
Collector of 1852	244
M., U.
“Research and Literature in Philately” Salon	261
Maassen, Claudia
Dear Members of the AIJP	791
Maassen, Wolfgang
150 years ago the first philatelic literature appeared!	796
Bibliographies - Inexhaustible resources for researching philatelists.	604
Chronicle of German Philately	524
Der Bazar für Briefmarken-Sammler	380
Fascination of writing: Tips for authors, editors and bookmakers	825
From the Early Days of German Philately	779
Inventory of the WM Photograph Archive	684
Literature Collecting – Building Libraries: Tips for Those who Enjoy Books and Those who Love to Own Books.	518
Personality and Copyright: A Guide for Authors and Editors of Print and Digital Media.	826
Philatelic libraries - of collectors and for collectors!	519
Philately: Insights – Outlooks - Perspectives: Lectures and unpublished studies 1999-2012.	847
Reminiscences following the 300 th Schwanke auction in Hamburg	564
Sad end of the legendary Germania-Rings Library	167
Selective bibliography of the most significant philatelic literature of the 19 th century	785
Who is Who in Philately? (1 st edition)	425
Who is Who in Philately? (2 nd edition)	755
Who is Who in Philately? (3 rd edition)	754

Machado, Paulo [de Oliveira] Sá
Personalities of Philately I	422
Personalities of Philately II	423
Personalities of Philately III	424
Maelen, J. van der
A note on J. B. Moens's Catalogue Prix-Courant of 1868	733
Magnus, Dr.
Pseudonym used by Dr. Jacques Amable Legrand q.v.
Mahé, Pierre Marie
The collection of H[erpin]	808
The Stamp Dealers of the Olden Days and Their Catalogues	845
Maison Williame
Jean Baptiste Moens 1833-1908: Founder of philatelic commerce	753
Marsh, Victor
Pseudonym used by Herbert Edgar Weston
Philatelic souvenirs: Which, from your philatelic memories, is the one that you find most valuable, or consider the most fun?	707
Marx, A.
Dr. Wilhelm Blank is 65 years old	045
Maurice, André
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
The Centenary of the House of Maury 1860-1960	769
Maury, Arthur
Arthur Maury recounts a day in his memoirs	741
Correspondence [With Ferrary]	725
English stamps with punched initial letters	737
Memoires of a stamp dealer	615
Public sale of postage stamps	795
Mette, H.-H.
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 - Library Catalogue	417
Mewes, Emil-W.
40 years of Literatur Nachrichten	790
Memories of Dr. Herbert Munk in Lugano, 19th April 1953	294
Philatelic literature in the Federal Republic of Germany	293
Philatelic Literature – not the Stepchild of Philately	218
Meyer, Hans
Philatelic libraries and catalogues	706
Meyer, Karl Th.
On details of sources in philatelic writing	484
Produce usable indexes to contents	576

The journal of the Federation of German Philatelic Societies	579
Meyer, Konrad Ferdinand
Chalmers, Hill, Kosir and the Countess of Longueville	777
Michaelis, C.
Are auction catalogues philatelic literature?	577, 578
Contents overview	044
Contribution to our knowledge of German philatelic periodicals	147, 155
Lifespan of postage stamp journals Part 4	401
Lifespan of postage stamp journals Part 5	402
Lifespan of postage stamp journals Part 8	044
Mittelmann, Hermann
Catalogue of Current Philatelic Periodicals	846
Of what benefit is a philatelic reference book based on the Dr. Diena system?	595
Specialist periodicals no longer published	501
Moens, Jean-Baptiste Philippe Constant
Exposition philatélique de Munich	721
Montader, Alfred
Philatelic literature	482
Montero, Ramón Pérez
The geniality of the eccentric (Dr. Thebussem)	726
Morin, Cimon
Canadian philatelic literature	341
Mörschel, Dr. Erhard
Catalogue of the philatelic library of the Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Marburg/Lahn 1892 e.V.	631
Moschkau, Dr. Otto Carl Alfred
About society libraries	634
About the History of Philately. Collected Contributions to the History of Postage Stamps and Postage Stamp Collecting.	815
Bibliography of philately	499
Ch. Diena	774
Contribution to the science of stamps	329
Germany's philatelic literature	368
History of philately (1878)	458
History of philately (1879)	429
History of philately (Fourth edition 1880)	493
Outline of a history of stamps and stamp collecting (First edition, 1871)	426
Outline of a history of stamps and stamp collecting (Second edition, 1872)	427
Philatelic Bibliography (1888)	486
Philatelic Bibliography (1889)	498
Philatelic literature of Germany (1872)	121
Philatelic literature of Germany (1874)	364

Philately (Postage stamps)	727
Philipp la Rénotière von Ferrary	713
Mújica, Jesús María Armengol Butrón de
Doctor Thebussem – writer on bullfighting	726
Müller, Christoph Otto
Aim and purpose of Literature Nachrichten	025
Announcement from the Federal Office for Philatelic Literature	569
Catalogue of the Philatelic Section of the Munich State Library	563
Five letters to James Negus about indexing	816
From the memoirs of a professional philatelic librarian	568
Guidelines for planning and starting a philatelic library	025
The most important handbooks for collectors	160
Privy Concillor Dr. Kalckhoff	162
Survey of the contents of German & foreign postage stamp journals	061
Müller, Wilhelm
On foreign specialist periodicals	617
Munchen Philatelistische Bibliothek
See Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek
Museo Postal y Telegráfico (Spain)
Library Catalogue, 1997	387
Museum Poczty i Telekomunikacji
Library Catalogue, Polish Philatelic Periodicals, 1984	377
Library Catalogue, Documents, 1988	388
Library Catalogue, Foreign Postal and Philatelic Periodicals, 1988	389
Library Catalogue, Polish Postal and Philatelic Periodicals, 1990	376
	NNNN
N., Dr.
Ueber anlegung von Bibliotheken	321
Naumann, Rev.
In commemoration of A. E. Glasewald Senior	544
Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen
See Nederlandse Bond van Filatelistenverenigingen
Nederlandse Bond van Filatelistenverenigingen
Library Catalogue, 1962	391
Library Catalogue, 1974	394
Library Catalogue, 1979	391
Nederlandsche Bond van Verenigingen van Postzegelverzamelaars
Library Catalogue, 1952	392
Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars

Library Catalogue, 1933	393
Negus
Five letters from Müller to Negus about indexing and Negus ' response	816
Neuburger, Dr. Albert
The Book Worm.	602
Nordische Staaten
Library Catalogue, [1987]	409
North, Roger
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
The Centenary of the House of Maury 1860-1960	769
OOOO
Off, Alfons
Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek: Germany & German Area Foreword	063
Olamo, Juhani
Index of Philatelic Literature in Philatelic Exhibition Catalogues; 1950-1991	296
Osmanisches Reich/Türkei
Library Catalogue, 1994	384
Library Catalogue, 1996	385
Ott, Alfons
Foreword – Library Catalogue	385
Ottinger, Louis
The stamp trade in Paris under the second empire	734
Oultre-Seille, F. P. Renaut d'
See under Renaut d'Oultre-Seille
PPPP
Paganini, Dr. Robert
Aerophilatelic journals Part 1	400
Aerophilatelic journals Part 2	401
Airpost catalogue	044
Panini, P.
The birth of de Ferrary	752
Petrausch, Walter
In the realm of stamp collecting literature: A short walk	633
Philak
See Karl Scharfenberg

Philatelistenclub Berlin-Mitte
Club Journal: Reports and Communications of the Philatelisten-Club Berlin-Mitte with the “DDR-Spezial” Working Group: Index, Hefte 1-30, 1995-2002	542
Philatelistische Bibliothek Wuppertal
Library Catalogue, Part 1, ca.2001	479
Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg
Directions for external loans	320
Library Catalogue, Volume 1, 1979	008
Library Catalogue, Volume 2, 1979	396
Library Catalogue, Part 1, 1988	352
Library Catalogue, Part 2, 1992	353
Library Catalogue, Parts 3 & 4, 1997	354
Piloni, Luigi
Il Bollettino Filatelico d’Italia - a half century of life	049
Pirl, Paul
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature	588
Plaminek, A.
From long ago [Review of Moens’ catalogue of 1862]	446
Pos, J. M.
Pioneers of philately	793
Posselt, H.
Survey of the contents of German & foreign postage stamp journals	061
Poulain, Raymond
The first postage stamp catalogue in France “The Potiquet”	772
Poulain, René
Articles on Arthur Maury	811
The Centenary of the House of Maury 1860-1960	769
Preuss, P.
Contents overview	044
Hm, Hm!	643
Literature at exhibitions	643

QQQQ

RRRR

R+V-Zettel
Library Catalogue 1987	476

Rabier
Regard sur la Presse Philatélique Française	088
Raupp, Otto
Catalogue of the Philatelic Landesverband's Library, Berlin: Part II Journals	006
Régnard, E.
The collection of H[erpin]	808
Reichpostzentramt
Reichpostzentramt	570
Reinheimer, A.
The first postage stamp exhibition	373
Renaut d'Oultre-Seille, F. P.
Bibliographic Index of the World's Philatelic Press	024
Riedl, Peter
Otto Rommel	125
Riggi, Giovanni
Analysis of a degradation	131
Rist, Karl
Is literature on Japanese philately unwanted?	166
The philatelist and the "Literatur-Nachrichten"	810
Röhm, Norbert
Letter to Brian Birch	591
Source for Philately: The "Literarische Museum"	225
Rommel, Dr. Otto
Attempt at a catalogue of the philatelic periodical literature of the whole world (Volume 3, Issue 11)	462
The Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford compiled by E. D. Bacon.	280
Corrections and additions to Suppanschitsch's essay on the irregularities of philatelic periodical literature	366
Directory of the Most Important Philatelic Works and Treatises from both Domestic and International Sources, Excluding Items from Periodicals	683
Periodical chronicle	097
Philatelic literature of the year 1894	042
Philatelic periodical literature	128
Philatelic periodical literature of the World in the years 1901-1903	363
Scandinavian philatelic periodical literature (In German)	361
Scandinavian philatelic periodical literature (In Swedish)	362
Study of a catalogue system for the periodical literature of the World from 1863-1896	461

Survey of articles etc., on the postage stamps of the German States appearing in the periodical literature of the year 1896	459, 460
Survey of articles etc., on the postage stamps of the German States appearing in the periodical literature of the year 1897	276
Verzeichnis	365
Rondot, Natalis
The Postage Stamps of all the Countries of the World in 1862	344
Roschlau, Ernst
Postage stamp literature.	506
SSSS
Salierno, Vito
Survey of the Italian philatelic press	291
Sanctis, Mario de
End of the road	011
Sauer, Karl Cl.
Bibliography of German philatelic literature	312
Scharfenberg, Karl
Bylaws of the German Society for Philatelic Literature.	536
German Society for Philatelic Literature (DGPS)	503
Literatur-Angebot Nr. 53/1	334
Magazin für Philatelistische Literatur, June 1950, Volume 1, Issue 1	503
Schätzler, Dr. R.
Bookplates also delight the collector's heart.	495
Coloured copper-plate engraving – a very appealing collecting topic	517
Schenkel, H
Photographic bookplates	607
Schmeer, Dr. Hans
Foreword [to Literatur Nachrichten 21/22, 1955]	162
Schmidt, Dr. Heinz
Father of the German Philatelists Day Hans Wagner and his Verein für Briefmarkenkunde von 1885 e.V. Mainz	763
Schmirler, Hermann
State of Austrian philatelic literature	295
Schmittdiel, C.
Bibliography of the German-Language Philatelic Literature. Part 1 - Instructions for Compilers	069
Bibliothekskatalog Philatelistische Bibliothek C. Schmittdiel	318
Der Philatelistische Literatursammler (Prospectus)	622
Contents overview	044

Prospectus for a Possible Handbook of all the German Language Philatelic Literature that has Appeared to date (Handbooks, Monographs, Pamphlets, etc. excluding Periodicals)	239
Society... various papers	469
Schneider, Burkhard
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm	481
Dispersion of the “Taunus Library” Part 2	492
Analysis of the “Taunus Library”: Part 2	481
Dispersion of the “Taunus Library” Part 5	491
Dispersion of the “Taunus Library” Part 6	494
Schroeder, Dr.
The end of the F. I. P. P.: Philately is becoming superficial	629
Schubert, Johannes
Philatelic Libraries	468
Philatelic libraries: History, formation and use	584, 585, 453
Schürgers, Alfred
Introduction – Library Catalogue, 1988	417
Introduction – Library Catalogue, 1992	382
Schwaginger, Dr. Benno
Philately rouses high expectations	169
Schwanke Auktionen
Another special part of Auktion 338 is dedicated to philatelic literature. “We have the most beautiful library in the world ...” - .. at least for a few weeks!	637
Schwanke, Hans-Joachim
“Alicante” Library	411
Very esteemed ladies and gentlemen	508
Schwanke, Sabine
“Alicante” Library	411
Very esteemed ladies and gentlemen	508
Sedlmayr, Otto
Exposition philatélique de Munich	721
Seifert, Fritz
See also J. J. Bosshard & Fritz Seifert
Most issues of Der [Deutsche] Philatelistische Bücherwurm from March 1931 to December 1937 carried an index to articles in the specialised press by Siefert . Since these did not require translating, they are not listed here.
Fritz Leitenberger †	809
Hugo Kröttsch	467
Seifert, Fritz & Max Ton
Phila-Gotha	484

Who is the Philatelist?	452, 654
Siewert, John
Exchange	487
On the Chalmers-Hill question	742
Simon, E. -O.
Recent French Philatelic Literature	026
Simonazzi, Emilio
The Philatelic Trade in Italy. The Evolution over Two Centuries	794
Smit, W. F.
Foreword – Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen library catalogue	394
Smith, Bertram Tapscott Knight
Table of Contents of the Journal “Le Timbre Poste” Published in Brussels by J.-B. Moens (February 1863-December 1900)	007
Śnieżko, Aleksander
Philatelic Bookplates	378
Polish philatelic bookplates	522
Socrate
Who is thanked as the inventor of the postage stamp?	761
Soeteman, Corneille
The Corneille Soeteman Library, Part I	478
The Corneille Soeteman Library, Part II	504
The Corneille Soeteman Library, Part III	511
Sonnenberg-Fedorovsy, Walter Stephan
Russian philatelic literature	490, 578
Spoelman, C.
Foreword to the 4 th Supplement of the Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen library catalogue	395
Springer, Christian
Dr. Phil. Alfred Moschkau: A Life for Philately, 1848-1912	289
Springer, Renate
From the Early Days of German Philately	779
Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Bibliothek
Instructions for External Loans	325
Library Catalogue, Deutschland und deutsche Gebiet, 1966	062
Library Catalogue, Deutschland und deutsche Gebiet, 1975	063
Library Catalogue, Übersee, 1975	386
Library Catalogue, Part 1, 1983	064
Library Catalogue, Part 2, 1990	356

Stamm, Walter
“Basler Taube” Foundation. Forseeable dissolution of the Foundation.	852
Stettiner, P
Letter to Patrick Chalmers	541
Stiftung zur Förderung der Philatelie und Postgeschichte
Library Catalogue 2007	598
Strack, Martin
Forschungsgemeinschaft Grossbritannien Library Catalogue 1999	408
Forschungsgemeinschaft Grossbritannien Library Catalogue, 2007	600
Strandell, Nils
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1908	066
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1909	067
Index of the European specialised periodical literature in the year 1910	068
Stiftung zur Förderung der Philatelie und Postgeschichte
Herman Denninger Library Catalogue (1990)	407
Suppanttschitsch, Victor
A bibliography of German Philatelic literature	500, 514
An old, apparently lost postage stamp catalogue	746
Attempt at a bibliography of the foreign-language philatelic literature of Europe to the end of 1891	183, 632
Austro-Hungarian philatelic literature in the 19 th Century	335
Bibliography of important articles and notes published in the German philatelic literature in the years 1892 through 1910 inclusive, relating to postal stationery	586
Bibliography and Reference book on all German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the End of 1891 Including an Outline of the History of Philately with Special Reference to Germany and a Short History of German Philatelic Literature	043
Chronological table of German philatelic literature 1863-1893 (Review)	241
About irregularities in publication, errors and violations in the Numbering, Dating and Page numbering of philatelic periodicals up to the end of 1900.	359
The Origin and Development of Philatelic Literature in the Second Half of the 19 th Century.	360
New from the book market: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford K.T. by E. D. Bacon, London (Review)	850
Oldest known printed philatelic work in the World	789
On Philatelic libraries	082
On the history and statistics of the worldwide philatelic periodical literature to end of 1893	685
Philatelic Literature Bibliography Index von William Ricketts (Review)	851
Philatelic periodicals of the United States of America	616
Postage stamp exhibitions and philatelic literature	618
Rarities of the philatelic periodical literature to the end of 1900	129

TTTT

Tag, H. A. Gerhard

All kinds of birds on bookplates	626
Bookplate	523
Bookplates of women and for women	509
From the bookplate world	581
From the bookplate world	582
From the bookplate world	583
On collecting bookplates by topic	496
Our bookplate=express	526, 527, 606, 699
Small bookplates – Servants of a great cause	497

Tanga, Sandro

To whom will Carter return the postage stamps contested by the two Germanies?
--	--

Thalmann, Friedrich Wilhelm

Help for the Kohl stamp handbook	440
Index of subject articles appearing in philatelic journals (year 1910) and of handbooks appearing in the years 1908 to 1910	079
Scarce items of German philatelic literature	450
Society libraries and association libraries	102, 602

Thebussem, Doctor

Fourth Set of Articles	273
Philatelic Literature in Spain: Notes for Compiling a Catalogue	272
Philatelic Periodicals of Spain	247

Thiele, Hans-Joachim

Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 - Library Catalogue - 1998	418
---	-----

Thomen, Luis F.

Philatelic magazines of the Dominican Republic	028
--	-----

Thurzo, F.

About the irregularities in “Nachrichtenblattes für Briefmarkenauktionen”	602
---	-----

Tiberius, Petros

[Foreword – Utopia Berichte, 1997]	324
Utopia Berichte No.2	099
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 - Library Catalogue	417
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878 - Library Catalogue - 1998	418

Tiffany, John Kerr

Studies on philatelic bibliography. [Letter to the Editor]	301
--	-----

Tocabens, J. Majó & A. Majó Díaz

“Natalis Rondot”, pseudonym of Armán Martín	739
A great idea by James Chalmers put into practice by Rowland Hill	740
Ton, Max
See also Fritz Seifert & Max Ton
A cross-section of Germany’s philatelic literature	585
Genealogy and Philately	467
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature [1st edition]	122
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature [2nd edition]	003
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature	587
Handbook of German Philatelic Literature	588
Important figures in Germany’s philatelic literature	584
Who is the philatelist? Biographical Almanac	624
Torkelstam, Åke
Einar Ebe: A living cultural legend	611
Tretner, Hubert
Introduction [Library of the Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Zeitz von 1880]	381
Tröndle, L.
Development of philatelic literature in Germany in the 19 th Century	271
Munich Philatelic Library	323
Trost, Michael
Vagrant, Tramp or even a “King”	728
UUUU
Ulrich, Paul S.
Where do I Find Philatelic Information?	016
Union Suisse des Associations Philatéliques
Library Catalogue, 1951	390
Utrera, José Amosa
My affection for books (Dr. Thebussem)	726
VVVV
V., S. de
Serious bibliography	130
Vaccari, Valeria
Philatelic literature in competitive exhibitions	592
Valiente, Jesus Romero
Doctor Thebussem’s genealogical notes	726
Velden, G. van der
Library Catalogue – International Vereeniging “Philatelica”	383

Vellekoop, J.
100 years of collecting	609
Open doors - doors open: An overview of articles published in Dutch exhibition catalogues appearing between 1952 and 1985	543
Ven, Joh. Vande
Catalogue of the Library of the Nederlandsche Bond van Verenigingen van Postzegelverzamelaars	392
Verbandes Österreichischer Philatelistenvereine
Library Catalogue, 1993	419
Library Catalogue of Philatelic Books and other Media, 2000	599
Verbandes Schweizerischer Philatelistenvereine
Library Catalogue, 1952	390
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Zeitz von 1880
Library Catalogue, 1993	381
Verein für Briefmarkenkunde 1878
Library Catalogue, 1988	417
Library Catalogue, 1992	382
Library Catalogue, 1998	418
Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Kiel
Society History from 1890-97	613
Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Marburg/Lahn 1892
Library Catalogue, 1993	631
Vendel, Elena Catena de
Correspondence Menéndez Pelayo and Thebussem	735
WWW
W., A. K.
Place of philatelic literature in stamp exhibitions	061
Wadw, Bumpei
A MIHARU horse as a Japanese gift to the Munich House of Philately	158
Wagner, Hans
Dr. med. Ludwig König †	829
Walter, Erich
The Place of Philately in Cultural and Intellectual life	154
Waroquiers, G.
Jean-Baptiste Moens 1833-1908.	221
Weicke, Gustav

The significance of the specialist literature of our science for the stamp collector.	489
Weidema, H. L. J. Foreword - Nederlandse Bond van Filatelistenverenigingen, Library Catalogue	391
Wiederholt, Adalbert W. Infothek	473
Weil, Doris Foreword (to the Catalogue of the Hamburg Philatelic Library)	352
Weston, Herbert Edgar See also under his pseudonym Victor Marsh A note on J. B. Moens's Catalogue Prix-Courant of 1868	733
Wey, J. The air mail archive in the Berne Postal Museum	453
Wincewicz, B. Bibliography of the Contents of Polish Philatelic Periodicals, 1894-1939	065
Wincewicz, T. Bibliography of the Contents of Polish Philatelic Periodicals, 1894-1939	065
Writzel, Friedrich Foreword - Library Catalogue of Philatelic Books and other Media	599
Wuppertal Philatelic Library See Philatelistische Bibliothek Wuppertal
Wyszomirski, Reiner Foreword - Library Catalogue	418

XXXX

YYYY

ZZZZ

BOOK INDEX

A few handbooks and brochures carry no author's name or society affiliation and can not therefore be listed in the Author Index. This index lists the titles of those publications which fall into this category.

NUMBERS

5 th German Philatelists' Day, Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia, 1924	710
36 th Society Meeting, Leverkusen	093
100 Jahre Philatelistische Fachliteratur	303, 307

TITLES

A
Annuaire "Berry", 1904	274
B
C
D
Deal Members of the AIJP	791
E
Exposición Nacional de Literatura Filatélica, Madrid 1993	730
F
G
Great Dictionary of Philately in Russian	184
H
Hinweise für Fernleihe	325
Hinweise zur Fernausleihe	320
I
IBRA '99	379
Indice Bibliographico Filatelico (fino al tutto il 1924)	059
J
Jahres-Bericht des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Kiel 1898/99	601
K
L
M
N
O
P

Q

R

S

Soester Gespräche No. 6	262
Soester Gespräche No. 7	189

T

Table of Contents of the First Volume (Issues 1-15) of Syllectiki Epitheorisis	370
--	-----

U

V

Verzeichnis und Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften	027
---	-----

W

Wegweiser für Verkehrswerthzeichen-Sammler (Philatelisten-Fibel)	227
--	-----

X

Y

Z

PERIODICAL INDEX

INTRODUCTION

This is a list of periodicals from which items have been translated. Under each title will be found the bibliographic details of the parts translated, in date order, together with the translation number.

For the purpose of determining the alphabetical order of the entries, the initial article in a periodical's title is ignored and is placed after the title. This applies even where the article is attached to the first word by an apostrophe. For example:

L'Annonce Philatélique will be found under Annonce Philatélique, L'

Alphabetisation has been carried out using the word by word convention. The alphabetical order of a title is thus determined by the first word (or acronym) of the title. In the case of titles with the same initial word, then its alphabetical order depends on the second word, and so on. Accents on letters are generally ignored for the purpose of alphabetisation. A full stop, or other punctuation mark is considered to denote the end of a word. Words containing apostrophes or hyphens come after the same words without them.

Where there are two or more periodicals of the same name, it has been necessary to add the publisher and place of publication below the title, in order to avoid confusion. Similarly, unusual or seldom-seen periodical titles may have the publisher and place of publication added.

It should be noted that the page numbers given encompass the whole of the article. However, many articles include lists or other data which do not need translating to make them usable and so only few of the pages may have been translated. Full details regarding the extent of the translation are given under the entry in the main body of this document.

I collect a few periodicals, generally relating to philatelic literature and I tend to translate those extensively in the form of a Translation Digest. Where an entry has no pages shown, it generally means that it is a Translation Digest.

AAAA

A. Moschkau's Magazin für Markensammler

1872	Issue 9	Supplement	121
------	---------	------------	-----

Aicam Flash

1996	Issue 59/60	pp.1-2	375
------	-------------	--------	-----

AIJP-Bulletin

2008	Whole number 126	pp.71-80	604
2008	Whole number 127	pp.108-109	605
2008	Whole number 127	pp.110-111	167

Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung

1864	Volume 1	Issue 7	pp.57-58	506
1864	Volume 1	Issue 9	pp.73-74	506
1864	Volume 1	Issue 11	p.89	506
1864	Volume 1	Issue 12	pp.93-94	506

Annonce Timbrologique, L'

1891	Volume 2	Whole number 20	p.214	300
1891	Volume 2	Whole number 21	pp.225-227	301
1891	Volume 2	Whole number 22	p.243	301
1892	Volume 3	Whole number 23	pp.253-255	301
1892	Volume 3	Whole number 24	p.271	301
1892	Volume 3	Whole number 25	pp.299-300	301
1892	Volume 3	Whole number 27	pp.315-316	301

Arbeitsgemeinschaft Nederland Rundbrief

1981		Whole Number 100	p.63	512
------	--	------------------	------	-----

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur

Formerly Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften q.v.

Archiv für das Post- und Fernmeldewesen

1952	Volume 4	Issue 2	pp.65-92	263
------	----------	---------	----------	-----

Archiv für Philatelistische Literatur

1972	Volume 1	Issue 1		258
1972	Volume 1	Issue 2		[258]
1972	Volume 1	Issue 3		[258]

Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern

1974			pp.183-184	010
------	--	--	------------	-----

Atalaya Filatélica

2003		Whole number 100	pp.76-77	767
------	--	------------------	----------	-----

Austria-Philatelist

1893	Volume 1	Issue 1	pp.3-4	124
1895	Volume 2	Issue 1	pp.7-9	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 2	pp.53-54	125
1895	Volume 2	Issue 2	pp.57-58	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 3	pp.108-110	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 3	pp.123-124	241
1895	Volume 2	Issue 4	pp.161-163	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 5	pp.202-204	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 6	pp.249-251	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 7	pp.293-295	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 8	pp.342-344	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 10	pp.422-423	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 11	pp.460-462	082
1895	Volume 2	Issue 12	pp.504-506	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 4	pp.51-53	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 5	pp.97-98	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 7	pp.145-147	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 10	pp.211-212	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 12	p.254	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 14	pp.290-291	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 17	pp.351-353	082
1896	Volume 3	Issue 20	pp.395-396	082

1897	Volume 4	Issue 2	pp.25-26	082
1897	Volume 4	Issue 5	pp.82-84	082
1897	Volume 4	Issue 11	pp.177-178	082
1897	Volume 4	Issue 12	pp.197-199	082
1897	Volume 4	Issue 13	pp.213-214	082
1898	Volume 5	Issue 7	pp.114-115	183
1898	Volume 5	Issue 11	p.176	183
1898	Volume 5	Issue 12	p.193	183
1898	Volume 5	Issue 13	p.214	183
1899	Volume 6	Issue 2	pp.22-23	183
1899	Volume 6	Issue 8/9	pp.96-97	183

BBBB

Bältespannären

1981	Volume 16	Issue 1	pp.20-21	610
1981	Volume 16	Issue 1	pp.22-25	611

Bazar für Briefmarkensammler

See Der Bazar für Briefmarken-Sammler.

Bazar für Briefmarken-Sammler, Der

Introduction to the reprint edition of 1999				380
1869	Volume 1	Issue 1	p.1	405

Beiblatt zur Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung

1901	Volume 14	Issue 2	n.pp.	594
------	-----------	---------	-------	-----

Berichte des Vereins Leipziger Briefmarkenbörse

1933				585
------	--	--	--	-----

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung

1911	Volume 7	Issue 7	p.167	096
1911	Volume 7	Issue 8	pp.188-190	128
1911	Volume 7	Issue 12	p.285-287	280
1914	Volume 10	Issue 1	pp.62-63	586
1914	Volume 10	Issue 6	pp.154-155	586
1914	Volume 10	Issue 8	pp.205-206	586
1914	Volume 10	Issue 11	pp.287-289	586
1914	Volume 10	Issues 19/20	p.483	586
1915	Volume 11	Issue 3	p.61	586
1915	Volume 11	Issue 23	p.521	586
1916	Volume 12	Issue 23	p.518	586
1917	Volume 13	Issue 5	p.109	708
1917	Volume 13	Issues 7/8	p.162	586
1918	Volume 14	Issues 9/10	p.115	586

Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888 – Mitteilungen

Neue folge
1988		Issue 62	pp.9-10	507

Berner Briefmarken Zeitung

1995	Volume 87	Issue 5/6	pp.95-96	562
Boletim da Sociedade Philatelica Paulista
1940		Whole number 25	pp.2-4	011
Boletín del Archivo General de la Nación
1956		Whole number 90	pp.256-259 & plate	028
Briefmarken Spiegel
2000	Volume 40	Issue 3	p.15	414
Briefmarkensammler, Der
1919	Volume 3	Issue 2	pp.53-56	283
1919	Volume 3	Issue 4	pp.144	107
1919	Volume 3	Issue 4	pp.144-147	279
Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie
1875	Volume 1	Whole number 1	pp.12-14	798
1876	Volume 1	Whole number 4	pp.101-105	346
1876	Volume 1	Whole number 5	pp.131-137	346
1876	Volume 1	Whole number 8	pp.221-227	346
1876	Volume 1	Whole number 10	pp.283-287	346
1888	Volume 4	Whole number 47	pp.39-40	711
1888	Volume 4	Whole number 47	pp.41-42	738
1888	Volume 4	Whole number 50	pp.97-98	403

CCCC

Circulaire Philatélique, La

1907	Volume 10	Whole number 58	pp.73-77	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 59	pp.93-98	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 60	pp.113-119	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 61	pp.137-138	331
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 61	pp.138-142	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 62	pp.157-160	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 63	pp.178-181	089
1907	Volume 10	Whole number 64	pp.200-201	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 65	pp.9-12	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 66	pp.40-43	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 67	pp.64-66	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 68	pp.88-91	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 69	pp.115-117	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 70	pp.146-148	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 73	p.230	089
1908	Volume 11	Whole number 74	pp.265-266	089
1909	Volume 12	Whole number 76	pp.45-46	089
1930	Volume 20	Whole number 208	pp.167-168	130

Coleccionsmo

1959	Volume 46	Whole number 224	pp.8-12	735
------	-----------	------------------	---------	-----

Coleccionista, La

1904	Volume 1	Issue 1	pp.3-4	709
1904	Volume 1	Issue 3	pp.2-3	709
1904	Volume 1	Issue 4	pp.4-5	709
1904	Volume 1	Issue 5	p.5	709
1905	Volume 1	Issue 6	p.1	589

Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, Le

1864	Volume 1	Whole number 5	pp.20-21	371
1866	Volume 3	Whole number 19	pp.150-151	725
1866	Volume 3	Whole number 19	p.151	795
1866	Volume 3	Whole number 26	pp.204-206	615
1866	Volume 3	Whole number 27	pp.212-213	615
1866	Volume 3	Whole number 28	pp.220-221	615
1866	Volume 4	Whole number 31	pp.245-246	615
1866	Volume 4	Whole number 33	pp.344-345	615
1874		Whole number 42	p.396	737
1907		Whole number 326	Cover & p.1	768 & 811
1964	Volume 100	Whole number 716	pp.1-3	734

Collecionista Italia Filatelica, Il

1976	Volume 32	Issue 19	p.10	752
1976	Volume 32	Issue 22	p.27	752
1977	Volume 33	Issue 24	pp.5-6	717
1991	Volume 47	Issue 11	p.16	731

Courier de Londres et de L'Europe, Le

1890		18 th May		636
------	--	----------------------	--	-----

Cronista Filatélico

2001		Whole number 240	pp.25-30	480
2003		Whole number 245	pp.6-8	574

DDDD

DBZ/Sammler Express

See Deutsche Briefmarken – Zeitung

Delcampe Magazine

2017		Whole number 15	Cover & pp.16-18	775
------	--	-----------------	------------------	-----

Deutsche Briefmarken-Post

1930		Issue 5	p.87	702
------	--	---------	------	-----

Deutsche Briefmarken – Zeitung

Expedition der Deutschen Briefmarken-Zeitung, Dresden, Germany.

1871	Volume 1	Issue 11	pp.88-89	329
1871	Volume 1	Issue 12	pp.95-97	329

Deutsche Briefmarken – Zeitung

Dr. Hans Brendicke, Berlin, Germany.

In later years the title was shortened to DBZ. Following its amalgamation with Sammler-Express, its title was changed to DBZ/SE.

1891	Volume 1	Issue 1	pp.37-39	565
1891	Volume 1	Issue 11	p.143	566
1893	Volume 3	Issue 12	pp.174-177	199
1895	Volume 5	Issue 2	p.21	374
1895	Volume 5	Issue 4	pp.55-56	238
1895	Volume 5	Issue 9	p.139	723
1895	Volume 5	Issue 12	pp.180-182	321
1905	Volume 15	Issue 11	pp.161-165	367
1905	Volume 15	Issue 12	pp.172-179	367
1906	Volume 17	Issue 8	pp.114-115	690
1907	Volume 18	Issue 4	p.75	691
1907	Volume 18	Issue 12	p.202	692
1908	Volume 19	Issue 1	p.19	693
1908	Volume 19	Issue 8	pp.132-133	694
1908	Volume 19	Issue 10	p.166	695
1911	Volume 22	Issue 5	p.100	277
1912	Volume 23	Issue 3	p.59	689
1913	Volume 24	Issue 1	p.8	281
1913	Volume 24	Issue 1	pp.33-34	282
1913	Volume 24	Issue 2	p.44	123
1913	Volume 24	Issue 4	pp.71-72	285
1915	Volume 26	Issue 1	pp.1-3	284
1916	Volume 27	Issue 1	pp.2-3	077
1916	Volume 27	Issue 3	pp.33-34	829
1917	Volume 28	Issue 1	p.3	078
1918	Volume 29	Issue 11/12	pp.77-78	267
1919	Volume 30	Issue 4/5	pp.35-36	287
1999	Volume 74	Issue 10	pp.62-63	397

Deutsche Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum - Mitglieder-Rundschreiben

1943	Issue 1	pp.1-16	528
1943	Issue 2	pp.17-28	529

Deutsche Inflationsmarken-Sammler, Der

1936?	Whole number 36	575
-------	-----------------	-----

Deutsche Philatelist, Der

1908	Volume 2	Issue 1	p.	004
1908	Volume 2	Issue 1	pp.6-8	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 2	pp.20-22	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 4	pp.43-45	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 5	pp.53-54	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 6	pp.60-61	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 7	pp.70-72	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 8	pp.80-82	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 10	p.97	327
1908	Volume 2	Issue 10	pp.98-99	406
1908	Volume 2	Issue 11	pp.111-112	406

Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung

1883	Volume 6	Whole number 62	pp.301-303	715
------	----------	-----------------	------------	-----

Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Der
See under Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm.

Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde

1935	Volume 11	Issue 12	p.254	624
1970	Volume 45	Issue 23	p.4497	420

Deutschland-Sammler-Warte

See Der Deutsche Inflationsmarken-Sammler

Discursos Académicos

2000	Volume 11		pp.5-6	472
------	-----------	--	--------	-----

EEEE

Écho de la Timbrologie, L'

1928	Volume 42	Whole number 791	p.1816	696
1930	Volume 44	Whole number 817	pp.3-6	192
1930	Volume 44	Whole number 821	pp.288-291	192

Écho Postal, L'

1925	Volume 11	Whole number 81	pp.248-249	760
------	-----------	-----------------	------------	-----

Eco Filatélico y Numismático, El

2017	Volume 73	Whole number 1,265	pp.30-32	732
2017	Volume 73	Whole number 1,266	pp.30-32	732

Ewen's Weekly Stamp News

1904	Volume 13	Whole number 254	p.754	039
------	-----------	------------------	-------	-----

FFFF

Filatelia

1929			pp.iii-iv	505
------	--	--	-----------	-----

Filatelie

1973	Volume 23	Issue 24	p.750	778
------	-----------	----------	-------	-----

Filatelistiska Meddelanden

1921	Volume 3	Issue 1	pp.8-9	628
------	----------	---------	--------	-----

Forum Philatelie

1986?			p.3	218
-------	--	--	-----	-----

GGGG

Ganzsache

Issued as a supplement to Postmarke.

1932 or 1933 (Article by Dr. A. Horodisch)				401
--	--	--	--	-----

Germania-Berichte

1907	Volume 4	Issue 19		102
1911	Volume 8			079
1915	Volume 12	Issue 9/10	pp.129-130	047
1916	Volume 13	Issue 1/2	pp.14-16	047
1916	Volume 13	Issue 3/4	pp.44-45	047
1916	Volume 13	Issue 5/6	pp.70-71	047
1925	Volume 22	Issue 2	p.36	813
1925	Volume 22	Issue 10	p.167	812
1929	Volume 26	Issue 7	pp.79-80	803
1930	Volume 27	Issue 10	p.133	804
1932	Volume 29	Issue 3	p.36	806
1932	Volume 29	Issue 11	p.143	805
1933	Volume 30	Issue 8	p.99	809

Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur – Rundbrief

1956		Issue 1		483
1957		Issue 2		305

Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde – Rundschreiben

[1932]		Unnumbered [Issue 1]		619
[1932]		Issue 2		620
[1932]		Issue 3		621

Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo

1877	Volume 2	Issue 16		219
1877	Volume 2	Issue 17		219

Grüne Sammler-Welt

1930	Volume 1	Issue 1	p.1	080
------	----------	---------	-----	-----

HHHHIII*Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung

1888	Volume 1	Issue 15	pp.217-218	713
1888	Volume 1	Issue 22	pp.318-319	499
1889	Volume 2	Issue 15	pp.219-220	774
1889	Volume 2	Issue 15	pp.220-221	302
1889	Volume 2	Issue 17	pp.251-252	498
1891	Volume 4	Issue 11	pp.226-228	501
1891	Volume 4	Issue 16	pp.330-331	500

Illustrierte Frankfurter briefmarken-Zeitung mit Universum

1891	Volume 10	Issue 6	n.pp. (3pp.)	502
------	-----------	---------	--------------	-----

Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal

1874	Volume 1	Issue 5	pp.38-39	364
1876	Volume 3	Issue 30	pp.52-55	368
1876	Volume 3	Issue 33	p.78	368

1876	Volume 3	Issue 36	pp.98-100	368
1884	Volume 11	Issue 13	pp.183-185	489
1884	Volume 11	Issue 15	p.215	634
1888	Volume 15	Issue 5	pp.75-76	486

Information

Philatelistischen Bücherei Hamburg, Germany.

1988		Issue 1		208
1988		Issue 2		212
1989		Issue 3		101
1990		Issue 4		104
[1990]		Issue 5		249
[1991]		Issue 6		259
1992		Issue 7		232
1992		Issue 8		084
[1996]		Issue 9		269
1999		Issue 10		343

Interessengemeinschaft Phil. Literatursammler – Rundbrief

See Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde - Rundbrief

JJJJ

Jahres-Bericht des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde Kiel

1898/99		pp.3-5.	613
---------	--	---------	-----

Jahresbericht der Internationale Postwertzeichenhändler-Verein zu Berlin

1899		pp.3-6	759
------	--	--------	-----

Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, The

1912	Volume 5	Issue 4	pp.61-62	733
------	----------	---------	----------	-----

KKKK

LLLL

Literatur Nachrichten

1951	Volume 1	Whole number 1	025
1951		Whole number 2	026
1951		Whole number 3	148
1951		Whole number 4/5	147
1951		Whole number 6	146
1952		Whole number 7	149
1952		Whole number 8	150
1952		Whole number 9	151
1952		Whole number 10	152
		Whole number 11/12	153
1953		Whole number 13	154
1953		Whole number 14	155
1953		Whole number 15	156
1953		Whole number 16	157

1954	Whole number 17	158
1954	Whole number 18	159
1954	Whole number 19	160
1954	Whole number 20	161
1955	Whole number 21/22	162
1955	Whole number 23/24	163
1956	Whole number 25	164
1956	Whole number 26	165
1956	Whole number 27/28	166
1957	Whole number 29	168
1957	Whole number 30	169
	Whole number 31/32	170
	Whole number 33/34	171
	Whole number 35/36	172
1959	Whole number 37/38	173
	Whole number 39/40	174
	Whole number 41/44	175
1961	Whole number 45/46	176
	Whole number 47/48	177
1962	Whole number 49/50	178
1962	Whole number 51/52	179
	Whole number 53/54	180
	Whole number 55	181
	Whole number 56	215
1968	Whole number 57	100
	Whole number 58	87
	Whole number 59	182
1971	Whole number 60	141
1972	Whole number 61	250
1973	Whole number 62	185
1974	Whole number 63	186
1976	Whole number 64/65	187
[1979]	Whole number 66	234
1981	Whole number 67/68	116
1984	Whole number 69/81	117
1986	Whole number 82-83	114
1986	Whole number 84	115
1987	Whole number 85	113
1989	Whole number	112
1990	Whole number	109
1991	Whole number	309
1992	Whole number	197
1993	Whole number	308
1994	Whole number	304
1995	Whole number 95	470
1996	Whole number 96	457
1997	Whole number 97	455
1998	Whole number 98	456
1999	Whole number 99	792
2000	Whole number 100
2001	Whole number 101	729

Lupe, Die
1948	Volume 3	Whole number 29/30	p.185	629

MMMM

Macanador Filatélico, El
1904	Volume 1	Issue 1	p.1	758

Madrid Filatelico
1901	Volume 5	Whole number 58	pp.145-150	247

Magazin für Philatelistische Literatur
1950	Volume 1	Issue 1		503

Michel-Rundschau
1998		Issue 8	p.676	415

Mitglieder-Rundschreiben

See Deutsche Gesellschaft für Philatelistisches Schrifttum Mitglieder-Rundschreiben

Mitteilungen

See Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888 – Mitteilungen

Mitteilungsblätter der Bundestellen Forschung und Literatur im BDPh e.V.

1991		Issue 12	pp.8-13	790
1998		Issue 15	pp.19-22	369

Monde des Philatélistes

1975	Whole number 276	p.47	001
1975	Whole number 277	p.21	001
1975	Whole number 278	p.18	001
1975	Whole number 279	p.27	001
1975	Whole number 280	p.27	001
1975	Whole number 281	p.27	001
1975	Whole number 282	p.27	001
1976	Whole number 283	p.27	001
1976	Whole number 284	p.27	001
1976	Whole number 285	p.27	001
1976	Whole number 286	p.27	001
1976	Whole number 287	p.31	001
1976	Whole number 288	p.41	001
1976	Whole number 289	p.30	001
1976	Whole number 290	p.23	001
1976	Whole number 291	p.56	001

Montreal Philatelist, The

1902	Volume 4	Issue 9	pp.70-71	371
------	----------	---------	----------	-----

NNNN

Nachrichten der Philatelistischen Bibliothek von Albert Gottschalk

1904		Issue 1		545
------	--	---------	--	-----

1904		Issue 2		546
1904		Issue 3		547
1904		Issue 4		548
1904		Issue 5		549
1904		Issue 6		550
1904		Issue 7		551
1904		Issue 8		552
1904		Issue 9		553
1904		Issue 10		554
1904		Issue 11/12		555
1904		Issue 13		556
1905		Issue 14/15		557
1905		Issue 16		558
1905		Issue 17		559

Nachrichtenblatt des Briefmarkenhandels

1997	Volume 52	Issue 4	p.85	313
------	-----------	---------	------	-----

Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie

1972	Volume 49		pp.362-374	036
------	-----------	--	------------	-----

Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift

1903	Volume 10	Issue 2	pp.17-20	362
1909	Volume 16	Issue 3	pp.I-IV	066
1909	Volume 16	Issue 4	pp.V-VIII	066
1909	Volume 16	Issue 5	p.IX	066
1910	Volume 17	Issue 5	pp.I-IV	067
1910	Volume 17	Issue 6	pp.V-VIII	067
1911	Volume 17	Issue 7	pp.I-IV	068
1911	Volume 17	Issue 8	pp.V-IX	068
1956		Issue 3	pp.86-87	848
1993	Volume 100	Issue 4	pp.156-159	687

Nordisk Frimærketidende

1867	Volume 1			800
------	----------	--	--	-----

OOOO

PPPP

Phil* Soft - und Literatur-News

1996		Issue 1	pp.3-4	240
------	--	---------	--------	-----

Phila Historica

(Digital Magazine for the History of Philately and Philatelic Literature.)

2013		Issue 1	p.3	781
2013		Issue 2	p.4	782
2013		Issue 3	p.3	783
2013		Issue 4	p.4	784
2014		Issue 1	pp.4-5	785
2014		Issue 2	p.3	786

2014	Issue 3	p.3	787
2014	Issue 4	pp.1-5	788
2015	Issue 1	pp.	854
2015	Issue 2	pp.	855
2015	Issue 3	pp.	856
2015	Issue 4	pp.	857
2016	Issue 1	pp.	858
2016	Issue 2	pp.	859
2016	Issue 3	pp.	860
2016	Issue 4	pp.	861
2017	Issue 1	pp.	862
2017	Issue 2	pp.	863
2017	Issue 3	pp.	864
2017	Issue 4	pp.	865
2018	Issue 1	pp.	866
2018	Issue 2	pp.	867
2018	Issue 3	pp.	868
2018	Issue 4	pp.	869
2019	Issue 1	pp.	870
2019	Issue 2	pp.	871
2019	Issue 3	pp.	872
2019	Issue 4	pp.	873
2020	Issue 1	pp.	874
2020	Issue 2	pp.	875
2020	Issue 3	pp.	876
2020	Issue 4	pp.	877
2021	Issue 1	pp.	878
2021	Issue 2	pp.	879
2021	Issue 3	pp.	880
2021	Issue 4	pp.	881
2022	Issue 1	pp.	882
2022	Issue 2	pp.	883
2022	Issue 3	pp.	884
2022	Issue 4	pp.	885
2023	Issue 1	pp.	886
2023	Issue 2	pp.	887
2023	Issue 3	pp.	888
2023	Issue 4	pp.	889
2024	Issue 1	pp.	890
2024	Issue 2	pp.	891
2024	Issue 3	pp.	892
2024	Issue 4	pp.	893
2025	Issue 1	pp.	894
2025	Issue 2	pp.	895
2025	Issue 3	pp.	896
2025	Issue 4	pp.	897

Philak Magazin für Philatelistische Literatur

See Magazin für Philatelistische Literatur

Philaprilistische Bücherwurm, Der

An April Fool version of Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, q.v.

Philat. Litteratur, Die

1894	Volume 1	Issue 2		075
1894	Volume 1	Issue 1		074

Philatelic Journalist, The

2012		Whole number 138	pp.33-34	680
------	--	------------------	----------	-----

Philatelie (Includes Philatelie und Postgeschichte)

2005	Volume 57	Whole number 341	pp.14, 16 & 18	564
2008	Volume 60	Whole number 373	p.14	597
2009	Volume 61	Whole number 387	p.8	630
2012	Volume 64	Whole number 422	p.6	682
2012	Volume 64	Whole number 416	pp.42-45	796
2016	Volume 68	Whole number 472	p.17	728

Philatelie, Die

1925	Volume 2	Issue 9	p.180	688
------	----------	---------	-------	-----

Philatélie au Québec, La

1978	Volume 4	Issue 8	p.14	341
1978	Volume 4	Issue 9	p.15	341

Philatélie Française, La

1922	Volume 4	Whole number 29	p.54	744
1922	Volume 4	Whole number 31	p.94	745

Philatelie und Postgeschichte (See also Philatelie)

1983		Whole number 69	pp.13-14	261
1990		Whole number 115	pp.36-46	225

Philatelist, De

1928	Volume 3	Issue 3	p.51	700
1928	Volume 3	Issue 5	p.112	573
1931	Volume 6	Issue 4	p.75	686

Philatelist, Der

1883	Volume 4	Issue 11	p.103	712
1883	Volume 4	Issue 12	p.114	712
1887	Volume 8	Issue 12	p.151	487
1888	Volume 9	Issue 11	pp.175-177	310
1888	Volume 9	Issue 12	pp.187-188	310
1888	Volume 9	Issue 13	pp.196-198	310
1888	Volume 9	Issue 14	pp.211-213	310
1889	Volume 10	Issue 10	pp.140-141	302
1889	Volume 10	Issue 13	pp.192-194	311
1890	Volume 11	Issue 17	pp.261-263	742
1891	Volume 12	Issue 9	pp.164-165	312
1891	Volume 12	Issue 9	p.170	488
1895	Volume 16	Issue 1	pp.19-23	042
1895	Volume 16	Issue 2	pp.59-63	042
1895	Volume 16	Issue 3	pp.100-104	042

1897	Volume 18	Issue 5	pp.183-184	617
1898	Volume 19	Issue 2	p.70	097
1898	Volume 19	Issue 2	pp.74-77	276
1898	Volume 19	Issue 3	pp.117-120	276
1898	Volume 19	Issue 4	pp.169-172	276
1898	Volume 19	Issue 5	pp.216-219	276
1898	Volume 19	Issue 6	pp.248-251	276
1899	Volume 20	Issue 1	pp.10-12	618
1903	Volume 24	Issue 1	pp.11-12	361
1903	Volume 24	Issue 2	pp.42-43	361
1903	Volume 24	Issue 6	pp.160-162	129
1903	Volume 24	Issue 7	pp.194-196	129
1903	Volume 24	Issue 8/9	pp.229-230	129
1903	Volume 24	Issue 10	pp.258-259	129
1903	Volume 24	Issue 11	pp.297-298	129
1903	Volume 24	Issue 12	pp.330-331	129
1904	Volume 25	Issue 1	p.8	129
1904	Volume 25	Issue 2	pp.39-41	129
1904	Volume 25	Issue 3	pp.71-73	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 4	pp.108-109	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 6	pp.162-163	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 7	pp.182-183	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 8	pp.208-209	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 9/10	pp.240-241	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 11	pp.277-278	363
1904	Volume 25	Issue 12	pp.320-321	363
1905	Volume 26	Issue 4	pp.114-116	359
1905	Volume 26	Issue 5	pp.148-149	359
1905	Volume 26	Issue 6	pp.181-182	359
1905	Volume 26	Issue 7	pp.212-214	359
1905	Volume 26	Issue 11	pp.330-347	367
1905	Volume 26	Issue 12	pp.378-379	359
1906	Volume 27	Issue 1	pp.12-13	359
1906	Volume 27	Issue 3	pp.83-84	359
1906	Volume 27	Issue 8	pp.249-250	373
1906	Volume 27	Issue 8	pp.250-252	366
1906	Volume 27	Issue 12	pp.381-383	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 1	pp.19-20	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 2	pp.64-65	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 3	pp.100-101	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 4	pp.144-145	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 5	pp.186-187	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 6	pp.230-231	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 9/10	pp.358-359	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 11	pp.408-409	359
1907	Volume 28	Issue 12	pp.455-457	359
1908	Volume 29	Issue 1	pp.20-21	359
1908	Volume 29	Issue 2	pp.61-62	359
1908	Volume 29	Issue 2	pp.62-64	365
1908	Volume 29	Issue 3	pp.110-111	359
1908	Volume 29	Issue 4	pp.150-151	359
1908	Volume 29	Issue 5	pp.196-197	359

1909	Volume 30	Issue 2	pp.44-46	335
1909	Volume 30	Issue 3	pp.76-77	335
1909	Volume 30	Issue 4	pp.108-111	335
1909	Volume 30	Issue 5	pp.143-144	335
1910	Volume 31	Issue 6	pp.147-150	359
1910	Volume 31	Issue 7	pp.177-178	359
1912	Volume 33	Issue 3	pp.86-87	850
1912	Volume 33	Issue 10	p.276	851
1915	Volume 36	Issue 9	pp.189-191	587
1915	Volume 36	Issue 10	pp.208-209	588

Philatéliste Belge, Le

1921	Volume 1	Issue 10	pp.224-227	724
1921	Volume 1	Issue 12	pp.277-279	724

Philatéliste Bibliophile, Le

1996		Whole number 0	p.3	772
------	--	----------------	-----	-----

Philatelisten-Zeitung

1915	Volume 24	Issue 6	pp.83-84	127
1920	Volume 29	Issue 5/6	p.60	242
1927	Volume 35	Issue 5	pp.70-72	571
1927	Volume 35	Issue 6	pp.82-83	572
1927	Volume 35	Issue 10	p.121	544
1927	Volume 35	Issue 10	p.128	544

Philatelistisch Maandblad, Het

1916	Volume 5	April	Whole number 52	pp.56-57	793
1916	Volume 5	May	Whole number 53	pp.70-71	793
1916	Volume 5	June	Whole number 54	p.89	793
1916	Volume 5	July	Whole number 55	pp.106-107	793
1916	Volume 5	August	Whole number 56	pp.120-121	793
1916	Volume 5	September	Whole number 57	pp.135-136	793

Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Der

Renamed Der Deutsche Philatelistische Bücherwurm from Volume 10, Issue 1. An April Fool issue was published under the title Der Philaprilistische Bücherwurm on the 1st April 1922.

1921	Volume 1	Issue 1		210
1921	Volume 1	Issue 2		211
1921	Volume 1	Issue 3		216
1922	Volume 2	Issue 1		102
1922	Der Philaprilistische Bücherwurm			138
1922	Volume 2	Issue 2		602
1922	Volume 2	Issue 3		223
1922	Volume 2	Issue 4		140
1923	Volume 3	Issue 1		120
1923	Volume 3	Issue 2		118
1923	Volume 3	Issue 3		266
1923	Volume 3	Issue 4		246
1924	Volume 4	Issue 1		245
1924	Volume 4	Issue 2		268

1924	Volume 4	Issue 3	333
1924	Volume 4	Issue 4	464
1925	Volume 5	Issue 1	465
1925	Volume 5	Issue 2	466
1925	Volume 5	Issue 3	430
1925	Volume 5	Issue 4	431
1926	Volume 6	Issue 1	603
1926	Volume 6	Issue 2	432
1926	Volume 6	Issue 3	485
1926	Volume 6	Issue 4	433
1927	Volume 7	Issue 1	434
1927	Volume 7	Issue 2	435
1927	Volume 7	Issue 3	436
1927	Volume 7	Issue 4	437
1927	Volume 7	Issue 5	438
1927	Volume 7	Issue 6	439
1928	Volume 8	Issue 1	440
1928	Volume 8	Issue 2	441
1928	Volume 8	Issue 3	442
1928	Volume 8	Issue 4	443
1928	Volume 8	Issue 5	444
1928	Volume 8	Issue 6/7	445
1929	Volume 9	Issue 1	446
1929	Volume 9	Issue 2	447
1930	Volume 10	Issue 1	448
1930	Volume 10	Issue 2	449
1930	Volume 10	Issue 3	450
1930	Volume 10	Issue 4	451
1931	Volume 11	Issue 1	614
1931	Volume 11	Issue 2	627
1931	Volume 11	Issue 3	638
1931	Volume 11	Issue 4	639
1931	Volume 11	Issue 5	640
1931	Volume 11	Issue 6	641
1932	Volume 12	Issue 1	642
1932	Volume 12	Issue 2	643
1932	Volume 12	Issue 3	644
1932	Volume 12	Issue 4	645
1932	Volume 12	Issue 5/6	646
1933	Volume 13	Issue 1	647
1933	Volume 13	Issue 2	648
1933	Volume 13	Issue 3	649
1933	Volume 13	Issue 4	650
1933	Volume 13	Issue 5	651
1933	Volume 13	Issue 6	652
1934	Volume 14	Issue 1	653
1934	Volume 14	Issue 2	654
1934	Volume 14	Issue 3	655
1934	Volume 14	Issue 4	656
1934	Volume 14	Issue 5	452
1934	Volume 14	Issue 6	657
1935	Volume 15	Issue 1	658

1935	Volume 15	Issue 2	659
1935	Volume 15	Issue 3	660
1935	Volume 15	Issue 4	661
1935	Volume 15	Issue 5/6	662
1936	Volume 16	Issue 1/2	663
1936	Volume 16	Issue 3	664
1936	Volume 16	Issue 4/5	665
1936	Volume 16	Issue 6	666
1936	Volume 16	Issue 7	667
1936	Volume 16	Issue 8/9	668
1936	Volume 16	Issue 10	669
1936	Volume 16	Issue 11/12	670
1937	Volume 17	Issue 1	671
1937	Volume 17	Issue 2	672
1937	Volume 17	Issue 3/4	673
1937	Volume 17	Issue 5	467
1937	Volume 17	Issue 6	674
1937	Volume 17	Issue 7	675
1937	Volume 17	Issue 8	676
1937	Volume 17	Issue 9/10	677
1937	Volume 17	Issue 11	678
1937	Volume 17	Issue 12	679
1938	Volume 18	Issue 1
1938	Volume 18	Issue 2
1938	Volume 18	Issue 3
1938	Volume 18	Issue 4
1938	Volume 18	Issue 5
1938	Volume 18	Issue 6
1938	Volume 18	Issue 7
1938	Volume 18	Issue 8
1938	Volume 18	Issue 9
1938	Volume 18	Issue 10	770
1938	Volume 18	Issue 11
1938	Volume 18	Issue 12	771

Philatelistische Literatur, Die

Formerly Der Philatelistische Literatursammler, q.v.

Philatelistische Literatursammler, Der

Originally published as a supplement to Grüne Sammler-Welt under the title Die Philatelistische Literatur. Continued as an independent publication under the same title.

Prospectus				622
1932	Volume 1	Issue 1	Whole number 1	398
1932	Volume 1	Issue 2	Whole number 2	819
1932	Volume 1	Issue 3	Whole number 3	820
1932	Volume 1	Issue 4	Whole number 4	821
1932	Volume 1	Issue 5	Whole number 5	822
1932	Volume 1	Issue 6	Whole number 6	823
1933	Volume 2	Issue 1	Whole number 7	399
1933	Volume 2	Issue 2	Whole number 8	400
1933	Volume 2	Issue 3	Whole number 9	401
1933	Volume 2	Issue 4	Whole number 10	402

1933	Volume 2	Issue 5	Whole number 11	217
1933	Volume 2	Issue 6	Whole number 12	256
1933	Volume 2	Issue 7	Whole number 13	103
1933	Volume 2	Issue 8	Whole number 14	083
1933	Volume 2	Issue 9	Whole number 15	255
1933	Volume 2	Issue 10	Whole number 16	260
1933	Volume 2	Issue 11	Whole number 17	235
1933	Volume 2	Issue 12	Whole number 18	094
1934	Volume 3	Issue 1	Whole number 19	044
1934	Volume 3	Issue 2	Whole number 20	585
1934	Volume 3	Issue 3	Whole number 21	584
1934	Volume 3	Issue 4	Whole number 22	454
1934	Volume 3	Issue 5	Whole number 23	453
1934	Volume 3	Issue 6	Whole number 24	484
1934	Volume 3	Issue 7	Whole number 25	490
1934	Volume 3	Issue 8	Whole number 26	575
1934	Volume 3	Issue 9	Whole number 27	576
1934	Volume 3	Issue 10	Whole number 28	577
1934	Volume 3	Issue 11	Whole number 29	578
1934	Volume 3	Issue 12	Whole number 30	579
1935	Volume 4	Issue 1	Whole number 31	824

Philatelistische Literaturschau

Supplement to the Philatelistischen Journal.

1948	Volume 1	Issue 1	531
1949	Volume 1	Issue 2	532
1949	Volume 1	Issue 3	533
1949	Volume 1	Issue 4	534

Philatelistische Litteratur, Die

Published as a supplement to Die Post.

1895	Volume 1	Issue 1	200
1895	Volume 1	Issue 2	201
1895	Volume 1	Issue 3	202
1895	Volume 1	Issue 4	203
1895	Volume 1	Issue 5	204
1895	Volume 1	Issue 6	205
1895	Volume 1	Issue 7	206
1895	Volume 1	Issue 8	209
1895	Volume 1	Issue 9	213
1895	Volume 1	Issue 10	253
1895	Volume 1	Issue 11	252
1895	Volume 1	Issue 12	830
1896	Volume 2	Issue 1	222
1896	Volume 2	Issue 2	251
1896	Volume 2	Issue 3	831
1896	Volume 2	Issue 4	832
1896	Volume 2	Issue 5	833
1896	Volume 2	Issue 6	834
1896	Volume 2	Issue 7	835
1896	Volume 2	Issue 8	836
1896	Volume 2	Issue 9	837

1896	Volume 2	Issue 10	838
1896	Volume 2	Issue 11	839
1896	Volume 2	Issue 12	840
1897	Volume 3	Issue 1	841
1897	Volume 3	Issue 2	842
1897	Volume 3	Issue 3	254
1897	Volume 3	Issue 4	843
1897	Volume 3	Issue 5	236
1897	Volume 3	Issue 6	095
1897	Volume 3	Issue 7	332
1897	Volume 3	Issue 8	459
1897	Volume 3	Issue 9	460
1897	Volume 3	Issue 10	461
1897	Volume 3	Issue 11	462
1897	Volume 3	Issue 12	463

Philatelistische Litteratur, Die

See under its original title Der Philatelistische Literatursammler.

Philatelistische Litteratur Sammler, Der

See under Der Philatelistische Litteratursammler.

Philatelistische Litteratursammler, Der

1907	Volume 1	Issue 3	Whole number 3	143
1907	Volume 1	Issue 4	Whole number 4	144
1907	Volume 1	Issue 5	Whole number 5	145
1907	Volume 1	Issue 6	Whole number 6	625
1909	Volume 3	Issue 1	Whole number 8	521
1909	Volume 3	Issue 2	Whole number 9	590
1909	Volume 3	Issue 3	Whole number 10	520

Philatelistische Miscellen

1907	Volume 4	Issue 9	p.89	701
------	----------	---------	------	-----

Philatelistische Presse

1887	Volume 1	Issue 1	p.1	073
------	----------	---------	-----	-----

Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier

1889	Volume 4	Issue 3	pp.26-27	595
1891	Volume 6	Issue 9	pp.75-77	514
1891	Volume 6	Issue 15	p.132	514
1891	Volume 6	Issue 21	pp.175-176	535
1891	Volume 6	Issue 22	pp.205-207	535
1892	Volume 7	Issue 15	pp.155-157	705

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften

1948	Volume 1	Issue 2		030
1948	Volume 1	Issue 3		031

Philatelistischer Briefdienst über Briefmarken-Zeitungen

1949	Volume 2	Issue 1	Whole number 4	033
1949	Volume 2	Issue 2	Whole number 5	034

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften

1949	Volume 2	Issue 2		034
Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur				-----
1950	Volume 3	Issue 1		035
1950	Volume 3	Issue 2		055
1950	Volume 3	Issue 3		056
1950	Volume 3	Issue 4		058
1950	Volume 3	Issue 5		061
Philotelic Echo
Cumulative Index, 1964-68; Whole numbers 1-45				623
Post, Die
1895	Volume 2	Issue 8	pp.63-64	789
1895	Volume 2	Issue 9	p.73	789
Post-Historisk Tidsskrift
1993		Issue 3	pp.90-102	849
Postillon, Le
1908	Volume 7	Whole number 322		482
Postmarke, Die
See also Der Sammlerfreund.
1920		Issue 12	Supplement	314
1925	Volume 7	Issue 89		190
Postwertzeichen, Das
1888	Volume 1	Issue 1	pp.4-6	330
1888	Volume 1	Issue 2	pp.1-2	330
1889	Volume 2	Issue 7	pp.66-67	510
1889	Volume 2	Issue 8	pp.80-81	510
1891	Volume 4	Issue 8	pp.64-65	703
Postwertzeichen – Der Poststempel, Das
1937	Volume 11	Issue 6	p.158	633
1938	Volume 12	Issue 2	p.52	807
Postwertzeichen-Kunde, Die
1891	Volume 2	Issue 5	pp.58-60	616
1891	Volume 2	Issue 6	pp.78-80	616
1891	Volume 2	Issue 7	pp.87-89	596
1891	Volume 2	Issue 7	pp.91-93	616
1891	Volume 2	Issue 11	pp.160-161	746
1893	Volume 4	Issue 2	pp.15-17	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 3	pp.32-35	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 4	pp.56-59	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 7	pp.103-105	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 9	pp.137-139	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 10	pp.151-153	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 11	pp.161-164	632
1893	Volume 4	Issue 12	pp.177-179	632
1895	Volume 6	Issue 2	pp.13-15	685

1895	Volume 6	Issue 3	pp.33-35	685
1895	Volume 6	Issue 4	pp.47-49	685
1895	Volume 6	Issue 5	pp.65-67	685
1895	Volume 6	Issue 6	pp.77-78	685
1897	Volume 8	Issue 1	pp.1-2	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 2	pp.23-24	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 3	pp.37-38	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 4	pp.46-47	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 5	pp.61-62	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 6	pp.73-74	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 7	pp.86-87	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 8	pp.97-98	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 9/10	pp.111-112	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 11	pp.129-131	275
1897	Volume 8	Issue 12	pp.147-149	275

Postzak, De

1960		Whole number 57	pp.80-85	297
1961		Whole number 58	pp.8-13	315
1961		Whole number 59	pp.31-33	316
1961		Whole number 59	pp.38-39	316
1962		Whole number 62	pp.21-25	298
1962		Whole number 62	p.35	298
1962		Whole number 62	p.37	298
1962		Whole number 63	pp.46-49	299
1963		Whole number 66	pp.57-61	191
1965		Whole number 71	pp.3-8	248
1965		Whole number 72	pp.26-29	306

Puerta del Sol

2003	Volume 3	Issue 8	pp. (complete)	726
------	----------	---------	----------------	-----

QQQQ

RRRR

Reflexion über Philatelie

1946		Whole number 84	pp.60-62	776
------	--	-----------------	----------	-----

Revista de la Sociedad Filatelica Argentina

1917	Volume 21	Issue 4	Whole number 181	pp.71-75	720
1938	Volume 41	Issue 3	Whole number 300	pp.74-77	229
1938	Volume 41	Issue 4	Whole number 301	pp.102-106	229
1938	Volume 41	Issue 5	Whole number 302	pp.152-157	229
1938	Volume 41	Issue 6	Whole number 303	pp.195-200	229
1939	Volume 42	Issue 1	Whole number 304	pp.14-15	229
1939	Volume 42	Issue 4	Whole number 307	pp.111-118	229
1939	Volume 42	Issue 5	Whole numbers 308/309	pp.156-160	229
1940	Volume 43	Issue 1	Whole number 310	pp.18-23	229
1940	Volume 43	Issue 2	Whole number 311	pp.50-54	229
1940	Volume 43	Issue 3	Whole number 312	pp.99-100	229

1940	Volume 43	Issue 4	Whole number 313	pp.128-132	229
1940	Volume 43	Issue 5	Whole number 314	pp.167-168	229
1940	Volume 43	Issue 6	Whole number 315	pp.193-198	229

Revista Filatelica, La

1874	Volume 1	Issue 1		p.1	757
------	----------	---------	--	-----	-----

Revue Française de la Philatélie Universelle

1891	Volume 1	Issue 1		p.7	593
------	----------	---------	--	-----	-----

Revue Philatélique

1894	Volume 5	Whole number 47		pp.54-55	765
1894	Volume 5	Whole number 48		pp.72-73	766

Revue Philatélique Française

1913	Volume 24	Whole number 257		pp.127-128	707
------	-----------	------------------	--	------------	-----

Revue Postale, La

1898	Volume 1	Issue 2		pp.17-21	762
------	----------	---------	--	----------	-----

Rocznik Muzealny

1992		Issue 7		pp.37-42	326
------	--	---------	--	----------	-----

Rundbrief

See Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur – Rundbrief.

SSSS

Sammler - Dienst, Der

1958	Volume 9	Issue 18		p.776	060
1961	Volume 12	Issue 14		p.642	322
1962	Volume 13	Issue 21		pp.963-964	136
1962	Volume 13	Issue 21		pp.964-970	135
1964	Volume 15	Issue 9		pp.446-447	133
1964	Volume 15	Issue 10		pp.504-506	133
1964	Volume 15	Issue 11		pp.561-564	133
1964	Volume 15	Issue 26		pp.1440-1441	137
1966	Volume 17	Issue 24		pp.1412-1414	134
1966	Volume 17	Issue 25		pp.1474-1477	134
1966	Volume 17	Issue 26		pp.1544-1546	134
1967	Volume 18	Issue 12		p.690	290
1969	Volume 20	Issue 16		p.1019	045
1970	Volume 20	Issue 17		pp.1103-1104	228
1970	Volume 21	Issue 25		p.1654	220
1972	Volume 23	Issue 4		pp.258-261	265
1974	Volume 25	Issue 2		p.79	090
1974	Volume 25	Issue 3		pp.183-185	323
1974	Volume 25	Issue 18		p.1239	106
1974	Volume 25	Issue 21		pp.1458-1461	271
1974	Volume 25	Issue 22		pp.1533-1535	271
1975	Volume 26	Issue 14		pp.991-992	070
1975	Volume 26	Issue 15		pp.1021-1022	070

Sammler Express

From time to time, the title was hyphenated.

1947	Volume 1	Issue 17	p.262	495
1949	Volume 3	Issue 22	p.342	580
1951	Volume 5	Issue 16	p.251	523
1952	Volume 6	Issue 14	p.223	328
1954	Volume 8	Issue 8	p.121	496
1954	Volume 8	Issue 23	p.371	497
1955	Volume 9	Issue 6	p.95	054
1957	Volume 11	Issue 3	p.43	522
1957	Volume 11	Issue 6	p.95	581
1958	Volume 12	Issue 23	p.424	582
1958	Volume 12	Issue 24	p.440	583
1959	Volume 13	Issue 1	p.19	606; 607
1959	Volume 13	Issue 3	p.58	699
1959	Volume 13	Issue 8	p.164	527
1959	Volume 13	Issue 11	p.224	525; 626
1959	Volume 13	Issue 20	p.404	526
1960	Volume 14	Issue 5	p.99	509
1960	Volume 14	Issue 6	p.119	517

Sammler-Lupe, Die

Formerly Die Lupe.

1950	Volume 5	Issue 10	p.161	569
1953	Volume 8	Issue 12	p.182	568
1961	Volume 16	Issue 16	p.360	810

Sammler-Woche

See also Der Sammlerfreund.

1924		Whole number 41	pp.8-10	710
1942	Volume 25	Issue 13/14	pp.103-104	844

Sammlerfreund, Der

Supplement to Die Postmarke (Vienna) and Sammler-Woche (Munich).

1934	Volume 8	Issue 2	pp.5-7	244
------	----------	---------	--------	-----

Schweizer Briefmarken Rundschau

1949	Volume 25	Issue 9	p.154	777
------	-----------	---------	-------	-----

Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung

See also the Supplement: Beiblatt zur Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung.

2024	Volume 136	Issue 4	pp.8-9	852
------	------------	---------	--------	-----

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatolie – Bulletin

1990		Whole number 1		207
1990		Whole number 2		214
1990		Whole number 3		257
1990		Whole number 4		105
1990		Whole number 5		142

1991	Whole number 6	139
1991	Whole number 8	233
1992	Whole number 9	111
1992	Whole number 10	110
	Whole number 11	288

Société Belgique de la Bibliophilatelie – Bulletin (New Series)

1993	Whole number 1	196
1993	Whole number 2	195
1994	Whole number 3	226
1994	Whole number 4	278
1995	Whole number 5	193
	Whole number 6	194
	Whole number 7	224
	Whole number 11	085

Story Post

1969	Whole number 69	p.7	696
1973	Whole number 124	p.3	741

Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift

1906	Volume 7	Issue 4	pp.62-64	404
1906	Volume 7	Issue 5	pp.82-85	404
1906	Volume 7	Issue 6	pp.102-104	404
1906	Volume 7	Issue 7	pp.116-117	404
1907	Volume 8	Issue 3	pp.47-50	337
1907	Volume 8	Issue 5	pp.97-100	337
1907	Volume 8	Issue 6	pp.115-117	337
1907	Volume 8	Issue 7	pp.131-134	337

TTTT

Timbre-Poste, Le

1863	Volume 1	Whole number 2	p.1	748
1863	Volume 1	Whole number 3	[p.2]	748
1863	Volume 1	Whole number 5	[pp.1-2]	749
1863	Volume 1	Whole number 7	[p.2]	749
1863	Volume 1	Whole number 9	[p.2]	749
1863	Volume 1	Reprint	pp.21-24	748
1863	Volume 1	Reprint	pp.27-31	749
1889	Volume 27	Whole number 324	p.106	721
1890	Volume 28	Whole number 326	p.15	722

Timbres Magazine

2000	Volume 1	Issue 1	p.5	413
2015	Volume 16	Whole number 167	p.110	761

Timbrophile, Le

1866	Volume 2	Whole number 21	pp.174-175	808
------	----------	-----------------	------------	-----

UUUU

Utopia Berichte

1988		Issue 1		119
1988		Issue 2		099
1991		Issue 3		098
1991		Issue 4		348
1992		Issue 5		349
1997		Issue 7		324

VVVVVaccari Magazine

2001	Volume 8	Whole number 26	pp.72-76	592
------	----------	-----------------	----------	-----

Vertrauliches Korrespondenz-Blatt Philatelistischer Vereine

1905	Volume 15	Issue 11	Supplement	367
------	-----------	----------	------------	-----

WWWWWelt-Post

1881	Volume 6	Issue 11	pp.93-94	727
1887	Volume 12	Whole number 13	pp.117-119	714
1887	Volume 12	Whole number 14	p.130	714
1887	Volume 12	Whole number 14	p.132	750
1887	Volume 12	Whole number 15	pp.137-138	736
1891	Volume 16	Whole number 35	p.372	704
1891	Volume 16	Whole number 37	p.394	773
1892	Volume 17	Whole number 43	pp.474-475	743
1893	Volume 18	Whole number 44	pp.483-485	743

Weltpost-Echo

1920		Issue 1	pp.114-115	697
1920		Issue 2	p.166	698

Wereldpost

1919	Volume 1	Issue 12	p.153	567
------	----------	----------	-------	-----

XXXXYYYY*ZZZZ*Zentralblatt für Bibliothekswesen

1915	Volume 32		pp.172-173	237
------	-----------	--	------------	-----

THE TRANSLATIONS

INTRODUCTION

Many of the earliest translations were produced by Betty Howarth, a non-philatelist who was not familiar with philatelic terminology. Even when translations were carried out by philatelists, it was not possible for them to have a complete understanding of every specialist area of philately. Accordingly, it has always been necessary for me to edit the translations. This does not mean however, that all of the translations are perfect, only that I have tried to make them so.

In order to make the completed translations available to other philatelists, it has been my habit to send them to the Chairman of the FIP Literature Commission, to be placed on their web site with my other works. Towards the end of 2014, it occurred to me that it would be more convenient to incorporate the translations into this document so that anyone noticing a translation of interest in the List of Translations at the front, could just turn to it rather than having to search for it on the web.

I have decided to include in this document only those translations which have been edited. Where there is a translation number but no translation, I will generally be able to supply the unedited version on request. One of the benefits of this exercise has been to highlight those works for which I do not hold a translation. Most of them were sent off to translators but never returned but I am sure that some were lost by me as I was not as organised some forty or so years ago as I am now, with my faithful computer always to hand. These gaps are slowly being filled.

Editing the translations was time consuming and boring and so tended to take second place to other philatelic tasks. Inevitably, this has resulted in a massive backlog of translations waiting to be edited and so only a small proportion of the translations are to be found herein. However, now that I have made the decision to incorporate all of the translations into this document, it will provide me with the impetus to actually get a move on with the editing. (More wishful thinking! BJB February 2025.)

Dr. R. JOANY

Philatelic and Postal Glossary
[Glossaire Philatélique et Postal]

Etude No. 207, Le Monde des Philatélistes, Paris, France, n.d. [1976], 24pp.
Originally published as Dr. R. Joany: Glossaire Philatélique et Postal, Le Monde des Philatélistes, May 1975, Issue 276, p.47; June, Issue 277, p.21; July/August, Issue 278, p.18; September, Issue 279, p.27; October, Issue 280, p.27; November, Issue 281, p.27; December, Issue 282, p.27; January 1976, Issue 283, p.27; February, Issue 284, p.27; March, Issue 285, p.27; April, Issue 286, p.27; May, Issue 287, p.31; June, Issue 288, p.41; July/August, Issue 289, p.30; September, Issue 290, p.23 & October, Issue 291, p.56

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
1981. Revised and transcribed onto computer, July 2009
Substantially revised and re-set, 2010

PHILATELIC AND POSTAL GLOSSARY.

Translator's note: Many of the terms in the Glossary relate to French Post Office systems for which I could not determine an equivalent English term. In such cases, the term has been translated as accurately as possible. Notification of corrections would be appreciated. An index to English terms is given at the end of the document.

It is not within the scope of my intentions, and still less within my ability, to explain the meaning of every term used in the official texts of the Ministry of Posts & Telegraphs and the language of philately: nevertheless, certain words are quasi-specific to one or other of these branches or do not carry the same meaning in both. This being so, I thought it might be useful to try and give the precise meaning for certain terms which are not always explained quite clearly in handbooks, whilst asking Heaven that this will inspire the reader to search further, to quote an excellent author whose name I have forgotten. For the rest, I must ask the reader to refer to his usual dictionary, and ask him to pardon any possible waste of effort.

Finally, I want to thank the many postal officials, eminent philatelists, and the ordinary enthusiasts who have been kind enough to let me have their constructive criticisms of this paper, and have led me to believe that it may be of some use.

A

ABUS DE FRANCHISE

Non-statutory use of postal franking.

Abuse of franking

ACCIDENTÉ

Term denoting postal items (usually airmail) distributed after being saved from an accident, and generally bearing a corresponding marking.

Crash cover

ACHEMINÉ

Cover from abroad, a part of whose transport was undertaken by a private organisation.

Forwarded

ACHEMINEMENT

Itinerary and sequence of means used to get an item of post from its point of departure to its destination.

Routing

AÉRIENNE (POSTE)

Postal organization using aerial means of transport.

Air mail

AÉROGRAMME

Postal item of fixed, unchangeable weight taking the form of a folded sheet without envelope, routed by aerial means and benefiting from a reduced, preferential tariff. It is generally a postal entire.

Aerogram

AÉROPHILATÉLIE

Study of the airmail post, its stamps and markings.

Aerophilately

AFFRANCHISSEMENT

Total amount of postage used to send items without cost to their recipient. This postage was initially represented by special marks (PP, PD), later by postage stamps or approved mechanical impressions.

Postage

AFFRANCHISSEMENT EN COMPTE

Postage not involving payment at the moment of handing in the items to be sent, a total sum being charged periodically (usually monthly) on an account opened by the sender.

Postage on account

AFFRANCHISSEMENT DOUBLE

See Compose (Affranchissement).

Double postage

AFFRANCHISSEMENT DE FORTUNE

Postage applied by abnormal means because of exceptional circumstances.

Emergency postage

AFFRANCHISSEMENT INSUFFISANT

Total paid not covering all the costs of transport, and thus entailing the collection of a further payment from the recipient.

Insufficient postage (Postage due)

AFFRANCHISSEMENT MÉCANIQUE

Postage applied with the aid of franking machines, either directly on the item or by the intermediary of a label.

Meter postage

AFFRANCHISSEMENT EN NUMÉRAIRE

Possibility open to large scale users for sending items in the categories “printed matter, samples or postal packets” in 1000s at least or “newspapers and periodicals”, in lots of more than 100. The batches are then marked with the imprint “pp”. Taxes are then levied either on the return of unused wrappers or envelopes, or at monthly intervals.

Bulk posting

AGENCE POSTAL

Rural establishment run by a person outside the administration who undertakes to forward and distribute the mail.

Postal agency

AGENT EMBARQUÉ

Postal agent attached to an office afloat.

Shipboard agent

A LA MAIN

Term used for items handed in on the high seas aboard a ship without postal facilities and which the captain sends to a post office ashore when possible. These items are marked Paquebot.

- Cancellation by hand: see Manuelle.

By hand

AMBULANT

Office installed in a special carriage of a train, to sort and transport correspondence. Service organising the mobile and stationary services of the railway system.

Travelling Post Office

AMINCI

Defect in a postage stamp consisting of the accidental reduction of the thickness of the paper on the verso.

Thinning

ANIMAUX VIVANTS

Wording on the label attached to a postal packet to denote the presence of animals whose transport is permitted: bees, leeches or silk worms*.

Live animals

* In the days of mail coaches, there was also a place (in exceptional cases, more than one) for a passenger in the coach. The transport of people by the Post has been forbidden for a long time, except in the case of the rural motor vehicle post.

ANNEXE (BUREAU)

Secondary postal establishment, set up in a town in a district remote from a main office, offering all of the services called for by local needs and controlled by a secondment order.

Sub-Post Office

ANNEXE MOBILE

Postal unit similar to the mobile office in its method of work and to a sub-Post Office in size, but depending on a permanent office where the postmaster is based. It is staffed during its rounds by one or two cashiers seconded from the permanent office.

Mobile Post Office

ANNULATION

Suppression of the revenue value of a stamp, either by cancellation during its ordinary use or by an overprint when the authorities use it for a special purpose or wish to destroy it.

Demonetised

ANNULATION DE FORTUNE

Abnormal cancellation carried out in the absence of other possibilities under exceptional circumstances.

Emergency cancellation

ANNULÉ

Demonetising overprint used by the administration from 1911 to 1925 to create labels for use in practical courses for postmen.

Annulled

AO (AUTRES OBJETS)

Initials, meaning the opposite of LC (letters and cards) used for items not in the first category: printed matter, newspapers, packets etc.

Other articles

ARRÊTÉ

Decree

Official text issued by the administering authority (a Government minister in the case of the Post Office) to ensure compliance with a law or official order.

ARTICLES D'ARGENT

Money service

Former name of the financial services of the Post Office.

AUTOMATION

Automation

Combination of automatic processes used to facilitate sorting and speed up delivery of correspondence.

AUTOMOBILE (POSTE)

Automobile post

Mobile postal service making the rounds of a rural zone that lacks any regular means of transport. In every district that lacks a post office, the mail is collected and distributed by a postal correspondent.

AUXILIAIRE (BUREAU)

Auxiliary office

Postal establishment depending on a full post office and offering only the most common services and run by a person outside the postal administration.

AVIS DE RÉCEPTION

Receipt of delivery

The sender of a registered or recorded letter can ask the post office to notify him of its receipt by the addressee. It is then accompanied by form 515 (formerly 103 up to 1885, then 514) plus no. 859 for international travel, one part of which is returned to the sender after delivery and constitutes the notice of receipt. The same possibility is open to the senders of telegrams and express letters.

B

BALANCIER MONÉTAIRE

Coining press

Apparatus consisting of a lever joined to a screw to which a rapid rotary movement is given. The shock from the die carried at the end of the screw to the fixed blank imprints the relief of the die on to the blank.

Used for striking coins, this instrument also produced the lead blocks which were the first plates for French stamps.

BALLON LIBRE

Unmanned balloon

A lighter than air craft, without a crew but still able to carry mail.

BALLON MONTÉ

Manned balloon

Balloon with crew and sometimes passengers, especially during the Siege of Paris in 1870-71. The same term is also applied to the items of post carried by these balloons.

BANDE

Wrapper

Long strip of paper designed to go round a newspaper or magazine, and to carry the address of the recipient and the stamps. Wrappers stamped in advance (entires) are available.

Postcards and cards without correspondence can benefit from the reduced rates for printed matter if they are sent under a wrapper.

- Set of several stamps joined together along one or other edge (horizontal strip or vertical strip).

BIENFAISANCE (TIMBRE DE)

Charity stamp

It seems preferable to speak of a surcharged stamp. See Surtaxe.

BISTRE

Bistre

The dictionaries only agree as to the origin of this colour, which is obtained “starting with diluted soot”. Some of them call it a “blackish brown” others a “yellowish brown”: for philatelists it is rather a brown-yellow*. See Couleur.

* What can one say about yellow-bistre and brown-bistre? You follow me?

BLANCHET

Blanket

Piece of cloth used to cover the drum of an ordinary press or the cylinder of a rotary press to decrease the pressure and protect the plate.

BLOC

Block

Assembly of more than three stamps, each joined by at least two sides.

BOÎTE MOBILE

Mobile box

Letterbox detachable from its support (wall of station, public conveyance, gangway of ship) which is removed by an official and taken to the post office agent who is the sole person authorised to open it and take out the mail. The abbreviation BM, used to designate it, is also applied, but less often, to mobile offices.

BOÎTE SUPPLÉMENTAIRE

Extra box

Letterbox not initially allowed for by the P.O. but granted at the request of a community, and at its expense, when the authorities have recognised the need for it.

BOÎTIER

Receiver

See Facteur-Boîtier.

BON À TIRER

Good for a pull

Formula giving authorisation for printing after a final test or trial.

BON DE POSTE

Postal order

Type of fixed value money order. Name formerly given to money orders.

BOULE DE MOULINS

Boule de Moulins

Method developed during the siege of Paris (1870-1871) to get the mail (starting from Moulins) into the besieged capital using the course of the Seine. The same term is applied to the items sent by this method and recovered later (none reached Paris during the siege).

BP (BOÎTE POSTALE)

Post Office Box

Letterbox situated on the premises of a post office, and leased to the user who collects his mail from it.

BPM

Military Post Office

Military Post Office.

BRISTOL

Bristol

Smooth surfaced cardboard produced by the superimposition of gummed sheets of paper.

BULLETIN DE COLIS POSTAUX

Parcel post advice of delivery form

Form issued by the parcel post service, consisting of a receipt for return to the sender, a form attached to the delivery slip accompanying the packet, and possibly a label to be attached to the packet. The forms used within France by the French railways, who hold the concession for parcel post, have a monetary value.

BUREAU DE POSTE

Post Office

Installation for the postal service. One may distinguish travelling, annexe, auxiliary, central, head, distribution, exchange, floating, railway, coupled, mixed, mobile, naval, temporary, port, semaphore, simple, telegraphic (see these words). The word Recette is currently used.

BURELAGE

Burelage

Design of interlaced curved lines forming a security background on stamps, and printed before the stamp.

C

CABINET NOIR

Black room

Secret interference with correspondence, leaving no trace or mark, in contrast with censorship which leaves traces.

CACHET

Cachet

Little seal enabling a distinctive imprint to be made. Often used for postmark.

CACHET À DATE

Date stamp

See Date.

CACHET DE FERMETURE

Seal

Result of applying a seal to the closure of a letter or to a packet fastened with wax. By analogy: sticky label used to close postal items.

CARNET

Stamp booklet

Little book made up of sheets of stamps sold together, in a form small enough to be carried on the person.

CARTE D'IDENTITÉ POSTALE

Postal identity card

Identity card issued by the postal authorities and recognised by the U.P.U. with the aim of facilitating postal operations in all the member countries of the Union.

CARTE LETTRE

Letter card

Piece of correspondence folded and closed so as to have the dimensions of a postcard. There are prepaid letter cards (entires).

CARTE POSTALE

Postcard

Thick paper card for correspondence purposes of which all or part of one side carries the address of the recipient and which travels uncovered. A distinction is drawn between the ordinary postcard and the picture postcard, one face of which carried an illustration: Some are stamped in advance (entires).

CARTE RÉPONSE

See Réponse (Correspondance)

Reply card

CARTE DE VISITE

Card in an unsealed envelope which, to take advantage of a special reduced rate, should carry only the name and address of the sender and a maximum of five words (or recognised abbreviations) of correspondence.

Greetings card

CATAPULTÉ (COURRIER)

Mail transported by an aeroplane which has been launched from a ship by catapult.

Catapult mail

CATÉGORIE

Set of items treated according to the same rules by the postal service: letters, parcels, newspapers, etc.

Category

CÉCOGRAMME

Text written in Braille for the blind, which can be sent through the post at a specially low rate, free since 1959.

Braille letters

CEDEX

Courrier D'entreprise à Distribution Exceptionnelle. Rapid delivery business post, i.e. commercial mail addressed to a particularly important client to whom a specific post code number is assigned.

CENSURE

Control applied to private correspondence. It is done officially in time of war, despite the universally recognised law of the secrecy of correspondence. It is revealed by markings, valued by collectors. Not to be confused with Cabinet Noir.

Censorship

CENTRAGE

Presentation of a postage stamp within the frame formed by the perforations or scissors cuts that have separated it from its neighbours. Good centring is characterised by integrity of the stamp, with equal margins on the four sides (in principle these margins should be equal to half the space separating two stamps).

Centring

CENTRAL (BUREAU)

Main office in a large town, at which the post from an urban zone is centralised and distributed within this zone. In Paris there is a central post office for each district, carrying the number of the district.

Head Post Office

CHARGEMENT

The formalities and conditions required for the postal authorities to assume responsibility for valuables entrusted to the post. Certain currency items, with financial value are registered compulsorily.

Registration

CHEVAUX (POSTE AUX)

See Poste Aux Chevaux.

Horse post

CHIFFRE TAXE

Obsolete synonym for Timbre Taxe, q.v.

Postage due

CHOIX

Choice

Overall term for the state of a stamp. First choice means an item without defect: there can be second and third choices, and also super-choice, amongst the others.

CIRCULAIRE ADMINISTRATIVE

Administrative circular

Official text emanating from the administrative level of the ministerial department concerned, and distributed to all interested services.

CLASSIQUE

Classic

Adjective applied to stamps issued prior to 1875 (or 1900?) and some others of special interest to philatelists. The limit can be looked on as variable with the epoch or with the collector.

CLICHÉ

Cliche

Impression of a design from which a large number of examples can be taken. Portions of a stamp which, when joined in useful multiples in a frame, enable what are called separate plates to be produced.

CODE POSTAL

Post code

Code consisting of a certain number of figures (five in France) or letters to facilitate the more rapid sorting of mail.

CODE DES POSTES ET TÉLÉCOMMUNICATIONS

All the legislative texts controlling the service, available to everyone at the Journal Officiel printing house.

COIN

Die

Die-sunk piece of metal used to strike the plates used in composing a sheet.

COIN DATE

Dated corner

Corner (lower right, except in rare cases) of a sheet of French stamps printed on a rotary press, carrying the date of printing.

COLIS POSTAUX

Parcel post

Heavy category of items, the responsibility for which in France is given to sub-contract companies (railways, shipping companies, airlines and specialist companies. It was set up by the international convention of 3rd November 1880.

COMMÉMORATIF

Commemorative

Adjective referring to stamps issued to commemorate a current or past event, and only remaining on sale for a limited period. There are also commemorative entires and cancellations.

COMPLAISANCE

See Obliteration De Complaisance.

COMPOSÉ (AFFRANCHISSEMENT)

Compound stamping

Postage covering two stages of the journey, each being paid for by stamps of different countries. This happens above all on letters going abroad or coming from countries that do not belong to the U.P.U. (The stamps of which are not valid before the date on which they join the Union.)

COMPTE (AFFRANCHISSEMENT EN)

See Affranchissement.

CONGRES DE L'U.P.U.

U.P.U. Congress

Periodic meeting of representatives of all member countries of Universal Postal Union, held to develop permanent international postal relations. Detailed proceedings are published in several languages at the end of the congress.

CONSTRUCTIVE (PHILATÉLIE)

Thematic

See Thématique.

CONTRESEING

Counter-signature

Appended by the sender: signature authorising (official paid), done manually, or by means of a signature stamp or an official stamp.

CONTRÔLE (MARQUE DE)

Control mark

Inscription to control production. Feasibly, an overprint made after a stamp theft to enable the remaining stock to be used without loss to the Treasury by withdrawing the ones not overprinted from circulation.

CONTRÔLE PRIVÉ (MARQUE DE)

Security endorsement

Inscription, usually on the back, or perforation, applied to stamps by a private firm to prevent their theft.

CONVOYEUR

Escort

Postal sub-agent whose duty is to accompany the mail on railways, collect and put it off at each station. The same word is applied to the cancellation used by this agent from 1875 on the mail issued and distributed in the course of one journey. In this respect we can distinguish station escorts and line escorts.

COQUILLE

Shell

Indivisible section of impression cylinder for rotary stamp press. In France, the cylinder carries four shells for typography and three for copper-plate engraving (except in the case of the mono bloc type I, 10f La Rochelle).

CORRESPONDANCE

Correspondence

Transaction by letter between two people: the letter itself.

CORRESPONDANT POSTAL

Postal representative

Postal agent not belonging to the Administration, collecting and delivering mail on a part time basis on a rural automobile service.

COTE

Price

Definition of value in figures. In fact, the prices in stamp catalogues are only an average commercial estimate acting as a possible basis for exchanges.

COUCHÉ (PAPIER)

Paper coated with a very smooth layer of kaolin, plaster or barium sulphate.

Chalk paper

COULEUR

No need to discuss this, though it might be very useful.

Colour

COUPON RÉPONSE [International]

Postal form that enables a stamp or stamps for the reply to be obtained in a country other than that of the sender (in the U.P.U. or a more restricted preferential range).

Reply coupon [International]

COURRIER

Originally: everyone using the horse post. Later, more particularly, the carrier of letters going through the post. What he transports.

Messenger

COURS D'INSTRUCTION

There are practical courses for future postal workers which carry the above name of and uses vignettes and hand stamps specially produced for this Purpose.

Course of instruction

C.R.I.

International reply coupon.

I.R.C.

CROIX DE REPÈRE

Cruciform inscription printed in the margin to facilitate lining up of the perforations, and the various colours in multi-colour printing.

Marginal cross

CURSIVE

Type of postmark where the letters imitate cursive handwriting. Used in France specifically by sorting offices from 1819 to 1852.

Cursive

CYLINDRE

Body in the shape of a roll carrying the material for rotary printing. In France the cylinder carries:-

Cylinder

- for typography - 4 electrotypes plates
- for copper-plate engraving - 3 shells
- for heliogravure - the surface of one sheet

D

DAGUIN

French inventor who developed a manual instrument allowing two imprints to be made simultaneously in one operation on a piece of mail. One is a date stamp, the other can carry the date, or a publicity text, or a linear design. The same name is applied to the machine or the imprint produced.

Daguin

DATE (CACHET À)

Mark applied to postal items carrying the date of posting, transit or distribution according to the circumstances. This type of stamp also cancels the postage stamps in France since 1876.

Date stamp

DATEUR

Instrument for marking the date. Part of a rubber stamp marking the date.

Dater

DÉBOURSÉ

Extra charge

Operation carried out in the sorting office to determine all the taxes payable on an unstamped letter which cannot be delivered. The details of the extra charge are always given on the verso of a letter.

DÉCENTRÉ

Off-centre

Refers to a stamp with defective centring (see Centrage).

DÉCISION MINISTÉRIELLE

Ministerial Decree

Ministerial text emanating from the titular ministry (of Posts).

DÉCOUPAGE

Overlaying

Art of superimposing (in producing stamps) the inking rollers to get a multi coloured effect in copper-plate engraving. The appearance of the resulting print.

DÉCRET

Decree

Official text issued by the executive power in application of a law.

DÉMONÉTISÉ (TIMBRES)

Demonetised stamps

Stamps that have legally lost their value.

DENTELURE

Perforation

Tooth-shaped edges to stamps, enabling them to be separated easily from one another. The differences in perforations as a function of the size of the holes are measured by means of a perforation gauge.

DÉPÊCHE

Dispatch

In current language (obsolete): synonym for telegram. In postal work: entire consignment (sacks) sent in any one direction.

DESTRUCTION

Destruction

Stamps which are faulty or withdrawn from service, whether they have been issued or not, are periodically officially destroyed by the Administration. The destruction is the subject of a special official report.

DÉTAXE

Repayment

Repayment made to the addressee, at his request, of an incorrect tax on an item taxed irregularly or overtaxed.

DIRECTION (BUREAU DE)

Receiving office

Office of a certain importance having at its head a Direction, and in which all possible postal operations can be carried out, especially the postal order service. The offices of Direction took the name of Recette (Receiving Office) from 1864.

DISPENSE DE TIMBRAGE

Post free

Possibility offered, on authorisation, for newspapers sent in bulk by their editors.

DISTRIBUTION

Distribution

Sequence of operations by which items of mail are delivered to their recipients at the point of destination.

DISTRIBUTION (BUREAU DE)

Distribution office

Secondary postal establishment in a locality which does not justify the setting up of an office of direction, and attached to an office of direction. It only offers part of the range of postal services (limitation on money items for example). These offices were abolished in 1875.

DISTRIBUTION (FICHE DE)

Distribution docket

Postal form accompanying registered packets (in inland post) then retained by the post office as a receipt after being signed by the recipients.

DOUBLE FRAPPE

Double strike

Double printing of the design, generally partial, on a stamp printed by the copper-plate process. The doubling results from a second application of the roller to the plate in a position slightly different from the first: this may be because of displacement of the roller itself, or of settling of the metal plate.

E

ECHANGE (BUREAU D')

Exchange office

Office designed to communicate directly with foreign offices, and to centralise international correspondence on departure, transit and arrival. It is responsible for the special accounting involved.

ECHANTILLON

Sample

Objects in the second category, possibly benefiting from a reduced rate similar to that for printed matter. Samples have been included in the parcel post group since 1969.

ELECTORAUX (IMPRIMÉS)

Electoral leaflets

Category of semi-official items benefiting from a specially reduced rate during an election period.

EMISSION

Issue

Set of stamps used at a given time for a given rate of postage, more especially the new ones amongst them for the tariffs considered.

- The date of issue of a stamp is that of the day on which they went into service for the first time.

ENTIER

Postal stationery (entire)

Printed item from the postal service having its own financial value to be used as wished by the purchaser. Postal entires can be grouped into: postcards, envelopes, letter cards, wrappers, aerogrammes, to which one can add reply coupons. Amongst the financial services: postal orders and vouchers. Finally, entires from the pneumatic service, telephone and parcel post forms. Alongside the official entires, there are entires stamped to order for certain administrative departments, commercial houses, associations or even private individuals.

ENTIÈRE (PIÈCE)

Entire piece

Item of correspondence which has seen postal use and which has been preserved as a whole.

ENTREPÔT

Depot

Fixed department of a travelling office, not open to the public but which may have one or more letter boxes. Sited on the outskirts of a station, a port or an airport. This type of office is specially devoted to the collection and forwarding of mail.

ENVELOPPE

Sheet of folded gummed paper used to contain a letter. There are envelopes stamped in advance (entieres).

Envelope

EPREUVE

Single impression of a stamp design made with the aid of a die. We may distinguish between artists' proofs made by the artist to check the progress of his work (state proof), or to present to the responsible authority (final proof), and the luxury proofs made by the administration, generally with the help of a die specially made for this purpose.

Proof

ERINNOPHILIE

Science of collecting vignettes without official financial value.

Cinderella philately

ERREUR

Stamp not conforming to its official and usual appearance, which has nevertheless been in regular use.

Error

ESCALE (PLI D')

Envelopes deposited in the mobile box of a ship when this is in port in foreign waters. These letters are characterised by being stamped with foreign stamps (from the country in whose waters the ship is) but cancelled with the mark of the ship's nationality.

Port of call envelopes

ESSAI

Special pull made by the stamp printing works to test a new method of working or make a choice between two or more possibilities (choice of colours for example). As a result there are essays which were not adopted and to the printing house trials must be added those originating from private industry. Two groups can be distinguished amongst these latter: trials made at the request and expense of the administration and which thus have a place in postal history, and those which have been entirely due to private initiative and thus come more into the field of Cinderella collecting.

Essay

ETAT

Term with several meanings:

1. Degree of preservation of a collector's item. We also speak of "choice".
2. Degree of progress of an engraving on a proof.
3. Degree of deterioration of a transfer roller that has been used to prepare a cylinder in copper engraving (do not confuse with "type").
4. The different aspects of a lithographic pull starting from the same transfer.

State

ETIQUETTE

Little form secured to an item to indicate particular features of dispatch. There are numerous types of postal label: registered, airmail, express, etc. The use of labels has often replaced or been followed by that of marks (rubber stamps) having the same purpose.

Label

ETOILE

One of the first forms of cancellation specific to Paris. It exists blank, with a number, and hollow.

Star

ETRANGER (BUREAU À L')

Post Office dependent on the metropolitan administration but set up in foreign territory. There were many of these offices when the host countries were incapable of supplying the full range of postal services, and more specially before they were admitted to the Universal Postal Union.

Post Office abroad

ETUDE (COLLECTION D')

Study collection

Collection built up to acquire a greater knowledge of the chosen subject.

EXCEPTIONELLE (LEVÉE)

Special collection

Collection made after the time of the last ordinary collection. To take advantage of it, it is necessary to pay a supplementary fee or put on more stamps.

EXPÉDITION

Consignment

All the items sent in the same direction at the same time.

EXPERTISE

Expertising

The sum of the examinations which enable an item to be identified, and amongst other things to decide whether it is authentic or not.

EXPRÈS

Express

Accelerated distribution of mail by the use of special carriers on arrival.

F

FACIALE

Face value

Value inscribed on a stamp.

FAC-SIMILÉ

Facsimile

Reproduction (more or less exact). Mark often inscribed on a fake.

FACTEUR

Postman

Postal official charged with delivering letters, and other postal objects to their address. Now officially referred to as Prepose.

FACTEUR (CACHET DE)

Postman's stamp

Personal stamp carried by a postman with which he marks his passage or cancels during his round any stamps not cancelled at the outset.

FACTEUR BOÎTIER

Postman - receiver

Refers to a postal establishment similar to a distribution office where the sub-agent, apart from his office duties, is also obliged to do a postman's round.

FACTEUR-RECEVEUR

Postman - receiver

Name borne by Facteur-boîtier from 1893 to 1942.

FANTAISIE (TIMBRE DE)

Cinderella

Non-postal design that looks like a postage stamp.

FAUX

Forgery

Two types are distinguished in philately: postal forgeries made to defraud the post and forgeries made to deceive collectors.

FERROVIAIRE (POSTE)

Railway post

Total of stationary and mobile offices directly related to railways: stations, travelling, conveying etc. Collection of items representing this.

FEUILLE

Sheet

Piece of paper of a certain size carrying the impression of a group of generally identical stamps. We can distinguish: the impression sheet, which carries the impression of one plate and the sales sheet, which carries the impression for unit sale to the public.

FEUILLET

Miniature sheet

Little sheet of paper carrying the impression of a restricted number of stamps. Miniature sheets are issued for advertising purposes or as commemoratives.

FICTIF (TIMBRE)

Training school stamp

Postal design for the inland service, without official financial value, used in the practical instruction of postal workers.

FILIGRANE

Watermark

Imprint made in the paper during its manufacture, visible because of transparency.

FILIGRANOSCOPE

Watermark detector

Little basin with a black base which enables watermarks to be readily detected with the aid of benzene.

FISCAL

Fiscal/Revenue

Concerning the revenue. Revenue stamps have a fiduciary, not postal, value.

FISCOPOSTAL

Postal fiscal

Refers to certain revenue stamps which can be used for stamping letters, or to stamps which have a postal value and a fiscal value at the same time. This is particularly frequent in the British territories.

FLAMME

Flag

Elongated figure in the shape of a flag which accompanies the date stamp on certain cancellations. Blank flags, flags with text and pictorial flags can be distinguished.

FLAN

Blank

Metallic object designed to receive the imprint of a die.

FLEUR DE PLANCHE

Plate proof

Produced at the start of printing from a plate. Plate proofs show particularly faithful and exact details.

FLOTTANT (BUREAU)

Floating Post Office

Post office installed on board a ship of a regular line, and tended by an official embarked for the purpose.

FLUORESCENCE

Fluorescence

Phenomenon of photoluminescence that disappears at the same time as the exciting radiation.

FOND DE SÛRETÉ

Impression printed prior to that of the stamp properly so-called, and designed to prevent falsification.

Security background

FORME

Typographic composition held within a frame: the frame itself. Formes have been used to keep blocks in separate plates (1872-1876), and still serve today to hold together the leads for electrotypes (typography).

Forme

FOULAGE

Relief imprint which by excess pressure appears on the verso, and possibly as a depression on the recto round a printed stamp.

Embossing

FRANCHISE

Exemption from the payment of postal charges. This is exceptional, and the details of its application are to be found in the Manual des Franchises.

Franking privilege

FRANCHISE MILITAIRE

Free post generally given in France to auxiliaries in the field, then from 1901 to 1973, for two letters a month in all circumstances to non-commissioned officers and other ranks. This was extended to one parcel a month in 1951. Free post when not on active service was represented by special stamps for letters and special forms for parcels. These were used in all French garrisons at home and overseas.

Military franking

FRANC-OR

Since 1920, the accounting unit used by the UPU, by reference to which national currencies are adjusted. It is especially used in drawing up the postage due taxes to be inscribed on envelopes for international use.

Gold franc

FUGITIVE (ENCRE)

Ink specially prepared for printing certain stamps, in such a way that its colour will change if an attempt is made to remove the cancellation.

Fugitive ink

G

GALVANO

Tool for producing postage stamps obtained by electrotyping and carrying a predetermined number of die impressions. There are:

Electrotype plate

- The electrotype produced on passage through the electroplating bath of a number of Blanks impressed by the die used. This is only used for production of the following:
- The service electrotype which is a electroplated reproduction of the electrotype, and is directly used in multiples to print the stamps.

GALVANOPLASTIE

Method of reproducing engravings by electrolytic deposition on an inverse conducting surface.

Electrotyping

GARE (BUREAU DE)

Stationary office of the travelling service, devoted to the sorting and outwards transmission of the mail.

Railway Post Office

GOMME

Gum

Coating on the verso of adhesive stamps which enables them to be stuck to a cover when they are moistened.

GRANDE CONSOMMATION (G.C.)

Highly expendable

Official term given to certain types of mediocre-quality paper used to produce stamps in France between 1916 and 1920. The mark G.C. printed on the margins of sheets was an intimation to postal workers to use up these rather fragile stamps first (see illustration alongside). Certain collectors improperly extend this name to the poor-quality papers used during the 1939-1945 War.

GRAVURE

Engraving

Result of the cutting of a hard, smooth surface, from which a design or inscription can be reproduced. We may distinguish between:-

- Copper-plate engraving, where the engraved lines retain the ink after wiping of the surface and thus reproduce the design
- Wood engraving, in which the surfaces prepared do the actual printing.

GRÈVE (TIMBRE DE)

Strike stamps

Strike stamps are semi-official designs put out by certain Chambers of Commerce during certain prolonged strikes of postal workers. They accompanied the official stamps always needed in view of the postal monopoly and represented the extra charge due to the chamber concerned for transporting the commercial mail during the absence of the official service.

GUIDE OFFICIEL DES P.T.T.

Official Guide of the PTT

Publication of the Ministry of Posts, Telegraphs & Telecommunications kept permanently up to date and giving all information needed for the use of its services.

H

HÉLIOGRAVURE

Photogravure

Method of photogravure engraving, for which a screen is almost always necessary.

HÉLIOLITHOGRAPHIE

Photolithography

Lithographic process in which the designs are obtained by photographic reduction.

HERSE (DENTELURE À LA)

Harrow perforation

Perforation produced by a grid of points covering the sheet in one pass, the tool employed resembling a farmers rectangular harrow. Harrow perforation gives corners which are always regular.

HORS-SAC

Out of bag

Refers to bundles of newspapers sent by publishers to newsagents.

I

IMPRESSION

Impression

Action by which one applies one thing to another to get an imprint. Result of this action.

IMPRIMÉ

Printed matter

Item of correspondence without manuscript inscriptions and not having a personal character, for which a special (reduced) postal tariff is charged.

INDEXATION

Application of a set of conventional rules enabling classification to be carried out.

Indexing

INDICE

Number indicating the degree of rarity of a collectors item with respect to others or to an agreed (possibly varying) base.

Rarity index

INSCRIPTIONS MARGINALES

Inscriptions printed on the margins of a sheet, such as date, number, publicity etc.

Marginal inscriptions

INTÉRIEUR (SERVICE)

All the service charges of the PTT within the frontiers.

Inland post

- An inland service stamp is an adhesive stamp without fiduciary value used by the PTT without any contact with the public.

INTERNATIONAL (SERVICE)

All the service charges of the PTT for items going to or coming from abroad. The rules for this service have been set up by the successive UPU congresses since 1875: before then, only bilateral agreements existed.

International post

J

JAPON (PAPIER)

Paper (called rice paper), white or slightly yellowish, silky, glazed, and with a pearly lustre. The 1944 French stamps that are watermarked Japon are not printed on Japan paper.

Japan paper

JOUR DE L'AN (OBLITÉRATION DE)

Cancellation made by a stamp without a dater and often of an outdated kind, during rush periods, particularly at the time of the New Year's holidays.

New Year's Day cancellation

JOURNAUX

Category of printed periodicals benefiting from specially reduced rates of postage.

Newspapers

JUMELÉS (BUREAUX)

Offices set up to avoid the closure of establishments that have become too unimportant; they operate in two different localities at different times but with the same personnel.

Twinned offices

K

KILLER

English word denoting a cancellation (particularly of American origin) consisting of heavy lines, and particularly harmful to the stamps that have received it.

Killer

L

L.C. (LETTRES ET CARTES POSTALES)

Initials denoting letters and postcards (first-class objects) as distinct from A.O (other articles).

Letters and postcards

LÉGENDE

Inscriptions engraved on stamps.

Legend

LETTRES (POSTE AUX)

See Poste Aux Lettres.

Letter post

LEVÉE

Operation of retrieving the mail from the boxes into which it has been dropped.

Collection

LIMITROPHE (RAYON)

In the international field: radius for reduced postage in the zone adjacent to the frontier (25 kilometres as the crow flies).

Border zone

LINÉAIRE (DENTELURE)

Perforation produced by a single line of points. Line perforation generally gives irregular corners.

Line perforation

LITHOGRAPHIE

Method of printing not making use of engraving, but of the property possessed by lithographic stone (and certain metallic alloys) of retaining moisture when the oily ink of a drawing repels it. Conversely, the ink for the reproduction is retained by that of the design previously drawn, whilst the blank wetted parts reject it.

Lithography

LIVRET D'IDENTITÉ

Postal form consisting of a sort of small booklet containing a sort of postal identity card and a certain number of leaves enabling a record of transactions carried out with the booklet to be kept in the archives.

Identity booklet

LOCALE (POSTE)

Postal service restricted to a limited region within a given country: a town, the region served by one post office for example.

Local post

LOCAUX (TIMBRES)

Special stamps designed for a single local post.

Locals

LOI

Official text emanating from the legislative power.

Law

LUMINESCENCE

Ability to emit luminous rays. A distinction should be drawn between phosphorescence and luminescence.

Luminescence

M

MACHINE À AFFRANCHIR

Instrument used to mark, on items of correspondence, imprints generally of a red colour that are equivalent to stamps in all cases.

Franking machine

Large users who want to have one of these machines should get authorisation from the departmental head. The fees are collected monthly, in arrears (with 1% rebate) and are paid to the post office that issued the machine.

- On the other hand, since the 50s, stamping is often done at the counter with a machine.

MAIN (LETTRE À LA)

See À La Main.

By hand (letter delivered)

MANCOLISTE

List of stamps wanted for a collection drawn up by its owner and generally sent to someone who may supply them.

Wants list

MANDAT

Document issued by the financial postal services, the amount of which is controlled by the sender: the recipient then receives the value.

Money order

MANUELLE (OBLITÉRATION)

Cancellation applied manually by means of a date-stamp or an ad hoc mark, as opposed to machine cancellation.

Hand stamp

MAQUETTE

Design for a proposed stamp used as the basis for a plate.

Sketch

MARCOPHILIE

Collection and study of items carrying wet stamps, called postmarks or cancellations.

Postmark collecting

MARGE

Part of the sheet not printed with stamps. Similarly, the un-printed border of the stamps themselves.

Margin

MARITIME (POSTE)

Organisation of the post on board trading ships and in ports. Stamps and letters originating from this service.

Maritime post

MARQUE DE CONTRÔLE

Marginal inscription used for production control.

Control mark

MARQUE POSTALE

Wet stamp (or manual inscription) applied to a consignment to indicate its origin and the method of forwarding. More specially applied to designate postmarks used in the pre-postage stamp era.

Postmark

MATRICE

Engraved piece of metal used to reproduce a design on any material whatever.

Matrix

MAXIMAPHILIE

The collection of maximum cards.

Maximaphilately

MAXIMUM (CARTE)

Collectors item consisting of a postcard, a stamp and a cancellation whose subjects must all harmonise.

Maximum card

MÉCANIQUE (AFFRANCHISSEMENT)

Stamping done at the counter with the aid of special instruments which sell ad hoc labels, particulars of receipts being taken at the same time.

Meter stamping

MÉCHANISATION

Ensemble of mechanical procedures used to facilitate stamping and cancellation, and also the sorting of correspondence.

Mechanisation

MILITAIRE (POSTE)

Postal organisation in armies.

Military post

MILLÉSIME

Figure giving the year (in the course of a decade). Pair of stamps separated by a bridge carrying this date.

Date

MINIMUM DE PERCEPTION

Minimum tax levied on a category of objects when these are taxed on a proportional scale.

Minimum rate

MISE EN TRAIN

Flexible packing placed opposite the plate for impression on a sheet of paper. This is specific for the cutting-out and sticking-on needed to improve the quality of the impression.

Make ready

MIXTE (AFFRANCHISSEMENT)

Stamping carried out with the aid of stamps originating from two different national administrations when both are valid at the same time for the same purpose. This type of stamping is generally the short-term result of a foreign occupation, or the recent take over of a service previously left to the discretion of a foreign country.

Mixed stamping

MIXTE (BUREAU)

See Plein exercice.

Main Post Office

MOBILE (BUREAU)

Postal unit of secondary importance attached to a group of two or three similar units and run by the same postmaster, who personally provides a counter service at each for part of the day.

Mobile office

MODERNE

Term applied to all stamps later than 1940, opposite of classic, and to the semi-modern stamps issued in the intermediate period.

Modern

MOLETTE DE TRANSFERT

Cylindrical instrument whose inverse relief permits the reproduction of copper-plate engraving from a die to a plate or impression roller.

Transfer roller

MONOPOLE POSTAL

This is the right possessed exclusively by the Post Office of dealing without competition with:

1. Mail sent in the service of the State
2. Private letters, sealed or not, whatever their weight (article L1 of the P.T.T. code)

There is also a monopoly in telecommunications.

Postal monopoly

N

NAVAL (BUREAU)

Military post office used by the Navy.

Naval Post Office

NAVALE (POSTE)

Postal organisation used by Naval forces (in opposition to the maritime post, which is civil).

Naval post

N.D.

See Non dentelé.

NEUF

Mint

Refers to an unused stamp which has retained all the properties it possessed on its sale at the Post Office counter.

If the stamp lacks its original gum, it is preferable to refer to it as uncancelled.

NON DENTELÉ

Imperforate

Refers to a stamp lacking perforations or any other means of separating it from its neighbours.

NON ÉMIS

Unissued

Refers to official stamps produced but not put into service for one reason or another.

NON URGENT

Not urgent

Category of postal objects set up in France in 1969, replacing the “printed matter” class, but not retaining the requirement for unsealed posting. They benefit from a reduced rate of postage but may be sent by different means.

NOUVEAUTÉ

New issue

Stamp put recently into service.

NUMÉRO

Number

Marginal inscription consisting of figures applied during production, either to facilitate accounting or as a means of control.

O

OBLITÉRATION

Cancellation

Cancellation mark on a stamp to prevent its reuse in any way.

OBLITÉRATION DE COMPLAISANCE

Cancellation by favour

Cancellation made at the request of a private individual, not to meet the needs of the postal service.

OBLITÉRATION MÉCANIQUE

Machine cancellation

Cancellation carried out by means of a machine, as opposed to hand cancellation.

OBLITÉRATION TEMPORAIRE

Temporary cancellation

Cancellation used for a limited period, usually as a commemoration.

OCCUPATION (TIMBRE D')

Occupation stamp

Stamps issued for the use of the population of a territory occupied by a foreign power.

ODONTOMÈTRE

Perforation gauge

Comparative table enabling perforations to be measured (in France: number of holes in a length of 20 mm).

OFFICIEL (SERVICE)

Official service

State service, which according to the country concerned either pays for post by means of special stamps or by means of an account with the postal service.

OFFSET

Method of lithographic printing in which the ink is applied to the sheet by means of a press-blanket.

Offset

ORIGINE LOCALE (OL)

Mark cancelling the stamp on an envelope collected and delivered by a local postman within the same trip without his going back to his office; applied to the envelope alone if the postman has to return it to his office.

Local origin

ORIGINE RURALE (OR)

Local origin mark applied more particularly by rural postmen.

Rural origin

P

PAIRE

Set of two stamps joined together horizontally or vertically.

Pair

PANNEAU

Unit of fabrication consisting of a predetermined number of reproductions of the engraving joined together, and used alone or in combination with one or more similar strips (plate) to print the stamps.

Pane

PAPIER

The usual support for adhesive stamps.

Papers are generally ranked in increasing order of thickness as flimsy, thin, ordinary, thick and cardboard. A more precise differentiation can be made in terms of the composition and texture of the papers.

Paper

PAPIER D'AFFAIRE

Category of items of commercial post; may be manuscript and often benefit from a slightly reduced rate of postage.

Circulars

PAPILLON DE METZ

Minimum weight letter written on a small sheet of paper and sent from Metz by a small free balloon during the siege of that town in September 1870.

Metz Butterfly

PAQUEBOT

Maritime postmark applied by a post office at a port to an envelope delivered by hand to show this office was not the first place to handle the item.

Paquebot

PAQUET-POSTE

Category of heavy postal items not exceeding 3 or 5 kilos according to the date.

Packet post

PARAOBLITERATION

Special cancellation applied to sheets before destruction of the stamps.

Para-obliteration

PART

Post office form carried by a postman on his rounds, which has to be marked by a seal kept in all the boxes on the round, thus acting as a check on collection.

A "part" can also be carried by firms' messengers.

Part

PASSE (BUREAU DE)

Passage office

Stationary establishment not open to the public, connected with the mobile service and situated near a railway junction. It is more particularly concerned with sorting and distribution of dispatches.

PASSE (FEUILLE DE)

Progressive proofs

Sheet of stamps printed before the impression has been perfectly developed as an aid to bringing this about. These sheets often carry multiple impressions.

PCV

Tax

Post and telephone initials, meaning tax (Percevoir) to be paid by recipient, after his agreement has been obtained.

PD

PD

Post paid to destination, in contrast to PP and PF.

PEIGNE (DENTELURE AU)

Comb perforation

Perforation carried out by means of a tool consisting of a line of points with shorter perpendicular lines (height of a stamp) branching off, so that three sides of a stamp can be perforated at the same time.

This perforation is known as rectangular and has two perfectly regular angles, and two others that are more or less regular.

PELURAGE

Thinning

Reduction in thickness of a paper on the verso of a stamp.

PELURE

Pelure

Very thin transparent paper.

PERCÉ EN LIGNE

Rouletting

Said of a stamp which has little slots along a straight line parallel with each edge of the picture. There are some which are not pierced in lines (saw-tooth, arc, etc.): they all have the common characteristic, in contrast to perforations, of not involving any loss of paper.

PERFORATION

Perfin

If this is not a flaw, it is the result of holes being pierced in the body of the stamp as a means control by the accounting department of an administration or commercial house.

PÉRIODIQUE

Periodical/Magazine

Publication appearing at given intervals; this type of printed matter benefits from a reduced rate of postage.

PETIT COLIS

Small parcel

Category of non-postal item, heavy but not exceeding 50 kilos, which has replaced postal parcels in the interior service since 1946.

PETITE POSTE

Local post

Old name for the local urban post.

PF

Post paid to frontier (in international service).

PF

PHILATÉLIE

Study and collection of postage stamps, and in a wider sense, of postmarks, postal objects and postal history.

Philately

PHOSPHORESCENCE

Phenomenon of luminescence going on beyond the time of excitation.

Phosphorescence

PHOTOGRAVURE

Ensemble of all photochemical engraving methods which give reproductions by the use of either the general technique of copper-plate engraving (heliogravure), of typography (half-tone) or even of lithography (heliolithography).

Photogravure

PIGEONGRAMME

Item of correspondence transported by carrier pigeon.

Pigeongram

PIQUAGE

Result of piercing of holes in the edges of stamps, thus permitting their easy separation from the sheet.

Perforation

PLANCHE

Set of engravings or drawings (for the lithographic method) united to permit the flat-printing of stamps.

Plate

The term cylindrical plate (planche cylindrique) is sometimes used for rotary printing: it would be better to say cylinder (cylindre).

PLAT (IMPRESSION À)

Printing with the aid of flat plates on previously cut sheets.

Flat-plate printing

PLEIN EXERCICE (RECETTE DE)

Office taking part in all the operations of the P.T.T. service (postal, financial, telegraphic & telephone). The term mixed office is also used.

Main Post Office

PLEINE MER (LETTRE DE)

Letter placed in the maritime post on a steamer in international waters.

These letters are characterised by being stamped with stamps of the nationality of the ship, and at the postal rate of this country, and cancelled by the mark of the maritime post.

High-seas letter

PLI

Synonym for letter.

PNEUMATIQUE

Refers to a network of tubes set up in certain large towns, through which the contents are moved by a difference in pressure (compressed air and vacuum).

Pneumatic

Item of telegraphic correspondence transmitted by this network and delivered by express. There are pneumatics stamped in advance (entieres).

POINÇON

Engraved piece of metal with which matrixes are prepared. The original die is the one engraved by the artist personally.

Die

PORT

Price paid for the transport of an object sent through the post.

Postage

PORT (BUREAU DE)

Fixed establishment of the maritime post installed in a port.

Port office

PORT DÛ

Postage payable by the recipient.

Postage due

PORT PAYÉ (PP)

Postage paid by the sender for inland transit. (See the illustration accompanying PD.)

Postage paid

PORTE-TIMBRE

Sticky label carrying inscriptions generally of a publicity nature round its edges with a space for a stamp in the centre.

Stamp carrier

POSTE

Service for official and private correspondence.

Post

POST AUX CHEVAUX

Former service for the transport of mail, passengers and baggage.

Horse post

POSTE AUX LETTRES

Service for dispatching items of post.

Letter post

POSTE RESTANTE

Possibility offered to the public of having correspondence sent to the address of a post office, requiring the payment of a special holding fee in France since 1920.

Post restante

PREMIER JOUR

Refers to a temporary special cancellation used (since 1950) on the first day of issue at a special point selected for this purpose.

First day cancellation

PRÉOBLITÉRATION

Cancellation of stamps before their use: they are then reserved for bulk postings.

Precancel

PRINCIPALE (RECETTE)

Central full-range office in the chief town of a Department.

Head office

P.T.T.

Initials of the Government Department entrusted with Post and Telecommunications (Telegraphs and Telephones).

Post, Telegraphs & Telecommunications

PUBLICITIMBRE

Stamp with edging or label attached which carry a publicity slogan. These are known as pubs in France and come in booklets.

Publicity stamp

PURIFICATION

Operation carried out during the last century and earlier to disinfect the mail coming from regions where an epidemic was raging.

Disinfection

Q

QUADRILLÉ

Arranged in continuous squares.

A squared background printed in colourless ink was used as a security device for certain French stamps at the end of last century.

Squared

R

RACCORD

Joint between two rolls of paper for rotary printing.

Normally the sheet printed on this join should be destroyed, but sometimes it does reach the public domain.

Join

RARETÉ

Quality of being not very abundant: in philately, having little relation to face value.

Rarity

RAYON

Taxation zone.

Zone

REBUT

Items entrusted to the post which can neither be delivered, forwarded to a new address nor returned to the sender.

Dead letter

The dead letter service carries out the final researches to avoid the destruction of these items and only proceeds to this destruction as a last resort.

RÉCÉPISSÉ

Printed form used as a receipt (for registration, value declared, charges etc. etc.)

Receipt

RECETTE

Name given to offices (see Bureaux) since 1864.

Office

RECOMMANDATION

Special treatment applied to items of post which are recorded at the moment of handing in, forwarded with special attention and delivered against a signature.

Registration

RECOUVREMENT

Postal service for the public in which items can be sent under sealed cover and their cost returned to the sender after receipt of payment and deduction of expenses.

Cash on delivery

RECTO-VERSO

Said of a stamp printed in the true sense on the recto and verso of the paper simultaneously. Not to be confused with those that are printed on the wrong side, on the verso, by off-set (ink too liquid).

Printed on both sides

RÉEXPÉDITION

All correspondence that cannot be delivered because the addressee has changed his residence, is sent to the new address if this is known: otherwise it is returned to the sender.

Forwarding

Forwarding is free for inland mail, but incurs the postage rate for unstamped mail if the item has to be forwarded to a foreign destination: in all cases it goes by surface mail since it is lacking the air surcharge necessary.

RÉEXPÉDITION (ENVELOPPE DE)

Forwarding envelope

Special official envelope enabling mail to be forwarded in batches, except for periodicals. There are three types; when forwarding is carried out by a private person, an agent of the P.T.T. for inland mail, or when it has to go to a foreign country.

RÉEXPÉDITION (ORDRE DE)

Forwarding order

Postal service form enabling users to have their mail forwarded for a year maximum, on temporary or permanent change of address (a model for each case and according to the importance of the locality).

RÉGIME

Regulations

Set of rules under which the P.T.T. works. We can distinguish between the inland regulations, the international regulations and certain special regulations.

RÉIMPRESSION

Reprint

Special printing carried out outside the normal one, generally after the stamp concerned has been withdrawn from service, to make up missing archives or for the needs of an exhibition.

Reprinting is carried out with the same plates as used for the original, very exceptionally by remaking the plates specially with the aid of the original die.

Alongside the official reprints there are “private reprints” made with the original material but destined particularly for the philatelic trade.

RELIEF (IMPRESSION EN)

Relief printing

Printing, generally dry, between mould and matrix, produced by impressions alone.

REEMBOUSEMENT

Cash on delivery

The term cash on delivery refers to any item of post, either charged or registered, which is only handed over to the addressee against payment of a sum fixed by the sender, in addition to the usual formalities.

REEMPLACANT

Replacement

New block replacing a worn one in a service plate.

RÉPARATION (OU RESTAURATION)

Repair (or Restoration)

Repair, i.e. the ensemble of operations that go to modify a document so as to give it a better appearance.

Although most objects in a collection are capable of being repaired, stamps that have been repaired gain little in value.(or are not much appreciated).

REPÈRE ÉLECTRONIQUE

Electric eye marking

Marginal inscription enabling colours (in multi-colour work) or perforations to be adjusted by electro-mechanical means.

REPIQUAGE

Re-perforating

Repair of perforations or false perforations in order to change the civil state of a vignette.

- In speaking of an entire, supplementary impression made on an official entire to give it a commemorative or commercial nature at the minimum cost.

REPLAQUAGE

Repair

Repair of paper as a whole.

RÉPONSE (CORRESPONDANCE)

Reply-paid correspondence

Correspondence which can be paid for by the addressee without supplementary charges but after previous agreement, in inland mail.

Cards and envelopes for this type of commercial correspondence and limited to large users, are generally referred to by the name of "T".

- Reply coupons are currently used in international postage.
- There are also reply paid forms in the telegraph service.
- Finally, certain large users can use "T" cards and envelopes.

REPORT

Transfer

Transfer of a design from one intermediate tool to another so as to get a unitary lithographic impression.

Result of this transfer.

RETOUCHE

Retouch

Partial correction of a design or engraving.

Part that has been retouched.

RETOUR

Return

Relates to an inscription (manuscript, stamp or label) giving the reason why an envelope put in the post is returned to the sender.

RETRAIT (DATE DE)

Withdrawal date

The day on which a stamp is withdrawn from sale.

ROTATIVE

Rotary

Printing machine using two or more cylindrical surfaces in contact one with one another, in pairs, the material to be printed being carried on one, whilst the paper on which it is printed is supported by the other, which is fitted with an elastic covering (set-off).

ROULETTE

Roll

Presentation of postage stamps in a long rolled-up strip specially designed for sale in stamp machines.

The name roulette de 93 is given to the first stamps precancelled in sheets in France, in 1893, by means of a tool that took the form of a little wheel.

ROUTAGE

Routing

Result of a sorting operation.

This should be done by senders to take advantage of certain reduced tariffs.

RURALE (POSTE AUTOMOBILE)

Rural automobile post

Postal organization enabling regular service to be given from an automobile specially adapted to offer all the service of the PTT and following a given circuit through rural areas which would otherwise not get the benefit of an adequate stationary office.

S

SEC (IMPRESSION À)

Dry printing

Printing done by pressure alone, without ink.

SECTEUR POSTAL (S.P.)

Postal sector

Conventional numbered address for the military post.

SÉCURITÉ (PAPIER DE)

Security paper

Paper specially prepared to prevent counterfeiting.

SÉMAPHORIQUE (BUREAU)

Semaphore office

Telegraphic office set up by the national Navy for the security of its buildings. Most of these offices have now been thrown open to the public for the benefit of the surrounding community.

SEMI-MODERNE

Semi-modern

Term given to stamps issued after the classics and before the moderns (see these terms); the limits may be looked on as variable.

SEMI OFFICIEL

Semi-official

Refers to a set of stamps issued by an authority other than the postal service, but with the permission of the latter.

SÉRIE

Series

Set of stamps of the same type or appearance. Not to be confused with émission (issue).

SERVICE

Service

Word applied to the stamps used on official mail in certain countries.

SERVICES FINANCIERS

Financial services

Group of postal services transmitting or looking after funds for their customers. They cover postal orders, cash on delivery, money orders., national savings bank: also the operations carried out on behalf of the Treasury or the Deposit and Consignment Office.

SIMILI

Half tone

Photogravure process leading to reproductions depending on the general typographic method.

SIMILI-TIMBRE

Bogus stamp

Another name for fictitious stamps. (Fictifs, q.v.)

SIMPLE (RECETTE)

Sub Post Office

Office where the postmaster takes direct charge of the service, or does so with the help of assistants who work to his orders and under his direction.

SOUS-TYPE

Secondary type: characteristics of this type (poinçon).

Sub-type

SPÉCIALITÉ

Branch of study to which a philatelist devotes his attention.

Specialty

SPÉCIMEN

Example, specimen.

The overprint specimen on a stamp deprives it of all fiscal value. Stamps marked in this way are used as samples to be sent to the U.P.U., or are placed in showcases at various points of sale to make them known to the public, or are used as bogus stamps.

Specimen

STÉRÉOTYPES

Similar solid plates [each bearing the image of a stamp] used in making up certain plates known as “mosaic” or “separate blocks”.

Stereotypes

SUPPRESSION (DATE DE)

Administrative date after which a stamp officially ceases to be printed.

Last printing date

SURCHARGE

Imprint applied a second time to alter the value, or the use of a stamp.

Surcharge

SURFACE (POSTE DE)

Land and sea postal services, as opposed to airmail.

Surface mail

SURTAXE

Extra charge printed on stamps for the profit of a charitable organization by means of the Post Office. The use of stamps with a surtax can be optional or compulsory.

T mark of variable form applied by the forwarding office on envelopes to be charged postage due.

- Also refers to certain postcards or commercial reply-paid envelopes marked with a large T, the postage on which is paid by its recipient without any surcharge.

T

TAILLE-DOUCE

Engraving by means of a burin for printing after wiping excess ink off the surface.

Recess printing

TARIFS

The prices for the various postal services at a given period.
In its singular, the price of one of these services.

Tariffs

TARIFS RÉDUITS

Prices for postal charges, reduced with respect to the ordinary letter rate, and applied to certain items of correspondence: printed matter, magazines etc, especially those sent out in quantity.

Reduced rates

TAXE

Price, total or partial, of a postal service payable by the recipient.

Postage due

TAXE SIMPLE

Tax levied on the recipient equal to that which would have been paid by the sender when the latter is an official body, and in certain special legal cases.

Postage due

TÉLÉCOMMUNICATIONS

Long distance, rapid communications, in particular: telegraph, telephone, Telex, etc.

Telecommunications

TÉLÉGRAMME

Message transmitted by the telegraph service.

Telegram

TÉLÉGRAPHIQUE (BUREAU)

Office forwarding telegrams, coming under the Minister of the Interior up to 1879, then under the Post Office.

Telegraph office

Currently this term relates to offices connected by elements, (aerial or underground) of the telegraph network. A distinction can be drawn between main and secondary offices and radio-telegraph stations.

TÉLÉPHONE

Apparatus available to the general public for the direct transmission of sound and voices.

Telephone

TÉLÉPHONE (BULLETIN DE)

Printed form having a fiduciary value sold by the PTT to cover the charge for converting a unit of time from a public call box.

Telephone ticket

TÊTE-BÊCHE

Said of two se-tenant stamps upside down with respect to one another.

Tête-bêche

THÉMATIQUE (COLLECTION)

Collection based exclusively on the pictures on the stamps and on documents relating to a particular subject.

Thematic collection

TIMBRAGE SUR COMMANDE

Stamping to order, without using postage stamps, carried out by the Post Office at the request of users on envelopes, postcards, letter cards or wrappers before they are used.

The items of correspondence prepared in this way become postal entires with a fiduciary value, and are only produced in quantity.

This process was made available or not over time at the instance of individuals and certain administrations, and was stopped in 1964.

Stamping to order

TIMBRE

Impression of a stamp.

Stamp

TIMBRE À DATE

Official designation of what philatelists call a Cachet a Date (see Date).

Date stamp

TIMBRE-MONNAIE

Postage stamp used as money and protected to prolonging its life (done during periods of trouble when there is a shortage of cash in circulation).

Money stamp

TIMBRE-TAXE

Special stamp used to show and control the amount and receipt of the postage due to be levied on the recipient.

Postage due stamp

TIRAGE

Action of putting sheets into the press to print them; result of this action.

Pull

In philately, the word is used mainly to denote the quantity of stamps that have been printed.

TOUCHEUR

Cylindrical tool used in rotary printing to spread the printing ink on the printing cylinder.

Inking roller

TRAME

In photogravure: fine grid placed between the photograph and the metal to be etched in such a way as to divide the flats and half-tones into dots suitable for the method (heliogravure is similar).

Screen

TRI

Set of operations performed before the mail is sent out which results in the making-up of the consignments.

Sorting

Sorting is carried out at all offices, each at the appropriate level.

TRI (CENTRE DE)

Postal establishment having as its function the centralisation and sorting of the correspondence then forwarding it.

Sorting office

TYPE

Model of the tools for producing a sheet of stamps.

Type

TYPOGRAPHIE

Method of printing by means of an engraved surface, the higher parts leaving the blanks.

Typography

U

UNION GÉNÉRALE DES POSTES

First name given to the Universal Postal Union q.v., founded in 1875.

General Postal Union

UNION POSTALE UNIVERSELLE

Name given since 1878 to the group of countries which have agreed to apply uniform rules for the reciprocal exchange of items of correspondence. These rules are adjusted periodically by congresses at which all the member countries are represented.

Universal Postal Union

The official language of the Union is French and its accounting unit is the gold franc.

URGENT

Not to be delayed.

Urgent

Refers to the very first class of postal items.

USAGE COURANT

Refers to the set of stamps on permanent sale by the postal administration for the normal stamping of correspondence within a framework of charges: the opposite of commemorative stamps, with or without surcharge, which have only a limited period of sale.

Definitive

USÉ

Unflattering synonym for cancelled.

Used (literally worn)

V

VAGUEMESTRE

Person not belonging to the postal administration who is qualified to carry out postal operations for the members of the group he is serving.

Postal orderly

VALEUR COTÉE

Former name for declared value on registration.

Quoted value

VALEUR DÉCLARÉE

Synonym for registration Chargement - see this latter word.

Declared value

VALIDITÉ

The duration of validity of a stamp is the period during which it retains its fiduciary value: almost all French stamps retain it to date.

Validity

VARIATION

Involuntary random change without inherent consequence for the whole impression, that occurs during the production of stamps.

Variety

The term Variete Accidentelle [Accidental variety] is often used.

VARIÉTÉ

Variation of a stamp which occurs on every stamp although the official design of the stamp has not changed.

Variety

Varieties can be due to a random element of manufacture: plate, paper, perforation, etc.

VERSO (INSCRIPTION AU)

Inscription on the reverse of a stamp: these are generally private control marks.

Underprint

VIGNETTE

Sticky label carrying a design. The authorities give the name of vignette to their postage stamps.

Vignette

VIROLE

Flat detachable metal plate carrying the engraving for certain stamps printed by heliogravure or copper-plate in France since 1966.

Ring die

VOIE DE MER

Refers to the supplementary postal charge applied to certain long distance items since 1886.

Sea route

W

WAGON-POSTE

Railway carriage reserved exclusively for the travelling postal service and forming part of a regular train.

Mail van

X

XYLOGRAPHIE

Xylography

Engraving on wood: has often been used for making the original dies.

Y

Nothing to record.

Z

ZEMSTVOS

Zemstvos

Special type of local official Russian post (and items such as stamps resulting from it), carrying mail from and to localities possessing no Imperial postal organization.

ENGLISH-FRENCH INDEX

Certain English cross-references have been included in this index although they do not appear in the text.

Abuse of franking
Administrative circular
Advice of delivery
Aerogram
Aerophilately
Air mail
Automation
Automobile post
Auxiliary office

Bistre
Black room
Blank
Blanket
Blind persons
Block
Bogus stamp
Border zone
Boule de Moulins
Box
Boxman
Braille letter
Bristol
Bulk posting
Burelage
By hand (delivered)

Cachet
Cancellation
Cancellation by favour
Cash on delivery
Catapult mail
Category
Censorship
Centring
Chalk paper
Charity stamp
Choice
Cinderella
Cinderella philately
Circulars
Classic

A

Abus de franchise
Circulaire administrative
Avis de reception
Aérogramme
Aérophilatélie
Aérienne (Poste)
Automation
Automobile (poste)
Auxiliaire (Bureau)

B

Bistre
Cabinet Noir
Flan
Blanchet
Cecogramme
Bloc
Simili-timbre
Limitrophe (Rayon)
Boule de Moulins
BP (Boite Postale)
Boitier
Cecogramme
Bristol
Affranchissement en numéraire
Burelage
À la main; Main (lettre à la)

C

Cachet
Oblitération
Oblitération de complaisance
Remboursement; Recouvrement
Catapulté (courrier)
Categorie
Censure
Centrage
Couché (papier)
Bienfaisance (timbre de)
Choix
Fantaisie (timbre de)
Erinnophilie
Papier d'affaire
Classique

Cliche
Coil
Coining press
Collection
Colour
Comb perforation
Commemorative Complimentary
Compound stamping
Consignment
Control mark
Copper-plate
Correspondence
Counter-signature
Course of instruction
Crash cover
Cursive
Cylinder

Cliché
Roulette
Balancier monétaire
Levée
Couleur
Peigne (dentelure au)
Commémoratif
Complaisance
Composé (affranchissement)
Expédition
Contrôl (marque de); Marque de contrôl
Taille-douce
Correspondance
Contreseing
Cours d'instruction
Accidente
Cursive
Cylindre

Daguin
Date
Date stamp
Dated corner
Dater
Dead letter
Declared value
Decree
Definitive
Demonetised stamps
Depot
Destruction
Die
Direct stamping
Disinfection
Dispatch
Distribution
Distribution docket
Distribution office
Double postage
Double strike
Dry printing

D

Daguin
Millésime
Date (cachet à); Timbre à date
Coin date
Dateur
Rebut
Valeur déclarée
Décret
Usage courant
Démonitisé (timbres); Annulation
Entrepôt
Destruction
Coin; Poinçon
Timbrage sur commande
Purification
Dépêche
Distribution
Distribution (fiche de)
Distribution (Bureau de)
Affranchissement double
Double frappe
Sec (Impressionà)

Electoral leaflets
Electric eye markings
Electrotype plate
Electrotyping
Embossing
Emergency cancellation

E

Electoreaux (imprimés)
Repère électronique
Galvano
Galvanoplastie
Foulage
Annulation de fortune

Emergency postage
Engraving Entire Envelope
Error
Escort
Essay
Exchange office
Expertising
Express
Extra box
Extra charge

Affranchissement de fortune
Gravure
Entier; Entière (pièce)
Enveloppe
Erreur
Convoyeur
Essai
Echange (bureau d')
Expertise
Exprés
Boîte Supplémentaire
Déboursé

Face value
Facsimile
Financial services
First day
Fiscal
Flag
Flat plate printing
Floating post office
Fluorescence
Foreign office
Forgery
Forme
Forwarded
Forwarding
Forwarding envelope
Forwarding order
Franking
Franking machine
Franking privilege
Free balloon
Fugitive ink

F

Faciale
Fac-similé
Services financiers
Premier jour
Fiscal
Flamme
Flat (Impression à)
Flottant (bureau)
Fluorescence
Etranger (Bureau a 1')
Faux
Forme
Acheminé
Réexpédition
Réexpédition (enveloppe de)
Réexpédition (ordre de)
Affranchissement
Machine à affranchir
Franchise
Ballon libre
Fugitive (encre)

General Postal Union
Gold franc
Good for a pull
Greetings card
Gum

G

Union Générale des Postes
Franc-or
Bon à tirer
Carte de Visite
Gomme

Half-tone
Hand (letter by)
Hand stamp
Harrow perforation
Head office
Head Post Office

H

Simili
Main (lettre a Ia)
Manuelle (oblitération)
Herse (dentelure à la)
Principale (recette)
Central (Bureau)

High-seas letter
Highly expendable
Horse post

Pleine mer (lettre de)
Grande consommation (C.G.)
Poste aux chevaux

Identity booklet
Imperforate
Impression
Index
Indexing
Inking roller
Inland post
Insufficient postage
International post
International reply coupon (IRC)
Issue

I
Livret d'identité
Non dentelé; ND
Impression
Indice
Indexation
Toucheur
Intérieur (service)
Affranchissement insuffisant
International (service)
Coupon Réponse International (C.R.I.)
Emission

Japan paper
Join

J
Japon (papier)
Raccord

Killer

K
Killer

Label
Last printing date
Law
Legend letter
Letter card
Letter post
Letters and post cards
Limitrophe (radius)
Line engraving
Line perforation
Lithography
Little post
Live animals
Local origin
Local post
Locals
Luminescence

L
Etiquette
Supression (date de)
Loi
Légende
Pli
Carte-lettre
Poste aux lettres
L.C. (Lettres et cartes postales)
Limitrophe (rayon)
Taille-douce
Linéaire (dentelure)
Lithographie
Petite poste
Animaux vivants
Origine locale
Locale (poste); Petit poste
Locaux (timbres)
Luminescence

Machine cancellation magazine
Mail van
Main Post Office
Make ready

M
Oblitération mécanique
Périodique
Wagon-poste
Plein exercice (recette de); Mixte bureau
Mise en train

Manned balloon
Margin
Marginal cross
Marginal inscriptions
Maritime post
Matrix
Maximaphilately
Maximum card
Mechanisation
Meter stamping
Messenger
Meter postage
Metz Butterfly
Military franking
Military post
Military Post Office
Miniature sheet
Minimum rate
Ministerial decree
Mint
Mixed office
Mixed stamping
Mobile Box
Mobile office
Mobile Post Office
Modern
Money services
Money order
Money stamp

Ballon monté
Marge
Croix de repère
Inscriptions marginales
Maritime (poste)
Matrice
Maximaphilie
Maximum (carte)
Mécanisation
Mécanique (affranchissement)
Courrier
Affranchissement mécanique
Papillon de Metz
Franchise militaire
Militaire (poste)
B.F.M.
Feuillet
Minimum de perception
Décision ministérielle
Neuf
Mixte (bureau)
Mixte (affranchissement)
Boîte Mobile
Mobile (bureau)
Annexe mobile
Moderne
Articles d'argent
Mandat
Timbre-monnaie

Naval post
Naval Post Office
New issue
New Year's Day cancellation
Newspapers
Not urgent
Number

N
Navale (poste)
Naval (bureau)
Nouveauté
Jour de l'An (oblitération de)
Journaux
Non urgent
Numéro

Occupation stamp
Off centre
Offset
Office
Official guide of the PTT
Official service
Onion skin
Other articles
Out of bag
Overlaying

O
Occupation (timbre d')
Décentré
Offset
Recette
Guide officiel des PTT
Officiel (Service)
Pelure
AO (Autres Objets)
Hors-sac
Découpage

P.O. Box
 Packet post
 Paid to destination
 Paid to frontier
 Pair
 Pane
 Paper
 Paquebot
 Para-obliteration
 Parcel post
 Parcel Post Advice of Delivery form
 Part
 Passage office
 PD
 Pelure
 Pennon
 Perfin
 Perforation
 Perforation gauge
 Periodical
 PF
 Phantom stamp
 Philately
 Phosphorescence
 Photogravure
 Photolithography
 Pigeongram
 Plate
 Plate proof
 Pneumatic
 Port of call envelopes
 Port office
 Post
 Post code
 Post free
 Post Office
 Post Office Abroad
 Post Office Box
 Post restante
 Post Telegraphs & Telecommunications
 Postage
 Postage due
 Postage on account
 Postage due
 Postage due stamp
 Postage Paid
 Postal agency
 Postal fiscal
 Postal identity card

P

SP (Boite Postale)
 Paquet-poste
 PD
 PP
 Paire
 Panneau
 Papier
 Paquebot
 Paraoblitération
 Colis Postaux
 Bulletin de Colis Postaux
 Part
 Passe (bureau de)
 PD
 Pelure
 Flamme
 Perforation
 Dentelure; Piquage
 Odontomètre
 Périodique
 PF
 Fantaisie (timbre de); Simili-timbre
 Philatélie
 Phosphorescence
 Héliogravure; Photogravure
 Héliolithographie
 Pigeongramme
 Planche
 Fleur de planche
 pneumatique
 Escalier (pli d')
 Port (bureau de)
 Poste
 Code postal
 Dispense de timbrage; Franchise
 Bureau de Poste
 Etranger (Bureau à l')
 Boîte Postale ; BP
 Post restante
 PTT
 Affranchissement; Port
 Timbre-taxe; Chiffre taxe
 Affranchissement en compte
 Port dû; Taxe; Taxe simple
 Timbre-taxe
 Port Payé; (PP)
 Agence postale
 Fiscpostal
 Carte d'identité postale

Postal monopoly
 Postal order
 Postal orderly
 Postal representative
 Postal sector
 Postal stationery
 Postcard
 Postman
 Postman receiver
 Postman's stamp
 Postmark
 Postmark collecting
 Posts & Telecommunications Regulations
 Precancel
 Price
 Printed matter
 Printed on both sides
 Private control mark
 Progressive proofs
 Proof
 Publicity stamp
 Pull

Monopole postal
 Bon de Poste
 Vaguemestre
 Correspondant postal
 Secteur postal; (SP)
 Entier
 Carte postale
 Facteur
 Facteur receveur; Facteur boîtier
 Facteur (cachet de)
 Marque postale; Obliteration
 Marcophilie
 Code de Postes et Telecommunications
 Préoblitération
 Cote
 Imprimé
 recto-verso
 Contrôle privé (marque de)
 Passe (feuille de)
 Epreuve
 Publicitimbre
 Tirage

Quoted value

Q

Valeur cotée

Railway post
 Railway Post Office
 Rarity
 Rarity index
 Rates
 Receipt
 Receipt of delivery
 Receiver
 Receiving office
 Recess printing
 Reduced rates
 Registration
 Regulations
 Relief printing
 Repair (or restoration)
 Repairing (paper)
 Repayment
 Re-perforating
 Replacement
 Reply card
 Reply paid correspondence
 Reprint
 Retouch

R

Ferroviaire (poste)
 Gare (Bureau de)
 Rareté
 Indice
 Tarif a
 Récépisse
 Avis de réception
 Boîtier
 Direction (Bureau de)
 Taille-douce
 Tarifs réduits
 Chargement; Recommandation
 Régime
 Relief (Impression en)
 Réparation (or restauration)
 Replaquage
 Détaxe
 Repiquage
 Remphaçant
 Carte réponse
 Réponse (correspondance)
 Réimpression
 Retouche

Return
 Revenue
 Ring die
 Roll
 Rotary
 Rouletting
 Routing
 Rural automobile post
 Rural origin

Retour
 Fiscal Virole
 Roulette
 Rotative
 Percé en ligne
 Acheminement; Routage
 Rurale (poste automobile)
 Origine Rurale

Sample
 Screen
 Sea route
 Seal
 Security background
 Security endorsement
 Security paper
 Semaphore office
 Semi-modern
 Semi-official
 Series
 Service
 Sheet
 Shell
 Shipboard agent
 Simple tax
 Sketch
 Small parcel
 Sorting
 Sorting Office
 Special collection
 Specialty
 Specimen
 Squared
 Stamp
 Stamp booklet
 Stamp carrier
 Stamping to order
 Star
 State
 Station office
 Stereotypes
 Strike stamps
 Study collection
 Sub-Post Office
 Sub-type
 Surcharge
 Surface mail

S
 Echantillon
 Trame
 Voi de mer
 Cachet de Fermature
 Fond de sûreté
 Contrôl privé (marque de)
 Sécurité (papier de)
 Sémaphorique (Bureau)
 Semi-moderne
 Semi officiel
 Série
 Service
 Feuille
 Coquille
 Agent embarqué
 Taxe simple
 Maquette
 Petit coils
 Tri
 Tri (centre de)
 Exceptionnelle (levée)
 Spécialité
 Spécimen
 quadrillé
 Timbre
 Carnet
 Porte timbre
 Timbrage sur commande
 Etoile
 Etat
 Gare (bureau de)
 Stéréotypes
 Greve (timbre de)
 Etude (Collection d')
 Annexe (Bureau); Simple (Recette)
 Sous-type
 Surtaxe; Surcharge
 Surface (poste de)

Tarifs
Tax
Telecommunications
Telegram
Telegraph office
Telephone
Telephone ticket
Temporary cancellation
Tête-bêche
Thematics
Thematic collection
Thinning
Training school stamp
Transfer
Transfer roller
Travelling Post Office
Twinned Offices
Type
Typography

U.P.U. Congress
Underprint
Unissued
Universal Postal Union
Unmanned balloon
Urgent
Used

Validity
Variety
Vignette

Wants list
Watermark
Watermark detector
Withdrawal date
Wrapper

Xylography

Zemstvos
Zone

T Tarifs
PCV
Télécommunications
Télegramme
Télégraphique (Bureau)
Téléphone
Téléphone (bulletin de)
Oblitération temporaire
Tête-bêche
Constructive (philatelie)
Thématique (collection)
Aminci; Pelurage
Fictif (timbre)
Report
Molette de transfert
Ambulant
Jumelés (Bureau)
Type
Typographie

U
Congres de l'U.P.U.
Verso (inscription au)
Non émis
Union Postale Universelle
Ballon libre
Urgent
Usé

V
Validité
Variation; Variété
Vignette

W
Mancoliste
Filigrane
Filigranoscope
Retrait (date de)
Bande

X
Xylographie

Y

Z
Zemstvos
Rayon

H. Fraenkel

Chronological Table of German Philatelic Periodicals 1863-1893

[Chronologische Tabelle der Deutschen Philatelistischen Zeitschriften 1863-1893]

H. Fraenkel, Berlin, Germany, 1894, n.pp. [8pp. + 1p. corrections.]

According to Carl Beck two different editions are known but he does not give any details:

See Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, February 1922, Volume 2, Issue 1, p.2.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

1981. Revised and transcribed onto computer, March 2009

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE OF GERMAN PHILATELIC PERIODICALS 1863-1893

Heinrich Fränkel was the Librarian of the Berlin Philatelic Club.

The following tables were produced in response to the problems that arise in the administration of a large library. The example used was the Library Companion of J. K. Tiffany, which dealt with the periodical literature of the United States in a similar way, but I have tried to go into more detail without affecting the clarity.

The advantages of the system are immediately obvious: once the catalogue is complete it will need continuation but no further interpolation. By and large I hope I have attained completeness, particularly for the period to the end of 1891, for which the distinguished bibliography of Provincial Court Counsellor Suppantshitsch is available. This was used, with its author's kind consent, as my principal source. A journal discovered by Dr. Diena (No. 4 of Deutsche Brfm. Ztg. of November 1894) has been added, and I have included Nos. 32, 56 & 64 since, in contrast to my distinguished predecessor, I look on these as independent supplements and journals. Some of my details are different (for Nos. 36, 76): these differences are based on fresh information. Use of the tabular form meant certain details had to be excluded: these (double numbers, defective designations, etc.) will be found in the bibliography quoted. The material for the years 1892 and 1893 was collected by myself.

Included, are all German journals concerned with philately either exclusively or to the extent of placing this hobby on the same level as its other interests, and also the journals which are only German to a (considerable) extent. If the German language came in later (No. 107), or was given up later (No. 102), the journal is still entered in full. Advertising sheets cannot really be called literature, but can still hardly be excluded, since many of them do have a certain amount of text, or have been given some later (Nos. 26, 37, 41, 45). All independent supplements, i.e. those which can be distinguished from the main journal, are entered separately. If the page numbers are continuous, the issue is not assumed to be separate. If an originally independent journal has a non-independent supplement, this is indicated in Column 10. Not included are the periodic price lists issued by various dealers, such as The Philatelic Market by Adrien Champion, the Monthly Report by Jacobs of Goslar, etc., which only contain the things these dealers have on offer. However, if such a paper includes a list of new issues or other general information, it naturally had to be included (Nos. 15, 22, 48, 79), along with a series of swap sheets designed for mutual offers and wants. Also not included are the annual reports of societies or other irregular communications, e.g. the membership records of the Mitteldeutschen Philatelisten-Verbandes (Mid-German Philatelists' Union). Nos. 32, 56 and 101 are issued as journals and are included on that account.

The headings to the individual columns give exact particulars of their contents. Column 6 gives the number of years of publication designated as such by the publisher. Column 7 notes the number of issues that actually appeared but with deviations in the numerical order (column 9) of Nos. 11 & 13. Double issues are reckoned as two numbers. The volume numbers and years are distinguished by the typeface used (Roman) from the numbers within the volume (cursive).

The following thirty-eight periodicals were still in existence at the end of the year 1893:-

Nos. 18, 38, 45, 62, 63, 66, 67, 69, 73, 74, 77, 80, 82, 87, 89, 93, 94, 95, 96, 102, 103, 108, 111, 116, 117, 118, 121, 125, 126, 130, 132, 133, 138, 139, 143, 144, 145, 146.

Another two: Nos. 41, 76 were continuing as non-independent supplements.

I wish to express my sincerest thanks to the gentlemen who have supported me with information and material, particularly Provincial Court Counsellor Suppantschitsch of Graz.

At the same time, I would ask all publishers of German periodicals, particularly all respectable societies, to let me have the first and last numbers of future annual issues, or at least a short communication which could be inserted into the tables. It would then be possible to update the tables yearly, or at longer intervals.

As the number of people likely to take an interest in a work of this kind is unfortunately very small, I shall not issue my little undertaking via the book trade. It can thus only be obtained directly from me.

H. Fraenkel

TABLE HEADINGS

1. Number
2. Title
3. Name and location of publisher
4. First issue
5. Last issue
6. Actual final issue - volume
7. Actual final issue - issue
8. Volume runs from : to : in - issues
9. Numbering
10. Remarks

REMARKS (Column 10)

The remarks are numbered in accordance with the number of the journal to which they refer.

2. Continued by No. 3
3. Continuation of No. 2

4. Autographically printed. Only the numbers from 15.11.64. available. German, French, English, Italian, Spanish.
13. (Note in Column 9): New every year since '85. Only individual numbers as follows since '87.
(Note in Column 10): Years 1885 to 1890 are numbered XXVII - XXXII instead of XV - XX No. 34 (III) is numbered 33
15. No years given.
17. Autographically printed.
18. Supplements: No. 24, 42, 67, 93, 117
21. (Note in column 8): Since 1885, irregular
(Note in column 9): 1880-84 new annually, since 1885 1-49.
23. No years given
24. Supplement to No. 18, (III, IV)
27. No. 11, supplement to No. 35
29. (Note in column 9): New annually
30. Supplement to No. 21, IV
36. Supplement to No. 28, II, 15
38. The joint publications of the International Philatelic Union in Dresden, its sections and several other societies. No. 1-24 (1-9, 1-15) 15.7.91. to 15.12.92 were not an independent journal but part of the Philatelist. Supplements No. 64, 124.
40. (Note in column 9): Then new annually.
(Note in column 10): Not a philatelic journal since 1 Oct. 1890 (III, 13) but still appears.
41. Continuation of No. 27/37 - not separate since 1888. Supplement to No. 73 (I, II), since 1889 to No. 89
42. Supplement to No. 18 (VIII, 2, 4)
43. Year II was started with No. 1 (1/1 and 15/7)
44. 7-12 not separate. Supplement to No. 41, II, III
45. (Note in column 9): New annually since then to 90 (XII) 8 then 125, 126.
49. Two No. 1. Continued by No. 63. No. 1-31 autographically printed.
54. (Note in column 9): New every year. 88 No. 11, 89, No. 12, 90 No. 12 all in 2 parts.
55. (Note in column 9): 1-20 and exhibition number: then new every year.
57. Autographically printed.
62. Partly hectographed, partly autographically printed.
64. Supplement to No. 38
65. Autographically printed 67. Supplement to No. 18
69. (Note in column 8): irregular
(Note in column 9): only 1886-89 dated. No. 1-61 since 1890.
73. Supplement: No. 41
76. Separate from July 1892: not separate (with continuous page numbering) since 1893. Supplement to No. 125.
81. (Note in column 9) Specimen No. 2-12
82. (Note in column 9): Specimen No. 1 each year.
84. Autographically printed
85. Hectographed
89. Supplement: No. 41
91. Autographically printed
93. (Note in column 8) 12 numbers in 3 years = 1 volume
(Note in column 9) All new every 3 years. (Note in column 10) Supplement to No. 18
100. Autographically printed

- 101. Autographically printed. Supplement to No. 100
- 103. German, French. French only from III 8/9 (25.9.93) Hectographed
- 104. Autographically printed.
- 108. (Note in column 9): 1 (specimen) - 7
(Note in column 10): 1. 2 Italian, 3-6 German, French, 7 French only
- 110. Hectographed
- 112. Supplements: No. 113, 114
- 113. Supplement to No. 112
- 114. Supplement to No. 112
- 116. German, English, French
- 117. Supplement to No. 18. Undated; year not given.
- 119. (Note in column 9): 93 (II) 1-6 then not numbered. (Note in column 10): Supplement to II . 2. 4.
- 121. Autographically printed since No. 5. Supplements: No. 122, 127
- 122. Supplement to No. 121.
- 124. (Note in column 8) Unconstrained issue.
(Note in column 10) Supplement to No. 38.
- 125. Supplement: No. 76
- 127. Supplement to No. 121, undated.
- 128. Not certain whether I, 1, 2 was ever published.
- 131. Hectographed
- 133. Autographically printed
- 143. 1, 2 hectographed
- 145. (Note in column 9) Specimen No.

CORRECTIONS

(To be made before use)

1. Corrections in the Foreword.

Abs	=	Paragraph
Zeille	=	Line
In	=	Becomes
In der Tabelle	=	In the tables
No.	=	Journal number (Column 1)
Spalte	=	Column
In	=	Becomes
Jährlich neu	=	new annually
Nach	=	After
Die augaben zu ...	=	The details of Nos. 121 & 127 are not definitely reliable.

2. For Insertion

Foreword: Paragraph 2, line 1 after No. 45: 54

At No. 38 in column 5: 15. 12

At No. 40 in column 10 The prospectus of June 1880 contains some announcements but is not really a specimen issue

At No. 60 in column 10 continued in no. 61

At No. 61 in column 10 continuation of no. 60

At No. 76 in column 7: 71
At No. 119 in column 10: behind "zu": I, 5, 9
At No. 144 in column 10: No. 1 (Nov. 92) was current price list
At No. 146 in column 2 Der Vogtlandische Philatelist from no. 3.

Rotterdam – Philatelist, published by J. T. Vijftigschild, Rotterdam, No. 1 of 30.9.91. - no. 6 of 1.3.93. No. 6 was not received, as it is entirely in Dutch: from No. 5 onwards even the list of new items is in Dutch only. This paper would belong after No. 127.

Phil. Anzeiger (C. Knabe in Erfurt) seems to have appeared in 1892. So far nothing else has been discovered about this journal.

3. To be Crossed Out

Foreword paragraph 2 line 7: 76
At No. 76 in Column 8: II (89) je
At No. 144 in Column 9: I

INDEX

by

Brian J. Birch

The following is an alphabetical index of the titles of the periodicals. Articles (e.g. Die, Der, etc.) are omitted when they are the first word of the title and are ignored for alphabetisation purposes except where they occur within the title.

Alphabetisation has been carried out using the word-by-word convention such that the first word of an index entry determines the entry's position in the index. In the case of entries beginning with the same word(s), then the second, third etc. word determines the relative positions of the entries. In addition, abbreviations stand as words in their own right and hyphenated words are treated as two separate words.

Title	No.
A. Moschkau's Magazin	12
Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung	3
Allgemeiner Anzeiger zum Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journal	24
Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger	13
Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger zum Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal	42
Amateur	88
Annoncenbeilage zum Philatelist	64
Anzeiger zur Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	30
Austria-Philatelist	146
Bayerischen Philatelisten-Vereins	55
Bazar	81
Bazar für Briefmarkensammler	9
Beiträge zur Postwertzeichenkunde	93
Berliner Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	28
Berliner Illustrierte Philatelisten-Zeitung	28
Berliner Philatelisten - Clubs	77
Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel	2
Braunschweiger Briefmarken-Sammler	102
Briefmarken-Anzeiger	7, 10
Briefmarken-Börse	115, 140
Briefmarken-Club Merkur	104
Briefmarken-Sammler	95, 98
Briefmarken Freund	51
Briefmarken Handler	33
Briefmarken Sammler	4, 6
Bukarester Philatelist	60
Correspondenz Seyfried	129
Deutsche Briefmarken-Post	138
Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung	11, 13, 96
Deutsche Briefmarken Sammler	5, 8

Deutsche Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	53
Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung	28
Dresdener Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal	13
Echo der Postwertzeichenkunde	128
Erdball	37
Ernst Hayn's Illustriertes Offertenblatt	79
Fliegende Blätter für Deutsche Philatelisten	57
Fortuna	83
Frankfurter Briefmarken-Anzeiger	107
Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung Universum	45
General-Anzeiger für Philatelie	54
Germania	52
Globus	50, 100, 119
Hamburger Briefmarken-Zeitung	29
Hayn's Illustriertes Offertenblatt	79
Heitmann's Ratgeber	120
Helvetische Philatelie	144
Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	74
Illustrierte Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung	45
Illustrierter Briefmarken-Anzeiger	47
Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal	18
Inseraten - Beiblatt zum Suddentsches Illustriertes Briefmarken - Journal	113
Internationale Briefmarken-Journal	82
Internationale Briefmarken-Zeitung	20, 82
Internationale Markenbörse	31
Internationale Post	109
Internationalen Postwertzeichenhandler Vereins	69
Internationaler Briefmarken-Anzeiger	70, 135, 142
Internationaler Briefmarken-Börse (see corrections)	145
Internationaler Philatelisten-Freund	46
Internationales Briefmarken-Offertenblatt	118
Internationales Offertenblatt für Philatelie	78
Kosmos	110
Magazin für Briefmarkensammler	1
Merkur	26
Mitteldeutsche Philatelistenzeitung	125
Mittheilungen des Briefmarkensammler-Vereins Mosel	132
Mittheilungen des Oesterreichischen Philatelisten-Club	63
Mittheilungen aus dem Philatelisten-Schüler-Verein Bruchsal	106
Mittheilungen des Schweizer Philatelisten-Vereins	58
Mittheilungen des Tauschvereinigung für Postwertzeichen	94
Mittheilungen des Wiener Philatelisten-Clubs	49
Mittheilungen des Württembergischen Philatelisten-Vereins Stuttgart	130

Monatliche Mittheilungen des Vereins der Freunde der Briefmarkenkunde zu Lübeck	62
Moniteur du Collectionneur	103
Nachrichten aus dem Briefmarken-Club Merkur	104
Neue Philatelistische Blätter	35
Neueste Privat-Post-Nachrichten	76
Oesterreichische Correspondenz	129
Oesterreichische Philatelisten-Zeitung	86
Oesterreichischen Philatelisten-Club	63
Offertenblatt für Briefmarkensammler	67, 114
Oldenburger Briefmarken-Freunde	84
Orientalische Philatelist	68
Philatelia	75, 97
Philatelia Humoristica	124
Philatelist	16, 38, 61, 65
Philatelist (?) Anzeiger (see corrections)
Philatelist Oriental	137
Philatelisten-Schüler-Verein Bruchsal	106
Philatelistenzeitung	99
Philatelistische Berichte	15, 48
Philatelistische Blätter	19, 71
Philatelistische Börse	36
Philatelistische Jugendschrift	121
Philatelistische Monatsberichte	22
Philatelistische Presse	72
Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier	66
Philatelistischer Verkehr	27
Posta Universale	108
Poste Universelle	108
Postwertzeichen	73
Postwertzeichen-Kunde	89
Regelmässiger Wochen-and Marktberichte der Hamburger, Lübecker and Bremer Briefmarkenbörse	17
Romania Philatelica	141
Rotterdam-Philatelist (see corrections)
Rowland Hill	43
Sammler Vereins-Mittheilungen des Philatelisten-Schüler-Vereins in Bruchsal	91
Sammler	40, 91
San Marino Philatelist	116
Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal	80
Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung	34
Schweizer Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	34
Schweizer Philatelisten-Vereins	58
Schweizerische Briefmarken-Zeitung	20

Schweizerischen Philatelisten-Vereins Zurich	59
Senf's Briefe	123
Senf's Monatsschrift für Postwertzeichenkunde	90
Sigmund Friedl's Philatelistische Berichte	48
Sitzungsberichte des Internationalen Postwertzeichenhandler-Vereins in Berlin	69
Süd. Amerika	126
Süddeutsches Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal	112
Tausch-Offertenblatt	122
Tauschblatt für Briefmarken-Sammler	101
Tauschvereinigung für Postwertzeichen	94
Tauschverkehr	44
Union	25, 85, 139
Universum	45, 136
Verbands-Mittheilungen des Vogtländischen Philatelisten-Verbandes	143
Vereinigte Erdball and Merkur	41
Vereins-Mittheilungen des Bayerischen Philatelisten-Vereins in München	55
Vereins-Mittheilungen des Berliner Philatelisten-Clubs	77
Vereinsberichte der Vereinigung Oldenburger Briefmarken-Freunde	84
Vereinsbörse	133
Vereinsbote	117, 127, 131
Vereinsmittheilungen des Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins in Dresden, seiner Sectionen and mehrerer anderer Vereine (see Column 10)	38
Vereinsmittheilungen des Schweizerischen Philatelisten-Vereins Zürich	59
Vereinsmittheilungen des Vereins Braunschweiger Briefmarken-Sammler	102
Vereinsnachrichten des Vereins Schlesischer Briefmarkensammler	23
Vertrauliche Mittheilungen	14, 32, 56
Vertrauliches Korrespondenzblatt	111
Vogtlandische Philatelist (see corrections)	146
Vogtlandischen Philatelisten-Verbandes	143
Wegweiser für Sammler	87
Weltphilatelist	92
Weltpost	21
Wiener Briefmarken - Journal	105, 134
Wiener Briefmarken - Zeitung	39
Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung	21
Wiener Philatelisten Clubs	49
Wochen- und Marktberichte Briefmarkenbörse	17
Württembergischen Philatelisten-Vereins Stuttgart	130

END

Max Ton

Handbook of German Philatelic Literature

[Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur]

Second edition, Verlag "Die Post", Kehl (Baden), Germany, 1924, 72pp.

(Although it is evidently incomplete - to Senf, Gebrüder only - it is believed to be all that was published as it was serialised in Die Post.)

{The folder includes a copy letter to the publisher by L. A. J. B[aker] of Harris Publications, London, asking about its price and availability. Given to me by Jim Negus who received it from Tom Morgan.}

(Translation of the Introduction and Abbreviations only, pp.3-5)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
1981. Revised and transcribed onto computer, July 2009

HANDBOOK OF GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

INTRODUCTION

Contents

The Handbook of German Philatelic Literature appears herewith in the 2nd completely revised and expanded edition. It includes as far as possible all publications on postage stamps and postal history of any technical interest that appeared from 1863 to 1923. German translations of foreign papers are distinguished by a mark. Mere society reports, special publications, dealers' price lists, auction catalogues, society rules and reports of general meetings are always left out for lack of technical content. Light literature is included in exceptional cases where it has a philatelic content.

Bibliography

The material is divided into:-

- A Books
- B Periodicals

To simplify finding, it should be noted that:-

1. Books are listed under the surname of their author: if there are several authors, under the surname of the first. If there is no surname, under the subject title.
2. Periodicals under the main word of their title.
3. Printed matter from societies, exhibitions, etc. under the firm, or the location of the society or exhibition.

Examples: Berlin Philatelists' Club under: Berlin
 Catalogue of the International Postage Stamp Exhibition in Regensburg under: Regensburg

Extent and Period of Issue

The scope of independent works is noted as far as possible. Supplements are particularly noted.

The date of publication is always taken from the publication itself. If not given, this is noted by O. J.
[Translator: meaning without date]

An alphabetic arrangement is principally used: except that several editions of the same work are arranged in sequence of publication.

References

Careful references to the work of individual states and authors have been given both in the main text and in a specially appended list to increase the usefulness of the handbook, especially as regards the rapid location of titles.

Format

The format is recorded in terms of the height of the cover, as follows:-

16° up to 15 cm tall
kl. 8° up to 18.5 cm tall	[Translator: kl. = small]
8° up to 22.5 cm tall
gr. 8° up to 25 cm tall	[Translator: gr. = large]
Lex. 8° up to 30 cm tall	[Translator: Lex. = dictionary]

If the bibliographic data on size differs from these, the figure is given in round brackets.

Example of Bibliographical Data

Berlin and Leipzig: Friedrich Luckhardt (1900), XIV, 372s., 8°.

Means: the book concerned was published by the firm of Friedrich Luckhardt in 1900, its pages are numbered from I - XIV and 1 - 372. Since the height of the cover is 21½ cm, its format is 8° = octavo.

Details of the format are omitted for periodicals.

Price

Prices are given in gold Marks.

They are only quoted for a few books and periodicals, since it is well-known that anyone setting-up a philatelic collection can expect to pay prices for the individual books and periodicals well above those charged at the initial publication. In most cases we are dealing with philatelic rarities for which collectors are willing to give corresponding prices. This fact must always be borne in mind.

Max Ton

Weimar, Spring 1924

EXPLANATION OF ABBREVIATIONS

Abb	Illustration(s)
Abdr	Impression
Abt	Section
Anh	Appendix
Aufl	Edition
Ausg	Issue
Bd	Volume
Bde	Volumes
bearb	compiled, edited
bed. verm	considerably enlarged
Beil	Appendix, supplement
Bild	Portrait, likeness
Bl	Sheet, page
bzw	for example, e.g.
Dr	Print, impression
durchges	revised
Ebda	In the same place, ibid
ersch	appeared
erw	expanded
farb	coloured
fortgef	continued
Fortsetz	Continuation
geb	bound
gedr	printed
Hrsg	Editor, publisher
hrsg	edited, published, issued
Jg	Year
kart	in stiff covers
in Komm	in Progress
Leinw	Linen, cloth
Lfg	Issue, part, number
Lfgn	Issues, parts, numbers
Lithogr	Lithography
lithogr	lithographed
Ms	Manuscript
Mk	Mark [Translator: the currency]
Nachtr	Supplement, addendum
Nr	Number
o.J	no Date
o.O	no Place
o.O.u.J	no Place or Date given
Orig	Original
Portr	Portrait
Pseud	Pseudonym
R	Editor, editing (of journals)
Reg	Register
s	see

s.u.d.T	see under the Title
Selbstverl	Published by the author
Sonderabdr	Separate impression, off print
Sonderdr	Separate impression, off print
Sondert	Special title
Taf	Table
T	Part
Uebers	Translator
ubers	translated
umgearb	rewritten, revised
Umschl	Binding, cover, wrapper
Umschlagt	Bound, covered, wrapped
V	Publisher (of journals)
verb	improved
Verf	Author, writer
verf	written by
vgl	compare, cf.
verm	enlarged, augmented
vers	supplied with, supplied by
Vorw	Foreword, preface
zsgest	compiled, collected
()	details obtained from book itself
[]	details obtained from outside sources
⊖	ceased publication (of journals)

END

Rud. Krasemann

Bibliography of the Most Important Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries

[Bibliographie der Wichtigsten Spezialwerke über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder]

Sveriges Filatelist-Förening, Stockholm, Sweden, 1907, 45+iii pp.

Originally published in Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift in 1907. See Philat. Trans. 337

A second, revised edition was published serially in Der Deutsche Philatelist in 1908 and issued as a separate publication for private circulation by Der Deutsche Philatelist, Hanover, Germany, 1908. See Philat. Trans. 406

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
ca.1975. Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE MOST IMPORTANT MONOGRAPHS ON THE POSTAGE STAMPS OF INDIVIDUAL COUNTRIES

FOREWORD

In Autumn 1904, I had the idea of compiling a Bibliography of the Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries. I started from the assumption that it must be very important to serious philatelists to know of the existence of the relevant works when dealing with the postage stamps of this or any other country. On the one hand, the periodical literature had already been dealt with bibliographically several times, but on the other there was a need for a compendium giving short and succinct details of the book literature. My aim was to produce something practical and I realised from the outset that monographs would be of the greatest interest. Philatelic handbooks do include the relevant literature at present, but they practically always limit themselves to abbreviated details of title, place of publication and year of appearance.

My aim was to produce a bibliography that would enable the reader, without seeing the book, to get an idea of its external form, scope, extent, edition and age, along with all the factors that would enable him to judge whether the work would meet his needs or not. Though my work is by no means exhaustive, I do think I have covered the greater part of the monographs that have appeared. Titles for which I have not been able to get the exact bibliographical details are marked *. I have left out printers and publishers for obvious reasons.

I would like to make it clear that I did not have a large library at my disposal. To fulfil my aim I had to proceed as follows. During 1904/5 I noted down the titles of all books mentioned in reviews in the international philatelic literature, for which purpose I was able to make use of the extensive collection on this subject belonging to the Swedish Philatelic Society. Every time each title was found, it was carefully noted, so as to get it as complete as possible by repeated comparisons. The titles collected in this way formed the basis of my work. I also had good service from the Library Catalogues of the International Philatelic Union in Dresden and the Public Library in Boston as well as the contribution of Dr. Ludwig König of Kiel, to the 1905 Philatelists' Day in Regensburg. To check my material for bibliographic accuracy, improve and complete it, I then carried on an extensive correspondence for 16 months with authors, publishers, societies and philatelic friends.

At this point I must mention two people who have followed my work with great interest and given me the readiest support. They are President of the Senate Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz, and my friend Hilmer Djurling, editor of the Svensk Filatelistisk Tidskrift of Stockholm. The first gave me much information from his extensive philatelic library, corrected a large part of the titles, and often made his advice available to me. The second helped me continuously with the correspondence in spite of his own widespread commitments. I also received help in other ways from E. Plotz, Dresden; Editor Theodore Haas, Leipzig; Fred. J. Melville, London; Rector L. Harald Kjellstedt, Scranton, PA; and C. A. Howes, Boston; so that I was able to go on filling in gaps right up to the last moment. The Swedish Philatelic Society has taken over the not inconsiderable costs incurred and printed this book at its own expense.

I express my heartiest thanks to all who have helped me with advice and action. Possibly someone better qualified than myself will soon come forward to deal with the serious problem of an international philatelic bibliography: my work will then be merely a first step on the path, and is offered as such.

Rud. Krasemann

Uppsala, Autumn 1907.

N.B. Alphabetical order as in Senf's catalogue.

Abbreviations:

Abb.	illustrations
Aufl.	edition
Bde.	volume
ed. éd.	edition
gr.	large, big
ill,	illustrated, illustrations
kl.	small
lge.	large
Lex.	Lexicon
pet.	small
pl.	plates
pp.	pages
S.	pages
sm.	small
Taf.	tables
vols.	volumes

Translator's Note: Only the non-English titles and notes are included in this translation. Reference must be made to the original for English language works and all bibliographic details.

Afghanistan

Meyer, F.
"

Afghanistan, its Post and Postage Stamps.
The Post and Postage Stamps of Afghanistan. (French translation)

Egypt

Koch, G.

Egyptian Administration Stamps. Reprint from Der Philatelist 1890.

Moens, J. B. Stamps from Egypt and the Suez Ship Canal Co.

Argentina

Marco del Pont, J. Postage Stamps of the Argentine Confederation.

Moens, J. B. Postage Stamps of the Republic of Argentina and its Various Provinces.

Baden

Glasewald, A. E. Postmarks on the Stamps of Baden.

" Inventory of Baden Postmarks.

Lindenberg, C. The Postmarks of Baden. Reprint from Dtsch. Briefmarkenzeitung.

" The Postmarks of Baden using Official Sources.

" Envelopes of Baden.

Reitz von Bollheim, G.

The Postmarks of Baden. (Lecture to the Vienna Philatelists Club)

Rommel, O. Baden. (Postmarks - Kröttsch Handbook II)

Bavaria

Chelius, A. Special Collections of Bavarian Postmarks.

Friedl, S. The Postage Stamps of Bavaria.

Joris, C. & O. Sedelmayr

History & Catalogue of Postage Stamps from the Kingdom of Bavaria.

Part I History (not finished)

Part II Catalogue - only pp.105-108 printed.

Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Bavaria.

Rommel, O. Bavaria. (Postmarks - Kröttsch Handbook III)

Belgium

Lorgerie, J. Illustrated Catalogue and Price-List of all Postage, Tax, Telegraph and Parcel Stamps of Belgium.

Moens, J. B. Postage Stamps, Envelopes, Postcards, Official Postage Stamps and Revenue Stamps of Belgium from their Origins to the Present Day.

Bergdorf

Kröttsch, H. Postage Stamps from the Bergdorf Municipal Post Office.

Moens, J. B. Postage Stamps from the Duchies of Schleswig, Holstein, Lauenburg and the Town of Bergdorf.

Pfaff, C. Bergdorf Postage Stamps on the basis of Official Regulations.

Rommel, O. Postmarks from the Bergdorf Postal District. Supplement I

Supplement II (Reprint from Der Philatelist)

Supplement III (Reprint from Der Philatelist)

Brazil

Vieira, C. O. Historical Catalogue of the Postage Stamps and Entires of Brazil.

Brunswick

Berger, L. The Postmarks of the Duchy of Brunswick, with a Short Account of the Postal History of Brunswick.

Lindenberg, C. Envelopes from Brunswick.

Rommel, O. & H. Krötzsch

Brunswick. (Postage stamps)

Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Frankfurt a/M.

The Roulette of a Brunswick Stamp. (Brochure for interested parties)

Bremen

Blauhuth, B.

The Principal Characteristics of Bremen Stamps, with Particular Reference to the Hamburg Forgeries. (Reprint from Philatelist)

Girsewald, C.

Bremen Postage Stamps.

Lindenberg, C.

Envelopes from Hamburg and Bremen.

Rommel, O. & H. Krötzsch

Bremen. (Postage stamps)

Ceylon

Staehle, E.

Catalogue and Price List of Ceylon Postmarks with Marginal Notes and Explanations.

Chile

Aguirre, R. Mercado

Studies on the Philately of Chile.

Curacao

Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars

Standard Work on Postal Items of the Netherlands and its Colonies.

IV. Description of all Postcards, Postage Stamps and Envelopes from the Colony of Curacao.

Denmark

Københavns Philatelistklub

Catalogue of Danish, Icelandic & Danish West Indies Stamps and Entires.

Koefoed, O.

Danish Postage Stamps 1851-1901. A Historical Survey based on Original Documents.

Riise, O. V.

The Stamps of Denmark: A Philatelic Study. (Reprint from Postwertzeichenkunde)

Germany

Berger, H.

Illustrated Price Catalogue of Telegraph and Revenue Stamps of the Individual German States.

Dauth, H. J.

Catalogue of Old German Postmarks. (Some catalogues exist with R. Gast given as the publisher)

Erdmann, A. E.

German Private Postmarks. With illustrations of stamps and towns coats of arms.

Freudenstein, S.

Catalogue of Old German Postmarks.

Glasewald, A. E.

Catalogue and Checklist of all German Private Postage Stamps.

"

Survey of Groups of Postmarks from Individual German States and Colonies.

Glasewald, A. E., O. Sattler & Fr. Wagner

Handbook of German Private Postage Stamps. (Incomplete)

- Gobbert, F. Survey of all Official Postage Stamps from the German Union to the Creation of the German Empire.
- *Hermann, Fr. Stamps and Entires from the Old German States.
- Kalckhoff, F. Postcards from German Trust Territories and Postal Undertakings Abroad. (Corrected and extended special reprint from the Deutschen Briefm. Ztg., 1902)
- Knopf, Dr. Outline Proposal for a Catalogue of German Ship and Marine Postmarks. (Reprint from Mitteldtsch. Philatelistenztg.)
- Kohl, P. Illustrated Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of Germany, Including all those from the German Empire and German States &c.
- Kröttsch, H. Permanent Handbook of Postage Stamps.
- | | | |
|-------|--|---|
| I. | German Imperial Post | O. Rommel |
| II. | Baden | O. Rommel |
| III. | Bavaria | O. Rommel |
| IV. | Bergdorf | 1 st edn. O. Rommel |
| | | 2 nd edn. H. Kröttsch |
| V. | Brunswick | O. Rommel & H. Kröttsch |
| VI. | Bremen | O. Rommel & H. Kröttsch |
| VII. | Hamburg | O. Rommel & H. Kröttsch |
| VIII. | Hanover | H. Kröttsch |
| IX. | Lubeck | H. Kröttsch |
| X. | Mecklenburg-Schwerin | |
| | 1 st edn. | H. Kröttsch |
| | Mecklenburg-Schwerin & Mecklenburg-Strelitz | |
| | 2 nd edn. | H. Kröttsch |
| XI. | North German Postal Confederation (Including Field Post Offices 1870/71) | H. Kröttsch |
| XII. | Oldenburg | P. Ohrt |
| XIII. | Prussia | P. Ohrt |
| XIV. | (Not yet published) | |
| XV. | Schleswig-Holstein | A. Rosenkranz |
- Quarterly supplements to the Handbook of Postage Stamps.
 Volumes I, II, III, IV (1st edn.), V, Vi, Vii, Viii, IX bound in one volume.
- Kröttsch, H. Illustrated Specialised Catalogue of German Postage Stamps. (with prices from commercial catalogues, remarks on editions, reprints, etc.)
- Lindenberg, C. Envelopes from the German States, Based on Official Sources.
- | | |
|--------|---|
| 1. | Brunswick |
| 2. | Mecklenburg-Schwerin & Mecklenburg-Strelitz |
| 3. | Lubeck |
| 4. | Thurn & Taxis |
| 5/6. | North German Postal Confederation |
| 7. | Oldenburg |
| 8. | Baden |
| 9. | Hamburg & Bremen |
| 10. | Saxony |
| 11/12. | Hanover |
| 13. | Bavaria |
| 14/15. | Wurttemberg |

Prussia & German Imperial Post in preparation

- Moens, J. B. Illustrated Catalogue of Local Postage Stamps from the German Empire.
- Radenhausen, H. Catalogue of German Private Postage Stamps.
- Reinheimer, A. Catalogue of German Cancellations from 1849-1875.
- " Illustrated Priced Catalogue of German Postal Cancellations.
- Rommel, O. The German Imperial Post.
- " Special Catalogue of Postage Stamps from the German Postal Districts.
- Senf, Gebr. Illustrated Special Catalogue of German Colonial Stamps.
- Senf, Gebr. (with A. Friedemann) Temporary Stamps from Tsingtau and their Forgeries.
- Sternheim, K. Catalogue of German Private Postage Stamps.
- Verband d. S. v. Abstempelungen Survey of the Group of Postmarks from Individual German States and Colonies. See Glasewald

Alsace-Lorraine

- Kröttsch, H. The Stamps of the North German Postal Confederation and Field Post 1870/71.

Europe

- Freyse, G. Europe Price Catalogue.
- " Europe Catalogue.
- Glasewald, A. E. Price Catalogue of the Stamps of Europe.
- Kohl, P. Illustrated Catalogue of the Postage stamps of Europe.
- I. Germany
 - II. Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Netherlands
 - III. Great Britain, Gibraltar, Heligoland, Ionian Islands, Malta
 - IV. Denmark, Iceland, Russia, Finland, Poland, Sweden, Norway
 - V. Austro-Hungary, Bosnia
 - VI. Switzerland
 - VII. Italy, Italian States, San Marino, Monaco
 - VIII. Balkan States, Greece
 - IX. Spain, Portugal
- Kohl, P. Postage Stamp Catalogue 1900: Europe & European Colonies.

Finland

- Granberg, R. The Postal Stationery of Finland.
- Heksch, L. The Stamps of Finland. (Lecture to the Vienna Philatelic Club)
- Helsingfors Frimärkssamlare Förening Catalogue of Finnish Postage Stamps.
- " Catalogue of Postage Stamps from the Grand Duchy of Finland.
- Jürgens, W. Catalogue - Price List of all Stamps, Cards & Envelopes from Finland & Russia.

France & Colonies

- Ph. de B. (Bosredon)

- Monograph on Adhesive Revenue Stamps from France and the French Colonies.*
- Doé, F. French Postage Stamps.
- Frémy, E. Catalogue of Postage, Revenue Telegraph Stamps, Newspaper Stamps, Fiscal Stamps and Postal Stationery from France & French Colonies.
- Gelli et Tani Illustrated Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of France and Her Colonies.
- Hermant, P. Notes on the Provisional issue of "Bordeaux" Postage Stamps.
- Leroy, L. History of French Postage Stamps.
- Maigrot, C. & S. Farges List of Cancellations on French Postage Stamps.
- Marconnet, F. The Designs of France and Her Colonies.
- Maury, A. Descriptive catalogue of all Postage Stamps Envelopes, Wrappers, Post Cards, Telegraph Stamps & Essays from France.
- " Catalogue of Postmarks from France & Her Colonies, Handstamps, Cancellations.
- " History of French Postage Stamps, Envelopes, Wrappers, Cards, Telegraph Stamps, Essays, Postmarks and Cancellations.
- Planus, E. Catalogue of Postage & Telegraph Stamps - France & Colonies - Revenue Stamps of France.
- Schaupmeier, C. New Catalogue of Stamps from France and Her Colonies from 1849-1893.
- " New Descriptive Catalogue of Stamps and Cancellations from France and Colonies with all Varieties.
- " Price Catalogue of French Stamps and Colonies.
- Valois, H. Control Marks on French Stamps, 1849-99.
- Yvert et Tellier Catalogue of all the Stamps of France and the French Colonies.

Gibraltar

- Breimeier, W. The Postage Stamps of Gibraltar since 1889.

Greece

- Erdmann, A. The Postmarks of Greece. Philatelic Study.
- Glasewald-Stroehlin The Stamps of Greece.
- Glasewald, A. E. The Stamps of Greece.
- " The Surcharged Stamps of Greece. (Offprint from the Mitteilungen d. Oesterr. Philatelistenclubs)

Great Britain

- L'Estrange-Ewen, H. Catalogue & Price List of the Postage & Telegraph Stamps of Great Britain. (Translation by E. D. Frank)
- " Price List of the Postage Stamps, Telegraph Stamps & Cancellations of Great Britain. (Translation from English)
- Kohl, P. Illustrated Postage Stamp Catalogue: English Colonies.
- I. N. America & the West Indies
 - II. Africa
 - III. Australia including Hawaii, Samoa, Tonga

Hamburg

- Heim, E. The Postage Stamps of Hamburg. (Lecture given to the Vienna Philatelists Club)
- Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes from Hamburg & Bremen.
- Rommel, O. & H. Krötzsch
Hamburg. (Postage Stamps - Krötzsch Handbook VII)
 An extensive work on the stamps of Hamburg is in preparation under the guidance of Architect Vicenz of Hamburg.

Hanover

- Krötzsch, H. Hanover. (Postage Stamps - Krötzsch Handbook VIII)
- Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Hanover.

Heligoland

- Moens, J. B. Heligoland and its Stamps.
- Wülbern, A. The Postage Stamps of Heligoland with Particular Reference to Forgeries and Forged Cancellations, plus an Account of the Postal History of Heligoland.
- " Originals & Reprints from Heligoland. A Stamp Study.

Italy

- Diena, Ch. The Municipal Stamps of Italy.
- Kirch, R. Illustrated Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of Italy and the Former Small Italian States.

Japan

- Legrand, Dr. A. The Writing and Inscriptions on the Stamps of Japan.

Papal States

- Fabri, P. The Stamps of the Papal States.

Colombia

- Pérez, J. J. List of Postage Stamps from the United States of Colombia 1859-1880.

Crete

- Direction des Postes Crétoises
The New Postage stamps of the Island of Crete and the Models of Antique Coins. (Translated from Greek)

Lubeck

- Krötzsch, H. Lubeck. (Postage stamps - Krötzsch Handbook IX)
- Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Lubeck.
- Rommel, O. The Postage Stamps of Lubeck.
- Wilde, H. The Postage Stamps of Lubeck. (Reprint from the Illustr. Briefmarkenjournal 1889)

Luxemburg

- Moens, J. B. The Stamps of the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg.

Mauritius

Moens, J. B. The stamps of Mauritius from their Origin to the Present Day.

Mecklenburg-Schwerin-Strelitz

Kröttsch, H. Mecklenburg-Schwerin & Mecklenburg-Strelitz. (Postage Stamps - Kröttsch Handbook X)

Lindenberg, C. Envelopes from Mecklenburg-Schwerin & Strelitz.

Moens, J. B. Stamps from the Duchies of Mecklenburg-Schwerin & Strelitz.

Mexico

Marco del Pont, J. The Surcharges on the postage stamps of Mexico.

Modena

Diena, E. The Stamps of the Duchy of Modena and the Modenese Provinces and the Ducal Marches to the Present Day.

Natal

Walker, L. H. J. & J. B. Moens The Stamps of the Colony of Natal.

Naples

Moens, J. B. The Stamps of Naples & Sicily.

Netherlands

Kinschot, C. Ph. L. van

Essays and Proofs of the Netherlands.

"

Appendix to Essays and Proofs of the Netherlands.

Netherlands Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars

Standard Work on Postal Items of the Netherlands and its Colonies.

- I. Description of all Netherlands Stamps, Stamps for newspapers and Printed Matter, Stamps, Postal Orders, Letter Cards, Envelopes & Postcards.
- II. Description of all Netherland Indies Revenue Stamps, Postage Stamps, Postcards and Envelopes.
- III. Description of all Revenue Stamps, Postage Stamps & Postcards from the Colony of Surinam.
- IV. Description of all Revenue Stamps, etc. from the Colony of Curacao.

Schreuders & Co. Cancellations on the Postage Stamps of the Netherlands.

Netherlands Indies

Mijer, M. J. Description of all Dutch East Indies Revenue Stamps, Postage Stamps, Envelopes and Postcards from 1864 to the Present Day.

Netherlands Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars

Standard Work on Postal Items of the Netherlands and its Colonies.

II. Description of all Netherland Indies Revenue Stamps, Postage Stamps, Postcards and Envelopes.

North German Postal Confederation

- Kröttsch, H. The Postage Stamps of the North German Postal Confederation and Field Post, 1870/71.
- Lindenberg, C. Envelopes from the North German Postal Confederation.

Oldenburg

- Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Oldenburg.
- Ohrt, P. Oldenburg.
- " A new edition (Germania Handbook) is in preparation.

Austro-Hungary

- Eissen, Fr. & Co. Catalogue of all Austro-Hungarian Postage Stamps, Covers, Postcards, Bills of Assignment and Reply-Paid Cards.
- Fiedl, R. The Postage Stamps of Austro-Hungary.
- Joessel, A. The Postage Stamps of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy.
- Kropf, H. Cancellations on the Stamps of Austro-Hungary & Lombardy-Venetia from 1850-1858.
- " Postage Stamps of the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy, using Official Sources. (Includes Austria, Lombardy-Venetia, Hungary, Bosnia & Herzegovina)
- Lengyel, S. *Watermarks on Hungarian Postage Stamps. (Reprint from the ill. Briefmarkenztg. 1890)*
- Neulinger, E. v. Special Catalogue of all Postage & Newspaper Stamps from Austro-Hungary 1850-1888.
- Prückler, J. C. Catalogue of all Austro-Hungarian Stamps, Covers, Postcards, Bills of Exchange, Declaration Forms, Telegraph Stamps, Reply-Paid Cards, etc. appearing, up to the end of 1886.

Parma

- Moens, J. B. The Stamps of Parma, Piacenza, Modena and the Provisional Government of Romagna.

Iran

- Schüller, Fr. The Persian Post and Postage Stamps from Persia & Bokhara.

Peru

- Huart, A. Annotated Illustrated Catalogue of all Postage Stamps, Covers & Postcards Officially Issued by the Peruvian Republic.
- Lista, A. T. Peru. Investigations on the Issue of Stamps by Colonel Seminario in Tumlez in March 1895.
- Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps of Peru from their Origin to the Present Day.
- Rommel, O. Studies on the Postage Stamps of Peru.

Société Philatélique Sud-Américaine à Lima

General and Detailed Catalogue of Postage Stamps, Envelopes and Postcards Officially Issued in the Republic of Peru.

Philippines

- *Mencarini, J. Descriptive Catalogue of the Postage Stamps and Postcards of the Philippine Islands.

Prussia

- Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps of the Kingdom of Prussia.
Ohrt, P. Prussia.

Romagna

- Diena, E. The Postage Stamps of Romagna. (Including a study of reprints by J. Moens)
B.

Romania

- Klenck, A. St. Catalogue of Romanian Postage Stamps. (Fragment - a few pages only)
Magnus, Dr. The Stamps of Moldavia & Romania.
Roggenstroh, H. The stamps of Romania, Moldavia, Moldavia-Wallachia, Principality of Romania, Kingdom of Romania.

Russia

- Baggo, E. Current Postal Stationery from Russia.
Bochman, E. v. The Postage Stamps of the Russian Empire and their Cancellations.
" The Postage Stamps of the Russian Empire.
Cudowsky, D. Description of Russian Rural Postage Stamps, Covers and Wrappers.
Koprowski, S. The Rural Postage Stamps of Russia.
Krewing, I. Catalogue of Russian Rural Postage Stamps, Covers and Wrappers.
Lübkert, H. Handbook of all Postage Stamps from the Rural Posts of Russia up to 1881.
Moens, J. B. The Stamps of Russia.

Saxony

- Beschoren, P. The Postage Stamps of Saxony. (Lecture given to the Vienna Philatelists' Club).
Kloss, P. History of the Postage Stamps of the Kingdom of Saxony.
Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Saxony.
Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps of Saxony from their Origin to the Present Day.
Rommel, O. History of the Saxon 3 pfennig red Newspaper Stamp. (Reprint from the Ill. Briefmarkenzeitung)

Schleswig-Holstein

- Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps of the Duchies of Schleswig-Holstein, Lauenberg and the Town of Bergdorf.
Rosenkranz, A. The Schleswig-Holstein Post 1848-1852 and its Schilling Post.

Sweden

- Frimärksamlare-Föreningen, Stockholm Postage Stamps and Postage-due Stamps.
Lichtenstein, H. Catalogue of H. Lichtenstein's Collection of Swedish Issues.
" Catalogue of Swedish Issues.
Sveriges Filatelist-Förening

- " Price List of Swedish Issues.
 " Inventory of the Postage Stamps of Sweden.
 " Inventory of Entires.
 " Swedish Postage Stamps 1855-1905. (Souvenir of the 50th anniversary of the Swedish postage stamp)
 " The Postage Stamps of Sweden 1855-1905, Compiled from Official Sources. (Translated into German by Hilmer Djurling and Rudolf Krasemann)

Switzerland

- Girsewald, C. v. Bremen's ...?
 " Swiss Stamps from 1843-1854. (Studies in connection with the 50 year jubilee of the first Swiss postage stamps. Reprint from Postwertzeichenkunde).
Leman, E. v. Special Catalogue of Stamps and Entires from Switzerland.
 " Same, in German.
 " " A later (1894) edition
Linhard The Types of Cancellation on Swiss Stamps, 1843-1863, with Special Imprints Sometimes Applied During that Period.
Mirabaud, P. & A. de Reuterskiöld Swiss Postage Stamps 1843-1862.
 " " The German edition.
Pfenniger, O. Handbook of Swiss Postage Stamps, with details of Postal Orders. Cantonal and Swiss Postage Stamps from the Years 1850-1854.
Reuterskiöld, A de The Cantonal Stamps of Switzerland and their Forgeries.
 " The Cantonal Stamps of Switzerland and their Forgeries.

Sicily

- Moens, J. B. The Stamps of Naples & Sicily.

Scandinavia

- Bosredon, M. Price List of Scandinavian and Icelandic Postage Stamps.
In de Bétou, G. Nordic Postage Stamps, Including Swedish, Norwegian, Danish & Icelandic Stamps and Entires.

Spain & Colonies

- Circulo Filatélico Matritense Catalogue of the Stamps of Spain, Cuba, Puerto Rico, the Philippines and Fernando Po.
Duro, A. F. Brief Historical Description of the Postage Stamps of Spain.
Friederich, R. The Stamps of Spain and Her Colonies Based Mainly on Spanish Sources.
 I The Postage Stamps of Spain
 " Second edition, two parts in one volume
 I The Postage Stamps of Spain
 II The Postage Stamps of the Spanish Colonies
Lopez, L. Descriptive Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of Spain and Her Colonies. (Subsequent editions were published in the Galvez catalogue)

- Moens, J. B. History of the Postage Stamps and all Prepayment Stamps Used in Spain, followed by a History of Revenue Stamps from their Origins to the Present Day.
- Thebussem, Dr. Description of some Postal Maps of Spain.

Surinam

Nederlandsche Vereeniging van Postzegelverzamelaars

Standard Work on the Postage Stamps of the Netherlands and its Colonies.

- III. Description of all Revenue Stamps, Postage Stamps and Postcards from the Colony of Surinam.

Thurn & Taxis

- Glasewald, A. E. Cancellations on the Stamps of the Thurn and Taxis Postal District.
- Lindenberg, C. Envelopes from Thurn and Taxis.
- Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps and Envelopes from the Office of Thurn and Taxis, North and South German States from their Origin to their Suppression (1847-1867).

Tuscany

- Moens, J. B. The Stamps and Envelopes from the States of Tuscany and San Marino, followed by the Postage Stamps of the Papal States by Pio Fabri.

Tsingtau

- (Friedemann) The Provisional Stamps of Tsingtao and their Forgeries.

Turkey Including Orient

- Adjémian, C. L. Short Study on the Stamps of Turkey.
- Antoniades, J. F. Descriptive Catalogue of Oriental Stamps (German & French) with all Prices.
- Hissard et Cie. Current Prices of all Oriental Postage Stamps, 1890-91.
- " Complete Illustrated Catalogue and Current Price List of all of the Postage Stamps and Entireties of Turkey.
- Hruby, R. Catalogue of all Turkish, Eastern Rumelian, Bulgarian and Russian Stamps, Cards and Covers from the Levant, with Prices.
- " Catalogue of Oriental Postage Stamps.
- Marcus, M. H. Catalogue and Price List of Oriental Stamps.
- Meyer, F. Catalogue of Stamps from the Ottoman Empire.
- Mongerie, F. Crescent-Toughra (Armorial Bearings from the Ottoman Empire).

Yaremdji et Tchakidji

Illustrated General Catalogue and Current Price List of the Stamps of Turkey, the Foreign Offices of the Levant in Turkey and all other Countries of the Orient. (The first edition was published in about 1885 by the long-established firm of Maison Tchakidji & Co. The title and number of pages varies considerably from the first to the thirtieth edition.

Uruguay

Wonner, Dr. The Stamps of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay.

United States of America

Coster, C. H. The Private Posts of the United States of America. (2 volumes)

I. Adhesive Stamps

II. Stamped Envelopes.

Kloss, P. United States of America, List of Covers and Wrappers.

Lesley, J. American Local Stamps.

Tiffany, J. K. The Stamps of the United States of America, from their Origin to the Present Day.

Wurttemberg

Lindenberg, C. The Envelopes of Wurttemberg.

Moens, J. B. The Postage Stamps of Wurttemberg from their Origin to the Present Day.

END

W. Grallert & W. Gruschke

Lexicon of Philately

[Lexikon der Philatelie]

Werner Hornemann, Bonn, Germany, 1971, 486pp.

(Translation of the Foreword, Abbreviations, Directions for use, odd pages of interest to me and the Appendix; pp.1-10, 234, (see below) & 472-486)

p.107	Durchlochung
p.116	Einlochung
p.147	Firmenlochung;	Firmenumschrift
p.300	Poliziedienstmark;	POL-Lochung

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
Revised and transcribed onto computer, May 2013

LEXICON OF PHILATELY

FOREWORD

Since the appearance of the first postage stamps in the previous century, these little paper documents have found friends and collectors throughout the world. Philately, the study and collection of stamps and other postal records and documents, has gained many new adherents. One reason for this is that philatelic collectors items are vivid illustrations of periods and cultures.

Hence there appeared to be a real need to produce a reference work which would be a reliable guide to philatelic activities for the numerous amateur collectors of postage stamps and other philatelic documents. For this reason the publishers have decided to publish the present Lexicon.

In collecting the keywords, the publisher, authors and referees worked on the basis of treating the individual branches of philately in the light of their present meaning and probable future development. Hence such topics as entires and cancellations are defined in the Lexicon.

In several ways, the authors have tried to be more systematic than has been common hitherto in the philatelic literature. The illustrations have been carefully chosen so as to make clear to the user of the Lexicon the multiple meanings of many of the keywords used. For this reason the use of a single scale has been deliberately avoided, and the relationship to the size of the original chosen so as to reveal the essential features of the item concerned. However, in spite of all efforts, illustrations have had to be used whose fidelity to the original cannot be guaranteed.

The editor hopes that with this lexicon he has succeeded in making a contribution to the development of philately, in its establishment as a science, and its promotion as a relaxing hobby.

The publisher will gladly receive comments and suggestions for improvement.

Authors & Publisher
April 1971

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS

Abb.	Illustrations, Illustrated
Abk.	Abbreviation
allg.	general
Aufdr.	Impression
-aufdr.	- impression
Aufl.	Edition
-aufl.	- edition
Ausg.	Issue
-ausg.	- issue
ausschl.	exclusive
Bd., Bde.	Volume, Volumes
BDF	Local headquarters of German post
BRD	German Federal Republic
bes.	special, specially, particular
betr.	concerning, with reference to
Bez., -bez.	Name, designation
bzw.	or, respectively
CSSR	Czechoslovak Democratic Republic
DDR	German Democratic Republic
desgl.	similar, likewise, and so on desh.	therefore, hence
dgl.	of such a kind, and the like
d.h.	i.e.
d.i.	that is
D.P.	German post of the DDR
dt.	German
durchst.	rouletted
ehem.	former, past, late
eigtl.	true, real, proper
einschl.	including, inclusive
entspr.	corresponding europ.	European
geb.	born
gebr.	used
gegr.	founded
gem.	according to
geschn.	cut, trimmed
-est.	stamped, franked, postmarked
gez.	perforated
ggf.	in case, if necessary, in a given case
Gr	Groschen, smallest Austrian coin
k.	hour(s)

i.all.	in general, as a rule
i.d.R.	as a rule, generally
i.e.S.	in the narrow sense, strictly speaking
i.G. (z.)	in contrast (to) insbes.	especially
insges.	on the whole, in total
internat.	international
i.w.s.	in the wider sense, broadly speaking
Jh.	Century
Konigr.	Kingdom
Kop.	Kopek, smallest Russian coin
Ke.	Kreuzer
lfd.	current, continuous, consecutive, running
Md.	Milliard, billion, million million
Mitgl.	Member
mk	Mark, (coin)
MFF	Ministry of Posts & Telecommunications of the DDR
nat.	national
Neugr.	New groschen
Nr.	Number
o.a.	or similar
od.	or
Pf.	Pfennig (coin)
Philat.	Philatelic
postfr.	mint
RSFSR	Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic
Rucks.	Reverse, other side
rucks.	on the reverse, on the other side
s.	see
s.a.	see also
senkr.	vertical, upright, perpendicular
Sgr.	Silver groschen (coin)
S.O.	See above
SOS.	So-called, what is called
SR	Socialist Republic
S.U.	See below
svw.	as good as, as much as
Tab.	Table(s)
u.	and
u.a.	and others, amongst others
u.a.	and so on, similarly, and the like
UdSSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
ungebr.	unused
ungest.	unstamped, unfranked, uncanceled
ungez.	imperforate
urspr.	originally
usw.	and so on, and so forth, etc.
U.U.	sometimes, in some circumstances
versch.	different, various
verst.	died, deceased

vgl.	cf., compared with
Vorders.	Front, Obverse, Recto
vorders.	on the front, obverse, recto
VR	People's Republic
weager.	horizontal
wz.	watermark
z.B.	for example, e.g.
z.T.	in part, partly, partially
Z.Z.	At the time, At present
Ztg.	Newspaper, Journal
Ztschr.	Periodical, Journal, Magazine
Zuschl.	Extra charge, Increase, Surcharge
-zuschl.	extra, plus, as well
zw.	between

POSTAL ABBREVIATIONS FOR PLACE NAMES

Altm.	Altmark
Anh.	Anhalt (Saxony)
Bay.	Bavaria
Erzgeb.	Erzgebirge
Meckl.	Mecklenburg
NL.	Niederlaustitz
OL.	Oberlaustitz
Oldbg.	Oldenburg
Pr.	Prussia
Prign.	Prignitz
Rhl.	Rhineland
Sachs.	Saxony
Thur.	Thuringia
Thuringerw.	Thuringerwald
Vogtl.	Votland
Westf.	Westphalia
Wurt.	Württemberg
b.	at, near, on
Bz.	District

DIRECTIONS FOR USE

The keywords are arranged in strict alphabetical order from the first to the last letter, even when a keyword consists of a number of separate words.

The umlauts (ä, ö, ü or ae, oe, ue) are treated as the vowel a, o, u; words not given under C may be found under R or Z, and vice versa, according to the pronunciation.

Synonyms for keywords will be given directly after them (separated by a comma) in italic (sloping) lettering.

Italics are also used for the subject classification of the article, and spaced type for emphasis.

In the text, keywords are always abbreviated to their capital letters. All endings in -isch and -lich are also abbreviated, as are those in -l. Further abbreviations can be seen from the list of abbreviations. The customary symbols for the currencies of the various countries are also used. Cross-references are indicated by the arrow (→) and refer to the keyword or place under which a particular subject is treated. The arrow sign is also used to refer to keywords which are important for grasping relationships or which will give further information. Inessential details are omitted from some illustrations (e.g. of entires or cancellation marks) so as to leave the essential features more prominent.

ENTRIES FROM THE LEXICON

p.107

Dorchlochung (Perforated Cancellation)

1) Method often used in earlier times to cancel stamps by means of a perforating tool with a round or shaped hole: frequently used for telegraphic or fiscal cancellations (e.g. telegraphic cancellations in Spain from 1870 - round hole; Russia 1889 - 1913, for stamps with a high face value on documents to go with parcels for abroad - round hole - or small letters for fees for post office boxes: Argentina. 1892 - 1930, in accounting for newspaper postage - star, round hole, CVT, INUTILIZADO, or fees for post office boxes – CANCELADA); also as mass cancellations for sheets or parts of sheets.

2) Protective perforations (precancels) on official stamps to prevent unauthorized or outside use (e.g. Uruguay from 1901, where every administrative authority had its own symbol).

3) Security perforations, to prevent the illegal removal of stamps (with a high face value from blocks of sheets for collecting purposes (e.g. Scotland, 1921/23). A perforation that does not (also) serve as a cancellation is referred to as an Einlochung (Perfin).

Illustrations

Perforation

- a) Argentina, from about 1895, perforation for calculating charges
- b) Danzig 1920, security cancellation (with cork stamp as well).

p.116

Einlochung (Perfin)

Perforation on-postage stamp not having the function of a cancellation (see Durchlochung).

Postal use - Almost always to change the type of stamp (e.g. perforated E on Bavarian stamps converts them into official stamps for the railway authorities: OFFICIAL perforated into stamps from Luxemburg converts them into official stamps); also perforation of stamps used as specimen (e.g. Russia/USSR up to 1925, ОБРАЗЕЦ - specimen, Chile 1873 SPECIMEN on samples of entires). Also see POL perforation, which is classed as an official perforation, since it was used by state (police) undertakings. In 1921/24, Hungary perforated the two middle strips of the sheets of stamps of certain values with a triangular arrangement of three small holes, to prevent speculative purchases of certain values by stamp dealers. Privately applied perfin are also known as Firmenlochung (Firms' perfin)

Illustrations

- a) OFFICIAL (for official stamps) on a Luxemburg stamp of 1899;
- b) SPECIMEN on an unissued 2 centavos entire from Chile, 1873.

p.147

Firmenlochung (Firms' perfin)

Perfin of letters or symbols on stamps, used by large firms, etc. generally to prevent unauthorized use of the stamps for private mail and avoid discrepancies in the postage account. Firms' perfin are not a very common subject for a specialised collection, they are usually poorly regarded and worth little (on German inflation stamps however firms' perfin indicate special forced uses of the stamps concerned). Firms' perfin were still used occasionally in the German Democratic Republic up to about 1950 (e.g. CZ = Carl Zeiss, Jena Ltd). A special case is represented by POL perforations.

Illustrations

Firms' perforations a) and b) on U.S.A. stamps c) Italian (verso view in all cases)

Firmenumschrift (Advertising rings)

Private imprint around the printed stamp: on entires (envelopes & wrappers) from Great Britain and the U.S.A.

p.300

Poliziedienstmark (Official police stamp)

Official police stamps: for stamping official police mail, indicated by security overprint (e.g. South Australia 1868/74, overprint C.P. = Commissioner of Police), or security perforation (e.g. Denmark from 1902 (perforation: Crown & STP.): stamps from German state post since 1927 (perforation: POL); German issues 1945/49 (police headquarters at Halle, Essen and Frankfurt-am-Main, perforation: POL), German Democratic Republic 1949/53 (People's Police Headquarters Halle, perforation POL); German Federal Republic since 1949 (Essen Police Headquarters to 1956, Oberhausen to 1965, perforation: POL), Special official stamps for police use have not been issued elsewhere so far.

POL-Lochung (POL - perfin)

- 1) On German stamps - a security perforation, used especially for answering letters from the public, and in information offices (official police stamps)
- 2) On Danish stamps – firms' perfin for the magazine Politiken (Politics).

Illustration

POL – perfin on the postage stamps of Germany.

p.234

Liste unerwünschter Ausgaben (List of undesirable issues)

List issued regularly by the FIP for a number of years (original title: List of Injurious, Misleading and Undesirable French Postage Stamps). The List gives stamps which should no longer be displayed or valued. Used in the first place against issues whose surcharge comes to more than 50% of their face value. The present practice of the List is however very questionable and doubtful, as it takes a negative view of special issues without surcharges from various countries (e.g. the German Democratic Republic), which are generally issued and accepted internationally: on the other hand actual speculative issues are missed out. Moreover, there is no agreement between the FIP and the individual postal authorities (or the World Postal Union) and/or the national philatelic societies as regards the inclusion of stamps in the List, and no attempt to determine national practice as regards issues, level of tax, etc. The first attempt at organized resistance to speculative issues was in Great Britain in 1894. The "Society for the Suppression of Speculative Stamps" was founded for this purpose, but had to cease operations a few years later as it was not able to influence postal authorities.

Liszt Block - Liszt Miniature Sheet

Special Hungarian miniature sheet of 1934, on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the Hungarian Philatelic Society and the associated Second National Stamp Exhibition. The edge of block is printed all over with rays.

Lithochromie - Lithochromy

- 1) Multicoloured lithograph using a number of stones corresponding to the number of colours.
- 2) in printing, 1) object produced (picture, poster etc.)

Litzenbruder

Name of the lower ranks of postal service in various German states in 19th century, e.g. in Mecklenburg-Schwerin (parcel carrier, also acting as luggage porter, messenger or porter), in Schleswig-Holstein, and in Danish and Swedish travelling post in Hamburg.

Lizitant

Bidder, highest bidder in auctions (particularly in Austria).

LK

Abbreviation for Lastkraftwagenlinien (State Motor Lorry Services) perforation on postage stamps from Bavaria, used from July 1919 to June 1920 as revenue stamps (watch out for forgeries).

L Mc L

Abbreviation for → Lady McLeod.

Lochentwertung

→ durchlochung (perforation).

Loch Hinterlegt

= hole at the rear → hinterlegen (place at rear).

Lochung

= perforation: 1) to characterize or change postal rates → einlochung (perfin) 2) as cancellation → durchlochung (perforated cancellation) or → firmenlochung (firm's perfin) (private perfin).

Lochungsfälschung

= forged perforation

Logotype

combination of letters (syllable, word) as in 1. type: often used in printing. In using logotype, large differences in size and spacing are not possible.

Lokalaufdruck

= local impression → lokaldruck (local printing)

Lokalausgabe

Local issue: postage stamps used locally within a postal territory along with the normal issue for the territory or in place of it (shortage of stamps, currency changes, political incidents, etc.) Validity can be territorially restricted or extended over the entire postal region, in some cases also sanctioned for international use. (e.g. Germany 1945/46, municipal (transitional) issue; France 1944, liberation local issue; Poland 1918/20, issues between towns, Romania 1944/45, municipal issue in Siebenburgen; Austria 1945 local issues.)

Lokaldruck

Local printing: philatelic term for provisional stamps produced locally at the instance of or with (even without) the approval of the postal authorities. Usually emergency measure (e.g. in colonial or dependent territories) to compensate for shortage of stamps until official issue is received or stamps already ordered are supplied. Are often local impressions distinguished from regular impressions usually by differences in type (e.g. British Post Office in Morocco 1898/99, "Morocco Agencies" on stamps from Gibraltar: Germany 1923 - OFD mark.)

Lokalpost

Local post: postal undertaking whose activity is limited to a territorially restricted range (town, or given extent of territory) e.g. (a) private city postal undertakings in U.S.A. (1842/94), in Germany (1861-1900), in Scandinavian countries (town posts, in places in Sweden at the present day) b) Hotel posts, in Austria and Switzerland, from hotels in the Alps to the next Post Office c) Scout post 1918 in Prague (Czechoslovakia); d) private line posts, 1891-1909 in Morocco from inland towns to the nearest port. Also includes private delivery mail in Italy (since 1928, stamped "Recapito Autorizzato", and carrier posts in the U.S.A. 1842/58.

Lokalzählung

Local perforation: locally permitted or performed perforation of stamps supplied imperforate (e.g. 1945 OPD Dresden/East Saxony Cowig Post Office, Grossrohrsorf, Klotzsche; 1945 OPD Halle/Province of Saxony, Wittenburg and Naumburg Post Office) → Postmeistertrennung (Postmaster division). Not officially approved and/or applied perforations on such stamps are known as → privatzählung (private perforation).

Longji Provisorium

Longji Provisional: temporary stamps in Cameroon under former colonial rule in 1911, produced by halving 20pf stamps with official seal applied to envelope.

Lorbeerkranz Stempel

Laurel wreath postmark: old postmark from the Altenburg district of Thurn-u-Taxis: rare single circle postmark with laurel wreath in lower half (place name in upper half).

Los

Lot: name for an item in a stamp auction, which can consist of one individual stamp (letter etc.) several pieces (set, lot, etc.), or of a collection, remainder, commercial post, philatelic literature, etc.

Losange

(French) Lozenge: rhomboid cancellation stamp.

Lösen

(Swedish) Redemption, discharge: generic inscription on Swedish postage stamps without national name 1874/77.

lot

(English) Items of mixed stamps, etc. offered in various forms for sale or at auction: amount can vary very widely: can extend from remainders (auction) to collection of fewer but more valuable stamps (e.g. exchange lot).

Lotnicza

(Polish) Air mail stamps. Generic inscription on Polish air mail stamps.

Lp

Abbreviation for → Liebhaberpreis (collectors price) in German language philatelic literature.

LPA

In Post Office terminology, abbreviation for → Leitpostamt (Head Post Office)

LR

Abbreviation for Leitregion (main region) (→ Postleitzahl-system)

LS

Abbreviation for loco sigilli (latin) = place for the seal: printed (often with ornamental border) or handwritten notation on old documents, briefs, etc. to indicate that the original carried a seal at the point marked.

APPENDIX

Translations of words used in diagrams

Echt	correct
Ungezahnt	imperforate
Falz	fold
Durchstochen	perforated (straight-edge)
Gezahnt	perforated - i.e. with zigzag edge
mif Aufdruck	with imprint

Leicht	light
Stark	strong
Kreuzstempel	Cross stamp
Rechteckstempel	rectangular stamp
Mehreckstempel	Polygonal stamp
Rhombusstempel	Rhomboid stamp
Ringstempel	Ring stamp
Halbkreisstempel	Semi circular stamp
Kreisstempel	Circular stamp
Ovalstempel	Oval stamp
bes. Stempelformen	Special forms of stamp
Punktstempel	Punched stamp
Strickstempel	Stripe stamp
Balkenstempel	Bar stamp
Wurfelstempel	Cube stamp
Rautenstempel	Lozenge stamp
Buchstabenstempel	Alphabetical stamp
Zeilenstempel	Line stamp
Poststempel	Postmark
ja	yes
mit Randlinie	with border
nein	no
stummer Stempel	blank stamp
mit Inschrift	with imprint
nur mit Nummer	number only
Nummern stempel	number stamp
Kennbuchstaben stempel	reference letter stamp
nur mit Kennbuchstaben	only with reference letter
Orts stempel	place stamp
Stempelgruppe	Stamp group
Stempelbild	Stamp diagram
Stempelbezeichnung	Stamp designation
weitere Unterbez...	other details
Besondere Stempel...	Special forms of stamp
Zackenrand...	Serrated edge stamp
Zackendranz...	Serrated ring stamp
Uhrad...	Clock wheel stamp
Muhlad...	Mill wheel stamp
Hufeisen...	Horse shoe stamp
Ortsstempel...	Locality with and without date
Nummern...	Number stamp
Balkenstemp	Bar stamp
Einbalken...	One bar stamp
Zweibalken...	Two bar stamp and so on according to number of bars
Balkengitter...	Lattice bar stamp
Balkenrhombus...	Rhombus bar stamp
Balkenkreis...	Circle bar stamp
Balkenoval...	Oval bar stamp
stummer...	blank stamp

Balkenrhombusnummern...	Rhombus bar number stamp
Balkenkreisnummern...	Circle bar number stamp
Balkenovalnummern...	Oval bar number stamp
Buchstabenstempel	Letter stamps
Buchstabenkreisstempel...	Round letter stamp (borderless round stamp)
Buchstabenhalb...	Semi-circular letter stamp
Buchstabenoval...	Oval letter stamp
(Zeilenstempel)	(Line Stamps)
Einzeil...	One line stamp (one liner)
Zweizeilen...	Two line stamp (two liner)
Dreizeilen...	Three line stamp (three liner)
Ortstempel	Place stamp
Ortsstempel mit Datum	Place stamp with date
Halbkreisstempel	Semi circular stamps
einfacher Halbkreis...	simple semi-circular offener Halbk...	open semi-circular
doppelter Halbk...	double semi-circular
Halbkreisstegstempel...	Semi circular stamp (with cross piece)
Halbkreisdoppel...	semi circular stamp with double cross piece
Segmentstempel	segment stamp

DEVELOPMENT OF EXPERT AND GUARANTEE STAMPS

Originals of expert stamps (name stamps) of different kinds.

Aa	imperforate without imprint
Ab	(straight) perforation without imprint
Ac	(zig zag) perforation without imprint
Ba	imperforate with imprint
Bb	(straight) perforation with imprint
Bc	(zig zag) perforation with imprint
O	with cancelled stamps
*	with uncanceled stamps

The word ECHT (correct) indicates the situation and alignment of the examiner's name stamp.

PARTICULAR ALIGNMENTS

- a. stamps with specimens, essays, etc. unissued stamps, proofs, trials have the examination mark in the middle of the stamp.
- b. damaged stamps have the examination mark higher (from the baseline) according to the degree of damage, but the alignment of the mark remains the same as in A and B.

The examination marks must be placed in the positions and alignments shown by all recognised examiners.

The only stamps recognised as examination stamps are those that consist of the full name and are designed to prevent subsequent copying. Rubber stamps cannot be used as examination stamps (name stamps). Stamps with monograms or badges are not acceptable as examination stamps.

Pages 473, 474 and 475 - see original.

GROUP DIAGRAM	DESIGNATION	OTHER DETAILS
Circular Stamps	sub-group	Single
		CIRCLE STAMPS
○ → simple single circle		single circle number single circle with distinguishing letter locality with date
⊙		Single circle segmented, all types: according to placement locality with date of segments: single circle, upper segment " " lower " → " " double "

- ① With solid segment:
 → single circle, solid upper segment single circle, solid lower segment single circle, solid segments
- ② → circle cum rectangle stamp with arc:
 Single circle cum locality with date rectangle with top arc
- ③ → circle cum rectangle
 with bottom arc
- ④ → single circle stamp with all types:
 segment(s) according to locality with date position:
 single circle with crossbar and upper segment
 single circle with crossbar and lower
 segment
 single circle with crossbar and double
 segment
- ⑤ with solid segments
 → single circle with crossbar & solid upper segment
 single circle with crossbar & solid lower
 segment
 single circle with crossbar & solid double segment
- Single circle bridge stamp with bridge
 according to placement:
 Single circle, top
 bridge
 Single circle, bottom
 bridge
 → Single circle, double bridge
- ⑥

	Bridge with shading: Single circle top shaded bridge Single circle lower shaded bridge → Single circle double- shaded bridge	locality with date
	With solid bridge: single circle top solid bridge single circle bottom solid bridge → single circle solid double bridge	locality with date
	Single circle crosslined bridge	locality with date
	Single zig-zag circle	locality with & without date
	Single hoop circle	locality with & without date
	Line and dot stamp	locality with & without date
	Single circle arc stamp	locality with & without date

→ simple double circle stamp

- blind stamp
- double circle number stamp
- double circle reference letter stamp
- locality with date

→ double circle stamp with crossbar

All types
locality with date

→ double circle shaded stamp with crossbar

Segmented double circle with crossbar according to placing of segments:
→ double circle stamp with top segment & crossbar, double circle stamp with bottom segment & crossbar,
double circle stamp with double segment & crossbar

Double circle bridge stamp according to placement of bridge:
double circle stamp with top bridge,
double circle stamp with bottom bridge,
→ double circle stamp with double bridge

→ Double zig-zag circle locality

Double hoop circle
→ Double outer hoop circle
Double inner hoop circle

locality with date

→ Double circle arc

locality with date

→ Double circle sector stamp

number stamp

Triple circle stamp

blind stamp
number stamp

Four circle stamp

blind stamp
number stamp

Five circle stamp and so on according to the number of circles

blind stamp

cross line stamp

blind stamp

broken cross line stamp

blind stamp

cross bar stamp

blind stamp

 hooked cross line stamp blind stamp

 cross angle stamp blind stamp

Page 480 - see original

gestreckter Sech...	flattened hexagonal
Sechseck...	Hexagon
Ortsstempel...	Place stamp with & without date
Achteckstempel	octagonal stamp
Ovalstempel	Oval stamp
einfacher...	simple oval
Zwei...	Double oval
Ovalsteg...	Oval with crossbar
Zwei...	Double oval with crossbar
Ovelsteguntersegment	Oval with crossbar & bottom
segment
Ovalpunktlin...	Oval with dotted line
Ovalstrich...	Shaded oval
Ortsstempel/Streck...	Place/district with and without date
Ortsstempel/Streckenstempel mit Datum	Place/district with date
stummer stempel	blind stamp
Ovalstricknummern...	Shaded oval number stamp

DOTTED STAMPS

See page 481 of original for diagrams.

single dotted circle	locality with & without date
double dotted circle	locality with & without date
dot and line circle	locality with & without date
dotted oval	locality with & without date
dotted double oval	locality with & without date
flat dotted rectangle	blind stamp number stamp
flat dotted hexagon	blind stamp number stamp
dotted rhombus	blind stamp number stamp
flat dotted star	blind stamp number stamp
flat dotted circle	blind stamp number stamp
flat dotted oval	blind stamp number stamp

See bottom of page 481 lozenge shaped stamps

Rautenstempel	Lozenge shaped stamps
Rautenrechteck...	Rectangular lozenge
Rautenrhombus...	Rhomboidal lozenge
Rautenkreis...	Circular lozenge
stummer Stempel	blind stamp
Rautenrechteck...	number stamp

See pages 482, 483, 484, 485 and 486.

Rechteckstempel	rectangular stamps
einfacher Rechteck...	simple rectangle (also box stamp)
geteilter Rechteck...	divided rectangle (also box stamp)
dreigeteilter Rechteck...	three part rectangle (also box stamp)
funfgeteilter Rechteck...	five part rectangle (also box stamp)
Ortsstempel mit u...	Place stamp with & without date
Ortsstempel mit Datum	Place stamp with date
Rhombusstempel	Rhomboidal stamps
einfacher Rhomb...	simple rhombus
Rhombuspunkt...	Dotted rhombus
Rhombustrick...	Shaded rhombus
Ringstempel	Ring stamp
Einringstempel	Single ring stamp
Zweiring...	Two ring stamp & so on according to number of rings
Zweiringkernstempel	Two ring bulls eye stamp
Strichstempel	Stripe stamp
Vierstrichstempel...	Four stripe stamp & so on according to number of lines
Strichachteckstempel	Octagonal stripe
Strichrhomb...	Rhomboidal stripe
Strickrei...	Circular stripe
Strichoval...	Oval stripe
Wurfelstempel	Cube stamps
Wurfeirhombusstempel	Cubed rhomboid
Wurfelkreisstempel	Cubed circle
Schriftarten	Type face
Antiqua	Antique
Antiqua, kursiv	Cursive antique
Egyptienne	Egyptian
Grotesk	Grotesque
Mediaval	Medieval
Gotisch	Gothic
Schreibschrift...	Italic (cursive)

Klappenschnitte

Flap outlines

a) and b) spitze...	pointed flap (different shapes)
c) abgerundete...	rounded flap
d) gerade Klappe...	straight flap with rounded tip

e) geschweifte	curved flap
f) stark...	sharply curved flap
g) leicht...	gently curved flap
h) stark geschweifte	sharply curved flap
i) gekerbte Klappe	indented flap
k) sawzahnartige	flap with saw-tooth top or bottom edge
l) gewolbte Klappe	curving flap
m) gerade Klappe...	straight flap with rounded corners

Page 486 - Acknowledgements for permission to reproduce illustrations.

END

Otto Raupp

Catalogue of the Philatelistischen Landesverband's Library, Berlin: Part II Journals
[Katalog der Philatelistischen Landesverbands – Bibliothek, Berlin
Teil II Zeitschriften]

Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine, Berlin, Germany, 1957, 89pp.

(Translation of the Contents, Foreword and Rules only, pp.2-3 & 89)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
Revised and transcribed onto computer, May 2013

CATALOGUE OF THE PHILATELISTISCHEN LANDESVERBAND'S LIBRARY, BERLIN: PART II JOURNALS

CONTENTS

Foreword	3
German language journals (excluding Austria and Switzerland)	4-40
Foreign language journals (alphabetically by country)
Europe	41-74
Overseas	75-88
Rules for use	89

EXPLANATION OF SYMBOLS

Every item is preceded by a running number. This should be quoted in any communication, to avoid possible mistakes.

The abbreviations mean:

dp. = doppelt	duplicate (available for exchange)
Jg. = Jahrgang	year (also issue)
kpl. = komplett	complete
Nr. = Nummer	number
Sd. = Sonderheft	special issue

FOREWORD

Since the first part Books and Pamphlets gained great approbation from philatelists, we hope that this second part Journals, covering all home and foreign publications, will also meet with their approval.

This second part also uses alphabetical arrangement for ease of reference. It is divided into only two groups 1) German language, and 2) foreign language journals. The latter group is divided by country into European and Overseas countries.

This catalogue is also available for the use of every Society affiliated to the State Union. The entire present holding of the State Union library is included, and is available to all concerned (see also the Rules for use).

Every society or individual philatelist also has the opportunity of easily filling the gaps in his library by means of the books, pamphlets and journals marked dp. = duplicate in the catalogue. Since these items are also available for exchange, the State Union also hopes to expand its own relatively extensive library in this way.

New acquisitions, supplements and amendments will be published in the L.V.-Nachrichten (State Union News). Supplements to the catalogue will only be issued when there are a large number of new entries.

Off we go!

Peruse the philatelic papers, for first rate stamp collecting capers.

State Union of Berlin Philatelic Societies, Library Department

Otto Raupp

RULES FOR USE

1. The Berlin State Union Library is free to all interested parties on production of proof of identity and clearance.
2. Items are lent for only 4 weeks at a time. Every user can take up to 3 books out at a time. Any items needed for the purposes of study and work can have their loan period extended by the Library.
3. The loan period can be extended before expiry on application, so long as no other request has been made for the item. The Library may enforce a shorter loan period if necessary.
4. If the borrower is unavoidably prevented from returning books at the correct time, he is required to notify this fact as soon as possible. Changes of address must also be communicated to the Library.
5. The borrower is required in the general interest to treat the books with care, and protect them from dirt and damage. A charge equal to the initial cost will be made for books lost or rendered unusable by damage. The loss of a book must be reported immediately.
6. A reminder will be sent at the end of the loan period, and after two unsuccessful reminders a messenger will be sent to collect. All costs involved will be charged to the borrower. Fines will be charged at a rate of 10 Pfennig per day.
7. Readers who fail to comply with the foregoing rules may be excluded from using the library either temporarily or permanently.
8. The library is located in Berlin at 63 Bundesallee, Friedenau, and is under the direction of Departmental Head Otto Raupp. It is open every Monday (including public holidays) from 17.00 to 20.00 hrs.

END

B. T. K. Smith

Table of Contents of the Journal Le Timbre Poste, Published in Brussels

by J.-B. Moens (February 1863 – December 1900)

[Table des Matières de la Revue Le Timbre-Poste Éditée a Bruxelles par J.-B. Moens (Février 1863 – Décembre 1900)]

Editions du “Philatéliste Belge”, Brussels, Belgium, 1926, 36pp.

(Translation of the Foreword and Preface only, pp.5-7)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar’s Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
Revised and transcribed onto computer, May 2013

TABLE OF CONTENTS OF THE JOURNAL LE TIMBRE POSTE,
PUBLISHED IN BRUSSELS BY J.-B. MOENS
(FEBRUARY 1863 – DECEMBER 1900)

FORWARD

The compilation of a general table of contents for the magazine Le Timbre-Poste, of Brussels (15th February 1863 - December 1900) has been undertaken by Bertram T. K. Smith, of the old and important Bath philatelic firm, later in London, of Alfred Smith and Son.

B. T. K. Smith, who combines the roles of philatelist and bibliophile, was one of the founders and vice-president of the Philatelic Literature Society of London, which during its all too short life (1898-1908) [sic] published bibliographical studies of whose extreme accuracy and usefulness there can be no doubt. The Table was compiled for the personal use of Smith, who as a writer and journalist was well aware that Le Timbre-Poste was a valuable source of information to which every conscientious writer was bound to refer.

In 1918 Smith retired from active life as a philatelist, and his rich special library, of which he has left us a valuable catalogue⁽¹⁾, was dispersed at public auction.

- (1) Priced Catalogue of the Alfred Smith Library., William Lewis & Son, The Herald Press, Bath, 1914-15, in-8°, 106pp. [Editor’s note: This was actually his father’s library.]

An enthusiast who preferred to remain anonymous bought the manuscript of the general table of contents to Le Timbre-Poste and hastened to present it to the Royal Philatelic Society of London, to be kept in the library of that society and thus made available to its members.

Since I was aware that the publication of a work of this type would be of general interest, I brought it to the attention of my good friends in the Royal Federation of Philatelic Societies of Belgium, in the hope that they might take action.

On their side, the Royal Philatelic Society not only had a copy made of Smith's manuscript and sent it to Brussels with the declaration that they would place no obstacles in the way of publication, but also expressed their entire sympathy with the project. The appearance of this work shows the great value of the material contained in Le Timbre-Poste and at the same time is a tribute to its editor in chief, the much missed Louis Hanciau, who was the soul of the magazine during its entire existence, and who was moreover made an honorary member of the Royal Philatelic Society in 1914 in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered to philately and to the Society.

The homage which Belgian philatelists thus pay to the memory of Louis Hanciau is all the more deserved since that modest author published his writings either without any signature or under that of his friend Jean-Baptiste Moens. In fact it was not till after the liquidation of the firm of Moens that L. Hanciau started to sign the articles he published in English, French and Belgian philatelic journals, at first only with the initials L. H. and then later with his full name.

This rare modesty now meets with its justified reward, and a great part of the life's work of this celebrated author now appears in its full range, thanks to Smith in the first place, and then to the Belgian philatelists who have taken the initiative over this important publication.

Rome, April 1926

Emilio Diena

PREFACE

The set of the monthly illustrated review for collectors, Le Timbre-Poste is made up of 456 issues in 38 volumes. The first year (15th February to 31st December 1863) was issued in folio. Starting from the first number of the second year, the octavo format was adopted. Later the first year was reprinted in this format, with the material collected into a single issue of 55 pages. The pages of the original edition of the first year were not numbered.

In our general table of contents, each year is denoted by a Roman numeral: the Arabic numerals denote the pages in each volume. The italic numerals following the figure I refer to the issues of the first edition, and are followed by the numerals giving the pages in the reprinted edition. Each year consists of one volume, and includes a title page and a separate contents page. The contents page for the first edition of the first year was not published at the end, contrary to what was done afterwards.

When the magazine celebrated its silver jubilee in 1887, a special issue of XXXVI pages with the pagination in Roman numerals was put out.

There was also a deluxe edition of the 38 volumes on coloured paper, the first volume being a reprint only. Le Timbre Fiscal (A journal for the collector) edited by Dr. Magnus (Dr. J. A. Legrand) started to appear in January, 1874 as a supplement to Le Timbre-Poste, though it took the form of a separate magazine. With number 50 of October, 1878, the editorship passed to L. Hanciau, though no announcement of this fact was made. Le Timbre Fiscal ceased to have a separate existence from the issue for January 1897, and was united with Le Timbre-Poste under the title Le Timbre Poste et le Timbre Fiscal. Our table of contents does not cover the fiscal section, and only lists the special articles in Le Timbre-Poste, without going into the copious detail of the various issues.

END

Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Book List Volume 1. General, Postal History and Summary; Old Germany; Germany
 [Bücherverzeichnis Band 1. Allgemeines, Postgeschichtliches und Zusammenfassendes; Altdeutschland; Deutschland]

Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg, Germany, n.d. [1979], 121pp.?

(Translation of the Contents table only, pp.[iii-iv]

This translation originally included Volume 2, which was separated out and became Philat. Trans. 396.)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
 33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
 Revised and transcribed onto computer, October 2013

BOOK LIST VOLUME 1. GENERAL, POSTAL HISTORY AND SUMMARY; OLD GERMANY; GERMANY

General, Postal History and Collected Works

Philatelic literature & General	1
Postage stamps	14
Colour	20
Airpost	21
Reprints and Forgeries	23
Personalities	24
Postal history	25
Collecting	29
Postmarks	33
Collected Works	34
Bibliography	36

German States

General & Collected Works	39
Baden	44
Bavaria	46
Grand Duchy of Berg	48
Bergedorf	49
Brunswick	51
Bremen	52
Hamburg	53
Hanover	55
Heligoland	56
Lubeck	57
Mecklenburg	59
North German Postal Confederation	60
Oldenburg	61
Prussia	63
Saxony	66

Schleswig-Holstein	67
Thurn & Taxis	69
Kingdom of Westphalia	71
Wurttemberg	72

Germany

German Empire, Allied Occupation, German Federal Republic)
West Berlin, German Democratic Republic)	86
Berlin	94
SBZ, DDR	95
Fieldpost	98
German Occupation W.W.1	100
Marienwerder	100
Upper Silesia	101
Schleswig	101
Danzig	102
Memel	103
Saar	104
Sudetenland	105
Bohemia & Moravia (Protectorate)	106
Theresienstadt	106
France (Lorient)	107
France (St. Nazaire)	107
Poland (General Government)	108
Russia (Pskov)	108
Channel Islands	109
Kurland	109
Lithuania	109
Postal Stationery	110
German Colonies	113
Air Post	116
Private Posts	118
Ship and Sea Post	119
Cancellations	121

END

Philat. Trans. 009
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 025)

Chr. Otto Muller

Aim and purpose of Literatur Nachrichten

[Zweck und Aufgabe der LN]

Literatur Nachrichten, January 1951, Volume 1, Whole number 1, pp.1-3

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
Revised and transcribed onto computer, October 2000

AIM AND PURPOSE OF LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 025.

END

Hans Deinhart

50 Years of Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern (1925 to 1974)

[50 Jahre Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern (1925 bis 1974)]

Archiv für Postgeschichte in Bayern, 1974, pp.?

(Translation of the Foreword only, pp.183-184)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

16 Redwood, Shevington, WIGAN, WN6 8DG, UK

1981, Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

50 YEARS OF ARCHIV FÜR POSTGESCHICHTE IN BAYERN

(1925 TO 1974)

Overview of

A. The Articles (with details of contents, authors and publication) essays, etc., with historical documentation (survey of sources).

B. Coloured Pictorial Supplements with relevant explanations attached.

FOREWORD

With the close of the year 1974, the magazine Archive of Postal History in Bavaria, published by the Society for the Study of Bavarian Postal History, originally in conjunction with the Munich section of the State Ministry for Posts and now in conjunction with the German Federal Post, can look back on fifty years of existence. As a rule there were two issues a year (= 1 year), and three years made up one volume, which was supplied with a contents list and indexes to places, people and subjects. Volumes 1 to 5 covered the years 1925-1939, and Volumes 8 to 14, the years 1952-1972. Conditions in the war and post-war period meant, that two issues appeared as usual in 1940, then single ones in October 1941, March 1942 and August 1943; they comprised Volume 6. The next issue did not appear until October 1949, and made up Volume 7 with the regular issues for 1950 and 1951. The following survey includes the years 1973 and 1974 as well as the earlier fourteen volumes, so as to cover the first fifty years of the magazine's appearance.

The articles printed in the various issues are broken down by subject, and given in the survey in an alphabetical sequence under appropriate keywords. To facilitate use of the index, the author's choice of subject headings has been supplemented by entering articles under additional keywords, or using a different keyword especially in cases where individual subjects were treated in detail under a more general heading, e.g. papers on local history. The author and publication details (issue number/year, page) and in some cases the authors own description (in brackets) are noted as well. A large number of the articles are illustrated in black and white.

The supplements (colour tables and pictures) to the issues are listed in Part B of this index. Initially they were produced by the printing division of the Post Office Administration, but since the war they have been printed by F. Bruckmann KG, Graphic Art Company, of Munich.

END

Mario De Sanctis

End of the road

[Fim da jornada]

Boletim da Sociedade Philatelica Paulista, August 1940, Whole number 25, n.pp.?

Translation of the introductory text only, [pp.2-4]

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK

Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

Minor editorial changes, April 2014

END OF THE ROAD

The Bulletin of the São Paulo Philatelic Society reaches the end of the road with the present issue. This is because, within a short time there is to be a merger of the two philatelic bodies in São Paulo, the Bandeirante Philatelic Society and the São Paulo Philatelic Society, in line with the wishes of São Paulo collectors.

The life of the Bulletin has not been a short one, since the 25 numbers published from 1926 to the current year of 1940 represent 15 years of activity on behalf of philately and the Society. Even though it was never possible to publish it with the desired regularity, an attempt was made to compensate for this defect by producing a journal worthy of the eminence of the Society whose organ it was. To illustrate its level of acceptance, reputation and value it is enough to mention that no fewer than 20 prizes were awarded to the Bulletin at philatelic shows, seven of them national and the rest in foreign countries.

Moreover, the contents of the current issue amount to a repository of all that was achieved by the Bulletin since it contains a subject, author, chronological and geographical index to all of the material published. This index therefore gives everything written and produced in the Bulletin of the São Paulo Philatelic Society over its 15 years of existence in the most convenient form.

Our journal is coming to an end, not because the Society is going to disappear, but because under the terms of the merger a new official organ is to appear, under a new name which has not been definitely agreed on as yet. This new philatelic journal will, without any doubt, continue the work begun by the Bulletin in providing Brazilian philatelists with a journal consistent with our progress and our culture. We are confident that this will happen.

BOLLETIM DA SOCIEDADE PHILATELICA PAULISTA
No. 25 AUGUST 1940

INDEX
OF SUBJECTS, AUTHORS, CHRONOLOGY & GEOGRAPHY for material published in Nos. 1 to 25 of the BULLETIN of the São Paulo Philatelic Society

founded by Roberto Thut

Note: The Roman numerals indicate the issue of the Bulletin, and the Arabic numerals the pages.
When one or more words are followed by two dots (:), this means that they do not form part of the actual title or sub-title, but have been inserted for the sake of clarity.
For the sake of this index, the issue for September 1930 is taken as being number XIV.

END

Fritz Gaedicke

Foreword

[Vorwort]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Whole number 62, p.1

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1978. Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2000.
Additional minor editorial changes, February 2008

FOREWORD

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

END

Philat. Trans. 013
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185)

Fritz Gaedicke

Report of the Head of Section B for the Freiburg meeting
[Bericht des leiterers der Bundesstelle B auf dem bundestag in Freiburg]
Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Whole number 62, p.2

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1978. Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

REPORT OF THE HEAD OF SECTION B FOR THE FREIBURG MEETING

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

END

Report of the Working Party on the 1972 Freiburg meeting
[Bericht des Arbeitskreis von Bundestag 1972 in Freiburg]
Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Whole number 62, pp.2-4

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1978. Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

REPORT OF THE WORKING PARTY ON THE
1972 FREIBURG MEETING

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

END

Philat. Trans. 015
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185)

Philatelic Libraries
[Philatelistische bibliotheken]
Literatur Nachrichten, 1973, Whole number 62, pp.30-31

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca. 1978, Revised and transcribed onto computer, February 2014

PHILATELIC LIBRARIES

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 185.

END

Paul S. Ulrich

Where do I Find Philatelic Information?

[Wie Finde Ich Philatelistische Informationen?]

Orientierungshilfen Volume 6; Veröffentlichungen des Instituts für Bibliothekarausbildung der Freien Universität Berlin Volume 16, Berlin Verlag, 1978, Berlin, Germany, 140pp.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
1979. Revised and transcribed onto computer, March 2014

WHERE DO I FIND PHILATELIC INFORMATION?

by

Paul S. Ulrich with assistance from Frank Heidtmann

EDITOR'S NOTE

It must be realised that the production of this translation was a mammoth task for both for the translator (Miss E. Howarth, Harold Cohen Library, University of Liverpool) and for the Editor. Owing to the size of the volume, both the translating and editing were carried out over a period of some 12 months (on a strictly amateur basis) and therefore, some variation in style can be expected throughout the book. Although it is desirable for a translation to stand alone, it was not possible to include full foreign language and translated titles in every case and recourse must be had to the original German edition for those students who require precise bibliographic details.

Brian J. Birch

May 1982

CONTENTS

The page numbers are those given at the top left hand side of this translation.

PREFACE	2
1. LIBRARY MATERIALS	3
2. THE INFORMATION SUPPLY SECTOR	5
2.1 Libraries	5
2.2 Book and Antiquarian Trade	9
2.3 Museums	11
2.4 Publishers	11
3. INFORMATION ON BOOK AND PERIODICAL HOLDINGS IN LIBRARIES
3.1 Discovering a Library's own Holdings	13
3.2 Holdings of other Libraries & their Locations	16
3.2.1 Catalogues of Foreign Libraries	16
3.2.2 Periodical Catalogues of Foreign Libraries	17

4.	AIDS TO PHILATELY	19
4.1	General Sources	19
4.1.1	General and Special Encyclopaedias, Lexica and Handbooks	19
4.1.2	Terminological Dictionaries & Guides to Abbreviations	21
4.1.3	Language Dictionaries	23
4.1.4	Details of People, Biographies	25
4.1.5	Address Books	27
4.2	Information on the Literature	28
4.2.1	Books in Print (Book Trade Bibliographies)	28
4.2.2	Philatelic Library Catalogues	30
4.2.3	Formal Bibliographies	36
4.2.3.1	Indexes to University publications	36
4.2.3.2	Information on Official Publications	37
4.2.3.3	Bibliographies of Journals	38
4.2.3.3.1	Indexes of the Titles of Journals	38
4.2.3.3.2	Bibliographies Covering Journal Articles	41
4.2.3.3.3	General Indexes to Periodicals	43
4.2.4	Bibliographies of Bibliographies	43
4.2.5	The National Bibliographies	45
4.2.6	Subject Bibliographies	47
4.2.6.1	Separately Published Subject Bibliographies	47
4.2.6.2	Not Separately Published Subject Bibliographies	52
4.2.7	Aids to the Study of Postal History	56
4.3	Appendix: References to Literature	58
4.3.1	Citations	59
4.3.2	The Form of a Reference	61
4.3.2.1	Independent Literature	62
4.3.2.2	Non-Independent Literature	64
4.3.2.3	Unpublished Material	66

PREFACE

Practically everyone concerned with the widely varying facets of philately eventually reaches the point of needing further information but not knowing how and where to obtain it. Anyone who looks for philatelic information, fairly soon discovers that national and international sources are not very plentiful. Bibliographic control of this facet has been really poor until now. Only a few people have taken the considerable trouble to develop the information know-how to solve their problems with the aid of the reference material available in large libraries.

This introduction does not cover the problems and basics of philately itself and is, therefore, not a technical introductory text, but is simply meant to give details of the literature that relates to original philatelic literature. Since bibliographical awareness is often needed in philately to deal with the abundance of "grey literature", this introduction centres on locating places that list and describe information sources, books and journal articles likely to be relevant to an in-depth study of philately, without claiming to be an exhaustive survey of all existing bibliographical sources. It also seems necessary to give an indication of the techniques for using the sources. This involves giving details about present day technical libraries, since their optimal utilization is not entirely plain and obvious to the unfamiliar client.

The following subjects are dealt with:-

What is to be found in the libraries? The first chapter covers the library material. The difference between the primary documents (the original literature) and the secondary documents (bibliographies) is explained.

The second chapter answers the question: Where can I find information? Here follows a description of the German library system and its connections with foreign libraries. Some libraries with outstanding philatelic collections are described and details are given of specialist and antiquarian booksellers, archives and publishers.

How do I find things? Chapter three answers this question. It explains how to find one's way round the average scientific library, and describes how to use the catalogues of home and foreign libraries.

What can I find? The fourth chapter explains what types of general and scientific aids are to be found in a library that will yield philatelic information. The Scientific aids include lexicons, dictionaries, address books of all kinds and biographies. The scientific aids can be divided into book-trade bibliographies, formal bibliographies (indexes to dissertations and journals) and special closed or ongoing subject bibliographies in the field of philately, and the most important publications from other disciplines that relate to philately.

This introduction was prepared at the request and with the help of the Institute for Library Science of the Berlin Free University, Hohenzollerndamm 55, 1000 Berlin 33, Berlin.

Paul S. Ulrich & Frank Heidtmann

March 1978

1. LIBRARY MATERIALS

What sort of materials are to be found in a scientific library, for example - a university library or a philatelic library? First, it should be pointed out that libraries contain printed material quite overwhelmingly and that non-book materials such as picture collections, audiovisual media and microfilms still form a relatively small proportion. It should be borne in mind that a scientific library will contain not only scientific material, but other technical material such as sources, statistics, general encyclopaedias, books of illustrations, belles lettres, etc, which are not scientific in character but can form the basis of scientific enquiries.

Primary Documents

After the division into book and non-book materials, the next distinction to be drawn is between primary and secondary documents. By primary documents, we mean original scientific or technical writings, i.e. the books, journals, etc., that form the overwhelming bulk of library material. Books can take the form of monographs (one to three authors handling a single subject), or collective works (collections of several technical articles relating to a subject, also called Readers), or comprehensive handbooks. The primary documents also include general, technical and scientific journals, then newspapers, and also what is called grey literature (i.e. publications not handled by the book trade) and finally pamphlets, such as material from firms and organizations, societies, fairs, etc. This material is often very important for anyone interested in philately, but its coverage in scientific libraries is, however, either extremely patchy or more often non-existent. There is another important sector "other books", including lexicons, dictionaries, dissertations, address books, etc.; these tend to refer to other original documentation and so can be classed as general information media to some extent.

Secondary documents

These give references to the original literature. They are catalogues which generally do not contain detailed scientific or technical texts, but refer to the primary documents, either by simply listing the bibliographical data (author, title, place and year), or else giving a short account of the contents of the original document, e.g. by annotation or short abstracts. They may appear as books (= closed or retrospective bibliographies), as journals (= current bibliographies), or as documentation cards, e.g. on index cards in a catalogue drawer. Useful adjuncts to bibliographies and documentation are indexes and abstracts.

Progress reports, frequently called Advances, Proceedings or Yearbooks, give longer summaries of the state of the art in a subject by quoting and listing the more recent literature. They refer to the original documents in their literature surveys, data and bibliographies, but give extra information as to contents.

Do scientific libraries contain only "Proper printed material"? The new reprographic methods of printing and duplication have caused this distinction to fade, and scientific libraries will naturally contain simple duplicated materials such as retorts from firms and institutes if they aim to make a comprehensive collection in any subject.

Archive materials such as scholars' papers - but not their works - are found in some scientific libraries. Most of their work appears in regular book form and their other papers (letters, etc.) are specially preserved and are usually only accessible internally.

Microforms

A small part of the printed material has been available for some time either additionally or exclusively in micro form. 16 mm and 35 mm film has won acceptance, as have microfiches, which are flat pieces of film measuring 105 x 148 mm (DIN A6). Microfiches come in various degrees of reduction. The standard microfiche contains the title in legible print and 60 pages of a book. Super and ultra fiches can contain several thousand pages. Only a little philatelic literature is available on microfiche. It may be mentioned that many dissertations, including those on philatelic and postal history subjects, can be cheaper to buy on microfilm. Microforms can be read on the corresponding reader-printer and simultaneously converted into paper copies, at a price of roughly DM 0.50 per sheet.

2. THE INFORMATION SUPPLY SECTOR

2.1 Libraries

In which libraries should the interested person search for the primary documents he needs, in which will he find an adequate selection of philatelic literature, also a good provision of scientific reference material such as bibliographies, etc.?

As regards German libraries, we can distinguish three groups in addition to the top-ranking National Library:

1. Public libraries, the community and municipal libraries catering for the general public with their wide range of interests.
2. Scientific-technical libraries, maintained from public funds.

And finally those which can be classed as

3. Private libraries in the widest sense.

National Libraries

The national library for the Federal Republic is the Deutsche Bibliothek (German Library) (4-8 Zeppelinallee, Frankfurt am Main 6) and for the German Democratic Republic, the Deutsche Bücherei in Leipzig. National libraries collect and catalogue all the literature appearing in their country, both from the book trade and - with some limitations - outside it. As a rule, national libraries also collect music and records, sometimes also audio-visual media. National libraries have the literature of a country going back over a number of years, and are not open to the general public as a rule: only when it can be shown that no other library in the country can meet a given need will use on the premises be permitted. The contents of national libraries are often listed in extensive published catalogues (see 3.2.1) supplemented by current national bibliographies that come out at intervals and cumulate into volumes at half-yearly, yearly or longer intervals. These cumulations generally have a title and keyword index which make them accessible to the subject approach (see 4.2.5), so that they are very useful for revealing the philatelic literature produced in a given country even into the remote past.

Public Libraries

Municipal libraries and their branches exist for the general public and as a rule, only have a limited amount of philatelic literature. This is exclusively in German and does not go far into the past in this type of library. Old books are removed from stock from time to time. Reference material is seldom found in municipal libraries. One exception is the Stadtbücherei München, Philatelistische Abteilung (Munich Municipal Library, Philatelic Division, Sparkassenstr. 5, 8000 Munich 2. Tel: 089 2158394). This has the largest collection of philatelic literature of any German public library. As well as the usual catalogues of books and journals, there is a selective keyword bibliography of international philatelic literature in the form of a card catalogue. This forms the basis of the Literatur Nachrichten (Literature Digest) that appears periodically. The contents of the library are partially listed in the following catalogues:

Deutschland und Deutsche Gebiete (Germany and German States), 2nd edition, Gotteswinter, Munich, 1975.

Katalog: Übersee (Overseas Catalogue), Gotteswinter, Munich, 1975.

Katalog: Frankreich (France Catalogue), Arbeitsgemeinschaft Frankreich, Munich, 1974.

The library has about 23,000 volumes of philatelic literature, takes about 500 journals currently, has some 2,000 catalogues of home and foreign stamp auctions, and about 1,000 catalogues of stamp exhibitions.

It is broadly true for foreign countries that published general bibliographies rarely include philatelic reference material.

Scientific-Technical Libraries

These include the libraries of technical schools and technical colleges. Since the Posts and Telegraphs are included in the subjects of study, there will be some representative literature, but the libraries of this type of institution will almost always lack a wide range of reference and literary material. Libraries of this type are generally for the staff and students only, and are not open to everybody.

University Libraries

They are distinguished by the possession of pretty well all general and technical reference material. There are considerable differences in the Federal Republic as regards technical literature. As well as the central University Library (Main Library) the same campus will always have a number of other smaller libraries, known as departmental, seminar or technical libraries. Important technical literature is often found in these. The same applies to Faculty Libraries, which to judge from their name might have little to do with philately. For instance, the libraries of the economics, law, history and sociology faculties may have noteworthy contents. Only a few University Libraries list the book and periodical holdings of their Faculty libraries in their catalogues. Obviously though, they must be checked along with the catalogues of the central library. However, these further stock items are usually listed only in the author catalogue (AK), and not in the subject catalogue (SK). Thus, anyone wishing to find literature on a particular subject without having authors or titles in mind, would be best to begin with the author catalogue, since they will find that the subject catalogue only lists the contents of the central library and not those of the special subject libraries within the University domain.

Translator's note: The remainder of this section is only a very rudimentary guide to the use of libraries and so is summarised.

Most University libraries publish a brief guide to all their collections. Usually open to all interested parties. A long account is given (p.18) of the inter-library loans scheme and how it works in Germany. Page 19 lists central catalogues for regions of Germany, noting that they are never quite up to date. It provides notes also on international lending schemes, pointing out they are slow and have a low success rate.

Translator's Note: Full translation from here.

Private Libraries

Private Libraries are those not open to the general public. They usually serve special needs. In philately especially, there are a number of useful Society Libraries. Many societies have their own libraries to make the most important philatelic books and journals available to their members. Usually they are reference only, i.e. the literature can be consulted on the spot, but not taken away. A few will lend items even to non-members on payment of a fee. Contact should be made direct with the library, and enquiries made as to their loan procedure. Some libraries will even send books through the post to approved people on refund of their costs. As well as the already mentioned Stadtbibliothek München Philatelistische Abteilung (Munich Municipal library, Philatelic Division) The following private libraries have noteworthy philatelic collections:

Philatelistische Bucherei Hamburg e.V. (Philatelic Library of Hamburg) Hohenfelder Strasse 10, 2000 Hamburg 76

Non-members can use this for a fee, private postal lending is also possible. The philately and postal history of all times and regions is collected. Contains about 9,000 volumes.

Postgeschichtliche und Philatelistische Bibliothek (Library of Postal History and Philately) (Privy Councillor Kalckhoff Memorial Library) Lubecker Strasse 1, 1000 Berlin 21.

It contains about 30,000 volumes.

Gesellschaft zur Erforschung der Postgeschichte in Bayern e.V. (Society for the Study of Postal History in Bavaria) Angerser strasse 60, 8000 Munich 40.

It contains about 1200 volumes on German and especially Bavarian postal undertakings of the 19th and 20th centuries, extensive picture archive. Reference library.

Fürstlich Thurn and Taxische Hofbibliothek and Zentralarchiv (Court Library and Central Archive of the Royal House of Thurn and Taxis) Emmeramsplatz 5, 8400 Regensburg.

This collects postal history before 1871 especially, and has a large collection of publications of the Royal House of Thurn and Taxis General Post Office, Frankfurt.

Further addresses of societies with their own libraries in the Federal Republic can be obtained from the Bund Deutscher Philatelisten (Federation of German Philatelists), Nene Mainzer Strasse 60, 6000 Frankfurt am Main 1.

Some Society libraries have published catalogues of their holdings. These are important sources for bibliographical data, even though complete and entirely accurate bibliographical details are often lacking. A selection of these catalogues is listed in Section 4.2.2.

Companies' Libraries

Some of the large and medium sized firms in the philatelic trade have extensive collections of philatelic literature, and sometimes older and even the oldest philatelic literature can be found here. Some such firms in the German Federal Republic are:

Richard Borek KG, Breite Strasse 25/26, 3300 Brunswick.

Lothar Krüger, International Philately, Siegfriedstrasse 4, 8014 Neubiberg.

Schwanenberger Verlag GmbH, Muthmannstrasse 4, 8000 Munich 45.

Philapress-Verlag, Maschmühlenweg 8-10, 3400 Gottingen.

It should also be mentioned that practically every large stamp dealer has his own. private library. Literature collections of this type are not as a rule accessible to all philatelists. However, contact could be made in special cases.

Library Address Books

Apart from the guides to University libraries already mentioned, there are local and regional guides from which the addresses of likely libraries can be found.

Information on German libraries can be found in:

Jahrbuch der Deutschen Bibliotheken. (Yearbook of German Libraries), published by the Society of German Librarians, Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, two yearly.

Lists all scientific libraries and a selection of municipal libraries with collections of scientific literature. Philatelic collections cannot be located from this yearbook.

Jahrbuch der Bibliotheken, Archive und Informationsstellen in der DDR. (Yearbook of Libraries Archives & Information Sources in the DDR) Leipzig: Bibliographic Institute, 2 yearly.

Verzeichnis der Spezialbibliotheken in der BRD einschliesslich Berlin – West. (Survey of Special Libraries in the Federal Republic including West Berlin) Published by the Working Party on Special Libraries, 2nd enlarged edition, published by Fritz Meyen, Brunswick: Vieweg 1970.

Lists special libraries under the headings of the Decimal Classification.

Gebhardt Walther: Spezialbestände in Deutschen Bibliotheken. (Special Collections in German Libraries) Federal Republic including West Berlin. de Gruyter, Berlin, 1977.

This very detailed survey gives some details of special collections relating to philately and postal history: they are quoted here.

The following lists philatelic collections in the German library region:

Alfred Kreuzer: Literature on philately and postal history in the Westphalian libraries. in: Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 1968, Volume 43, pp.4813-4814 & 1974, Volume 40, p.1012.

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Literature on philately and postal history in the Hannover libraries. in: Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 1969, Volume 44, pp.2245-2246.

Practically all firms, official organizations, college and university libraries in Great Britain are listed in:

ASLIB Directory. Brian J. Wilson (Editor), 2 Volumes, London: ASLIB, 1968-70.

Volume 1 Information sources in science, technology & commerce., 2nd edition, 1968.

Volume 2 Information sources in medicine, the social sciences and the humanities., 3rd edition, 1970.

Robert B. Downs: British library resources: a bibliographical guide., Chicago, IL: American Library Association, 1973.

Philatelic collections in large British libraries are listed in:

K. E. Stringer: Review of the philatelic holdings of the main libraries and museums in Great Britain, excluding London., Philatelic Literature Review, 1974 Volume 23, pp.188-190.

U.S.A. and Canada

Directory of special libraries & information centers., A guide to special libraries, research libraries, information centres, archives and data centres, maintained by government agencies, business, industry, newspapers, educational institutions, nonprofit organizations and societies in the field of science, technology ..., 3 Volumes. 3rd edition., M. L. Young, A. T. Kruzas, & H. C. Young (Editors), Detroit, MI: Gale Research Company, 1974.

An updating of this is:

New special libraries., A periodic supplement to the third edition of Directory of Special Libraries and Information Centres., 1974.

An index to the foregoing from the subject viewpoint is:

Subject directory of special libraries., M. L. Young, H. C. Young & A. T. Kruzas (Editors), Detroit, MI: Gale, 1975.

Other services are:-

Subject collections., A guide to special book collections and subject emphases as reported by university, college, public and special libraries in the United States and Canada, Lee Ash (Editor), 4th edition, New York, NY: Bowker, 1967.

Robert B. Owns [Downs?]: American Library Resources., A bibliographical guide. Chicago, IL: American Library Association, 1951. Supplements 1950-61, 1961-1970.

See also:

Federal Library Resources: A user's guide to research collections. Compiled by Mildred Benton, New York, NY: Science Associates International, 1973.

International

Internationales Bibliothekshandbuch., World guide to libraries, 4th edition, Parts 1 & 2 have appeared. Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation, 1974. (Handbook of international documentation and information, Vol. 8, parts 1 & 2). 37,000 libraries in 157 countries are listed alphabetically by country. Entry: address, size of holdings, alphabetical key to type of library, numerical key to subject range. Indexed by type of library and subject range.

International Library Directory., A world directory of libraries., London: Wales, 2 yearly.

Under Archives we have:

International Directory of Archives., International Council of Archives, Munich: Verlag Dokumentation, 1975. (Archivum, Volumes 22/23)

Over 25,000 archives all over the world are described, many of them open to the public.

Archives of all types, including private and firms' archives are described in:

Archive im Deutschsprachigen Raum. (Archives in the German Speaking World), 2nd edition, 2 Volumes, Berlin: de Gruyter, 1974, (Minerva Handbooks)

See also: The World of Learning and Yearbook of International Organizations.

2.2 Book and Antiquarian Trade

The potential buyer of philatelic literature in the Federal Republic will find that the supply lines have still to be perfected. This is possibly because stamp dealers also sell philatelic books, so that the booksellers lose a good number of their customers and do not find it worthwhile to build up their coverage on philately. Only a very few book-shops in the Federal Republic have extensive and international stocks on philately. Amongst them are:

Alfred Ihm. Philatelistischer Literaturversand, Postfach 411, 8592 Wunsiedel. His catalogue of current stock covers a wide range of literature.

The largest philatelic book dealer overall is:

HJMR Company, P.O. Box 610308, North Miami, FL 33161, USA.

Other book dealers are listed in Section 4.2.1.

The book dealers in the Federal Republic are listed in:

Adressbuch des Deutschsprachigen Buchhandels. (Directory of the German Language Book Trade), Frankfurt am Main: Buchhändler Vereinigung, two yearly.

Anschriften Deutscher Buchhandlungen. (Addresses of the German Book Trade), Marback: Schiller Bookshop, 2 yearly.

Antiquarian [Out of Print]

It is difficult to name German antiquarian booksellers who specialize in philatelic literature, and every collector of the literature has his “own” specialist. The firm of Alfred Ihm mentioned above also deals with the antiquarian philatelic literature. Other foreign antiquarians are listed in Section 4.2.1.

Antiquarian booksellers with special fields of interest for the German language are given in:

Jahrbuch den Auktionspreise für Bücher and Autographen. (Yearbook of Auction Prices for Books and Autographs). Results of auctions in Germany, Holland, Austria and Switzerland. 1st edition, Hamburg: Hauswedell, 1951-on, (previously published as the Yearbook of Book Prices since 1907).

The heading Neue Antiquariatskataloge und -Listen (New Antiquarian Catalogues and Lists) in the supplement Aus dem Antiquariat (From the Antiquarian Trade) in the Börsenblatts für den Deutschen Buchhandel (Commercial Circular for the German Book Trade), is a current guide to the lists published by antiquarian bookshops, principally German-language ones.

Antiquarian booksellers are also listed in:

Directory of Dealers in Secondhand and Antiquarian Books in the British Isles., 1973-75, 8th edition, London: Sheppard Press, 1975.

Directory of Dealers in Secondhand and Antiquarian Books on the Continent of Europe., 2nd edition, London: Sheppard Press, 1971.

Directory of Dealers in Secondhand and Antiquarian Books in Canada and the United States of America., 1972-1974, 6th edition, London: Sheppard Press, 1974.

Sometimes the magazines issued by philatelic societies give information about antiquarian philatelic literature. However, a more usual source of information is the Philatelic Literature Review. Every issue gives lists of philatelic literature available. There are often reports on the state of the antiquarian philatelic literature market as well.

It should also be noted that many auction firms occasionally have antiquarian philatelic literature on offer as well. The following firm regularly has a good deal of material on offer: Roger Koerber, 605 Northland Towers West, Southfield, MI 48075, USA.

This firm of auctioneers issues a journal, The Postilion, in which this literature is detailed, four times a year. Other auctioneers publish announcements regularly in the major philatelic journals and the relevant addresses can be obtained from them (see also Section 4.1.5. for addresses).

In conclusion, it should be noted that the following firms will undertake to locate wanted books in the USA for a small fee:

The United States Book Exchange Inc., 3335 ‘V’ St., N.E. Washington, DC 20018, USA.

Light Book Find, 1018 Madison Avenue, New York, NY, 10012, USA.

Wanted books can be obtained in the German Federal Republic - via a bookseller or antiquarian dealer - from the supplement: Börsenblatts für den Deutschen Buchhandel (Commercial Circular for the German Book Trade).

2.3 Museums

Museums can be located via:

Handbuch der Museen. (Handbook of Museums) Germany, Democratic and Federal Republics, Austria, Switzerland, Edited by Gudrun B. Kloster, 2 Volumes, Munich, Pullach: Verl. Dokumentation, 1971.

It contains 3,050 museums of all types. Entry: name and address, range of collection, indexes: place, name, keyword and personal indexes.

Museums of the World. A handbook to over 17,000 museums in 148 countries with an index of fields of collection. Compiled by Eleanore Braun, 2nd edition, Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation, 1975.

Museums all over the world, with addresses and keywords to the range of their collections. Indexes: subject, geographical & artists. An appendix gives a selection of international and national museum catalogues.

Still more detailed is:

The Directory of Museums. Edited by Kenneth Hudson and Ann Nicholls. London: Macmillan 1975. Details of 22,000 museums all over the world are given.

See also:

Museen und Sammlungen in Österreich. (Museums and Collections in Austria), Edited by Wolfgang Milan, 2 Volumes, Munich: Schroll, 1971.

Museums Directory of the United States and Canada., Washington, DC: American Association of Museums, 1961 &c.

Museums with philatelic collections can be found in the following books:

Jon L. Allen & Paul H. Silverstone: Stamp Collector's Guide to Europe. New York, NY: Arco, 1974.

Linn's World Stamp Almanac. A handbook for stamp collectors. Sidney, OH: Amos Press, 1977.

Uta Bauer (editor) Stille Museen. (Quiet Museums) Special collections, specialised museums and memorial collections in Germany (Federal Republic and West Berlin). A guide to museums, travel companion and reference book., Munich: Keyser, 1976. Particularly relevant for collections on postal history.

2.4 Publishers

Part of the philatelic literature is issued by publishers who only supply via the book and stamp trade and who send their publications to the national libraries under the law of copyright, so that they are listed in the national bibliographies. Hence, publishers' addresses are hardly necessary to get hold of literature - the publishers supply the bookshops. Occasionally however, there is a need to apply to the publishers, e.g. to get hold of prospectuses, a (free) specimen copy of a magazine, the name of a retail bookseller, or perhaps even to make contact with the authors via the publishing house concerned. Quite a lot of the philatelic literature in the Federal Republic is put out by ad hoc publishers. Issuing one's own publications is cheap and avoids bureaucracy. However, even self-publishers are subject to the law of copyright and should not fail to send a copy of their book to the German Library (4-8, Zeppelinallee, Frankfurt 6000), so that its title can be entered in the national bibliography, also two copies should go to the regional deposit libraries, where they will then be available for everyone to use. The amount of philatelic literature published by individuals or very small firms in the U.S.A. should be noted in particular.

Publishers' Addresses

Internationales Verlagsdressbuch. Publishers' international directory. 6th edition. 2 Volumes, Pullach: Verl. Dokumentation, 1974. (Handbook on International Documentation and Information, Volume 7).

More than 130,000 publishers are included. Entry: name, address, publishing interest. This work is thus principally useful for looking up the address of a publisher whose name is already known.

A similar compilation for German territory is:-

Anschriften Deutscher Verlage and Ausländischer Verlage mit Deutschen Auslieferungen. (Addresses of German publishers and Foreign Publishers with German Subsidiaries) Marbach: Schiller Book Shop. Annual.

W. Stamm: Deutsches Verlags-Register. (Register of German Publishers) Answers the question: which periodicals are issued by a publisher. 2nd edition, Essen: Stamm Verlag 1972.

Dokumentation Deutschsprachiger Verlage. (Documentation on German-Language Publishers) Edited by Curt Vinz & Günter Olzog. 6th edition Munich: Olzog, 1977. Entry: name, address, symbol, proprietor, short history of firm, line of publications, principal titles, field of interest, principal authors, journals. There thus is some possibility of drawing up a profile of the firm. Indexes: place and scope of publications, books and names.

The current guide to English language literature:

Cumulative Book Index (CBI) (see section 4.2.1) It has an up-to-date register of English and American publishers.

The addresses of all German newspapers, magazines and annual publications, and selected foreign ones, with a good deal of extra commercial information appear in:-

Stamm: Leitfaden für Presse und Werbung. (Guidelines for Press and Publicity) Details and description of periodical printers sources of publicity in Germany, with most foreign ones. Essen: Stamm Verlag, Annual.

The addresses of all types of periodical, particularly the foreign philatelic journals, can be obtained from:

Ulrich's Periodical Directory.

The U.S. journals from:

Standard Periodical Directory.

Now a short selection of publishers specializing in philately:

Richard Borek: 25/26 Breite Str., Braunschweig 3300.

Ludwig Helwig: 11 Spatzenweg, Postfach 47, Prien 8210, Switzerland.

Philapress-Verlag: 8-10 Maschmühlenweg, Göttingen 3400.

Schwaneberger Verlag GmbH: 4 Muthmannstr., 8000 Munich 45.

In England:

Robson Lowe Ltd., 50 Pall Mall, London SW1.

Harris Publications Ltd., 42 Maiden Lane, London WC2E 7LW.

Link House Publications Ltd., Link House, Dingwall Avenue, Croydon CR9 2TA.

3. INFORMATION ON BOOK & PERIODICAL HOLDINGS IN LIBRARIES

Chapter 1 went into detail about the various materials that may be present in a library.

Chapter 2 indicated how multifarious the sources in the philatelic information sector were. Chapter 3 will now give a survey of how the actual book and periodical holdings of a large library can be exploited. Basic information will be given on searching and finding in a scientific library. An earlier study has shown that even people with a scientific training frequently break off a literature search far too early for lack of information on the right way to carry out a search.

Finally, information will be given on how to use one scientific library to work out the contents of others, since the publications mentioned are useful bibliographical tools.

3.1 Discovering a library's own holdings

The actual contents of a scientific library are listed in card indexes. Few have so far gone in for VDUs linked up to a catalogue. Larger libraries often have huge cabinets with hundreds of drawers full of catalogue cards, the number of which can often exceeding the million mark in a general library.

Translator's note: See the original for the flow chart.

What do these catalogues contain? No general statement can be made in this connection, since some university library catalogues include the contents of other (Departmental) libraries within the University system, which makes it much easier to exploit the University's entire stock of literature, whereas some types of literature, e.g. dissertations and journals, are often not listed in the "Main" catalogue but in separate smaller ones. A scientific library will also have an index to periodicals outside the catalogue: furthermore, there may be lists of acquisitions or lists of recommended books in specialised fields. These are most likely to be produced by public libraries.

The Catalogue System

Scientific libraries always have two catalogues, the author and the subject catalogues:

Translator's Note: See the original for the flow chart.

Principle of arrangement differ from library to library. Usually their own system, occasionally a standard system such as decimal classification.

The alphabetical catalogue is also sometimes known as the Author or Form catalogue, the subject catalogue sometimes goes under the name of Material catalogue. The titles in the author catalogues of German scientific libraries are mostly arranged on the basis of the not altogether simple Prussian Instructions (PI), and in the foreseeable future these are likely to be replaced by the more reader-oriented Rules for Alphabetical Cataloguing (RAK)*.

* Anyone wanting more detailed information on these rules should refer to: Instructions for the Alphabetical Catalogues of Prussian Libraries., Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 1966. As an introduction there is Gerhard Rusch: Introduction to Title Arrangement., Volumes 1, 2 & 4; unaltered edition, Munich-Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation, 1972; or Hermann Fuchs: Short Instructions for Institutional Libraries., with appendix: Rules for Alphabetical Cataloguing., 2nd edition, Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 1968. Dietrich Poggendorf: Introduction to Cataloguing in Institutional Libraries., Munich: Verlag Dokumentation, 1974 (Library Practice, Volume 8), or, Charlotte

Schürfeld: Short Rules for Alphabetical Cataloguing in Insitutional Libraries., 4th edition, Bonn: Bouvier 1970 (Bonn Contributions to Library and Book Science, Volume 12), or Eric J. Hunter: Anglo-American Cataloging Rules., 1967, An Introduction., London: Bingley, 1972.

Subject catalogues can be divided into the Systematic catalogue (SyK) and Keyword catalogue (SwK) types. The SyK type groups all the monographs in a library by scientific discipline, divided more and more minutely into hierarchic sections. The SwK type classes the books by characteristics relating to their main thematic contents. There is no single set of rules valid in all cases for either type, so that there can be wide differences between individual libraries as regards carrying out a subject search. Some libraries even have both an Syk and an SwK. Not to be found in German-speaking countries is the cross-reference or dictionary catalogue. This gives the monographs in one a alphabetical sequence by author, then by title and even by a keyword. This kind of catalogue is typical of the English-speaking countries.

Alphabetical Catalogue

What does this contain, how is the flood of titles arranged in it?

In the AK of a scientific library, all the monographs it contains are listed together. Generally, dissertations and journals are listed separately in smaller catalogues. Non-monograph material, such as articles in journals or handbooks, or collected works, and so on, are listed neither in the AK nor the SK of a scientific library. Scientific libraries are still usually closed libraries, i.e. readers do not have direct access to the books, but have to take them out via a service point. However, since part of the stock will not be on closed access, but in such places as reading rooms, information centres, departmental libraries, etc., many catalogue cards will have a stamp - usually red on their upper edge -giving the actual location of the book.

These special types of literature can only be borrowed or consulted at the place mentioned.

In the AK, the documents are arranged alphabetically by their author. If there is no, or no individual, author, e.g. magazines, handbooks, lexicons, anonymous works, etc., the work then appears under its subject title in the AK. Also, if a work has more than three authors, e.g. collective authorship, or if it is a congress report or a collected work, it will be found under its subject title. If there is a personal editor as well, an entry under this name will also be found in the AK.

The catalogue card for a single volume work by one author will probably look as follows (the numbers in brackets relate to the following text, and will naturally not be found on the catalogue card):

- (1) Classification or Location number.
- (2) File words, the ones used to determine arrangement in the AK.

On author cards, the first file word will be the author's surname, and the second his christian name. If there is multiple authorship (more than three) or if the book is anonymous, then the word that determines the AK order (= first file word) according to the PI rules will be the first noun in the nominative case in the title, the next file words will be adjectives depending; on the first file word, then if necessary further nouns in the sequence of their grammatical relationship. Articles and prepositions are ignored.

Examples:

The British journal of Russian Philately - appears in the AK under: Journal British Philately Russian

France & Colonies Philatelist - appears under: Philatelist France Colonies

Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung - appears under: Briefmarken-Zeitung Deutsche

Philatelic Literature Review - appears under: Review Literature Philatelic

This inversion of the title in the AK is only found however, in the majority of German catalogues built up on the PI rules: not in English and American catalogues and bibliographies, which are filed straight forwardly by the sequence of words as given. The umlauts ä, ö and ü are converted into ae, oe and ue for the purposes of filing. An essential point of the PI scheme is that no difference is made between I and J. The journals Infinity and Journal of Photography for example, will appear in the same sequence.

The periodicals index of a scientific library is practically always in the order of the words as they are given, thus deviating from the PI rules.

- (3) Proper title of the publication, with any sub-titles or additions. After the word underlined, most publications have the author in alphabetical arrangement as well.
- (4) Edition number.
- (5) Place of publication: Publisher, Year of publication, Number of pages, Format (4°, 8° = quarto, octavo, purely indications of size, and only relevant for describing magazines).
- (6) Set or Series in which the work appears.
- (7) Details of whether a set of References is included in the work.
- (8) International Standard Book Number (ISBN), a recent innovation, useful only for book buying purposes, of no importance for library users.
- (9) Symbol of other libraries in the University system which also have this publication in stock. a list of symbols adjacent to the AK will show which branch of the University Library is meant.

The christian names are written in the standard form, i.e. not necessarily the one the author himself uses.

Single surnames are followed by double ones, e.g. Renger, Walther, is followed by Renger-Patzsch, Albert.

Anyone who is unable to find what he wants in the AK should always seek the assistance of the library staff.

Subject Catalogue

The SK of a scientific library shows practically all the monographs it holds in terms of their subjects. Non-monograph material, such as articles in journals, contributions to collective works, handbooks, conference proceedings, etc., are not listed in the SK any more than in the AK. They can be traced in subject bibliographies. A minor drawback is that the classification scheme never keeps up with changes in science and subject knowledge, so that all systems of arrangement are either out of date or rapidly become so.

The Systematic Catalogue (SyK) of a scientific library gives a finer and finer hierarchical breakdown until what is called the system place is reached. These are indicated in the catalogue by guide cards, i.e. cards with a tab. Behind each of these cards are the ones for the monographs on this particular subject, arranged chronologically so that the most recent cards are at the back. The SyK has a keyword index. This is a short card catalogue, in which the reader looks up a keyword to find at what system place a particular topic is to be found. For example, the keyword postage stamps might be found at the system place philately.

Every scientific library tends to have its own system for the subject arrangement of its holdings; it should be borne in mind that holdings can be scattered at different places throughout the system, especially when philately and postal history are not specially collected. The keyword catalogue of a scientific library appears very easy to use at a first glance, but even here there can be complications for a literature search. Thus, if no relevant literature is to be found under the obvious keyword, a search should be made under similar expressions or under other terms which might incorporate the desired subject.

3.2 Holdings of other libraries & their locations

Large libraries will have a number of printed catalogues showing the holdings of other libraries. In many cases, these cannot be used for a subject search, but only for searches by author or title. A distinction must be drawn between catalogues that give the book holdings of outside libraries, and periodical catalogues, of which there are a great many. Finally, reference may be made again to the central catalogue (See 2.1) of a scientific library. These catalogues showing the contents of other libraries can be used to locate philatelic literature that may not be held in a given library. Moreover, this type of library catalogue can be used for general bibliographical purposes, e.g. to verify and complete literature references and so forth.

3.2.1 Catalogues of foreign libraries

The large printed catalogues, sometimes running into several hundred volumes, of the national libraries will be mentioned here:

British Museum. General Catalogue of Printed Books., New edition to the end of 1955. 263 Volumes, London: The British Museum, 1960-1966; with supplements 1956-1970 in 76 Volumes, 1963-1972, further supplements to appear.

Subjects can be looked up in:

British Museum. Subject Index of Modern Books., Published since 1902 in yearly volumes and usually five-year cumulations, based on extensive keywords, containing details of several hundred relevant books under the heading Postage stamps.

The French national library publishes:

General Catalogue of Printed Books in the Bibliothèque Nationale., Authors. 197 Volumes Paris, 1897-1967. Numerous supplementary volumes. No possibility of using the subject approach. Anonymous works are not included.

The Library of Congress, which acts as a national library for the U.S.A., publishes:

The National Union Catalogue., A cumulative author list represented by Library of Congress printed cards and titles reported by other American libraries. 1. ff. Washington, DC: LOC 1956, ff. Covers additions since 1956 to a number of large libraries in the USA and Canada, includes books from all sovereign countries. The catalogue appears in various stages of cumulation.

A retrospective supplement to the National Union Catalogue is:

A Catalogue of Books Represented by Library of Congress Printed Cards. 177 Volumes, Supplement 42 Volumes, Ann Arbor, MI, 1942-1946, and later supplements to 1956.

It is planned to replace and improve on this work by including the holdings of many large American libraries in the following 600 volume work:

The National Union Catalog, Pre-1956 imprints, Volume 1 ff., London, 1968 ff.

This alphabetical index lists the commercial philatelic literature of the world - practically complete for the English-speaking world - so far as it was bought by libraries, with the correct bibliographical details.

A good aid to subject searches, containing some 500 books on the subject of philately in the present five-year cumulation is:

The Library of Congress Catalog. Books: subjects. Volume 1 ff, Washington, DC: LOC 1950 ff.

Arrangement by keywords. Yearly and five yearly cumulations as well as the initial quarterly volumes. Philately does not appear only under the heading "Postage Stamps", but under other fields of application, such as "Cancellations (philately), Covers (philately), Perforations (philately), Precancels", etc. Many of the title entries carry the dates of birth and death of the author.

There is no German library catalogue of a similar status. Thus, reference has to be made to the national bibliographies (See 4.2.5.) for formal and subject searches for German literature on philately. It should be noted that library catalogues will naturally contain predominantly the literature in the national language, along with relevant sections of the foreign language literature.

There are also numerous, usually very out-of-date catalogues of the contents of individual philatelic (private) libraries, which are especially useful for verifying the titles of non-commercial publications. They are listed in 4.2.2.

3.2.2 Periodical catalogues of foreign libraries

Practically all scientific libraries have a printed catalogue of their periodical holdings, and exchange these with other similar libraries, so that a number of local periodical indexes can be found in any one library. However, they often contain only the current periodicals, and not the obsolete titles or new Subscriptions, which will be found in the card index of the library concerned.

A general locations guide to national and foreign periodicals in German scientific libraries is in course of publication:

General Index to Journals and Serials in Libraries of the German Federal Republic Including Berlin (West). Edited and published by the Cultural Section of the Prussian State Library, Munich: Verl. Dokumentation, 1975. So far, a list has been published of titles changed between 1971 and 1974.

There is also a locations guide for foreign journals in the scientific libraries-of the German Federal Republic:

General Index to Foreign Journals and Serials, 1939-1958. (GAZS). Produced by the Cultural Section of the Prussian Sate Library. 5 Volumes, Wiesbaden: Harrassowitz, 1963-1968. There are also:

Supplements. 24 Volumes, Marburg, 1966-1974, with publications up to 1970.

Foreign newspapers and illustrated magazines in the German Federal Republic can be located in:

Locations Index to Foreign Newspapers and Illustrated Magazines in Libraries of the German Federal Republic Including Berlin (West). (SAZI). Edited by Martin Winckler: Pullach: Verl. Dokumentation, 1974.

German language periodicals and serials in scientific libraries are listed in:

General Index to German-Language Periodicals and Serials in Libraries of the German Federal Republic Including Berlin (West). (GDZS). Titles before 1971 with locations. As at December 1976. Edited and published by Cultural Section of the Prussian State Library, 2 Volumes, Munich: Verlag Dokumentation, 1977.

A very wide range of locations for German newspapers in German libraries exists in:

Gert Haelweise: Holdings of German Newspapers in Libraries and Archives., Dusseldorf: Droste, 1974. 2,018 German newspapers that appeared between 1700 and 1969, along with their locations in the Federal and Democratic Republics.

The Central Catalogue for Lower Saxony., Gottingen: State and University Library, 1975 - cumulates all the periodical holdings of Lower Saxony into one finding list. More and more of this type of comprehensive regional guide to periodical locations are likely to appear in future.

Overview:

See page 27 of the original translation for the schematic.

Periodicals from all over the world in British libraries appear in:

British Union Catalogue of Periodicals. A record of the periodicals of the word in British libraries. 4 Vols. & Supplement, London: 1955-1962.

This is continued by:

New Periodical Titles, which appears currently and in further cumulations. There is no subject index to the journals. The special volume of the big British Museum catalogue entitled Periodical Publications, also acts as a finding list for international journals and newspapers.

The Library of Congress also publishes a central catalogue of periodicals in some 100 libraries in the U.S.A. and Canada:

New Serial Titles. A union list of serials commencing publication after the 31st December 1949. 1 ff, Washington, DC: Library of Congress, 1953.

This work in progress has various stages of cumulation, e.g. New Serial Titles 1950-1970, Edited by Emery J. Koltay, 4 Volumes, Washington, DC: Library of Congress, 1974.

An important reference work is:

Subject Index to New Serial Titles 1950-1965, Ann Arbor, MI: 1968.

As well as this, there is the monthly:

New Serial Titles – Classed Subject Arrangement, This is not cumulated but is very useful for, e.g. locating newly published philatelic journals.

There are numerous other national periodical catalogues, listing the holdings of either foreign or domestic journals in the country concerned. They can be located from either the Bibliography of Bibliographies (See 4.2.4), or in a large scientific library.

It can be stated that: There is no general catalogue to either philatelic literature or its journals, and so reference must be made to various types of locations guides in carrying out a search. The large printed catalogues and indexes to periodicals in a scientific library will yield many locations for philatelic literature. These catalogues are not bibliographies and thus do not have full details, but merely show what a given library has in stock. They are useful for verifying titles as well as locations: but are less suitable for subject searches for philatelic literature. They yield no information as to the contents of the books. As for borrowing them, it has already been pointed out (See 2.1) that this may be possible via the central German inter-library loans scheme, but there can be no guarantee that the desired books will be made available this way.

4. AIDS TO PHILATELY

This chapter will deal with the information aids to philately by dividing them into two main groups:

1. General information sources. This is literature not devoted especially to the primary literature, but containing information of various types.
2. Literature sources. These are books and journals that again relate to philatelic literature, and are generally bibliographies.

4.1 General Sources

Lexica, encyclopaedias, handbooks: 4.1.1

Terminological dictionaries = small lexicons: 4.1.2

Language dictionaries: 4.1.3

Details of people, biographies: 4.1.4

Address books: 4.1.5

4.1.1 General and specialised encyclopaedias, lexicons and handbooks

There are various types of encyclopaedia. Today the name is practically synonymous with lexicon and no longer carries, as it once did, the implication of an extensive and complete description of a subject area. The English-speaking world in particular, tends to produce the concise one-volume encyclopaedia, and also uses the word dictionary for an alphabetically arranged, more or less exhaustive work, in which case dictionary is a synonym for encyclopaedia. The term we generally use for a dictionary of definitions (terminological dictionary) is a lexicon, or sometimes handbook of terms. It should also be noted that the boundaries of handbooks i.e. between general or specialised information aids drawn up on a subject basis, are extremely fluid. In philately especially these terms tend to be used very much at random, e.g. at the turn of the century the word handbook was generally used for what we would call a stamp catalogue today.

Have the larger general encyclopaedias any value for the philatelist? Naturally they will cover the subject of philately, but not in any detail. They are generally used to gain information on associated subjects, e.g. information on a country, a person or an event that the philatelist needs for in-depth studies. The descriptions given in the encyclopaedias are not usually adequate for very detailed studies. The following general encyclopaedias may be mentioned:

Brockhaus Enzyklopädie, 20 Volumes, Wiesbaden: Brockhaus, 1966-1975, Supplements.

Meyers Enzyklopädisches Lexikon, 25 Volumes, Mannheim: Bibliographisches Institut, 1971 ff, Supplements.

Colliers Encyclopaedia, 24 Volumes, New York: Collier & Macmillan, 1966, Annual supplements.

Encyclopaedia Americana, 30 Volumes, New York: American Corporation, 1966, Annual supplements.

Encyclopaedia Britannica, Micropaedia, 10 Volumes, (usual alphabetical lexicon).
Macropaedia, 20 Volumes, (general systematic lexicon) Chicago: Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1975.

To these we can add the Duden Lexicon, the Grosse Herder, the dtv-Lexicon, and other foreign general encyclopaedias. It should be noted that the Great Soviet Encyclopaedia is available in an English translation.

Large libraries generally have previous editions of the general encyclopaedias from the European countries, but only the most up-to-date is available in the reading room. The older ones can have a wealth of historical information though.

Handbooks with a philatelic content generally specialize in very restricted fields. There have been few attempts at handbooks with an encyclopaedic range:

Kohl-Briefmarken-Handbuch, Founded by Paul Kohl. 11th edition by Hans von Rudolphi, 5 Volumes, Berlin: Society of the Friends of the Kohl-Briefmarken-Handbuch, 1926-1936.

Volume 1: Afghanistan-German Reich. Volume 2: German war stamps-Funchal. Volume 3: Gaboon-Great Britain, Overseas post in Turkey. Volume 4: Great Britain, Post Offices in Morocco-Heligoland/official reprints. Volume 5: Heligoland/private reprints-Italy 1928.

In 1941 Hans von Rudolphi began to continue this work under the title Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde. 17 issues in 3 volumes were produced up to 1944. They covered:

Volume 1 (1941) Part 1: Introduction to the Handbook, Cameroons. Part 2: Cape Verde-Kyushu. Part 3: Papal States-Cape of Good Hope. Part 4: Cape of Good Hope-Confederate States of America. Part 5: Confederate States-Japan. Part 6: Japan. Part 7: Japan.

Volume 2 (1943) Part 8: Japanese overseas post-Korea-Crete. Part 9: Crete-Jaipur-Jamaica. Part 10: Jamaica-Jhalawar-Jind. Part 11: Jind-Croatia. Part 12: Kashmir-Iran. Part 13: Iran. Part 14/15: Iran: (continuation)

Volume 3 (1944) Incomplete: Part 16/17 Iran (conclusion)-Luxembourg.

In 1951, the Working Group for the New Handbook of Postage Stamp Science was founded to complete the Kohl Handbook. Since 1968, the work has been divided into two series, A for the philately of foreign countries and B for German philately. The following parts have been published:

Series A:

A1: Carlos George, Carlos Trincao & Hellmuth Kricheldorf: Macau 1884-1942. 1954

A2: Carlos George, Carlos Trincao & Hellmuth Kricheldorf: Macau 1894-1953. n.d.

A3: Hellmuth Kricheldorf & Paul Louis Pannetier: Madagascar. 1959

Series B:

B0: Hermann Wetzl: Germany: The postage stamp issues, booklet sheets and printings of 1910-21. 1968

B1: Hellmuth Kricheldorf: Introduction, Germany from 1926. 1952

B2: Hellmuth Kricheldorf & Hermann Wetzl: Germany 1927-32. n.d.

B3: Hellmuth Kricheldorf & Hermann Wetzl: Germany 1932-35. n.d.

B4: Hermann Wetzl: Germany. Stamp issues 1935-45. 1968

In 1954, part of the Kohl Handbook was issued as a reprint under the title:

Kohl-Briefmarken-Handbuch. Germany 1872-1925. Edited by Herbert Munk, and German war stamps 1914-18, re-edited by Walter Richter. Extracted from 11th edition, Frankfurt am Main: Arbeitsgemeinschaft Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, 1954.

In 1959, it was decided to go on with the work in a new form, an occasional series, not alphabetically by country. Each issue is complete for the country concerned:

Series of the New Handbook of Postage Stamp Science. Part 1 - , Frankfurt am Main: Arbeitsgemeinschaft Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, 1960 - :

(See pages 47-48 of the original for a list of these volumes.)

In the English-speaking area there is a similar work:

Billig's Philatelic Handbook. 30 Volumes. Reprint. Miami, FL: HJMR Co., 1968-70.

(A list of these volumes and their contents is given on pages 48 to 54.)

In addition to these reprints some volumes of new material were published as a Billig's Philatelic Handbook.

(A list of these four new volumes and their contents is given on pages 54 to 55.)

Moreover, the reprint of the Encyclopaedia of British Empire Postage Stamps, Volumes 1 to 4, was issued in the USA as Volumes 34-43 of Billig's Philatelic Handbook.

A very comprehensive handbook for England was published by the well-known philatelic firm of Robson Lowe:

The Encyclopaedia of British Empire Postage Stamps, 5 Volumes. London: Robson Lowe, 1948-76.

1. Great Britain and the Empire in Europe. 2nd edition, 1952
2. The Empire in Africa. 1949
3. The Empire in Asia. 1951
4. The Empire in Australia. 1952
5. British North America. 1976

The following may be mentioned in addition to these major handbooks:

James A. MacKay: Encyclopaedia of World Stamps 1945-1975. New York, NY: McGraw-Hill; London: Andre Deutsch, 1976.

James A. MacKay: A Source Book of Stamps. London: Ward Lock, 1973

James A. MacKay: The World of Classic Stamps. New York, NY: Putnam, 1972

Otto Hornung: The Illustrated Encyclopaedia of Stamp Collecting. London: Hamlyn, 1970

Monte Eiserman: A Handbook for First Day Cover Collectors. Alliance, OH: American First Day Cover Society, 1969 (AFDCS Handbook 3)

Paul Roule: Encyclopédie Philatelique (Philatelic Encyclopaedia). 18 Volumes, Clamart: By the author, 1930. Only the volumes A to France ever appeared.

Frank Arnau: Handbuch der Philatelie (Handbook of Philately). With answers to 1500 questions, 3rd edition, Gottingen: Philapress, 1968

4.1.2 Terminological dictionaries & guides to abbreviations

In contrast to the handbooks just mentioned, the terminological dictionaries or lexica are generally arranged alphabetically and contain brief explanatory definitions of philatelic terms. Usually, they give no or only brief references for the term concerned. The following works may be mentioned:

Wolfram Grallert & Waldemar Gruschke: Lexikon der Philatelie. (Lexicon of philately), Bonn: Hornemann, 1971. 3rd edition, Berlin: Transpress, 1976.

Ullrich Hager: Grosses Lexikon der Philatelie. (Great lexicon of philately), Gutersloh and Berlin: Bertelsmann-Lexikon-Verlag, 1973, Supplement, 1974.

This has been published recently in paperback form:

Ullrich Hager: Kleines Lexikon der Philatelie. (Small lexicon of philately), Gutersloh and Berlin: Bertelsmann-Lexikon-Verlag, 1977.

Alfred Schwenzfeger: Taschenbuch des Briefmarkensammlers. (Pocket book for stamp collectors), Munich: Humboldt-Taschenbuchverlag, n.d. (Humboldt Pocket Book 58)

Other Terminological Dictionaries:

Juan Abadal: Diccionario Filatelico. (Philatelic dictionary), Tarrega: Art. Graf. Camps, 1973.

E. D. Bacon: A Glossary of Philatelic Terms. London: Stanley Gibbons, 1912.

Ralph A. Barry: A Glossary for the Stamp Collector. 4th edition, New York: New York Herald Tribune, 1940.

Russell Bennett & James Watson: Philatelic Terms Illustrated. London: Stanley Gibbons, 1972.

Edward B. Evans: Stamps and Stamp Collecting: A Glossary of Philatelic Terms., 4th edition, London: Stanley Gibbons, 1913.

Glossary of Postal Terms. Washington DC: U.S. Postal Service, 1974. (U.S. Postal Service Publication 32)

A Glossary of Philatelic Terms. 2 Parts, London: Blandford Press, 1951. Part 1: A glossary of philatelic terms with some reference to postal history, compiled by a subcommittee of the Philatelic Congress of Great Britain, consisting of R. Courtney Cade, Harold T. Graham (editors). Part 2. A glossary of terms relating to scientific methods as applied to philately. Compiled by W. Harold S. Cheavin.

Willard C. Jackson: The Standard Philatelic Dictionary. Fort Worth, Texas: Reimers & Jackson, 1933.

Oscar Kausch: Die Sprachwissenschaft in der Briefmarkenkunde. (Philology in Philately), 3rd edition, Leipzig: L. Senf & Co., 1894.

Vijay Krishna: Standard Philatelic Dictionary. An up-to-date guide to the words and phrases in common use among stamp collectors. Banaras: Abhay-Vinay Publ., 1950.

C. Legoue: Dictionnaire de Philatélie. (Dictionary of Philately), Le Mans: A. Bienaime-Leguicheaux, 1900.

James H. Lyon: The Stamp Collector's Vest Pocket Dictionary and Guide. Portland, ME: Jewett & Lyons, 1889.

Edwin Muller: Grundbegriffe der Postwertzeichenkunde. (Basic Terms in Postage Stamp Science), Vienna: Die Postmarke, 1938.

Abraham S. Arnold: The Philatelic Foreign Language Guide. n.pp., Society of Philatelic Americans, 1953. (Society of Philatelic Americans, N° 5)

Eric V. Bailey: A Glossary of Spanish Philatelic Terms. London: Spanish Study Circle, 1974. Philatelic Terminology. A glossary of philatelic terms. 2nd edition, Kalamazoo, MI: Chambers, 1943.

B. W. H. Poole & Willard O. Wylie: The Standard Philatelic Dictionary. Portland, ME: Severn-Wylie-Jewett Co., 1922.

R. J. Sutton: The Stamp Collector's Encyclopaedia. 6th edition, New York, NY: Arco Publ. Co., 1973.

Carl von Platen: Filatelistiska Termer. (Philatelic terms), Stockholm: Wehlström & Widstrand, 1896.

The Dictionary of Philatelic Terms and Phrases. Ipswich, England: Whitfield King & Co., 1911.

Other scientific dictionaries can be found in:

Fachwörterbücher and Lexica. (Scientific Dictionaries & Lexica), An international guide. An international bibliography of dictionaries. 5th revised edition, Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation 1972. (Handbook of International Documentation & Information, Volume 4)

Dictionaries, Encyclopaedias and other Word-Related Books, 1966-1974. Anni M. Brewer (Editor), Detroit, MI: Gale, 1975.

Guides to Abbreviations

Occasionally, readers of philatelic literature have to work out the meaning of abbreviations. No guide to specifically philatelic abbreviations exists at the moment, but a small lexicon is often of help.

Abbreviations of all types can be found in:

Acronyms and Initialisms Dictionary. A guide to alphabetic designation, contraction, acronyms, initialisms and similar appellations. 4th edition, Detroit, MI: Gale, 1973. With an update: New Acronyms and Initialisms. 1974-75 supplement to Acronyms and Initialisms Dictionary 4th edition, Detroit, MI: Gale 1975.

The following are of occasional use:

Reverse Acronyms and Initialisms Dictionary. Detroit, MI: Gale, 1971.

Paul Spillner: Ullstein-Abkürzungslexikon. (Ullstein's Lexicon of Abbreviations), Frankfurt am Main: Ullstein, 1967. (Ullstein Book 2603/2604)

Abbreviations for international organizations can be found in:

F. Ruppert: Initials. Essen: Vulkan Verlag, 1966.

World Guide to Abbreviations of Organizations. T. A. Buttress (Editor), 5th edition, Detroit MI: Gale, 1974.

Paul Spillner: Internationales Wörterbuch der Abkürzungen von Organisationen. (International Dictionary of Abbreviations for Organisations), 3 Volumes, 2nd extended edition, Munich-Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation, 1970-72. (Handbook for International Documentation and Information, Volume 9)

Abbreviations for journals, which are used more often, can be found in:

Otto Leistner: Internationale Titelabkürzungen von Zeitschriften, Zeitungen, wichtigen Handbüchern, Wörterbüchern, Gesetzen, etc. (International Abbreviations of Titles for Journals, Newspapers, Important Handbooks, Dictionaries, Statutes, etc.), Osnabruck: 1970.

Again, a guide to abbreviations for all philatelic journals does not exist at present: as well as the guides to the abbreviations normally used in magazine bibliographies, the following may be of use:

Verzeichnis und Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften. (Index and Abbreviations for Philatelic Journals), Duisburg: Society for Philatelic Literature, 1959.

James Negus: Abbreviations of the titles of philatelic periodicals. In: Philatelic literature review, Volume 6, 1955, pp.11-12.

4.1.3 Language Dictionaries

Hilmer Djurling & L. Harald Kjellstedt: Tysk-Svensk, Engelsk-Svensk och Fransk-Svensk Filatelistisk Ordbok. (German-Swedish, English-Swedish and French-Swedish Philatelic Dictionary), Stockholm: Swedish Philatelic Society, 1886.

German-English Philatelic Dictionary. Valpariso, IN: Germany Philatelic Society, 1969. (Germany Philatelic Society Library Booklet Series 4)

Henry Henne: Engelsk-Norsk Postal Ordbok. (English-Norwegian Postal Dictionary), Published by the Ministry of Posts, 2nd edition, Oslo: 1970.

Hugo Kolar: Kolar's Key Number 1. Philatelic dictionary, Slovak-English-German. Bratislava: Published by the author, n.d.

Josef Kral: Philatelistisches Diktionär. (Philatelic dictionary), Dictionary and phrase book for collectors and dealers., German, English, French. Gauting by Munich: 1925.

Bruno Landi & Michel Melot: Lexique Philatélique. (Philatelic lexicon), French-German, German-French. Paris: Le Monde des Philatélistes, 1976.

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Englisch-Deutsches and Französisch-Deutsches Wörterverzeichnis Philatelistischer Ausdrücke. (English-German and French-German Guide to Philatelic Expressions), 3rd edition, Hannover: Published by the author, 1969.

Joseph J. Lohr: Dictionary of Foreign Words and Phrases on Stamps, Seals & Posters Translated into English. New York, NY: Lohr, 1940.

Erich Mathieu: German Stamp Colour Names Made Easy. German-English and English-German vocabulary of philatelic colours. Munich: A. Kürzel, 1949.

Douglas Patrick & Mary Patrick: The Musson Stamp Dictionary. Toronto: Musson Book Co., 1972. Published in England under the title: The Hodder Stamp Dictionary. London: Hodder & Stoughton, 1972.

Erna Pedersen: Filatelisk Ordbog. (Philatelic dictionary), Danish/German, English & French. Copenhagen: Helios Forlag, 1940.

Post Office Dictionary, Including Foreign Place Names, English-Afrikaans, Afrikaans-English. Compiled in collaboration with the Language Services Bureau of the Department of Education Arts & Science, Pretoria: 1959.

Postes et Philatélie (Posts and Philately) Ottawa: Information Canada, 1974. (Bulletin de Terminologie, 150) (English/French)

Herbert W. Scott: Filatela Terminaro. (Philatelic Terminology) Esperanto, English, French, German with definition in Esperanto. Cologne: Heroldo de Esperanto, 1928.

Eric Singer: The Philatelic Dictionary. English-French-German. London: Robson Lowe, 1946.

G. R. Skopecek: English-Czech and Czech-English Vocabulary. Lawrence, KS: Czechoslovak Philatelic Society, 1955.

Anna H. Smith: The language of Stamp Collecting. Definitions for an exhibition of philatelic material illustrating collector's terms. Johannesburg, South Africa: Johannesburg Public Library, 1959. (English & Afrikaans).

Sputnik Filatelista. (Philatelic Companion), 2nd revised edition by M. P. Sokolov & L. M. Niselevic. Moscow: Izdatel'stvo Svyaz', 1974. Contains a four-language index of words (Russian, English, German and French) and a select bibliography of soviet philatelic publications.

Robert G. Stone & Marc Martin: Glossary of English Equivalents of Terms Commonly Used in French Auctions, Catalogues and Stamp Trade. Bloomfield, NJ: France and Colonies Philatelic Society, 1973.

Roger Stroh (editor): Lexique Philatélique Français-Anglais et Anglais-Français. (French-English and English-French Philatelic Lexicon), Paris: Le Monde des Philatélistes, 1972. (Study 134).

Sigurdur H. Thorsteinsson: Ordebok Frimerkjeseðfara. (Postage Stamp Dictionary), Icelandic/English, German, Danish. Reykjavik: Setberg, 1964.

Oscar C. de Tuya (editor): Tuya International Philatelic Dictionary. Oscar de Tuya Jr. & Jorge de Tuya (associate editor), Havana, Cuba: 1957.

Universal Postal Union: Polyglot Vocabulary of the International Postal Service. 3rd edition, 7 Volumes, Bern: Universal Postal Union, International Office, 1961-64.

Vocabulary of the Postal Terms. English-French-Arabic. Cairo: Arab Postal Union, General Secretariat, 1970.

Wörterverzeichnis/Dictionnaire zu Zumsteins Briefmarken-Katalog. (Glossary/Dictionary for Zumstein's Stamp Catalogue), Parts A & B, Bern: Zumstein & Co., no date. Dictionary A: English, French, German, Dutch, Danish, Swedish, Norwegian. Dictionary B: German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Russian, Czech, Polish.

There is also a book to help in understanding foreign philatelic correspondence:

H. H. Engelhardt: Philatelistische Auslandskorrespondenz Leicht Gemacht. (Philatelic Foreign Correspondence Made Easy), Leipzig: H. Fabian, 1947.

The same publisher produced a second edition under the title: Philatelistischer Brief in 14 Sprachen. (Philatelic Letters in 14 Languages).

A bibliography of language dictionaries is:

Wolfgang Zaunmüller: Bibliographisches Handbuch der Sprachwörterbücher. (Bibliographical Handbook of Language Dictionaries), An international listing of 5,600 dictionaries for the years 1460-1958, for more than 500 languages and dialects. An annotated bibliography of language dictionaries. Stuttgart: Hiersemann, 1958.

4.1.4 Details of People, Biographies

Biographies often contain bibliographical as well as biographical data. They can thus be used in some cases to find out what a person has published and perhaps even what has been written about a person. A distinction must be drawn between individual and collected biographies: the latter are usually national biographical indexes. There are a number of other aids on the personal side, e.g. lists of members of societies, universities, institutes, firms, etc. Naturally the subject catalogue of a library will have a heading Biographies to indicate monographs on individual people. The Author Catalogue on the other hand is not likely to be much help, as it will list books by the author, unless an autobiography is concerned. The following bibliographies give information on biographies:

Max Arnim: Internationale Personalbibliographie. (International Personal Bibliography), 2nd edition, 3 Volumes, Leipzig: (Volumes 2-3, Stuttgart:), 1944-63.

Edouard Marie Oettinger: Bibliographie Biographique Universelle. (Universal Biographical Bibliography), New edition, 2 Volumes, Paris: 1866.

Robert B. Slocum: Biographical Dictionaries and Related Works. Detroit, MI: Gale, 1967. Supplement, 1972.

A current guide to biographical information in books and periodicals from the U.S.A. is: Biography Index. A cumulative index to biographical material in books and magazines. Number 1ff, New York, NY: Wilson, 1947ff, Quarterly.

Also:

Current Biography. Number 1ff, New York, NY: Wilson, 1940ff, Monthly. Cumulated index 1940-1970, 1973.

Information can also be obtained from the numerous national Who's Who, which are frequently updated.

Germany:

Allgemeine Deutsche Biographie. (ADB) (General German Biography), 56 Volumes, Leipzig: 1875-1912. New edition, 1966ff. Continued under the title:

Neue Deutsche Biographie. (NDB) (New German Biography), Volume 1-, Berlin: De Gruyter 1953-.

Kürschners Deutscher Gelehrtenkalender. (Kurschner's Calender of German Men of Learning), 1ff, Berlin: De Gruyter, 1925ff. (With forerunners from 1879.)

Wer ist's? (Who is it?), Founded and edited by H. A. L. Degener, Issues 1-10, Berlin: 1905-35. After 1945 continued by Wer ist Wer? (Who's Who) a German-language reference work with over 30,000 names of important people. 11ff, Frankfurt: Societäts-Verlag, 1955ff.

Who's Who in Germany. Biographical encyclopaedia for the German Federal Republic. 2 Volumes, 5th edition, Ottobrunn: Who's Who Book Publ., 1974.

Munzinger Archiv. Teil: Internationales Biographisches Archiv. (IBA) (Munzinger Archive Section: International Biographical Archive), Our world as mirrored in the personalities of politics, business and culture. Ravensburg: Archive for publicity studies. Separate publication of the Munzinger Archive.

Austria:

Neue Österreichische Biographie 1815-1918. (New Austrian Biography 1815-1918), 8 Volumes, Vienna: 1923-1935.

New Austrian Biography from 1815. Volume 9, Vienna: 1956-.

Switzerland:

Historisch-Biographisches Lexikon der Schweiz. (Historical Biographical Lexicon of Switzerland), 7 Volumes, Supplement, 2 Volumes, Neuchatel: 1921-34.

Schweizer Biographisches Archiv. (Swiss Biographical Archive), 6 Volumes, Zurich, Lugano, Vaduz: 1952-58.

Who's Who in Switzerland. Including the Principality of Liechtenstein. Issued 1950/51ff, Zurich: 1952ff.

International:

Who's Who in Europe. Biographical dictionary of contemporary European personalities. Edward A. de Maeyer. (editor), Volume 1 1964/65ff, Brussels: 1964ff.

International Who's Who. 1st edition ff, London: 1935ff.

The International Year Book and Statesmen's Who's Who. 1st edition ff, London: 1953ff.

France:

Dictionnaire de Biographie Française. (Dictionary of French Biography), Volume 1ff, Paris: 1933ff.

Who's Who in France. 1st edition ff, Paris: 1953ff.

Great Britain:

Dictionary of National Biography. 63 Volumes, and Supplement 1, London: 1885-.

Who's Who. Annual biographical dictionary. Volume 1ff, London: 1849ff.

Who was Who. A companion to Who's Who, containing the biographies of those who died during the period. 1st edition ff, London: 1920ff. (1897-1915. '20; 1916-1928, '29; 1929-1940. '41; 1941-1950. '52; 1951-1960. '62.)

USA:

Dictionary of American Biography. 20 Volumes, Index Supplement 1ff, New York & London: 1928ff.

The National Cyclopaedia of American Biography. Volume 1ff, New York: 1892ff.

Who's Who in America. A biographical dictionary. Volume 1ff, Chicago: 1899ff.

Who Was Who in America. A companion on biographical reference work to Who's Who in America. Volume 1ff, Chicago: 1942ff.

There are only a few works dealing exclusively with people from the field of philately. The following may be mentioned:

Robert Bateman: Stamp Collectors' Who's Who. London: Stanley Gibbons, 1960.

George Vincent Freethy: Who's Who in American Philately. San Francisco, CA: Stamp Value Co., 1916.

Albert H. Harris: Who's Who in Philately. The international philatelic directory., London: The Philatelic Magazine, 8th edition, 1926.

Harry L. Lindquist: The Blue Book of Philately. Who's who in the stamp world. 2nd edition, New York: H. L. Lindquist, 1938.

Varro E. Tyler: Philatelic Forgers. Their lives and work. London: Robson Lowe, 1976.

Alfred Kreuzer: Bedeutende Philatelisten Deutschlands. (Important philatelists of Germany), In: Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 1970, Volume 45, p.4497.

In searching for biographical data it is often advisable to look for the personal names in philatelic journals. Articles in these often contain notices relating to the more important philatelists. (For cumulative indexes see 4.2.3.3.)

4.1.5 Address books

The essential address books for libraries, bookshops, museums and firms have already been mentioned. Some more which contain more or less specialized addresses for the philatelist are given here. Two bibliographies of address books will be mentioned first:

Guide to American Directories. A guide to the major directories of the United States, covering all industrial, professional and mercantile categories. Bernhard Klein (editor), 9th edition. Detroit, MI: Gale, 1975.

Internationale Bibliographie der Fachadressbücher. (International Bibliography of Directories), 5th edition, Pullach: Verlag Dokumentation, 1973.

Directories specific to philately are mainly English-language. One exception is the following, published yearly in Germany:

Interphila. Directory for philately and numismatics. Prien/Chiemsee: Helwig, 1959ff. It contains the addresses of stamp collectors (arranged by their speciality), the addresses of domestic and foreign stamp dealers, special shops, stamp expertizers collectors' groups and societies, etc. and scientific journals.

An English language work that contains a great many addresses is:

Linn's World Stamp Almanac. A handbook for stamp collectors. Compiled and edited by the staff of Linn's Stamp News, Sidney, OH: Amos Press, 1977. As well as much information relating to the philatelic scene in the USA, addresses in the following areas are listed: postal administrations, museums and libraries, organizations, periodicals, dealer organizations.

Other address books are:

Frank Hlavaak (editor): Philatelic Agencies. 2nd edition, San Antonio, TX: Hlavaak, 1976.

B.P.A. Philatelic Society's Directory 1972/74. London: British Philatelic Association. Annually.

Frank R. Williams: Classified Directory of Stamp Collectors. Cedar Rapids, IA: Williams, 1977.

K. L. Coyte (editor): Postal Jurisdictions of the World. Louisville: Coyte, 1955. All authorities, institutions and persons that have brought out stamps since 1840 are listed here.

Dealers Directory. Wellston, OH: Dealers directory service, 1963ff. Annual.

Collecting: United States. Cambridge, MA: Stamps Information Associates, 1972. Bibliography of the catalogues of US postage stamps. The entries have brief annotations and include publisher, address and price. Catalogues not published in the US are also included. Also, details of the addresses of stamp auctions and auction firms.

Guide to Catalogues. 4th edition, Cambridge, MA: Stamps Information Associates, 1972. Entries for over 470 catalogues. Although some details are missing, a valuable source for the addresses of catalogue publishers.

International Auctioneer's Directory. Cambridge, MA: Stamps Information Associates, 1972.

International Stamp Dealers Directory. London: Harris Publications, 1974.

International Stamp-Issuing Countries Directory. Los Angeles, CA: Altamini Publications, 1977.

Leonard I. Kindler: Philatelic Agency List. N°77, Philadelphia PA: Kindler, 1977.

Stamp Auction Directory. Berkeley, CA: Newhall Company, 1977.

Frank R. Williams: Stamp Collectors' Classified Where to Buy-Sell Guide. Cedar Rapids, IA: Williams, 1977.

4.2 Information on the literature

Listed in this section are items giving information on philatelic literature and are themselves usually secondary documents referring to the original literature contained in the primary documents. The guides to philatelic literature will be discussed under the following headings:

1. Trade bibliographies (Books in Print) indicate the literature of a country as available via the book trade.
2. Library catalogues list only the contents of individual collections. They are not really bibliographies, but are important as a source of information in view of the scant attention paid to philately in bibliographic works.
3. Formal bibliographies tend to be restricted to the literature of a given type, e.g. University texts, official publications, periodical articles.
4. Bibliographies of bibliographies refer to further subject-specific collections of secondary literature.
5. National bibliographies give the monograph literature of a country in as up-to-date and complete a form as possible.
6. Actual subject bibliographies take various forms. They can be separate, not separate or independent, and give the literature for a given period of time chosen on the basis of certain subject criteria.

4.2.1 Books in Print (book trade bibliographies)

These are meant primarily as a guide for the book trade, to the literature available in the country concerned at a given point in time. They are generally published every year, but they do not list only books published in that year, though it is rare for them to include books more than 10 years old. However, they do not list all of the publications that have appeared in a country: literature not appearing within the regular book trade tends to be omitted e.g. the catalogues of museums and exhibitions, auction catalogues, firms' publications and pamphlets, etc. Moreover, not all firms, particularly not the small and private presses, have their books entered in these publications. However, these volumes do give a very full survey of the books produced by the book trade of a country over a restricted number of years. Since their format is adapted to the needs of the book trade, they are arranged by author and title, and sometimes there is a subject index as well. They are therefore very useful for locating and verifying titles in the domain of philatelic book literature.

The authoritative work for the German-speaking world outside East Germany is:

Verzeichnis Lieferbarer Bücher. (VLB) (Index to Books in Print) 1ff, Munich: Verlag Dokumentation, 1971/72ff. Annually.

This has appeared since 1977 in several volumes in a comprehensive author-title-keyword sequence. More than four million titles are listed. If it is wished to locate earlier literature in a book trade bibliography, the following will be helpful. They are similar in form and layout to the VLB, though a little less comprehensive.

Koehler & Volckmar. Literaturkatalog. (Literature Catalogue) 1 ff, 1858ff.
Libri. Literaturkatalog. 1 ff, 1950ff.

Books from the German Democratic Republic are listed in:
Bücher aus der DDR. (Books from the DDR), Leipzig: Annually.
 Earlier editions appeared under the title: Leipziger Bücherkatalog. (Leipzig Catalogue of Books).

Similar publications appear for Switzerland and Austria, but they are more or less superfluous, since most of the publishers in these countries have their output listed in the VLB. For the current and more recent German philatelic literature, the yearly Fachbuchnummer (Scientific Book Number), the special number of the Börsenblattes für den Deutschen Buchhandel (Newsletter for the German Book Trade) produced for the Frankfurt Book Fair, is of a certain amount of use.

Of particular importance is Books in Print from the U.S.A., where the bulk of the philatelic literature is produced.

Indexes of the books available in Spain, Italy and other countries are less important.

One essential item however is:

British Books in Print. The reference catalogue of current literature and index of books in print and on sale in the UK. Vols. 1, 2. London: Whitaker, Annually. The forerunner from 1874: The Reference Catalogue of Current Literature. This is a cross-reference catalogue, in which a publication is listed under author, title and subject. The 1974 edition lists 250,000 titles from 5,000 publishers. There is a supplementary index to publishers. Titles are entered under the keyword postage and stamps, and a large part of the American stamp literature, which is also sold in England is included.

Répertoire des Livres de Langue Française Disponibles. (List of Books Available in the French Language) 19... Paris: France Expansion. Annually.

Books in Print 1974. 4 Volumes, Ann Arbor, MI: Bowker. There is a new edition every two years, supplements in between. Lists some 350,000 publications currently available in the USA by author and title in one alphabetical sequence. The following, from the same publisher, is useful for the subject approach:

Subject Guide to Books in Print. 19.. Volumes 1, 2.

Lists the publications under 63,000 subject headings used in the classification of the Library of Congress. This subject listing gives full bibliographical details, so that reference to the author/title index is not necessary. This publication has the character of a real small subject bibliography.

Using the VLB, British Books in Print, Books in Print (USA) and the List of Books Available ... enables a very wide survey to be made of the literature on philately available on the world market. The others can be used to verify titles, compile bibliographies, etc.

There are only scattered indexes in philately, and they tend to concentrate on the literature available to the book trade. Most of them are booksellers catalogues, which also cover the non-trade and antiquarian literature.

One older publication was:

Fritz Billig: Price List of Philatelic Literature 1966. Jamaica, NY: Billig, 1966. This most important of the American dealers for philatelic literature was founded by the Viennese Fritz Billig, whose reference works (Mondial: Billig's International Guide to Philatelic Literature, and Billig's Philatelic Handbook – See 4.1.1) enjoy a world wide reputation. However, the business has been bought by the Florida firm of HJMR, who also publish an extensive current guide to the literature (HJMR Co., P.O. Box 610308, North Miami, FL 33161).

HJMR Priced Guide to Philatelic Literature. 2nd edition, Miami, FL, 1971. This list was produced by computer and runs to 509 pages. The bibliographical data are incomplete, usually only author, title and perhaps year of publication are given. As well as monographs and journals (including titles that have been long out of print), reprints from journals are also listed, though without the bibliographical details of where they were reprinted from. The list is arranged systematically and has an index. A third edition in loose leaf form is in preparation. Supplements to the HJMR Priced Guide will be found in the HJMR Newslist:

HJMR Newslist. 1 Volume 1ff, 1970ff, 4 monthly. Appears in newspaper format and gives details of recent publications in advertisement form, often with short excerpts from reviews.

The firm of Alfred Ihm (Friedensstrasse 26, Post Box 411, 8592 Wunsiedel) issues:

Katalog und Preisliste über Philatelistische Fachliteratur. (Catalogue and Price List of Philatelic Literature), 1973 and supplements. Covers principally German-language literature, including many antiquarian items. Largest philatelic literature dealer in Germany.

Roger Koerber, 605 Northland Towers West, Southfield, MI 48075:

The Postilion. Volume 1ff, 1977ff, 3 monthly. Principally an auction catalogue, contains a list of philatelic literature, including German-language items with an English translation of the German title.

Robson Lowe Ltd., Literature Dept., 39 Poole Hill, Bournemouth BH2 5PX, England.

Literature & Services. A comprehensive list. The most important philatelic publisher in England, and the European representative of the HJMR Corporation.

Vera Trinder Ltd., 38 Bedford St., Strand, London, WC2 9EU. This shop publishes a list of books obtainable from it. The list is arranged systematically and is not confined to English language literature. Since these lists are designed primarily as aids to purchasers, exact bibliographical details are usually entirely or partly lacking.

4.2.2 Philatelic library catalogues

In the absence of reliable subject bibliographies these are often useful for locating or verifying titles. There are numerous catalogues of collections of philatelic literature and their bibliographical quality is extremely variable. Literature of the library-catalogue type can be found in the bibliographies and also in the card catalogues of libraries usually under the issuing body (given here in the first place) and also under the actual title (given here in the second place).

American Philatelic Research Library

Bound periodicals in the APRL. In: Philatelic Literature Review, Volume 25, 1976, pp.28-40.

The APRL Subject-Card Catalog. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1975ff.

Abu Dhabi - Azerbaijan: Volume 24, 1975, pp.39-48.

Baden - Burundi: Volume 24, 1975, pp.199-212.

Cachets - Catalogs, World: Volume 25, 1976, pp.94-102.

Catalogs, World, Airmail - Collecting, Appraisals: Volume 25, 1976, pp.158-165.

Collecting, Appraisals - Czechoslovakia: Volume 26, 1977, pp.29-40.

Catalog of the American Philatelic Research Library. In: Philatelic Literature Review, Volume 20, 1971, pp.135-150. Alphabetical, according to author.

American Philatelic Society

Books in the Library of the American Philatelic Society. Pittsburgh, PA: Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh, 1910.

Sir Edward Denny Bacon

Catalogue of the Philatelic Library Formed by the Late Sir Edward Denny Bacon. Compiled by F. Hugh Vallancey, London: Vallancey, 1939.

Baltimore Public Library

Edward H. Fenner: Stamp Collecting. Baltimore, MD: Enoch Pratt Free Library, 1952. A catalogue of books in the Beck Memorial Philatelic Collection.

Berliner Philatelisten-Klub

Katalog der Bibliothek des Berliner Philatelisten-Klub, e.V. (Catalogue of the Library of the Berlin Philatelic Club), Berlin: Berliner Philatelisten-Klub, 1908. 2nd Edition, 1932. Supplement 1935. Catalogue 1940.

Boston Philatelic Society

A List of the Books and Magazines in the Library of the Boston Philatelic Society ... Boston, MA: Boston Philatelic Society, 1901-06.

Briefmarkensammler-Verein Essen 1910

Büchereiverzeichnis. (Book catalogue), Essen: Briefmarkensammler-Verein Essen 1910 e. V., 1972.

Collectors Club

Philately. A catalogue of the Collectors Club library New York City. Author catalogue, Subject catalogue, Title catalogue, Periodicals catalogue. Boston, MA: G. K. Hall, 1974. Photomechanical reproduction of the card catalogues. Most important Philatelic Library catalogue.

26th Earl of Crawford (James Ludovic Lindsay)

Edward Denny Bacon: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library of the Earl of Crawford, K.T. London: Philatelic Literature Society, 1911. Supplement, 1926. Addenda to Supplement, 1938. (= Bibliotheca Lindesiana. Volume 7, under the title: A Bibliography of the Writings General, Special and Periodical Forming the Literature of Philately.) Monographs to 1908: Journals to 1906. The appendix lists the journals in alphabetical order. Most important source of information on the literature for the period up to 1908. The contents are now in the British Museum. Quoted as the Crawford Catalogue.

Danish Philatelists' Society

Bandbiblioteket. (Library Guide), Copenhagen: Amager Centraltrykkeri, n.d.

German Library

Katalog zur Abteilung Philatelie in der Deutschen Bücherei zu Leipzig. (Catalogue of the Philately Division of the German Library in Leipzig), Edited by Hugo Krötzsch, Posneck: Vogel-Verlag, 1928. Is in the following sections: Books (alphabetically by author), Bibliographies, Legal documents, Colour tables, Post Office documents, Journals (General, Societies publications and Reports) first by place of publication, then alphabetically, Yearbooks, Address books, Catalogues, Catalogues of philatelic firms, Inventories, Auctions, Albums, Maps and Atlases.

Deutscher Altbrief-Sammler-Verein

Bestandsverzeichnis der Bibliothek des Deutschen Altbrief-Sammler-Verein e.V. (Guide to the Contents of the German Old Letter Collectors' Society Library), Compiled by Ullrich Häger, Frankfurt am Main: Deutscher Altbriefsammler-Verein, 1972.

German Federal Post Office

Katalog der Bibliothek der Deutschen Bundespost, (Catalogue of the Library of the German Federal Post Office), Trier Division, Regional Directorate of Posts, Trier, 1951.

Fort Orange Stamp Club

Fort Orange Stamp Club Library Index. Albany, NY: Fort Orange Stamp Club, 1938.

Germania Ring

Bücher Verzeichnis der Zentral-Bücherei des Germania-Ringes. (Library Catalogue of the Central Library of the Germania Circles), Compiled by Friedrich Wilhelm Thalmann, Essen: Germania Ring, 1912.

Ruprecht Glasewald: Verzeichnis der Bücherei Glasewald. (Catalogue of the Glasewald Library), Gossnitz: A. E. Glasewald, 1928.

William Lawrence Green Catalogue of Philatelic Literature., New York, NY, Dutton, 1917.

Hallensia

Kurt Zirkenbach: Verzeichnis der Bücherei des BSC "Hallensia" Halle. (Catalogue of the Library of the BSC "Hallensia" Halle), Part 1, 31st December 1949, Halle: Hallensia, 1950.

Herts Philatelic Society

Catalogue of Handbooks, Journals, etc., in the Library of the Herts Philatelic Society. 2nd Edition, London: Herts Philatelic Society, 1913.

Internationale Vereniging Philatelica

Aanvulling op de Catalogus der Bibliotheek 1946-1970. (Supplement to the 1946-1970 Library Catalogue), S-Gravenhage: Internationale Vereniging Philatelica, 1970.

Internationaler Philatelisten-Verein

Katalog der Bibliothek des Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins Dresden. (Library Catalogue of the Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins, Dresden), Leipzig: Internationaler Philatelisten-Verein, 1901 & 1909.

Johannesburg. Public Library

R. F. Kennedy: Catalogue of the Philatelic Collection. Johannesburg, South Africa: City of Johannesburg Public Library, 1960. 5 parts: Postal services and postal history; Philately; Stamps; Miscellaneous collecting; Index. The entries are in alphabetical order according to author and country.

Junior Philatelic Society

Catalogue of the Lending Library (Including the "Crouch" bequest). London: Junior Philatelic Society, 1926.

Københavns Philatelistklub

Katalog over Bibliotheket, 1918. (Library Catalogue, 1918), Copenhagen: Københavns Philatelistklub, 1918. 2nd edition, 1931.

Königliche Bibliothek

Rommelsche Philatelistische Sammlung. (Rommel's Philatelic Collection), Inventory. Berlin: Königliche Bibliothek, 1914.

Alb. A. Kronenberg

Verzeichnis einer Privaten Büchersammlung über Briefmarkenkunde und Postgeschichte. (Catalogue of a Private Library on Philately and Postal History), Binningen, Switzerland: Published by the author, 1958.

Catalogue of a Private Collection of Books on Philately and Postal History. Binningen, Switzerland: Published by the author, 1965.)

Landesverband Mittelrhein

Archiv. Buch-Verzeichnis. (Archive Book Catalogue), Cologne: Landesverband Mittelrhein, 1952.

Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen

W. F. Smit: Catalogus Bondsbibliotheek 1974. (Federation Library Catalogue), Arnhem: Nederlandse Bond van Filatelisten-Verenigingen, 1975.

New England Stamp Company

A List of the Books in the Library of the New England Stamp Co. Boston, MA: New England Stamp Company, 1906.

Österreichischer Philatelisten-Klub Vindobona

Bibliotheks-Katalog ausgegeben März 1909. (Library Catalogue as of March 1909), Vienna: Vindobona, 1909.

Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg

Bücherverzeichnis der Philatelistischen Bücherei Hamburg e.V. (Book List of the Hamburg Philatelic Library), Hamburg: Philatelistische Bücherei 1972.

Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine

Katalog der Philatelistischen Landes-Verbands Bibliothek Berlin. (Catalogue of the National Philatelic Society's Library, Berlin), 3 Volumes, Berlin: Landesverband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine, 1957-59.

London Stamp Club

F. Hugh Vallancey: Catalogue of the Philatelic Library. London: Vallancey Press, 1939.

Public Library of South Australia

Ivan Boleszny: Postage stamps. A list of the books in the Public Library of South Australia, Adelaide: Public library of South Australia, 1966.

Reichs-Postamt

Katalog der Bücherei des Reichs-Postamts. (Catalogue of the Library of the Imperial Post Office Department), Volume 1, Books. Berlin: Reichsdruckerei, 1899.

Reichs-Postmuseum

Katalog des Reichs-Postmuseum. (Catalogue of the Reichs-Postmuseum), Berlin: J. Springer, 1897.

Ring der Liechtensteinsammler e.V.

Bücher-Verzeichnis. (Book Catalogue), No author or publisher, 1963.

Royal Philatelic Society of Victoria

R. Lloyd-Smith: The Royal Philatelic Society of Victoria Library Catalogue. Revised to 30th April 1965. Melbourne: Royal Philatelic Society of Victoria, 1965.

Schweizerischer Philatelisten Verein

Katalog der Bibliothek des Schweizerischen Philatelisten-Vereins Zurich. (Library Catalogue of the Swiss Philatelic Society, Zurich), Debendorf: H. Grapentien, 1919.

Alfred Smith & Son

Priced Catalogue of the Alfred Smith Philatelic Library. Being a detailed list of its contents, with prices at which they are offered for sale by the publishers. London: Smith, 1916.

Suppantchitsch, Victor

Bibliotheks-Catalog 1861-1900. (Library Catalogue 1861-1900), No author or publisher. Manuscript catalogue of the Journal library in two volumes.

Sveriges Filatelist-Förening

Katalog över Sveriges Filatelist-Förenings Bibliotek. (Catalogue of the Swedish Philatelic Society Library), Numbers 1 to 3, Stockholm: Sveriges Filatelist-Förening, 1904 to 22.

Postmuseums Filatelistika Bibliotek

Handbok över Monografier m.m. i Postmuseums Filatelistika Bibliotek, Stockholm. (Handbook of monographs in the Stockholm Postal Museum Philatelic Library), Stockholm: Kungl. General Poststyrelsen, 1954. 5 Volumes, entries in country order.

Botele Org: Bibliografi över Filatelistisk Litteratur. (Bibliography of Philatelic Literature), Supplement to the above Handbok över Monografier m.m. i Postmuseums Filatelistika Bibliotek, Stockholm, Stockholm: Postmuseum, 1968.

Tiffany, John Kerr

The Philatelic Library. A catalogue of stamp publications, attempted by John Kerr Tiffany. St. Louis, MO: J. Wilson, 1874. First publication on philatelic literature. His library was purchased by Earl of Crawford.

United Postal Stationery Society

United Postal Stationery Society Philatelic Library. No author. United Postal Stationery Society, 1969.

United States. Library of Congress

James Waldo Fawcett: Postage stamps. A check-list of books on philately in the Library of Congress. Washington DC: Government Printing Office, 1940.

University of Michigan

Robert W. Gesell: University of Michigan Graduate Library Philatelic Research Materials. Lansing, MI: 1976. Typescript in name order. Only author, title and year of publication given. Many U.S. Government documents on postal history and policy are included.

Stadtbibliothek Munchen, Philatelistische Abteilung

Deutschland and Deutsche Gebiete. (Germany and German Regions), 2nd edition, Munich: Gotteswinter, 1975.

Übersee. (Overseas), Munich: Gotteswinter, 1975.

Frankreich. (France), Munich: Arbeitsgemeinschaft Frankreich, 1974.

Verband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine

Bibliothek-Verzeichnis des Verbandes Berliner Philatelisten-Verein. (Library Guide for the Federation of Berlin Philatelic Societies), 4 Volumes, Berlin: Verband Berliner Philatelisten-Vereine, 1957.

Landespostdirektion Berlin

Büchereiverzeichnis der Bücherei der Landespostdirektion Berlin. (Guide to the Libraries of the State Postal Management, Berlin), 5 Volumes, Berlin: Landespostdirektion, 1958-1965.

1. Learned and Auxiliary Literature as at 1st September 1958.
2. Accessions List as at 1st December 1960.
3. Accessions List, Belles-Lettres, as at 1st January 1962.
4. Learned Literature as at 1st May 1965.
5. Belles-Lettres as at 1st May 1965.

Verein der Briefmarkensammler an der Saar

Bücher und Zeitschriften-Verzeichnis des Vereins der Briefmarkensammler an der Saar. (Book and Journal Register of the Society of Stamp Collectors in the Saar.), Saarbrücken: Verein der Briefmarkensammler an der Saar, 1973.

Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Frankfurt am Main

Katalog der Vereinsbibliothek. (Catalogue of the Society's Library), As at 1st January 1905. Frankfurt am Main: Voigt & Gleiber, 1905.

Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg von 1885, R.V.

Bücher-Verzeichnis der Bücherei des Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg von 1885. (Register of the Books in the Library of the Vereins für Briefmarkenkunde zu Hamburg von 1885), Hamburg, 1929.

War Cover Club

David R. Opperman: War Cover Club library list. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1973, Volume 22, pp.80-85.

Wilson, Sir John Mitchell Harvey

Clarence Winchester: The Royal Philatelic Collection, by Sir John Wilson ... Keeper of the ... collection. London: Dropmore Press, 1952.

Verband Schweizerischer Philatelistenvereine

Katalog der Zentralbibliothek des Verbandes Schweizerischer Philatelistenvereine. (Catalogue of the Central Library of the Federation of Swiss Philatelic Societies), Bern: General Direction of the Post Telegraph & Telephone Undertakings, 1951.

Neuerwerbungen. Systematisches Verzeichnis. (New Acquisitions Systematic Index), Bern: General Direction of the PTT, 1959.

4.2.3 Formal Bibliographies4.2.3.1 Indexes to University Publications

University publications cover theses and research papers. They rank as open publications even when available only in duplicated form. Undergraduate and masters' theses and other qualifying works do not rank as University publications and almost never appear in bibliographies. In contrast to theses, which are often quoted as references, it is not usual to cite these minor works, as they are not freely accessible. Naturally though, these student project papers may contain really useful material, particularly when they relate to a broad and valid field of study. Diploma and other project papers from technical schools, technical colleges and universities are not currently listed in the bibliographies of any country. Anyone who wants to survey such material will generally have to get in touch with the examining authorities. There is generally no index to project work.

One index to dissertation indexes is:

Michael M. Reynolds: A Guide to Theses and Dissertations. An annotated international bibliography of bibliographies. Detroit, MI: Gale, 1975.

University publications from the GDR and the GFR (and previously from the German Reich) are listed in: Jahresverzeichnis der Deutschen Hochschulschriften. (Annual Index to German University Publications), Published by the German Library, Volume 1-on, Leipzig: 1887-on. Annual. This index is classified by type of university and records all theses and research papers from German universities. There are author and subject indexes.

A slightly quicker means of reference is published by the German Library in Frankfurt: Deutsche Bibliographie. Hochschulschriftenverzeichnis. (German Bibliography. Index to University Publications) Series H. Published by the German Library, Frankfurt am Main, Volume 1-on, Frankfurt am Main: 1972-on. Monthly. The issues are divided into large systematic groups, and there are author, title and keyword entries.

University publications from European countries are to be found in the following:

L. Alker & H. Alker: Verzeichnis der an der Universität Wien Approbierten Dissertationen. (Index of Dissertations Accepted by the University of Vienna), Volume 1, 1937-44-on. Vienna: 1954-on.

Verzeichnis über die seit dem Jahre 1872 an der Philosophischen Fakultät der Universität in Wien Eingereichten und Approbierten Dissertationen. (Index of the Dissertations Presented and Accepted by the Philosophy Faculty of the University of Vienna since the year 1872), 4 Volumes, Vienna, 1935-37.

Jahresverzeichnis der Schweizerischen Hochschulschriften. (Annual Index to Swiss University Publications), Volume 1-on, Basle: 1898-on.

Catalogue des Thèses de Doctorat Soutenues Devant les Universités Françaises. (Catalogue of Doctoral Theses Accepted in French Universities), Year 1: 1884-on, Paris: 1885-on.

Index to Theses Accepted for Higher Degrees in the Universities of Great Britain and Ireland. Volume 1, 1950/51-on, London: 1955-on.

Dissertations are very likely to be kept in the libraries of the Universities at which they were presented. German theses not available on the spot can easily be obtained on inter-library loan (though not very rapidly). It is harder to get hold of foreign doctoral theses, since frequently, there is no obligation to publish them and the only copy is not available for loan.

An indispensable American publication is:

The Comprehensive Dissertation Index (1861-1972). 37 Volumes, Ann Arbor, MI: Xerox University Microfilms, 1973. This subject work makes it easy to trace dissertations from American universities. Volumes 33-37 are the author index to the work as a whole.

Another essential aid, which describes the contents of the dissertations in detail is:-

Dissertations Abstracts International. Abstracts of dissertations available on microfilm or as xerographic reproductions. Volume 1-on, Ann Arbor, MI: Xerox University Microfilms, 1938-on. Section A: Humanities & Social Sciences. Section B: the sciences and engineering. This is arranged by subject groups, with author and keyword indices for the individual dissertations.

An occasional help in the location of Masters' theses is:

Guide to Lists of Master Theses. Compiled by Dorothy M. Black. Chicago: American Library Association, 1965.

There are hardly any University publications on philatelic topics, but there are some on postal history, and these can be located from the following:

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Deutsche Hochschulschriften auf dem gebiet der postgeschichte und philatelie. (German University publications in the field of postal history and philately), In: Der Sammler Dienst, 1970, Volume 21, pp.348-349 & 982-984.

Wilhelm Oxtmann: Dissertationen und andere Hochschulschriften über themen aus dem bereich des Post- und Fernmeldewesens und verwandter gebiete. (Dissertations and other University publications on themes relating to postal, telegraphic and related topics), In: Archiv für das Post- und Fernmeldewesen, 1952, Volume 4, pp.65-95 & 578; 1961, Volume 13, pp.304-365 & 1967, Volume 19, pp.129-204.

Verzeichnis von Doktordissertationen über das Post- und Fernmeldewesen. As at September 1932. (Index to Doctoral Dissertations on Posts & Telegraphy), In: Archiv für Post und Telegraphie, Supplement to No. 11 of 1932.

4.2.3.2 Information on Official Publications

Philately is closely connected with postal undertakings, so that official publications, especially those from the governing bodies of postal organizations and their senior managers, are often valuable sources of information. The number of official publications currently in print is large, and they are very hard for a non-librarian to trace. Finding one's way round the indexes to official publications is not easy. The help of one of the staff in a University or other large scientific library should be sought. The State Library of the Prussian Cultural Foundation in West Berlin has the official publications of the Federal and provincial governments, plus those of about 30 states and 70 international organizations, and it also collects Parliamentaria. A search is also recommended in the libraries of the Head Post Offices, and of the provincial Parliaments and other specialist administrative libraries.

List of Serial Publications of Foreign Governments, 1815-1931. Edited by Winifred Greogry for the American Council of Learned Societies. New York: 1932.

Staatsbibliothek Preuss. Kulturbesitz, Berlin. Abt. Internationaler Amtlicher Schriftentausch. Bestands-Verzeichnis Laufend Erscheinender Ausländischer Amtsdruckschriften. (State Library of the Prussian Cultural Foundation, Berlin. Division of International Official Publications Exchange. Index to Holdings of Current Foreign Official Publications), 2 Volumes, December 1967.

James B. Childs: German Federal Republic. Official Publications, 1949-1957. With inclusion of preceding zonal official publications. A survey. 2 Volumes, Washington: 1958. 2. Federal Ministry for Posts & Telegraphs - Zonal Period.

James B. Childs: German Democratic Republic. Official Publications with those of the Preceding Zonal Period, 1945-1958. A survey. 4 Volumes, Washington: 1960-61.

Deutsche Bibliographie. Verzeichnis Amtlicher Druckschriften. (German Bibliography. Index to Official Publications), 1957/58-on, Frankfurt am Main: 1963-on.

Monatliches Verzeichnis der Reichsdeutschen Amtlichen Druckschriften. (Monthly Index to Official Publications of the German Empire), 17 Volumes, Berlin: 1928-1944. (Volume 17, 1944 was only published as far as parts 3/6).

Bibliographie de la France. Supp. F.: Publications Officielles. (Bibliography of France: Supplement F. Official Publications), N°1-on, Paris: 1950-on.

Government Publications. Volume 1-on, London: 1922-on.

Catalog of the Public Documents of Congress & of All Departments of the United States. 25 Volumes, Washington: 1896-1945.

Monthly Checklist of State Publications. Volume 1-on, Washington: 1910-on.

4.2.3.3 Bibliographies of journals

The important, widely-scattered philatelic journal literature can be traced in various places. The general, non-subject-specific periodical catalogues have already been mentioned (see 3.2.2), along with the indexes to periodicals taken by all University libraries and the short-title indexes (see 4.1.2). A distinction must be drawn between subject-specific bibliographies, which only include the titles of periodicals (see 4.2.3.3.1), bibliographies which list the contents of journals (see 4.2.3.3.2), i.e. give the articles in numerous journals under subject headings, and finally cumulative indexes to journals (see 4.2.3.3.3), i.e. a cumulation for several years of the indexes of individual philatelic journals.

4.2.3.3.1 Indexes of the titles of journals

It is very difficult to get a survey of all philatelic journals. All of the indexes to journal titles give merely a selection from the current journals.

Retrospective collections of the older, usually defunct journals are very rare. It is thus very difficult to trace the older and oldest journals, but they can be found to some extent from earlier editions of the title indexes, or from the periodical catalogues of one or more libraries, or from the periodical indexes in the national bibliographies.

A very selective guide to current periodicals from all over the world is:

Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory. A classified guide to current periodicals, foreign and domestic. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Bowker, 1932-on. 3-Yearly, with intermediate publications:-

Serials Supplement 19 ... to Ulrich's International Periodicals Directory. This is also an updating service to Irregular Serials and Annuals.

Ulrich's is classified into subject groups and currently lists some 55,000 journals from all over the world.

This work is supplemented by:

Irregular Serials and Annuals. An international directory. A classified guide to current foreign and domestic serials, excepting periodicals issued more frequently than once a year. 3rd edition, New York, NY: Bowker, 1974.

Philatelic journals can also be found in:

Internationale Bibliographie der Fachzeitschriften. (International Bibliography of Journals) World guide to periodicals. 3 Volumes, 5th edition, Munich-Pullach: Verl. Dokumentation, 1967. (Handbook of International Documentation and Information, Volume 6, 1-3).

Lists currently published journals under 74 subject groups. Part 3 includes a general alphabetical index, along with addresses and an index of sources.

A large selection of European journals and newspapers can be found in:

Willing's European Press Guide. 2nd edition, London: Skinner, 1968.

Nearly all of the journals and newspapers of Great Britain and Ireland, with a selection of European and U.S. titles, can be found in:

Willing's Press Guide. Volume 1-on, London: Skinner. 1874-on. Annually.

Current German-language journals and newspaper, with numerous data relating to advertising, can be found in:-

Stamm. Leitfaden für Presse und Werbung. (Stamm's Guidelines for Press and Advertising), Volume 1-on, Essen: Stamm Verlag, 1974-on. Annually.

Willy Stamm: Deutsches Verlags-Register. (German Publishers' Register), Answers the question: which periodical publications does a publishing house issue? 2nd edition, Essen: Stamm-Verlag, 1972.

Deutschsprachige Zeitschriften. (German-Language Journals), Germany, Austria, Switzerland and international journals with contributions in German. Volume 1-on, Marbach: Verlag der Schillerbuchhandlung, 1956-on. Annually. Lists the journals by title and in subject groups.

Deutsche Bibliographie. Zeitschriften-Verzeichnis. (German Bibliography. Periodicals Index), Bibliography of periodical publications issued in Germany, plus the German language periodicals of Austria, Switzerland and other countries. Issued by the German Library Frankfurt am Main: There are a number of multi-year issues (1945-1952, 1953-1957, 1958-1970). This is a systematic title index with extensive details. It includes indexes of titles, publishers, societies and firms, keywords & catchwords. The dates of this publication enable no-longer current philatelic journals of the post-war period to be traced.

There are numerous other national indexes to periodicals which can be found in large scientific libraries. They are listed in the Bibliography of Bibliographies. (See 4.2.4)

For the U.S.A. there are amongst other things:

Ayers' Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Ayer, 1869-on. Annually.

Gives current periodicals and newspapers for the U.S.A. and Canada, and is arranged in a similar way to Stamm.

The Standard Periodical Directory. The most complete guide to U.S. and Canadian periodicals. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Oxbridge Publ., 1964-on. 3-yearly.

About 62,000 journals from the USA and Canada are given in subject groups with numerous data. There is an index of titles. It includes small, little-known and irregular journals as well as the yearbooks that only appear once a year, and similar things, so that this is the best source for this type of information. As with all indexes, it naturally contains out of date and even incorrect information.

Almost all countries publish national title indexes to their periodicals, and these can be seen in large scientific libraries.

Unfortunately, many society journals are hard to locate in the national and international indexes. The following may be useful in this connection:

Indexes to Titles of Philatelic Journals

Wilhelm Blank: Philatelie in Fach und Tages Presse. (Philately in the Technical & Daily Press), A study of the problem with particular reference to the German technical press. Leipzig: A. Hoffmann, 1930. Appendix: List of relevant journals as at 1st January 1928, and list of German language philatelic journals from 1863-1927.

Pablo Busch: Catalogo de Periodicos Filatelicos y Cartofilos Argentinos. (Catalogue of Argentine Philatelic & Card Collecting Journals), Buenos Aires: 1922. His library was bought by the Collectors Club in 1928.

H. Fraenkel: Chronologische Tabelle der Deutschen Philatelistischen Zeitschriften 1863-1893. (Chronological Table of German Philatelic Journals, 1863-1893), Berlin: Self-published, 1894.

Internationaler Philatelistischer Zeitungs-Katalog. (International Philatelic Journal Catalogue), Leipzig, Malke, 1910.

E. B. Jones: The Comprehensive Check List for Philatelic Literature Collectors: being a ... catalogue of nearly 600 United States and Canada philatelic papers and magazines from 1864 to January 1895. Ruthven, IA: Self-published, 1895. Supplement 1: Omissions and Corrections; 2: Magazines issued from Jan. 1, 1895 to Jan. 1, 1896.

E. B. Jones: Jones' Check List of Philatelic Journals: British Colonies 1864-1902. Sioux City, IA: E. B. Jones, 1904.

E. B. Jones: Jones' Check List of Philatelic Periodicals: Great Britain and Colonies. Sioux City, IA: 1905.

Ralph A. Kimble: American Philatelic Periodical Literature: A Brief Survey. Chicago, IL: R. A. Kimble, 1936.

Ralph A. Kimble: Current philatelic periodicals of the world., Literatur-Nachrichten, September 1952, pp.1-13. Supplement in: Literatur Nachrichten, 11th December 1952, pp.3-16. H. J. Klement: Philatelistische Information. (Philatelic Information), List of philatelic journals, newspapers and advertising papers with number issued. Self-published, Leipzig: 1948.

Alfred Kreuzer: Alte aerophilatelistische zeitschriften von Deutschland. (Old German aerophilatelic journals), After E. A. Walter. Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1973, Volume 48, pp.1012.

Charles J. Peterson: Current West German philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, pp.48-66.

Charles J. Peterson: German serial publications., Philatelic Literature Review, 1969, Volume 18, pp.208-209.

Laurence H. Rehm: English language periodicals on Dutch philately., Philatelic Literature Review, 1976, Volume 25, pp.203-206.

Vito Salierno: The Italian philatelic press., Philatelic Literature Review, 1974, Volume 23, pp.108-113.

Chester M. Smith Jr.: American Philatelic Periodicals. 2nd edition, Pine Grove Mills, PA: C. M. Smith, 1973.

Robert G. Stone: The French philatelic press. Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, pp.6-10.

John K. Tiffany: The Stamp Collector's Library Companion. Part 1: United States periodicals. Chicago, IL: Western Philatelic Publishing Co., 1889. Addenda, 1890.

Daniel W. Vooy: Directory of current stamp periodicals of the world. Philatelic Literature Review, June 1947, Volume 1, pp.5-on.

4.2.3.3.2 Bibliographies covering journal articles

The first place is taken by:-

Internationale Bibliographie der Zeitschriftenliteratur aus allen Gebieten des Wissens. (International Bibliography of Periodical Literature in all Fields of Science), Volume 1-on, Osnabruck: Dietrich, 1897-on. Half-yearly.

About 10,000 journals from all over the world are covered. Part A: Index to journals. Part B: Keyword index.

A publication intended for the users of public libraries (municipal libraries)

Zeitschriftendienst. (Journal Service), Guide to the articles in 130 German journals. Volume 1-on, Berlin: DBV, 1965-on. Monthly. Does not include any philatelic journals. Only a few articles relevant to philately appear every year. However, this review is of interest for philatelic articles in non-specialist journals. The same is true for its American counterpart:

Readers' guide to periodical literature. Issue 1-on, New York, NY: Wilson, 1900-on, with annual cumulations. This has author and subject indexes for about 160 journals from the U.S.A. Philatelic material in the daily press of the Federal Republic can be followed in the:

Zeitungsinde. (Newspaper Index), edited by Willi Gorzny, Number 1-on, Munich: Verl. Dokumentation, 1974-on, 3-monthly.

There is no literary guide devoted exclusively to the international philatelic periodical literature, but many philatelic bibliographies include the contents of philatelic journals (see 4.2.6.1 and 4.2.6.2). Now follows a selection of information media that give a more or less comprehensive review of periodical articles at different levels of specialization:

Bibliographies covering the contents of philatelic journals

Index to current philatelic literature., The American Philatelist, February 1953-on. It continues R. A. Kimble's Index to current periodicals., (see below).

Max Bloch: General-Index 1919. All articles in German-language philatelic journals for the year 1919, including articles, reviews, notes &c., Teplitz-Schonau: Weltpost-Echo, 1920.

Albert Henry Harris: The Standard Index to Philatelic Literature 1829-1925. London: Harris Publications, 1933. Selective bibliography of English philatelic journals, contains no American titles.

W. M. Holbeach: The Postage Stamps of the Commonwealth of Australia: Cumulative Index of Source Material. Melbourne: Royal Philatelic Society of Victoria, 1961. Review to 1954 of the following journals: The Australian Philatelist, The Australian Stamp Journal, The Australian (Victorian) Philatelic Record & The Australian Stamp Monthly.

Ralph A. Kimble: Index to current periodicals. The American Philatelist, February 1937-June 1940. Forerunner of the Index to current philatelic literature (see above)

Literatur-Nachrichten. (Literature Reports), Philatelic literature digest. Berlin: Bundesstelle Literatur, Bund Deutscher Philatelisten, 1951-on. Covers mainly German-language periodicals. Reports on new monographs with reviews. The last issue appeared in 1974, a successor is planned for 1978. The journals covered are held in the Berlin and Munich philatelic libraries. A card index bibliography of the periodical articles listed is in the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library. Indispensable for the period between 1951 and 1974.

Index to books monographs and main articles in journals received by the Royal Philatelic Society London Library. The London Philatelist, 1928, Volume 37, pp.17, 43, 164, 214, 239 & 1929, Volume 38, pp.16, 161, 213.

William A. R. Jex-Long: The Philatelic Index. (1862-1904), Being an alphabetical list of the principal articles contained in a selection of some of the best-known philatelic magazines in the English language up to the end of 1904. Glasgow: Archibald Sinclair, 1906.

Philatelic Index. Comprising ... articles in ... British stamp journals to the end of 1924; with an appendix containing ... monographs in English published since 1908. Perth: Philatelic Congress of Great Britain, 1925. Also includes the Jex-Long philatelic index (see above).

Philatelic Literature Index. London: Harris & Baker, 1926-33. [Same as Albert Henry Harris above.]

The Philatelic Review of Reviews. A monthly resume of periodical literature appertaining to philately. 5 Volumes, 1892-1896. Salisbury: W. Brown, 1892-96.

Philatelistischer Briefdienst. From 1950, Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur, (Archive of Philatelic Literature), 1948-1950, Wunsiedel: Alfred Ihm. Indexes German journals and reviews new monographs.

Francis P. Renaut d'Oultre-Seille: Index Generalis Philaticus. Répertoire Bibliographique de la Presse Philatélique Mondiale. (Bibliographic Index of the Words Philatelic Press), 4 Volumes, Turin: Fédération Internationale de la Presse Philatélique, 1929-30.

William R. Ricketts: The Philatelic Literature Bibliography Index. Being an alphabetically arranged index by author and subject of articles and notes contained in philatelic publications of all kinds in all languages, from 1863 to 1912. Forty-Fort, PA: Ricketts, 1912-1914. Part 1: General. Part 2: Reviews (only from A - F).

William R. Ricketts and Clifford W. Kissinger: American Philatelic Society index to English periodicals 1863-1910., American Philatelist, 1911-26. (only from A - G)

Otto Rommel: Übersicht der in der Zeitungs-Literatur des Jahres 1894 (-96) über die Postwertzeichen der Deutschen Staaten Enthaltenen Aufsätze. (Survey of Articles on the Postage Stamps of the German States Appearing in the Periodical Literature of the Year 1894 (-96)), Leipzig: Published by the author, 1895-97.

Otto Rommel: Verzeichnis der Wichtigsten Philatelistischen Werke und Abhandlungen des In- und Auslandes mit Ausschluss der Zeitungsliteratur. (Index to the Most Important Philatelic Books and Treatises from Germany and Abroad, excluding Periodical Literature), Chemnitz: Kohl, 1907.

Carl Schmitt diel: Bibliographie der Deutschsprachigen Philatelistischen Literatur. (Biography of German-Language Philatelic Literature), Volume 1, Borna near Leipzig: Noske, 1937. Volume 1: General index to the German language periodical literature.

B. T. K. Smith: A philatelic index 1863-1903., Alfred Smith & Son's Monthly Circular, 1904, Volume 30, pp.53, 61, 69, 77.

Index to philatelic literature., 1904-1939. In: Stamp Collectors Annual, London: Nissen, [1905]-1939.

Index to current philatelic periodicals., The Stamp Lover, 1950-on. Mainly devoted to English-language journals, but some German ones also included. Systematic arrangement, initially by countries and then by subjects. The bibliography appears regularly, but only a selection of the titles section is given, which makes it very difficult to use.

Nils Strandell: Verzeichnis über die europäische periodische fachliteratur im Jahre 1908. (-1910) (Register of the European periodical subject literature in the year 1908 (-10)), Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, 1909-11.

Victor Supantschitsch: Bibliographie zugleich Nachschlagebuch der gesamten Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Entstehen bis Ende 1891 Nebst einem Abriss der Geschichte der Philatelie mit Besonderer Berücksichtigung Deutschland's und einer Kurzen Geschichte der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur. (Bibliography and Reference Book on all German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the End of 1891 Including an Outline of the History of Philately with Special Reference to Germany and a Short History of German Philatelic Literature.) Munich: Larisch, 1892. The most important German-language reference work for the 19th century. Also covers journals.

Daniel W. Vooy: Index to current U.S. periodicals., Philatelic Literature Review, 1944, Volume 3, Issue 4, pp.5-14 & 1945, Volume 4, Issue 1, pp.3-16.

T. Martin Wears: An index of English stamp magazines from 1862-1889. Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, 1891, Volume 1, pp.142, 163, 193 & 1892, Volume 2, pp.29, 45, 70.

4.2.3.3 General (cumulative) indexes to periodicals

It is well-known that a professional or scientific journal will have an annual index which from time-to-time, probably at 5 or 10 year intervals, is cumulated to give a general (or cumulative) index. Unfortunately, many philatelic journals do not even publish an annual index, let alone a cumulative one, which would make it much easier to search the literature. For the existence of general indexes, check in:

R. King-Farlow: Subject indexes., The Stamp Lover, 1949, Volume 42, Issue 5/6, pp.68-69.

James Negus: List of cumulated indexes to single periodicals., Philatelic Literature Review, 1974, Volume 23, pp.100-107.

David S. Zubatsky: An annotated bibliography of cumulated indexes to philatelic journals and yearbooks., Philatelic Literature Review, 1977, Volume 26, pp.204-224.

Translator's note: Pages 91-100 contain a list of all cumulative indexes and therefore do not require translating.

4.2.4 Bibliographies of Bibliographies

Bibliographies of bibliographies are publications that again only give details of publications. This naturally presupposes a good bibliographical control of the means of publication. On the one hand, there are bibliographies of bibliographies that are meant to be comprehensive, i.e. give bibliographies on all fields of knowledge in subject order. Usually only independently appearing bibliographies are included, but a few bibliographies of bibliographies do include guides to the literature that have not appeared separately. There are also bibliographies of bibliographies in special fields of knowledge: these usually include separately published and non-separately published lists of references in the field concerned.

a) Of the comprehensive bibliographies of bibliographies we will mention only:

Theodore Besterman: A World Bibliography of Bibliographies and of Bibliographical Catalogues, Calendars, Abstracts, Digests, Indexes and the Like. 5 Volumes, 4th edition, Lausanne: Societas Bibliographica, 1965/66. Continued as:

A World Bibliography of Bibliographies 1964-1974. A list of works represented by Library of Congress printed catalog cards. A decennial supplement to Th. Besterman ..., Volumes 1, 2. Munich: Verl. Dokumentation, 1977.

Constance Mabel Winchel: Guide to Reference Books. 8th edition, Chicago, IL: American Library Association, 1967. Supplemented and superseded by:

Eugene P. Sheehy: Guide to Reference Books. Chicago, IL: American Library Association 1976.

Handbuch der Bibliographischen Nachschlagewerke. (Handbook of Bibliographic Reference Books) Compiled by Wilhelm Totok &c. 5th edition, Frankfurt: Klostermann, 1977.

American Reference Books Annual 19 ... (ARBA). 1-on, Littleton, CO: Libraries Unlimited, 1970-on.

b) Non-independent bibliographies, such as lists of references and surveys of literature in journals, collected works, etc. include:

Bibliographie der Deutschen Bibliographien. (Bibliography of German Bibliographies), Monthly listing of separate and included bibliographies on Germany, the literature of the German-speaking countries and important lists of unpublished titles. 1-on, Leipzig: Deutsche Bücherei, 1966-on. Monthly.

Previous issues since 1930 are available as bound volumes.

Bibliographische Berichte. (Bibliographical Reports), Bibliographic bulletin. Published by the Cultural Section of the Prussian State Library, Frankfurt am Main: Klostermann, 1959. Half-yearly. Current international bibliography of separate and non-separate bibliographies in systematic order with yearly subject and author indexes. There are some cumulative indexes. The emphasis is on East European languages.

Bibliographic Index. A cumulative bibliography of bibliographies. New York, NY: Wilson, 1938-on. Half-yearly, yearly cumulation. Various multi-year cumulations are available. Emphasis on English-language bibliographies. Keyword arrangement. No index. Here again, not many philatelic bibliographies have been located, since bibliographies containing less than 50 titles are not included.

On the whole, philately receives only marginal treatment in the bibliographies of bibliographies. This is mainly because there are virtually no separately-published bibliographies in the field of philately, and not very many comprehensive ones that are not published separately.

c) Philatelic bibliographies of bibliographies:

These appear almost exclusively in the English-speaking world. They aim to cover the more important separate and non-separate (periodical) literature, e.g.:

Walter Curley: Basic philatelic reference literature., American Philatelic Congress Book, 1962, pp. 51-62.

John Boynton Kaiser: Bibliography: The basis of philatelic research., American Philatelic Congress Book, 1963. Reprinted by Philatelic Library Association, Canajoharie, NY, 1953.

Richard Lawson: A Librarian's Guide to the Literature of Philately., Cleveland, OH: School of Library Science, Western Reserve University, 1958. (Master's thesis)

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Bibliographie zur geschichte der philatelistischen Literatur., (Bibliography of the history of philatelic literature), Sammler-Dienst, 1975, Volume 26, pp.1267-1269.

Fred J. Melville: Sources of Information for the Philatelic Student. London: F. J. Melville, 1924.

James Negus: Good Bibliographic Practice. A series of 4 papers reprinted from the Philatelic Literature Review, State College, PA: American Philatelic Research Library, 1971.

James Negus: A brief guide to sources of philatelic information., Philately, 1958, Volume 7, Issue 8, pp.102-103; 1959, Volume 7, Issue 9, pp.116, 121.

James Negus: How to find information about postal stationery., The Stamp Lover, December/January, 1959/60, Volume 2, p.96.

Erwin Probst: Bibliographie, dokumentation und dezimalklassifikation im dienst der philatelie and postgeschichte., Literatur Nachrichten, 1971, Whole number 60, pp.144-154. English translation: Bibliography, documentation and decimal classification in the service of philately and postal history., Philatelic Literature Review, 1972, Volume 21, pp.185-196.

Heinz Kalker: Bibliographien und nachschlagewerke als hilfe für die wissenschaftliche arbeit auf den gebieten geschichte, landeskunde und Post- und Fernmeldewesen., (Bibliographies and reference works as aids in the scientific study of the history, local history and Post & Telegraph Operation), A selection from the German, French and Dutch language areas., Mittelrheinische Postgeschichte, Special issue 1969.

It should also be mentioned here that the journal Philatelic Literature Review acts almost as a bibliography of bibliographies. It appears quarterly and aims at extending philatelic literature and making it more accessible. Practically every issue includes at least one specialised philatelic bibliography or an overall list of contents for a philatelic journal.

4.2.5 The National Bibliographies

National bibliographies appear relatively quickly but do not always give complete coverage of a country's literature. Usually certain categories of material such as magazines, university publications, and books not handled by the book trade are ignored. Generally everything within a certain field of knowledge is included with no attempt at qualitative selection. There are current, usually weekly, initial issues followed by cumulations, e.g. yearly or five yearly. National bibliographies are quite long-standing in most countries. Thus, there is always the chance of using national bibliographies to locate practically every separately-appearing book on philatelic topics in the various countries.

The German Federal and German Democratic Republics today have independent national bibliographies. The essential forerunners for the German Reich were:

Wilhelm Heinsius: Allgemeines Bücher-Lexicon ... (General Book Lexicon ...), 19 Volumes, 1700-1892, Leipzig: 1812-94.

Hinrichs's Bücherkatalog. (Hinrichs's Catalogue of Books), 13 Volumes, Leipzig: 1875-1913. Covers the period 1851-1912).

Christian Gottlieb Kayser: Vollständiges Bücherlexikon ... including all ... books published in Germany and the adjoining countries. 36 Volumes, Leipzig: 1834-1911. Covers the period 1750-1910.

Karl Georg & Leopold Ost: Schlagwort-Katalog. (Keyword Catalogue), Index to books and maps in subject order. 7 Volumes, 1883/87 to 1910/12, Hanover, Leipzig: 1889-1913.

Deutsches Bücherverzeichnis. (German Book Catalogue), A compilation of all the books, journals and maps that appeared in the German book trade. Compiled by the bibliographic section of the Stock Exchange. 22 Volumes, Leipzig: 1916-1943. Covers the period 1911-1940. Continues the catalogues by Hinrichs and Kayser. Continued under the title:

Deutsches Bücherverzeichnis. (German Book Catalogue), Compilation of German language literature published in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and other foreign countries, with the most important publications from outside the book trade. Volume 1-on, Leipzig: 1952-on. An overall cumulation appears from 1976, onwards.

Gesamtverzeichnis des Deutschsprachigen Schrifttums 1911 bis 1965. (General Catalogue of German Language Literature 1911 to 1965), Munich: Verlag Documentation 1976-on.

German Democratic Republic (DDR)

Deutsche Nationalbibliographie. (German National Bibliography), Issued by the German Library in Leipzig, appears in the following current series:

Deutsche Nationalbibliographie und Bibliographie des im Ausland Erschienenen Deutschsprachigen Schrifttums. (German National Bibliography & Bibliography of German Language Literature Published Abroad.)

- Series A: New publications from the book trade
- B: New publications outside the book trade
- C: Theses and dissertations.

Volume 1, 1968-onwards. Series A and part of Series B cumulate to:

Jahresverzeichnis des Deutschen Schrifttums. (Annual Catalogue of German Literature.) which later cumulates again to:

Deutsches Bucherverzeichnis. (German Book Catalogue) Catalogue of German-language books published in Germany, Austria, Switzerland and other countries, along with the most important publications outside the book trade and foreign language material published in Germany. Title and keyword indexes are given, so that a subject search is possible. As the Austrian and Swiss literature is included along with the German, a search in the Austrian and Swiss national bibliographies is not usually necessary.

German Federal Republic (BRD)

The German Library in Frankfurt am Main publishes the Deutsche Bibliographie. (German Bibliography), covering all the German literature and the German language literature of Austria and Switzerland.

Deutsche Bibliographie. Wöchentliches Verzeichnis. (German Bibliography. Weekly Catalogue), Volume 1-on, Frankfurt: 1947-on.

- Series A Book trade publications
- B Publications outside the book trade

Parts in cumulation are:

Deutsche Bibliographie. Halbjahresverzeichnis. (German Bibliography. Half Yearly Catalogue), Volume 1-on, Frankfurt: 1951-on.

Deutsche Bibliographie. Fünfjahresverzeichnis. (German Bibliography. Five Yearly Catalogue.), Bibliography of all German language publications in Germany, Austria and Switzerland from the book trade. German publications from other countries. Plus a title and keyword index to books and maps. 1945-50-on, Frankfurt: 1953-55-on.

The current issues of Series A & B divide the literature into wide subject groups. Philately is not one of these, but appears under Commercial Science. The German-language philatelic literature is very easy to trace by the title and keyword indexes in the cumulations.

All countries have National Bibliographies. These will be found in the general bibliographies of bibliographies, e.g. the Handbuch der Bibliographischen Nachschgewerke. (Handbook of Bibliographical Reference Works.) The large scientific libraries and university libraries take most National Bibliographies. They can be consulted there in case of need. Only the particularly important English-language National Bibliographies will be mentioned here:

The British National Bibliography. Volume 1-on, London, 1950-on. Besides the weekly issues the yearly cumulation is essential. It is classified by the modified Dewey Decimal System. Philately will be found in Section 769.56. There are author and subject indexes.

Particular mention should be given to the national bibliographies from the U.S.A. There are various sources of information:

Cumulative Book Index. (CBI) A world list of books in the English language. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Wilson, 1898-on. Monthly. This appears monthly and has regular cumulations. It lists in one alphabetical list the authors, titles and keywords of books in the English language. Literature outside the book trade and pamphlets of less than 50 pages are excluded.

The book trade literature appears in:

Publishers' Weekly., Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Bowker, 1872-on.

The monthly cumulation has the title.

American Book Publishing Record. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Bowker, 1960-on.

This has appeared as a yearly cumulation since 1966:

American Book Publishing Record (BPR) Cumulative 19... An annual cumulation of American book production in 19.. as catalogued by the Library of Congress and recorded both in Publishers' Weekly and in the monthly issues of the American Book Publishing Record. Arranged by subject according to the Dewey Decimal Classification and indexed by author and title. New York, NY: Bowker, 1960-on. Annually.

Covering the literature that appears outside the book trade is very difficult. Firms, scientific societies, etc. have publications and pamphlets. Societies and institutions publish reports, records, congresses, etc. Only part of these ever get into the national libraries and thus into the national bibliographies - often in series - and only a small selection get into the cumulations.

A selection of English pamphlets appears in:

Vertical File Index. A subject and title guide to selected pamphlet materials. Volume 1-on, New York, NY: Wilson, 1932-on. Monthly.

Literature issued by firms does not usually get into national catalogues.

Firm's magazines are almost never collected by libraries.

Because society publications tend to be missed by bibliographies, it is necessary to apply to the organisation concerned, but they are often found to have no or grossly deficient archives.

There is no collection of and description of the overall literature on philately in any country. Keeping track of material not issued by the book trade should be one of the activities of the national philatelic societies.

4.2.6 Subject bibliographies

The subject coverage on philately is not particularly good, with a few happy exceptions, and so the aid of such things as library catalogues (See 4.2.2) has to be sought. Subject bibliographies can appear independently or otherwise; in the latter case they usually appear in a philatelic magazine. They can be retrospective, covering only a limited period of time, or they may appear continuously. It should be noted that the bibliographical details are often very incomplete, and are not infrequently misleading or even totally wrong.

4.2.6.1 Separately-published subject bibliographies - comprehensive

The following bibliographies aim at a more or less wide coverage of the philatelic literature from all countries. However, the bulk of the entries are always in the language of the country of publication.

Fritz Billig: Mondial. Billig's Internationales Philatelistisches Literature-Nachschlagewerke. (Billig's International Philatelic Literature Index), Vienna: Billig, 1936-37. Appeared in loose-leaf form. Also included an index to journals.

Percy C. Bishop: A Brief Philatelic Bibliography. (with prices) London: Vallancey, 1917.

Percy C. Bishop: A Collector's Catalogue of Philatelic Literature. London: Stamp Collecting, 1917.

Catalogo dell'Esposizione Internazionale di Letteratura Filatelica. (Catalogue of the International Exhibition of Philatelic Literature), Regiofil XII, Under the patronage of the Swiss Federation of Philatelic Societies. Lugano: 1977. Exhibition catalogue of philatelic literature.

Henry Collin & Henry L. Calman: A Catalogue for Advanced Collectors. 14 Parts, New York, NY: Scott, 1890-1901.

Filatelistskaya Bibliografiya. (Philatelic Bibliography), List of basic literature, books and journals, by country on the history of the Posts, postage stamps and philately published in the Russian language over 125 years. (1843-1968) Compiled by S. Babintsev, Moscow: Izdat'stvo Svyaz' 1970. Systematic arrangement.

John Edward Gray: List of manuals catalogues and albums and also articles in non-philatelic magazines. London 1862.

Reprint: John Edward Gray: The earliest philatelic bibliography. (Reprinted) from the 1st edition of Dr. J. E. Gray's catalog of postage stamps. In: Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, 1911, Volume 4, pp.18-19.

Albert Henry Harris: The Philatelic Literature Catalogue ..., London: The Philatelic Magazine, 1942.

Albert H. Harris: Food for Thought. 1945 edition of the Philatelic Literature Catalogue, London: Harris Publications Ltd. 1944.

Index to books monographs and main articles in journals received by the Royal Philatelic Society London Library. In: The London Philatelist, 1928, Volume 37, pp.17, 43, 164, 214, 239; 1929, Volume 38, pp.16, 161, 213.

International Exposition of the Philatelic Press and Philatelic Literature. 2nd edition, Prague: 1938.

Exposition Internationale de la Presse et de la Littérature Philatéliques. (International Exhibition of the Philatelic Press and Literature), Official catalogue. Brussels: 1935.

Rudolf Krasemann: Bibliographie der Wichtigsten Spezialwerke über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder. (Bibliography of the most Important Handbooks on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries), Stockholm: Sveriges Filatelist-Förening, 1907. Also reprinted in Hanover: Der Deutsche Philatelist 1908.

Jean B. Moens: Catalogue d'Albums, Journaux et Livres Concernant les Timbres-Poste. (Catalogue of Albums, Magazines and Books Relating to Postage Stamps), Brussels: Published by the author, 1886.

Jean B. Moens: Notice des Publications Philatéliques que l'on peut Obtenir par Correspondance Seulement chez J. B. Moens. (Notice of the Philatelic Publications which can be Obtained by Writing to J. B. Moens), Brussels: Kistiaens, 1903.

Jean B. Moens: Publications Timbrologiques. (Publications relating to stamps), Published by the author, 1897.

William R. Ricketts: The Philatelic Literature Bibliography Index. Being alphabetically arranged index by author and subject of articles and notes contained in philatelic publications of all kinds in all languages, from 1863 to 1912. Forty-Fort, PA: Ricketts, 1912-1914. Part 1: General. Part 2: Reviews (Only from A-F).

Phillip Rochlin: A Bibliography of Recent General Books on Stamp and Coin Collecting and the Postal Service. Passaic, NJ: Philatelic Literature Association, 1958.

Richard H. Rosichan: Stamps and Coins. Littleton, CO: Libraries Unlimited, 1974. Spare Time Guides. No. 5)

Nils Strandell: Odödliga Frimärksböcker. (Immortal Books), On stamps – a brief account of the contents of a hundred of the most significant philatelic books published since 1900 - chosen by Sigurd Tullberg. Stockholm: Bibliotekens Bokförmödling, 1947.

Victor Suppansschitsch: Die Entstehung und Entwicklung der Philatelistischen Literatur in der Zweiten Hälfte des XIX. Jahrhunderts. (The Origin and Development of Philatelic Literature in the Second Half of the 19th Century), Vienna: Published by the author, 1901.

John Kerr Tiffany: The Stamp Collector's Library Companion. Chicago: Western Philatelic Publishing Co., 1889.

F. Hugh Vallancey: Guide to Philatelic Literature. 4th edition, London: Vallancey, 1939.

R. J. Vergeront: Directory of Leading Philatelic Publications. Madison, WI: Published by the author, 1941.

Specialised

Argentina

Pablo E. Busch: Catalogo de Revistas Filatelicas y Cartofilas de la Republica Argentina 1874-1926. (Catalogue of Philatelic and Postcard magazines of Argentina 1874-1926), Buenos Aires: Published by the author, 1926.

Belgium

Raoul Hubinot: Bibliographie de la Philatélie Belge. (Bibliography of Belgian Philately), Studies, books, periodicals, annuals, etc. Brussels: Published by the author, Brugmann in Komm, 1972.

Robert Leroy: Bibliografie van de Filatelie in België. (Bibliography of Philately in Belgium), Ostende: Published by the author, 1973.

Costa Rica

Earl G. Fossum: Costa Rican Index. Index to Costa Rican philatelic literature 1863-1973. Boyertown, PA: Society of Costa Rica Collectors, 1974.

Germany

Carl Beck: Bibliographie der Deutschen Sonderschriften über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder. (Bibliography of German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual States), 3rd edition, Berlin: Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, 1923.

Alexander Bungerez: Die Deutschsprachige Philatelistische Literatur im Jahre 1921. (German-Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1921), Berlin: Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, 1923. Special publication No.1 of the Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors.

Alfred Koch: Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen. (Literature on the German postal system), 3 Volumes, Hamburg, Berlin: Deckers, 1966-72 (Literature on the German postal system, Volumes 3-5).

Volume 1 1871-1964

Volume 2 Supplement 1500-1964

Volume 3 1965-1970

Friedrich Leitenberg: Bibliographie der Deutschsprachigen Literatur 1925. (Bibliography of German-Language Literature 1925), Neustadt/Orla: Wagner, 1925.

Literaturnachrichten. (Literature Reports), Philatelic literature digest, Number 1-on, Berlin: Literature Section, Federation of German Philatelists, 1951-on.

Philatelistischer Briefdienst. (Philatelic Letter Service), (From 1950: Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur), Wunsiedel: Alfred Ihm, 1948-1950. Evaluation of German periodicals and listing of new books.

Otto Rommel: Verzeichnis der Wichtigsten Philatelistischen Werke and Abhandlungen des in- und Auslandes mit Ausschluss der Zeitungsliteratur. (Catalogue of the Most Important Domestic and Foreign Philatelic Works and Treatises with the Exception of Periodical Literature), Chemnitz: Kohl, 1907.

Victor Suppantschitsch: Bibliographie der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur. (Bibliography, of the German Philatelic Literature), Munich: 1892.

Victor Suppantschitsch: Bibliographie Zugleich Nachschlagebuch der Gesamten Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Entstehen bis Ende 1891 nebst einem Abriss der Geschichte der Philatelie mit Besonderer Berücksichtigung Deutschlands und einer Kurzen Geschichte der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur. (Bibliography and Reference Book for the Entire German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the End of 1891 Including an Outline of the History of Philately with Special Reference to Germany and a Short History of German Philatelic Literature), Munich: Larisch, 1892.

Max Ton: Handbuch der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur. (Handbook of German Philatelic Literature), 2nd edition, Die Post, 1924.

Baden

Christoph Otto Muller: Baden Bibliographie. Philatelic index compiled on the basis of the holdings of the philatelic division of the Munich City Library as at the 1st November 1961. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1960.

Bavaria

Christoph Otto Muller: Bayern Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1961.

Berlin

Jürgen Walther: Bibliographie des Philatelistischen Schrifttums über das Sammelgebiet Berlin. (Bibliography of the Philatelic Literature covering the Collecting area of Berlin), Kassel: Forschungsgemeinschaft Berlin, 1977.

Bremen, Hamburg, Lubeck

Karl Knauer: Postgeschichtliche and Philatelistische Bibliographie der Hansestädte Bremen, Hamburg, Lübeck und des Biederstädtischen Amtes Bergedorf. (Postal History and Philatelic Bibliography of the Hanseatic Towns Bremen, Hamburg, Lubeck and the Region of Bergedorf), Hamburg: Published by the author, 1972.

Brunswick

W. Herzog: Bibliographie der in der Deutschen Literatur Erschienenen die Postwertzeichen des Herzogtums Braunschweig Betreffenden Werke, Zeitungsartikel and Notizen. (Bibliography of Books, Newspaper Articles and Notices Relating to the Postage Stamps of the Duchy of Brunswick that have appeared in the German Literature), Borne: R. Noske, 1923. (Die Ganzsache. Reprint N°4)

Bohemia & Moravia

H.-H. Paetow: Literaturverzeichnis (Böhmen und Mähren, Mährisch-Ostrau, Theresienstadt, Tschechoslowakei). (Catalogue of Literature – Bohemia & Moravia, Ostrava, Theresienstadt, Czechoslovakia), Bielefeld: Sammlergemeinschaft Protektorat Böhmen and Mähren, 1973.

Prussia

Christoph Otto Muller: Preussen-Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1961.

Saar

Christoph Otto Muller: Saar-Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1961.

Saxony

Christoph Otto Muller: Sachsen-Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1961.

Thurn and Taxis

Christoph Otto Muller: Thurn und Taxis Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1966.

Wurttemberg

Christoph Otto Muller: Wurttemberg-Bibliographie. Duisburg: Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, 1961.

England and English-Language Literature

P. J. Anderson & B. T. K. Smith: Early English Philatelic Literature 1862-65. London: Philatelic Literature Society, 1912.

Philatelic index: Comprising ... articles in ... British stamp journals to the end of 1924; with an appendix containing ... monographs in English published since 1908. Perth: Philatelic Congress of Great Britain, 1925.

Arnold M. Strange: A List of Books on the Postal History, Postmarks and Adhesive Postage and Revenue Stamps of Great Britain. 2nd edition, London: Great Britain Philatelic Society, 1971.

Estonia

Henry Blum: Bibliography of Estonian Philatelic Literature. Part 1. New York, NY: New York Estonian Philatelic Society, 1973.

France

Ph. de Bosredon: Bibliographie Timbrologique de la France et de la Belgique. (Philatelic Bibliography of France and of Belgium), Brussels: Moens, 1878.

Emmanuel Blanc: Bibliographie Française des Postes et de la Philatélie. (Bibliography of the Post and of the Philately of France), Paris: Ed. Berger-Levrault, 1949.

Pierre Nougaret: Bibliographie Critique de l'Histoire Postale Française. (Critical Bibliography of French Postal History), 2 Parts, Montpellier: Nougaret; Faculté des Sciences, 1970.

Italy

Luigi Piloni: Bibliografia della Posta e Filatelia Italiana. (Bibliography of the Italian Post and Philately), Florence: Olschki, 1959. (Biblioteca di Bibliografia Italiana, 33)

Vito Salierno: Bibliografia Italiana degli Interi Postali. (Bibliography of the Italian Postal System), Turin: ASIF, 1970.

Vito Salierno: Bibliografia Filatelica e Storico-Postale, Ragionata, delle Lombardia e del Veneto. (Critical Bibliography of the Philately & Postal History of Lombardy-Venetia), Milan: Studio Bibliografico Forlanini, 1973.

Netherlands

Gids voor de Philatelistische Literatuur van Nederland en Kolonien. (Guide to the Philatelic Literature of the Netherlands and its Colonies), Baarn: Mevr. M. J. van Heerdt-Kolff, 1930.

Austro-Hungary

Victor Suppantschitsch: Die Philatelistische Literatur Österreich-Ungarns im 19. Jahrhundert. (The Philatelic Literature of Austro-Hungary in the 19th Century), Leipzig: Hesse & Becker, 1901.

Spain

Mariano Pardo de Figueroa: Literatura Filatélica en España. (Philatelic Literature in Spain), Seville: 1876.

Ukraine

Julian Maksymczuk: Bibliographic Guide to Ukrainian Philately, Revenue Stamps and Bank Notes. Chicago, IL: Ukrainian Philatelic Library, 1958. (In Russian)

United States

Laura S. Young: Books on the Subject of Stamp Collecting Printed in the United States 1933-1958. New York, NY: 1939. (Columbia University Library Service, 266)

Wales

Paul Rupert Reynolds: Bibliography of Welsh Philately and Postal History. Swansea: Welsh Philatelic Society, 1973.

Forgeries

H. E. Tester: Literature of Cinderella Philately. London: L. N. & M. Williams, 1972. (Cinderella Stamp Club Handbook, 1)

Lowell Ragatz: An Introduction to the Literature on Philatelic Forgeries. Washington: Education Research Bureau, 1953.

Postal Stationery

James L. Lowe: Bibliography of Postcard Literature. A list of references pertaining to the publishing and collecting of picture post cards. Folsom, PA: Published by the author, 1969.

Herman Deninger: Vorphilatelistische und Postgeschichtliche Literatur. (Pre-stamp and Postal History Literature), Frankfurt am Main: Deutscher Altbriefsammler-Verein, 1965.

4.2.6.2 Not separately published subject bibliographies

Aden

Murray A. M. Graham: A bibliography of Aden. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1969, Volume 18, pp.4-on.

Albert H. Higgins: A bibliography of books and articles on the stamps of Aden and the Hadhramaut States. in: Philatelic Literature Review, 1952, Volume 2, Issue 2, pp.15-16.

Afghanistan

Cecil H. Uyehara: Afghan stamps, an annotated bibliography. In: S.P.A. Journal, 1974, Volume 37, Issue 1, p.2.

Albania/Epirus

James Negus: Literature on Albania and Epirus. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1952, Volume 18, pp.2-on.

Argentina

Walter B. L. Bose: Indice bibliografico de la literatura filatélica Argentina (1874-1935). (Bibliographical index to the philatelic literature of Argentina), In: Boletín Bahía Blanca, 1933-35, Whole numbers 8-10. Reprinted with additions in: Boletín del Instituto de Investigaciones Históricas, (Faculty of Philosophy and Letters, National University of Buenos Aires.) 1935, Whole number 69/72, pp.90-151 & 1936, Whole number 73, pp.70-125.

Walter B. L. Bose: Literatura filatélica Argentina (1874-1938). (Argentine philatelic literature), In: Revista SFA, 1938-40, Whole numbers 500-515.

British North America

R. J. Duncan: A brief review of British North American philatelic literature. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1953, Volume 3, Issue 2, pp.19-23.

R. J. Duncan: Bibliography of B.N.A. In: Maple Leaves, 1948, Volume 2, Issue 2, pp.23-25.

R. J. Duncan: Index to Canadian philatelic literature. In: BNA Topics, 1949, Volume 6, Issue 4, pp.88-89.

Edward A. Richardson: Canadian philatelic literature: A working library. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1951, Volume 1, Issue 4, pp.83-88.

China

A. W. Bendig: Chinese revenue bibliography. In: The American Revenuer, December 1955, Volume 9; September 1957, Volume 11 & November 1960, Volume 14.

Germany

Alfred Koch: Ostdeutsche Postbibliographie 1685-1968. (East German Post bibliography), An overview of significant publications on the subject in East Germany. In: Jahrbuch der Schlesischen Friedrich-Wilhelms-Universität zu Breslau, 1970, Volume 15, pp.391-434. Also reprinted by Holzner, Würzburg: 1970.

Erwin Probst: Thurn und Taxis Bibliographie 1966/67. In: Arbeitsgemeinschaft Thurn und Taxis, 1968, Issue 2.

R. Enders: Literaturhinweis über die Postgeschichte und markenausgaben gesamtchlesiens. (Literature references on postal history and postage stamps), In: Sammler-Dienst, 1967, Volume 18, pp.691-693.

Ecuador

Leo J. Harris: Philatelic literature of the Republic of Ecuador, with commentary. In: Philatelic Literature Review, 1965, Volume 14, pp.109-on & 1966, Volume 15, pp.187-on.

France

Robert G. Stone: Trends in French philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1957, Volume 7, pp.39-44.

Robert G. Stone: Articles on French philately, as reported in "France & Colonies Philatelist"., Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, pp.18-on.

Robert G. Stone: The French philatelic press., Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, pp.6-on.

Robert G. Stone: Recent books pamphlets and catalogs, as reported in "France & Colonies Philatelist"., Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, pp.12-on.

Robert G. Stone: A bibliography of philatelic literature on the French colonies protectorates and overseas territories., Philatelic Literature Review, 1977, Volume 26, pp.68-85 & 225-231.

Greece

Moses C. Constantinis: The philatelic press in Greece., Philatelic Literature Review, 1960 Volume 9, Issue 1, pp.3-8.

Guatemala

Bernard Ahman: Bibliography for Guatemala specialists., International Society of Guatemala Collectors [El Quetzal], 1950, Volume 2, Issues 12-15.

R. J. Routhier (ed.): Index of articles that have appeared on CI-28., El Quetzal, 1954, Volume 6, pp.60-66 & 1954 [sic], p.61.

India

F. M. Cowen: A guide to the philatelic literature of India., Philatelic Literature Review, 1953, Volume 3, Issue 4, pp.51-57.

Ireland

Joseph E. Foley: Annotated bibliography on the philatelic literature of Ireland., Philatelic Literature Review, 1967, Volume 16, Issue 1, pp.26-on.

Israel/Palestine

Martin J. Warmbrand: Bibliography of Palestine-Israel philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1955, Volume 5, Issue 3, pp.45-on.

Jamaica

Howard J. Gaston: Jamaica bibliography: postage stamps and postal history., Philatelic Literature Review, 1962, Volume 12, Issue 1, pp.13-on; 1965, Volume 14, Issue 1, pp.7-on & Issue 3, pp.72-on.

Korea

Helen K. Zirkle: Bibliography for philately of Korea., Philatelic Literature Review, 1967, Volume 16, Issue 2, pp.84-on.

Luxembourg

James Taylor Dunn (ed.): Luxembourg bibliography: Stamps and postal history., Philatelic Literature Review, 1955, Volume 5, Issue 4, pp.81-91.

Manchuria

Helen Kingsbury Zirkle: The stamps of Manchoukuo: a supplement to the general catalogues for the specialist., American Philatelic Congress Book, 1960, Number 26, pp.157-173.

Mauritius

Arnold Green & Carl Steig: Bibliography of Mauritius Philately., Mauritius-Seychelles Study Group Occasional Paper 3, 1958, pp.1-4 & Paper 4, 1958, pp.5-10.

Mexico

Lawrence W. Pawley: Mexican philatelic research bibliography., Philatelic Literature Review, 1968, Volume 17, Issue 3, pp.112-on.

Mongolia

James Negus: A Mongolian bibliography., Mongolian Bulletin, 1959.

James Negus: Bibliography of Mongolian philately., Philatelic Literature Review, 1963, Volume 12, Issue 2, pp.45-on & 1969, Volume 18, Issue 1, pp.12-on.

Morocco

Bill Bryan: The private posts of Morocco., Philatelic Literature Review, 1961, Volume 10, Issue 2, pp.12-on.

Mozambique Company

John K. Cross & Lester J. Wadsworth: A Mozambique Company bibliography., Portu-Info, 1974, Volume 10, Issue 2, pp.25-32.

Netherlands

Kl. Kouwenberg: The Dutch philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1970, Volume 19, pp.128-135.

New Zealand

R. M. Startup: New Zealand philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1964, Volume 13, Issue 2, pp.36-on.

Palestine/Israel

Martin J. Warmbrand: Bibliography of Palestine-Israel literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1955, Volume 5, Issue 3, pp.45-66.

Panama

Edmund B. Thomas Jr.: The postage stamps of Panama: a preliminary bibliography., Philatelic Literature Review, 1976, Volume 25, pp.130-137.

Papua/New Guinea

Richard S. Wilson: A bibliography of the philatelic literature of Papua and New Guinea., Philatelic Literature Review, 1969, Volume 18 pp.170-on.

Poland

W. Kolakowski: Poland - its philatelic literature., Collectors Club Philatelist, 1958, Volume 37, pp.35-36 & 52.

M. A. Lipinski: Polen - Bibliographie., Literatur Nachrichten, 1962, Whole number 47/48.

Portugal

A. Guedes de Magalhaes: Bibliography of Portuguese philatelic literature., Philatelic Literature Review, 1966, Volume 15, pp. 8-37; 1967, Volume 16, pp.140-41 & 1975, Volume 24, pp.242-245.

Romania

Don Heller: Philatelic literature on Romania. Philatelic Literature Review, 1975, Volume 24, pp.4-26.

Russia

Rimma Sklarevski: Philatelic literature on Russia., Philatelic Literature Review, 1955, Volume 5, Issue 2, pp.34-36.

Rimma Sklarevski: Zemstov philatelic literature. Journal of the Rossica Society of Russian Philately, 1957, Whole number 51, pp.51-52 & 1958, Whole number 54, pp.54 & 64.

Spain

Theo Van Dam: A bibliography of Spanish postal history., Philatelic Literature Review, 1974, Volume 24, pp.134-155.

Norman Gahl: A bibliography of Spanish postal history. Addenda & corrigenda., Philatelic Literature Review, 1976, Volume 25 pp.124-126.

Bibliography of the philately of the Spanish civil war., Philatelic Literature Review, 1966, Volume 15, pp.118-on.

Theo Van Dam: Bibliography of the philately of the Spanish Civil War., Philatelic Literature Review, 1966, Volume 15, pp.172-on & 1967, Volume 16, pp. 136-on.

South Africa

John Dowd: The siege of Mafeking philately: A bibliography., Philatelic Literature Review, 1969, Volume 18, pp.16-on.

South America

Ralph A. Kimble: Pan American philatelic index 1937-40., The American philatelist, 1942, Volume 55, Issue 5, p.292.

Henry A. Meyer: Bibliography of books and magazine articles on the stamps of Brazil., Collectors Club Philatelist, 1943, Volume 22, Issue 3, p.239.

Sweden

Ernst M. Cohn: Publications of the Swedish Postal Museum. Philatelic Literature Review, 1957, Volume 6, Issue 2, pp.15-16 & 22.

Phillip Rochlin: Swedish Postal Museum publications, addenda., Philatelic Literature Review, 1960, Volume 9, Issue 2, p.27.

Czechoslovakia

John Velek: Bibliography of the philatelic literature on Czechoslovakia., Philatelic Literature Review, 1970, Volume 19, pp.13-21.

Ukraine

S. de Shramchenko: Review of current Ukrainian press., Journal of the Rossica Society of Russian Philately, 1956, Whole number 49/50, p.51.

United Nations

Hans M. Salzmann: Sports and United Nations bibliography., Topical Time, 1954, Volume 5, Issue 3, pp.102-105.

United States of America

Harry M. Konwiser: Stampless cover bibliography., The American Philatelist, 1932, Volume 5, Issue 11, p.554.

Barbara R. Mueller: Postal history and markings: Basic reference material and philatelic literature for the postal historian of the Bureau issues period., Bureau Specialist, 1956, Volume 27, Issue 3, pp.68-69.

Robert L. Markovits: A partial bibliography on U.S. registered mail., Philatelic Literature Review, 1971, Volume 20, pp.93-95.

Arthur Hecht: Confederate States postal records in the National Archives and the Library of Congress., Philatelic Literature Review, 1961, Volume 10, Issue 2, pp.15-18.

Van Dyk MacBride: A bibliography of books and articles on Confederate stamps and postal history., Philatelic Literature Review, 1950, Volume 1, Issue 1, pp.5-15 & Issue 2, p.33; 1952, Volume 2, Issue 2, pp.17-20; 1954, Volume 4, Issue 3, pp. 23-27; 1956, Volume 6, Issue 2, pp.65-69; 1959, Volume 8, Issue 4, pp.39-43 & 1961, Volume 10, Issue 1, pp.4-7.

Eidse C. Stanford: United States Government publications. Some bibliographic notes., Philatelic Literature Review, 1977, Volume 26, pp.13-21.

Arthur Hecht: Postal history sources: Official registers of the United States., The American Philatelist, 1961, Volume 74, pp.891-894 & 930-931.

Hawaii

Literature on Hawaii., Philatelic Literature Review, 1944, Volume 3, Issue 2, pp.13-on.

THEMATIC

Airpost

Aero philatelic digest., Airpost Journal, 1962, Volume 33, pp.220-222.

Railway Post

Rolf Ritter: Versuch einer Bahnpost-Bibliographie. (An attempt at a railway post bibliography), Deutsche Zeitung für Briefmarkenkunde, 1973, Volume 48, pp.2561-2564.

Postal Stationery

George Fischer: Bibliography of articles on postal stationery published in "Japanese Philately" Oct. 1950- June 1968., Philatelic Literature Review, 1970, Volume 19, pp.7-12.

Religion

Walter A. Sager: Bibliography of religion on stamps., Philatelic Literature Review, 1956, Volume 6, pp.97-109.

Chess

E. Meissenberg: Bibliographie des schachphilatelistischen schrifttums. (Bibliography of chess philately writings), Sammler-Dienst, 1966, Volume 17, pp.1000-1002; 1968, Volume 19, pp.403-405 & 1972, Volume 23, pp.1423-1425.

4.2.7. Aids to the Study of Postal History

If information is wanted not purely from the philatelic view, but also from the standpoint of postal undertakings, the following literature may be consulted with advantage:

Reinhard K. J. Badenhoop (ed.): Bibliographie zur Organisation von Staat, Verwaltung, Wirtschaft. (Bibliography on the Organization of State Government Economy), 3 Volumes, Cologne & Berlin: Grote, 1966-1968, pp.1596-1635. Bibliography on post & telegraphy.

Bibliographie zur verkehrsgeschichte des Mittelrheins unter besonderer berücksichtigung des Post- und Fernmeldewesens 1956-1964. (Bibliography on the commercial history of the Middle Rhine with particular respect to the Postal and Telegraph undertakings 1956-1964), Mittelrheinische Postgeschichte, 1966.

R. van der Borcht: Das Verkehrswesen. (Commerce), 3rd edition, Leipzig: 1925. Bibliography: pp.549-552.

Friedrich Christoph Dahmann & Georg Waitz: Quellenkunde der Deutschen Geschichte. (Sources for German History.), Bibliography of sources and literature on German history. Edited by Hermann Heimpel & Herbert Geuss. 10th edition, Stuttgart: Hiersemann 1969-.

Under "Post" in Section 38: there are 77 entries. The bibliographic details are often incomplete. Dokumentation und Information im Post- und Zeitungswesen sowie Fernsprech- und Fernschreibwesen. (Documentation and Information on Posts and Newspapers with Telephones & Telegraphs), Berlin: Institut für Post- und Fernmeldwesen, 1964-1968. (Information Books from the Institute for the Post & Telegraphs, Special number 5)

Eduard Effenberger: Aus Alten Postakten. (From Old Postal Documents), Sources for the history of the Austrian Post, its foundation and development. Vienna: 1918.

R. Enders: Literaturhinweise über die postgeschichte und markenausgaben gesamtschlesiens. (Guide to literature on the postal history and stamp issues of Greater Silesia), Sammler-Dienst, 1967, Volume 18, pp.691-693.

Wilhelm Fleitmann (ed.): Beiträge zur Geschichte der Post in Westfalen. (Contributions to the History of the Post in Westphalia), Munster: Head Post Office, 1969. Contains a bibliography on the postal history of Westphalia.

Peter Grimm: Fernmeldewesen des Heeres 1945-1964. (Army Telecommunications 1945-1964), A tentative bibliography. Feldafing, 1966.

Gustav Görs: Post literatur aus dem 17. und 18. jahrhundert. (Postal literature from the 17th and 18th centuries), Archiv für Post and Telegraphie, 1909, pp.144-150.

F. W. Heidemann & G. F. Huttner: Das Postwesen unserer Zeit. (The Postal Service in our Time), Volume 1, 1854. Contains general literature on the postal service to 1853 on pp.60-66.

Erwin Horstmann: Quellenbuch des Fernmeldewesens. (Source Book on Telecommunications), Darmstadt: Central Office for Telecommunications, 1956.

Paul Hubel: Deutsches Post- und Telegraphenwesen unter bes. Berücks. der gesamten Literatur. (German Post and Telegraph Undertakings with Particular Reference to the General Literature), Munich: 1912.

100 (Hundert) Jahre im Dienst der Wirtschaft. (100 (one hundred) years in the service of Commerce), 2 Volumes, Vienna: Federal Ministry for Trade and Reconstruction, 1961. Volume 2 contains a detailed survey of the postal literature.

Helmut Jockel: Literatur zur geschichte des Post- und Fernmeldewesens. (Literature on the history of the Post and Telegraphs), Archiv für Deutsche Postgeschichte, 1974, pp.116-118

Bibliographie zur Stadtgeschichte Deutschlands. (Bibliography on German Municipal History) Edited by Erich Keyser, Cologne: Böhlau, 1969.

Ernst Kiesskalt: Literaturverzeichnis zur Deutschen Postgeschichte. (Guide to literature on German postal history), Archiv für Deutsche Postgeschichte, 1910, Volume 38, pp.386-391; 1913, Volume 41, pp.407-410 & 1928, Volume 56, pp.236-237.

J. Kittl: Wo findet man geschriebenes über die Deutsche bahnpost und deren stempel. (Where can we find writings on the German railway post and its cancellations), Sammler-Dienst, 1959, Volume 10, pp.57-59.

Alfred Koch: Beiträge zur Deutschen Postgeschichte. (Contributions to German Postal History), 2 Volumes, 1967-1970.

Volume 1 contains a postal bibliography for Berlin, bibliography on postal history of Mecklenburg and Pomerania. Volume 2 contains a postal bibliography of Berlin; brief postal bibliography of Brandenburg; bibliography of Karl Sautter.

Alfred Koch: Berliner Postbibliographie., Archiv für das Post- und Fernmeldewesen, 1965, Volume 17, pp. 226-248.

Alfred Koch: Heinrich von Stephan-Bibliographie. (Bibliography on Heinrich von Stephan), Record of writings by and about Dr. Heinrich von Stephan. Special reprint from Koch: Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen. Nachtrag 1500-1964 (Literature on the German Post Office: Supplement 1500-1964), pp.199-222.

Alfred Koch: Ost- and Westpreussische Postbibliographie. (Postal Bibliography of East and West Prussia), Record of the Postal History of East Prussia, West Prussia and Danzig. No publisher, 1965.

Alfred Koch: Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen. (Literature on the German Post Office), 3 Volumes, Hamburg, Berlin: Decker, 1966-1972 (Literature on the German Post Office, parts 3-5). Volume 1: 1871-1964; Volume 2: Supplement 1500-1964; Volume 3: 1965-1970.

Alfred Kreuzer: Beiträge zu einer Westfälischen postbibliographie. (Contributions to a postal bibliography of Westphalia), Archiv für Deutsche Postgeschichte, 1956, Issue 1, p.31.

Alfred Kreuzer: Bibliographie zu geschichtlichen abhandlungen aus dem gebiete des Post- und Fernmeldewesens. (Bibliography on historical treatments in the field of the Post and Telegraphs), Postgeschichtliche Blätter der Gesellschaft für Deutsche Postgeschichte, 1966, Whole number 30.

Handwörterbuch des Postwesens. (Pocket Dictionary of the Postal System), 2nd edition, Frankfurt am Main: Federal Ministry for Posts & Telecommunications, 1953. Supplement, 1956.

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Bibliographie des schrifttums über firmen und behördliche lochungen. (Bibliography of literature on firms and official perfins), Sammler-Dienst, 1968, Volume 19, pp.1319-1322 & 1667-1669; 1969, Volume 20, pp.681-683 & 1971, Volume 22, pp.1189-1192. Corrected summary of the three parts in Literatur Nachrichten, 1969, Volume 58, pp.126-144.

Peer-Ingo Litschke: Bibliographie drucktechnik, papier, wasserzeichen, gummierung, zählung, postautomation. (Bibliography of printing, paper, watermarks, gumming, perforation, postal automation), Sammler-Dienst, 1976, Volume 27, pp.77-78 & 143-146.

Joseph Rübsam: Deutsche und ausländische veröfentlichungen zur postgeschichte seit 1820. (German and foreign publications on postal history since 1820), Historisches Jahrbuch der Görresgesellschaft, 1892, Volume 13, pp.15-79 & 1900, Volume 21, pp.22-on.

Schrifttum aus dem Verkehrswesen. (Literature on Commercial Practice), Issued by the Central Information Office for Commerce of the German Commercial Science Society, Cologne: 1966-on. (Literature Series of the German Commercial Science Society Series A: Documentation 1-on). Both parts contain (Appendix: Books) in Group 8: Posts & Telecommunications.

Sowjetische und Volksdemokratische literatur zu allgemeinen fragen des transport- und nachrichtenwesens in den wissenschaftlichen bibliotheken der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik. (Literature from Soviet Russia and the People's Democracies on the general questions of transport and communications in the scientific libraries of the German Democratic Republic), Wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift der Hochschule für Verkehrswesen "Friedrich List" in Dresden. Supplement:

Sowjetische und Volksdemokratische literatur zum Post- und Fernmeldewesen in den wissenschaftlichen bibliotheken der Deutschen Demokratischen Republik. (Soviet and People's Democracies literature on the Post and Telecommunications in the scientific libraries of the German Democratic Republic), Wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift der Hochschule für Verkehrswesen "Friedrich List" in Dresden.

Supplement:

Verzeichnis von Doktordissertationen über das Post- und Fernmeldewesen nach dem stande vom September 1932. (List of Doctoral Dissertations on the Post and Telecommunications as of September 1932), Archiv für Post und Telegraphie, 1933, Issue 11, Supplement.

Ch. G. Vischer: Allgemeine Geschichtliche Zeittafel des Postwesens nebst einer Allgemeinen Literatur desselben. (General Historical & Chronological Table of the Post Office, along with General Literature on the same), Tübingen: 1820.

Hermann Wolpert: Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen. (Literature on the German Postal System), 2nd edition. 2 parts. (Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen, Parts 1 & 2). In: Archiv für das Post- und Fernmeldewesen, 1950, Volume 2, pp.465-586 & 1952, Volume 4, pp.177-272. Part 1: from the beginning of the 16th century to the end of the Holy Roman Empire (1806). Part 2: from the end of the Holy Roman Empire (1806) to the foundation of the German Reich (1870). Continued by: Koch: Schrifttum über das Deutsche Postwesen. (Literature on the German Post Office).

Hermann Wolpert: Bibliographie der Württembergischen Postgeschichte 1563-1953., Archiv für Deutsche Postgeschichte, 1954, Issue 2, pp.34-40 & 1955, Issue 1, pp.40-50.

4.3 Appendix: References to Literature

It seems quite important to aim for a higher standard of work in the bibliographical field for philately. References to literature should on principle contain the following details in the following order. These are internationally accepted conventions for scientific publications. The fact that the examples are not taken from the field of philately does not matter.

Translator's Note

Upon reading the following section, I found that it was rather too specific to German rules and pre-dated the personal computer with its easy access to bold and italic fonts. I have "modernised" the references but really this section is important for the principle of necessary and accurate citations it promotes. The examples given only are only for the record.

4.3.1 Citations

Reference frequently has to be made in scientific works to other authors and texts. A distinction must be drawn between Citations and Annotations.

Citations serve many purposes in a scientific paper. They act as examples, as supports for an argument, as proofs, and as illustrations. Functioning in this way, they act principally to ward off criticism by making reference to established authors. Citations can, however, be used to argue against a position. Citations can also be used to indicate that a given topic has been dealt with previously. They also point to more detailed and exhaustive treatments and concepts related to the one being dealt with. It is thus often necessary to refer to other authors and papers for positive or negative proofs or allusions (Annotations).

With citations, it is necessary to be accurate. Great care must be taken in copying details when the literature being cited is not actually to hand. An attempt should be made in citing to develop a clear logical connection. It is often not adequate just to refer to an author by name without comment either in the text e.g. (Habermas 1970) or in a footnote e.g. 3) Gamm 1974, or as: 4) see Giesecke 1974. It is better to give a footnote with precise details, e.g. 4) The same state of affairs as regards xy is mentioned in Giesecke, Hermann: Introduction to Pedagogic Studies. Science and Professional Practice., Munich: Juventa, 1974, pp.22-23, or e.g. 6) A similar statement as regards xy is made by Werder, Lutz von: From Anti-Authoritarian to Proletarian Education. A Report from Practice., Frankfurt: Fischer, 1972. References to non-standard publications require very precise linkage.

Citations must be exact. They may be verbal (direct) or non-verbal (indirect). Care must always be taken to give the connection on which the citation is based. This is particularly the case for non-verbal citations, which can never in themselves reveal why the citation is being given. Changes in meaning are not permitted in citations. Verbal citations are enclosed in "quotation marks". Two dots .. are used to indicate one word missed out, three dots ... to indicate more than one word missed out. References not obtained from the literature, e.g. from personal communications, must have an indication of their source given.

From which work should the citation be given? The publications of many authors are available in a wide range of editions and numerous printings. Which is the "best" source? No definite answer can be given here. Citations should never be given from abridged versions (pocket or student editions), unless the abridgement represents the latest edition put out by the author himself.

Moreover, citations should as far as possible not be given second hand. If it is not possible in a particular case to cite the actual source, the second hand citation should be in the following form:

Spranger, E. Special Features of the Primary School., Heidelberg: 1955. Cited in: Gamm, Hans-Jochen: Introduction to the Study of Education., Munich: List, 1974, p.208.

Usually, as this example shows, the bibliographical details in the original are not complete.

If the book has gone through several reprints, is it necessary to refer back to the first edition. The vital point here is whether the later editions originate with the author and so represent his latest concepts. If there is no change, it does not matter which edition is quoted. When a quotation is from the collected edition of the works of an author with many publications to his name, e.g. Wages, Prices & Profit by Karl Marx, it is useful to other readers to cite it not individually but as being in Volume 16 of the Collected works of Marx & Engels, pp.101-152.

which source should be quoted when a title appears more than once in different forms, e.g. once as a periodical article, and then again in a collected volume. As far as possible, the fuller version and the older publication should be cited. If this is not accessible, details of the older publication should be included in the reference, so as not to give the impression that a relatively new work by the author is concerned, e.g.:

Fürstenberg, F.: Conflicts of standards on entry to professional life in T. Luckmann & W. Sprondel (eds.): Sociology of the Professions., Cologne: 1972. (New Scientific Library. Volume 55), pp.276-288. (Reprinted from: Scharmann T. (ed.): School and profession as factors in socialisation., Stuttgart: 1966, pp.190-204.

Obviously the original publication data must be given for reprints as well.

Placement of accents and spellings are copied from the original. Changes are not allowed. Only the initial capital letter of a cited text can be written small when it is brought into conjunction with a text: in this case the full stop in a cited text should be dropped and replaced by another punctuation mark.

Underlinings must be repeated. The footnote could contain the addition in brackets (underlined in original). If it is wished to underline part of a citation, which should be avoided as far as possible, the reference should contain the statement (underlined by me).

Explanations in citations are allowed to a limited extent, and are shown in [square brackets] e.g. "In this year [1912] Georg Leyh developed ..." or "They [women] are outsiders in a world foreign to them, the world of men."

Citations within a citation are marked out by the 'apostrophe'.

Citations from foreign languages should be translated as far as possible for the reader's sake, at least if they are from uncommon languages. The reference should then carry the addendum (translated by me). It is impolite to quote from foreign language works when German translations are available. If a citation is made from a German translation, the foreign language original should be given in the reference, but there is no need for any other details.

If it is not desirable to have longer citations included in the running text or at the bottom of it, they can be indented 2 or 3 points and done in single-line printing. Citations amounting to an entire page of text or more should either not be used, or should be relegated to an appendix at the end of the work.

What can be cited? Any published work, but not scientific examination studies such as diploma, masters and doctoral theses, etc., if they have not been published. Doctoral and probationary theses can be accepted as published even if they only exist as a single typewritten copy or a microfilm, or as duplicated copies.

There are, however, cases in which one has to use unpublished material, e.g. private papers, letters, etc. Here again, correct reference must be made to the source, and the same applies to a communication by word of mouth.

The annotation is a longer development, which carries the line of thought of the work a little farther, but it can take the form of a citation. It should explain the meaning of the work e.g. by pointing to other aspects, giving a historical introduction, suggesting overlapping relationships, special aspects, etc. Annotations also include any explanations needed for a non-specialist public. Annotations have the same requirements as to accuracy as citations. Annotations should always be placed at the bottom of the page, but longer ones that occur frequently (which should be avoided) can be relegated to an appendix at the end of the text.

Annotations and citations are marked in the text by a numeral spaced half a line higher³, sometimes with a bracket as well³⁾. The numbers can be repeated for each new page of text, or can run consecutively throughout the entire text. The latter is simpler for the production of a manuscript. The numeral should be directly behind the word it relates to, or at the end of a citation when that is concerned. A numeral at the end of a sentence comes after the punctuation sign. If possible, one word should not be followed by more than one numeral. References to literature are not permitted in the text (exceptions are compilation articles, such as articles in lexicons and handbooks), and so should not be given in brackets in the text, e.g. (Reimer, Everett: Get rid of schools, p.19) but should always be given at the end of the text at the bottom of the page. References to literature should always be included on the same page of text, and never brought together at the end of the text, as this is better for readers.

Cross references are often needed in a paper. The best way is to include them in brackets at the appropriate point in the text, e.g. (cf. 2.1) or (see Chapter 2, Section 1), and it may be practicable to quote the page as well, e.g. (see Fig. 5, p.75) or (cf. 2.1, pp. 19-23). Do not give a cross-reference to previous references: repeat the reference if needed.

4.3.2. The form of a reference

Publications to which reference is made should be quoted so clearly that another person will have no trouble in locating them in a library catalogue. The reference must thus contain all the details needed to locate it by author or title in a catalogue or bibliography. A few other details may be pointed out.

If a publication is quoted frequently, the reference to it can be abbreviated, but only to the extent that the reader can recall its first occurrence. For example, references to the title Education and Achievement in Industrial Society. Pedagogical Sociology in overviews of the problem and scientific studies. Edited: Günter Hartfiel & Kurt Holm, Published: West German Verlag, 1975, (Uni-Taschenbuch 47), can be shortened to Education and Achievement ... 1 3 after the first time. Abbreviations such as loc. cit. or ed. cit., etc., should not be used, as they are too vague, and lead to time consuming backward searches. If, however, these abbreviations are used, in German or as the Latin equivalents, the rules to be observed are as follows:

a) Second or later mention of an author, who has so far had only one title quoted, use loc. cit. or ed. cit., e.g.:

- 1) Weber, Norbert: Privilege through education. The inequality of educational chances in the German Federal Republic., Frankfurt: Suhrkamp, 1973, (Edition Suhrkamp 601) pp.75-77.

- 2) Stelly, Gisela: The stupid and the clever: Children and what can be made of them., Gutersloh: Bertelsmann, 1972, pp.88-89.
- 3) Weber, N.: loc. cit., p.45.
- 4) Stelly, G.: loc. cit., p.46.

b) If one reference to a source is followed immediately by another, use ibid., e.g.:

- 5) Nusser, Peter: Romances for the lower classes. Penny magazines and their readers., Stuttgart: Metzler, 1973 (Metzler Texts 27), p.11.
- 6) ibid. p.12.

c) If a second title by the same author is quoted, the author's name must be followed by an abbreviated title, and then by loc. cit. or ed. cit., e.g.:

- 1) Giesecke, Hermann: Introduction to pedagogy., 7th edition, Munich: Juventa, 1975, pp.19-38.
- 2) Oestreich, Gisela: Training for critical reading. Children's and young people's literature from block book to stereotype., Freiburg: Herder, 1973 (Herder Library 9003) p.78.
- 3) Giesecke, Hermann: Guide to pedagogic studies, science and professional practice., Munich: Juventa, 1974, p.24.
- 4) Giesecke, H.: Introduction ..., 1975, loc. cit. p.20.
- 5) Giesecke, H.: Guide ..., 1974, loc. cit., p.63.
- 6) ibid. p.64.

From where should the details of a publication be taken? They should be copied from the Title Page and its reverse.

Underlinings, dashes and similar marks are superfluous in references to literature.

Literature references will vary slightly in form according to the literature they are based on. Distinctions must be drawn between the following cases, which have become adopted by convention:

4.3.2.1 Independent Literature

S. A reference to an independent publication should contain the following minimal data:

Author, forename: Title, volume, edition. Place: publisher, year (series). number of pages.

S1. Independent Literature with 1 to 3 authors

Part of Reference

Remarks

1st Author

Surname

1st forename

2nd forename

Without academic titles, but with titles of nobility can be abbreviated should be given, but can be abbreviates

2nd Author

If more than one author, they must be listed when there are up to three

Surname

Forename

3rd Author

Surname
Lastname:	Colon before the title
Title	Must not be abbreviated. Reproduce spelling of original
Sub-title	Can be given in abbreviated form if it gives useful information about the book
Editor:	If an editor is given, the title should be followed by the abbreviation Ed., then a colon, then shortened forename, then surname
Surname
Forename
Volume number	With a multi-volume work, the number of the volume should follow the title, using the abbreviation Vol without a full stop
Edition	Must be given, unless it is the first edition. Additional information should be given in abbreviated form e.g. 4 th revised ed., or 4 th extended ed.
Other Details	Such as figures, tables, illustration, maps, etc., should only be added when this information is essential for the reader.
Place	Put the first place of publication, ignore the others. If no place of publication is given, put n.p.
Publisher	Not really needed for material from the general book trade, but customary. However, must always be given for private publications and literature obviously emanating (without an actual publisher) from firms, societies, institutions, corporations, etc.
Year	To be given, or else n.d. (no date)
Series	Numbered series should be quoted (in brackets)
No. of pages	The page(s) to which reference is made come at the end. If there are several pages, they should be shown as follows: p.95-on, for only one sequence, pp.96-99, but never p.96-on.

Example (imaginary): Ascher, Werner, Anton Nohl & Gustav Pestalozzi: Talent and learning: A historical analysis. Ed.: Herbert Pallat. Vol. 2, 4th rev. ed. Munich: Juvenal, 1972. (Pedagogy of yesterday. 11), p.33-on.

However, most references will be much simpler e.g.:

Seidenspinner, Gundolf: Scientific study guide to pedagogy. 2nd ed. Grafenau Doffingen: Lexika-Verl. 1973, pp.44-55.

S2. University Publications

These are treated like other books, but subject or faculty should be given as well. The addition of Diss. or Probationary Paper* is necessary, and the minimum data are thus:

Author, forename(s): title, sub-title if necessary University Faculty. Type of Paper. Year of promotion or tenure. N° of pages.

Translator's Notes

* Doesn't exist in English Universities. It is a sort of preliminary thesis submitted before tenure is granted.

 To a higher degree.

e.g. Horn, Hartmut: Studies on the new generation of high-school students., Marburg: Phil. Fac. Diss., 1963, p.45.

Other university papers do not come under this heading, and are treated as unpublished. If they are quoted, their “formula” must be given after the title, e.g.

Hittig, Gisela: Analysis, Planning & Execution of a scheme of work in the fourth school year: the Reinickendorf region. Final report., Scientific paper for the Board of Teachers. 1st Seminar on School Practice. Berlin-Reinickendorf. 1973, pp.34-37.

S3. Independent Literature with More than Three Authors, or With No Author

The scheme already outlined is followed in principle, except that a different word is used at the beginning. The following cases must be distinguished:

- More than three authors have written a book together (collective authorship) and there is no individual or corporate edition. The first place is now taken by the title, and not the first author. For example:

Training for the professions. Theory and practice in profession-related training in folk high schools. B H. Riese et al. Braunschweig: Westermann, 1969. (Theory and Practice of Adult Education Vol. 54) p.46.

Collective volume with one editor. The first place is taken by the editor, whose status is given in brackets, e.g.:

Friedeburg. L.v. (ed): Youth in modern society. Cologne: Kiepenheuer und Witsch, 1965. (New Scientific Library, 5), p.43.

However, as a rule, the reference is to a paper within this collective volume, see Section U2.

- If it is a publication for which no individual author is given e.g. from a government, firm, official body, institution, society, etc., the issuing body is given in the first place e.g.:

Central Union for the Electrotechnical Industry: Guidelines for instructional techniques., Hamburg: ZVEI, 1973, p.11.

In both these last two cases, however, it is also quite usual to give the title first when quoting, so that the reference then reads:

Youth in modern society. Ed: L.v. Friedeburg: Kiepenheuer & Witsch, 1965. (New Scientific Library, 5), p.43.

Guidelines for instructional techniques. Hamburg: Central Union for the Electrotechnical Industry, 1973, p.11.

- Pseudonyms are rare today in the literature of social science. The pseudonym is given first. If the real name is known, it is given in square brackets i.e.[surname, given name].

- Laws and ordinances must have their exact titles quoted, the abbreviated running title is not sufficient. The exact date, and if relevant, the name of the State, must be given. It is not necessary to give the provenance of the law (e.g. from a collection, a commentary, etc.) e.g.: Law on copyright and similar protection. (Copyright law, UrhG) of the 9th September 1965.

4.3.2.2 Non-independent-Literature

Here again, the basic principle is followed, but with the addition of - In: - and then the publication concerned. The author comes in first place, then the citation or reference.

U1. Article in periodical. Minimum data:

Author, given name: title of article. In: title of periodical, vol. no, year, p.-p., exact page(s).

Example:

Schrand, Heinrich and Jan Dunlop: Conversational English. In: AULA, 9, 1976, pp.152-153, p.152.

The details of the volume (year, Vol. N^o) are always needed for correct location of a reference, since there can be a varying number of volumes in a year, and thus the page reference could be to any one of them. However, it is not necessary to give the part number when the issues of a periodical are numbered consecutively, which is almost always the case with scientific journals.

Articles in newspapers are treated like articles in journals, but in every case the date must be given, and also the running number of the issue within the year, if there is one. In some cases it can be useful to give a column reference as well as a page reference.

U2. Articles in collected volumes are treated on the same principle

Author of the article, given name: title of the contribution: In: surname, given name (Ed.): title of the volume. Sub-title if necessary. Publisher, place, year, p-p, exact page(s).

Or, as mentioned, the main publication can be given under its title, e.g.:

Bernstein, Basil B: Delinquency with "compensatory" treatment. In: Family condition, social class and success at school., 2nd ed., Weinheim: Beltz, 1912. pp.21-36, p.29.

If there is no personal editor of a collected volume, the word In: is directly followed by the title of the volume. If there is a corporate editor, e.g. a society, this is not to be quoted, e.g.:

Strauss, Wolfgang: Study of reading habits in Germany. In: The reader as part of the literary scene., 2nd ed., Bonn: Bouvier 1972. (Research Group on Book Science and University Libraries, Bonn: Short reports, 8), pp.85-121, pp.90-100.

Articles in lexica and dictionaries published under an author's name are quoted just like articles in ordinary collected volumes. For example:

Weber, E.: Styles of education and training. In: Kleines lexicon of Pedagogy and didactics., Ed: H. Zopfl and others., 6th enlarged ed., Donauworth: Auer, 1975, pp.71-74, p.72.

Anonymous articles appear in this form:

Dictionary of Critical Education. Ed. E. Rauch & W. Anzinger, 4th enlarged ed., Starnberg: Raith, 1973., Article: Manipulation., pp 222-225.

U3. Articles in congress reports (conferences, symposia, workshops, clinics etc.) are treated like articles in periodicals. The title of the periodical is replaced by the official name of the congress, not by the subject of the conference. Example:

Spangenberg, Kurt: Collecting Pedagogish literature as a task for special Libraries on Pedagogics. In: Working Group on Special Libraries., Report on the 13th Congress in Berlin, 24th to 26th March '71., Berlin: Technical University of Berlin, University Library, 1972, pp.139-152, p.146.

As yet unpublished material is treated in the usual way, but with a suitable addition. Example: (fictitious)

Ascher, Werner: School teaching of the future., Munich: Sauer 1978. (To appear)

Material that has only limited availability is also given the basic details of a literature reference with a suitable addition. Example (fictitious):

Popp, G: Sociological material in the Library of the Frieden school, Munster., Munster: Frieden School, 1973 (Unpublished manuscript). So that anyone interested in material published outside the book trade can get hold of it, the address of the issuing body should be quoted.

U4. The references for reviews are distinguished from ordinary references merely by the addition of the term (Rev) in brackets. The reviewer takes the place of the author. Example:

Gerd-Bodo Reineert (Rev): Herbert Sustek: The teacher between tradition and practice., Braunschweig : Westermann, 1975, In: New Developments in Teaching. Journal for secondary stages I and II, August 1975, pp.558-on.

4.3.2.3. Unpublished Material

N1. Letters are correctly described by:

Sender, Recipient and Date

If letters available in public institutions are concerned, their location should be given. Example: Letter from Erwin Ackerknecht to Constantin Norrenber of 02.06.1919. (C. Norrenberg Collection in Schiller Museum, Marbach).

N2. Oral Communications. If informal verbal communications are concerned, the giver of the information and the date should be quoted. If it is a formal communication e.g. a paper to a congress, meeting, etc., the reference will take the following form:

Author (= contributor): title. Form. Place of presentation. Date. If appropriate, reference to subsequent publication.
--

For example (fictitious):

Holzdieter, Herrmann: Schools and the spirit of the age. Lecture to the 2nd Swiss Pedagogics Meeting, Zurich, 12th September 1977.

N3. Audio Visual Material. The title is given first, followed by a note on the format (e.g. 35 mm colour film, colour transparency, cassette, long-playing record, video tape, etc.) The producer, and his address if possible, comes next i.e.:

Title (author if given). Format. Firm. Place. Year. Address.
--

Example:

Using today's libraries. 6 coloured filmstrips, 2 LPs. Eye Gate House, Jamaica, NY 11435, P.O. Box 190).

In conclusion, it should be pointed out that the forms used for literature references are conventions, and not rigid rules. Any other form that gives the minimum literature data is "correct", but the forms given above are generally accepted and should be followed.

A few desiderata in conclusion:

- The literature data in philatelic articles and books should be bibliographically exact and adequate. References given in such a way that the literature can only be traced with difficulty or not at all are valueless.
- It should be automatic to send one copy of every philatelic publication to the German Library in Frankfurt (Zeppelinallee 4-8, 6000 Frankfurt) and another which is usually to the local University Library. This would ensure that the title appeared in the current national bibliographies, and was available for use in the regional libraries. Publications from firms and societies, pamphlets and issues from ad hoc bodies should be sent in as well.
- Last but not least, it would be desirable for more philatelists to take an interest in the bibliographic aspect of the subject, so as to make more and more information available to satisfy the needs of all philatelists. We not only need more, better, fuller, more specialised bibliographies, but also more general indexes to periodicals. The lack of cumulations over 10, 20 and more years makes searching much more difficult. It would also be useful if a number of societies could get together and produce an ongoing bibliography of philatelic literature in the German language, and perhaps even work backwards to produce a total bibliography of the German philatelic literature. We need only note in passing that this will hardly be a task for the weekend bibliographer!

END OF TRANSLATION

The following paper was issues as a supplement to the translation and was also published in The Bay Phil, the magazine of the Friends of the Western Philatelic Library (FWPL). A copy was attached to the translation when I distributed it.

WHERE DO I FIND PHILATELIC INFORMATION?

PART 2

Brian J. Birch

I'm sure that like myself all other FWPL bibliophiles have now obtained their copy of James Negus' Philatelic Literature. This book is a joy to read and deserves pride of place on every serious philatelist's desk. My copy arrived from Cyprus early in January, the sturdy cardboard carton bearing an immaculately cancelled Cyprus £1 stamp, a definite bonus and a pleasure to find at least one philatelic publisher using collectable postage stamps and having the sense to place them far enough from the edge of the packet so that they don't get damaged in transit. In spite of my having published little of relevance to the subject of the book but nonetheless being vain, I immediately turned to the Author Index at the back of the book to see whether Jim had referred to any of my works. Lo and behold, and to my great delight, there I was with no less than four references. I immediately sat down, ignoring the pleas of the children to be kissed then put to bed and the blandishments of the dinner dishes to be stacked in the dishwasher, to read about my fame. Wonder of wonders, he mentions my translation of Ulrich's book - Where do I find philatelic Information which I had envisaged lying undiscovered and gathering dust in some unexplored corner of the Western Philatelic Library (among others) to which I had consigned a copy. Imagine my delight turning to horror when reading on to find myself rapped on the knuckles by this doyen of philatelic literature for failing to provide an Inhaltsverzeichnis (Contents). Hardly daring to read the other references to my work for fear of further reprimands, I sat dejected in front of a lifeless television (surely the best kind) and pondered my dire failings.

My excuse is overwork. The translation was carried out by the remarkable Miss Howarth of the Harold Cohen Library, University of Liverpool (who translates from French, Spanish, Italian & Russian as well as German) over several months in 1979 the year after its publication. Initial editing of the manuscript was horrific. I am no linguist and the terrifyingly long words used by Germans in the titles of their books caused me nightmares with its necessity of constantly cross-checking against the original. This took about a year due to the high activation energy that had to be overcome just to start work and the relatively short time before my head was spinning from all the complicated German terms. In those days my Sister-in-law provided a quick, accurate and economic typing service for me and accordingly, it was typed within a few months of being translated. Then the problems really began:- a new job, a new wife, (who thinks I should have grown out of stamp collecting long before being eligible for marriage) a new home, promotion, my company taken over by its main competitor, demotion, two children, promotion, another new house, etc. All these miseries were heaped upon me, effectively obstructing my efforts at finally editing the typescript of the translation. When eventually I did finish the editing on a train journey to London, such was my relief that I rushed the corrections in manuscript, as my sister-in-law had by this time become gainfully employed and could no longer carry out the typing for me. In my haste to get this document in its "final" form, the essential last step in all such enterprises - the review of the finished product to ensure that it is up to standard and that nothing had been omitted, was itself omitted. I therefore plead guilty to failing to provide a professional quality product.

As a penance, I have taken my translation and prepared an English-language Inhaltsverzeichnis which precedes the translation. A copy will be sent to all those libraries to which I have donated copies of the translation.

[Note On digitisation, the Contents, formerly found at the end of this document, was moved to the front of the translation for the convenience of users.]

END

Philat. Trans. 017
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 147)

C. Michaelis

Contribution to our knowledge of German philatelic periodicals
[Beitrage zur kentnis der Deuitschen Philatelistischen zeitschriften]
Literatur Nachrichten, September 1951, Whole number 4/5, pp.2-4

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
1983. Transcribed onto computer March 2012

CONTRIBUTION TO OUR KNOWLEDGE OF GERMAN PHILATELIC PERIODICALS

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 147.

END

The words of great men on philately
[Worte grosser männer über die philatelie]
Literatur Nachrichten, January/April, 1956, Whole number 25, p.4

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
ca.1983. Transcribed onto computer, December 2014

THE WORDS OF GREAT MEN ON PHILATELY

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 164.

END

Introduction to the jubilee number (25) of Literature Nachrichten
[Geleitworte zur jubiläums-nummer (25) der Literature Nachrichten]
Literatur Nachrichten, January/April 1956, Whole number 25, p.4

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
ca.1983. Transcribed onto computer, December 2014

INTRODUCTION TO THE JUBILEE NUMBER (25) OF
LITERATURE NACHRICHTEN

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 164.

END

[Foreword]

Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur – Rundbrief, March 1957, Issue 2, p.1

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
1983. Transcribed onto computer and re-set, August 2009

[FOREWORD]

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 305.

END

Robert Höhn

Foreword

[Vorwort]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.1-2

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca.1988

FOREWORD.

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.

END

Philat. Trans. 022
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187)

Robert Höhn

Annual report of the Federal Literature Group, 1978/79
Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.12-13

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca. 1988

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE FEDERAL LITERATURE GROUP

1978/79

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.

END

Philat. Trans. 023
(Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187)

O. Gleixner

German philatelic libraries

[Philatelistische Bücherei Hamburg e.V. – Philatelistische Bibliothek München]

Literatur Nachrichten, 1975/1976, Whole number 64/65, pp.490-495

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

Lieu dit au Guinot, 3166 Route de Seyches, 47350 Montignac-Toupinerie, FRANCE
ca. 1988

GERMAN PHILATELIC LIBRARIES

Incorporated into Philat. Trans. 187.

END

Francis P. Renaut d'Oultre-Seille

Bibliographic Index of the World's Philatelic Press

[Répertoire Bibliographique de la Presse Philatélique Mondiale]

1st Semester 1929, Giulio Tedeschi for the Fédération Internationale de la Presse Philatélique, Turin, Italy, 1930, 47pp.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
Transferred to computer and re-set, December 2014

BIBLIOGRAPHIC INDEX OF THE WORLD'S PHILATELIC PRESS

1st Semester 1929

HOW TO USE THIS TRANSLATION

Only the article titles are included in this translation-not the bibliographic details, for which refer to the original. The order of countries is identical to the original (ie French-language order). The first word(s) of the original are given to facilitate its location, followed by a hyphen then the translation. Where the hyphen is not preceded by a word then the original is in English and is only included here for the sake of completeness.

NOTE: Items beginning with the letters A-L inclusive were treated in the way outlined above. However, the time this required was excessive and so from M onward, only the translation of the foreign-language items is given. The numbers used refer to the number of each foreign entry (ie. ignoring English-language entries). BJB

INTRODUCTIONS

Translator's Note:

The Introduction was printed in 3 languages, including English. However, the French introduction contained considerably more text than the English language version and so it has been translated in full here.

[FRENCH] INTRODUCTION

Philately has developed steadily over a number of years to the point where no one can contest its right to be called a science any longer. Recent developments have supplied it with powerful and precise tools: physics in particular has given it the microscope and the quartz lamp; and other scientific instruments have found an application in the domain of philately as well.

However, though the supply of mechanical tools is perpetually being augmented, there is still a lack of those of a literary nature. Surprisingly, in view of the expansion of the philatelic press, there is as yet no general systematic catalogue of this output, at once so extensive and so useful for philatelists.

Though the creation of an international bibliographic index to the philatelic press seems more than ever desirable at this period of development of philatelic literature, hardly any enterprise would be less easy to carry out. Attempts have often been made in various countries, but they have proved in general to be ephemeral affairs that have simultaneously proved how useful this work would be and how difficult it is to carry it out. It is nevertheless regrettable that this gap should have remained unfilled for so long, though maybe the very extent of the task has proved daunting to those who realized its importance.

There are in fact more than a hundred philatelic journals worthy of the name in existence throughout the entire world. They are published in the most diverse languages, since Japan, Argentina and Australia possess philatelic organs to equal those of France, England and Italy. There is thus a mass of work which is as useful to consult as it is hard to classify and to cope with this world-wide publication is a task that requires a great deal of effort as well as a great deal of science.

Nevertheless, the need to coordinate effort with regard to the philatelic press and literature still exists, and a beginning has already been made. Thus, an International Federation of the Philatelic Press has been set up to collect the journals from all countries, and this organization, whose headquarters is in Turin, has already demonstrated its vitality.

The formation of an international review of philatelic bibliography appeared to be a fresh advance in the direction of philatelic cooperation, and this annual publication is a tangible proof of the international spirit of philately and a valuable aid for all philatelists.

This index, which has appeared for this year of 1929 is not absolutely a new departure, as it made its first appearance in a fragmentary state in 1928 in the monthly issues of the magazine Filatelica, published in Turin. The suspension of this magnificent journal led to the appearance of this index as a volume under the same inspiration and management as previously.

Over a hundred philatelic journals are published in the world: most of them will be found in the pages that follow, and if any do not appear it is because they have either refused to send in their issues, or only do so intermittently. On the other hand, grateful recognition is due to all the journals that have kindly agreed to aid us in our task by sending us their issues and brochures regularly. Going through this mountain of documents is an arduous task, and it must be remembered that the publication of journals is often irregular or interrupted: moreover a number of them go astray and cannot easily be replaced. As a result there are bound to be some gaps in an undertaking of this scope. Friendly reader, be indulgent, excuse us and help us.

*

* *

If this index is to be really valuable, it cannot give automatic and mechanical references to all the articles that appear in the philatelic press. There must be some discrimination so as to quote only the articles that will be interesting and useful, whether to specialists or beginners. A short paragraph is often more valuable than a long dissertation with a commercial object, and thus this review will often contain short items, amounting to only a few lines but having some real interest, particularly as regards numbers printed of a certain issue. Publicity articles, on the other hand, have been ignored.

For greater convenience this wide survey has been divided into two parts both of which are arranged alphabetically. One is essentially geographic, and the other by subject.

The subject part covers all the articles that cannot be grouped under a geographical heading and which deal with general subjects such as flaws cancellations etc, or with manifestations such as congresses, exhibitions, etc. Also, to facilitate research, references are given in this section to certain restricted categories of stamps such as postal forgeries, precancels, or bisects which constitute special “fun” categories for the specialist.

The geographical section was arranged in the obvious way by the alpha-betical order traditional in French. However there has had to be some deviation from this to permit the insertion of essential complementary headings for papers which went beyond the limits of a single country. Thus, the list of headings will be found to contain the following names:

Africa, America, Asia, Europe, Oceania, German, British, French Colonies, etc.
British Empire, German and Italian States (before postal unification).

As for the Indian and Malay states, they appear in their correct alphabetical position, whereas the departments of Colombia appear after this country.

It should thus be easy for readers to find their way round this index, and find the particular field that interests them.

The entries have been made as short as possible but also as explicit as possible in conformity with the rules of international bibliography.

Thus, the title of the article comes first, followed by the name of the author in capitals (pseudonyms are indicated by being enclosed in inverted commas; anonymous articles are marked by the designation n.s, for not signed). The name of the journal is given in italics, generally abridged, and a list of these abbreviations is given with the list of journals below. The name of the journal is followed by two groups of figures separated by a semi-colon. The first group gives the year (or volume) of the publication in Roman numerals, and the number of the part in Arabic numerals. The second group gives the date of this part in terms of the day, month and year, thus 25.2.29 means 25th February 1929, and 6.29 means June 1929, whereas 1/2.29 means January/February 1929. Finally come the pages of the article, its language and its nature, which is indicated by using one of the abbreviations given later.

This method enables an estimate to be made as far as possible of the nature, scope and value of the article. If the title is too nebulous a few words are given in brackets to extend it. Finally the word suite (continuation) indicates that the study began in an issue previous to January 1929, whereas if it is continued in later issues, a row of dots is interted after the page numbers. When the article contains illustrations or plates, the abbreviations ill or pl are given after the pagination.

The language in which the article is published is generally stated in full, but we give later, for convenience a list of the terms used with their abbreviations.

Translator's note:

The lists of abbreviations and languages on pages 8 and 9 are given in four languages and do not need translating.

pp.12-14

LIST OF PHILATELIC JOURNALS

p.15

JOURNALS WHICH APPEARED IN 1928

Notes to List of Journals

1. Supplement to the Prague daily Deutsche Zeitung Bohemia. The same title is borne by the weekly philatelic supplement of the Berliner Tagblatt, whose abbreviation is Der Bfm. Sammler.
2. Has not appeared for several months.
3. Monthly supplement to the Viennese philatelic review Die Postwarte.
4. Supplement to the Teplitz philatelic review Die Briefmarke since June 1928.
5. Title of a Munich journal incorporated into Die Postmarke.
6. Journal incorporated into L'Echangiste Universel.
7. Ceased publication on the death of its editor at the end of 1928.
8. Incorporated in May into the journal Filatelìa of Turin, which was changed in January 1929.
9. Appears to have ceased publication.
10. Ceased to appear in January 1929.
11. Ceased to appear in June 1928.
12. Supplement to Sovietski Filatelist (otherwise Kollektioner).
13. Adopted the title Sovietski Kollektioner at the end of 1928, publication irregular.

p.17

GEOGRAPHICAL SECTION

Translators notes:

Only the titles of the articles have been translated and included here. The original document must be used to determine the bibliographic details. Titles which were originally in English are included Here for the sake of convenience as all of the titles can therefore be found together in the same order as in the original. The original French geographical headings have been translated but their alphabetical order retained.

When I came to re-edit this document for insertion into this document in 2014, I found that there were several styles of translation, so that only the early pages adhered to the above paragraph. Since I now do not feel that it is necessary to translate indexes, I have left the work as it stands and have not attempted to unify it for style.

Azores

The issue of "Saint Antoine".

German East Africa

Contribution to the knowledge of the German East African Post Offices and their cancellations (Continued).

German East Africa (Belgian Occupation)

Belgian occupation of German East Africa : Kigoma.

British East Africa

The war stamps of the British Colonies : British East Africa.

South West Africa

South-West African issues, Many valuable official statistics for philatelists.
Numbers issued of the type VI surcharge issue.

German South West Africa

The development of the postal system in German South West Africa.
German Southwest Africa.

South Africa

South African "Officials".
Union of South Africa.
South Africa 1928 a "fishy" variety.
South Africa 1910-1926.

Algeria

Algeria, study of the stamps of the first issue of 1924.
Numbers issued of the precancels.
Numbering of Algerian Post Offices and dated lozenge postmarks.
(Decree of the 15th March 1929, Commemorative issue of 1930.)
The parcel post stamps of Algeria.
Parcel post surcharges of 1929.
Forgeries of Algerian stamps.

Germany

Imperforate inflation stamps from the German State Post.
The German regional cancellation of 1802 and its origin (continued).
The cancellations of the German ship post.
Cancelled to Order cancellations and inflation stamps.
Ten years of German air post.
The establishment of the Berlin City Post 1827.
Price development of the German inflation stamps.
Postal rates in the German State (1906-1923).
The postage stamp issues in the Wohlfahrt 1928 edition.
Types of German meter marks.
Germany N°37 a-f (2 marks 1875).
Germany ... the market in unused Official stamps.
Saxony.
The German land forces post and its cancellations.
Non-philatelic postal requirements of the German inflation period.
The postage due labels of the German inflation period.
The types of German meter marks.
Greetings telegrams.
Price development of the German Wolfhart stamps (1924-1928).
(Use of the 2 kreuzer stamp of the 1871 and 1872 issues.)
The effect of German postal rates on issues of stamps during the inflation period.
The Official stamps of Germany (list of 26 numbers).
The rehabilitation of the German inflation stamps.

(Number issued of the charity stamp of 1928.)
Price development of the German inflation stamps.

Alsace-Lorraine

Collection of postal history stamps.
French postmarks used to cancel North-German occupation stamps in Alsace-Lorraine, 1870-1871.

Andorra

Andorra and its postage stamps.
The Andorra skyrocket, what has happened to Andorra?
Andorra.

Antigua

The re-entries of Antigua.

Danish West Indies

Danish West Indies, bisects.

Argentina

Stamps commemorating the centenary of peace between Argentina and Brazil.
Postal Museum ... in Buenos Aires.
Argentina, probable quantities of stamps with the overprint "Muestra" (Specimen).
Catalogue of Argentine stamps.
Aerial transport of correspondence to USA, the interior of the country and to neighbouring countries.
Postal savings watermark.
Contribution to the catalogue of Argentine stamps.
Commemorative issue for General Bartolome Mitre, printing plates.
Air service between Buenos Aires and Montevideo.

Australia

The Tasman conquered.
Australian Commonwealth, some varieties to look for.
The new Australian 3d Air Stamp.
The East-West air route.
Paris courier (six pence Kookaburra).
Aerial post within the Commonwealth of Australia.

Western Australia

The inverted swan.
Western Australia: a venerable error.

Austria

Types and subtypes of the issues of 1850 and 1856 from old Austria.
Old Austrian acknowledgement of receipt and ?
Old Austrian acknowledgement of receipt stamps.
The abnormal Austro-Hungarian field post marks.
An increase in single postage rates.
Austrian air mail traffic in the year 1928, an unofficial air post Vienna-Sofia.

The Austrian emergency issue.
The Vienna Chamber of Deputies Post Office.
The history of the Austrian en/elope issue of 1867.
Austrian aerophilately.
Statistics of the Austrian air post service in 1928.
A “dumb” postmark used in Trentino.
Introduction to the study of the 1 kr of the first issue of Austria.
Offices of foreign powers in the territory of the united principalities.

Austro-Hungary (Field Posts)

The stamps of the Austro-Hungarian Field Post in Italy.

Azerbaijan

What can be said about the postage stamps of Azerbaijan.

Baden

Why have so many Baden postage stamps remained uncanceled.
The Baden cancellation and its value.
The Baden tax cancel.
Cancellation of the postage stamps of Baden.
Valuation of the postage stamps of Baden.

Bahamas

The war stamps.

Barbados

Barbados.

Bavaria

The stamps of the Kingdom of Bavaria.
Bavaria, a further note on the sub-type varieties of the unpaid letter stamps of 1870-71.

Belgium

Regarding the Orval series.
Plate I of the 20c medallion of Belgium.
Regarding the Orval series.
Official information (the issues of January 1929).
Belgium advertising cancellations.
Issue of 1915.
Belgium, Parcel post stamps, the issue of 22nd June 1915.
Erroneous classification of the engraved stamps of Leopold 1st.
The precancels of Belgium.
The Belgian Red Cross stamps.
Temporary, slogan and advertising cancellations of Belgium.
The 5Fr. red-brown of Belgium.
Grotesque history of the Belgian 5 Francs.
(Numbers issued of the Newspaper stamps of 1828.)
In the catalogue margins and studies on the stamps of Belgium.
Rare Belgium cancellations.
Study of the stamps of Belgium (1884).

Where are we going? The Belgian Postal Administration in trouble with the French language.
Varieties of the 10c and 20c stamps of 1865.
Postal stationery of Belgium.
Belgium, projects and commentaries.
Forward - how a twopenny piece can roll and how to gamble with it.
Under the cross of Lorraine : The new Belgian charity stamp.
The newspaper stamps of Belgium.
Belgian 5Fr. red-brown.
Belgian precancels.
The new Belgian issues.
The Belgian King Albert stamps of 1915.

Bergdorf

The stamps of Bergdorf.

Bolivia

Decree of the 6th September 1928 (issue of 5, 10 & 15 c).
A new Bolivian stamp.
The four types of the 1919-28 issue.
Bolivia: Types of overprint on the 1928 charity stamps.
An unknown Bolivian airmail cancellation.

Bosnie-Herzegovina

Bosnia-Herzegovina. Some points on the 1879-1898 series.

Bremen

Bremen.

Brazil

Numbers issued of the air series of 1928.
Numbers issued of the surcharges of 1928.
Notes on the issue of 1843.
Brasil, a mixed issue.
The Pelotas-Jaguarao air mail.
The "Surcharged Hermes" series.
Contribution to the study of Brazilian stamps - the forgeries of 1900 made to defraud the Post Office.
Postage stamps with abnormal cancellations.
Regarding the forgeries of 1900.
Insufficiently prepaid letter.
Blank cancellation from the Uba garrison.
Contribution on the study of cancellations on the postage stamps of the Empire of Brazil.
Brazilian philately.
Brazil 1894-97, 100 reis.

Brunei

Borneo or Brunei?
The Malaya Borneo exhibition stamps.

Brunswick

Manuscript cancellations from Brunswick.
Brunswick $\frac{1}{3}$ Silver groschen (continued).
Brunswick $\frac{1}{4}$ good groschen.
Brunswick $\frac{1}{2}$ groschen.
Brunswick $\frac{4}{4}$ good groschen.
Philatelic sources : Brunswick remainders.
Brunswick post-cheque cut-out on a letter.

Bulgaria

The foreign posts in 19th century Bulgaria.
In Bulgaria.

Cameroons

The cancellations of the French colonial post offices - Cameroons.

Canada

The later issues of Canada.
Some unchronicled Canadians.
Canadian precancels.
Post Office Department Canada (Air Mail).
The stirring story of Canada's first transcontinental Air Mail flight.
Numbers issued of the 1910 commemoratives.
Review of Canadian precancels.
Totemism.
Official Canadian flights of past years.
Survey of Canadian and Newfoundland literature.
Canadian precancels.
The Victorian postage stamps of Canada.
Canada - Port Hood bisects.
Canadian precancels.
Canada 1912-28, a compilation of notes.
Record of official air mail flights from Edmonton to arctic regions: January 1929.
The precancels of Canada.
Post Office Department Canada.
Have we a new major variety in the Canadian Georgians?
Canadian precancels.
The express letter stamp of 1898.
Canadian stamps on original covers.
P.O. Announcement (Air Mail).

Cape of Good Hope

The triangular stamps of the Cape.
Proofs of Cape of Good Hope.
The triangulars of the Cape of Good Hope.

Cape of Good Hope (Mafeking)

Mafeking siege stamps.

Chile

The stamps of Robinson Crusoe's island.

(The 3 and 6 peso air stamps.)

A forgery of the 1853-67 issue of Chile.

Bisects : Chile, first issue.

Chile the 1910 issue, Juan Fernandez Island.

(Air stamps.)

The Government of Chile and its postage stamps.

More on the 3 and 6 peso air stamps of 1928.

The Government fixes the postal tariffs for the Air Mail Service.

The Air Mail of Chile.

Numbers issued of the Juan Fernandez Island issue.

China

China - Customs issue of 1878.

The counterfeit one dollar 1914 Peking print of China.

China.

The 3c red revenue stamp from China and its surcharges of 1897.

China, bisects.

The stamps of China.

Projected portrait series.

Postmarks of China 1894-97.

China's postage stamps.

Cyprus

50 years ago in Cyprus.

Jubilee of Cyprus postage stamps.

Numbers sold of the jubilee series.

Colombia

The Air Post between France, Colombia and Ecuador.

Originals and fakes of Colombia.

The use of high values.

The SCADTA network of lines.

Air Service of Colombia.

Colombia (Antioquia)

Antioquia, Colombia.

Colombia (Garzon)

The stamps of Garzon.

Colombia (Santander)

Santander express delivery service.

British Colombia

British Colombia and Vancouver Island.

German Colonies

Postage stamps from the Mandated Territories for former German colonies (conclusion).

German colonial cancellations.

German Colonial fore-runners at the Bremen Colonial stamp exhibition.

A little on German Colonies essays.

British Colonies

British colonial die proofs, how modern reprints of them may be distinguished.

Reprints of British colonial die proofs.

Punctured officials.

British colonial die proofs.

Re-entries.

Stamps of Messrs Perkins, Bacon & Co's Printing.

The Somerset House De La Rue & Co's "Gutter Margin" perforating machine.

Blank cancellations of the British colonies.

French Colonies

Supplement to the catalogue of French fiscals.

The stamps of the French Colonies.

Numbers issued of the 1900 issue and its surcharges.

Paris courrier (value of the 1912 surcharges).

The French Colonies.

Comoro Islands

Post Office cancellations in the French Colonies - Comoro Islands.

Belgian Congo

"EGO" obliterations on the postage stamps of the Belgian Congo.

Sale of the J. G. Kuck collection (Belgian Congo).

Stamps of the Belgian Congo.

Postage stamps of Belgian Congo.

Cook Islands

Cook Islands, random notes.

Costa Rica

5 centimes on 2 colones stamp.

Publicity stamps : Costa Rica.

Costa Rica 1929 5 centimes on 2 colones.

Somali Coast

Post office cancellations in the French Colonies - Somali Coast.

Crete

The Russian stamps of Rethymno.

Cuba

Numbers issued of the Capitol commemorative.

Republic of Cuba - 1927.

Cuban revolutionary stamps.

The Puerto Principe issue of Cuba.

Validation of Puerto Principe.

New Cuban issue.

61,000 gold pesos worth of postage stamps destroyed by fire.

The Validated Stamps of Puerto Principe.
Issue of a new series of commemoratives.

Curacao

The bisected 30 cent 1872.
Do the postage stamps of La-Guaira – Curacao belong to the Curacao field of collecting?

Denmark

Denmark.
Denmark's arms type postage stamp 1882-1905.
Denmark, 20 ore arms - large corner numbers.
Denmark: the 4RBS stamp – correspondence on our recent articles.
268 million letters sent.
Cancer research fund issue.
Danish and Danish West Indies?
The Danish Cancer stamps.
Inverted frames and chronology.
Collectors requirements of a complete Danish specialized catalogue.
Valid postage stamps.

Danzig

Historical account of the Danzig postal system from the 15th century to the present day
Danzig's greatest postal rarities: a contribution to our knowledge of the Danzig air mail.

Two Sicilies (Naples & Sicily)

The wine-red postage stamps of the Naples 1858 issue (cancelled in Sicily).
The stamps of the Kingdom of Naples – the proofs of 1849.
The 1 grano postage stamp of Sicily.
The Bourbon arms on the stamps of Naples.

Dominican Republic

Dominican boundary settlement 1929.
The palace of Columbus, a full record of the Alcazar of Colon issue of the Dominican Republic.

Egypt

The stamps of the International Medical Congress.
Egypt, 1927-28, a new die of the 20 mill value.
The International Medical Congress stamps.
Notes on the British Army Post Office in Egypt, 1882-1885.
Egypt 1922-23, official overprint.
The postage stamps of Egypt since 1926.
Egypt - the International Medical Congress.

Egypt (Suez Canal Company)

The stamps of the Suez Canal Company.

British Empire

Notes on the Georgian issues of the Empire.
Early side margins.

Ecuador

Numbers issued of the issues of November 1928 - Air post stamps, commemoratives, telegraphs, etc.
Decree regarding the railway commemoratives of 29.10.1929.
The 1866 4 reales of Ecuador.
Ecuador: the Scadta Company.
Ecuador notes.

Eritrea

Numbers issued of the first issue.

Spain

The Spanish stamps bearing the effigies Pope and the King.
The stamps bearing the Popes head.
Numbers issued of the Catacombes issue.
Numbers issued of the Barcelona and Seville series.
Spanish stamp issue: "Pro Catacombes".
Unequalled philatelic fantasy.
Machines for franking correspondence.
Errors and varieties on the stamps of the 7th Postal Congress.
Issue of propaganda stamps for the Seville-Barcelona Exposition.
Interesting error recently discovered (tete-beche 10c money-order stamp).
International air mail services.
The stamps of the Seville-Barcelona Exposition
Dr. Thebussem, Centenary of the honorary postman of Spain and Colonies.

Estonia

Temporary postal measures in Estonia.
Estonian postal stationery.
Estonian issues to commemorate the 10th anniversary of independence in 1928 and their varieties.
The new arms stamps from Estonia.

German States

Ink and crayon cancellations from the old German States.

Confederate States

A specialised catalogue of the postage stamps of the Confederate States of America.
Hunting for trouble.
Notes on Confederate provisionals.
Confederate "Soldiers letters".
Interesting pieces for the specialist.
Confederates at auction.
The Mt. Lebanon provisional.
A quartet of old offenders.

Papal States

The St. Andrews Cross of the Papal States.
Under the sign of the crown and keys.
Interesting particulars on the Papal States stamps.

The new Papal States.
The new Papal States (retrospective survey 1852-71).
Papal States.
Historic stamps of the Pope.
The Roman Question.
Stamps of the Roman States.
The new state within a state.
The stamps of the Roman States.
Papal States: postage stamps of the Rome-Frascati and Rome-Caprano service.
The reprints of the Papal States.
The end of the Papal postal service in Lazio.
Stamps of the Papal States.
Stamps of the Vatican city.

United States Of America

The official stamps of U.S.A.
The mail steamer "Washington".
Note on the 1861 issue of U.S.A.
William H. Russell originator and developer of the famous Pony Express.
Washington postmarks 1800-1901.
Early U.S. ship mail.
Review of Report of the Director Bureau of Engraving and Printing 1928.
Union patriotic covers.
Plate numbers on imperforate stamps.
U.S. Civil war revenues.
"Specimen" stamps.
300 unpicked covers 3c 1851.
U.S. Navy ship cancellations.
The U.S. 3c and 1c 1851-57.
U.S. plates and plate markings.
Air mail development in 1928 in U.S.A
Stampless covers cancellations.
The precancels of Miami, Florida.
The Pacific Northwest in the catalog.
Rural free delivery cancellations.
Postmarks of the railway post offices and a check-list of the R.P.O's. of the U.S.
Nautical cancellations and packet-boat markings.
The commemorative postage stamps of the U.S.
Columbian commemorative issue.
Why collect the 3c 1851.
Some U.S. cancellations.
U.S. Air mail poundage report (Nov. 1928-Jan. 1929).
Fakes, favours and forgeries.
Montana notes.
The Miami 2c Bureau coil.
The U.S. Departmental stamps, 1873-79, unrecorded varieties.
When the pack mule express was the U.S. mail.
Notes on the 10c Columbian stamp.
The new "State" stamps.
U.S. cancellations.

Bisected U.S. No. 36 (12c - 1851).
Check-list of the fancy registry cancellations of 1928.
U.S.A. state overprint.
24c air mail invert at $1500.
U.S. issues 1847-70.
A list of the Waterburys.
U.S. post towns - New Orleans.
Great commoner among stamps (3c 1861).
Florida State precancels.
"State" stamps (plate numbers of the Nebraska and Kansas series.)
U.S. 1916 envelope dies.
New 2c envelope die.
The fascination in U.S. stamps, little varieties to look for.
Precancelled Detroit.
Styles in precancels.
U.S. private proprietary stamps.
Early postmarks.
Issuance of Sullivan commemorative.
4c 1902 imperforate.
U.S. stamp cleaning sensation.
Old army "fort" cancellations.
For postmark and cover collectors.
Some illuminating facts on the state surcharges.
Fort cancellations.
Green sale of original covers.
Postage stamps of America 1893 "Christopher Columbus".
Precancels of U.S.A.
The local stamps of U.S.A.
Departmental postage stamps of U.S.A. from 1873 to 1879 - unrecorded varieties.

Ethiopia

Ethiopia in history and philately.

Far Eastern Republic

The Chita stamp issue.

Falkland Islands

The Falkland 1928 2d provisional.
The Falkland islands 22d on 2d provisional.
Astonishing rise of a modern 2d stamp.
Catalogue value.
The 1928 ½d (sic.) provisional of the Falkland Islands.

Fiji

Fiji postage dues.
Fiji, the type-set postage dues.
Fiji, the 2Zd on 2d wide surcharge.
The Fiji postage due controversy.

Finland

The new stamps of Finland.
The new and future stamps of Finland.
Contribution to knowledge of the value of the 1925-27 issue of Finland.
Finland and her stamps.
Jubilee stamps for the town of Aabo.
Finland, new types of stamps introduced from the beginning of 1930.

Fiume

Forgeries and falsifications.
Falsifications of Fiume.

France

Catalogue of post-free cards from the 1914-18 war.
Para-obliterated stamps.
Means of communications during the war of 1870-71.
The first issues of French postage stamps.
The stamps of France, a historical, anecdotal and non-technical as possible study.
French aerograms.
Supplement to the catalogue of French fiscal stamps (1925 edition).
Siege of Paris 1870-71.
The para-obliterations again.
Catalogue of French stamps.
The 20c of Bordeaux.
Varieties of the "F.M."
The "Ile de France".
The French Pasteur stamps.
Classification of the imperf stamps of the Empire.
On the subject of French varieties and their market value.
Study on the origine of the two 40c Ceres stamps known as "the four retouches".
The lozange of dots with small numbers cancellation.
7th supplement to the descriptive catalogue of French machine cancels.
The Peace Congresses for specialists in French cancellations.
Publicity stamps : France; Algeria.
Plate varieties of the early French stamps.
A paper on French stamps.
A note on the 40c of 1849.
The Joan of Arc stamps of France.

Gambia

The S.A. Brown collection of Gambia.

Great Britain

British Air post.
The Georgian stamps of Great Britain.
Pioneers of cheap postage.
Seven and seventy, the magic numbers in British stamp plates.
Plated varieties of the one penny red, Die 1.
"Circuit of Britain" card of 1912.
The first postage stamps.
Geogian coronation stamps.

Record dates.
Edwardian booklets.
Great Britain 1840, the one penny blue.
The penny post and commemorative issues.
British used abroad.
The Georgian stamps of Great Britain.
King Edward stamps of Great Britain demonetized?
Great Britain two pence halfpenny 1912-29.
Britain new postage stamps.
Great Britain "penny red" varieties.
The British P.O. in Porto Rico - in Nicaragua.
The 1840 two pence, a philatelic Mare's nest.
The one pound Postal Union Congress stamp.
Officers' and seamen's letters from British naval stations.
The star ornament.
One penny, die II, plate 55 - a query.
The commemoratives.
Postal Union Congresses.
New stamps of Great Britain.
The Postal Union Congress stamps.
The first stamp issue of Great Britain.
Great Britain (stamps with wide margins).
Cancellations on British stamps.
British stamps used in America.
British 1840 issue.

Greece

Commemorative issues of Greece.
Number issued of the 1927 issue.
Classification of Greek stamps.
Dr. Munk on Greece.
Greece, the crust-flaws of the first type and their uses.
The oldest postage due stamps in the world.
The mysterious 40 lepta of Greece.
The Act of foundation of the first Greek post office.
The issue of the high values - 50, 75 & 100 Dr.
The first aerograms of the Brindisi-Athens-Constantinople line.
Comparative table of the Garas sale prices
The first catalogue of Greek stamps.
Table of prices achieved by the major items of Mr. Lovnir's collection, Lucerne, March 1929.

GREECE (occupied territories)

Greece and the occupied territories (falsifications and forgeries).

Grenada

Grenada dues.
Grenada discards, 1928.
Grenada discarded denominations.

Guadeloupe

Numbers issued of the 1903 surcharge with the varieties.
Decree establishing the charity postage stamps of Guadeloupe.

Guatemala

Numbers issued of the surcharges on the quetzal.
Decree of the 20th November 1928 regarding the overprint of the 15 peso stamp.
Numbers issued of the 1897 commemorative issue.
Philatelic jaunts in other lands - Guatemala.

British Guiana

British Guiana - A transfer variety of the 6c of 1863-64.
The "Ferguson" Guianas.
The rarest stamp in the world.

Gwalior

Numbers issued of the local overprints.

Haiti

The air post in Haiti.
Haiti N°10.
The stamps of Hayti from 1881 to 1921.

Hamburg

The lithographed and embossed stamps of Hamburg.

Hanover

The stamps of the Kingdom of Hanover.

Heligoland

Heligoland 1 Mk. issue I, II, III.

Hong Kong

The Hong Kong 2c CA perforated 12.

Hungary

The separation of the Hungarian postal service from that of Austria from 1867-1871 and the production of common postage stamps from 1867.
Forgeries of the Turul.
Hungarian stamps with abnormal perforations.
Unissued 20 and 45 filler postage stamps from the 3rd war issue.
Some particulars of the first Debreczins issue.
Remainders of the st. Stephen stamps.
Hungarian stamps with official perforations.
Hungarian fiscal stamps for newspapers.
Does the 5 Kr stamp exist with the rhomboid watermark?
Hungarian stamps.
Postmarks on the 1874-76 issue.
Forged occupation stamps.
Appendix to the story of a block of 120-200f stamps.
Automatic postmarks and cancellations.

Hungary (Occupation)

The affair of the forged occupation and provisional postage due stamps.
Specialities of the Baranya II issue.

India

The small service stamps.
The 2a stamps of 1854.
Early Indian cancellations.
Indians used abroad.
Inverted and reversed watermarks.
Some Indian fakes and forgeries.
Some early Indian entires.
Memorandum on 1 Anna , die 1, 1854.
The editor's note on Mr. Gray's memorandum.
A study of lithography 2a 1854.
India 2 a 1855 die III - an important retouch.
The Central Provinces circle 1866-7 to 1873.
India 1854 1 Anna die 2, August C printing stone.
One Anna die II D Stone.
A pioneer of aerophilately.

French Indies

Cancellation of French possessions in India.

Netherlands Indies

Numbers issued of the air post surcharges.
The floating strong-box stamps.
The Landmail porten.
What is the VOC stamp?
Flights from Holland to the Dutch East Indies.
Landmail Porten.
The first flight from Holland to the Dutch East Indies and back.

Indochina

Indochina and its bureaus.
The cancellations of Indo-China.

Ireland

The Irish position reviewed.

Iceland

Numbers issued of all the stamps of Iceland (from the official handbook).
Errors variations and rarities in Iceland stamps.
Iceland.

Italy

The French post in Italy during the Revolution and the first Empire.
An interesting postage due not listed in the catalogue.
The commemorative stamps : Italy.
Italian veterans' stamps and others.

A notable map of the Italian Post in Austria.
Forgeries of Italian stamps.
The new Authorised Delivery - stamps and the old Sardinian stamped sheets.
Italian postage stamps - notes and comments.
Decrees relating to Italian postage stamps.
The law of guarantees and the Papal state.
Special cancellations of Italy.
Number cancellations on Italian postage stamps (1866-1889).
Lake cancellations of Italy.
Historical and descriptive catalogue of the Italian Air Post.
New values of postage stamps for collections.
Special postal telegraph offices.
Authorized delivery - ready stamped post card.

Jaipur

Quaint issues from the Jaipur State of India.

Jamaica

“What’s on” at the Jamaican P.O.’s (P.O. Guide).
New Jamaicans 1929 (1920 - 1927).
Jamaican 12d, 1929.
Jamaican 9d, 1929.
Jamaican 1d, 1929.
3s. Jamaica exhausts, 1929.

Japan

Contribution Contribution to the study of the February 1872 issue (Ryo type).
The postage stamps of Japan and Dependancies.
From the history of Japanese postage stamps.
The fast regular air post of Japan.
Post cards of Japan.
Commemorative stamps and cards of the Russo-Japanese war of 1906.
Commemorative issue for the marriage of the Crown Prince.
Development of the Japanese Postal Service.
Silver Wedding issue.
Brief description of the stamps of Japan.
Notes on the philatelic literature of Japan.

Kedah

The Malaya-Borneo Exhibition stamps.

Kelantan

The Malaya Borneo Exhibition stamps.

Kenya

In my stamp den.
“Specimen” stamps of Kenya.

Leeward Islands

Leeward Islands 1890-1927.

Leeward colour changes 1928.
Numbers issued of the sexagenary issue.

Latvia

The Independance commemorative stamps of 'Latvia.
The commemoration postage stamps of Latvia.
The stamps of Latvia.
The arms stamps of Latvia.
The commemorative postage stamps of Latvia.
Latvia - notes on recent issues.
Latvia and its stamps.
Latvia in the 1929 catalogue.
Latvias first stamps.
The postage stamps of the 10th anniversary of Latvia's independance.

Levant

The Civil state of the postage stamps of Corfu.

British Levant

British Levant - first issue.

Austrian Levant

Unexplained points in the history of the Austrian Levant Post.
Te ... ?
The hand stamp of the Corfu local post.
Foreign powers' offices on the territories of the United Principalities.

French Levant

Vathy, 20 piastres.

Polish Levant

Polish postal agency in Constantinople (Levant).

Romanian Levant

Romanian stamps of the Constantinople office.

Liberia

The 1929 issue of Liberia.
Cancellations on Liberian stamps.
The first stamps of Liberia.

Liechtenstein

Liechtenstein (editorial).
Numbers destroyed of the 1928 commemoratives.
Numbers destroyed of the Rheinnot issue.
History of the Liechtenstein Postal service.
Cancellations of Liechtenstein.
Liechtenstein postal stationery.
Withdrawal of the Prince Johannes jubilee stamps.

Lithuania

Lithuania, its triangular stamps.
The stamps of Lithuania.
The watermarks on some Lithuanian issues.
The history of Lithuania in its postage stamps.
Questions relating to South Lithuania.

Lombardy-Venetia

Cancellations of Lombardy-Venetia.
A new cancellation of Lombardy-Venetia.

Lubeck

The reprints of Lubeck.

Luxemburg

List of precancels.
Precancelled stamps of Luxemburg.
The reversed watermark on the one silver groschen 1852 of Luxemburg.
The stamps of Luxemburg.
The precancelled stamps of Luxemburg.

Madagascar

Study of the stamps of the French Colonies: Madagascar.
Post office cancellations ... Madagascar.

Morocco

Notes for a history of the Moroccan Post.

French Morocco

The States as stamp merchants.
Vice regal decree of 15th December 1928 bringing into being the Tangiers Charity stamps.
Morocco: Air Post stamps.
Morocco.

Mecklenburg

The postal relationships between Prussia and Mecklenburg.
An unknown blank cancellation stamp from Mecklenburg-Schwerin.

Memel

The German local cancellations of the Memel region.

Mexico

Notes on the Mexican air-mails.

Monaco

Monaco - some notes.

Montenegro

The establishment of the postal service in Montenegro and the first issue of stamps from this province.

A little chat on philately.

Norway

Bisected Norwegian postage stamps.
A Norwegian rarity, the 3 ore of 1893.

New Zealand

Introduction to a survey of New Zealand postage stamps.

Oldenburg

Philatelic sources : Oldenburg remainders.

Palestine

Postage stamps of the state of Israel.

Panama

Unknown from Panama?

Paraguay

Statistics for the air mail service between Asuncion and Buenos Ayres 1929.
Paraguay 1879-81 : 5c brown and 10c grey in new and original printings (conclusion).
The three last auxiliary air mail stamps of Paraguay 1929 and their defective impressions.
The Chief, deceased.

Netherlands

Are there types amongst the low values of stamps from Holland 1924.
Air mail performance on the Netherland - Netherlands East Indies line.
The Dutch fire-insurance stamps.
The pre-cancellation of Dutch postage stamps.
The floating strong-box stamps of the Netherlands and Netherlands East Indies.
Holland, the post-horn watermark of 1854.
Forged surcharges of Netherlands and colonies and other countries.
One or more plates of the 5 cent 1872.
Postal agencies.
The print-roller cancellation stamps.
Postage-due stamps and additional postage-due stamps.
Does the 12½ ct - 1872 exist with the perforation 12½ x 12B. Little holes?
The cancellations of Dutch Temporary post offices.
Letter "Holland" via "Besen".
The first postage stamps of the Netherlands.
Postage stamps for sending cash in floating strong-boxes.

Philippines

A praiseworthy action by the Governing Committee of the Philippines Philatelic Association.

Poland

The air postal service of the Polish flights.
The Polish airmail service.
Poland – "Fenigie e Marchi" of the year 1919.

Prussia

Prussian researches (conclusion).

The period of production of Prussian envelopes with the key? cancellation III & N (conclusion).

Prussia, fake cancellations.

History and transformations of the high-value Prussian silver groschen stamps.

Portugal

The overprinted Reaper stamps of Portugal.

Reunion

Post-office cancellations - Isle of Reunion

Romania

Details of the airmail post.

Contribution to the history of the Romanian post and its postage stamps (conclusion).

Romanian jubilee stamps. 4) ?

Russia

A newly discovered trial envelope from Russia.

Russian history as depicted on Russian postage stamps.

The correction of an error.

(in Ukrainian).

Soviet Russia (USSR)

Extract from the rules governing the exchange of collectors' items with the USSR (from the F.I.P.P.).

Regulations on exchange with the USSR of collectors' items (from the F.I.P.P.)

Sardinia

The old Sardinian cancellation stamps (the new reissue of autorizzato stamps and ...).

Ready-stamped postcards (authorized reissue).

Saar

The new charity stamps of the Saar region.

Eastern Silesia

Numbers issued of the East Silesian issue of 1920.

Schleswig

More about the C.I.S. stamps.

Sweden

1930 20 ore Gustav V with blue face.

Notes on the colour of the 12 ore armorial.

Uniformity in Swedish stamps.

The Swedish Atlantic flights.

The world's rarest postage stamps.

Switzerland

Novelties - airmail post 1929.
Consideration on local Swiss postmarks.
Types of the Tell's son stamp from 1909.
Some notes on Swiss postage stamps.

Surinam

One of the greatest rarities from Surinam, 10 to 30 cent post paid (?) type 2.
The imperforate 2½ cent stamps of 1892.
The fantasy-product 1 ct overprint.
Ships' cancellations and transit cancellations.
Two types of 1912 charity stamp.
10 on 30 cent postage stamp type II.

Czechoslovakia

Forgery to damage the post - plate numbers.
All sorts from Czechoslovakia.
Plate marks and numbers on Czechoslovak postage stamps.
Numbers of the Jubilee stamps issued.
Arrangement of a collection by type and watermark.
Points relating to the Jubilee stamps.
Projects, essays - problems.
The Prague Philatelic Office.
Correct numbering in classification (?) of the lime tree leaf watermark.
The Czech stamp since 1925.
What the Czech postal administration is preparing for 1929.
Imminent new issues.
Numbers issued of the 1928 Jubilee stamp.

Togo

History of the production of the First World War stamps.

Thurn & Taxis

Rare cancellation from Thurn & Taxis.

Turkey

The bisection of Turkish postage stamps (1925).

Ukraine

The design of a new Podolian (?) type.
Differences between the I and II Odessa overprints.

Uruguay

Memorandum on the destruction of Uruguayan postage stamps in 1927.
Uruguay, more about the burning of the securities.
Uruguay, stamps for the parcel post.

Wurtemberg

Royal Wurtemberg Post, the postage stamps of the first issue, their production, use and cancellation.

Yugoslavia

Numbers of Yugoslav stamps issued.
Geographical bases for the study of Yugoslav postal districts.
Cancellations on Slovenian issues.
The prepaid stamps of Yugoslavia.
What hinders the upsurge of Yugoslav philately?
The postage stamps of the Slovenian-Layback ?
Bisected stamps of the first Slovenian issue.
Numbers of charity stamps converted into postage stamps in 1928.

SYSTEMATIC SECTION

Catalogue

How to make a catalogue.
Restricted areas and their postage stamp issues in the catalogues.
Standardizing numbers.

Collection

Collecting for sale.
Why and what I collect.
General collections.

Costs

Collecting as an investment.
Over-expensive stamps.

Defects

Standards for evaluating postage stamps with defects.

Design

The German imperial eagle on German postage stamps (conclusion).
The Turkish working design.
Artistic symbols on the postage stamps of Europe.
Postage stamp Latin.
How a nation's stamps reflect its history. (Conclusion.)
Popes on postage stamps.
Columbus with the telescope.
Russia's past as depicted in its postage stamps.
From the Phrygian cap to the crown.
The child on postage stamps.
Lions and leopards as heraldic beasts on postage stamps.
Postage stamps with childrens' pictures. (ie. painted by children).
German postage stamp artists.
Famous people of Germany on the 1925 issue.
Stamps with insignia : The eagle.
Homage to foreigners.
Plants on postage stamps.
The language struggle on postage stamps.
Various articles on Mercury, ships and locomotives on stamps.

Entires

Catalogue of the post-free cards of the 1914-18 war.
To collect entires or not?

Trials

The stamps of the Kingdom of Naples, the trials of 1849.

Exhibition.

Drawing up the rules for an exhibition.

Exhibition (Bremen)

The 35th German Philatelist's Day and the 1st German Colonial Postage Stamp Exhibition.
The Colonial Postage Stamp Exhibition at Bremen.

Exhibition (Durban)

Impressions from the Postage Stamp Exhibition at Durban.

Exhibition (Paris)

France, exhibition at the "Hotel de la Monnaie" of antique coins, medals, sheets of postage stamps and stamps.

Fakes (Forgeries)

Fakes and the penal law.
The Fournier Facsimilies (British holders of these albums).
Problems of the Post Office in the fight against forgeries.
Is the production of dies which could be used to make postage stamps a punishable offence?

Postal Forgeries

How post offices protect themselves against forgeries.

Postal Forgeries (Brazil)

The forgeries of 1900 used to swindle the Post Office.

Postal History

The relations of the German states to the House of Thurn & Taxis.
Cancellation stamps of the State of Magdeburg from the beginning to the establishment of the German Imperial Post.
The historical development of the postal service in Magdeburg.
Post-paid stamps of the East India Company.
Sending parcels 100 years ago.
The history of the post.
The origin of the postage stamp.
The Swedish postal system.

Literature

Value and meaning of the philatelic literature.
"Magyar ? Lexicon", with the development of philately.

Prepayment Marks

Should prepayment marks be collected on postage stamps or as marcophily.

Postal Museums (Russia)

The Philately section of the Russian Postal Museum.

Cancellations

Courtesy cancellation.

The cancellation stamps of the German ships' post.

Disinfection postmarks.

Cancellations (Steamers)

The cancellation stamps of the German ships' post.

Philatelic Offices

Philatelic offices (conclusion).

Philatelic offices.

Perforations

Next paths ? ?

Philately

Semi-postal or superfluous issues.

Let us get our bearings.

Stamp collectors who are not collectors.

The dying postage stamps.

What is a precursor?

How to use second quality stamps.

The verso of postage stamps.

Philatelic specialities; original sheets.

The smallest postal regions.

How post offices protect themselves from forgeries.

Historical provisionals.

First and second choice.

Commemorative series.

Airmails

The first Paris-Mont Blanc flight by Thonet.

Aerograms with elaborate postage stamps.

Attempts at a fast postal link Dakar-Zinder-Dakar, 1925-1926.

Germany's influence on air traffic in Asia.

The Mediterranean journey of the German airship "Graf Zeppelin".

The letters recovered from the wreck of the airship "Italia", a vulgar swindle.

The "Graf Zeppelin" flies over Spain.

Airmail letters Stockholm-New York.

Local Posts

The Grodno connecting post.

A forgotten unique philatelic item (the 6-kopek postage stamp of the Tiflis City Post, 1857 issue).

Private Posts

The Hapag postage stamps.

Prices

The value of European pairs, strips and entires, excluding Old Germany.

Specialism

What can and what should a specialist collect?

Specialised collections of individual stamps.

Speculation

Speculation without end.

Stamps

What can be seen on the verso of certain postage stamps.

Commemorative Stamps

Is it right to collect special-occasion and charity stamps?

Stamps (Production)

Printing accidents.

Universal Postage Union

The Universal Postal Union.

Sales By Auction

What do collections fetch at auction?

END

Literatur Nachrichten
January 1951, Volume 1, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1983. (Revised July 1991, August 1994 & January 1999.
Additional minor editorial changes, February 2008.)

LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN

January 1951, Volume 1, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of the article titles and general headings for a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical and includes full translations of all articles of permanent interest to bibliophiles.

pp.1-3

Aim and purpose of Literatur Nachrichten

Chr. Otto Müller

(Formerly issued as Philat. Trans. 9)

Without literature, philatelic science is today quite inconceivable.

Such men as Bacon, Carl Beck, Alex. Bungerz, Fraenkel, Glasewald, Herzog, Dr. Kalckhoff, König, Krasemann, Rommel, Suppantschitsch, Thalmann, Tiffany, Ton, et al. have laid the foundations of philatelic bibliography, and in more recent times Abele, Billig, Blanc, Ihm, King-Farlow, Kronenberg, Michaelis, Ernst Müller, Scharfenberg, Schmittdiel, Zirkenbach, et al. have taken it further.

Philatelic libraries are available to serious collectors in Berlin, Bern, Frankfurt am Main, Halle, London, Munich, New York, Stockholm and Vienna.

Modern photocopying methods now enable the contents of non-loanable, irreplaceable works to be made available to a wider circle.

A great deal of work is still needed in the field of philatelic literature to meet present-day requirements, especially in view of the fact that the war bore especially heavily on philatelic literature. The most important tasks include:

1. The planning and establishment of philatelic book shops.
2. The production of philatelic literature.

3. Literature information.
4. Reviews of new literature.
5. Survey of the scope of philatelic literature in public libraries.
6. Additions to the philatelic section of the Munich City Library.
7. Bringing together authors in the same field of study to prevent duplication of effort.
8. Making possible the publication of useful manuscripts.
9. Protection of authors against misuse of their intellectual work (copyright).
10. Bringing together lovers of philatelic literature with a view to exchanges.
11. Clearing up bibliographical questions.
12. Questions of organisation.
13. Making microphotography available for the ends of philatelic literature.

At the 1949 meeting of Section B (philatelic literature) in the Munich Philatelic Book Shop, then the largest functioning German specialist philatelic book shop, it became clear that success would only come from assembling large numbers of small studies. The leader of Section B was always looking for co-operation with ideally placed working bibliophiles.

So far the following gentlemen have come forward as collaborators with Section B:
(See the list on page 3 of the original.)

Section B is looking for further advice on how to produce the index to philatelic magazine literature (see above - 3. Literature information).

pp.3-11

Subscriptions to specialist philatelic periodicals

[This is a list of world-wide philatelic periodicals with their subscription details.]

pp.11-13

Literature for sale

- a) Literature wanted.
- b) Offers.

pp.13-14

Guidelines for planning and starting a philatelic library

Chr. Otto Müller

It should be a point of honour for every collectors' society to have a library of handbooks at least. It should contain some specialised periodicals, the most up-to-date stamp catalogues and such important reference items as the Kohl-Munk Stamp Handbook, the Rudolphi Handbook for Philately, the colonial handbooks by Friedemann or Dr. Ey; Müller-Mark: Old Germany Under the Magnifying Glass, the Infla-Germany Library: Krapp: ABC of Philately (if the Bungerz Lexicon is not available).

If there are several societies in a larger town, one of them could undertake the task of setting up a centralised collection which could also include the monographs still available, such as:-

Sebastian	-	Thurn und Taxis
Sebastian	-	Nordd. Postbezirk
Hofinger	-	Monographie der Französ. Briefmarken
Simon	-	Baden-Handbuch
Schmidt	-	Handbuch der Deutschen Privatpost-Wertzeichen etc.

To get hold of standard works that are already out of print, the collector should contact dealers in philatelic books.

To use the external loans service of the philatelic section of Munich City Library, application should be made via a public library in the place of residence, or via a society affiliated to the League of German Philatelists. External loans are made on the condition of postage being paid both ways.

pp.14-15

The most important additions to the philatelic section of Munich city library in 1950

p.15

Manuscripts worth publishing

Many studies of value to philately fail to get published because of the high cost of reproduction and the limited demand. To get an idea of what should be allowed for printing, Group B asks all authors of as-yet unpublished works to answer the following questionnaire. Confidentiality is guaranteed.

- | | | |
|----------|----|--|
| Question | 1. | Title and contents of papers. |
| | 2. | Length (N°. of pages of typing, A4). |
| | 3. | Has any approach been made to a publisher? |
| | 4. | How big should the edition be? |
| | 5. | Cost of the manuscript? |
-

pp.16-20

Literature record

Contents of inland and foreign postage stamp magazines (Jan. 1951).

p.20 (lines 5 - 14)

[This is a preview of the next issue of Literatur Nachrichten and details of the subscription.]

p.20

Supplement to the journal list [on pp.3-11].

END

Literatur Nachrichten
March 1951, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1983. (Revised July 1991, August 1994 & March 1999.
Additional minor editorial changes, February 2008)

LITERATUR NACHRICHTEN

March 1951, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and provides full translations of any articles of special interest to me.

pp.1-8

Recent French Philatelic Literature.

By E. -O. Simon, Probationary teacher, correspondent of the Philatelic Literature Section of the BDPh, and member of the (French) Society for Philatelic Literature.

There was a real blossoming of the philatelic literature in France during the years 1949 and 1950. Even though a short article can only give a general survey of the range of this work, the reader will get an idea of the way in which French philately is developing. However, the fields of interest described here are not quite so "typically French" as the German collector might assume. They are often far more international in outlook than might be expected; Provisionals of the German territories of 1945/46, to quote a typical German example.

Translator's note: The titles and commentaries in German have not been translated.

pp.9-13

Literature - New Publications.

p.14

Current Auction Catalogues.

Current Offers

pp.15-19

Periodical Literature Review.

1. Specialised periodicals
2. Philatelic literature in the non-philatelic press

This is a commentary on the contents of various recent philatelic periodicals.

pp.20-31

Literature Record.

pp.32-44

Literature Exchange Service (Livedi).

Literature wanted	-	monographs
	-	periodicals
Literature offers

p.45

Sundries.

On the Exchange of Duplicate Philatelic Periodicals.

pp.45-46

Some Letters About the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library.

p.46

Exhibitions 1951.

p.47

Meetings.

Bavarian Radio.

END

Symbols and Abbreviations for Philatelic Periodicals

[Verzeichnis und Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften]

Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, Duisburg, Germany, 1959, pp.26

{There was an earlier, undated edition of this pamphlet consisting of only 10 pages: Literatur-Abkürzungen: Abkürzungen Philatelistischer Fachzeitschriften. The introduction on page 1 of the earlier edition was essentially the same as in the extended version, the order of the paragraphs being slightly changed. Some years after I had the introduction to the enlarged edition translated, I found a translation of the introduction to the earlier edition in the files that came to me from James Negus. For completion, Jim's translation is given after mine below.}

Translation of the introductory text only, p.[2]

{Jim Negus' translation of the introductory text only, p.1}

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
November 1983. (Revised September 1991, August 1994 & March 1999.
Additional minor editorial changes, February 2008)

SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS OF PHILATELIC PERIODICALS

For a good many years, specialist collectors and philatelists have paid increasing attention to magazine articles and other contributions to the philatelic literature. This type of material is only useful however when there is some means of referring back to the literature that has appeared earlier. This kind of aid has been available for some years in Germany, and also in England and America, so that nowadays we philatelists should find it easy to make detailed surveys of the earlier writings.

However, the production of such an index calls for the use of set abbreviations which must not be departed from at all. A guiding table of this sort has been available for some time in Germany from the philatelic section of the Munich City Library. However the abbreviations it contains differ in part from the ones that are customary in England and America. To reach international agreement, our second chairman Christoph Otto Müller of Steinebach am Wörthsee has engaged in a protracted correspondence which has finally resulted in the attached internationally acceptable table of abbreviations. Some of the older terms now need correcting. However, in the not too distant future, every publisher ought to be able to publish on the basis of the most up to date form of the list.

Overleaf we give an alphabetical list of abbreviations, followed by another alphabetical list of journals.

The following special symbols should be noted:

To avoid confusion, the abbreviation BnBz = Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung, will be used to distinguish this from Kosack's journal Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung (= BBZ).

Since SBZ = Sächsische Briefmarken-Zeitung, the Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung will be represented by the abbreviation SchBZ.

SiP means Sieger Post, but S.P can also be used for the volumes of the Sieger-Post published under the heading Deutsche Briefmarken- und Flugpost- Zeitung.

Our future literature references will use the abbreviations given in the present list.

Literature surveys have already appeared for Baden, Prussia, Saxony, Württemberg and the Saar. Bavaria will follow shortly.

- before the author indicates a monograph. If there is no dot, an article in a magazine, colloquium proceedings, etc. is referred to.
- * before the journal indicates that this is still appearing today (end of 1959).

Duisburg November 1959
Post Office Box 789

Gesellschaft für Philatelistische Literatur, E.V.
[Society for Philatelic Literature.]

END

Negus' translation

ABBREVIATIONS OF PHILATELIC PUBLICATIONS
FOR USE IN THE INDEX OF PHILATELIC BOOKS

For many years now, specialists-collectors and philatelists have been constantly searching for material and publications on philatelic matter suitable for articles. All these technical publications can only be practically utilised if the existing literature is properly classified according to whereabouts of the materials available. In Germany, and also in England and America such classifications have been carried out for many years now, and today, we philatelists have easy facilities of referring also to the earlier published literature.

The compilation of such Index requires introduction of certain abbreviations, which should not intersect with each other. This type of list giving reliable guidance exists in the Philatelic Section of Munich State Library in Germany. However, the abbreviations contained therein do not always agree with abbreviations used in England and America. To find the necessary basis for international agreement our Vice-Chairman, Herr Christoph Otto Muller, of Steinebach/Worthsee undertook long correspondence and its direct result is the undermentioned list of internationally adaptable abbreviations. Some obsolete symbols have to be amended accordingly. In the near future every existing Index could be modernised and brought up to date with the help of the latest list of abbreviations.

We are publishing today a list in alphabetical order of abbreviations, which will be followed later by list of magazines in alphabetical order.

The following signs have to be specially noted:

- If before author's name it indicates a book, if it is missing it indicates an article in a magazine, periodical, etc.
- ★ Before the magazine indicates that it is still being published (up to the end of 1956)

In order to avoid misunderstanding the abbreviation BnBZ means Berner Briefmarken Zeitung and BBZ means Kosack's publication Berliner Briefmarken Zeitung. As SBZ means Sachsische Briefmarken Zeitung, one had to mark Schweizer Briefmarken Zeitung as SchBZ. SiP means Sieger Post under same SiP one had to classify its predecessor's earlier volumes published as Deutsche Briefmarken-und Flugpost-Zeitung.

The abbreviations in our future Philatelic Literature Review will be used in accordance with the undermentioned list.

[Ex-James Negus' Library]

END

Luis F. Thomen

Philatelic magazines of the Dominican Republic

[Revistas filatélicas de la República Dominicana]

Boletín del Archivo General de la Nación, 1956, Whole number 90, pp.256-259 & plate

Reprinted as a pamphlet: Luis F. Thomen: *Revistas Filatélicas de la República Dominicana., Editora Montalvo, Ciudad Trujillo, Dominica, 1956, 6pp.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
October 1983. (Digitised & revised in October 2010)

PHILATELIC MAGAZINES OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC

The English postal reforms of the year 1840 lead to the general use of postage stamps for correspondence and gave rise to the hobby of philately, in which interest was taken right from the start. The Royal Collection of Great Britain includes a letter written the day before the use of postage stamps became legal and enclosing one of the stamps as a novelty, though additional postage as shown by a coloured mark still had to be paid. The writer of this letter says that from the following day all letters will carry the portrait of Her Majesty, which appeared on the stamps.

A year later the Times newspaper published an advertisement from a lady asking for used postage stamps to be employed for decorative purposes and by 1842 there was such a "mania" that the magazine Punch published a poem criticizing people who collected every spit-upon stamp.

However the interest in stamps went on, and philatelic magazines very soon began to appear in France, Belgium and England.

The interest in publications on philately spread to all parts, including our own country where the first periodical of this type was called El Filotelico (The Philatelist). This was the organ of the Philatelic Society of Santo Domingo, and its editor was J. A. Vos-Schotborg initially. During its first period it managed to publish 14 numbers in octavo (18 x 25 cm) in two volumes. The first volume covered January to December 1885, and was numbered 1 to 12, though numbers 10 and 11, for October and November, were issued jointly. Number 1 was published on the first day of February 1885 and number 2 on the 28th of the same month. Starting from number 2, the magazines had coloured paper covers.

This publication changed publisher starting with number 8, when David E. Santamaría took charge of it and continued up to number 12. It then passed to another publisher, Carlos Báez y Figueroa, who published the only two issues of the second volume, for January and February 1886.

After a short period of suspension, El Filotelico re-appeared in 1887 in what was called the "Second series". This consisted of only one octavo issue, published by José Ma. Leyba and Francisco Man. García Rodríguez. This issue had a bright red paper cover.

March 1903 saw the beginning of the publication Santo Domingo Postal. The publisher at the beginning was Pedro E. Pérez. This was also in octavo format (24 x 28 cm), and managed to reach 15 issues divided into two volumes.

The 12 issues in the first volume covered a period between March 1903 and September 1904. The second volume, which was made up of numbers 13 to 15, ran from October 1904 to January 1905.

Numbers 2 and 3 were published by Pedro E. Pérez and Enrique A. Curiel; number 4 by Pedro E. Pérez alone; numbers 5 to 12 by Pedro E. Pérez and Luis E. Mañón and numbers 13 to 15 by Luis E. Mañón, J. R. Pérez Nolasco and Francisco A. Contín.

On three occasions two issues of the magazine were combined into a single number: numbers 9 and 10 appeared jointly with the date December 1903; numbers 11 and 12 with the date September 1904, and numbers 14 and 15 with the date January 1905.

El Eco Filatelico (The Philatelic Echo) appeared in Puerto Plata in the year 1903. It was published by Ahston y Villaneuva. Five issues appeared from April to September 1903, the first in folio measuring 37 cm and the other four in quarto measuring 29 x 32 cm. This publication had a text in English and Spanish. Number 2 carries the inscription Volume II year 1, which is a mistake, as it should read Volume I, number 2.

El Filatelico Cartofilo (The Philatelic Cartophilist) began publication in 1904 as a monthly philatelic journal whose publishers were Miguel A. Méndez y Cía. and Daniel Goris. Its octavo format measured 25 x 28 cm. Number 1 is dated December 1904 and numbers 3 and 4 were issued jointly in March 1905.

In the year 1905 the Revista Postal Dominicana (Dominica Postal Review) appeared in Santo Domingo. It was published by Enrique A. Curiel, and got as far as number 11, covering January to November of this year, with numbers 7 to 11 appearing jointly with the date November 1905. Its format was 28 x 31 cm.

Also in 1905, Fco. Cofresi published El Filatelico Azuano (Azuan Philatelist) in Azua. Its format was octavo 24 cm high. Numbers 1 and 2 were published together with the date February and March 1905, and numbers 3 and 4 also appeared jointly with the date April and May 1905.

El Filatelico Azuana stopped with this issue, but was immediately followed by La Defensa Filatlica (The Philatelic Guardian), also published in Azua by Noboa & Co. It too had an octavo format and was 29 cm high. This publication consisted of only one issue, dated May 15th 1905.

In 1904 the publication began in Santo Domingo of El Filatelico Dominicano (The Dominican Philatelist). Its publishers were B. de Castro Sardá and Genaro Martínez C. Again it was octavo, 28 cm high. It managed to issue 9 numbers, from February to October 1904. Starting from number 2, it was published by Luis E. Alemar and Genaro Martínez C.

In 1920 was published the Revista De Canjes (Exchange Journal), which ran to four issues, from June to September.

In October 1926 appeared Santiago Filatelico (Santiago Philatelist), which had only one number, 25 x 19 cm.

The Revista Postal (Postal Review), published by Genaro Martínez, saw the light in May 1933, and published two volumes up to January 1935. Numbers 4, 5 and 6, which appeared jointly, covered the period from August to October 1933. Starting from May 1934, each issue consisted of two numbers: 11 and 12 for May and June, 13 and 14 for July and August, 15 and 16 for September and October, and 17 to 19 for November 1934 to January 1935. There was then a period of suspension, and then it re-appeared for a second time, during which a single issue was published in May 1941.

As a supplement to the Revista Postal, Martínez began a publication to document and describe the stamps of the Dominican Republic, with a translation into English.

In July 1948, Ramón Antonio Sosa began the publication of Republica Dominicana Filatelica (Philately in the Dominican Republic), with a format of 24 x 15 cm, in three volumes. 10 numbers were published up to 1942, This publication began to re-appear in 1955 with number 11.

The Dominican Philatelic Society has started to publish a monthly bulletin, four numbers of which have already appeared this year, in April, May, June and July 1956. The last two (June and July) appeared jointly.*

* The aim of this article is to arouse interest in Dominican philatelic literature. The list of publications may not be complete, in which case we would be grateful if anyone who has more information would let us have it for completion. We will analyze the contents of these publications in later articles.

END

R. Leroy

Bibliography of Philately in Belgium

[Bibliografie van de Filatelie in Belgie = Bibliographie de la Philatélie en Belgique]

Robert Leroy, Ostende, Belgium, 1973, 256pp.

(Translation of the Introduction only, pp.7-8)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca. 1999

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PHILATELY IN BELGIUM

Introduction

We have already seen the results obtained when philatelists form circles and philatelic schools. The philatelist of today is not satisfied with a simple collection to study, he still needs documentation to enrich his studies. The stamp-lover needs everything relating to the postal organisation of the territory he wants to explore, he no longer restricts himself to the postage stamp, but moved on to a higher level, namely that of the letter post. This is an aspect that opens out almost unlimited possibilities and leads on to the study of postal history. To do this, it is necessary to carry out researches into the literature and documentation, which are often unknown or untraceable. Hence the need for a bibliographic survey of use to the philatelist. This should not be merely a list of titles, but a list with a subject index giving the contents of each work. Thus, the philatelist can immediately pick out the book he needs to start his work or complete it. Thus, my intention was not merely to draw up a list of works on Belgium, but rather of works published in Belgium but relating to other countries as well.

The authors of the works mentioned were not all philatelists. Official publications meant for the postal public are also listed. These are not drawn up with philately in mind, but can be a help to the present day philatelic researcher.

In origin this bibliography was my thesis for the intermediate school of Librarianship at Anvers in 1966. After I had gained more experience in philately I edited, corrected and completed this thesis to make it more useful for the philatelist.

I should like to thank the people who have helped me with this research, in particular Messrs. P. Arents, J. P. Jordens and H. van de Veire, also the staff of the Postal Museum at Brussels.

Method of Work

There are publications which I have not located myself, though I have found descriptions of them in the bibliographies consulted. I have reprinted these original descriptions in my own text, with a reference to the original work in which they can be found. The sign (*) precedes each of these descriptions.

Books

Books are arranged alphabetically by author or title (in the case of anonymous works). Inversion has been used when the name is preceded by a particle not combined with the name. For example: Ph. De Bosredon becomes; Bosredon, Ph. de. Works by the same author are arranged chronologically, with any undated ones coming first. If I have not quoted all an author's works, it is because some of them have been published abroad.

Periodicals

Periodicals are arranged by order of title. The descriptions are based on the latest data. These are followed, as far as possible by: changes in the title, sub-title, editor and printer from the outset to the latest issue. If the periodical is still current, there is no finishing date and I give the details for ordering it.

Exhibition Programmes

These contain interesting articles now and again, others consist of nothing but the list of items exhibited plus publicity material. It is important to look for programmes that contain articles as their contents are often unique.

Auction Sales

These are listed alphabetically by the name of the dealer. It is impossible to describe all the catalogues. It was important to give them a mention, since the most interesting ones are often used as basic documents for the study of one particular issue or other. I quote the place and number of the work if it is in a public library. The philatelist can then consult it on the spot or ask for it via a local public library. The Postal Museum in Brussels does not lend books.

Subject Index

The ordinary numbers relate to general subjects, the bold-face ones to specific topics.

END

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften
November 1948, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1983. Revised 1987

PHILATELISTISCHER BRIEF-DIENST ÜBER
BRIEFMARKEN-ZEITSCHRIFTEN

November 1948, Volume 1, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.7-11

*Contents summary of inland and foreign philatelic journals:
Specialised [by country].*

p.8 (Bottom) Upon request, interested parties may get copies of journal articles they require at cost.

p.9 General information.

p.11 (Lines 8-10) The abbreviations for the journal title are given in the following list. The first number is the issue number and the second is the page number of the articles in question.

List of the journals included in the report

p.11

Literature advertisements

p.12

Books etc.

p.12 (Lines 11-14) Request for review copies of books

p.12

Exchange offers!

p.12

Article-Extracts

A new system of collecting is described by H. Arnold Stautz in Lupe (Magnifying Glass) Whole number 37/38. In this, only the values that have different motifs are collected of all stamp issues, so that the flood of new issues can be dealt with effectively and it becomes possible to make a collection covering a number of countries. The opinions of collectors and the trade, and of the publishers of catalogues and albums, are now awaited.

In the Kurzl-Briefmarken-Liste (Short List of Postage Stamps) No.11, H. Grubbe recommends his protective covering for new stamps, which uses the stickiness of the gum. The coating can also be removed. It is very questionable whether collectors or dealers will want to use this product on their holdings, since too much damage has already been caused by these “universal nostrums”.

The Austrian Wiener-Europa-Katalog yields some examples of severe reductions in prices. The catalogue is in loose-leaf form with supplements, and all stamps are illustrated. The price are adjusted to the level of the world market.

p.12 (Last four lines)

Those interested in philatelic literature, catalogues, stamp magazines, etc., can get lists on payment of the postage from the Philatel. Verlag A. Ihm, Wunsiedel.

END

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften
December 1948, Volume 1, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK
February 1983

PHILATELISTISCHER BRIEF-DIENST ÜBER
BRIEFMARKEN-ZEITSCHRIFTEN

December 1948, Volume 1, Issue 3.

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.13-17

Contents summary of inland and foreign philatelic journals.
Specialised [by country].

p.14-17

General information.

p.17 (Lines 20-22) The abbreviations for the journal titles are given in the following list. The first number is the issue number and the second is the page number of the article in question.

List of the journals included in the report

pp.17-18 (4th line from the bottom) The following philatelic journals have been sent to us from abroad.

p.18

Literature advertisements
A. [Periodicals]
B. Books, etc.

p.18 (Lines 34-36) Descriptions are given only of specimen journals sent to us. More detailed information on the literature can be obtained by those interested from the Literature Forwarding Agency, Alfred Ihm, (13a) Wunsiedel, P. O. Box 113.

p.18

Article-Extracts

The new collecting system of Arnold Stautz, Lupe No. 37-38 is described by Dr. Erwin Koch, Solingen-Ohligs, in his paper A hundred thousand stamps and general collecting?

An interesting account of foreign connections with England and also of developments in price is given by Robert R. Trager, London, in Posthorn No. 12.

p.18 (Last 7 lines)

Further suggestions and proposals for improvement made by our circle of readers for the future shape of our journal will be taken into account in future issues.

Those interested in philatelic literature, catalogues, stamp magazines, etc., can get our lists on payment of postage. Offprints of articles can also be supplied by the A. Ihm Philatelic Bureau & Firm.

END

C. SCHMITTDIEL

Periodical review
[Zeitschriftenschau]

Die Philatelistische Literatur, January 1934, Volume 3, Issue 1, pp.7-9

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1998

END

Philatelistischer Briefdienst über Briefmarken-Zeitungen
1949, Volume 2, Issue 1, Whole number 4

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, U.K.
February 1983

PHILATELISTISCHER BRIEFDIENST ÜBER
BRIEFMARKEN-ZEITUNGEN

1949, Volume 2, Issue 1, Whole number 4

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.9-14

Contents summary of inland and foreign philatelic journals.
Specialised [by country].

p.11-14

General information.

p.14 (Lines 11-14)

The abbreviations for the journal titles are given in the following list. The first number is the issue number and the second is the page number of the article in question. When the year is omitted, then the journal was published in 1949.

List of the journals included in the report

Literature Reviews.

Two un-numbered pages following page 14: Advertising supplement.

END

Philatelistischer Brief-Dienst über Briefmarken-Zeitschriften
February 1949 [Volume 2, Issue 2], Whole number 5

Identical contents are found in:

Philatelistischer Briefdienst über Briefmarken-Zeitungen
1949, Volume 2, Issue 2, Whole number 5

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1983

PHILATELISTISCHER BRIEF-DIENST ÜBER
BRIEFMARKEN-ZEITSCHRIFTEN
February 1949 [Volume 2, Issue 2], Whole number 5

Also:

PHILATELISTISCHER BRIEFDIENST ÜBER
BRIEFMARKEN-ZEITUNGEN
1949 Volume 2, Issue 2, Whole number 5

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.15-21

Contents summary of inland and foreign philatelic journals.
Specialised [by country].

p.18-21

General information.

p.21 (Last 11 lines)

The abbreviations for the journal titles are given in the following list. The first figure is the issue number and the second is the page number of the journal concerned. Unless the year is stated particularly, it can be taken as 1949.

To save space, general articles on new stamp issues, short notes on philately, book reviews and auction reports will no longer be included; instead, more attention will be paid to the foreign philatelic press and the German daily press with philatelic reports.

p.22

List of the journals included in the report.

p.22

Literature – reviews.

p.23 (Lines 8-6 from the bottom)

Descriptions are given only of specimen journals sent to us. More detailed information on the literature can be obtained by those interested from the Literature Forwarding Agency, Alfred Ihm, 13a Wunsiedel, P.O. Box 113.

(Lines 5 to the bottom)

Those interested in philatelic literature, catalogues, stamp magazines, etc., can get our list on payment of postage. Offprints of articles can also be supplied by the A. Ihm Philatelic Bureau and Company.

[p.24]

Literature Indicator.

END

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur
January 1950, Volume 3, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1983

ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR

January 1950, Volume 3, Issue 1

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.1
Eulogy.

Anyone who wants to be looked on as a philatelist, i.e. as a person who not merely collects stamps but studies them as well, must above all familiarise himself with the philatelic literature, to find out what others before him have discovered and made known. Scientific studies in philately are now for the most part made available in journals not all of which the individual can afford to buy and keep.

To get himself on to the right lines, the philatelist needs to be able to find out where papers contain subjects that interest him. A comprehensive bibliography of the philatelic journals is an unachievable wish: as far as the older material is concerned, we must make do with the numerous indexes and partial studies.

However, a thankful welcome is due to an undertaking which promises to list future publications in a convenient form with their titles and brief details of the contents. This is the aim of the Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur (Archive for Philatelic Literature). Under the direction of its Chief Editor, Alfred Ihm.

I wish this courageous undertaking off to a good start, and permanent success in meeting the needs of serious lovers of our hobby.

Dr. F. Kalckhoff

p.2

Deputy State Chairman Richard Renner, Hamburg, writes:

I give a hearty welcome to your intended publication of an "Archive for Philatelic Literature" to carry on your earlier valuable philatelic reports, and I wish you every success in your new endeavour.

The careful survey of the philatelic literature and its systematic recording ought to be close to the heart of all serious collections, and find total support from all true philatelists.

Much idealism has gone into your idea and so it is my sincere wish that you will receive appreciation and support from all sides.

With best collectors greetings
Yours, R. Renner

p.2

To the Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur.

I welcome the resumption of bibliographical study by Mr. Ihm of Wunsiedel as a knowledge of the contents of philatelic journals is still so important for the enquiring and researching philatelist. The Central Office for collectors, philatelic division, in Leipzig will help Mr. Ihm by active co-operation in every way, and I ask societies, clubs and sections in the East and West to support this undertaking to the utmost extent; philately can only benefit from it.

Founder & Director: Jähnig.

p.3

Aims and Objectives of the "Archive for Philatelic Literature".

The collaboration of serious lovers of literature and the co-operation of the philatelic publishers has made it possible for me to resume my reports on philatelic literature in an orderly form under the title:

"Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur"

Certainly the economic conditions and the failure of predominantly philatelic papers are not encouraging for the start of my reports, but the fact that the philatelic literature is at a low ebb makes it all the more necessary to rouse interest in it by way of detailed reports.

There is no intention of producing a new journal with technical articles and so on. I shall simply give a survey of the philatelic literature and a chronological listing of the technical articles in the German and foreign press in a shape and form convenient for readers.

A great deal of interesting material will be obtainable from a basic study of my monthly reports. They will give all friends of philately and the philatelic literature a good deal of valuable information and many useful practical hints. If you support my work, which has not material aim, it might be possible to fulfil other plans (exchange lists for literature collectors, indexes to literature, authors and keywords, reports of broadcasts relating to philately) by intensive collaboration. Help to expand the circle of readers by recommending my reports on philately and help to ensure an increase in overall interest in philately.

The Editor.

pp.4-6

Where do you stand on Philatelic Literature?

Do you read your philatelic magazine properly? You are amazed at this question!?! - No, now every collector is pleased to look through a technical journal. What is he looking for in the first place? Adverts ... Articles? No, they really are not aimed at him. And yet the various articles have so much to offer the stamp collector. Collectors of philatelic literature are always looked on by stamp collectors as eccentrics, even though he may exceed the latter in knowledge of stamps in every direction. A stamp collector will now and then cut an interesting item out of the magazine which will then find its way into the bin. A literature collector on the other hand preserves his magazines like jewels and studies the articles in them. To him, philatelic journals are a deeply interesting form of reading. Nobody is allowed to interrupt him when he is reading his stamp magazines.

The proper reading of the philatelic journals can give us a better picture of current fields of collecting. Unfortunately it is for the most part still impossible to get a thorough coverage of the numerous foreign philatelic journals for we German collectors, which is why we should get together to help and support one another in extending our philatelic knowledge in all directions. It would also be laudable if German philatelic journals could print longer and valuable extracts from the foreign technical press. An Austrian publisher did in fact think of publishing a yearly survey of the world's best philatelic articles in pamphlet form for the benefit of their readers, unfortunately it remains in prospect.

A catalogue is obviously also necessary to get information on the state of collecting and, in particular, of the stamps issued by a country. There are plenty, but not many were acceptable as far as Germany was concerned. Catalogue editors left themselves practically no time for checking in 1946/47 especially a number of catalogues or even "handbooks" were put out as quickly as possible; when looked at closely they were simply a waste of paper! Even the most recent reformed catalogue, the two-part "Michel" did not please everybody.

However, a collector should not be satisfied with just looking at his catalogues and journals. Rather, he should keep the magazines carefully and have them bound. We find many important articles which in future years will give a picture of present-day collectors' passions, problems and points of view. Only steady reading of as many magazines as possible will give a collector a good idea of what is taking place world-wide in philately. Thereby he will graduate from being a "thoughtless lump" to a knowledgeable and systematic philatelist.

For example, how interesting it can be to look through an old volume of Senf's *Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal from the end of the last century and find out what collectors had on their minds then.

Now another word about catalogues: these should be classed along with handbooks that can give further information on one's own collecting speciality and are indispensable for collectors on particular subjects and countries. Neither should we ignore scientific papers in pamphlet form that deal with special topics such as overprinting, forgeries and so on. Often they are only partially relevant to our own field of collecting, but we can extract enough further information from them to advise on and answer the questions of beginners.

If every collector would take his hobby in real earnest, the postage stamp would soon be better regarded in our country; moreover all stamp collectors would not be looked on as speculators and our hobby of collecting would not be considered childish.

Let me once more ask the publishers of journals not to change their format unless necessary, to number the pages and issues consecutively and make an index available at the end of the year, so that the contents are readily accessible if the volume is bound later on. Recently there has been a trend in many places towards giving a survey of the German and foreign literature. This should receive the support of all philatelists.

H.-H. Engelhardt

p.6

Overview.

p.7

Exhibitions.

p.7 (last 7 lines)

I ask philatelists with any language knowledge to help in working through the foreign journals for my contents survey. Journals and guidelines available. Postal Charges paid. Letters please to: Verlag A. Ihm, (13a), Wunsiedel, Post Box 113.

pp.8-9

New philatelic literature publications.

p.8 (Last three lines.)

Foreign literature reports are unfortunately delayed owing to the difficulty in obtaining review copies.

pp.9-11

French Literature in the year 1949.

Based on a report from the Société de Litterature Philatélique.

The year 1949 has seen a real blossoming of philatelic literature. Even a bare enumeration makes this clear. We will be satisfied initially by listing the works published by our members:

Mr. Dubus has added to the distinguished series of monographs issued by the firm of Yvert on the cancellations of our Departments with the volume of "Le Var" (64pp. + 1 illustration). Yvert have published the 54th edition of their catalogue. Peemans have again published their “Index”, which gets better every year. For the centenary of the postage stamp the section on France was extended by a list of cancellations. The yearly catalogue from Thiaude “France and Colonies” appeared a few days ago (255 pages). De Beaufond, in association with Ch. an der Halden has issued a standard work on the cancellations of Algeria (196pp. and illustrations). Other publications are: Berck, the new edition of his always well produced catalogue on France; North, the new edition of Maury’s classic work “History of French Postage Stamps”, with an introduction by E. Blanc; Major Harlant, a “Catalogue of the postmarks of Hainault from 1648 to 1849”, which should also be grouped with the monographs on cancellations of the type made famous by our friends Dubus, de Beaufond, Mikoulski, etc. Picard and his friends in the Society of Postal Entires, i.e. Stibbe, Marler et al, has issued a new edition of a catalogue of entires. Balasse has revised his special catalogue on Belgium, and has divided it into three volumes for the first time (365 – 282 – 299 pages and 4 tables). Maincent has produced a very good book “The Airmails of France”. Braun has published “Constructive” Philately in German, a work which looks at philately from a fresh point of view and is full of original findings. The many-sided catalogue on the philatelic journals of Argentina by Busch rounds off the excellent work he produced in 1926 with the title “Catalogue of the philatelic and Cartophilic journals of Argentina”. We regret that this is not available in printed form, and marvel at the patience and effort it represents. Others worth a mention are: Muller, with two volumes of his “Catalogue of airmails of the entire world” (32 and 80 pages), which is the work of a worthy specialist; Bourcevet, with the new edition of his catalogue of France, whose edgewise layout is very original; and finally Emmanuel Blanc has also published a French bibliography on posts and philately.

These are works by members of the Society. An account will follow of other works, which are very numerous and full of interest.

E. Blanc

This listing of the technical literature may seem very incomplete, but it does afford a good survey of the topics that French philatelists find particularly interesting. The German reader will be able to pick out certain fields of interest which are “typically French”. However they are still much more widely appreciated internationally than for example the German charity issues of 1945-46. We too should direct our attention to philately abroad, as eccentricity in this respect leads to intellectual decline. We are ready on request to give more details of individual works, if they have not already appeared. The supply of one item or another can also be arrange, but only in special cases.

Ernst Otto Simon

Member of the (German) Society for Philatelic Literature and the (French) Society for Philatelic Literature

pp.11-12

The German Philatelic Press.

The following journals have ceased to appear up to December 1949.
(See the list on pp.11-12)

p.12 (Last 9 lines)

Reviews of literature are based entirely on copies supplied, and if these could always be sent in promptly it would enable the reviews to be produced as quickly as possible.

Broadcasts relating to philately will be covered in detail shortly, and it is proposed to issue all the broadcasts together in brochure form.

pp.13-27

Survey of the Contents of Home & Foreign Journals.

An explanation.

The survey is restricted to the technical articles printed in the journals. Report on new issues, short notices, society news, etc., are ignored. To make things easier for readers, the chronological survey is divided into two main sections “Technical” and “Scientific”.

Any article dealing exclusively with the postage stamps of a given country will be found in the “Technical” section under the name of the country concerned.

Anything with a general content will be found under the corresponding keyword in the “Scientific” section.

The year before the contents refers to the date of the stamp issue to which the article relates. Then comes the title in words, and an explanation is only given in brackets when the subject of the article is not clear from its title.

Then come details of the illustrations, the name of the author, the journal in which the paper appeared, with the volume, part and page numbers.

For foreign-language journals, the language in which the article appears is also stated.

For home journals, only the latest issues for the current month are recorded. In the case of foreign journals, older issues may be dealt with in any month, as they generally get held up.

The abbreviations for the journals recorded are given at the end of the chronological listings.

pp.14-19

Technical Section.

pp.19-27

Scientific Section.

p.27

List of Journals included in the report.

Foreign-Language Journals.

p.28

Catalogues & Price lists

Auctions

P.28

Die Zentralstelle für Sammelwesen, Leipzig

Founder & leader Alfred Jähnig publishes a collected literature review quarterly. (Additional information in the next issue.)

p.28 (Last 5 lines.)

Details of the publisher and subscription rates.

pp.I-IV

(Four page insert between pages 14 & 15.)

Exchange Index

*Adverts for home and foreign philatelic journals.
Supplement to "Archive for Philatelic Literature".*

Only adverts for general collecting purposes are accepted. If details of items required in exchange, language, etc., are known, they should be included along with title, year and part number.

END

A. van der Flier

The history of the Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie

[De gescheidenis van het Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie]

Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie, July/August 1972, Volume 49, pp.362-374

Translated for Brian J. Birch

16 Redwood, Shevington, Wigan, WN6 8DG, UK

ca.1990

THE HISTORY OF THE NEDERLANDSCH MAANDBLAD VOOR PHILATELIE

INTRODUCTION

We are celebrating this summer the 50th Anniversary of our monthly magazine, which we still publish through a group of club-owners.

The name of the magazine is 50 years old, but the organisations from which it has emerged were around much longer. The first one originated in 1884. And because the history of the magazine is closely interwoven with the history of the organisation, we will not omit them.

FORE-RUNNERS

The first editor of any philatelic papers in the Netherlands was, without a doubt, Master C. Van Rinsum. In 1869 and 1870 he published the Continental Philatelic Magazine and The General Stamp Advertiser, and together with J. Chr. Van Schaick, who started De Timbrophilist (an illustrated magazine for stamp collectors). These magazines, with free stamp offers, did not however last very long. There are some copies in existence, as shown at Amphilex 1967. Of the "Free Stamp Offer", we would like to point out an unused 1 cent black of 1869!

There really was no philatelic club life at that time. This started only around 1883. It appears that Arnhem had a "Patriotic Club of Stamp Collectors" and in 1884, also in Arnhem, there was a "Netherland Stamp Collectors Guild". In that year there was talk of an affiliate of this Guild in Amsterdam. However, they could not agree on a division of funds between the Guild and affiliate, with the result that Amsterdam started its own independent club. History does not reveal what happened in the "Guild".

MAY 1, 1884: ORGANISATION OF STAMP COLLECTORS AT AMSTERDAM

Founder and First President of this organisation is Armandus Eduardus Josephus Huart, born in Antwerp (Belgium) in 1851. At the start they had only 4 members, but this grew rapidly to 81 in May 1881, among them 8 ladies.

In July 1884 they decided to publish their own bulletin “to advance the interests of our science”. It shows that there was already a group of adults who took philately to be a serious and scientific matter. This publication was titled Nederlandsch Tijdschrift Voor Postzegelkunde (freely translated: Netherland Magazine for Philately). (See illustration)

Number one appeared in August 1884, still in “Octavo Autographic”, with handwritten, illustrated articles by editor Huart. Only in January 1885 was it printed. Subscription was then 1.50 guilders for 12 numbers, which included “free stamps”.

Not everybody, however, took all this seriously, as seen in an article in De Veluwebode at Harderwyk in May 1884, which went as follows:-

The more childish the better! They started a stamp collector organisation. Mr. Huart is President and Mr. Kothe is Secretary. We think this should be the little son of Mr. Huart and the little son of Mr. Kothe. Or do they call children who fool around with stamps, also “Mr.”?

The members of the new club took things very seriously however, and so we read in the first issue: “During September 1885, the officers of the club were instrumental in warning some bookstores, who were selling fake stamps, that they would publicise this if they would not stop doing it”.

And in 1886 we can read in their magazine an article that could very well fit in our time, what with the so-called “postage stamps” of Fujeira and Umm-al-Quiwain:

Many times it has occurred to me how unthinking novices go about setting up their collections. Unscrupulous people overwhelm them with offers and seem to find all kinds of ways to force worthless pieces of paper on them, which always find some eager customers. If these buyers would only think for a minutes, they would realise for the asked price they never could get real stamps and they are filling their albums with junk, in the process throwing their money away, and in the end encouraging these crooks who exploit their ignorance, their wallet and their trust.

SCIENTIFIC PHILATELY

Oskar Kausch from Dresden writes about this subject in 1886 “How to Study Scientific Philately”. And in December of that year a contest was started with the following subject:

The organisation wishes to get a historic treatise of all stamps, post-cards, stamped covers, and postage due stamps of the kingdom of the Netherlands and its colonies and possessions in other parts of the world. It should be issued before January 1887 and should be supported by official documents (Royal Decrees, Ministerial Ordinances, etc.).

It would however take until 1890 before a satisfactory entry came from this contest. It was published by the Club and sold for 25 cents.

The first philatelic lecture took place in the Club on January 18th 1888. Member No. 1 (Mr. Huart) talked about “The Covers of Saxony” and the text was published in the magazine.

1888: “LE TIMBRE”

The “Netherlands Society” under direction of Mr. Huart did very well indeed. But the financial base was weak and the publication of the magazine for philately was costly. Mr. Huart was probably fluent in the French language, due to his Belgian background, and so he starts in 1888 a French edition Le Timbre (The Stamp). This paper stayed around until 1894. At that time, Mr. Huart disappeared and with him the French paper.

1889: “INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION”

From 20th-23rd April 1889, an international exhibition was held in the “Militia-Hall” at Amsterdam (today part of the University Library). It was international indeed, with exhibitors from Drammen, London, Madgeburg, Munich, St. Gallen and Trieste. Not only stamps, but also philatelic literature took up a large part. According to the report, no less than 180 philatelic publications were entered from the rest of the world! The exhibition left the one in Antwerp (1877) far behind.

No wonder the magazine for philately issued a special edition for this occasion with many contributions from foreign entrants. From the contents we name:

Dr. Jur. P. Kloss	“The Misprints of Saxony”
Dr. J. A. Legrand (Dr. Magnus)	“Stamps of Formosa”
Dr. Alfred Moschkau	“How I became a Stamp Collector”
J. B. Moens	“Watermarks and Varieties”
J. E. Bohlmeier	“Two Netherlands Rarities” (postcards)
Ernst D. Frank	“The English Cover Cancel of 10d”

1890: A NEW NAME: J. B. ROBERT

The year 1890 was a turbulent year. It started in January with a remarkable advertisement, namely that a company was formed, the N. V. Handelsvereniging Philatelia, with a capital of 50,000 guilders, in 200 shares of 250 guilders. Johan K. Koning (Officer and Director Circulation Department) was the new director. Commissioners were: P. W. H. Provo Kluit, former Postal Director at Oosterbeek; Carl Everts, private person and Amsterdam and J. H. Van Leeuwen, lawyer and solicitor from Hertogenbosch. But we never heard any more about this, so we have to classify it as a dream. In this edition we can read something about a stamp-bourse at the Champs Elysees in Paris (it still exists) and also about the first public stamp auctions, held in Amsterdam and Utrecht.

But for us the most important item is the appearance of a new author, J. B. Robert, who started a series of articles about the Chinese language and literature.

This Mr. Robert later is Chairman/Secretary of the new chapter in The Hague, started in 1891. Later he will play a large roll in Netherland philatelic literature.

1892: CLUB NEWS IS OUT

No reason is given, but it seems there are difficulties with publishing the club news and this is handled by a special paper: “Confidential information and reports on the Netherlands Society of Stamp Collectors”, a subsidiary of the Netherlands Monthly magazine, however, in this context we will not talk about it.

1894: ORGANISATION PROBLEMS

Difficulties lead to the resignation of Mr. Huart as President. He is disappointed and disappears completely, Robert becomes chief editor and editors are: J. E. Bohlmeier, G. Haas, and Jhr. C. Ph. L. Van Kinschot, names which have a very well-known sound to anyone informed in the history of Netherlands philately.

Mr. Robert's career as philatelic author, which started in 1890 will continue until 1921. More than 30 years he was in charge of the Netherlands Magazine for Philately as author as well as chief editor.

1897: HET POSTZEGELBLAD (THE STAMP PAPER)

Already we saw that at The Hague a subsidiary of the Netherlands organisation was begun, This was a real club of adult collectors. But in The Hague were also young people who, speaking for the Veluwebode, were dabbling in stamps. A couple of students of the trades day-school even started a “Trade in Stamps, Limited”. However they gave shares at only 5 cents, they gave high dividends. Soon they found out there's more in stamps than profits alone. A decision was made to organise a club magazine: “The Stamp Paper”. The first issue (1897) was handwritten and read at meetings. The second year it was stencilled. And from the fourth year on it was printed. In the Philatelic Magazine of March 1901, we read: “The paper looks pretty nice. Mr. C. M. Dozy edits the paper and we recommend it highly to everyone willing to help our youthful members of the hobby. We will comment later about the club”.

As seen, there was a large age-spread between the two papers and the two clubs. The Stamp Paper also had less sophisticated articles than the magazine and they told more jokes. We were reminded of one when we recently saw Heinz Thien's drawing: “An Idea”. Under this title, one member wants to found a state on an inhabited island and issue postage stamps with which he could make a lot of money. This idea then is ridiculed. At one point they make a “musical” of it:

“How the State of “Stampland” Was Established And How It Floundered”, or “A Beautiful Idea”.

Comedy with singing, in 2 Acts.

*Persons: Jan, Piet, Klaas, (avid Stamp Collectors)
A native chief and more natives, shipsfolk, etc.*

*Prelude: Voice behind the screen:
Pan, Piet and Klass had a wonderful idea, they would start a state on an island in the sea.*

Indeed they reach the island, they have some difficulties with the natives, who are pacified with beads, but then comes an emergency: Jan's mother writes she had to pay postage due on a letter on which they drawn the picture of a stamp. Piet is singing:

*“I got a letter from her secretary
Damn it, look if it isn't true*

*You can read in it: with the next boat
Comes everything you need,
Namely a doctor, who will examine your brains
And also an amount of
Dutch stamps and a few persons
Who will show you how they will take your island
We will include your island in our colonies
We, Dutchmen, will like this very much.*

Remarkable of this magazine is the large amount of foreign advertisements. Specialising in one country, like Holland and colonies was not done at that time. One collected stamps of all countries and although one bought and sold (the Keiser firm of “The Passage” in The Hague advertised from the beginning) a lot of trading and exchanging was done between collectors. The result was that a lot of “elitism” was prevalent because one had to know foreign languages in order to mingle.

1904: THE NETHERLANDS PHILATELIST

Under this heading a monthly paper appeared for “Philately”, with extensive Philatelic Press reports, official paper of the Organisation of Stamp Collectors “Hollandia” at Amsterdam”. Publisher was N. Yaar & Co., editor Leon de Raay. It was also known that behind this firm’s name another person was hiding. The first issues were directed by B. Halberstadt and Erwin Donath & Co., served as publisher, but only for a short time.

Here too, knowledge of foreign languages was necessary to read the paper. Donath writes in German about the postal cancellations of Netherlands and Colonies from the second half of the 18th century and Leon de Raay writes in English about the New York Postal system and later about the Orange Freestate in Africa.

They also were seeking subscriptions of advertisers from abroad and, therefore, had representatives in Germany, Austria and also Argentina and Paraguay!

For a short time this magazine also was the official paper of the “International Organisation of Postcard Collectors Universam” at Leiden, but this group produced their own paper in 1905.

1909: THREE ORGANISATIONS TOGETHER!

Publishing your own magazine is an expensive venture and in those years they also noticed that costs are relatively smaller as the circulation goes up. So in 1909 the “Netherlands Philatelist” becomes the “official” paper of the Stampclub “Breda” (established 1893) in January and of the Utrecht Philatelic Society in September. Before this last merger there had been some competition with “The Stamp Paper”. Slowly the Hague schoolboys had become students and made contacts with the Utrecht Philatelic Society who also started out as students. The “Stamp Paper”, however, was too expensive and the Utrecht club chose the Netherlands Philatelist.

PHILATELIC PUZZLE: WHOLE CANCELLED SHEET OF 10 GUILDER STAMPS

About October 1910 a whole sheet of 10 guilder stamps came in to the trade, cancelled at Roosendaal (N. Brabant) and with full gum. How was that possible?

According to the Netherlands Philatelist the following happened: an inhabitant of Roosendaal went to church and confessed, he had avoided to report 500 guilders to the tax service. A large amount at that time! The priest advised him to buy a whole sheet of 10 guilder stamps and have them cancelled. In this manner he would have donated 500 guilders to the State of the Netherlands. He then was to give the sheet to the priest who would take care that the stamps would be sold and the money spent for a good cause. In this manner he also would have done a good deed!

It would be interesting to find out if this sheet of October 1910 still is somewhere in a collection and we could test the validity of this story.

1912: THE PHILATELIC MONTHLY PAPER

Leon de Raay was a stamp dealer, author and publishers, which was too much for him. He quit publishing the Netherlands Philatelist, but the three clubs, Hollandia, Breda and Utrecht continued their cooperation in publishing the "Philatelic Monthly Paper". L. C. Smeulders of Breda became administrator. He was a man who had given many years to the philatelic press.

Originally this paper was strictly a club paper with records of meetings and very little philatelic literature. Already in 1912, the club "De Globe" at Arnhem joined this club, established in 1897, is the first club to join and on 1st January 1913, the Philatelic Club "Rotterdam" followed.

1913: MERGER "STAMP PAPER" AND "PHILATELIC MONTHLY"

Earlier there was some talk of cooperation between The Hague Philatelic and Utrecht Philatelic Society. This did not continue but The Hague Philatelic Society kept looking for a connection with a larger unit, because the financial burden of the paper became too much. On 1st January 1913, The Hague Philatelic Society became a co-owner of the Philatelic Monthly and Mr. Dozy became chief-editor. The structure of the organisation of the new paper is largely the same as the old one: a Board of Directors were; W. S. Wolff de Beer, Utrecht, Th. H. Klinkhamer, The Hague, P. J. H. Kuiper van Harpen, Amsterdam, John. H. Limper, Amsterdam, H. C. Milus, Utrecht, L. C. A. Smeulders, Breda, H. J. Spitzen, Jr., Ginneken, H. de Wys, Snr., The Hague.

From all these people, only Wolff de Beer is now alive. Due to the role he played in preparing the merger he believes we should celebrate the 60th anniversary on 1st January 1973, instead of the 50th because the paper he started in 1913 worked along the same lines as we know nowadays.

1913: NAME CHANGE I. V. PHILATELICA

In The Hague there existed besides The Hague Philatelic Club another club called "Hollandia".

This club also wished to accept the Monthly Magazine as their official paper, but this caused difficulties with the club owner of the same name in Amsterdam. Still it was worth quite a bit to get involved with the monthly paper and thus the name was changed to “International Organisation Philatelica”. Except a short interruption in the years 1920/21, when the group joined the paper “World Post” of K. A. Heymans, they stayed faithful to the Monthly Magazine.

MAY 1913: ALL KNOWN CLUBS UNITED

When on the 1st May 1913, the club “Op Hoop van Zegels” jointed the monthly magazine, they declared proudly: Now all known Netherland Clubs without their own papers have joined the monthly. Only the “Netherlands Organisation”, with own paper, continues publishing the magazine for Philately, but voices are being raised for merger.

FIRST WORLD WAR: WAR NEWS AND ADVERTISING WAR

Censorship and other war items are very interesting to a collector. It is to H. J. Spitzen’s credit that he published these items extensively during World War 1. With his southern charm he always started his articles with “dear reader” (in the feminine gender). Whoever read these articles is not known. He was, however, the only contributor who addressed himself especially to the ladies.

Many “war news items” were published and it was sometimes difficult to see which were true or not. Some news items were simply products of somebody’s fantasy without any philatelic value.

The firm of N. Yaar & Co. (Leon de Raay) found out one day that they were involved in distributing bogus products. Leon de Raay decided to take back all the sold copies. He announced this in an advertisement, in which he also included his retailers. Because he didn’t tell which retailers acted as his agents, who sold for him the imported bogus stamps, the customers also went to other stamp dealers to return their stamps.

A number of stamp dealers – in alphabetical sequence: Booleman, Van Dieten, Houtzamer and Keiser – published a large ad in which they announced their own imports of war stamps, not as agents of N. Yaar.

In November 1916, Leon de Raay bought an advertisement of a whole page in which he stated that a firm having such low business morals as N. Yaar & Co., soon would perish.

1920/21: MERGER OF MONTHLY PAPERS: NETHERLANDS MAGAZINE FOR PHILATELY

In January 1920, the “Netherlands League of Stamp Collectors Clubs” took an important step. The Philatelic Monthly paper is designated “official publication”. Hereafter meetings are held to secure a merger and in the issue of 15th June 1921, it is announced this has been reached. The Netherland Philatelist (included Stamp Papers) and the Netherland paper for Philately are united in one publication “The Netherland Monthly Paper for Philately”, the paper that still exists under this name.

THE FIRST HOUR

J. B. Robert and H. J. Spitzer, Jr., both chief-editors of the merging papers are being named as honorary editors. J. D. Van Brink becomes chief-editor, F. H. M. Post editor “Netherland” and W. P. Costerus signs for mail. The administration stays in experienced hands of L. C. A. Smeulders, Jr., of Breda. Subscription is 5 guilders a year for the Netherlands and 6 guilders abroad. Advertisements 30 guilders for a full page. Announcement of the merger is printed in German, English and French.

Except for the “Netherlands League of Stamp Collector Clubs” the Monthly paper is now the official mouthpiece of 10 organisations, as well as 5 owners who combined their papers and furthermore new clubs: The Globe, Philatelic Club Rotterdam, I. V. Philatelia, “Op Hoop van Zegels” (Hoping for Stamps) and Groningen. The 1922 “South Limburg” and Apeldoorn joined too.

The Club news still take a major place. The first year there were 218 pages of copy and ads and 70 pages of club news. Ads were not only from the Netherlands. Stamp dealers from Cologne, Frankfurt, London, Trieste, Vienna, Budapest, Poznan, Helsingfors and Berlin were selling their goods. A Dutch firm even prices in marks which were then about 1 cent (March 1922).

1924 INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION IN THE HAGUE

The honour comes to the Netherlands League for having organised the first international exhibitions in the Netherlands for decades. We mentioned already the exhibition in 1889 at Amsterdam for the first anniversary. In 1896 at The Hague and in 1898 at Utrecht another two exhibitions were held to celebrate the 10th anniversary.

The exhibition at The Hague was the first one that did not operate with a loss. Among the exhibitors was the King of Saxony, whose collection had never been seen before in a foreign country.

Another pair of exhibitions were held in 1901 in the Zoo at The Hague and in 1909 in “Bellevue” at Amsterdam. At the latter were shown the collections of Duveen, with both Mauritius Post Office Stamps, Waller with the basis for the collection “Nederland” of the Post Museum and Warren, the Englishman, who “positively scientific” also came with proof of perforation varieties.

And again at 40th anniversary another international exhibition was organised at The Hague in “Pulchri Studio”. This exhibition is now still known by all Dutch collectors through the issue of the special “exhibition stamps”. We read: “that at the Dealers Day in Hamburg no French or Belgian dealers were allowed at the exhibition at Brussels, no German dealers could exhibit. But at our exhibition philatelists of the whole world are welcome!

There were problems with the issue of the special exhibition stamps. It was feared that they would benefit the Netherland League too much and the Monthly Paper wrote on 15th February 1924: "With many of us these special stamps are a hindrance to us giving our support, even though our sympathies are with the exhibition". Only when the President of the Netherlands League declared that any profit from the sale would be used for general philatelic or philanthropic purposes, could the editor of the Monthly Paper write: "Support the international exhibition at The Hague in 1924 as much as you can".

Many pages were written about the exhibition. All speeches were published in French and Dutch. The magazine also participated and received a gold plated silver medal.

THE TWENTIES: GROWTH AND FLOWERING OF PHILATELY

The International exhibition definitely was a stimulant for all of Netherlands Philately. Much happened after that. The Rotterdam club started in 1926. A well-known philatelist, P. C. Korteweg, published "The Philatelists" (a paper which name still appears under the heading of the Monthly Paper and since incorporated in that paper) Victor Gisquiere and Stephane Strowskie write about: "Christian Inspiration in Philately" and so started topical collecting.

The Monthly Magazine has 3,000 subscriptions in 1927. Administrator Smeulders celebrates his silver anniversary and is given a radio. We celebrate the 75th anniversary of the 1852 issue and Velinga starts the publication of his lifework about the cancellations of the Netherlands.

The Waller collection is donated to the government to start a Postal Museum. The participants of the League meeting in 1929 are allowed a preview, and it is not yet open for the public. On another day, the members of The Hague Philatelic Club and I. V. Philatelica are also allowed a preview. It takes, however, till 12th November 1930, for the Postal Museum to officially open to the public.

1932 10TH ANNIVERSARY: "JUBILEE BOOK"

In 1932, J. Robert, 84, died. He was then ex-chief editor and honorary member of the staff. As far as we know he was the only Netherlander who was so well-known internationally that he got the German "Lindberg Medal". Also in 1932 the Jubilee book "Philately and Postal Service, issued at the occasion of the 80th anniversary of the Netherlands Postage Stamp and the 10th anniversary of the Netherlands Monthly Magazine for Philately". This book of more than 300 pages, is still in demand and if it ever is offered for sale there is always a great demand for it.

Everything was not always business-like, however, as is shown in the advertisement we find in the October issue of the year (1932):

NOTICE: the young lady who was reading in a brochure "Stamps as Investment" in the train from Amsterdam to Rotterdam on Friday, 7th October at 1215 hours in the vicinity of The Hague, is hereby politely urged to send her name and address to Nr. 144, to the administration of this paper. Strict secrecy assured.

It is not known if it was for the charms of the young lady or if it was a sneaky way to sell the book. In that year of 1932 the Monthly Magazine is the official paper of eighteen clubs of stamp collectors as well as the Netherland League Stamp Collector Clubs and the Netherland Society of Stamp dealers. It has been entered at 24 different exhibitions in those first ten years, while earning a gold medal in Frankfurt am Main in 1926 and as lowest award an “honourable mention” in Paris in 1930.

Mr. Van Essen defended the hobby in a case before the High Court against the Tax Service, whereby it was judged to be scientific, with the result no property tax had to be paid. He won the case, helped by his lawyer, W. S. Wolff de Beer.

1935/36: PERSONALITIES

In 1935 H. J. Spitzen, 77, died. He was the founder of the Philatelic Monthly Paper, honourable member of the staff of the Netherland Monthly Paper for Philately and honourable chairman of “Breda”.

Also in 1935, R. E. P. Maier starts his publications about “The Indies Sealetter cancellations”. In 1936 he is mentioned as “regular contributor”. It cannot be predicted yet how well his name will be known later.

In 1936 Leon de Raay, 70, died. He was a collector for 52 years and a stamp dealer for 43. A Leon de Raay medal is instituted in his honour by the board. The list of honoured people is published herewith.

Mr. 1938 L. C. A. Smeulders passed away. He was the administrator of the Monthly Paper and for 32 years the secretary of “Breda”.

LEON DE RAAY MEDAL

(Translator’s note: This list speaks for itself and needs no translation)

In March 1939 J. D. Van Brink dies. He filled the post of chief editor since the start in 1922.

The people that created the Monthly Paper and guided it from the beginning years have all gone, but luckily there were others who continued the task.

1939: “IN WHICH IT MERGED WITH ‘DE PHILATELIST’ ”

This announcement in the heading of our monthly magazine seems somewhat strange. Who, or what, was this Philatelist who was included in the Monthly Paper?. It was a Stamp Paper, started in 1926 and from the beginning the official papers of, among others, the Rotterdam Philatelic Society. Chief Editor was the well-known philatelist P. C. Korteweg, publisher was K. A. Heymans of Rotterdam. This publisher offered his monthly paper for merger at the same time the Rotterdam club wanted to join the monthly magazine. After long deliberations they came to an agreement. The Rotterdam Philatelic Club paid a “joining sum” and became co-owner of the monthly. Heymans was bought out with this money under the condition that “De Philatelist” would always be in the heading of The Monthly Magazine.

1939: W. G. ZWOLLE, CHIEF EDITOR

After the demise of Mr. Van Brink in March 1939, W. C. Zwolle followed him as chief editor. Unfortunately this able and erudite philatelist would be in this function a very short time. He was killed in action in May 1940 while defending Ypenburg airfield. He was a Captain in the army. It was a great loss for Dutch Philately. He was not only chief editor of the magazine but also secretary of the League and secretary-general of the Federation Internationale de Philatelie.

The chief editor job was temporarily filled in 1940 by Mr. Deggeler, president of The Hague Philatelic Society, after which W. G. de Bas in the fall of 1940 was elected to be the chief editor. He was President of Utrecht Philatelic Society. He was also secretary of the League.

1940/43: WAR CIRCUMSTANCES

It can be said that everything went normal until the end of 1941. But at that time the government and the “Commissioner for non-commercial organisations” started to interfere in Philately. On the 2nd October 1941, the chief-editor (also league secretary) received a visit of a representative of this group to whom he had to give all information required. He found out that the new government saw philately as a “cultural subject” and wanted to cleanse it of all hidden trades-elements. (They meant to do well for us, but we didn’t want to listen!) They also found it necessary to have unity in Philately (so they could observe us better!).

The League was designated to be the official philatelic organisation and all other groups had a choice to join or to quit. For the League this meant an increase from 18 to 28 connected clubs with a total of 7,500 members, as against 4,000 before this forced joining.

An article about “government interference” which we would today call quiet and easy, seemed to have aroused the ire of the authorities and the chief editor, who wrote this had to go! He stayed in his job, however, and nothing happened.

NEWS OF OVERSEAS AREAS

In the Netherlands since 1940, the queen stamps had disappeared and had been replaced by the so-called “iron bar stamps”, a word that officially could not be used, but the advertisers still did!

However, in February 1942, the so-called Konijnenburg set of Netherlands-Indies was issued, with pictures taken from an American publication. They also wrote about the surcharge stamps of 10th May 1941, but no picture was given and about the inscription “The Netherlands will rise again” it was only said that it had “some reference to the future of the Netherlands”. Everybody knew what the inscription was all about, but it could not be printed.

WAR PRICES

As “News” in those years, only the stamps of Germany and the occupied countries were offered. From the Netherlands there was an offer of the 4 imperforate Queen stamps of 1940 (the editor even dared to mention they were not issued by the Postal Service). Price was 30 guilders per set, total issued 38,000 sets.

Older stamps were relatively inexpensive. We saw the two 2.50 guilder overprints on 10 guilders, offered together for 33 guilders. But Bohemia-Moravia “3 year protectorat” set was quickly sold out for 5.50 guilders per set (now Yvert 2.20 francs).

JUNE 1943: TEMPORARILY THE LAST ISSUE

In April it was announced where the tests for the Waffen S.S. “were held in May 1943. There was the infamous call to join the Legion”. In June it was devoid of such propaganda. We cannot find out what the reason was but suddenly came the order to stop publishing.

Only the League could send special information to the members of the clubs. In the beginning only 1,000 pieces, but from April 1944 to January 1945 to all members.

SEPTEMBER 1945: REVIVED

Even though the German cohorts were not happy with the monthly magazine, evidently the “clean-up crew” were not either and it took rather long before a normal publication came about. The first issues after the war appeared:

- 1st September 1945
- 2nd December 1945
- 3rd May 1946
- 4th July 1946
- 5th August 1946 and monthly from then on

The chief-editor was firstly J. H. Van Peursem, who had been a contributor to the magazine and had produced several Philatelic publications. In February 1948 this post was taken over by J. C. Norenburg to replace Van Peursem who was ill and he was permanently appointed from October onwards.

1948: LEMON-YELLOW POSTAGE DUE IS A COLOUR CHANGELING

In all old catalogues you will find the variety “Lemon-yellow” for postage due No. 1 of the Netherlands. It is P. C. Korteweg, among others, who detected this variation as an ordinary colour changeling. Korteweg noticed that the lemon-yellows were cancelled in too many different places and came to the conclusion that it had to be a very large issue, which they were not. It had to be discolouration. Tests were made and they concluded this fact. In 1948 this fact was published in the magazine and the lemon-yellow stamp disappeared from the catalogues!

1949: NEW CONNECTION WITH THE LEAGUE

Before the war the magazine was the official publication of the Netherland League of Philatelic Clubs. After the war this was not immediately the case, but by the end of 1949 another agreement was reached, whereby the League, without financial participation, could take part in the publication of the magazine and also came on the Board of Directors, on 1st January 1950. On 1st January 1968, the League became co-owner for 1/8th share, on the same level as the existing owners.

1950: IS THE GOVERNMENT PHILATELIC MINDED?

A lot of difficulties arose with the customs who confiscated stamp mailings of 25 cent value and had them auctioned off and ruined first day letters, addressed to the magazine. One could get export permits for travel up to 30 guilders per day, but could only trade stamps with a foreign country up to 4 guilders in 2 months. As far as international trade is concerned, normal thinking has prevailed and there are no more problems with the Netherlands Bank. But nothing changed with the Customs office. Still now first day covers to the magazine are being ruined. We know for sure that the government is not against Philately. Proof is the friendly gesture to commemorate our anniversary in July 1972 with a special cancellation of the Postal Service. But we believe that the little fellows in government service have nothing else to do than to vent their frustrations to keep and return so called suspect letters and to cancel the letters with extra heavy cancellations.

1952: BOOM-RUYGROK STARTS PRINTING

For a couple of years after the war several printers were involved in printing the magazine, not always very good. Most were too late. An attractive offer from Boom-Ruygrok lead to them printing the magazine as of May 1952 and they have done this for 20 years! Since that time all issues have appeared in the months shown on the cover.

1953: DAILY GOVERNMENT OF BOARD OF DIRECTORS

The growing edition and size of the magazine made it necessary for the Board of Directors to meet more often. Because the size of this body was really too large, it was decided to leave the daily business to a “daily management”.

Since then they get together almost once a month to review the new issue and discuss the old one. The Board of Directors gets together twice a year, just like before, in a spring and autumn meeting. At this meeting the daily management brings a report and gets directives for the future.

1958: JUBILEE ISSUE: 50 YEARS NETHERLANDS LEAGUE

The Jubilee of the League was the occasion to do something special. The issues of July and August 1958 were combined into an extra-large jubilee issue, with many important articles. A large number were printed and they sold for many years afterwards through the sales department of The League as well as the clubs. They are now sold out at The League and we wonder if they will become antique. It was proof that interest in good philatelic articles was ever there, due to the fact that for more than 10 years this issue was in demand. As a reward for this event in 1959 in the League's meeting, the Chairman, Secretary and Treasurer of the daily management were installed as honourable members of the Netherland League of Philatelic Clubs.

1960: A. BOERMA – CHIEF-EDITOR

Mr. Norenburg, who had been chief-editor since early 1948, and who also was the administrator for the last few years, decided to leave this job to a younger person, due to his advanced age.

The Board of Directors made an important decision. Up to now an editor came from the circle of philatelists, but now, in an ad in "The Journalist" a professional journalist was required, who had philatelic experience. This way we came in contact with A. Boerma who has filled since that time the post of chief-editor. Not as before as a part-time function, but a full time job, besides some other editorial functions. Anybody observing the growth of the magazine in the last 10 years will agree that this decision has been a wise one indeed.

PLAQUE FOR COLLABORATORS

Alphabetical list of collaborators of the Monthly Magazine for Philately, showing to whom this plaque has been awarded during the years since 1957. (See original on page 373.)

1963: 40th ANNIVERSARY NETHERLAND MONTHLY MAGAZINE

This Jubilee was a simple celebration. A reception at the League meeting at Breda and a special article by Christiaan de Moor about "The permanent postage stamps" in the Jubilee issue, was all that has been done. However, a special good quality paper was used for this issue and that was a treat in those day, when we could not afford better.

1967: AMPHILEX

From the beginning the magazine has supported "Amphilex" (the Amsterdam Philatelic Exhibition), even when people criticised the sale of special stamps coupled with entry tickets. But this was necessary to put the show on a secure financial footing. A special booth for the magazine, right across from the main entrance, gave us the opportunity to inform many collectors about our magazine and how they could obtain a subscription.

1968: SOLVING THE DOUBLE SUBSCRIPTION

Most readers had a subscription to the magazine via their club, and this was included in their club fee. The problem was that some readers were members of several clubs and hence paid several subscriptions but received only one paper. Through the years a lot of complaints were received about this matter, but a good solution was never found because we always looked from the side of the club treasurer who wanted his money. It was H. L. J. Weidema, member of the Board who came up with the solution not to charge the clubs but the individual. If a reader paid twice he would receive one payment back. The first back payment took place in 1967 and now every year payments are received by “double payment members” and the complaints have stopped.

TO END

We talked little about the latter years. Many of our readers remember well what has happened. We aimed especially at the fact that the untiring efforts of a large number of people brought something of which we all can be proud. It is not possible to guess how much free time has been spent by the editors and administrators on this paper.

Many started as stamp collectors but spent so much time on the paper that they hardly had time to collect stamps. We bring honour to them and hope, when we need followers, they will be ready to work for the future of this paper and continue on the same basis.

Secretary, Board of Directors
A. Van Der Flier

FIFTY YEARS AGO

A short translation of the first issue 1922

Thirteenth Netherland Philatelic Day in Arnhem

Agenda: 2) Can we support building a postal museum?
 3) Can the government put stamps on parcels, money orders and other pieces?

About the 10 cent stamp of 1899. Difference in shading of the background.

Postage due 4 cent of 1912. Varieties, instead of TE BETALEN, also TIE BETALEN and TE BETALEN.

No new issues received.

A French book by Georges Brunel of France was honoured by half of the “Grand Prix Jean Jacques Berger”. This was a first for a philatelic work.

The fourth Ferrari Auction brought more than 1½ million francs. Among the lots: a block of 6 of 50 cent gold of 1867, containing both types. Sold for 1,200 francs and 17½% auction expenses.

Questions and answers.

Philatelic Day at Arnhem.

Report of meeting at Groningen.

END

Albert Gottschalk

German philatelic literature 1894/97

[Die Deutsche philatelistische litteratur 1894/97]

in: Festschrift zur Feier des Zehnjährigen Bestehens des Berliner Philatelisten-Club., Berliner Philatelisten-Club, Berlin, Germany, 1898, pp.100-118

(Also available separately as an offprint)

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1990

GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE 1894/97

A fairly exhaustive, if not entirely accurate, history of philatelic literature has been given by Victor Suppantschitsch in his well-known "Bibliography": a supplement covering the years 1892/93 was published by H. Fraenkel in volume III (1893) of the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung. In this article we will attempt to give a sketch of a more extensive period, the years 1894/97, following the last-named article in giving a survey of the philatelic literature to 1897 as far as we have it, without making any claim to completeness.

As in philately generally, also in the literature, two more and more sharply differing directions, before which all others disappear, are becoming apparent. These are specialist studies and the postage stamp trade. The first goes more deeply into its subject and produces detailed studies, monographs and a significant number of articles on specialised topics in more important details. The second gives rise to a disproportionately large number of new advertisement sheets, catalogues and price books.

As far as non-periodical publications are concerned, we are in the happy position that our publishers are beginning more and more to follow the English custom of publishing complete monographs in book form, so that we have seen a significant increase here.

No work that covers the entire range of philately can be reported from this period, those that are available have either not progressed at all, or have only done so to a slight extent. The once epoch-making Handbook for the Stamp Collector by the gifted Ferdinand Meyer has moved no further towards completion since the appearance in 1892 of the VIII supplement (edited by Dr. Kloss), and today can only be looked on as a source work. A ten-part continuation to the Great Handbook of Philately appeared after a four-year break in 1896. Parts 28-32 contained the second part of the work on Mexican postage stamps, so that this now totals eight parts with approximately 400 pages; parts 33-37 deal with postage stamps from Monaco to Nova Scotia. Nothing else appeared in the following year, so it appears that the completion of this work is not to be expected yet. Of the Moschkau Handbook, once so popular, only a supplement to the first volume has appeared in 1896.

A new and distinctive enterprise was started by Hugo Krötzsch in the year 1893 with his Permanent Philatelic Collection, a loose-leaf album of unexcelled beauty and convenience.

This is accompanied by a Supplement of Photographs, which is a supplement to the main work giving the most essential details of the stamps in a brief form. Dr. Otto Rommel of Leipzig undertook this originally, but he only managed to cover a few countries (German Empire-Baden-Bavaria-Bergedorf); after that Kröttsch took over the editorship himself and issued the continuation, which he gave in an extended form. At the end of 1893 he changed the title of the Supplement to Handbuch der Postfreimarken Kunde, and managed to recruit a number of leading philatelist to put the work on a totally new basis. Instead of a comprehensive catalogue, monographs of individual states are now published, and to date these have been:

Part I: (German States)
Volume IV	Bergedorf	Hugo Krotzsch
Volume X	Both Mecklenburgs	Hugo Krotzsch
Volume XI	Norddeutscher Postbezirk	Hugo Krotzsch
Volume XII	Oldenburg	Lieutenant P. Ohrt
Volume XIII	Preussen	Lieutenant P. Ohrt
Volume XV	Schleswig-Holstein	A. Rosenkranz

Other parts are in preparation.

Volume III	Russia	Dr. E. v. Bochmann (Riga)
------------	--------	----------------------------------

All the volumes have been prepared in a standard very detailed manner, using official sources, and with true German thoroughness, and are without question on a level with the finest similar works in foreign languages. To keep the work always up to date, Kröttsch issued special Quarterly Supplements, in the form of a magazine which contained scientific articles as well as additional information amongst which were:-

Bohnert, Carl	Cancellations of the former German states on the postages stamps of the North German League and the German State Post.
Ohrt, P.	Aims and applicability of cancellation of new issues and forgeries.
Ohrt, P.	The presumed varieties and misprints on stamps from Oldenburg.
Kröttsch, H.	Steamship stamps from the Russian Levant.
Kröttsch, H.	Varieties.

Altogether 12 issues of this supplement appeared from 1894 to 1896; since 1897 they have been printed in the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung.

Of periodically appearing price books, the once so highly regarded Larisch catalogue has failed to come out since 1893. Its place has been taken at the catalogue from the firm of Senf Brothers, which appears yearly as an indispensable work of reference for the collector; its particular advantages are the convenient format, the very exact and detailed description of the stamps supplemented by a file of small notes, the details of new printings, forgeries, watermarks, errors, etc., and lastly the prices given for almost all the items catalogued (1897 = 42,800). Unfortunately over the last few years these prices have not corresponded to the true market price, so that constantly widening discrepancies occur. A rival catalogue was published by Ernst Heitmann for the years 1894/95 and 1895-96. This was laid out in a similar way and edited by Paul Lietzow, but was well behind its model as regards correctness of details, prices, etc., and was not able to win the favour of collectors. Finally a third catalogue was issued by Baumbach & Co., in 1894 and 1895, but can only be looked on as a wants list for the stamp albums produced by this firm.

A special place in the catalogue literature is occupied by Paul Kohl's Europe catalogue. The section on German stamps from this was issued as a separate publication in 1893. The arrangement of the stamps was completely new, since the reduced form of a preprint album was chosen. Errors and varieties of colour were noted, and explanatory notes were used to supplement the text. The acclaim which this volume received inspired the editor to produce similar catalogues for all the states of Europe, to which he brought even greater specialisation. Ultimately the whole thing appeared in book form, and an improved second edition appeared in 1897.

Of the familiar catalogues, Glasewald's on the stamps of Europe went into two new editions in 1894 and 1895, and a practically similar volume was published by Alwin Zschiesche.

Special fields of philately gave rise to a number of catalogues. Two deserve to be mentioned in first place: both of them cover the same ground. They are The Illustrated Comprehensive Catalogue of German Postage Stamps by Hugo Krötzsch, and the Special Catalogue of Postage Stamps from the German Postal Regions, etc., by Dr. of Law, Otto Rommel. Krötzsch deals with the German stamps on the basis of his handbook in a very detailed manner, giving numbers issued and remainders, indicators of authenticity, and prices of the stamps. For this last, he quotes minimum, maximum and average prices as taken from five catalogues. Rommel's book, which also deals with envelopes and postal wrappers is, by and large, just a statistical reworking of Lindenberg's monographs, the Krötzsch handbook, etc. It is full of non-sequiturs and mistakes, has no explanatory text, and the collection of prices taken from eight catalogues is made worthless by the poor choice of these eight.

Special price catalogues have also been issued for:

Brazil	by	A. Bruck
Ceylon	by	E. Staehle
Finland	by	The Helsinki Philatelic Society
Minor Italian & German States	by	R. Kirsch
Austria-Hungary	by	R. Friedl

The two last are in a slightly more detailed catalogue form: the Senf catalogue was drawn on very heavily for Austria-Hungary so that this is only to a lesser extent an independent work. Also, the fourth edition of the price catalogue for the postage and telegraph stamps of Great Britain by H. C. Estrange Ewen appeared in a German translation by E. D. Frank; this is a very broadly based specialised publication.

A whole series of valuable new independent monographs may be mentioned. Foremost again are the monographs on the postage stamps of the German states by County Chairman, C. Lindenberg: the further numbers that have appeared are issues 8 Baden, 9 Hamburg and Bremen, 10 Saxony, 11-12 Hannover, 13 Bavaria and 14-15 Wurttemberg. The many virtues of these works, based on official documents are well-known: the usually very difficult material is handled with unequalled clarity and thoroughness; from whatever angle one looks at them. These books are without doubt the most important publications in the field of philately. The same is true of the work on the stamps of Baden originally published in the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung.

Another quite excellent work, on the postage stamps of Spain and its colonies, was produced by Rudolph Friederich. In this book published in the year 1894, the author has produced a pearl of German philatelic literature, one which in both contents and style has surpassed the well-known work of Moens on the same subject.

The book previously advertised, on the Postage Stamps of the Duchy of Brunswick, by Ludwig Berger, appeared at the end of 1893. This monograph too is based on the most painstaking research and gives exhaustive information on the difficult questions that arise in connection with this state.

In 1896, Glasewald produced a fresh study of his favourite theme: The Postage Stamps of Greece, into which he is continually going deeper.

In 1894, Dr. Otto Rommel published in the Illustrierten Briefmarken-Zeitung a history of the Saxony 3 Pfennig red newspaper stamp, which gave a very detailed description of this rare stamp. The same author also published a paper on the Postage Stamps of the Bergedorf Postal Region in the form of a reprint from Der Philatelist 1894 and 1895, though this had been overtaken some time ago by more recent studies. Finally, he had a reprint from Postwertzeichen-Kunde: The Postage Stamps of Lubeck.

Finally we will mention another pamphlet that appeared in 1893, by Friedrich Schuller on the Postage Stamps of Persia and Bokhara. This is not so much a monograph as a contribution to the Larisch-Mottes-Schuller controversy.

The study of cancellations, to which our philatelists are turning in increasing numbers, has also produced some interesting books. An outstanding work in this field was provided by A. E. Glasewald with his book Cancellations of Stamps from the Thurn and Taxis Postal District, a very learned and objective treatment. Much more of a sensation was produced by the appearance (1894) of the Illustrated Price Catalogue of German Philatelic Cancellations, by A. Reinheimer, as here the author attempted on the basis of his earlier work to produce the first price list for the various cancellations on stamps. Fortunately the doubts expressed at the time have not proved justified, since collectors have moved more and more towards collecting "unusual" items in the meantime. Unstinted praise was earned on the other hand by a very instructive work by Pfarrer Leinhardt and others on Cancellations on Swiss Postage Stamps. A Priced Catalogue for Telegraph and Bill-Stamps from Individual German States was produced by H. Berger.

What are called textbooks are only represented in this period by one example, which appeared as Volume 152 of the familiar collection called Weber's Illustrated Lectures under the title Fundamentals of Philately. The author is Victor Suppantisch. Unfortunately, the author, whose "Manual" was a preferred text in its time, has left the advances of the last decade almost entirely out of his new book, which as a result does not stand at the summit of present-day philatelic knowledge. The recently published booklet by Johannes scarcely deserves a mention.

It is a pleasanter task to report on the works with a bibliographical content that have appeared. In 1894 Victor Suppantisch finished his Bibliography of German Philatelic Literature, and closed the book with the 16th part, of course not all have yet been published. In compiling this book, which will be indispensable for literary studies, Suppantisch has completed a mammoth task: nevertheless it has certain very harmful defects, namely a lack of clarity and poor arrangement of the material. Nonetheless it is a very useful piece of work, and it is to be hoped that supplements will be issued to keep it up to date.

An extremely useful work has been produced by the Librarian of the Berlin Philatelic Club, Distret Judge D. H. Fraenkel, in the form of his Chronological Table of German Philatelic Journals, 1863-1893, which is arranged in survey form and is an excellent aid for the users of Libraries. Also, the papers published by Dr. Rommel in the Post in the years 1894 and 1895 under the title Survey of articles etc on postage stamps from the German States in the periodical literature of the year 1894 (1895), and of monographs on the same topic appearing in the same period have appeared as separate pamphlets. Finally we must mention a very recent publication: General Index to all Years, I-VII of the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, edited by Lieutenant Ohrt, which makes the excellent contents of this journal available to a wider readership.

When it comes to new calendars and pocket-books, we know only of those from Senf Brothers for 1894 and 1895, and from Konrad Stark for 1895. The address-book literature has been more productive, and we have received the First World Address Book of Philately by Willy Bruder (H. J. Dauth), the second edition of Marbes' address book, and a black list from Wernigg & Schaefer. Only Marbes' book amongst these has any value.

Finally we may mention the Shorthand Reports on the Philatelic Meetings in Berlin (1893), Kiel (1894), Mannheim (1895), Cologne (1896) and Hamburg (1897), the first two of which in particular contain a good deal of valuable information.

According to the Chronological Tables of the German Philatelic Journals, of the 146 journals that appeared during the period covered, 39 were still in existence at the of 1893. They were:

1. Illustrirtes Briefmarken-Journal
2. Der Philatelist
3. Universum
4. General-Anzeiger für Philatelie
5. Monatliche Mittheilungen des Vereins der Freunde der Briefmarkenkunde zu Lübeck
6. Mittheilungen des Oesterreichischen Philatelisten-Clubs
7. Philatelistischer Börsen-Courier
8. Offertenblatt für Briefmarkensammler
9. Sitzungsberichte des Internationalen Postwerthzeichenhandler-Vereins zu Berlin
10. Das Postwerthzeichen
11. Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung
12. Vereins-Mittheilungen des Berliner Philatelisten-Clubs
13. Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal (Zeitung)
14. Internationales Briefmarken-Journal
15. Wegweiser für Sammler
16. Die Postwerthzeichen-Kunde
17. Beiträge zur Postwerthzeichenkunde
18. Mittheilungen der Tauschvereinigung für Postwerthzeichen, Elberfeld
19. Der Briefmarken-Sammler
20. Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung
21. Vereins-Mittheilungen des Vereins Braunschweiger Briefmarken-Sammler
22. Moniteur du Collectionneur
23. La Posta Univerale
24. Vertrauliches Correspondenz-Blatt
25. San Marino-Philatelist
26. Der Vereinsbote

27. Internationales Briefmarken-Offertenblatt
28. Philatelistische Jugendschrift
29. Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung
30. Sud-Amerika
31. Mittheilungen des Württembergischen Philatelisten-Vereins, Stuttgart
32. Mittheilungen des Briefmarkensammler-Vereins Mosel
33. Die Vereinbörse
34. Deutsche Briefmarken-Post
35. Union
36. Verbands-Mittheilungen des Voigtländischen Philatelisten-Verbandes
37. Die Helvertische Philatelie
38. Internationale Briefmarken-Börse
39. Austria-Philatelist

Of these, Nos. 8 and 26 must be excluded, since they are supplements to No. 8. (Translator's note – should be No. 11). Nos. 3, 6, 7, 14, 22, 25, 28, 30, 31, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38 have ceased publication in the meantime, or else no longer appear in the German language (22). Die Weltpost, which is not given in the above list, also ceased to appear at the beginning of this year, and No. 15 is not really a philatelic journal. Furthermore, no attention need be paid to Nos. 5, 9, 12, 18, 21, 32 and 33, as they are club news-sheets for members only. Of the remainder, Nos. 1, 2, 10, 11, 13, 16, 17, 19, 20, 23, 24, 29 and 39 contain technical articles, whilst Nos. 4 and 27 are advertising magazines.

Foremost amongst these journals throughout our period, with each in its own way holding a special place in philately are Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal (with its supplements on scientific philately), Philatelist and Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung. They are followed by Postwerthzeichen, Postwerthzeichenkunde, Austria-Philatelist, Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung, Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung, Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung and Briefmarken Sammler. The Vertrauliche Correspondenzblatt does not come into this series, as its contents are not like those of the other magazines.

The Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal, our oldest philatelic journal, has developed more and more into a genteel family magazine, and today has by far the widest range of all the technical journals. In addition to its editor, Herr Th. Haas, one of our leading philatelists, it can call on a staff of distinguished contributors who enable the journal to maintain its place at the head of philately without having to following any narrowly specialised direction. Its contents are very ample. It usually starts with a report on the latest developments in philately, under the heading Motley Medley. Then comes an article on some special topic or other, then a very detailed list of new issues, followed by forgeries, questions relating to dates or other matters in dispute, and a readers forum.

Another section is devoted to the postal service, then comes a Miscellany, and finally the book reviews. The Open Letters are devoted to special topics, and the Letter Box gives short answers. The supplements to this journal are Society Messenger, Offers Sheet for Stamp Collectors, and Contributions to Postage Stamp Science. The latter appears about four times a year and is a must for advanced collectors as it too reaches the highest standards. The literary part contains harmless teenage love stories.

As before, the publishers are Senf Brothers of Leipzig, and the frequency of appearance is still the same (24 times a year). Longer articles worthy of note are as follows:

1894	Haas, Theodor	The ostensible new Bavarian issues
	Haas, Theodor	The official regulations to prevent forgeries
	Derrick, A. T.	Which of the very early New South Wales issues are worth collecting
	Küppers, Dr. M.	Are these stamps from Swaziland?
	Franz, A.	On new issues
	Senf, R.	On testing stamps
	Bernet, Th.	A historical outline of the Swiss postal service
1895	Haas, Theodor	Unknown and Known varieties
	Haas, Theodor	The advantages of collecting stamps in pairs, strips or blocks
	Haas, Theodor	On pricing stamps
	Kalckhoff, Dr. F.	The German "Registered" Label
1896	v. Girsewald, C.	The Lubeck error of 1859
	Friedel, E.	Bergedorf
	Kuchenbecker, Abel	Thurn and Taxis mail in the Principality of Lippe-Detmold
	Haas, Theodor	United States types
1897	Eimstadt, B. O.	The Norwegian military service postcards
	Schultheiss, Franz	Wurttemberg telegraph stamps
	Thiessing, Dr. Jur.	The history of the World Postal Congress

Also: from "Contributions to Postage Stamp Science":

1895	Fidora, Hugo	Stamps of the Kingdom of Italy
	v. Girsewald, C.	Stamps of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg
1896	v. Hirschhaydt, A.	On Weden posta stamps
	Laymann, C.	The stamps of the Argentine Republic, Issue of 11 January 1862
1897	Kalckhoff, Dr. F.	German postcards

Der Philatelist, the club organ of the International Philatelic Society in Dresden is intended purely for members, but deserves to be made more widely available because of its breadth of outlook. It is edited by the Dresden Committee, with the collaboration of Dr. Alfred Moschkau, is well run and supplies everything that can be expected of a leading periodical.

The contents of each number generally consist of an extremely thorough review of the new issues, a gossip column by Moschkau (From the World of Philately) which unfortunately tend to be far too long-winded, and technical articles – original studies or translations. Letters, news items follow. Obviously, Society announcements take up a good deal of space. The magazine appears 12 times a year, on the 15th of every month.

We may pick out the following major articles:

1894	Maury, Arthur	The post under the Paris Commune, 1871
	v. Neulinger, ed.	Turkish postage stamps
	Breitfuss, Friedr.	New Finnish issues of 1893

	Kunkel, G. A.	The 5c stamp from the French colonies with the head of Napoleon
	Stocre, A.	The postage stamps of Parma
	Rommel, O.	Stamps from the Bergedorf postal region
	(The Post Office)	Notes on varieties of stamps
1895	v. Neulinger, ed.	Special exhibition of Turkish stamps
	Gottschalk, A.	Printing on stamps (also published as a separate pamphlet)
	Rommel, O.	Philatelic literature of the year 1894
	Rommel, O.	Stamps from the Bergedorf postal region
	Reinheimer, A.	The cancellations of Thurn and Taxis
	Watrain, P.	Cancellations on stamps from the Prussian postal administration
	Ohrt, P.	Contributions to the history of the Prussian 10 & 30 silver groschen stamps
	Socolis, C. S.	Errors on Greek stamps
1896	v. Girsewald, C.	The stamps of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg
	v. Neulinger, ed.	Special exhibition of Turkish stamps
	Mangold, Otto	Portugal stamps
	Giffard, M.	Special exhibition of stamps from the Hawaiian (Sandwich) Islands
	Schäfer, Dr.	Exhibition of Mexican postcards (1895-1896)
	Feltmann, H.	Eritrea and its postal development
1897	Feltmann, H.	The Papal States and the Romagna
	Duerst, Geo. B.	Romania
	Schumacher, M. L.	The first types of the 1861 United States of America issue
	- -	The lithographic stamps of Diego-Suarez
	Müller, Wilhelm	Technical journals from abroad
	Kröttsch, H.	Testing stamps & their cancellations

The Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung has developed from year to year into an increasingly more significant technical journal, and currently occupies a dominant and leading place amongst philatelic periodicals. It is kept strongly factual, as far as possible avoids polemics, and numbers amongst its contributors some of our most prominent philatelists, such as County Chairman C. Lindenberg, District Judge D. H. Fraenkel, Dr. F. Kalckhoff, Lieutenant P. Ohrt, etc., who have supplied a whole series of excellent articles on the postage stamps of the German States, but have also produced some fundamental articles on all of the other aspects of philately.

Each number contains several papers, either original studies or translations (Bergedorf, Heligoland), with critical notes, etc. There is then an account of the new stamp issues, which tended to be somewhat biased under the earlier editorship, though always very detailed and illustrated. There are also notes on forgeries. The heading Miscellaneous Reports is given to a summary, in alphabetical order and always covering several pages, of interesting articles from Germany and abroad: then comes a section on Literature in which extensive critical reviews are given of recent books. The supplement contains the updates to the Handbook of Postage Stamp Science, society news, philatelic prices and advertisements.

The editor and publisher was Dr. Hans Brendicke up to autumn 1896 and since then it has been Hugo Kröttsch in Leipzig. It appears monthly.

We may list the following major articles:

1893/94	v. Bochmann, E.	Official and private postage stamps, and the production of the Russian Zemstvo, Levant and Wenden stamps
	Diena, Dr. Emilio	The stamps of Naples and Sicily
	Lindenberg, C.	The stamps of Mecklenburg and Strelitz
	Lindenberg, C.	The stamps of Baden (see above)
	Herrmann, A.	Control marks on State postcards
	Lindenberg, C.	Used and re-sealed envelopes from North Germany
1894/95	v. Bochmann, E.	Stamps from the Wenden Administration
	Moens, J. B. & Fraenkel, H.	The stamps of Bergedorf. Introduced translated and with comments by H. F.
	- -	Postal relations between Hamburg and Heligoland before 1867
	Lindenberg, C.	Contributions to the history of the stamps of Schleswig-Holstein
	Fraenkel, H.	New issues of stamps from Heligoland
	Friederich, R.	Y $\frac{1}{4}$
	Ohr, P.	Raids through the territory of Oldenburg
	Lindenberg, C.	The oldest no-charge covers from Hanover
	Fraenkel, H.	On the establishment of libraries
1895/96 & 1896 Vols. VI & VII	Lindenberg, C.	The present day position of philately
	Ohr, P.	Further raids on Oldenburg
	Lindenberg, C.	Entires
	Lindenberg, C.	Contributions to the history of the stamps of Heligoland
	Ohr, P.	Types of stamps from the first Dutch issue and their production
	Moens, J. B. & Fraenkel, H.	The postage stamps of Heligoland. Introduced, translated and annotated by H. Fraenkel
	Fraenkel, H.	Old and new on the Mercury question
	Ohr, P.	First issue of the Oldenburg $\frac{1}{15}$ Thaler. What has been so far called the 2 nd (rare) issue is a forgery
	Lindenberg, C.	Introduction of perforations on the stamps of the North German postal region
	Lindenberg, C.	Errors from Baden
	Lindenberg, C.	Contributions to the history of the stamps of Thurn and Taxis
	Ohr, P.	Remainders of the Oldenburg postage stamps
	Knopf, Dr.	Types of cancelation of the German ships post
1897	Ohr, P.	Production, distribution and use of the first Austrian postage and newspaper stamps (Mercury)
	Kröttsch, Hugo	Netherlands 1867 issue. Types of and variations in perforation

Ohrt, P.	The postage stamps of Japan
Lindenberg, C.	Heinrich Stephan
- -	Prices and trade conditions in present day philately
Diena, Dr. E.	The stamps of Romagna
Ohrt, P.	Illegal reprints and offprints of Hamburg postage stamps
Fraenkel, H.	The London Exhibition

Das Postwerthzeichen the organ of the Bavarian Philatelic Society in Munich appears monthly under the editorship of Leon Brummer. Apart from the valuable contributions by the editor (see below) this journal rarely publishes major articles. Instead it has an abundance of short articles, a very detailed diary and a rich miscellany section. Its principal value lies in the extensive Review by Brummer, which introduces every issue and gives a critical discussion of all the topics and controversies of the day. In 1894 these articles were entitled Qui si sana, in 1895 Hollorio and Veritas, and Pro and Contra in 1896.

Noteworthy articles are as follows:

1896	Brummer, L.	Contributions to Bavarian postal history with particular regard to the types of cancellation
	Schultheiss, - Chief Postmaster	The 70 Kreuzer and 2 mark stamps (Wurttemberg)
	Rehlen, H.	Long distance postcards
	Ohrt, P.	Contributions on the so-called Starlet Stamps of Hamburg
	Brummer, L. & Lindenberg, C.	The Bavarian royal trial of 1865
	Wassermann, Dr.	Legal points relating to the stamp trade
	Brummer, L.	Austria

Die Postwerthzeithen-Kunde is also a monthly, published by the firm of B. Larisch in Munich, and like Das postwerthzeichen is rated as one of our better periodicals. It contains a very special diary, many items of miscellany, and a good literature review. Many issues also contain interesting philatelic gossip by Ludwig Berger. In 1895 and 1896 it published the original series of articles by H. Kennedy entitled Cancelled and Not Cancelled.

We can select the following articles from its contents:

1894	Otto, Dr.	Questions of law in commercial philatelic practice
	Rommel, Otto	Lubeck (conclusion)
	Dr. ...	Contributions to the history of European postcards
	Wehner, Fr.	Cancellations of the former German sovereign states on postage stamps from the North German postal region and the German Empire
	v. Horrak, E.	Some forgeries from Moldavia
1895	Thier, Max	Wuttemberg I issue of 1851, and the official reprint
	Suppantchitsch, V.	History and statistics relating to world periodical philatelic literature to 1893
	Thier, Max	A Brunswick roulette

	Wehner, Fr.	Contributions on the topic of Heligoland stamps
	Dr. ...	Contributions to the study of European postcards
	Bohnert, C.	Types of Saxony cancellations
	v. Horrak, E.	Romanian errors, their reprints and forgeries
1896	Suppantisch, V.	On the alleged recent discovery of old Austrian Mercury stamps
	Dr. ...	Contributions to the history of European postcards
	v. Horrak, E.	Newspaper stamps of Moldavia, 1858, 5 paras.
	Ohr, P.	The prehistory of the II 1859 stamp issue of Luxemburg

This magazine ceased to appear with the year 1897 and has amalgamated with the Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung.

Austria-Philatelist has been published in Prague since 1893 by P. Riedl. The editor is Alfred Nabe. It appeared monthly in 1894 and 1895 and twice a month since 1896, and is intended in the first place for the philatelists of Austria-Hungary. Originally a distinguished and well-established technical journal, it has steadily declined in quality in recent years, so that now it hardly ranks amongst the better journals. The first two annual volumes usually had each monthly issue starting with the biography of a philatelist (with photo), then a technical article, then a survey of magazines appearing, philatelic rambles (gossip on philatelic topics), a good list of new issues, letter box, society news, adverts: however the contents have recently got poorer and poorer. The publication of a novel in an endless series of instalments proved to be an unfortunate experiment, cartoons were introduced (in 1895) and dropped again soon after.

We may select the following from the contents:

1894	Kropf, Hans	The postage stamps of Austria-Hungary and Lombardy
	Eckardt, K.	Spanish rarities
	Suppantisch, V.	Philately in Austria
	v. Neuliger, E.	Specialisation
	Glasewald, A. E.	Collecting cancellations
1895	Suppantisch, V.	On philatelic libraries
	Kropf, Hans	The postage stamps of Austria-Hungary and Lombardy
	v. Treskow, P.	Catalogue of Russian Zemstvo stamps
	Rosenberg, A.	The stamps of Heligoland
	Benesch, A.	Austrian field postmarks in the Danube principalities
1896	- -	The question of the Austrian Mercury of 1850-56
	Kropf, H.	The postage stamps of Austria-Hungary and Lombardy
	v. Treskow, P.	Catalogue of the Russian Zemstvo stamps
	v. Girsewald, C.	The stamps of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg
	Diena, Dr. E.	The forged stamps of Lombardy and the Venetia
	Schumacher, M.	New issues and reprints from the United States of America
	Reinheimer, Ad.	The occupation stamps (Alsace-Lorraine) and their cancellations
1897	v. Girsewald, C.	The stamps of the Grand Duchy of Oldenburg
	Suppantisch, V.	On philatelic libraries

v. Bochmann, E.	Types in general, particularly those of the United States of America
Dutscheck, Franz	How does the postage stamp appear?
Glasewald, A. E.	Forged cancellations from Thurn and Taxis
- -	The oldest Serbian stamps
Questiaux, E.	Studies on the postage stamps of Belgium

The Mitteldeutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung is the organ of the Central Germany Philatelic Society, and appears monthly under the editorship of A. E. Glasewald, a very energetic and knowledgeable philatelist who has gained a high reputation by his multifarious activities. His first aim is to make the journal encourage the Society's interests, but there still enough room to print papers by the editor and other worthwhile reading, plus a critical list including local stamps, a readers' forum, book reviews, etc. Every volume also includes reports on postal systems, particularly those of the German States. Particular attention is paid to the detection and exposure of forgeries, and there has been a special "forgeries" supplement since 1895, number 6.

The following selections from the contents are particularly worth noting:

1894	Glasewald, A. E.	Cancellations on the stamps of Thurn and Taxis
	Glasewald, A. E.	Points for recognition of new German printings
	Glasewald, A. E.	Forged cancellations on the stamps of Thurn and Taxis
	Glasewald, A. E.	Forged cross-bar cancellations on Baden state postage stamps
1895	Glasewald, A. E.	Cancellations on the stamps of Thurn and Taxis
	Glasewald, A. E.	The postage stamps of Greece
1896	v. Girsewald, C.	Types of Swiss Rayon stamps

The Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung has been issued over the entire period by the firm of Ernst Heitmann in Leipzig. There were 36 issues per year in 1894 and 1895; in 1896 and 1897 the actual number of issues returned to 24. In the early years of its existence it was one of the better journals, but in recent years it has left more and more to be desired; major scientific articles are almost totally absent, whereas every issue tends to contain a number of items on the postal systems of all nations, and these are seldom of interest. The Philatelic Review section is usually very extensive but quite generalised; the Miscellany and News sections are better.

We may pick out the following from amongst their articles:

1894	Rommel, O.	History of the 3 pfennig red Saxony newspaper stamps
	Kalckhoff, Dr.	The postcards of Travancore
	- -	Fine printing and the co-called local printing
	Heitmann, E.	Local-delivery envelopes from Hanover
	Heitmann, E.	The most recent Japan forgeries
	- -	Testing paper in the service in philately
1895	Müller, H.	German colonial cancellations
	- -	The watermark. The paper
	- -	The stamps of Heligoland, their price and new issues
	- -	Entires from Wurttemberg Survey

	--	Yet another Jubilee! Alsace-Lorraine
1896	Diena, Dr. E.	Temporary use of Sardinian stamps in the provinces of Massa and Carrara
	--	The maritime post stamps of Mexico; Baden 9kr., error; the more valuable types of stamp from Great Britain
1897	Frank, E. D.	The 1d stamp from Great Britain, 1840-1864 etc.
	--	The stamps of the United States of America, 1861-1873
	--	Cancelled covers from New South Wales of 1838

The Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung is the official organ of the Union of Swiss Philatelic Societies. It appeared in 1894 and 1895 under the impression of the Swiss Philatelic Society of Basle, in 1896 and 1897 under that of the Philatelic Society of Geneva. There were 12 numbers in 1894-95, and 14 in 1896. It has articles in French and German, and deals almost exclusively with the stamps of its own country. Although a great deal of space is devoted to Society news, there is no list of new issues.

The only one of its articles worth mentioning is the important paper by O. Pfenniger General Survey of Swiss and Cantonal Postage Stamps, which began in 1896 and was continued in 1897.

If we now go on to the new publications that have begun to appear during the years 1894-97, we are unhappily compelled to state that none is of any importance, with the possible exceptions of the Quarterly Supplements already mentioned, naturally, and the Post and the Journal für Markenkunde. Apart from society news, practically all these magazines consist of nothing but adverts. A minority do include some text, but of such poor quality that one can hardly believe the editors have taken any trouble with it. We shall thus restrict ourselves to giving a brief survey of this "literature", with the reservation that the list is by no means exhaustive, and some issues have not been made available, so that we should be pleased to hear of corrections and additions. For the rest we should like to refer to the Chronological Table, which we hope will appear shortly.

Post was published fortnightly from 1st January 1894 by Baumbach & Co., in Leipzig. It has a detailed list of new issues, with an occasional original article but is of no use for serious study. It has appeared as a monthly supplement since 1895.

Die Philatelistische Literatur is produced by Dr. Otto Rommel of Leipzig and gives a review of journals in all languages. It also includes Rommel's work in the bibliographical field.

Vierteljahrs-Nachtrage appeared during 1894-1896 in a total of 3 volumes and 12 numbers. For contents see above.

Vereinsnachrichten des Sammler-Vereins für Privatpostwerthzeichen have appeared since the beginning of 1894 under the editorship of W. v. Schimmelpfeng, Bartenstein.

Die philatelistische Litteratur produced by Richard Rose in Gumbinnen, appeared as No. 1 of 6th January 1894 and No. 2 on 5th February 1894. This small octavo publication is of interest as it was the first German-language journal devoted exclusively to philatelic literature.

Journal für Markenkunde a monthly edited by Arthur Wülbern, Hamburg, started to appear on 15th January 1895 and ceased after 12 numbers. It was meant to be a serious German scientific journal, but never managed to be so, right from the beginning. The only things of interest are Wülbern's own papers on Alsace-Lorraine and Heligoland, and the Great Philatelic Catalogue of the German States, which finished with Bavaria(!)

Universal Briefmarken-Anzeiger was published by E. H. Seigfried in Charlottenburg in a total of 6 issues from 15th January to 1st July 1894. The contents were advertisements.

Merkur, edited by Max Warming, Hamburg, has only reached us in the form of No. 1 for March 1894. It was meant to serve the interests of the Mercury Society and contained a few short articles.

Philatelist Journal by A. Petersen, Niobe, (No. 1; 20 April 1894, No. 2, 20th May 1894) contains only advertisements in German, French and Danish.

Die Briefmarke, Ludwig Schreiber, Esslingen, began with No. 1 on 10th June 1894 and is now in its fourth year of existence. The contents are mainly advertisements, and the very meagre text was replaced in 1896 by the even skimpier Sammlerfreunde published as a supplement to Nos. 9-14.

Hansa was issued on 25th June 1894 by Rudolph Oelrichs in Bremen, probably only to draw more attention to a Great International Address Book.

Neue Briefmarken-Zeitung from E. Gruneberg, Karlsbad, began with No. 1 on 1st September 1894 and we have now received 5 numbers. It contains part of the catalogue of Russian Zemstvo stamps by P. von Treskow.

Schleswig-Holsteinische Briefmarken-Zeitung started with No. 1 on 10th September 1894, published by Wilh. L. Knutz in Banrup. From No. 4 the publisher was A. Carstensen, and it reached 16 numbers in all (Vol. 1, 1-4; II, 1-12). The contents are frankly pathetic.

Internationalt Frimaerkeblad (No. 1 on 15th September 1894) is an advertising journal published by A. Krantz & Co., in Mosjoen in several languages and is fourth rate.

Norddeutsches Postwerthzeichen-Offertenblatt contains only adverts, as its title reveals. It was published by Marian Notzel in Sianowo, and eight issues appears from No. 1 of 1st October 1894 to No. 8 of 1st May 1895.

Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung has been published since 20th October 1894 by Robert Karst in Berlin. The first volume contained 12 issues, the second 3, and since then there have been 12 issues per year. At the moment it is the only philatelic magazine published in Berlin. The contents consist of short articles, list of new issues, miscellany, etc., and all are totally lacking in value.

Züricher Briefmarkenborsen-Zeitung, the organ of the Zurich stamp exchange, has appeared monthly since 25th October 1894, and contains auction reports almost exclusively.

Norddeutsche Briefmarken-Post, edited by Julius Helm in Hamburg, started with No. 1 dated 1st November 1894, and finished with No. 12 in October 1895. Contains adverts and a little text.

Interessantes Briefmarkenblatt was the title given by R. Wiering of Hamburg to his periodical, No. 1 of which appeared on 1st November 1894, and which disappeared again with No. 2. There is nothing of interest about it apart from the title. The International Philatelists' Society in Mährisch-Oestrau published its own Verbands-Nachrichten, containing only society news, in November and December 1894 after Phil. Borsen-Couriers had ceased to appear and before it acquired another magazine as its official organ.

Briefmarken-Anzeiger by Otto Pfaffe, Stettin, later Berlin, issued a Christmas number in 1894, then 13 issues as Vol. I 1895, and 3 issues as Vol. II, 1896. Contents: adverts.

Allgemeiner Anzeiger zur Verbreitung der Postwerthzeichen-Sammelkunde, was edited by R. v. Gangreben, Dortmund, from 1st February 1895; Vol. II was edited by Harry Kramer, Arolsen, and Vol. III by Franz Gebhardt in Apolda. Vol. III was initially edited by the two together, but after No. 1 Gebhardt alone took over. The magazine has no content worth noting.

Trinacria is an advertising journal in German and Italian issued by the firm of Cocorullo & Co., No. 1 is dated 15th February 1895, and No. 14 (final) March 1896.

Sachsisches Postwerthzeichen-Offertenblatt was published by F. Schmelzer in Nautsen, starting with No. 1 of 1st March 1895. No. 2, of 1st April 1895 was also the last.

Union was announced for publication by Garabet Aslan in Focsani (Romania) on 1st April 1895. No other details known.

Markenwart from Max Werner, Apolda (No. 1 dated 1st April 1895) is an advertising sheet, and 10 numbers have reached us. Its continuation is however questionable.

Das Tauschheft from Wilhelm Baur, Reutlingen, which started with Vol. II, No. 1, dated 1st June 1896. This little magazine also contains only adverts, but is printed only on one side of the paper; the other side has a form to be used in ordering the stamps.

Internationales Briefmarkenblatt, "Concordia" was started by Emanuel Jäger in Bohmisch-Leipa with No. 1 of 16th April 1895. Vol. 1 contained 3 issues, Vol. II for 1896, whose titled was altered to:

Rund um die Erde finished at No. 5. Contents: some text plus adverts.

Briefmarkenbörse was published by the International Union of Zemstvo Stamp Collectors, and appeared from May 1895 under the editorship of P. V. Treskow in Ruttenscheidt. Vol. I, 1895/96, contained 12 issues; only 4 issues are known of Vol. III (?) 1896/97. Contains the editor's catalogue of Zemstvo stamps, minor announcements and adverts.

Internationaler Briefmarken-Anzeiger by Friedrich Girard, Zurich, appeared on 15th May 1895. Contents; adverts.

Balkan edited by J. Willheimer in Sofia (No. 1 dated 20th July 1895) has reached us in 3 issues, and contains adverts only, in French and German.

Der Sammlerfreund from Hermann Motz of Mannheim, had its first number dated 25th December 1851, and published 14 issues in all. Nos. 9-14 appeared as supplements to Briefmarke. The only item from its contents worth mentioning is an article by the editor on cancellations from Baden.

Budapester Philatelistische Correspondenz was due to be published in December 1895 by A. H. Ganz, Budapest. No more details are known.

Philatelistisches Börsenblatt from Albert Petersdorf in Kottbus, has appeared since 1st January 1896 and is an advertising sheet which also contains some (very poor) text.

Offertenblatt für Freimarkensammler und Händler edited by Paul Lehmstedt, Jyväskylä (Finland) ran from No. 1, 20th January 1896, to No. 3 (last issue) of 20th March 1896. It was continued as:

Skandinavisk Frimærkstitning from 20th June 1896. This appeared in German and Danish, and like its predecessor contained only adverts.

Philatelistisches Annoncenblatt began to appear on 22nd January 1896 from H. Uffenheimer in Fürth, and stopped again with No. 3.

Londoner Philatelist was issued from February 1896 by A. Weisz in London; using the same format (adverts only) he also issued the magazine:

Deutscher Philatelist. We only know of 3 issues of the first of these, and only 2 of the latter (Nos. 1 and 3 of March and April). The first of these titles was continued as the:

Londoner Auctionär. The first issue we have of this is No. 9.

Vitoscha, an advertising journal in French and German was published by H. S. Tagger & Co., in Sofia, from 1st March 1896. It seems to have ceased with No. 5.

Rumänischer Philatelist came from Oscar D. Perlmann, Bucharest. We were sent No. 1 for 1st April 1896 and No. 2 for 1st May 1896, and do not know of any others. Contents: short list of new issues and adverts.

Merkur is the title of an advertising journal put out by Chr. Sauerland, Hemer, for the use of dealers. It appeared from 5th May 1896, and there were four number in all. The same readership was envisaged for:

Der Briefmarkenhändler, which appeared on 28th May 1896 under the editorship of Paul Lietzow and is still in existence.

Philatelistische Fachschrift für Sammler von Elsass-Lothringen und Occupations-Freimarken und ihren Abstempelungen, began its first volume on 31st March 1896 and finished at the end of the same year, we do not know with which number: Under the title:

Internationales Offertenblatt für Philatelie, C. A. Mylius has put out a large advertising journal since 1st July 1896, and it has kept going to the present day.

Neue Markenbörse, from A. Franke, Nordhausen, was a small octavo publication without any justification for existing, two numbers of which appeared, the first on 15th July 1896.

Mittheilungen des Philatelisten-Vereins Hermes in Rosenberg O. S. appeared from 18th August 1896 in six numbers altogether. Contents: Society news.

General-Welt-Briefmarkenblatt, produced by the Comptoir Philatelique, Burssels, was issued on 5th October 1896 and contains only adverts. A similar one-off performance is:

Union from G. S. Schulz, Berlin, No. 1 of which is dated 12th November 1896. Another advertising sheet is:

Philatelistische Offerten by Paul Tavoukdji of Berlin, which exists in two issues of the 2nd January and 1st February 1897.

Vereins-Mittheilungen des Hamburg-Altonaer Briefmarken-Sammlervereins, has appeared since February 1897.

Briefmarken-Preisliste, from Salvatore Frascati, Triest (since June 1897), has practically nothing but adverts from this firm, and absolutely nothing but in No. 2. Hence, No. 1 alone need be given any attention.

Deutsch-Amerikanische Briefmarken-Zeitung (German-American Stamp Journal) began with No. 1 on 1st June 1897 in Yonkers, New York. Editor: M. Burham. Contains only adverts. Should appear weekly and cost 1 dollar per year. We have only seen No. 2 since.

Philatelas, another advertising journal, has only reached us in the form of one issue, for 10th July 1897.

Oesterreichische Briefmarken-Zeitung began with No. 1 on 15th November 1897. Octavo format. (Vienna: edited by Anton Dworacek).

This is as far as our list goes. A few other magazines whose appearance was announced, such as Orientalisches Offertenblatt, Vocea Philatelica, Berliner Sammler-Börse, Süd-Ungarische Briefmarken Zeitung, etc., have not been made available to us, and may well not have appeared. The various magazines for collectors of picture postcards are completely outside the scope of our work.

Now we have reached the end of our survey, we cannot miss the opportunity of giving a short overview of the literature of the period we have covered. As was said at the beginning, there has been in every way a significant growth in the non-periodical literature. The periodical literature for its part has also increased in quantity, but – again with exceptions – without the new publications making any significant contribution.

In conclusion we must mention the latest body to be set up in the field of philately, under the name Germania-Ring, since this could be very important for philatelic literature if the programme in its prospectus actually gets carried out. The aim of the Ring is to Promote the science of philately by literary studies amongst other means, and the production or support of monographs, a handbook of philately along the lines of the earlier Lindenberg works, a handbook of literature, etc., is envisaged.

Since the new society number many knowledgeable and articulate philatelists amongst its members, we may await these books with eagerness. So far (1897) No. 2 of their magazine Germania-Berichte, dated 10th December but sent out at Christmas 1897, has appeared, better than No. 1, and is already a prized item.

Time will show whether or not anything comes of these plans, and it seems pointless to try and guess now what direction our literature will take in the next few years. We hope it will be able to maintain for the future the level it has currently reached, thanks to the work of our leading philatelists.

END

S. Babintsev

Philatelic Bibliography:

A Guide to Basic Literature (Books and Periodicals) on Postal History, Postage Stamps and Philately, Published in the Russian Language over 125 Years: 1843-1968

[Filatelisticheskaya Bibliografiya: Ukazatel' osnovnoi literatury (knig i dzhurnal'nykh statei) po istotii pochty, znakov pochtovoi oplaty i filatelii, opublikovannykh na Russkom yazke za 125 let (1843-1968)]

Izdatel'stvo Syvas', Moscow, Russia, 1970, 127pp.

Translation of the Introduction and Contents only, pp.3-5 & 125-127

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 1989. Re-set on computer, November 2012

PHILATELIC BIBLIOGRAPHY:

A GUIDE TO BASIC LITERATURE (BOOKS AND PERIODICALS)

ON POSTAL HISTORY, POSTAGE STAMPS AND PHILATELY,

PUBLISHED IN THE RUSSIAN LANGUAGE OVER 125 YEARS:

1843-1968

[Editor's Note: A review of the book in English can be found at: Philatelic Literature Review, December 1977, Volume 26, Issue 4, pp.239-240.]

Note facing the Introduction:

The author is S. Babintsev - candidate in pedagogic science.

Under the editorship of honoured cultural worker RSFSR - B Stalheim.

Introduction

Soviet philately is developing successfully. The organisation of All-Union Philatelic Societies does not merely represent ordinary associations of lovers of postage stamps from all countries. It creates a favourable climate for the high-level growth and development of Soviet philately. The change from the primitive mechanistic collection of all issues leads to the purposeful realisation and development of collections, on the basis of the study of postage stamps, entires and cancellations, with a steady interest in the place of each of them within the general system of postal operation.

Soviet philatelists are always conscious of the enduring links between philately and the postal service, and of the urgent need to deepen our knowledge of the history of our country's Post and its postmarks - the basic materials of every collection. This should be verified every day by taking part in All-union and international exhibitions, the rules for which require above all a demonstration of philatelic learning.

A conclusive proof of the rise in quality of Soviet philately is the precipitate growth of interest in philatelic research. After many years of interruption, philatelic literature has been successfully revived. Side by side with periodicals (the journal Philately USSR the annual Soviet Collector) the first pamphlets and books saw the light, and a collective multi-volume work by a group of researchers devoted to the history of our country's stamps and postmarks was issued. However, the demand for philatelic literature far outstrips authors' and publishers' resources. As a result, many young collectors are convinced that all our philatelic literature is exhausted by the extremely limited number of publications that appear on the counters of bookshops. Of course this is far from being the case. The traditions of Russian philately have a history of more than a hundred years. Over the past 125 years, many hundreds of books and pamphlets and thousands of articles have been published in our country on the Russian Post Office, its stamps and entires, and the history of the development of philately in our country. There is also the general literature in Russian devoted to the Post and stamps of foreign countries. All these books and journals are gathering dust on the shelves of libraries simply because the majority of our philatelists do not even suspect that they exist.

The first attempt to tell collectors of the treasures available in forgotten publications was made in the annual Soviet Collector. In four of its issues (Numbers 3-6, 1965-1968), it published a bibliographic index compiled by the Leningrad bibliographer S. Babintsev. Numerous responses from readers reached the editorial board of the yearbook and the author from all corners of the country, thus confirming the undoubted usefulness of such information to a wide circle of readers.

It proved useful to inquisitive philatelists striving to acquire missing data and raise their collections to a higher level of quality. Philatelic researchers greatly appreciated the bibliographic index, since with its help they were able for the first time to find their way at will around the multifarious literary sources for projected articles or pamphlets of their own. For those interested in communications, it turned out to be a reliable guide to the literature on the history of the Russian Post Office and its relations with foreign postal organisations. Finally, it gave librarians a means of classifying their stock accurately and making more-satisfactory arrangements to meet the demands of a constantly growing body of readers - the lovers of postal miniatures.

S. Babintsev's Philatelic Bibliography now appears as a separate publication. It is based on the published books and journals on the shelves of the outstanding depository libraries of the country. The Saltykov-Shchedrin State Library in Leningrad, the library of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR, and the one attached to the A. S. Popov Central Museum. It incorporates the substantial revisions and extended supplements that were printed at various times in instalments in the Soviet Collector. It contains brief accounts of 223 books and more than 1,600 original articles of significance published in the Russian language from 1843 to 1968. Material that appeared in newspapers is excluded for the time being.

The subject arrangement is based on familiar bibliographic principles. Books, Reference Books and Periodical Articles are listed in succession on:-

- The history of the Post and methods of delivering it, international communications and organisations.
- The history of postmarks, entires and cancellations, Russian and foreign.
- The history and development of Russian philately and philatelic societies, methods and techniques of collecting postage stamps.

The material is again grouped by subject within each main class. A chronological arrangement of the publications is used only in cases where there is no thematic or subject principle in the writing. Square brackets are used to give data missing from the title pages of books, or from the titles of articles, or when the text pages are not numbered. If no place of publication is provided, the usual symbol is given in brackets, if there is no year of publication, the accepted symbol is used.

If necessary, a short annotation describing the contents of the book or article is given.

The bibliography is not exhaustive. It only covers the basic literature on the chosen theme. Absent, for example, is information on albums, commercial price-lists and other secondary publications, or on official material published in Post Office journals. A list of the journals, and other periodic publications, is given in the Appendix.

CONTENTS

1. HISTORY OF THE POSTS

	Page
General Questions
Books	6
State Post in Russia
Books	7
Periodical articles	9
Zemstvo Post in Russia
Books	14
Periodical articles	16
Post in the RSFSR* and USSR
Books	16
Periodical articles	17
Postal Services and Tariffs
Periodical articles	19
Post and Transport
Periodical articles
Railroads	21
Water routes	22
Aviation	22
Other means of transport	23
Pigeon Post
Books	24
Periodical articles	24

* Translator's note - The Russian Soviet Federal Socialist Republic.

International Postal Systems & Organisations

General Questions
Periodical articles	25
International Postal Union.

Books	27
Periodical articles	27
The A. S. Popov Central Museum of Communications
Books	29
Periodical articles	29
2. TOKENS OF POSTAL PAYMENT
Russian Postage Stamps
Books	31
Catalogues	31
Reference publications	33
Periodical articles
Pre-stamp letters	34
Envelopes & Stamps from City Posts	34
Postage Stamps of Russia	35
Russian Post to Abroad	37
District (Zemstvo) Stamps	38
Stamps from the Civil War	40
Stamps from the RSFSR	41
Stamps from the Ukraine	42
Stamps from Azerbaijan	43
Stamps from Armenia	43
Stamps from Georgia & the ZSFSR	44
Stamps from the Central Asian Republics	44
Stamps from the Far Eastern Republics	44
Stamps from the Tuvan Republic	45
Stamps from the Baltic republics	45
Local-Issue Stamps	45
Stamps of the USSR	47
Charity Stamps	49
Official Stamps	49
Postage Stamps from Foreign Countries
Books	50
Catalogues	50
Periodical articles
Stamps from European countries	54
Stamps from Asian countries	61
Stamps from African countries	64
Stamps from American countries	67
Stamps from Australia and Oceania	68
Entires and Cancellations
Catalogues	69
Periodical articles	69
3. PHILATELY (THE COLLECTION OF POSTAGE STAMPS AND ENTIRES)
General Questions
Books	74
Reference Publications	75

Periodical articles	78
Thematic Collecting
Books	84
Catalogues	85
Philatelic Leniniana	85
Books	85
Periodical articles	85
Famous People and Anniversaries	88
Mastery of the Cosmos	89
Air Mail	90
Work, Peace, Friendship	92
Science, Culture and the Arts
Books	94
Periodical articles	94
Sport	95
The Artist and the Stamp
Books	96
Periodical articles	96
4. PHILATELIC ORGANISATIONS IN RUSSIA AND THE USSR
(Prerevolutionary period (1884 - 1916)
Books	98
Periodical Articles	98
The Soviet Philatelic Association (SFA) & representatives of philately & scrip-collecting in the USSR	99
Soviet Philatelic Organisation	101
Local Philatelic Organisations in the USSR	102
The All-Union Society of Philatelists (VOF)	103
5. METHODS & TECHNIQUES OF COLLECTING & PRESERVING STAMPS
General Questions
Periodical Articles	107
Aids to Collection (falsification of stamps)	113
6. APPENDIX
List of periodical publications on communication topics, the official material from which has not been included in the present bibliography	123

END

E. Gainsborg

A French opinion [on the desirability of a philatelic index]

Ewen's Weekly Stamp News, 6th August 1904, Volume 13, Whole number 254, p.754

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1999

A FRENCH OPINION

ON THE DESIRABILITY OF A PHILATELIC INDEX

To the Editor,

You have had the happy idea of pointing out the need for a bibliographical index of works on stamps. The obvious obstacle to such an undertaking is the lack of a complete library of all these works. The public libraries only have a small number of them, and even the most ardent collectors are far from having anything like complete sets.

Since your journal has opened its columns to enable those interested in your idea to contact one another, allow me to give you a brief description of the method used by our famous Litttré to carry the colossal undertaking of his dictionary through to a successful conclusion. As you know, every word in this dictionary without exception is illustrated by an example taken from our literary classics. To attempt this formidable task alone would have been foolish, even if remotely possible. The publishing house of Hachette made available to Litttré a large number of young, trained collaborators who read through the classics for him, picked out all the words and added the examples. In this way they produced a total of two hundred and forty thousand slips which Litttré used as the basis for his work.

Would it not be possible to do something familiar for the bibliographical work that you are proposing? Let everyone who owns philatelic literature make a summary of it on loose slips, following a uniform predetermined method, let all the slips be collected by a central body, condensed, classified alphabetically, and the work would be done automatically, so to speak.

The most modest possessors of a new monographs or a few runs of journals, even each editor, would make a resume of what they possessed and thus take part in the collaboration. To avoid the same work being done a number of times by different people, the central committee could report each week on what works or journals it has had indexed. Even if certain summaries came twice, there would be little harm done, they would serve as a check on each other.

The central committee would have an initial and most important task: drawing up the scheme to be followed by each collaborator in making his summaries. Here briefly is what each slip should contain, and in what order: country, issue, title of article, author (original or translation), editor, title of journal or book (original or translation). I give this by way of example, fuller details could be supplied. After the countries would come general studies, papers, printings, colours, engravings, albums, etc., which had these words in their titles instead of the name of a country, and which could be entered either in the alphabetical sequence as a whole, or could form a second part with a different classification.

Plenty of superficial articles would thus be honoured with a summary and would find a place in the index, but a bibliography is not a work of criticism. Examination of the material is for the writer who uses it, and the task of showing him everything that has been done before him is in itself worthy enough to tempt the disinterested worker. For in own part, I am willing to send you summaries of the few printed documents relating to stamps that I possess and, moreover, I would undertake to do the same for every paper or journal in Spanish that anyone cared to send me.

I would add that printing such an index would not be very expensive, three to four thousand francs according to the tariffs of the French book trade.

Please accept, Mr. Editor, the assurance of all my consideration.

E. Gainsborg

END

H. Leutwyler

The Swiss Hotel Post and Hotel Telegraph and Telephone Service in the 19th Century

[Title in original language]

2nd edition, H. Leutwyler, Berne, Switzerland, 1962, 31pp.

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
ca.1989

THE SWISS HOTEL POST AND HOTEL TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE SERVICE IN THE 19th CENTURY

HOTEL POSTS

Under the Federal Constitution of 12th September 1848, the postal service was finally taken out of the control of the cantons and transferred to the Swiss Confederation. At almost the same time began an unexpectedly great and sudden increase in the postal traffic. For example, the number of post offices of all types was only 420 in the year 1800, but as many as 1,490 by the year 1850.

This rapid increase in traffic involved difficulties for the postal authorities, particularly as regards the organisation of the postal service in mountainous districts where in many cases there was no postal delivery, or only a very irregular one.

It was also around 1850 that the great era of the Swiss hotels began, and at first the postal authorities could only partially meet the wishes of the hoteliers for a rapid service.

Various hotels, spas and sanatoria in the places where there was as yet no regular post office or – where one did exist, it provided an inadequate service – put their visitors' mail in and out through their hotel offices during the sixties, seventies and eighties. They did this to speed things up by using their own resources to take the mail to the nearest railway station or post office. They often used their own postmarks on this mail sent out from hotels.

In other cases the hotel offices in larger health resorts (such as Schiznach-Bad) took over the functions of an official post office for long periods, not only for their own guests but also for the local residents.

Some hoteliers set up regular private post deliveries to and from the hotel and the nearest post office or railway station in the interests of their foreign guests. These were called the hotel posts.

From 1864 onwards many hotels began to use special private postage stamps, usually carrying the name of the hotel. Sometimes these were also cancelled by their own postmarks. They are referred to as hotel postage stamps. The mail was then taken by private delivery to the nearest postal point to go into the Federal system. Individual hotels initially made a charge of 5-15 centimes for the hotel stamps to cover the cost of this delivery. The hotel stamps were taken as a prepayment along with the official prepayment represented by the Government postage stamps, and stuck on by the hotel guests or office – unfortunately, often on the back of the mail.

However, hotel postage stamps – without a postal text and price in figures – continued to be used till about 1900. Some were even sent out after publication of the law. Although these later releases are not actually postage stamps, they are nevertheless a significant and interesting part of this now closed chapter of Swiss postal history.

As mentioned before, the hotel offices used their own postmarks as a rule to mark incoming and outgoing post and for the general cancellation of the hotel postage stamps. However, it also happened that the hotel stamps were cancelled by the official postmark in the hotel telegraph bureau or cancelled by the official postmark. Conversely, Government postage stamps were occasionally cancelled by a hotel's private postmark when the mail reached the hotel. This is understandable when we consider that the telegraph bureaux for isolated hotels, spas and health resorts were generally installed in the hotels themselves, and operated by the hotel personnel, which was also sometimes the case with the official post office itself. Hence in many cases we can no longer establish with certainty whether a particular postmark is of private or Post Office origin.

Hotel posts include:-

- Hotels, spas and health resorts which issued their own postage. Stamps in the period from 1864 to about 1900.
- Hotels, spas and health resorts near which there was no official post office before 1882 and which, therefore, passed incoming and outgoing mail for their guests through their own postal bureau.
- Hotels, spas and health resorts where the hotel bureau carried out the functions of an official post office for long periods.
- Hotels, spas and health resorts in or near which official post offices were opened before 1882 principally for the convenience of the guests at the hotel, and where the hotels were allowed to supplement the official service by acting as delivery and discharge points for the convenience of their guests.

HOTEL TELEGRAPH BUREAUX AND HOTEL TELEPHONE STATIONS

After the Federal telegraph network was set up on the 5th December 1852 – with 27 bureaux at first – foreign industry showed the greatest interest in this new and rapid method of communication. Hence the first hotel telegraph bureau (Rigi-Kaltbad) was set up as early as 1854. The number of hotel telegraph bureaux rose to exactly 100 by 1886.

Hotel telegraph bureaux are:-

- Official Telegraph bureaux set up during the period 1854-1886 in hotels, spas, health resorts or hospitals, and designed in the first place to serve the needs of these establishments.

These bureaux were run by an employee paid by the hotel, but were on a par with all other telegraph offices as far as service obligations went. Like all other bureaux they were open to all and also had to take in and deliver telegrams for the locality and surrounding districts.

For prepayment of the telegraph tax, the telegraph authorities brought in telegraph prepayment stamps on the 1st January 1868. These were bought by the sender of a telegram and had to be stuck to the original form by the sender himself.

These stamps were cancelled by a mark in the dispatching office. The typical form of cancellation used in the telegraph offices is an octagon. This was chosen to differentiate it from the stamps used by the postal service.

Hotel telegraph bureaux form a special group within the total of 1,264 telegraph offices existing when the telegraph stamps were abolished in the year 1886. The cancellation generally bore the name of the hotel, spa, clinic or hospital concerned, often without any indication of the locality (e.g. "Beaurivage", "Hotel Byron", etc.).

The introduction of telegraph stamps was expected to simplify the counter service especially, but this turned out not to be the case, and so on the 1st October 1886 the use of telegraph stamps for prepayment of telegrams was abolished and the stamps themselves called in.

The introduction of the telephone into Switzerland in the year 1881 meant that in many cases there was no need to set up new telegraph bureaux; instead telephone stations with facilities for the forwarding of telegrams were installed.

Of the total of 74 such telephone stations set up in the period 1881-1886, only ?? were operating in hotels, spas or clinics.

Telephone stations with telegram facilities used round cancellation marks on the telegraph stamps, but in other respects they were the same as the dateless cancellations used in the telegraph bureaux. The word TELEGR is replaced by TELEPHON.

APPENDICES

- | | |
|---------|--|
| p.4. | List of hotels and clinics that issued hotel stamps |
| p.5-7 | Pictures of Swiss hotel stamps |
| p.8-13 | Pictures of official and private cancellations used by hotels, spas and clinics that issued hotel stamps. (Tables I, 1-3 and supplements 3/I to 3/III). |
| p.14-15 | List of hotels, spas, hospitals and clinics with private or official post facilities before 1882, but not issuing private stamps. |
| p.16-27 | Pictures of official and private cancellation marks for hotels, spas, hospices and clinics with private or official post facilities before 1882, but not issuing private | stamps (Table II, - 12 and supplements 12/I to 12/III)

- p.28-29 List of hotels, spas, hospices and clinics with telegram sending via own telegraph bureau or telephone station.
- p.30-31 Data from history of postal service in Swiss Confederation, letter, telegraph and hotel postage stamps, and their postmarks, up to about 1900 (1 and 2).

LIST OF SOURCES

Zumstein & Co., Bern:

Handbuch und Speziasl-Katalog uber die Briefmarken der Schweizerischen Eidgenossenschaft.

F. X. Andres & Hans Emmenegger:

Grosses Handbuch der Abstemplungen auf SchweizerMarken 1845-1882.

Albert Auberson, Bern:

Schweiz. Die Telegraphan-Marken 1868-1886.

Marc Henrioud & Jean J. Winkler:

Les Margues Postales de la Suisse 1650-1850.

General Council of PTT, Library and Documentation:

Personal collection.

The material for the foregoing study has been collected and prepared over a period of over 70 years. It makes no claim to completeness and the possibility of errors is not excluded.

NOTE

Only the translated text of the tables on pp.4-29 has been included on the following pages.

Page 4

Hotels & Rurorte ...	Hotels & clinics issuing hotel stamps
Ort & Hotel	Place & hotel
Hotel Eroffnet	Hotel opened
Marken versug. ab.	Stamps issued from
Hotel-Telegr. eroffnet	Hotel-Telegraph opened
Amtlicha Postat. eroffnet.	Official Post Office opened
Vor	Before

Pages 5-7

Die Schweizerischen	Swiss Hotel Postage Stamps
---------------------	----------------------------

Page 7

N.B: For further details of hotel stamps, for example, method of printing, colours, paper, perforation, printing on reverse, prices, etc., - refer to Zumstein's "Spezial-Katalog Schweiz".

Pages 8-13

Hotels, Baader & ...	Hotels, Spas and Clinics with private stamps from 1864, Official and private postmarks.
Ort Hotel	Place & Hotel
Amtliche Poststelle ...	Official Post Office opened
Vorden Nachste ...	Previous nearest Post Office
Stempel	Mark
A = Amtlich	A = Official
P = Privat	P = Private

Pages 14-15

Hotels, Bader, Hospize ...	Hotels, Spas, Hospitals & Clinics with private or official postage service before 1882, but not issuing private stamps
Ort hotel	Place & Hotel
Amtliche, Postst. eroffnet	Official P.O. opened
Hotel-Telegraph eroffnet	Hotel-telegraph opened
Vor	Before

Pages 15-27

Hotels, Bader & Rurorte ...	Hotels, Spas and Clinics without private stamps but with official & private postmarks before 1882
Ort Hotel	Place & Hotel
Amtliche Poststelle eroffnet	Official Post Office opened
A = Amtlich	A = Official
P= Privat	P = Private

Pages 28-29

Hotels, Bader, Hospiz ...	Hotels, Spas, Hospitals & Clinics with private telephone facilities in the period 1868-1886.
Ort, Hotel	Place, Hotel
Telegr.-Bureau eroffnet	Telegraph-Bureau opened
Kit Privaten ...	With private telephone station for sending telegrams
Beispiele der Abatemplungen	Examples of postmarks from hotel telegraph bureaux & telephone stations

Page 30

Dates from the History of the Postal Service of the Swiss Confederation: Letter telegraph and hotel post stamps and postmarks up to about 1900

14 th century	Postal delivery by messenger through towns (Berne, Basle, St. Gallen, Zurich, etc.)
16 th century	Extension of postal service through towns, ...?* and cantons (1569-1789)
ca. 1650-17981	Use of postmarks on mail
from 1662	Use of indication of place or origin on mail
May 1798	Federal authorities begin to deal with postal service (1798-1803 Helvetian Republic)

3 September 1798	Decree of Federal Council establishes postal service as prerogative of Republic
Sept/Oct 1798	Opening of Central Post Office in Lucerne
October 1798	Introduction of official postmarks
14 July 1799	Effective start of Central Postal Service in Berne
19 February 1803	Postal service delegated to authority of cantons (1802-1848, CANTONAL POSTS)
1803-1808	Use of generally straight-line postmarks (place without date)
1806-1831	Use of rectangular postmarks as well, with date (trial)
1831	Date stamp definitively introduced
1833-1848	Generally round postmarks, also oval and semi-circular ones
1 March 1843	Issue of first cantonal postage stamps (Zurich)
1843-1850	Issue of cantonal postage stamps (Zurich, Geneva & Basle)
1 January 1849	State decree of 12 September 1848 returns postal service of Federal authorities (From 1849 Federal Post)
5 April 1850	Issue of first State stamps for Swiss Confederation (local post and postal district)
1 October 1830	Issue of district stamps
1 August 1851	Introduction of diamond-shaped postmark
1851-1858	Most postmarks diamond-shaped
5 December 1852	Telegraph network for open use brought into operation (1920 km lines, 27 telegraph bureaux)
15 September 1854	Issue of "Seated Helvetia" stamps imperforate (Strubel)
1854	First hotel telegraph bureau comes into operation (Rigi-Kaltbad)
1854-1886	Total of 100 hotel telegraph bureaux set up and operated from 1858	Generally round postmarks, also straight-line et al
1 October 1862	"Seated Helvetia" stamps issued with perforations
1864	Issue of first hotel postage stamps (Rigi-Kaltbad)
1864-ca.1900	Issue of hotel postage stamps
1867	Use of cancellation stamps with movable dates
1 January 1868-1.X.86	Issue of telegraph stamps
1881	Introduction of telephone for public use
1881	First hotel telephone station with telegram facilities set up (Tellsplatte)
1881-1885	Total of ...?* hotel telephone stations with telegram facilities set up
1 April 1882-1905	Introduction of "Cross and price, standing Helvetia" stamps (watermark: cross in oval)
from 1882	Usually only round postmarks
26 September 1883	Issue of hotel postage stamps with details of price or tax forbidden
From about 1900	Hotel postage stamps no longer common
* Unable to translate

END

F. Billig

Mondial

[Mondial]

Fritz Billig, Vienna, Austria, 1936/37

{Issued in Parts according to language and subject}

(Foreword, Introduction and Contents only, pp.Id, IId & {I have lost the original page})

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
October 1987

MONDIAL

FOREWORD

Mondial is, for the philatelists of all countries, the fulfilment of a long-cherished wish.

Up to now, the international literature of philately has lacked a complete index to all the articles that appear in the different journals.

This deficiency is met by the present work, which because of its system will always be up to date.

We are all delighted by the range of philatelic journals, whose abundance leaves hardly anything to be desired in other respects. However, the most valuable journal is not very useful if we have to make a laborious search through all the individual articles for all special fields of interest.

There have already been quite a number of attempts to produce indexes, but the rigid form of the bound volume has meant that each of these works has rapidly become out of date.

I avoid this difficulty in Mondial by the use of the "loose-leaf" system.

In the course of time, Mondial will index all scientific articles on postage stamps appearing in any language.

Not only the German Literature, which is extensive enough on its own, but all foreign language journals, especially the English, French and Italian will be covered.

Locating articles is a simple matter with the new system.

The articles and books from each particular country are listed on individual sheets punched at the sides, different colours being used for the different languages.

The individual sheets are divided into groups as follows: postal history, cancellations, forgeries, new issues, entires, precursors, etc.

As soon as the material published to date has been covered by Mondial, which is bound to take some years, supplements will appear at the beginning of every year to cover the literature published in the previous year.

Titles in the principal languages, German, English, French and Italian, will be given only in the original, whereas for all articles in other languages a German translation will be printed along with the original.

The cover (ring binders) for each volume of this work are available with German and English titles.

Comments and corrections, and added entries are always welcome, as are the addresses of any interested in this project.

Vienna, August 1936

Fritz Billig

INTRODUCTION

Works that appeared in book form are differentiated from the periodical articles by being entered on different sheets.

The sheets are marked in the bottom right corner by a large A (article), B (book) or Z (periodical).

The name of the country is given at the top in three languages: English on the left, French in the middle and German on the right. For example:

German Empire	Empire d'Alemagne	Deutsches Reich
3 261d	3 120d	3 167d

The sheets are filed as follows:-

Every country has a reference number printed on the right, below the name of the country (see the preceding example). The sheets are initially sorted by this number into volumes, i.e. in terms of the above example, the German-speaking section will have the reference 167, the French-speaking number 120 and the English 261.

If the sheets are arranged in this way, they will automatically correspond to the Michel catalogue (for German), Yvert (for French) and Scott (for English).

The numbers to the left are used to arrange the sheets within the country and are the same for all languages.

There is a letter to the right of the reference number, and this indicates the original language of the article referred to: d (German), e (English), f (French), I (Italian), s (Spanish), c (Czech) and so on.

For further distinction, different colours are used for printing the different languages. Black –

German, English – Red, French – Green, and so on.

The index gives the full title with author, and the date of publication is given for books where possible. The abbreviated title of the journal is followed by year, volume number, part number and page. The part number is only given for those journals where pagination is not continuous throughout the year.

The abbreviations used in Mondial for journals are given under the reference number 2, along with the full title of the journal.

MONDIAL - CONTENTS

This contents list is based on the copy of Mondial held by the Collectors Club Library. It has been compared with a copy purchased recently (1980) from H.J.M.R. company (which was only about 50% complete) and also with the copy held by the Royal Philatelic Society, London, and was found to contain all the pages in the latter two. Total number of pages: 245.

The pages come in three versions: d – German (Deutsche); f = French; e = English.

English title	Pages
Foreword	1d
Introduction	1d
Index	1-8d
Philatelic Newspapers	1-40; 141-143 (error for 41-43)d
Austria	1-18d
Baden	1d
Bavaria	1d
Belgium	1-25f; 100-129e
Brunswick	1d
Canada	1-5d
France	1-18d
German Colonies &c.	1d
German Empire	1-4d; 51-61d
German States	1-2d
Great Britain	1-15d
Switzerland	1d; 101-115f
U.S.A.	1-18d; 151-176e

*B. Birch
Shevington, U.K.
November 1983*

END

Otto Rommel

Philatelic literature of the year 1894

[Die philatelistische literatur des jahres 1894]

Der Philatelist, January 1895, Volume 16, Issue 1, pp.19-23; February, Issue 2, pp.59-63
& March, Issue 3, pp.100-104

Translation of the introductory text only, pp.19-20

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1992 (Set on computer and revised December 2007.
Additional minor editorial changes, February 2008.)

PHILATELIC LITERATURE OF THE YEAR 1894.

Once more I take the opportunity of pointing out the great importance of an exact knowledge of the literature and of reporting that, happily, an increasing number of philatelists have started to consolidate their journals into ordered collections, thus saving them from destruction and providing the means for systematic study. The present modest study should be a little help in this direction.

My original plan was to deal with the German-language philatelic literature of 1892-1894 in connection with Suppantschitsch's excellent bibliography of philatelic literature. However, I was forestalled in this by H. Fränkel of Berlin with his useful and reliable tables to the end of 1893. A survey of the non-German literature would have been equally useful in conjunction with Suppantschitsch's work on philately of 1893, but I lacked the material. So, not without reflection, I was led to the subject given in my title, especially as regards journals that ceased to appear and other topics. Magazines that are still coming out, and have neither undergone changes nor been discontinued will remain totally unmentioned. I have thus covered only the new publications of 1894, along with changes and closures in the years 1893 and 1894. Titles that were announced to appear, but in fact did not, are also given a mention.

I have no doubt that my work contains many mistakes. I have not been able to get hold of everything published in the world: many remain unknown to me or have ceased publication. I have just occasionally indulged in conjectures, and have always pointed this out. However, when I give a positive report this can basically be relied on and may be used as a starting-point for future bibliographers.

I also bore in mind that I was writing before the year 1894 had completely finished, so that there was a possibility of new magazines appearing or becoming known during the last few days of the year. However, I had to ignore this consideration, since I did not want to take the risk of someone getting in before me.

Possibly, someone may feel impelled to write and subject my work to rigorous technical criticism. This would help to lay the foundation for a really valuable discourse, and would thus not lack either usefulness or result.

END

Victor Suppantschitsch

Bibliography and Reference Book on all German Philatelic Literature from its Beginning to the End of 1891 Including an Outline of the History of Philately with Special Reference to Germany and a Short History of German Philatelic Literature

[Bibliographie zugleich Nachschlagebuch der gesamten Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur seit ihrem Entstehen bis Ende 1891 Nebst einem Abriss der Geschichte der Philatelie mit Besonderer Berücksichtigung Deutschland's und einer Kurzen Geschichte der Deutschen Philatelistischen Literatur]

16 Parts, A. Larisch, Munich, Germany, 1892-94, 749pp.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1991 (Re-set on computer, May 2011)

BIBLIOGRAPHY AND REFERENCE BOOK
ON ALL GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE
FROM ITS BEGINNING TO THE END OF 1891
INCLUDING AN OUTLINE OF THE HISTORY OF PHILATELY
WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO GERMANY
AND A SHORT HISTORY OF GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

Victor Suppantschitsch

Justice of the Royal & Imperial South German Provincial Court, Graz

EXTENT OF THE TRANSLATION

The objective of this translation is to enable this book to be used by non German-speaking philatelists. To this end, the literary sections of the book have been translated in full whilst the bibliographic sections have not been translated at all.

Having used the translation to determine what the book contains and locate items of interest, it should be fairly simple to extract the required bibliographic information with the aid of a German-English dictionary.

Exact details of the extent of the translation will be found by reference to the CONTENTS and the other editorial notes in the English text.

Brian J. Birch

July 1991

EDITORS NOTES

Although this translation was edited both before and after typing [as well as after digitisation], I readily acknowledge that the end result is far from perfect. The object of this translation is to make this book accessible to those who do not read German. It was never intended to publish the translation and I have not therefore been over-zealous about the format used for titles of handbooks and organisations, i.e. they may be given in their original language or in English. Those who require greater accuracy must refer to the German text for corroboration of exact titles.

Similarly, the great number of foreign-language words found in this translation (titles of publications, names of personalities and geographical locations) will inevitably mean that errors and miss-spellings will be present. I apologise in advance for these and trust that they will not impair the usefulness of this work.

Brian J. Birch

December 1991

DIGITISATION

This work was digitised in 2011 using OCR software. That action itself will have introduced errors that were not present in the original work. In particular, names of people, places and the titles of books and magazines should be confirmed using the original document. However, it did provide the possibility of improving the original translation. I hope that this is now relatively blemish free but apologise for any remaining errors.

Brian J. Birch

26th October 2011

CONTENTS

	Original Page N°	Translation Page N°
FOREWORD	3	5
PART 1
The History of Philately with special reference to Germany	7	8
Introduction	9	8
A. Philately from its origin to 1862/63	12	10
B. The period from 1862/63 to 1878/80	24	18
C. The period from 1878/80 to the present day	44	31
PART 2
The History of German Philatelic Literature	77	49
Introduction	79	49
PART 3
German Philatelic Literature from its beginning to the end of 1891	109	66
Introduction	111	66
A. Periodicals	113
Supplement to the periodicals	154a
B. Textbooks and other scientific or learned works and papers - their contents	155
C. Handbooks, general and specialised catalogues specialised works and papers on individual countries	161
D. Dictionaries and Address books, Calendars and Yearbooks	182
E. Miscellaneous	188
F. Albums	195
G. Literature on cancellations	203
H. Price lists	204
(Makes no claim to be comprehensive)
I. Humorous works	215
(Makes no claim to be comprehensive)
K. Periodicals, Catalogues and other works which were announced but never appeared	217
PART 4
Reference book of German Philatelic Periodical Literature from the beginning, to the end of 1891	219	68
Introduction	221	68
First Part: General Section	227
Second Part: Special Section	417

Page 4
PART 5	Philatelic Authors and Outstanding Philatelists	715	71
	Introduction	717	71
SUPPLEMENT		743
Supplement to Part 3 - List of philatelic literature		745
Additions and amendments to the individual items in Part 3		747
ERRATA		749

FOREWORD

The large extent reached by German philatelic literature particularly over the last decade, has made the lack of an account of it steadily more noticeable.

The sheer number of papers, books, monographs, handbooks, catalogues, journals, etc. that form the present-day German philatelic literature makes it impossible for any individual to be familiar with them all.

A complete index to them does not exist at the moment, and a greater or lesser number can only be located in the catalogues of Society or certain large private libraries.

The philatelist seeking information in one or other branch of philatelic knowledge has thus nothing to hand that will form a useful guide to everything that has appeared.

An index to all philatelic handbooks however complete, is no longer adequate today, simply because by far the greater part of German philatelic literature consists of journals.

The title of a book is generally an adequate guide to what it contains.

An accurate book index will readily help users to determine what they need and what they should study.

Periodicals are quite another thing. They do not consist of a systematic treatment of individual specific topics, but of a series of items and articles that have no connection with one another.

In the case of journals it is not enough to be aware of their existence and their titles. If they are to be used for a particular project, it must be possible to find out what their articles deal with.

The newer philatelic journals often deal not only with the postage stamps of individual countries, but also give exhaustive studies of individual stamps, and so the above information is needed to unearth anything complete and reliable from them.

This consideration gave rise to the wish, which Dr. Emilio Diena of Modena was amongst the first to express a couple of years ago, for a bibliography on the one hand and a reference book to all the philatelic literature on the other.

Dr. Diena's first idea was to prepare a detailed survey of the philatelic literature of all countries, but he soon realized the great difficulties which the realization of this plan would involve, partly because of the colossal amount of material to be dealt with, and partly because it would call for the cooperation of all the main civilized countries, and this could hardly be brought about. Consequently, he decided to split the work up and allow every country to deal with its own literature in the manner suggested.

Also, we Germans found a study of this kind very necessary indeed.

In fact, no country has a reference book of its philatelic literature, but whereas some of them have at least a more or less detailed bibliography available, we Germans have so far had no independent work at all. The most outstanding bibliography exists in the English language.

Page 6

This is the famous work by the greatest American philatelist, John K. Tiffany: The Philatelic Library, St. Louis, MO, 1874, it is a work of infinite industry and ideal scholarship. It covers the literature of all countries, but unfortunately extends only to the year 1874.

After that comes another work by the same author, The Stamp Collector's Library Companion, Chicago, 1889, with a supplement for 1890, in which all the philatelic journals of the United States of America - today more than 400 in number - are dealt with using the accuracy and care peculiar to this author.

The Spaniards have Dr. Thebussem with his Literatura Filatélica en España, (Philatelic Literature in Spain), Seville, 1876, and the French have Ph. de Bosredon with his Bibliographie Timbrologique de la France et de la Belgique, (Philatelic Bibliography of France and Belgium), Brussels, 1878.

Finally, in the year 1877, Giuseppe Leona of Bologna produced a Bibliographia timbrologica dell'Italia (Philatelic Bibliography of Italy), which first appeared in the magazine Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo, October 1877, Issue 16 and November, Issue 17.

Our philatelic literature on the other hand has not received an independent and exhaustive treatment to date.

If I have now undertaken to fill this gap with the present work, it is out of the purest affection for the subject.

A philatelist for more than 30 years, I have always had a predilection for philatelic literature, and believe I have a thorough knowledge of it.

I am far from claiming this book to be free of all defects - what human enterprise merits this claim - but I took up the work because I could see that Dr. Diena's idea, though warmly applauded by all true philatelists, would have to remain a pious hope for a long time to come, and because I cherished the wish to perform a service for the world of German collectors.

As far as the reference book, for which I felt obliged to adopt the dictionary form, is concerned, I have set out the principles on which my judgement and arrangement were based in the following introductory remarks.

The special nature of this work must mean that not all philatelists will find it equally satisfactory. Some will expect to find detailed descriptions, others prefer there to be less generalization and a correspondingly greater number of key words under the individual entries, articles, notices, etc.

I ask all those who do not find the reference book sufficiently exhaustive to bear in mind that a single person has had to carry out this work totally alone, that it has taken 2 years of strenuous work, and that - with a few exceptions - he has not had that support from the collecting world that he expected in view of the initial response to Dr. Diena's article.

It really does not need to be explained that a bibliography of the German philatelic literature needs a history of the same to complete it.

Page 7

I hoped however to precede this with a history of philately, since this makes the other comprehensible and the two are so intimately connected that only together can they yield a complete picture.

I thus offer this book for publication in the hope that it will promote the further development of philately.

Graz, May 1892

The Author

PART 1

THE HISTORY OF PHILATELY

with special reference to Germany

INTRODUCTION

The word “philately” is used in several senses. Generally it is used to mean the study of postage stamps, but in a wider sense it is also applied to the study of cancellations, Telegraphic and other stamps, post-paid and surcharge stamps, etc., in other words, everything connected with commercial stamps.

The history of philately however, does not deal with the study of postage stamps, but only with the development of this field of collecting, and we shall only deal here with the history of postage stamp collecting.

The aim of this historical survey is to give the reader a picture of the origin of stamp collecting and its successive development to the present day and to make him aware of all the important features of this field of collecting.

The reader will be assumed, on the other hand, to know the history of postage stamps, and this topic will only be dealt with here insofar as it is indivisibly related to the history of philately.

As will be shown later, philately is a child of the second half of our century, and is thus of much more recent date than the history of postage stamps.

It could only come into being after the introduction of postage stamps became general.

This immediately leads to the question of whether we can really speak of “philately” before the collection of postage stamps was undertaken in a scientific manner.

This question must be answered in the affirmative from the standpoint of the historian, since the original aimless collecting methods gave rise in the course of years to the scientific approach to stamp collecting that we now refer to by the generally adopted name of “philately”.

Collecting has become a study, and a complex and demanding study at that, and the historian who undertakes to follow the historical development of this study would be making a serious blunder and giving an incomplete picture were he to leave out that period of time during which stamps were merely collected, and not studied.

Quite apart from the fact that the boundaries between one of these periods and another is very difficult to draw, every collection worthy of the name is to some extent a study.

Page 9

However, though philately has gradually developed into a scientific study, it does not lack the striking events which enable its historian to divide its development into distinct sections and thus make it clearer.

If we attentively follow the path which stamp collecting has taken since its beginning, we find there are three phases which can be clearly distinguished from one another.

The collection of postage stamps shows a different character in each of these three periods, so that the history of philately can be conveniently divided into three sections.

The boundaries of these periods are not events of a nature to bring about a revolution in collecting the minute they happened. They rather gave a starting-point to and a reason for the adoption of a new direction.

This justifies the historian in using them as the framework for his historical survey.

Using this standpoint, the history of philately can be divided into the following three periods:

- A From its origin to 1862/63
- B From 1862/63 to 1878/80
- C From 1878/80 to the present day

This is again with special reference to Germany.

The first period closes and the second opens with the beginning of philatelic literature.

Three important events occur in the period from 1878-1880, namely the Philatelic Congress in Paris, the foundation, or more correctly the consolidation of the International Philatelic Union in Dresden, and the beginning of specialised collections.

These three events interacted to have an essential influence on the development of philately, so that it seems correct to take them as the landmarks for the beginning of the third and last period of time.

There have been many other events that have affected the development of philately, whether to promote it or hinder it, such as the campaign in 1866 between Austria and Prussia, the Franco-German war of 1870/71, the Hamilton treaties, etc. Some of these events by themselves were not enough to give a totally new direction to philately, but sometimes one could do this.

We shall start with the first period.

PHILATELY FROM ITS ORIGIN TO 1862/63

The origin of the collecting of postage stamps is shrouded in impenetrable darkness, and is likely to remain so.

Statements made on this subject in various philatelic journals belong to the realm of legend, with no historical evidence on their side.

It is related, for example, that at the beginning of the fifties in England a wager was made according to which everyone taking part had to assemble a given, large number of postage stamps within a certain period.

The hunt for stamps to which this wager gave rise had the result that people began to collect them.

Another, equally widely disseminated version, is that a teacher in a small English primary school had the idea of teaching his pupils geography by getting them to stick a stamp from each country into their atlases.

When the school inspector visited this particular school during his tour of duty he found that the children in this small primary school were the best in geography and when he expressed his surprise at this to the teacher, the latter revealed the simple method by which he had roused a love of this subject in the children.

Thus, stamp collecting was introduced to school children, and has continued to grow in scope ever since.

These stories are pleasant to hear or read, and they may be wholly or partially based on truth, but as already stated, they have no demonstrable historical foundation.

However, one fact seems to be established and is moreover, in line with these stories, namely that the cradle of stamp-collecting was in England.

This priority moreover, becomes understandable if we consider that it was England which had the honour of introducing the postage stamp, since stamps were issued there as early as 1840, whereas the other countries of Europe took ten years or even more to follow this example and in addition, the extensive English trade with all parts of the globe meant that most foreign stamps got to England, so that at the period when stamps had yet to become articles of trade and commerce, Englishmen were in the best position to begin collecting them.

Also, there seems to be no doubt that stamp collecting was initially taken up by schoolboys.

This is not to say that no adults originally beguiled their time in this way, but in general schoolboys were the only collectors.

Page 11

In support of this is the fact that collecting went on for so many years before a regular trade developed, before a literature arose and before the first of the aids currently available to the collector to help with his collecting became available. If stamp collecting had begun as an adult pastime, all this would have happened earlier.

When I speak of collecting, I am obviously referring only to the collecting of different postage stamps with the aim of building up a collection.

The accumulation of masses of stamps for any other purpose, what is called “perforce” collecting, such as the winning of a bet as mentioned above, as currency, to paper rooms, etc. is not collecting in our philatelic sense.

The first type of collecting was going on in England in the year 1845* and perhaps earlier.

Philatelic collecting, however, began much later, in the mid-fifties approximately.

There are natural reasons why stamp collecting should have first found adherents only amongst schoolboys, though they were really passionate about it.

Children, especially boys, naturally tend to collect things.

Which of us as a boy has not collected minerals, plants, butterflies, beetles, insects, seals, etc.

However, boys are not very persistent, swap their collections, soon get bored and finally give the whole thing up. There are very few boys, mainly the secondary-school type, who have never collected any of the above objects.

The appearance of postage stamps meant that suddenly an object was available for collection which threw all others into the shade.

The wide range of designs, patterns and colours pleased the eye and captured the imagination, the dainty size made it possible to conceal an entire collection in a jacket pocket, and carry on swaps and deals under the desk during school hours. Moreover, these objects of collection were not limited to any one season of the year, as were plants, butterflies, beetles, and insects, but could be collected the entire year. They did not need to be carefully sought out, captured and prepared, but turned up on the letters received by fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, etc. so that they could be obtained without trouble and incorporated into the collection without further ado.

Also, they were not fragile, did not have to be treated carefully, could be handled at will and passed from hand to hand without damage.

They had however another advantage not possessed by any other object of schoolboy collection.

* Globus 3, Weltpost X, 1.

Page 12

The young collector of plants, butterflies, beetles, insects, shells, snails etc. was limited to the types available in his immediate locality.

Even a short vacation trip would yield little change in the fauna or flora.

He could not get hold of specimens from foreign countries for lack of the necessary money and also the necessary connections, in fact he could not even think of getting hold of any such.

Now the position was changed.

On all sides were letters from the colonies, and from all the different countries of the Continent, and the cancellation stamp was the guarantee that the postage stamps had actually come from these distant countries and really had made these long journeys.

This was a fascination that young people could only resist in the rarest cases.

Thus stamp collecting swept through the whole of England with the speed of lightning.

All other objects for collection were ignored, and everyone turned to stamp collecting.

From England, stamp collecting soon spread to France, then to Belgium, and finally also to Germany.

Thus, France and Belgium can be looked on as cradles of philately as well as England.

It is simply not conceivable that the impulse towards stamp collecting could have begun from any one person, or in any one place.

It seems much more likely to be the case that different people began to collect stamps simultaneously in different places and that they went on collecting without one being aware of the others for a long time until finally, chance brought the dedicated collectors together.

This is corroborated by the uncommonly rapid spread of this sport - at this time the passion deserved no more serious name - over the entire civilised world, a spread which is otherwise hard to understand.

Collecting in Germany - a few exceptions apart - began much later than in the countries previously mentioned.

For example, the Palais Royal at Paris had a large stamp market at a time when hardly anything was known about philately in Germany*.

To turn to the type of collecting, this was quite straight forward and lacked any scientific character.

* Philatelist, III, 6.

Page 13

Stamps were collected and stuck onto sheets of paper or into books, generally so firmly that they could only be got off from the place where they were stuck with great difficulty.

People usually looked only at the design, the value and the colour of the stamp.

Any that agreed in these particulars were counted as duplicates.

Typefaces, watermarks and perforations were not considered as a rule. No-one understood about the second two for a very long time.

Collecting was limited to adhesive postage stamps and envelopes, from which the cancellation and in the early days just the shape of the stamp itself were cut off.

Thus, the oval stamps of 1841 and 1855 on English envelopes, that of 1858, which had eight corners, and the Prussian octagon of 1852, the circular Russian cancellation of 1848 etc. were all cut off. Yes even actual stamps that were octagonal in shape, like the Great Britain of 1842 or the East Indies of 1855 were quite often cut to follow the shape.

Since no-one knew what foreign countries were issuing in the way of stamps, people simply collected whatever they could get hold of.

The foundation stones were the correspondences of merchants, scholars and other people known to have connections with foreign countries.

To get hold of stamps from countries not yet represented in their collections, collectors tried to locate people who were in communication by letter with these countries, often using middlemen, and got hold of the stamps in that way.

Postmen were also very helpful in this direction. For cash and kind words they detached the stamps from foreign letters and passed them on to the collectors. This was done quite commonly at the end of the fifties and beginning of the sixties, and no-one objected to it. In other cases the postman told collectors who the people were who got letters from distant lands.

If collectors got to know in this way about any stamps they did not yet possess, they began to search for them.

Thus, not school children alone but adults also became collectors, though the latter were no better informed than the children on everything relating to stamps, and there was the difference that adults were ashamed to acknowledge their passion openly, and often pretended they were only collecting for their children.

It is characteristically very exceptional for the female sex to be interested in stamp collecting, a phenomenon which has remained constant down to the present day.

Whilst the adults did their collecting at home, disowned their hobby when it came up in conversation for fear of being laughed at, and moreover did not attempt to trade amongst themselves, schoolboys collected openly in and out of school.

The result was that the young people soon knew more about stamps than the adults.

Page 14

One would have one stamp, another one would have one value, another a different value of the same series. They exchanged amongst themselves, and so were frequently able to build up a whole set.

Thus developed one of the most important means to collecting - exchange. Anyone who had duplicates turned them to good account for exchanges. Successes in this direction acted as a stimulus to further collecting, and the procuring of duplicates.

Boys who were well off soon began to buy stamps from their not-so-rich companions, with the natural result they soon out-did the latter and quickly made up larger collections for themselves. Thus, the trade in philately began.

When home sources had been exhausted, some of the quicker minds had the idea of getting their elders, relations and friends to ask any acquaintances who lived abroad to send them stamps, and this often met with success.

People living in big ports where letters came in from foreign countries were in special demand. They could hardly avoid the many requests for stamps, but were able to supply many unknown ones, especially as they themselves were able to get hold of the stamps for nothing.

Another step that now followed was to get someone living in a foreign country to buy stamps at a post office there and send them on. If this was not practicable, or was likely to be too expensive, it was possible to find out and report on what types of stamp existed there.

In this way the study of postage stamps gradually developed further and further.

However, as I mentioned earlier, such important signs of difference such as watermarks, perforations, variations in paper, etc., were not taken into account, although this was not the case without exception.

A few, especially adult collectors, who were better observers began quite early to take notice of the perforations, differences in shade, etc.

Towards the end of the fifties - earlier in England and France - a new factor appeared which gave the greatest boost to philately apart from the literature which will be dealt with in the next section. This was the stamp trade.

Individual collectors who either had a great number of duplicates or were giving up collecting tried putting their stamps up for sale, stuck to sheets of paper, in newspaper shops or tobacconists.

The word soon spread amongst the schoolboys that this or that shop had postage stamps for sale.

The stock would sell out in a trice, and the shopkeeper would try always to have a reasonable supply on hand.

Thus, it was again the schoolboys who founded the trade in postage stamps.

This suited the shopkeepers, and they urged their suppliers to let them have still more stamps.

Page 15

However, this did not go on for long and the agents became dealers, who bought stamps and sold them at their own price.

To get hold of the necessary supplies, they quite often turned up at schools and other places where schoolboys collected to barter their stamps, and bought up the boys' treasures.

Thus, towards the end of the fifties Hamburg had a formal stamp market, held at a certain place in the open air, where the schoolboys carried out their stamp exchanges.

Something similar appears to have existed even earlier in Paris.

As far as Austria is concerned, collecting did go on to any noteworthy extent during the period we are dealing with, only in Vienna.

The other countries of Europe, Spain, Italy and Russia were not seized by the collecting fever until later.

Stamp collecting was as yet almost unknown in the Orient.

However, it flowered in the United States of America earlier than in Germany.

There was a club, called the Omnibus Club, in America as early as 1856, where collectors of all kinds could get together, and which included stamp collectors amongst its members*¹.

Although knowledge of postage stamps was defective, there were still a few serious collectors who achieved noteworthy results even in this first period. One of the most outstanding collections of this time in Germany was that of Theodor Israel².

The wider public had a negative attitude towards this new branch of collecting.

It was thought of as right for children, although voices were raised against it even in this case because of the activities of the stamp dealers, but adult collectors were laughed to scorn.

Nevertheless, the belles-lettres journals of both France and Germany quite often published articles dealing with postage stamps. They even included illustrations, though generally of a kind to provoke severe criticism.

For example, Weber's illustrierte Zeitung, N°1014 of 1862, published a very striking article on Collecting postage stamps, and the fashion magazine Der Bazar included an illustrated account of all the postage stamps of the world over the years 1862, 1863, and 1864, etc.

*¹ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Grossmann, IX, 187.

*² Moschkau's Magazin, 1871, 11.

Page 16

In Germany, stamp collecting was concentrated in the cities of Leipzig and Hamburg.

In the former city, the stamp trade was taken up by the medals and antiquities firm of Zschiesche & Köder, and this was for a long time the biggest, most important and best known business of the kind in Germany.

However the beginning of the stamp trade was accompanied by the sprouting of what must still be looked on today as the sworn enemy of philately - the scandal of forgery.

The large demand for and contrasting small supply of the better stamps, the fact that there was very little knowledge of stamps and that by far the greatest amount of collecting was done by children, who were neither capable of carrying out critical tests nor as a rule aware of the possibility of fraud, all these make it only too obvious why unscrupulous individuals were able to impose on ignorant and trusting people by making what were often wretched copies of stamps from discontinued issues, and offering their customers these worthless little pictures even though at trivial prices.

The trade was extensive.

Thousand of sheets of these miserable forgeries were sent to newsagents in all small towns, displayed by them and quickly snapped up.

For example, one very well respected firm in Hamburg, that of J. H. Behrmann, sent bulk imitations of even the simplest stamps, such as those of Hamburg itself, Tuscany, Hanover, etc. out into the world.

This trade flourished for years without being detected. Who should have done this?

The great majority of collectors simply did not realize that they were carefully incorporating out-and-out forgeries into their collections. There was no literature at the time. Public opinion had no way of making its voice heard. There was nowhere for tests to be carried out.

And finally, reporting the forgers or dealers in forgeries to the authorities would have led to no result, since at that time there was no law in Germany that imposed penalties for forging stamps no longer in current issue.

However, most of the agents were dealing in good faith, since although they dealt in stamps they knew nothing much about them, and so had no idea they were only selling forgeries.

Thus, the harm done by forgeries spread in an alarming manner.

When knowledge began to spread after some years as a result of the flowering of philatelic literature, collections assembled during this period were subjected to tests, with the crushing result that nine-tenths of all stamps on average were found to be forgeries.

However, there was a certain amount of consolation in the fact that not a lot of money had been sacrificed in building up these collections.

Page 17

We must not think in terms of today's stamp prices. In these days - and right to the close of this period - there were only about 1200 different postage stamps which, not excluding even the rarest, only ranged in price between 1 silver groschen and 2 Thalers (equal to 6 Marks¹).

Stamps which are looked on today as great rarities could be obtained then for ½-1 Thaler.

This becomes understandable when we consider that in those days most collectors had only a low purchasing power and were only looking for the cheapest stamps. The dearer ones were out of their reach, so that even some rare stamps were not in much demand, whereas the cheaper ones were simply not available in the quantities desired, and were thus forged on a large scale. The serious adult collector had nowhere at all to go for instruction. He had only one way of extending his knowledge - correspondence with other collectors in distant countries.

There was however one considerable obstacle to that in those days, namely the high cost of postage.

For example, Austria at that time still used a zone system. The postal charges rose according to the distance a letter had to travel and on top of that, according to its weight. A simple letter in the lowest weight range cost 15 Kreuzer to Germany. Postcards did not exist then.

Postage overseas was far higher still, since the blessing of the Universal Postal Union did not yet exist.

Stamps were mainly collected in the used state, envelopes and wrappers usually as cut-outs. Even the rarest countries were sacrificed to the scissors then.

Reprints were not known, with the simple exception of the United States, which put out a reprint of its 1853 issue of envelopes as early as 1861*. This shows how very advanced they already were at that time.

Collecting in this period may be summed up in the following way:

Large-scale, enthusiastic unsystematic collecting, mainly by younger people without scientific grounding, total lack of all literary aids.

The author has dealt with this period of collecting in detail, for the reason that the number of people belonging to this epoch of Philately is really very small, and sooner or later there will be none of them left to give information on the basis of their own experiences.

1. Translator's note: At that time the Mark was equal to 1 shilling (5p).

* Lietzow: Das Schwarze Buch der Philatelie. [The Black Book of Philately.]

THE PERIOD FROM 1862/63 - 1878/80

The success obtained by the first attempts to establish a normal trade in postage stamps gave a powerful impetus to this new branch of commerce.

Firms devoted partially or exclusively to the trade in stamps appeared in all the larger cities of Europe.

To name just a few of them:

Maury in Paris; J. B. Moens in Brussels; Stafford Smith & Smith in Bath; Young & Stockall and George Richardson in Liverpool; R. Johnstone in Glasgow; Theophilus Creber & Co. in Davenport; E. Clarke (later Clarke & Rawl) in London; D. H. Roodhuyzen in Amsterdam; F. A. de Reus in Haarlem; J. Dubois in Paris; M. E. Möller in Copenhagen; Hugh Campbell in Liverpool; D. Dean & Co. in Manchester; W. Lincoln in London; H. Meyer in St. Petersburg; J. Rehwoldt in Lubeck; J. B. Hay & Co. and J. F. Reining in Athens; Isaac King in New York; M. J. O. Merd in Hobart Town, Tasmania; Gustav Spehr in Wismar; etc.

Companies were also set up to manage the stamp trade, such as the joint-stock London, Provincial, Colonial and Continental Stamps Co., with a share capital of 500 pounds sterling, whose treasurer was Dr. C. W. Viner^{*1}, or the Excelsior Stamp Association, Post Office, St. John, New Brunswick^{*2}, etc.

On the other hand, dealers on commission appeared in the smaller towns.

However, there was still a lack of literary aids for the collector.

Finally, in the years 1862-63, the first catalogues for collectors appeared in Germany, France and England successively.

The urgency of the need they met is proved by the runaway sales they achieved: they practically all achieved eight, nine or more editions within a few years.

Their format was originally very defective - some contained hardly any text, but they were improved and extended from one edition to the next.

As for the album industry, the English were surpassed in this respect by the French and Germans, which had the result that both German and French albums were translated into English, and even a Dutch album - by Van Rinsum of Amsterdam - was published in several languages.

Editor's notes

^{*1} This was a proposal only and the Company never came into being.

^{*2} This was the trading name of Craig, an early stamp dealer, chosen to make his business sound far grander than it was.

Page 19

In Germany, G. Wuttig published the first collector's catalogue in the year 1862. It was followed in the same year by that of F. Ludwig and in 1864 by those of Calvary and Richard Claudius, and in 1869 by Alwin Zschiesche and so on.

The best French collector's catalogues are those of Lallier, Paris 1863, Moens, Brussels 1863, Maury, Mahé, etc.

Of the English albums we should mention those of Oppen in London, Stafford Smith & Co. in Brighton, Stanley Gibbons & Co. in Plymouth, etc. Of the American, those by J. Beifeld in Chicago, J. W. Scott & Co. in New York, W. H. Hill & Co. in Boston, D. Appleton & Co. in New York, and many others.

Thus, the first steps were taken into the fields of literature.

Most of these collectors' catalogues listed the stamps that had appeared in every country and gave a short description of them. The young collector at least knew now which countries had started to issue postage stamps, and what had appeared in the way of stamps. But nothing more.

These albums gave no information on the value of individual stamps, their greater or lesser rarity, the period over which they had been issued and many other questions of importance for the collector.

However, this want also was soon supplied. Individual dealers did send out price lists, some lithographed and some printed, initially to customers, but in the year 1862 detailed descriptive catalogues which also contained prices of individual stamps appeared in England, France and North America. Germany followed in 1863.

The catalogues of F. Booty, Mount Brown, Dr. Gray appeared in England. Those of Poitiquet, Laplante, Maury, Mahé, etc. in France.

As far as Germany is concerned, it has hitherto been assumed that Zschiesche & Köder published the first catalogue in Leipzig in the year 1863.

Quite recently the author of this book discovered an apparently previously unknown catalogue from Tramburgs Erben of Hamburg. It was published at the beginning of 1863 at the latest, but more probably at the end of 1862*, and in this case must be looked on as the first German Catalogue.

In the same year (1863) the firm of Dürr Buchhandlung in Leipzig published a catalogue for stamp collectors, and the catalogues of Leopold Priebatsch, C. Beyfuss and G. Wuttig appeared in Breslau, Hanover and Leipzig respectively.

In the United States, the catalogue of A. C. Kline appeared in Philadelphia in 1862, that of Craig & Melvin in St. John, New Brunswick in 1865, McLachlan & Co., Montreal 1865, Frederic H. King, Boston 1867, Fr. Trifet, Boston 1867, J. W. Scott & Co., New York 1868, and many others.

* See Postwerthzeichenkunde, II, 11.

Page 20

Over this period Italy had only the two catalogues from G. Brecker, Florence, 1864 and P. R. Torres, Leghorn, 1873.

A more scientific treatment of postage stamps could be found in the above-mentioned catalogue from Dürr Buchhandlung; in the Guide de l'Amateur de Timbre-Poste, [Stamp Collector's Guide] Baillieu, Paris 1863, and especially in the handbook from Wwe. Berger - Levrault & Son, Strasburg, 1864.

The English have the credit of publishing the first stamp magazine.

If we ignore The monthly Intelligencer, published in Birmingham by MacMillan in October 1862, which was not purely a philatelic journal though mainly devoted to philately, the first stamp journal was The Stamp Collector's Review and Monthly Advertiser, published by Ed. Moore & Co. in London. The first number appeared on the 15th December 1862, but only nineteen numbers appeared in all, up to June 1864.

This was followed in January 1863 by The Stamp Collector's Magazine, from Stafford Smith & Smith, later A. Smith & Co., in Bath and London and in December 1866 by The Philatelist, from Stafford Smith & Co. in Brighton. These two are the best specialized English journals of this period, and both existed for a considerable span of years.

French language journals appearing in France and Belgium were: Le Timbre Poste, from J. B. Moens in Brussels in January 1863 - the only philatelic periodical that has appeared without interruption to the present day and which must be looked on as the most important scientific journal - Le Timbrophile, from Pierre Mahé in Paris on the 15th November 1864, which ceased to appear however in 1871, and Le Collectionneur de Timbre-Poste from A. Maury in Paris. The first issue of this appeared on the 15th July 1864, but it only appeared regularly until the 1st January 1867.

During this period, both in England and France, a whole series of magazines appeared that were simple mayflies so to speak, with an ephemeral existence that does not warrant a mention here.

The most abundant periodical literature is that of America, though only a few journals have had a prolonged life.

The first journal appeared in Albany in December 1864 under the title The Stamp Collector's Record. Although this survived until October 1876, only 44 issues appeared.

It was followed by The Monthly Coin and Stamp Collector's Magazine, from Mason & Co. of Philadelphia, in 63 numbers from April 1867 to March 1871; The American Stamp Mercury from Fr. Trifet of Boston in 39 issues from October 1867 to March 1871; The American Journal of Philately from J. W. Scott & Co. of New York in 156 numbers from March 1868 to December 1878; and many more, most of them ephemeral.

Of all other countries, the only ones that issued magazines in this period were Italy, Spain, Holland and Denmark.

Page 21

The Nordisk Frimaerke Tidende appeared in Copenhagen, Denmark in 1867 and in 1876 the Skandinavisk Frimærke Tidende and Frimærke Journal: in Spain, a single issue of El Indicador de los Sellos, Madrid, on the 15th July 1870, followed on the 15th February 1871 by El Coleccionista de Sellos in 4 numbers. Holland had the English-language The Continental Philatelic Magazine, in 8 numbers from February 1869 to January 1870, and the Dutch-Language Die Timbrophilist in 13 numbers from 1869 to 1870. Both were published by Cornelius van Rinsum in Amsterdam. La Posta Mondiale was issued in Leghorn, Italy in August 1873, and the Guida Illustrata del Timbrofilo in Bologna in 1876.

Germany followed the example of the English and French as early as 1863, when Zschiesche & Köder of Leipzig brought out the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler on the 1st of May 1863. This was the favourite of the German collectors' magazine until the 1st April 1867, when it ceased publication.

This was followed on the 1st January 1864 by the Börsenblatt für Briefmarkenhandel from Wilhelm Reichel & Co. in Kaufbeuren, and then on the 1st July 1864 by its successor, the Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung, published by Ernst Roschlau in Coburg. G. Bauschke published Der Briefmarkensammler in Leipzig from 1870 to 1871, and Die Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung in Dresden until 1873. Das Magazin für Briefmarkensammler was published by Moschkau in Oybin bei Zittau in Saxony in 1871; the Allgemeine Briefmarken-Anzeiger by F. W. Rademacher in Hamburg on the 1st October 1871; the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal by H. Werninck & Co., later by Louis Senf in Leipzig from the 1st January 1874; and the Union in Dresden in 1877. The value and importance of all these in the history of German philatelic literature will be discussed in more detail in Part II of this work.

The following appeared in Austria during this period: Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler by Bauschke, Aussig, 1869, in 6 numbers; Friedmann's Philatelistische Berichte in Vienna, 1872-1877; and the Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung by Sigmund Friedl, Vienna, 1876.

It will be seen that the beginning of the sixties brought a real flood of philatelic literature of all kinds to the collector. There were albums, catalogues, handbooks and journals a plenty.

Not all of their contents were gold, but nevertheless the handbooks and journals in particular did give the collector a good deal of information. The journals especially, tried to keep their readers up to date on all the new issues, and used illustrations for this purpose.

Thus, collecting began to follow the path of science.

It was particularly important to keep the collector on the alert for forgeries. People began to investigate the genuineness of every stamp and to reject any doubtful ones.

Moreover, the magazines helped to promote trade between individuals.

Collectors got to know of one another, and made contact. A vigorous system of exchange and a lively comparison of ideas soon developed.

Page 22

The stamp trade now became capable of smoothing the way. Dealers inserted adverts of what they had for sale and the price, and the collector was then in a position to pick out what he wanted, whereas before he hardly knew where to get hold of any particular stamp.

It soon became obvious how many serious collectors there were, since the magazines did not have to complain about the lack of contributors.

Of course, there is the difficulty that in the early years of philatelic literature, the authors of periodical articles were not named. Thus, the Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, the Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel and the Briefmarkensammler from Bauschke had an extensive list of contributors, but only the last one allowed its articles to be signed.

Even Alexander Treichel, one of the most prolific and outstanding writers of this period, hid himself behind a cipher (Yo) known only to the initiated. There was probably some fear of being known openly as an adherent of stamp collecting, and thus becoming an object of scorn to non-collectors.

The general public first began to take a more favourable view of the study of postage stamps when society activities began to flourish and stamp exhibitions were arranged, and more especially when individual philatelists began to publish articles in daily papers and literary magazines describing the scope of philately. This development belongs more to the third period, however.

For all that, people from all walks of life right up to the highest positions in the state, including kings and princes, were found to have taken up stamp collecting.

However, collecting did not lose ground amongst school children either. English periodicals, for instance, often carried adverts for agents to sell in schools and colleges*¹.

Collecting first began in Vienna at the Academy of Commerce, after small Leipzig albums had appeared in a stationer's shop*², and had become so popular by the beginning of the 1863/64 school year that stamp dealing was forbidden in all schools.

The stamp trade went on continually developing. In the year 1864 there were already three stamp exchanges, in Kaufbeuren, Frankfurt and Braunschweig.

As early as the end of 1864 an address book of European dealers was published by Christian Mann Jr. in Leipzig.

The prices of postage stamps were still very moderate. At the end of 1866 a complete collection could still be put together for about 500 thalers*³.

The price of one pound sterling (= twelve Austrian gulden) for the stamps of New Caledonia was looked on as enormous*⁴.

*¹ Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, III, 28.

*² Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel, 8.

*³ Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, IV, 41.

*⁴ Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung, Roschlau, Coburg, 8.

Page 23

An essential step forward in collecting was taken when people began to collect uncut entires, and to study the watermarks and perforations.

In the case of watermarks, those important means of differentiating between postage stamps, a report on these was published as early as the year 1865 by Dr. Magnus of Paris in the magazine Le Timbrophile. This was published as an independent monograph in 1867 under the title Essay on Watermarks and the Papers used in the Manufacture of Postage Stamps.

In the year 1871, Dr. Alfred Moschkau wrote a little book on the same subject, Watermarks on the Postage Stamps and Entires Issued Since 1818. This was published by C. E. Dietze of Dresden.

However, whilst the knowledge of postage stamps was progressing, forgeries were not standing still. Imitations became steadily better, steadily more refined. As a result, an aversion to collecting unused stamps grew up, moreover the forgers discovered that faulty areas on their productions could be hidden by means of a cancellation.

Thus, they began to forge cancellations as well, thus giving the forgeries a trustworthy appearance. Finally, they turned their attention to the watermark itself. One of the first watermarks to be forged was that of the very rare Tuscan three lire of 1860.

Indeed, people did not shrink from offering forgeries for sale openly under the name of Facsimiles*¹.

On the other hand, dealers who did not know how to distinguish forgeries from the originals would sell the forgeries in entirely good faith with a guarantee of their authenticity*².

The following swindle was carried out by some young people in Hamburg in 1869. They took the names of firms, had circulars printed in which stamps were offered for sale extremely cheaply, and sent them out. Since they were under age, no proceedings could be taken against them and they were allowed to go free*².

Thus, was it any wonder that people tried to protect themselves against forgeries?

Dr. Alfred Moschkau, whose name is for ever inseparably connected with philately, was the first person willing to check the genuineness of stamps for nothing*³.

This first German stamp testing service was soon in so much demand that the old maestro of philately in Germany could not meet all the requests made to him*⁴!

At the instance of the author of this book, a general German testing service was set up in 1877, and still exists today*⁵.

*¹ Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, II, 21 & 22.

*² Heidelberger Bazar, 4.

*³ Moschkau's Magazin, 1871, 4.

*⁴ Allgemeiner Anzeiger 9, supplement to the Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journal, IV, 41.

*⁵ Wiener Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung II, 18, 19 & 22.

However, collectors themselves took action against the forgers.

As early as 1869, at the December meeting of the South German Philatelic Society in Heidelberg a motion for a defensive and offensive alliance against forgeries was proposed and accepted. This alliance was constituted as the International Union for the Suppression of Anti-Philatelic Elements*¹.

It should be noted that even at the beginning of the sixties, books against forgeries were published abroad, e.g. Forged Stamps how to Detect Them by Thornton Lewes & Edward Pemberton, Edinburgh, 1863. How to Detect Forged Stamps by Thomas Dalston, Gateshead, 1865, and others, all of which gave an exact description of all forgeries and speculative stamps. However, they did not achieve their object, since newer and better forgeries were always bobbing up.

A very unfavourable, but luckily only transitory, effect on philately was exerted by the civil war between Austria and Germany in 1866 and the Franco-German campaign of 1870-71.

Events on the battlefield absorbed the general interest, particularly in the belligerent nations, to the point where no-one had interest or attention for anything else. Also too, the security of commerce was to some extent endangered, and many valuable collections were lost*².

The stamp magazines for 1866 bemoan a gap in their reports of new issues, brought about by conditions*³.

Things were still worse during the campaign of 1870/71.

Leading periodicals such as Bauschke's *Der Briefmarkensammler filled their columns, for lack of philatelic material, with such articles as A few notes on military science; Rumania; Travel notes from Salzburg; The Sutro Tunnel and Ems and Wilhelmshohe, which went on for several issues.

A few societies suspended their activities*⁴.

On the other hand, an event that took place in the year 1869 gave a fresh impetus to philately.

On the 1st October 1869, Austria introduced the postcard, which has risen since then to be one of the favourite means of correspondence.

This innovation quickly found the widest acceptance all over the globe, and several million are now used every day.

Its convenient form, and the artistic, indeed often luxurious way it is produced in various countries have rapidly made the postcard one of the favourite objects for collection.

*¹ Heidelberg Bazar, 6 & 9.

*² Stamp Collector's Magazine, July 1866.

*³ Der Briefmarkensammler. Bauschke II, 11.

*⁴ Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, I, 8.

Page 25

Their generally lower postage cost also makes it possible for the less well-off collector to collect them. Unfortunately they too usually underwent the scissors, since the collecting of entires, to which postcards belong, in the uncut state, only made its way very slowly.

Even when stamp collecting had increased to the point that in Vienna for example, the post office had to take on extra staff simply on account of this trade*¹, overseas commerce was only able to develop very slowly.

There was a lack of understanding of foreign philatelic literature, and it is thus understandable that European collectors lacked the addresses of overseas dealers and collectors.

As a result, two thalers could be asked for and paid for passing on the address of a single American stamp firm*².

Even for the address of one English dealer 40 pfennigs had to be paid, and on top of that the purchaser had to undertake not to pass it on to anyone else. For a further ten pfennigs, he could have the right to sell it to another person, but again not for less than forty pfennigs *³. This was the address of Alfred Smith & Company.

At the beginning of the seventies, larger stamp firms began to employ travellers, who travelled throughout Germany*⁴.

However, the lack of European connections made itself felt in America as well. Dealers there were particularly interested in buying large collections in Germany so as to get hold of German stamps that were in demand but which they did not know how to get hold of otherwise.

Thus, many German collections migrated to North America in this period, and found a ready market there*⁵.

One institution which greatly furthered the trade in stamps, but which never met with quite the same acceptance in Europe, was the stamp auction, whose introduction was due to the Americans.

On the 28th May 1870, the first stamps to go on auction were sold by William Leavitt in North America.

Within two hours an entire parcel of 270 items was sold, and the proceeds amounted to 477 dollars (= about 200 marks).

Later, J. W. Scott of New York in particular, helped to build up this institution.

-
- *¹ Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel, 1.
 - *² Borsenblatt fur den Briefmarkenhandel, 2.
 - *³ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Grossmann, VIII, 174.
 - *⁴ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Rademacher, III, 36.
 - *⁵ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Rademacher, II, 15.

Page 26

We have him to thank that, whereas in the period dealt with here there were only one or two such auctions during the season, there are now two or three a month*¹.

A catalogue was drawn up for every collection to be auctioned, and many hundreds of examples, in attractive formats, were sent out even as far as Europe. To date, J. W. Scott alone has held roughly 120 auctions and put out catalogues for all of them.

From America, this institution was transplanted to Europe, and since then auctions have been held in England, Holland, and most recently in Germany.

The lay public has also begun to take a more benevolent view of philately, since even famous periodicals now and then publish learned articles on this new subject.

Amongst others, the Magazin Pittoresque of Paris published in the year 1864 a very learned article on the history of the stamps from the Swiss cantonal and federal posts, including everything of interest on essays, imitations, cancellations etc. This article was followed by similar ones on the history of the Austrian, Rumanian, Turkish and Greek postage stamps, and on the stamps of the Ionian islands, the Italian States and Malta. Illustrations were given even of the essays. A magazine called Post issued in Vienna for the postal service began to open its columns to philately from issue number 20, of the 15th October 1865.

In Payne's Unterhaltungs-Blatt Fur Jedermann philately was described as The paper numismatics of the XIX century, a clever play on words which clearly recognised the relationship between numismatics and philately.

Stamp collecting now found its way into various European countries. It first began in Russia on the introduction of the district [Zemstvo] posts*². These were set up separately as early as the second half of the sixties, but general permission to introduce them was only given by the Decree of the 3rd September 1876*³. There was still nobody collecting in Croatia in 1867*⁴.

Even in South Germany there were very few stamp lovers in the year 1873, because the market had been flooded with forgeries whilst the prices of the genuine stamps were exorbitant*⁵.

There was an absolute interregnum for magazines in Germany in the year 1873, since during the second half of this year only a single philatelic journal appeared, namely the Briefmarkenanzeiger, published by Rademacher in Hamburg. Even Alexander Treichel, that untiring writer, was compelled to place his pen at the disposal of French magazines.

Austria too had only one magazine at that time, Friedmann's Philatelistische Berichte.

*¹ Record and Review, November 1891.

*² Der Philatelist, I, 10.

*³ Lubkert: Handbook of the Postage Stamps of the Rural Posts in Russia., Vienna, 1882.

*⁴ Union, I, 7.

*⁵ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Rademacher, III, 39.

Page 27

On the 1st January 1874, a new philatelic journal Illustrierte Briefmarken Journal entered the philatelic arena. It was published by H. Werninck & Co. in Leipzig, and was later taken over by the firm of Senf Brothers, who raised it to be the leading technical journal, and still publish it.

Thus began a new lease of life for philately in Germany. The first action performed by Dr. Alfred Moschkau, Alexander Treichel and R. J. Albrecht, the editors of the new journal, was to offer a prize for the most outstanding History of Philately.

Another powerful factor that began to influence the development of philately during this period was the society system.

Here again, it was England which went in front with good examples. The first known association of philatelists was founded in Bridlington at the end of 1865, under the name of: The Bridlington Amateur Association, since the members collected coins, autographs, etc. as well as stamps. They issued their own society journal: The British Continental and American Stamp, Coin, Crest, Autograph and General Curiosity Collections Magazine, which however soon ceased to appear. In 1864 there was a meeting of collectors to discuss founding a society in Paris, but it does not appear that one was in fact started*¹.

This was followed on the 1st May 1866 by The Excelsior Stamp Association in St. John, New Brunswick, which also issued a magazine, The Postman's Knock.

The Philatelic Society was founded in New York in February 1868, and another society with the same title was founded in London on the 10th April 1869, These had the leading philatelists of America and England respectively amongst their members.

Philatelic societies were also started about this time in Paris under the leadership of Dr. Magnus, and in Heidelberg in August 1869, but neither is still in existence. The latter had the title the South German Philatelist's Society and was a casualty of the disturbed war years of 1870/71. A Society of German Philatelists also existed in Zittau in 1871.

Dr. Moschkau, was also creatively active in this field, and on the 10th May 1871 he joined with Alexander Treichel and Dr. Arldt to set up a North German Philatelist's Society with its headquarters in Dresden, though again this only lasted for a few years. In the same year, on the 24th November 1871 to be accurate, Louis May founded the Philatelic Magazine Readers' Circle in Hamburg, and on the 1st October 1872 this became the Hamburg Philatelists' Club, of which the author became an honorary member in the year 1874.

In the year 1873 Friedmann in Vienna issued a proposal for the foundation of a Viennese philatelic society, but he only got thirty applications for membership in all (4 from Vienna, 6 from the province and 20 from Germany), so he abandoned the idea*².

On the other hand, this year saw the foundation of the Stamp Club in Bremerhafen (November) and the Social Philatelic Club in Leghorn (October).

*¹ Der deutsche Briefmarkensammler; Spiro Bros, Hamburg 1864/5, No. 3

*¹ Friedmann's philatelistische Mittheilungen, 24.

Page 28

During the year 1874, the Philatelistica club was founded in Brunn, and the First Hungarian Philatelic Society in Pest, and then in due course came philatelic societies in Schleusingen, Schwelm, Kiel, Breslau (1st April 1876), Berlin (1st January 1877), Cothen (17th February 1877), Leipzig (1876), Berne (1877), and many others.

In Vienna too, the Society for the Friends of Postage Stamps managed to come into existence on the 28th December 1875, though its existence proved to be only short.

On the other hand, this period saw the foundation of two of the most important present-day societies, namely the Société Française de Timbrologie, in Paris in December 1874, and the Internationalen Philatelisten-Vereins in Dresden on the 1st January 1877.

The large number of these societies that sprang up within a relatively short time indicates that there were already a considerable number of serious collectors at this period.

The advantages that the societies offered to their members were immediately obvious. A lively interchange of ideas increased everyone's store of knowledge. What one person did not know or understand, the next person did. Albums of forgeries were made up, member's stamps were checked, libraries started, members participated in magazines, etc.

However, the societies, with the exceptions of the big ones in Paris, London and New York, had not developed any deeper scientific aims in this period. The reasons are probably defective organization combined with the fact that at this time societies were still too much concerned with collecting and too little with the study of postage stamps.

This is particularly true of the German societies, which brought to light no scientific results worth mentioning during this period, whereas the Société Française de Timbrologie of Paris, for example, published its Bulletins, describing the scientific work of the Society, from 1874 onwards.

The Dresden International Union of Philately was better organized, and so has risen to be the most important in Germany, but its consolidation comes within the third period of time and a discussion of its activities must be held over for the next section.

However, it would be a serious mistake to look back to this period in the light of the advances made by philately in the third period, and conclude it is less important for our study.

Quite the contrary. Philately was built up in the period 1862-1880, and everything that came later was merely the finishing touches applied to a structure whose walls were erected during this period.

Just as the explorers who during the last decades travelled the length and breadth of Africa by immense exertions, at the perpetual risk of their lives and under privations of all sorts, to discover its mountains and rivers and open up its treasures to us, certainly deserve much greater honour than their future descendents who drive the first railway through these territories or open the first mine. So the men who during this period hacked out the philatelic path along which our present-day authorities are progressing deserve our thanks and recognition for all time.

Page 29

What care, what diligence, indeed what courage did it take to draw up the first handbook or the first catalogue, or send the first magazine out into the world. However the men who did this had the satisfaction that is felt by all who bring a stone to the building, and in this way it was possible for Pemberton to bring out his famous handbook as early as 1874, Moens to draw up the later editions of his great catalogue, and for Moschkau and Friedl in this period and Paul Lietzow and Ferdinand Meyer at the beginning of the next to produce their handbooks.

However, the centre of gravity of philatelic literature in this period lay in the periodicals. The wealth of knowledge they contain can only be appreciated by those with an intimate knowledge of the literature of this period.

We need only take up the last years of Le Timbrophile, The Philatelist, Stamp Collector's Magazine, Timbre-Post, Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, etc. to be astonished that so many ideas which now seem new had already been expressed, and that so many of the discoveries paraded today were already known twenty or more years ago.

How many of the most interesting research results can we not find in the Bulletins of the Société Française de Timbrologie of Paris.

Also too, so many valuable monographs saw the light of day during this period.

I have already mentioned some of them, like those on watermarks by Dr. Legrand (under the pseudonym Dr. Magnus), and Dr. Moschkau, and those on forgeries by Lewis and Pemberton & Dalston. Some others may be mentioned here, namely: Dr. Magnus' Stamps of Moldavia and Rumania, Brussels, 1869; The Rural Postage-Stamps of Russia by Count S. Kaprowski, Brussels, 1875; James Lesley Local American Stamps, Brussels, 1868; Valette The Collector's Notebook, Paris, 1862, Leitzow The Black Book of Philately, Berlin, 1879, and many more. Also, some of the famous monographs by J. B. Moens in Brussels, for example The Stamps of Naples and Sicily fall within this period.

Particular importance attaches to the way in which the handbooks developed, and one may claim with reason, that philately would never have become what it is today had it not been for the men who tirelessly cultivated this branch of the philatelic literature in particular, and sought not only to make the handbooks increasingly more practical but also to keep their contents in line step by step with the results of philatelic research.

As far as Germany goes, the men concerned were Wuttig, the founder, Bauschke, the reformer^{*1}, and Alwin Zschiesche.

With all their advantages, the handbooks had one serious drawback however, namely that they were soon out of date. From the year 1861, on the 21st December of which the first catalogue was published by Poitiquet of Paris^{*2}, to the close of this period the number of postage stamps rose from 1200 to more than 6000.

*1 Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Grossmann, VI, 115.

*2 Tiffany: The Philatelic Library, St. Louis, MO, 1874.

Page 30

This also goes a long way towards explaining why in the interval, people learned to look out for a number of small differences that had initially been ignored.

The difficulties of altering handbooks, keeping track of the stamps etc naturally led to attempts at an album that would never go out of date. Although this problem still awaits its solution, many attempts have been made in this direction during the period concerned.

Thus, there appeared in the year 1869 the Permanent Postage Album of Stafford Smith & Co. in Brighton and The Permanent Stamp Album, of Van Rinsum in Amsterdam, the latter being in four languages, English, French, German and Dutch. However, neither could really lay claim to the title "Permanent" since the mere introduction of supplementary sheets, either right at the end of the book or after each individual country prevents the album from being truly permanent.

Permanent albums were also issued in Germany and Austria, for both stamps in general and entires, but the approach was different in this case. All these albums consist of large quadrille sheets of without printing.

Albums like this were put out by Moschkau, Friedl, Friedmann and Alwin Zschiesche.

The men whose imperishable fame it is to have been most prominent in the construction of that edifice which we today speak of with pride as "Philately" are in England: Mount Brown, J. E. Gray, Wm. Lincoln, Edward Pemberton, Dr. Viner; in France: Bailleu, Justin Lallier, Dr. Legrand (Dr. Magnus), Pierre Mahé, A. Maury, Alfred Potiquet; in Belgium: J. B. Moens; in America: J. K. Tiffany, L. W. Durbin, Joseph Casey, W. L. Brown, J. W. Scott, S. A. Taylor, F. Trifet; in Germany: G. Bauschke (Pseudonym Schaubeck), Oscar Berger-Levrault, Dr. Alfred Moschkau, Alexander Treichel, G. Wuttig, Zschiesche & Köder, Alwin Zschiesche.

Collecting during this most important and meaningful period for philately may be characterized as follows: The extension of collecting to adults in all walks of life; systematic and scientific development of philately; beginning and development of philatelic literature; founding of societies.

And so we reach the third and last period.

THE PERIOD FROM 1878/80 TO THE PRESENT DAY

The philatelic periodical literature has formed a bond between all philatelists and has brought the collectors of all lands closer together.

What then could be more natural than the idea of having local meetings, to promote the common interest by a face-to-face exchange of ideas, settle differences and discuss dubious questions. This line of thought was put forward in the year 1877 in the Dresden-based philatelic paper Union, which suggested holding a general philatelic congress in Paris in the year 1878. This suggestion met with approbation in France, Dr. Legrand put it before the Société Française de Timbrologie in Paris, and the programme for the Congress was soon drawn up.

There had in fact been small congresses of collectors earlier than this, e.g. on the 14th July 1872 in Lubeck, in 1876 in Berlin and also in Dresden and Hamburg, but these were not of a serious nature.

The Congress was opened on the 20th June 1878, and the main meetings took place on the 24th, 25th and 26th July.

Although the actual attendance remained below expectations, there were still a great number of outstanding papers, of them we may mention Evans: Notes on the Stamps of Mauritius, Dr. Legrand: The Locally Engraved Stamps of Mauritius, Pardo de Figueroa: Philately and the Post, H. Schmidt de Wilde: The Last Issue of Cards from Rumania, Usigli: The Filigree Paper used in the Sardinian Stamps of 1819, A. Maury: The Stamps of New Caledonia, Coster: The Semi-Official or Provisional Stamps from the United States of America, Daniel Cooper: The Stamps of Hawaii, Diego de la Clave: On the Stamps of the Sociedad del Timbre, Dr. Kloss: Prussian Covers with the Embossed Portrait of Friedrich Wilhelm IV, Ph. de Bosredon: Stamps in Relation to the Pictures they Bear, etc.

Moreover, many interesting questions of detail were settled during the sittings, the last of which took place on the 25th September 1878.

The Congress finally set up a Publications Committee, to deal with its proceedings, and the first volume of these became available in September 1879.

Merely the circumstance that we have the Congress to thank for a number of excellent papers is enough to ensure it a place in the history of philately, and it is simply not justifiable to pour scorn on it as certain people have done because of its alleged paucity of results. The real point was not to get a large number of philatelists together in Paris - anyone who expected this was deceiving himself - but to stimulate the greatest authorities amongst philatelists to scientific activity by means of the Congress.

However, the Congress had yet another result which had a good effect on the progress of philately, and this was the prize offered by the Société Française de Timbrologie in Paris for the most outstanding work in the philatelic field. This was awarded annually from then on, and has been a powerful incentive to scientific study.

Page 32

As well as the Congress in Paris, there have been two other moments which have lent their impetus to the advances made by philately during this period.

The International Philatelic Society in Dresden was founded on the 1st January 1877, but achieved nothing of note in its earliest years. After a change on the 24th May 1880, it started its own Society Journal Der Philatelist. Its first number appeared on the 1st June 1880 and since then it has developed into one of the leading philatelic publications.

The Society itself continued to flourish more and more from year to year, thanks to its efficient organization and the abilities of its first secretary Dr. Kloss, so that today it has 40 sections with about 1500 members in all five continents of the world.

There is no mistaking that this Society has reached a dominant position in the collecting world, and that it exerts a productive influence on all its members.

One need only follow its Society journal with attention for a few years to see the assiduity with which its members strive to promote the development of philately and to report anything of scientific value to the committee so that from there it can become the common property of all members.

It has produced a series of the most outstanding German writers on philately, such as our unforgettable Ferdinand Meyer, Dr. Paul Kloss, Otto Rommel and John Siewert amongst others.

It is indeed possible to level the not unjust reproach at the leaders of this Society that they impose too harsh a discipline, but the present position of the Society, on which they pride themselves, is due quite largely to their uniform and methodical approach.

Finally, a factor whose importance for the present direction of the study of postage stamps should not be overestimated, is the increasing development over roughly the last decade, of specialised collections. The author considers it amongst his merits that he was the first person in Germany to call attention to the importance of specialised collections*¹.

That is not to say that there were no specialised collectors before then, but generally speaking, specialised collections have only become common within the last decade.

One fundamental reason why so many collectors have turned to specialised studies is the great proliferation of postage stamps and the resulting reduced possibility of building up an even approximately complete collection. Not only has the number of countries issuing stamps, and thus the number of actual stamps, increased to a very large extent, but the task of detecting the most minute variations has compelled the bigger collectors to pay more attention to their collections and fill them with all those varieties.

This obviously entails great effort, and younger collectors have decided in favour of specialised collections right from the start.

*¹ Wiener Briefmarkenzeitung, 1880, I, N°6.

This brings us to a further complication - printing errors.

Stamps with misprints have existed since the middle of the 1850s. However, there was always a good explanation for them, and they only appeared as individual ones.

However, over roughly the last ten to fifteen years the supply of misprints on postage stamps has grown to such extent that one cannot resist the suspicion that some countries are deliberately raiding the collector's purse. One is led to this opinion by the fact that often no reason for the occurrence can be detected and in particular, that one and the same mistake can appear in a large number of obviously deliberate variations.

Moreover, some states have not limited themselves to this sort of speculation. The same ones have not been ashamed to produce practically entire issues especially for philatelists; even more, there are small states which do not think principally of what is needed, but simply issue postage stamps with the aim of making a profit from their sale to collectors.

Finally, in most recent times, the governments of certain South American nations, such as Nicaragua, San Salvador, etc. have made an agreement with the Hamilton Banknote Engraving and Printing Company of New York whereby this company will bring out new stamps without charge at specified brief intervals of time, in return, the Company takes the remainders to sell to collectors at the end of each period of issue.

All of these circumstances have led and still lead to an unnatural and therefore unhealthy increase in the number of postage stamps, which makes it understandable why the general collector is disappearing apace.

However, another reason for the increase in specialised collectors is the financial one.

Even in the middle of the 1870s, an approximately complete collection would have meant a considerable capital outlay. Today it would need a fortune. Collectors with ample, but not unlimited, means reckoned that by devoting these to a specialised collection they could build up something outstanding, whereas the same money would only give them a mediocre showing as general collectors. Hence they choose the first alternative.

If we now go on to consider that collecting over this period has increased largely within adult circles, with the fundamental assistance of the societies, whereas collecting amongst schoolboys was more or less unaltered, but had lost all importance for philately, and that it was the better-off people especially who took up philately, we can understand one of the leading characteristics of the epoch dealt with here - the enormous rise in price of rarities.

The specialised collector with ample funds at his disposal could devote his entire purchasing power to the acquisition of rarities. The supply lagged far behind the demand, and the nationwide economic consequence, greeted with joy and exploited with delight by the dealers, was a rapid increase in prices.

Another result was that in Germany, particularly favourite countries appeared to which collectors turned for preference. Whereas in Europe the stamps of overseas countries retreated to the background and everyone turned to collecting from Europe, German collectors showed local patriotism in devoting their specialised collections principally to the postage stamps of the German Federal States.

Page 34

The rare postage stamps of these states have not only reached exorbitant prices, they are practically unobtainable.

Even the wealthy collector can no longer hope to attain completion in this restricted specialised field.

The extent that can be reached by a specialised collection of a particular country, may be illustrated by the example of the collection of the stamps alone (no postal stationery) of Austro-Hungary (including Lombardy and Bosnia) built up by Eduard von Neulinger in Baden near Vienna. It includes about 16,000 varieties, and the same collector has a specialised collection of the stamps of Turkey which exceeds the first in variety.

The new direction which collecting began to take also found its expression in literature.

Every serious specialist collector was at the same time a more or less fortunate researcher, since he was only dealing with a relatively small number of stamps and could study them more thoroughly. Thus, an absolute flood of specialised catalogues and monographs appeared during this period of time.

A complete account of them is quite impossible here, and I can only mention the most outstanding.

In first place must come the specialised works by J. B. Moens on the stamps of Peru, Parma, Modena and the Roman Marches, Tuscany, the Papal States, Mauritius, Saxony, Luxemburg, the two Mecklenburgs, Thurn and Taxis, etc. Then come the works by Dr. Legrand on the stamps of Japan, by Pio Fabri on the stamps of the Papal States, by Ch. H. Coster on the local stamps of the United States, by Tiffany on the official stamps of the United States, the South American Philatelic Society, on the stamps of Peru, by Dr. Wonner on the stamps of the Republic of Uruguay, by W. E. V. Horner on the postmarked covers of the United States, by F. A. Philbrick & W. A. S. Westoby on the postage and telegraph stamps of Great Britain, the Philatelic Society, London on the stamps, covers, wrappers and postcards of the British Colonies in North America, The same Society on the stamps, covers, postcards, etc. of Tasmania, by Andrew Houison on the stamps of New South Wales, The Philatelic Society, London on the stamps, covers and postcards of Australia, O. H. Robert Brock on the Sydney stamps, Reuterskiöld on the cantonal stamps of Switzerland and their forgeries, etc.

A similar number of specialised works has appeared in Germany and Austria, and for reference to these see the history of German philatelic literature in Section II of this work, and the survey of this literature in Section III.

The album business was also influenced by the specialised collection trend, since albums appeared that were devoted either to individual parts of the world, or to individual countries in separate volumes, e.g. those by Carl Cl. Sauer of Mährisch-Ostrau.

All the same, the literature of this period did supply us with the largest general handbooks as well. Amongst them are in Germany the handbooks of Paul Lietzow in Berlin, A. Larisch in Munich (stamps only). W. Herrmann in Berlin (a new edition of Dr. Moschkau's catalogue), and what is called the Great Handbook by Teltz, later Lindenberg, now Baron von Vittinghof

Page 35

(called Schell), and J. H. Anheisser, in Austria*. The catalogues from Sigmund Friedl in Vienna, and the handbook of postage stamps only by Ferdinand Meyer in Franzensbad. In Belgium the Manual de Collectionneur de Timbre-Poste by J. B. Moens in Brussels, in France the catalogues by C. H. Roussin, Barbarin, etc. in England by Ridpath, Stanley Gibbons, etc. in Italy by Gavilli, in North America by J. W. Scott, Mekeel, Sterling, Seebeck, Bogert & Co., etc.

German collectors also began to pay particular attention to cancellations, and the study of this enjoys great popularity, which has already led to various monographs and journal articles.

The importance of this subject should not be underestimated, and the study of cancellations should become more widespread in the very near future.

Finally, pre-stamp items such as post-paid stamps, post-office receipts, land stamps, prepayment marks and the like are being taken within the scope of philatelic studies, although almost exclusively by German collectors.

As far as the periodical literature is concerned, this has increased enormously in extent during this period, though the number of really good journals has not increased in the same proportion.

England has only the following worthy of attention, all published in London: The Philatelic Record, The Stamp News, and Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal. The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain has appeared since February 1891.

When it comes to journals published in the French language, the first place belongs, as it has done for nearly thirty years, to Le Timbre-Poste published by J. B. Moens in Brussels.

Others worthy of attention are: L'Ami des Timbres by Ch. Roussin, and Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste by A. Maury, both published in Paris. Since the 1st January 1891 an exceptionally well edited journal Revue Philatélique Suisse has appeared in Geneva.

Italy and Spain have no journals worth mentioning, but the first-named has very recently made some progress in the direction of improved journal provision with the appearance of new magazines in Rome and Milan.

The Dutch have had a philatelic journal, Nederlandsch Tijdschrift, the organ of the Netherlands Society of Stamp Collectors, in Amsterdam. The Tidning for Frimaerksamelare has appeared in Stockholm since 1887.

On the 1st March 1881, the booksellers Steinberg & Wortmann of Bucharest issued a philatelic journal in the Rumanian language under the title Timbrophilo, however it came to an end with N°3 in November 1890, the Timbrufilul suddenly began to appear, as a continuation of the earlier one, thus it started with N°4.

* Translator's note: I think he means that this was edited in succession by Teltz, Lindenberg, and the Baron von Vittinghof, whose family name was Schell, then J. H. Anheisser.

Page 36

A second magazine in the Rumanian language, Corierul Marcilor Postale appeared in Pitesti on the 1st January 1891, but since then it has quietly faded away. Finally, a philatelic magazine Hermes has appeared in Greek and French in Athens since March 1891.

However abundant the periodical literature of Europe may be - that of Germany and Austria is dealt with under the history of German philatelic literature - it is far exceeded by that of the United States of America. This country, which for a long time has surpassed the old world in respect of many sports, has so far seen the appearance of over 400 philatelic journals, 300 of which fall within this period. Most of them are indeed ephemeral publications which frequently did not even manage to keep going for a single complete year, whilst many only managed to keep in existence for a single number, but there are some which are in no way inferior to the best European examples and have demonstrated vitality over a number of years. Such as The American Philatelist, Philadelphia; The American Journal of Philately, New York; The Philatelic Journal of America, St. Louis; The Metropolitan Philatelist, New-York; The Stamp Collector's Figaro, Chicago; The Quaker City Philatelist, Philadelphia; and others.

Single issues of some of these journals form complete volumes.

The periodical literature of British North America is also not insignificant. The most prominent journals are The Dominion Philatelist, Belleville and The Halifax Philatelist.

South America, on the other hand, has produced no outstanding journals apart from Guia del Coleccionista, by H. C. Eberhardt in Valparaiso, which however, ceased to appear after a creditable seven years of existence from 1878 to 1884.

In Australia, too, philatelic journals began to appear quite early, and in the year 1871 there were two in Sydney and one each in Melbourne and Victoria. The most important is Vindin's Philatelic Monthly of Sydney, which is now in its fifth year of life.

Since September 1891, Africa has been represented in the philatelic periodical literature by Timbrologie Egyptienne, appearing in Cairo, so that today Asia is the only part of the world in which no philatelic journal appears.

The total world periodical literature must thus amount today to some 900 different journals and 12-15,000 issues, a result which can hardly be matched by any other branch of collecting.

This period also saw the publication of a whole series of other philatelic works. textbooks, directories, calendars, yearbooks, lists of desiderata, etc, all testifying to the progress and expansion of philately.

If we now turn our attention to the scandal of forgeries, we see that nobody can stop these on his own. Abuses in printing and by suppliers of all kinds give forgers the most fruitful soil for their black business, and the high price of rarities makes their trade profitable. Hence, they do not shrink from high charges and produce the most artful forgeries. The collector has various means of combating this evil.

The first step was a considerable extension of checking facilities, i.e. special testing points were set up for the stamps of various countries that tended to be forged especially frequently and well, so that there was a need for an exact knowledge of all the types so that the originals could be distinguished from the forgeries, as with the Swiss cantonal stamps, for example. Moreover, the larger societies set up expert committees from their own resources.

Page 37

The magazines and society publications kept collectors up to date with the latest forgeries to appear. A society, The Philatelic Protection Association, was even formed in London, whose principal aim is to alert the collector to forgeries, and which puts out its own circulars on forgeries.

The Americans have produced a colour card, which enables the collector who owns it to check the exact shade a given stamp ought to be. Since getting just the right combination of colours is one of the greatest difficulties the forger has to overcome, this colour card offers a certain degree of protection against imitations.

Finally, photography has also been brought into the service of philately, since photogravure made it possible to reproduce all types of rarity so exactly that forgeries can be detected without difficulty by means of such a photograph.

However, all of these means do not make it possible to extirpate forgeries, especially as some are only available to the handful of larger collectors. The result has been that mistrust has taken possession of the collecting world, and this finds expression particularly when it comes to the acquisition of a rarity. Thus, thousands of the better stamps go backwards and forwards continually to the expert committees, and are only bought or exchanged when they have passed the test.

It should hardly need saying that not even this is completely reliable and there is a not insignificant amount of literature on the question of how far the expert committees should be held responsible for their own findings and what precautions should be taken against incorrect evaluations. It has been suggested several times that either the expert committee or the dealer who sells a stamp should put a symbol of guarantee on it, but this suggestion overlooked the fact that a forger who has forged a stamp - which is a small work of art - could also forge the guarantee symbol, and thus make the degree of uncertainty still greater.

The level of suspicion about rarities has been considerably increased by the frequency of subsequent reprints of postage stamps, and the lack of a reference work on all reprints that have appeared to date, and how they differ from the originals.

For some reason, certain states have tried to make a profit by agreeing to take reprints from the plates of superseded stamps, at the request of collectors or dealers and for a payment. Obviously, these will differ from the originals, even if only slightly, as regards paper or colour or perforation, etc.

Thus the collector is exposed to the further risk of getting a reprint instead of the original. A large number of philatelists consider these to be worthless, and they are in any event much less valuable.

Today there are several reprints available of certain postage stamps, and they do not differ only from the original, but also from each other, so that they are referred to as the I, II, III, IV, new impression and so on, and as a rule each new impression becomes steadily less valuable.

Page 38

Things become even worse when an individual succeeds in getting hold of original plates by legal or illegal means. Conformity with the original printing is then not sought for, but as good a print as possible is taken. If the plate gets damaged, it can easily be repaired, and reprinting goes on as before.

These reprints are then taken over by the forger, who knows that collectors mistrust unused stamps and are on the lookout for this sort of reprint. He provides them with forged cancellations, and thus gives them the appearance of used originals. Thus, in return for his good money the collector not only gets a reprint instead of an original, but a falsified reprint at that.

These are the conditions that prevail in philately today, and they cannot be completely avoided by buying postage stamps only from solid and reliable firms, since even the most experienced dealer may happen to get duped.

Attempts have been made within the last few years to overcome these abuses by collecting stamps on entire letters or even parts of letters, but this alone cannot be looked on as a radical solution. In the first place this type of collecting is much more costly, since there are not enough objects to meet the demand and the prices of such stamps are considerably higher. Moreover, this again provides no sure guarantee, since the forgers have learned to imitate letters and parts of letters as well, and people will be more easily defrauded if the forged letter is suitable for exchange.

As far as collecting is concerned, the conclusion seems to have been reached that progress along this road is hardly possible.

People do not only collect the slightest conceivable variations in a postage stamp, whether intentional or accidental, or the smallest break in one letter of the printed text on a postcard, or such things as the control numbers on the stamps of Great Britain, the imprint of the postal region on the stamps of Mexico, plus all possible print variations of these, etc. Major collectors go so far as to collect all the variations in type of the rarer stamps, and do not give up till they have got all the types, so that they could be used to reproduce the sheet of stamps as it came from the plate.

Obviously this is only made possible by the most penetrating studies and researches on every individual postage stamp.

Another consequence is that a single country will take up a number of issues of the big Lindenberg handbook, and that J. B. Moens of Brussels published in 1891 a special 564 page large octavo volume, at a price of 20 francs, that was devoted solely to the postage stamps of Spain (Histoire des Timbres-Poste d'Espagne). Yet another result is that what today is called a large collection, containing several used and unused examples of every not-so-great rarity and all its nuances and varieties, will represent a value of 500,000 francs and even more. And there are many of that sort of collection.

The dimensions assumed by collecting, both qualitatively and quantitatively have also been developed in the stamp trade. There are dealers today whose business takes up a whole building - usually their own - within whose rooms more than a dozen assistants are working, and whose stock of stamps is valued in hundreds of thousands of francs or marks. Some of them travel all over Europe to purchase rarities, whilst dealers come from America to Europe to acquire scarce European stamps. However, even common items find their buyers, and it is not rare for a single firm to want five million or more ordinary postage stamps.

Page 39

Trade between dealers, and between dealers and collectors, is carried on today by various large advertising papers, which carry advertisements either exclusively or in great part, e.g. L'Echo de la Timbrologie in Paris, L'Annonce Timbrologique in Liege (Lüttich), the Generalanzeiger der Philatelie in Hemer, Westphalia, etc. Some of the larger dealers, especially the English ones such as Stanley Gibbons in London, Whitfield, King & Company in Ipswich, etc. issue their catalogues and price lists periodically, often even monthly, a practice which seems to be growing and which has also been taken up very recently by dealers in the Orient.

As an example of the amount of business that can often be done by firms in out-of-the-way places, we will quote the firm of Carl & Nicklas Benzinger of Einsiedeln in Switzerland. In the year 1878 they procured stamps to a value of 39,869 francs from the Post Office there for sale to collectors and dealers.*¹

It has frequently happened that dealers have bought up the entire stock of a new issue the moment it appeared, so that the Post Office people were embarrassed when the general public came in to buy stamps.

It is an everyday thing for state administrations to dispose of the remainders of withdrawn postage stamps to dealers, often for a large sum. For example, Georg Zechmeier of Nuremberg bought in the remainders of the Bavarian Kreutzer stamps for several thousand marks. The Swiss Post Office has even put its remainders openly up for sale.*²

During this period philately has spread to all the civilized countries of the Earth, so that it is no longer a stranger anywhere. A catalogue published by D. Cudovsky of Kiev appeared in Russia in the year 1888, listing the rural stamps of that country, and in 1889 there appeared an album and a catalogue by J. Krewing of St. Petersburg on the zemstvo stamps, both in the Russian language. A stamp album in Swedish by H. Lichtenstein & F. W. Andréén appeared in Stockholm in the year 1891. Finally the same year brought us a product of Japanese philatelic literature - albums in the Japanese language.*³

Practically, the greatest advance over this period of time is the development of societies. Philatelic societies have sprouted like mushrooms all over the developed world. The most numerous have been those in Germany. I have already spoken of the International Philatelic Society in Dresden as being by far the largest and most important of the philatelic societies in Germany. The next biggest German societies are: The Bavarian Philatelic Society in Munich, founded on the 20th March 1883 with approximately 350 members; the Society for Philately in Frankfurt-am-Main, founded on the 6th June 1878 with about 250 members; The Württemberg Philatelic Society in Stuttgart, founded on the 24th June 1882 with some 230 members; the Philatelic Union of Mid-Germany at Gossnitz, founded on the 28th December 1889 with about 200 members; the Philatelia society of Brunswick with more than 150 members; then the societies in Berlin, Strasburg, Magdeburg, Lubeck, Hamburg, etc.

*¹ Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, 1879, N°180.

*² Schweizer Illustrierte Briefmarkenzeitung, V, 11; and Philatelist, VIII, 9.

*³ Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung, IV, 2.

Page 40

The Bavarian Philatelic Society published a society journal of its own, Postwerthzeichen, and the Brunswick Philatelia society put out a magazine with the same name up to the start of 1891. The Verein für Freunde der Briefmarkenkunde in Lubeck, which started up again in 1881, has put out a society news sheet monthly since 1886, as has the Berliner Philatelistenclub since 1888, and the Elberfelder Verein für den Tauschverkehr since 1890.

When it comes to Austria, Vienna has the most important society in the Oesterreichischen Philatelistenclub, which was brought into being in the year 1885 by the amalgamation of the Wiener Philatelistenclub founded on the 25th April 1880, and the Briefmarkensammler-Centralvereins, founded on the 27th July 1881.

The Wiener Philatelistenclub was the first German society to publish a magazine of its own. This was its Mittheilungen, whose first issue appeared in lithographed form on the 19th August 1882. It is still the organ of the Oesterreichischen Philatelistenclub today.

Other big societies are: The German Society for Philately of Prague, founded on the 31st August 1885 - a Czech Society appeared there at the same time, the Erste Ungarische Briefmarkensammlerverein in Budapest founded in 1884, and the Innerösterreichische Philatelistenclub of Graz, of which the author is an honorary member.

It should be noted that a society existed in Zagreb as early as the year 1877*¹.

Certain towns, such as Berlin, Vienna, Dresden, Munich, Brunswick, Prague, etc. have several philatelic societies. There were five of them in Dresden by the year 1880*².

Societies of the same type also arose in the other countries of Europe, principally in England, France, Holland, Denmark and Switzerland, throughout America and in Australia. Sections of the International Philatelic Society of Dresden have been set up in Africa (Alexandria) and Asia (Sunda Isles, Teheran).

Other German societies also have overseas sections, such as the Bavarian Philatelic Society in Santos and Rio de Janeiro, Philatelia of Brunswick in Santos and Rosario de Santa Fe in Argentina.

The dealers also got together, and to protect their own interests they founded the Internationale Postwerthzeichen-Händler-Verein in Berlin in 1885. The German societies have also formed themselves into a Union, especially to supply protection against swindles of all kinds, which are an almost permanent feature of philately to an extent scarcely found in any other branch of collecting. This union has the title Schutz- und Trutz-Bündniss (Offensive and defensive alliance).

This short history of philately cannot begin to list all the hundreds of philatelic societies that were founded in this period. What has been said should be enough to give a general picture of the expansion of philately. Just a few of the societies of America and Australia will be given here, to show the popularity that philately has gained in these parts of the world as well. I will mention in this connection the Sociedad Filatelica Sudamericana of Lima, the Verein Deutscher Briefmarkensammler of Valparaiso, the Philatelic Society of New Zealand in Wellington, the Stamp Collectors' Union of Chicago, The Philatelic Society of Staten Island, The Philatelic Society of Australia, in Sydney, the Sociedad Filatelica of Uruguay the St Louis Philatelic Society, the New Jersey Philatelic Society, the Club Filatelico Argentino in Buenos Aires, the Quaker Philatelic Society, the Sociedad Filatelica de Santo Domingo, the American Philatelic Association, the Philatelic Society of Melbourne, the National Philatelic Society of New York, the Sociedad Filatelica Mexicana, the Club Filatelico of Porto Alegre.

*¹ Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, V, 60.

*² Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Grossmann, X, 205.

Page 41

It cannot be denied that the majority of these societies are more of the nature of social clubs that may also offer a few financial benefits, such as expertising stamps free of charge, facilitating the exchange and purchase of stamps, arranging contributions to one or other of the journals, and providing a philatelic library, that is generally little regarded or used. There are however, a large number of societies that direct their efforts towards more serious scientific activity.

To this group belong in particular the Société Française de Timbrologie in Paris, the Philatelic Society in London, the three large societies in New York and St. Louis, the Philatelic Society of Australia, the Internationale Philatelisten-Verein in Dresden, the Bayerische Philatelisten-Verein in Munich, the Oesterreichische Philatelistenclub in Vienna, the Berliner Philatelistenclub and certain others.

In all these societies the meetings are devoted to study in the first place. The material for the Society journals is read out and developed, lectures are given, new issues displayed, examined and confirmed, collections exhibited, literary productions obtained and discussed, etc.

The societies are indispensable in the present state of philately, and few serious collectors will be found today who do not belong to one or another of them.

The trend of the times is especially favourable towards societies, since there has hardly been an epoch like the present in which the society movement has flourished in all spheres of human activity.

Other products of this urge for people who have a common interest to get together for co-operative activity are philatelic congresses, philatelic days and circulating assemblies. Mention has already been made of the Philatelic Congress in Paris, and the resulting assembly of stamp collectors. It should be mentioned in this connection that the Lubeck philatelists held a second congress in Wolfenbüttel in the year 1873.

On the 5th September 1880 a conference of Silesian stamp lovers took place in Breslau. However, that was the end of the preliminary conferences. Sigmund Friedl and Heinrich Koch did raise the idea again during 1884 in the magazines they published, Weltpost and Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung, but they did not find fertile soil. Not until Ludwig Fisher gave fresh expression to the suggestion in N°5 of the Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journals of 1889 did the Verein für Briefmarkenkunde at Mainz decide to call a philatelic conference in Mainz at the prompting of its first secretary Hans Wagner, and this conference was then held on the 18th August of the same year (1889). 14 societies and various philatelists not belonging to a society took part, and passed a resolution to hold a German philatelic conference every year in the future. This resolution has been adhered to: the second conference was held on the 9th and 10th August 1890 in Frankfurt-am-Main, and the third in Dresden on the 20th to 22nd June 1891, whereas the 1892 one is envisaged for Prague. There were 19 societies at the second conference, and as many as 34 at the third.

Page 42

Unfortunately, the expectations originally aroused by these meetings of collectors have been fulfilled only to a very limited extent, probably due mainly to the fact that most of the papers submitted to the Committee did not by their very nature enable generally valid conclusions to be drawn.

This example was also followed by the Swiss societies, who held a delegate conference in Berne on the 26th October 1890.

The International Philatelic Society also instituted migratory conferences, the first of which took place in Prague on the 28th to 30th September 1889, and the second in Leipzig on the 14th to 16th June 1890.

In line with the establishment of a more scientific basis for philately, a trend also became visible towards removing prejudices against it from the lay mind, and giving the wider public an idea of its methods and scope.

The pen was not sufficient here. Scattered articles on philately were published in political and belles-lettres magazines, but were only seen by a relative handful of people and even then added little to their understanding. Moreover, lectures which were held here and there for lay people on this subject failed to reach wider circles. The prejudice that persisted against philately sprang from its very nature, and arose from the fact that most people only saw schoolboys collecting stamps, and therefore looked on it simply as a hobby which could not be taken seriously as a concern for adults. The attitude was too deeply rooted to be removed by a few articles in magazines, and lectures.

The idea was thus conceived of opening peoples' eyes by means of an exhibition. Philately had grown up, and this fact needed to be demonstrated.

The first stamp exhibition was organized by Dr. Alfred Moschkau, who in April 1870 exhibited in Dresden the large collection he had acquired from Post Controller Martin Trauwitz, and which he had increased from 3,100 to 6,000 items an extraordinarily large number for the time. The exhibition was on behalf of subordinate officials of the Field Post. Dr Moschkau was a pioneer in this field, and we recognise his name again as being the driving force behind all philatelic activity at this time.

The next exhibition was organized by S. F. Friedmann in Vienna in 1873. Another took place in Berlin in July 1877 when Paul Lietzow showed his comprehensive collection of 6,200 postage stamps in six large albums for the benefit of the wounded of the Russian Army.

These two exhibitions, both devoted entirely to showing single collections were followed on the 13th to 20th November 1881 by that of the Vienna Philatelists' Club, and on the 7th and 8th January 1882 by that of the International Philatelic Society in Dresden, in which a large number of exhibitors took part. An exhibition in Montevideo followed in the Summer of 1882, then one in Stuttgart on the 13th February 1883, arranged by the Wurttemberg Philatelic Society. On the 6th April 1884 there was one in Ulm, organized by the local branch of the Wurttemberg Philatelic Society, and in October 1884 one in Munich under the aegis of the Bavarian Philatelic Society.

Page 43

This was followed by the exhibition of the Ersten Vereinigung Vaterländischer Briefmarkensammler in Budapest on the 27th January 1886, and a partial exhibition on the 24th November 1886, one by the Wurttemberg Philatelic Society in Stuttgart on the 22nd January 1887, by a Committee of Philatelists on the 1st May 1887 in Antwerp, by the International Philatelic Society to celebrate the tenth anniversary of its founding, on the 30th May 1887 in Dresden, by the Brunswick society of stamp collectors from the 11th to 14th April 1888 on behalf of flood victims, and finally, the International Stamp Museum at Unter-Döbling near Vienna held an exhibition over the period from the 3rd June to 15th September 1888 to celebrate forty years of the reign of Emperor Franz Josef I of Austria.

The year 1889 brought three exhibitions, in New York, Amsterdam and Munich. The first was opened on the 11th March in the Eden Museum, and the three large societies, the Brooklyn Philatelic Club, the National Philatelic Society and the Staten Island Philatelic Society co-operated to exhibit a large collection which exceeded anything attempted before in terms of quantity and originality. The second, which was organized by the Niederländische Verein von Briefmarkensammlern took place in Amsterdam on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd April, and the third, organized by the Bavarian Philatelic Society, took place over the period 29th September to 8th October.

In the year 1890 the postage stamp celebrated the 50th anniversary of its introduction (6th May 1840). Could anybody be surprised that the entire philatelic world decided to celebrate this as a festival? Could anyone celebrate the greatness of the human mind better than by bringing the triumphal progress enjoyed by this insignificant slip of paper over the last half century through all countries and regions of the globe, and the development of the studies consecrated to it, before the eyes of those who previously had no idea of them, and only enjoyed the benefits of this discovery without having thought any more about it.

The round of Jubilee exhibitions was started on the 21st March by the St. Gall Philatelic Club. Next came the 1st International Postage Stamp Exhibition, by the Austrian Philatelic Club in Vienna from the 29th April to the 4th May. On the day this exhibition closed in the Royal and Imperial Museum for Art and Industry in Vienna, an exhibition was opened in Magdeburg by the local Philatelic Society, and this went on till the 11th May.

The concluding one was the exhibition staged from the 19th to 26th May by the Philatelic Society in London.

The exhibitions in London and Vienna were the biggest stamp exhibitions that had been seen to date. Both were international, and both afforded a general survey of philatelic science.

It was of great importance for this study that the first was opened by a Prince of the Royal House, the Duke of Edinburgh, and the second by the Austrian Minister for Trade, the Marquis von Bacquehem, who had become its patron with the agreement of the Administration. It also had the honour of a visit from the Emperor.

If we now go on to say that the State Postal Museum in Berlin itself possesses a large collection of postage stamps, and that our most outstanding philatelist, Judge C. Lindenberg of Berlin has been entrusted with the task of arranging, cataloguing and administering it, we shall indeed prove that philately has won acceptance not only from the general public, but also from national authorities the reward of more than thirty years of diligent work.

Page 44

Postage stamps have also featured for a long time as items in general exhibitions. Thus, they appeared at the International Exhibitions in London 1862, Paris 1867, Vienna 1873, Philadelphia 1876, Brussels 1880, Amsterdam 1883, and Paris 1889, and at the following special exhibitions; the Saxon Exhibition of Art, Science and Industry for the young in Dresden 1877, the International Paper Industry Exhibition in Berlin 1878, the Exhibition of Antique Art and Historical Relics in Grosswardein 1878, The Industrial Exhibition on Heraldry in Berlin 1882, the Bavarian State Exhibition in Nuremberg 1882, The Craft and Industry Exhibition of the Berne Council in 1882, The Zurich Exhibition of 1883, and so on.

Finally, it should also be mentioned that there are permanent exhibitions of postage stamps, such as Sigmund Friedl's International Postage Stamp Museum at Unter-Döbling in Vienna, and the one run by E. Petritz in Dresden-Striesen. Moreover, as had already been mentioned, collections of postage stamps are on display at the State Postal Museum in Berlin, at the Hotel des Monnaies (The Paris mint), and at various other postal headquarters. Extremely generous gifts, representing a considerable value, have elevated Friedl's museum to a philatelic sight of the first rank and by the donors' intention it should remain available in perpetuity to philatelists. It contains amongst other things James Chalmers' first specimen postage stamps of the year 1834 - a well-nigh priceless historical treasure.

These exhibitions, along with the incessant development of philatelic literature and the flourishing state of Society activities, could not fail to have their effect on young collectors. So, in recent years we have seen a phenomenon completely new to philately - schoolboy societies. Young people felt the desire to study, and with their usual tendency to imitate adults began to form their own societies, as they found themselves excluded from the adult ones.

One of the first of these societies was founded on the 22nd May 1884 by three junior philatelists under the title Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Sondershausen, this society, which still exists today, gives such an impressive picture of concord and unselfishness that it could act as a shining example for many adult societies, and deserves a brief description.

At the end of 1886 it changed its name to Philatelia, Verein Junger Philatelisten, and in January 1887, it set up a committee to investigate the question Is it suitable from a philatelic standpoint to develop specialised collections, what should they contain, and how should one proceed with their development. At its third anniversary meeting on the 22nd May 1887, a duplicated report and pamphlet on the above question were issued.

By April 1887 the junior society of the Deutsche Philatelisten-Verein at Halle and the Verein Jüngerer Philatelisten in Berne had been added as Sections.

As the Halle Society already had more members than the mother society in Sondershausen, the latter in a noteworthy display of unselfishness, agreed in September 1887 to transfer leadership to the society in Halle and itself retreated to being a Section. The society in Halle then assumed the title Philatelia, Internationaler Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Halle am Saar.

Later, the existence of this new main society was threatened by various unfortunate circumstances, and the Sondershausen Section came to its rescue in the most unselfish possible manner so that their united strength was able to keep the society going, and even to publish a society magazine, Philatelia. Later, when the young philatelists realised that the society had gained a large number of adult members, they resigned themselves to leaving it, so that the young collectors' society became one for adult collectors.

Page 45

On the 15th December 1888 the Halle Society came to an agreement with the Verein für Briefmarkenkunde in Brunswick by which leadership passed to the latter, which then adopted the title Philatelia, Verein für Briefmarkenkunde in Braunschweig, under which it still flourishes.

In the year 1885 a Philatelisten-Verein für Jüngere Sammler appeared in Weimar, then on the 19th November 1887 the Kieler Gymnasial-Briefmarkensammler-Verein; on the 19th October 1888 the Philatelia society in Zittau, and on the 1st April 1889 the Molhusia society in Mühlhausen in Thuringia.

In 1889 the Zittau society issued a duplicated journal, Union.

Whereas all these societies soon folded up, the Sammler-Verein Bruchsal, founded on the 12th February 1890, has proved to have much more vitality. It still exists today under the altered title of the Philatelisten-Schüler-Verein Bruchsal, and already had 103 members by the 22nd May 1891, with a Berlin branch founded on the 17th August 1890, another in Mühlhausen, founded on the 1st June 1890, a Dorpat branch started on the 28th October 1890, Inowrazlaw started on the 1st May 1891, and the Kosmos branch in Prague.

It initially put out a hectographed society journal Der Sammler, of which however, only a single number appeared, then from the 15th April to September 1891, the Mittheilungen aus dem Philatelisten-Schüler-Verein Bruchsal which is still appearing. The Kosmos branch in Prague has also issued its Vereinsmittheilungen since the 15th August 1891.

The Berlin section declared itself independent on the 1st January 1891.

The Mercur Stamp Club was set up in Mühlhausen on the 1st September 1890, and on the 31st January 1891 it put out a hectographed society journal Nachrichten aus dem Briefmarkenclub Mercur, of which however, only the one number exists.

Finally, on the 1st January, 1891 the Internationale Postwerthzeichensammler-Verein "Globus" came into being in Berlin, and by the end of the year 1891 it already had 120 members with sections in Vienna, Arnheim and Heilbronn. It has published society records in hectographic form using the title Globus and a printed journal is planned for next year (1892).

The future of philately rests with the young collectors' societies, and the fact that some of them manage to go on existing appears to afford a reasonable hope that a stream of qualified future philatelists will emerge from them.

So far we have dealt predominantly with the collection of official postage stamps, but it remains to give a brief account of the collection of private postage stamps.

The collection of private postage stamps has always remained strictly limited, but it is not much younger than the collection of the official stamps. North America had private stamps as early as the 1840s, and they existed in Germany also, by the 1860s. These, along with the rural stamps of Russia, which are not really private stamps, the local stamps of Norway, Denmark and Sweden, and the private stamps of Great Britain, etc., have been collected for a long time, and in Germany especially, there has been a significant increase in this branch of collecting since the year 1886.

Page 46

In that year, a private post was set up in Heidelberg in connection with the celebrations of the 400th anniversary of the foundation of the local university, and since then, this example has been copied by many German cities, so that there has been an enormous increase in private German stamps. This increase has been so sudden and extensive that it does not seem unjust to think that a great part of it has been created more with an eye to the collector than for any legitimate postal reason.

One also often hears it asserted that some forwarding offices in small places are set up merely because of the stamps.

However, the fact remains that private stamps, because of their often very original designs and their relative cheapness, have not only found a public, but found one that is increasing from day to day.

It is obvious that business would have taken up this branch of collecting. Albums, catalogues, periodicals, etc. have appeared, so that this branch of collecting is on the right path to acquiring a literature of its own within a very short time. The principal figures in this direction are A. E. Glasewald in Gossnitz, Hans Wagner in Mainz, O. Sattler in Brunswick, F. Wagner in Apelern, etc.

Since the year 1888 there have also been German societies for collecting private postage stamps in Mainz, Bayreuth, Gossnitz, Berlin, etc.

F. Wagner of Apelern and Counsellor von Schimmelpfennig both took part in the 1st International Postage Stamp Exhibition in Vienna in 1890; the former showed 1,040 sheets containing 21,438 German private postage stamps, forms and proofs, and the latter a collection of 8,000 German private stamps and about 500 proofs and essays. Mention should also be made of Dr. F. Mallmann of Vienna, one of the leading collectors of stamps from the American Express Company; whose collection also formed one of the highlights of the jubilee exhibition in Vienna in the year 1890.

Before we conclude this third period, and with it the history of philately, we must refer to another event of great importance to philately, which has caused no little sensation throughout the collecting world.

Up to the year 1881, nobody doubted that we owed the invention of the postage stamp to the reformer of the English postal system Rowland Hill, who introduced the penny postal system to England, who could have thought otherwise, when every philatelic journal or dictionary made the same statement. Albums, magazines, catalogues, etc. all carried his picture in grateful remembrance of the man who, by inventing the postage stamp, became the indirect founder of philately and to cast any doubts on this apparently historically established fact would have provoked merely a pitying laugh.

Who could have had any grounds or reason for looking into the correctness of this assumption. If everything taught in school had first to be checked for correctness, if every fact reported in history books had to be accepted only after a rigorous investigation of the sources, there would simply be no human knowledge, which must necessarily be built up on the work of other researchers.

Page 47

Then all at once, in the year 1881, a hitherto totally unknown man, Patrick Chalmers of Wimbledon, published a pamphlet which he entitled The Adhesive Postage Stamp. A Fresh Chapter in the History of Postage Reform. In it, he claimed that his dead father James Chalmers, a bookseller of Dundee in Scotland and not Rowland Hill had invented the postage stamp. The philatelic world was stunned, but adopted a waiting position. Most did not take the thing seriously, but all looked on Patrick Chalmers' assertions as impossible.

However, as he continued to turn out pamphlet after pamphlet, and leaflet after leaflet, sending innumerable copies all over the world, an opponent appeared in the shape of Pearson Hill, the son of Rowland Hill, and as a war of words developed between the two men, people in the philatelic world began to take the whole thing more seriously and give it more attention.

Meanwhile Patrick Chalmers, thanks to his unflagging zeal in defence of the alleged claims of his father, managed to convince various non-philatelic circles of the truth of his assertions. Articles appeared in various English, French, etc. magazines in which James Chalmers was recognised as the inventor of the postage stamp.

Patrick Chalmers brought all these articles to the attention of the philatelic press by means of a constant flow of pamphlets, and managed to convince a large part of the collecting world of the justice of his claims.

In Germany especially Patrick Chalmers found an advocate for his views as warm as he was gifted and untiring, in the person of Lieutenant-Colonel of Dragoons Carl von Gündel of Baden-by-Vienna, who attempted to demonstrate the validity of Chalmers' claims in a series of articles based on the most thorough research and led by the most ardent conviction, that appeared in almost all the philatelic journals in the German language. And if today the majority of German philatelists accept James Chalmers as the inventor of the adhesive postage stamp - non-adhesive ones demonstrably existed much earlier, this is due to his efforts rather than to the pamphlets by Chalmers, which were mostly in English and therefore to be understood by only a relatively few German collectors. The earnest advocacy of von Gündel for Chalmers' claims must thus be thanked for the fact that, for example, the 11th edition of Schwaneberger's international stamp collector's handbook carries on its first page a portrait of James Chalmers, "the inventor of the postage stamp", and that a number of philatelic journals are now adorned with his portrait alongside that of Rowland Hill.

However, there is still a considerable number of collectors who regard Patrick Chalmers' claims with scepticism.

Certainly, to reach any definite conclusion on this controversial matter would involve at the very least an exhaustive study of the polemical writings on both sides, and not many philatelists have either the time or the inclination for this.

However, it must weigh very strongly in favour of Patrick Chalmers' claim that a person so highly cultivated as Lt.-Col. von Gündel, who is moreover fully conversant with English, has come out so warmly in favour of James Chalmers after mature consideration of the whole affair, and has kept to this opinion for several years in face of Pearson Hill's emanations.

It should be pointed out that this is not a matter of overturning something that had been more or less proved earlier. Rowland Hill was not taken to be the inventor of the adhesive postage stamp because there was any proof of this fact, but because everyone naturally assumed without enquiring any further that Hill, who introduced the postage stamp, was also the inventor of this means of franking, and no claims were made to the contrary.

Page 48

However, one good result for philately did arise from the Chalmers-Hill controversy, namely that other assumptions of the same kind were tested for their historical accuracy. A special branch of philately, historical-critical studies, has developed, and has found its most distinguished representative Carl von Gündel.

In fact, the adherents of this branch of study have already managed to detect and correct many errors which had crept into philately. More details can be found in the history of German philatelic literature.

The character borne by our subject in its present 3rd stage may be summed up as follows:

Scientific development of philately. Extension of specialised collecting. Maximum development of literature. Historical studies.

We have thus come to an end of the history of the development of stamp collecting. Anyone who has followed with attention must be compelled to adopt the view that we are dealing here with one of the most interesting phenomena of our time.

Although the study of postage stamps is not directly or indirectly of any great practical value, there are still hundreds of thousands of people all over the world who have invested millions in their collections and also devoted the greatest time and trouble to them.

Within the time-span of 30 years, a literature has grown up that will fill whole libraries, an industry has arisen and a commerce developed to which thousands of people owe their livelihood.

Has any other hobby taken on these dimensions? Philately must cast an indescribable and powerful spell which ensnares and enmeshes everyone from children to old people.

What will the future of philately be?

Involuntarily our eyes now turn to the future. Who can answer this question? Our young people are the guarantee that the next generation of philatelists will be there.

However, nothing on Earth lasts for ever, one discovery supplants another. The better takes the place of the good, so the time will and must come when there are no more postage stamps, and thus no more philately, and the great collections of the future will come to rest in museums, as a living proof of the colossal results that the urge of mankind towards collecting and studying can have, even in a sphere so immaterial to the well being of humanity but so satisfying to the heart.

Future generations may look on our hobby as just a curious whim of the human spirit, but they could never dispute that it is sound at heart, and capable of refining mind and spirit in a way that hardly anything else could.

PART 2

THE HISTORY OF GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE

INTRODUCTION

It has already been mentioned in connection with the history of philately, that stamp collecting had been going on for years, not only in England and France, but also in Germany and Austria, and had become widely popular before the collector had any sort of literary aid at his disposal, apart from a price list from one dealer or another.

As soon as industry began to take notice of this hobby, the first literary products connected with it began to appear.

These took the form of collectors' handbook/albums. These were started by the industrious French, who realised early that stamp collecting could only be directed into regular channels and become an object of commerce when collectors knew what was available for the them to collect and had a suitable object to keep them in. Thus, stamp albums existed in France as early as 1861.

The Germans followed this example in 1862, when the first small stamp albums appeared in Leipzig. Their publisher is not known, but stamp collecting in Germany was centred on Leipzig and Hamburg at that time.

Partly because philately was then in a primitive stage of development, and partly because stamp collecting was, at least on the surface, only a schoolboys' pastime, the make-up of these books, which were christened "stamp albums", or "postage stamp albums", was also very primitive.

Even the later very famous Wuttig Album, published by the bookseller G. Wuttig in Leipzig in the year 1862 consisted at first only of loose sheets divided into sections and made up in the style of a register.

However, this primitive aid found such a ready market, that a second edition followed in the year 1863, with another five in the same year.

Each edition represented an improvement. Even the second appeared in book form, and contained a short description of the existing postage stamps. In the meantime, competition appeared. Friedrich Ludwig compiled an album which Friedrich Loewe published in Leipzig. In the year 1863 the publishing house of Calvary & Co. in Berlin, and in 1864 the Dürr bookshop in Leipzig came forward with an album compiled by R. Claudius.

In Halberstadt too, W. Eims issued an album. An album by an anonymous author and publisher also appeared in Berlin.

To sum up, the market was inundated with albums. However, whilst most of the others sooner or later faded from the scene, the one by G. Wuttig retained its hold as the favourite of the collecting world, since the publisher paid close attention to both the contents and the format.

Page 50

With the 9th edition it passed into the ownership of G. Bauschke, who issued it in two languages - German and French - from the 10th edition. The 15th edition was published in three languages - German, French and English - by the Literarischen Museums in Leipzig in 1868. With the 18th edition, it passed into the ownership of J. Kümmel, and with the 20th, into that of Louis Senf, who gave it the title of International Stamp Album and published it in four languages - German, French, English and Spanish.

Meanwhile, a need began to be felt for an album, which unlike the earlier ones, would not be out of date within a few years. Apart from the waste of money that this entailed, there was the further drawback that transferring a collection from one album to another was very time-consuming, and that during such a transfer more or less of the stamps would be damaged or even completely ruined.

Hence, the last-named firm converted the album into a permanent one from the 21st edition, so far as one can really speak of a permanent album.

At the same time it was divided into two sections (volumes), the first was for stamps alone, the second for covers, postcards, postal notes, and postal wrappers.

The permanence of the first volume was ensured by leaving a number of grooves at the back into which supplements could be inserted and that of the second volume by using a format which prevented its becoming too bulky and made possible the inclusion of supplementary sheets.

The publisher tried to keep in step with the progress of philately, to adapt to the text of the best handbooks, and to produce it in a luxurious form inside and out.

Of the other albums mentioned, the only one still going is that of R. Claudius, which was taken over by Alwin Zschiesche in 1869, and still ranks as one of the foremost albums today.

It would be quite impractical to give here the history of each individual album, and so we must restrict ourselves to discussing only the most outstanding representatives of this type of literature.

The 12th edition of the album by A. Zschiesche mentioned above, appeared in the year 1891.

Alwin Zschiesche was also the first, in 1879, to divide his album into two volumes (stamps and entires).

In 1870, G. Schaubek (a pseudonym for Bauschke), in 1874 Dr. Alfred Moschkau and in 1879 H. Schwaneberger (of the publishers Grimm & Trömmel, Leipzig) came before the public with a new album. The first-named, which was later transferred to R. Senf (later Senf Brothers) of Leipzig, reached its 13th edition in 1891, and the last-named its 11th edition in the same year.

Both the Senf Brothers and H. Schwaneberger made a fresh concession to the world of collectors in the year 1889, and met their wishes by dropping the section for entires and putting out an edition of their albums for postage stamps only. These albums are known and looked for under the name of Reform Albums.

Page 51

Amongst the best of the albums, is that published in 1885 by the firm of A. Larisch under the name of Koepe-Album, as it is compiled by the scholar Oscar Koepe of Barwen. It is the first German album following closely along the lines of a well-known handbook, that of Ferdinand Meyer, and thus including all watermarks and perforations. It excludes all illustrations, and is thus meant especially for the larger collector.

In the year 1883 the firm of Moritz Schauenburg of Lahr published the World Postage Stamp Album compiled by the author of this work, and in 1888 the same firm published my patented world postage stamp album in six large quarto volumes, which can be broken down into single sheets by means of a simple mechanism, so that supplements can be inserted at any point. This too contains no illustrations.

Finally, reference must be made to the Universal Postage Stamp Album by J. F. Bösenberg (of Hupfeld & Gröber, Leipzig), which took the highest award (silver medal) at the 1st International Postage Stamp Exhibition in Vienna in 1890. In this, Europe formed a simple volume, and watermarks and perforations were again included.

The other albums which cannot be mentioned here will be listed in the Index to German Philatelic Literature - Part -III of this work.

Finally, the editor of the Philatelistischen Börsen-Couriers, Carl Cl. Sauer of Mährisch-Ostrau, tried in 1889 to meet the needs of the increasing number of specialist collectors with his specialised albums. So far six of them have appeared, each associated with the catalogue of the country concerned.

All the albums mentioned so far belong to the type known as pre-printed albums, which have pre-printed spaces into which the postage stamp is stuck, plus a more or less detailed text.

There are also albums without this pre-printing, both for postage stamps in general and for entires in particular. These are much more deserving of the epithet "permanent" than the pre-printed permanent albums, and afford the greatest scope for the collectors' own special developments.

The first album of this sort was put out by Dr. Alfred Moschkau in 1874 for collectors of entires.

This was followed in the same year by a similar one from Sigmund Friedl in Vienna, except that this one was designed to take all postage stamps, and with this in view Friedl also supplied little printing outfits so that the collector could do the necessary pre-printing in accordance with his own tastes.

Both albums consisted of loose cardboard sheets with a frame and a decorated space for the name of the country, but the sheets are otherwise quite blank in the Moschkau album, and squared in the Friedl album. Moschkau supplies a file to keep it in, and Friedl a box.

The first unprinted albums were then followed by others from S. F. Friedmann in Vienna in 1876, Stimming in 1883, Dauth in 1884, Glasewald (known as the Blitzbuch) in 1888, Heitmann in 1889, A. Zschiesche in 1891, and others who attempted to solve this problem with more or less dexterity.

Page 52

Blank cardboard sheets alone were issued, by Dauth, Gebrüder Senf, Hofmann, Reinheimer, etc., the latter in a luxurious format with gold printing.

E. Petritz in Dresden-Striesen provided the collector with a postcard album, and A. Marbes in Bremen in 1891 with an album for entires and stamps on letters, the latter in view of the vogue for collecting stamps on letters that has come in, in recent years.

As for the pre-printed albums, it should be pointed out again, that most of them are also published in various editions for medium and small scale collectors.

Albums have reached such a high level of perfection today, that it seems to some extent unreasonable to ask for anything more. All the same, they are not adequate for the very large scale collectors. These tend to arrange their collections systematically on a principle of their own, and do not need pre-printed sheets, which are all right for medium and even large-scale collectors. Obviously, no one album can meet all requirements, but there are albums for all the major trends, and every collector has the possibility of picking out the one that corresponds most nearly to his own principle of collection.

The only requirement that has not yet been entirely satisfied is that of permanence, but even this has already been met to some extent.

It is certain that German albums lead those of the rest of the world when it comes to scientific format, with the obvious consequence that some have been translated into foreign languages and some have appeared in several languages, whilst the German collector has no need to bother with foreign albums.

Albums are of the greatest importance for philately. They are the basis of the entire collecting activity. Without them, stamp collecting would never have attained its present wide currency. The people who introduced them, such as Wuttig, Bauschke, Zschiesche, have realised this and do everything they can to ensure their steady improvement.

It need hardly be said that it was much more difficult to draw up the first editions of the Wuttig and Schaubeck albums than to produce our big new albums on the basis of the literature that exists now, so that the people named above have the imperishable glory of having, so to speak, founded philately.

When private postal undertakings were introduced in Germany and the collection of private stamps got under way, albums for this branch of philately began to appear. In the year 1887, A. E. Glasewald of Gössnitz produced an album for the German private postage stamps, using the transparent pseudonym of A. Erdmann, and in 1888 he put out an album of the Nordic private stamps under his real name, and with the co-operation of Dr. Vedel of Copenhagen.

The next literary product to appear in the stamp-collecting industry took the form of price catalogues. As early as the start of the 1860s, there were a number of large stamp dealers in Germany, who naturally found it in their own interest to issue catalogues of the existing postage stamps and include the prices at which the individual stamps could be bought from them.

Page 53

One of the first, possibly the very first, of this type of price catalogue was that from Tramburg's Successors of Hamburg, which appeared at the end of 1862 or the beginning of 1863 under the title Survey of all known Postage Stamps issued from 1849 to 1862 (it would have been more correct to say 1840). In this connection see my article in Postwertzeichenkunde, Volume 2, Issue 11.

Next, in the year 1863, similar price catalogues were put out by Zschiesche & Köder, who ran a coin, antiquities and stamp business in Leipzig, and G. Wuttig, who had started the first large stamp business in Germany. These only ran to about eight sheets, and described roughly 600 to 700 postage stamps in terms of design, colour and denomination.

Still in the same year, catalogues appeared from C. Beyfuss in Hanover and L. Priebatsch in Breslau, in 1864 from W. Georg in Basle, the Literarischen Museum in Leipzig, & Christian Mann Jr. of the same place, in 1865 from G. Bauschke in Leipzig, Thiele & Co. in Mannheim, in 1866 from A. Lauber in Stuttgart, etc.

However, as these price catalogues were actually designed only to serve the interests of the dealers, they restricted the data on their stamps to the most essential.

Another character was taken by the catalogues that contained no details as to price and were designed only to inform and instruct the collector as to the stamps that had appeared. These can reasonably be called handbooks, in contradistinction to the price catalogues.

The first handbook appeared as early as 1863, published by the Durr bookshop in Leipzig. It contains a short account of the history of postage stamps, and instructions on building up a collection. Then follows a listing and description of all postage stamps issued to date, with individual stamps entered under their date of issue and relatively accurately described. For every country there are noteworthy accounts of the range and duration of use of individual stamps.

However, this was far surpassed by the handbook Description of Postage Stamps to Date which was published by the bookshop of Wittwe Berger-Levrault & Sohn, of Strassburg, in the year 1864. Apart from actual postage stamps, this dealt with trials, essays, proofs, and the known reprints (forgeries). Moreover, for all the stamps it gave the method of production, whether typography, lithography or steel engraving, then the different sorts of paper. (handmade, machine-made) etc.

For its date, this handbook was a remarkably praiseworthy achievement.

Another very useful handbook was that from F. Elb of Dresden, in 1864, which was compiled on the basis of official sources.

Another handbook was published by Adolf Fr. Storch, the editor of the Post, in Vienna in the year 1866, under the title Der Briefmarken-Freund, in which he gave geographical and statistical information for every country.

A more lightweight item is the Führer im Labyrinth der erschienenem Briefmarken, etc. (Guide through the labyrinth of issued postage stamps, etc.) published in Dresden in the year 1867 by G. W. Schubert. This contains an alphabetically arranged index to all the symbols, portraits, coats of arms, etc. that had appeared on postage stamps.

Page 54

Naturally, all of these catalogues and handbooks have some gaps, some inaccuracies and lack a truly scientific methodology. Nonetheless, they were an important aid for the collectors of the day, who had nothing else to refer to and thus their importance to philately should not be underestimated as they were the prototypes and forerunners of all the later more extensive handbooks which will be discussed further on.

The collector thus had albums and catalogues, but none of these aids kept him aware of and informed about new issues of postage stamps. Moreover, he had the wish to learn more details about his hobby, to hear of the forgeries that appeared, and so on.

This wish was met by the Leipzig firm of Zschiesche & Köder when on the 1st May 1863, they published the first German periodical devoted solely to the interests of stamp collectors: Magazin für Briefmarkensammler. This was an event second to none in philately. The hearts of all collectors took wing to the new magazine, and rightly so. In a modest way, it gave collectors information about the entire field of philately, and seasoned its articles with the addition of good illustrations. In addition, it promoted the traffic between collectors and dealers. This opened the path along which philately would travel towards steadily increasing developments and improvements. For four entire years - to May 1867 - it was the scientific foster-mother of the German collector, and whatever the German philatelic periodical literature became and achieved at a later date had its roots in the Magazin für Briefmarkensammler.

The firm of Zschiesche & Köder's *Magazin remained the sole German scientific periodical for only a short time.

In the year 1864, Wilhelm Reichel & Co. in Kaufbeuren published a stamp sheet in which however the transactions were mainly carried on by correspondence, and also put out an exchange medium, the Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel which appeared twice a month.

It contained market reports along with a series of well-written scientific articles. The illustrations were stuck in at the appropriate points.

After six months appearance it ceased, and was replaced on the 1st July 1864 by the Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, from Ernst Roschlau in Coburg. This journal likewise appeared twice a month and was also very well edited. The illustrations were first included in the form of a supplement, but later they also were stuck in alongside the article they related to. After another six months - on the 15th December 1864 - the Journal ceased to appear.

They could not stand up to competition with the Magazin. The need for technical organs had not increased, and so the Magazin was sufficient.

The contributors to the two last-mentioned journals were again - with a few exceptions - kept in anonymity, thus, the Magazin was again left in sole possession of the periodical literature.

In November 1864 the Spiro Brothers of Hamburg tried to start up a rival periodical Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler, which was issued free in return for the postage, but the enterprise misfired and the magazine ceased to appear after a few issues.

Page 55

G. Bauschke had more luck with his Briefmarken-Sammler, which appeared ten times a year, and whose first number came out in Leipzig at the beginning of January 1866. Extremely well edited by the publisher himself, it soon hit the taste of collectors, and took over the readership of the Magazin when this ceased to appear in April 1867. From then to October 1870, it was the only German philatelic organ of substance. Though its existence was seriously menaced soon after its birth by the German-Austrian war, it managed to survive this crisis and survived until June 1871, when it ceased to appear as a result of the Franco-German campaign.

With N°24, the editorship passed to J. Kummel who retained it till the end. He numbered the most distinguished collectors of the time amongst his contributors, even though again they were not actually named in the magazine. A series of articles were contributed by Alexander Treichel under the pseudonym Yo: These were full of information though not very gracefully expressed. Another contributor was John Siewert, of Moscow and later Riga, who was looked on at the time as an outstanding philatelist. A lack of material began to make itself felt from about July 1870 onwards in the form of entire pages devoted to such things as A few notes on military strategy; Travel notes from Stuttgart or Transatlantic tittle-tattle, whilst the actual philatelic articles kept shrinking: all this announced the sickness of the magazine to the initiated, well ahead of time.

Thus, no-one was surprised when its death came in June 1871. To the collecting world it really died as early as December 1870, since the last four issues, N°s 49 to 52, only came out at very irregular intervals with long delays, and most collectors ceased to bother with it, so that today many people fail to realise that four numbers did actually appear after December 1870.

Luckily, a new magazine, the Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung had been founded in Leipzig in October 1870 by G. Bauschke and Alwin Zschiesche, so that the failure of Der Briefmarken-Sammler was less felt.

The editorial chair was taken by Dr. Alfred Moschkau, whose name from now on is intimately related to the history of the development of philately. Amongst his contributors we find the best German philatelists, such as Alexander Treichel, R. F. Albrecht, Theodor Haas, etc.

This was the best German philatelic magazine until it ceased publication in June 1873. Dr. Moschkau withdrew from the editorship in October 1871, and in July 1871 he brought a new periodical before the collecting world. This was not devoted exclusively to postage stamps alone, but to philately in general, and only appeared until June 1872. It bore the title Magazin für den Sammler von Essais, Privatpost-, Wechsel-, Stempel- and Eisenbahn-Marken.

G. Bauschke also tried again in 1869 with a modest publication Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler, which appeared in Aussig, [Now Ústí nad Labem, in Czechoslovakia] but it only survived for a few issues.

However, at the end of 1871, the publisher F. W. Rademacher of Hamburg, in association with Louis May, began to produce an advertising sheet principally aimed at the stamp trade, the Allgemeine Briefmarken-Anzeiger. As the first advertising journal, this met a real need, picked up a large number of readers and subscribers, and was indeed the only serious German philatelic periodical for a short period from June 1873 to 1st January 1874. Apart from the adverts, it restricted itself to short notes, but gave much useful information, and also happily introduced humour into philately. It remained prosperous as long as it stayed under the firm of F. W. Rademacher.

Page 56

In the year 1878 it passed into the ownership of E. W. Grossman of Dresden, who began to issue it from there, and changed its name first to Dresdener Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, then from 1882 to the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung.

In the meantime, Dr. Moschkau provided the collector with the first German monograph, Wasserzeichen [Watermarks], Dresden, 1871, and thus directed attention towards this important means of distinguishing between postage stamps. This book went through four editions by 1880.

Finally, various directories came out during this period, such as those by Ch. Mann Jr. in Leipzig (1864), E. Pegan in Trieste (1872), J. Braunschweig in Lubeck (1872), E. Halbrock in Bielefeld (1872), O. Kreuchauf in Hamburg (1872), and a collection of pictures of stamps in an enlarged format by M. Ruhl in Leipzig (1864-1865).

As was said above, the Allgemeine Briefmarken-Anzeiger of Hamburg was the only serious German periodical for more than six months, but on the 1st January 1874, a new one entered the philatelic arena. This was the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal founded in Leipzig by H. Werninck & Co. It soon passed into the ownership of Louis Senf, and rose to be the leading German philatelic periodical, especially after Dr. Alfred Moschkau, until then merely a contributor, took over the editorship at the beginning of the year 1876.

Right from the start this magazine called on the best talents as its contributors, and managed to please collectors of all levels in a way that none of its later rivals managed. Its extensive coverage, the attention with which the section on new issues in particular was edited, the scholarly treatment of The Editor's postbag, the numerous, and more recently, coloured, illustrations, the many supplements, etc., captivated both the young and older, more experienced collectors.

It found an entry into all philatelic circles, and is today indisputably the best-known German philatelic journal. There is hardly a single German philatelist of note who has not written for this journal at least once in the course of its 18 years of existence. It gave popular articles for the beginner, and scientific treatments for the advanced student. It refrained as far as possible from all personal problems, and was written in dignified language. Occasionally it stooped to petty expedients such as providing facsimiles, cheap offers, gifts and other commercial tricks to keep on attracting new readers to the journal, but even these did nothing to detract from its value, and it must be remembered in this connection that the publishers were a commercial firm, whose first concern was naturally to increase their own business.

The Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal has appeared twice a month since 1884, and forms a magnificent volume each year.

Not the least of its virtues is its punctual appearance. Also, many well-known societies use it as their society organ.

Philatelic literature began to expand into life in Austria as well.

Page 57

In July 1872, S. F. Friedmann of Rudolfsheim, Vienna, appeared before the collecting world with his Philatelistischen Berichten.

In format this was a very small and insignificant magazine, but it contained a wealth of shorter, but significant articles for the collector. The advertisement section related only to the interests of its publishers. It appeared in 40 numbers to the end of 1877.

A much more impressive make-up was used by the Illustrierte Briefmarker-Zeitung, issued by Sigmund Friedl in Vienna, with the first number appearing on the 1st January 1876. It soon obtained a firm foothold not only in Austria, but in Germany as well, and as early as its second year was able to appear in a greatly enlarged format.

In the year 1880 it assumed the title Welpost, under which it still appears today.

Its most brilliant period was from 1878-83, during which time Ferdinand Meyer was one of the principal contributors.

This author, and a series of other noted scientific writers such as Paul Lietzow, Hugo Lübker, H. Hempel, postal secretary Hansmann, etc., gave the magazine a distinguished place in all German philatelic circles so that over this period it was in no way inferior to the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal.

After the death of Ferdinand Meyer (31st December 1882) it gradually lost importance, and was converted into practically a purely advertising medium in the year 1885.

It should be mentioned that Dr. Alfred Moschkau helped to edit this magazine from July 1881 to November 1882. Into this period fell the first two large-scale German catalogues, that of Dr. Moschkau, Leipzig, 1874, and Sigmund Friedl, Vienna, 1877. The first of these reached its second edition in 1876 under the title Handbuch für Briefmarken-Sammler [Handbook for Stamp Collectors], and is still included today amongst the best-known German catalogues. It enjoyed an extraordinary popularity during the years 1874-1880 in particular within the circles of the average and larger collectors. Its pioneering, truly systematic treatment of the subject, the attention paid to watermarks and perforations, and the many instructive notes earned this outstanding book the favour of all German collectors.

Dr. Moschkau only worked on it himself until the 4th edition. The 5th edition was in the hands of Wilhelm Hermann, the retired secretary of the Stamp Expertising Commission, and the 6th was taken over by Richard Senf. The 7th was issued in 2 volumes, the first was edited by Richard Senf, and dealt with adhesive stamps, envelopes and wrappers, the second was edited by Theodore Haas of Leipzig, and dealt with other types of entires.

Friedl's catalogue was in three parts, and supplements appeared up to 1881. Since then, there has been neither a supplement nor a new editor.

In 1883, Sigmund Friedl began the publication of a large important catalogue of all postage and Telegraph stamps, but he only got as far as the letter I (Italy).

In Switzerland also, the stamp dealer Edward Riesen of Schwanden published a stamp magazine during 1875 and 1876, but it only lasted for 9 numbers.

Page 58

From then on, philatelic publications multiplied from year to year. In 1877, the Union appeared in Dresden as the official organ of the then newly-founded Internationalen Philatelisten-Verein [International Society of Philatelists], and the advertising paper Mercur by Mörsig in Kreutz. During 1878 appeared the Berliner Illustrierte Briefmarkenzeitung by J. Braunschweig, and the Philatelistische Verkehr, from Max Böhne in Leipzig. In 1879, there were the Hamburger Briefmarken-Zeitung from Alexander Owitsch and the Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung from Robert Deyle in Berne.

As early as its second year, 1879/1880, the Berlin journal passed into the ownership of its editor, the teacher Georg Fouré, who devoted himself entirely to the magazine for several years, and managed to turn it into a serious publication particularly well-regarded in the North of Germany. The title was changed to Berliner Illustrierte Philatelisten-Zeitung in 1881, and then to Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung.

In later years it lost its quality and importance, and finally stopped appearing in November 1887.

The Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung got off to a very promising start. In particular, it published a series of first-class articles on Swiss postage stamps, and was distinguished by a striking format and really excellent illustrations. However, its columns soon began to be filled with unproductive personal controversies, the scientific content retreated to the background, its appearance became irregular, and as a result, both its subscribers and contributors fell off. In its last year, it only retained a semblance of life, and it faded out without ceremony in July 1886. After a gap of more than half a year, a final double number appeared at the beginning of 1887, but it attracted no attention.

On the other hand, the year 1880 saw philately enriched with a new publication which gained importance year by year, and is today, with the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal the major German scientific magazine. It is Der Philatelist, the society magazine of the Internationaler Philatelisten-Verein of Dresden.

Once this society had got rid of its Chairman and editor of its earlier magazine Union, it decided to issue a new one under the above title, and Petriz took over the publishing and editing of it.

Finally, in 1883, it passed into the ownership of the Society, H. Schwaneberger was installed as editor, and he thereby created the first journal completely independent of all dealers and commercial interests.

It hardly needs to be explained why an independent, serious journal met a real need. The International Society in Dresden had only the advancement of philately in view, and their magazine is devoted exclusively to that end.

In view of the organisation of the Society, however, the columns of its journal are not open to everyone, but it does contain the freely expressed opinions of collectors, unaffected by any commercial consideration, and therein lies one of the greatest strengths of this journal.

The example of the International Philatelic Society of Dresden was followed by a number of other large societies. In 1882, there was the Wiener Philatelistenclub (Vienna Philatelic Club), in 1883, the Bayerische Philatelisten-Verein (Bavarian Philatelic Society) of Munich, in 1884, the Schweizer Philatelisten-Verein (Swiss Philatelic Society), in 1888, the Internationale Verein für Briefmarkenkunde Philatelia (Philatelia International Society for Philately) in Halle a.s. and the Berliner Philatelistenclub (Berlin Philatelic Club), which all published their own society journals. Some still do, but none of them reached the standard of Der Philatelist, which becomes quite understandable when one compares the membership of these societies with that of the Dresden society.

Page 59

The Vienna Philatelic Club had in fact the priority in founding its own society journal, since its Mittheilungen (Communications), which began to appear in August 1882, was the property of the club right from its first appearance, whereas Der Philatelist did not pass into the ownership of the Dresden Society until the beginning of 1883.

Of these society journals, the leading ones are Der Philatelist, and then the communications of the Bavarian Philatelic Society, which now appear under the title Das Postwerthzeichen. The communications of the Berlin Philatelic Club are of special scientific value, but they only go on to 1889. Since 1890, this Society, which enjoys a high reputation because of the quality of its membership, has unfortunately made its communications available to members only, which prevents any discussion of them.

This kind of report, for members only, is also issued by other Societies, such as the Verein für Briefmarkenkunde zu Lübeck (Lubeck Society for Philately), the Internationale Postwerthzeichen-Handler-Verein (International Stamp Dealers' Society) in Berlin, the Tauschvereinigung für Postwerthzeichensammler (Stamp Collectors' Exchange Association) in Elberfeld, etc., and also some societies for the younger collector, though these are of lesser importance.

Since 1880, the periodical literature has increased to an almost overwhelming extent.

The plan of this work does not call for a description of each individual magazine, and this must be left for the index to literature in Section III. We will thus restrict ourselves to mentioning the most important.

Amongst them are the Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung the Philatelistische Börsencourier the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung the Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal the Postwertzeichenkunde the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung and the advertising magazines Vereiniger Erdball-Mercur the General Anzeiger für Philatelie and Universum, now the Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung.

The most outstanding of these are Postwertzeichenkunde and Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung. The first is published by A. Larisch in Munich, and the second by Dr. H. Brendicke in Berlin.

Both began to appear quite recently, when the columns of Der Philatelist became unavailable to outsiders and these two journals were used by some of our most outstanding writers to publish their researches.

Finally, collectors of private postage stamps have had a serious magazine devoted to their special interest since 1888. This is the Neuesten Privatpostnachrichten published by A. E. Glasewald in Gössnitz, which reached its 4th year in 1891, and has enjoyed steadily increasing popularity, especially as the editor is known to be a thorough connoisseur of private stamps and a founder of their collection.

A glance at the index to periodical literature in Part 3 of this work will confirm how abundant it is. Unlike the philatelic literature of other countries, the German literature consists mainly of larger consolidated magazines, which have appeared for many, or at least several years, with only a relative few of the kind of ephemeral short-lived publications that abound in the literature of other people, especially the English and Americans. This is a striking proof of the more serious intellect of the Germans.

One peculiarity of the German philatelic periodical literature, is that both our leading authorities and our large and medium-scale collectors have a special liking for writing for magazines, so that we are able to read about much specialized work in our journals before it appears in book form. Hence, nowhere is the number of specialist writers so great as it is in Germany.

One reason for this, apart from the proverbial German thoroughness, is the wide extension of specialist collecting in Germany. When a large number of collectors direct their attention towards a special field of study, each of them is in a position to discover something new and come forward with it publicly, thus increasing the number of contributors to the journals.

Moreover, the many philatelic societies in Germany provide a circle of subscribers such as hardly any other land can show, which makes it possible for the larger journals in particular to aim at a really high standard.

Amongst the writers for the magazines, we find some of the most illustrious names in German philately. However, we are afraid this section has covered too much ground already, and must therefore decline to list here all those whom it really would be worth naming. Besides, their papers will be found listed in Section 4. Amongst the most outstanding authors and contributors to the specialist journals are: R. F. Albrecht, J. J. Anheisser, Anton Bachl, Friedrich Bachmann, O. Berger-Levrault, F. Breitfuss, Dr. H. Brendicke, Eduard Blossfeld, Robert Deyhle, Georg Fouré, A. E. Glasewald, Carl von Gündel, Theodor Haas, A. Hansmann, H. Hempel, Wilhelm Herrmann, Franz Himmelbauer, E. Huxhagen, Cornelio Joris, Dr. F. Kalckhoff, O. Kausch, Dr. Paul Kloss, Richard Krause, Paul Lietzow, Carl Lindenberg, M. Linhoff, H. Lübker, Ferdinand Meyer, S. Mödinger, Dr. Alfred Moschkau, Dr. Emil Pfeiffer, Otto Rommel, Baron Walter von Rosen, Walter von Schimmelfennig, A. Schulze, H. Schwaneberger, Otto Sedlmayr, John Siewert, Alexander Treichel, Hanns Wagner, George Wende (alias Kaufmann), N. Zöllner, etc.

The most important single figure in the field of German philatelic literature is Dr. Alfred Moschkau. His work covers every branch of philatelic-literary activity. We have had from him an album, one of the major handbooks, the only history of philately and several monographs. He has been sometimes the editor of various journals, he founded one of the first German philatelic societies, he organised the first exhibition of postage stamps in Germany, and his contributions appear in most of the specialist German magazines. There was a period, one can say more than a decade in fact, for which Moschkau's was the best known name in German collecting. Young people in particular knew only of him, and he was the only one of all of the philatelic writers familiar to the general public. His likeness adorned the magazines and albums. His fame spread throughout Europe, and he was accepted as the representative of German philately even on the other side of the ocean. In recent years, new people have come forward, and Moschkau has more or less given up his philatelic studies because he was overburdened with other business and not in good health, but this rest must not be begrudged him, after all his work, he has accomplished more than any other philatelist, and the German collecting world will never forget what it owes to him, its tireless teacher.

Page 61

Following him amongst the old guard are Alexander Treichel, Albrecht and Berger-Levrault. These names are encountered in practically all of the older specialist journals.

Robert Deyhle and Georg Fouré are well-known as the publishers of journals to which they are themselves outstanding contributors.

Ferdinand Meyer is the premier representative of Austrian philately, and one of the chief pioneers in the realm of philately. Although his literary activity only began in 1878, the work he published in the five years before his all too early and lamented death is almost incredible. The chief part of his achievement was his handbook, but he also contributed most fruitfully to the periodical literature. He was a specialist particularly in the field of stamp chemistry, which he was the first to deal with. He ruthlessly attacked what are called speculative stamps, and cleansed the market of these fraudulent products to a large extent.

Theodor Haas, the present editor of the Illustrierten Briefmarken-Journals, is a philatelic journalist in the best sense of the word. Everything that comes from his pen bears the mark of serious study.

Well-known and highly regarded authorities in special fields are: Dr. Paul Kloss (covers from the United States), A. Schulze (Swiss stamps), H. Hempel, (The Azores, Madeira), H. Lübker (Russian rural stamps), Otto Rommel (Peru), A. E. Glasewald (Greece), Hanns Wagner (German private postage stamps), Cornelio Joris (Bavaria).

Wilhelm Herrmann has been untiring in detecting and describing forgeries. Amongst the most prolific writers on philately, principally in relation to general questions on which he usually managed to shed a fresh light, is Richard Krause. His periodical articles fill entire books, and although one must reproach him with not doing his home-work now and again, one has on the other hand to stress that he has brought much new material to light and has devoted himself to philately with true dedication and unsparing zeal.

When Patrick Chalmers began the Chalmers-Hill controversy, thus casting doubt on the old philatelic dogma that Rowland Hill had invented the adhesive postage stamp, a new departure - historical enquiry became obvious in philately.

This attempts to illuminate the darkness that still surrounds the older and oldest postage stamps, and in particular to test the correctness of all historical-philatelic data and assumptions.

Carl von Gündel and Franz Himmelbauer must be named as the most important followers of this path. The German philatelic world has the first of these to thank for bringing the above-mentioned controversy, whose importance is obvious to everyone, to their attention in the most lucid way, and thus showing that philately does not consist merely of studying and collecting stamps. We have him to thank for our detailed knowledge of the covers from Sardinia and the Sydney city post of the year 1838.

Page 62

The second is the worthy pupil of the first, and though still young in years, has shown himself at home in the field of historical study. (Paper on the Treffenberg proposal to the Swedish Parliament of the year 1823).

There is still a great deal to be done in the field of historical studies. For instance, there are still different opinions on who should be thanked for the invention of the postcard, even though not more than 22 years have passed since its introduction and the people involved are still living amongst us.

However, philately also definitely includes the study of the development of the postage stamp.

Hence, particular thanks should be given to the men who have devoted themselves to this difficult and demanding study, apparently motivated only by the most unselfish love of the subject. Studies in this field will have a continuing value even when the time comes that philately is spoken of as no more than a study from a time long past.

Finally, another special individual amongst philatelic authors is O. Kausch. He too in a way represents a special branch of philately. This is philology in philately. Ferdinand Meyer was one of the first German writers to pay real attention to the inscriptions and symbols on postage stamps, particularly those from Turkey and Asia. In his monographs Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of the Ottoman Empire, Vienna, 1878, and Afghanistan, its Post and Postage Stamps, Vienna, 1879, and in his Handbook for Stamp Collectors, Nuremberg, 1881, he took the trouble to give some information on the languages, inscriptions and symbols to be found on postage stamps from oriental countries.

It has been O. Kausch's great merit to complete the science of postage stamps in this direction. This may have led him into regions having no immediate connection with philately, and he occasionally goes into too much detail, but this does not detract from the value of his papers. This is a very difficult subject, which no philatelist before him has dealt with so thoroughly.

Finally, we should also mention those people who, if not predominantly literary in their own activities, have nevertheless promoted philatelic literature by issuing specialist magazines which have been important for philately. Particular names here are Sigmund Friedl, A. Larisch, Heinrich Koch, Carl Sauer, Ernst Heitmann, etc.

The period from 1880 to 1890 brought a series of special publications in philately.

The various manuals should be mentioned first. The earliest was Leitfaden der Philatelie (Guidelines in Philately), by the author of this book, put out in 1880 by the firm of Eduard Wartig of Leipzig, which was honoured by a bronze medal from the Société Française du Timbrologie of Paris. Eight years later (1888), Richard Krause published his Lehrbuch der Philatelie (Manual of Philately), which was followed in 1889 by two similar works Die Kunde von den Postwerthzeichen (The science of the Postage Stamp) by Dr. Brendicke, and Vademecum der Philatelisten, by G. Finke, and in 1890 by Wegweiser für Postwerthzeichen-Sammler (Stamp Collectors' Guide) by Oscar Jeran and in 1891 by Leitfaden der Philatelie (Guidelines in Philately) by the Senf Brothers.

It is not for the author of this book to give a description of these works.

Page 63

O. Kausch enriched philatelic literature with a really excellent book, particularly in its very extended second edition. His Sprachwissenschaft in der Briefmarkenkunde (Language Study in Philately) is a unique work such as no other country can show.

However, the most important productions have been in the line of handbooks and special catalogues.

First came Paul Lietzow with an original two-part handbook, in which he broke with previous traditions in several ways. In particular, he used a geographic sequence of countries in place of the more general alphabetic arrangements. He was anticipated in this by the Berger-Levrault handbook, which used a similar arrangement of the countries. Also, he avoided the provision of illustrations, but made up for this lack by a careful description of the stamps. Finally, he listed all private postage stamps and doubtful items in the Appendix. This is a completely original work, to which supplements appeared in 1885 and 1886 as Part III and Part IV. A second edition of Part I appeared in 1888.

Moreover, in 1884 he produced the only German catalogue of Seltenheiten (Rarities), which has gone through three editions since then.

In the year 1881 Ferdinand Meyer astonished the philatelic world with his famous Handbuch für Postmarkensammler (Handbook for Postmark Collectors). It created an enormous sensation, particularly as this immense work was produced by a single, and at the time very ill man, not by instalments, but as a complete whole.

This handbook represents the first German product of serious critical study, and is likely to be of lasting value, being intended and designed for permanent use.

Altogether, it obtained the most undivided acclamation. The big collectors began to organise their collection on the basis of it. The teacher Koepp followed him in the design of his great album, and only “Meyer” was quoted in the journals.

More recent work has corrected and extended it in many respects, but it remains a pioneering work that is still authoritative today.

Unfortunately, it only covers adhesive postage stamps. The author was only granted a year to enjoy his work. He produced the third supplement when he was mortally ill, and it appeared shortly after his death. Since then, Dr. Paul Kloss has undertaken the praiseworthy task of continuing the work, and has carried it out in an outstanding manner by producing several more supplements.

In the year 1887, A. Larisch, then in Vienna, produced a handbook for stamp collectors which still enjoys great popularity. Four editions have appeared to date, and it is known throughout Germany by the name of “Larisch Catalogue”. Also in that year, appeared the second part of the Grosse Handbuch der Philatelie (Great Handbook of Philately), whose compilation was taken over later by Carl Lindenberg, by whose name it is still known, though Lindenberg gave it up some time ago and the work is now edited by a group of outstanding philatelists (Baron von Vittinghof, known as Schell, J. H. Anheisser and Dr. J. Kalckhoff).

Page 64

This work, 26 parts of which had appeared up to the end of 1891, extending as far as Mexico, is planned on the largest scale, and has many of the best philatelists as contributors, in addition to the editors named above.

As well as the usual national and private postage stamps, it deals with Telegraph stamps, Essays and Reprints. Moreover, it contains a mass of enlightening notes, and exceeds all previous works of the same kind from whatever country, in thoroughness and accuracy. To give the reader an idea of the scope of this work, we may mention for example that, the last two parts (25 and 26) containing 6½ printers' sheets are devoted entirely to Mexico, and even so only get as far as the 1872 issue, which leads us to conclude that at least one if not two further parts will be devoted to this country.

Unfortunately, the work goes into perhaps too much details, with regards to the appearance of the issues, so that the end of the work is not yet even in sight.

The distinguishing feature of philately over the last decade has been specialised collecting, and this has left its mark on the literature as well. There have been a series of handbooks, of which the following are worthy of mention. A. Erdmann (Glasewald) Die Postmarken Griechenland's (The Postmarks of Greece), R. Friedrich, Die Postwerthzeichen Spaniens und seiner Colonien (The Postage Stamps of Spain and its Colonies), a short but exceptionally thorough work, A. E., Glasewald, O. Sattler & F. Wagner, Handbuch der Deutschen Privatpostwerthzeichen (Handbook of German Private Postage Stamps), a work in instalments which has just begun to appear, Cornelio Joris & O. Sedlmayr, Geschichte und Katalog der Postwerthzeichen von Bayern (History and Catalogue of the Postage Stamps of Bavaria), also in the course of publication, Dr. Paul Kloss, Die Couverte der Vereingten Staaten von Nordamerika (The Covers of the United States of America), and Geschichte der Postwerthzeichen von Sachsen (History of the Postage Stamps of Saxony), A. Larisch, Postkarten Katalog, E. v. Leman Specialkatalog der Schweizerischen Postwertzeichen (Special Catalogue of Swiss Postage Stamps), H. Lübker Handbuch der Postwerthzeichen der Ruralpost Russlands (Handbook of the Postage Stamps of the Russian Rural Post), E. V. Neulinger Special-Katalog sammtlicher Brief-und Zeitungsmarken von Oesterreich-Ungarn (Special Catalogue of all Postage and Newspaper Stamps of Austro-Hungary) O. Pfenniger Handbuch der Schweizer Postwerthzeichen (Handbook of Swiss Postage Stamps), A. de Reuterskiöld Die Kantonalmarken und deren Fälschungen (The Cantonal Stamps and their Forgeries), Otto Rommel Studie über die Postwerthzeichen von Peru (Studies on the Postage Stamps of Peru), and A. Wülburn Die Postwerthzeichen Helgolands (The Postage Stamps of Heligoland).

As a result of the increasing attention paid to cancellations, the German literature has also been enriched by a number of handbooks on this topic.

Thus, a monograph appeared in the year 1891 by O. Pfenniger on Kantonalen und Schweizerischen Postentwerthungsstempel (Cantonal and Swiss Postmarks), and by A. Reinheimer on Deutschen Entwerthungsarten von 1849-1875 (German Cancellations from 1849-1875), both distinguished contributions to a subject hitherto dealt with only sporadically in periodical articles.

Finally, it should also be mentioned that in recent years, the school philatelic societies of Germany and Austria have made a praiseworthy effort at contributing to the literary side of their hobby.

Page 65

Many of them have produced society communications, though generally only a hand-produced form, but two of them, the Philatelisten-Schuler-Verein in Bruchsal and the Internationale Postwerthzeichen-Sammler-Verein Globus in Berlin have decided to issue printed Society Journals from 1892, a happy proof of the serious endeavour that prevails within the circles of our young collectors.

We have now come to the end. If we look back at the period of barely thirty years over which German philatelic literature has developed, we must concede that a great deal has been achieved within this span of time.

If we look at the earliest albums by F. Ludwig or G. Wuttig, or the first catalogues & handbooks by Zschiesche & Köder and Durr's Bookshop and then look at the latest edition of an album by Koeppe or Schaubeck, or the handbook by Ferdinand Meyer or one of the issues of the Great Handbook of Philately, we shall be amazed at the progress made by philately since the beginning of its literature.

The same thing will manifest itself equally clearly if we compare an issue of the Zschiesche & Köder Magazin für Briefmarkensammler, with a number of today's Postwertzeichenkunde or Der Philatelist.

There is certainly no other field of collection in which so much has happened within such a relatively short time.

We can however assert with pride that our German philatelic literature is not surpassed by that of any other nation, not even by the English themselves.

It is a national achievement in the true sense of the word, produced by common endeavour in the service of a beloved common cause.

PART 3

GERMAN PHILATELIC LITERATURE FROM ITS BEGINNING TO THE END OF 1891

INTRODUCTION

In the following index to the German philatelic literature, the author decided not to conform to any of the existing bibliographies, but to classify his material in the way that seemed most convenient to him with respect the extent and special characteristics of the literature, chiefly because the existing bibliographies relate without exception to an earlier period of time in which the literary products were not so multifarious as they are today.

Nothing has been included unless it has been established beyond doubt that it did in fact appear. Books which were announced but never actually published are given particular mention, in the hope that readers who may have seen the announcement will be saved a fruitless search for the work in question.

Society rules, annual reports and similar documents relating to club statistics have been left out, as they cannot be looked on a philatelic literature in the authors opinion.

Humorous pieces are only included incidentally, since it would be impossible to get a complete coverage of these, as many are only known within a restricted circle. The author decided to ignore musical pieces, games, etc. entirely.

On describing the individual literary items, the author decided to avoid quoting too much detail e.g. of the format, number of pages, etc, and only to give short descriptions of the various editions of one and the same work.

Magazines which began to appear during 1891 but only give the volume from 1892 onwards are included but not numbered.

In the case of older journals, which started a new volume in the course of 1891, they simply have the annotation that they are still appearing. The numbering of these years will have to be kept for a supplement.

Price lists, which are - in contrast to catalogues - details of the prices being asked by an individual dealer for his stock at a given moment, are included, as they are often the subject of enquiries by users of philatelic libraries, but in this case again no claim is made as to completion. For this reason, they too are separately numbered.

On the other hand, the author allows himself to hope that he has achieved s something like completion in his coverage of the philatelic literature.

If however, some piece of writing or other has escaped his notice, he asks the favour of having this pointed out to him and all additional items and corrections will be listed in a forthcoming supplement to be published at the conclusion of this work.

TRANSLATOR'S NOTE

The sections which follow in the original, consisted of various bibliographies of philatelic literature under various classifications. (see the Contents) Since they were reasonably self-explanatory, they have not been translated here.

PART 4

REFERENCE BOOK OF GERMAN PHILATELIC PERIODICAL LITERATURE FROM THE BEGINNING
TO THE END OF 1891

INTRODUCTION

It was pointed out in the Foreword that books usually say in their titles what they are about. Hence they need no reference book. In the exceptional cases where this not so, their contents are indicated in the catalogue of literature, Part III of this work.

The present reference book is thus restricted to the periodical literature, which moreover, represents the centre of gravity of the German philatelic literature.

It should be an exact and trustworthy guide in this respect.

The large amount and variety of the material makes some classification necessary, so that a desired subject can be located easily and reliably.

The five sections into which the reference books have been divided are as follows:

- 1) General Section
- 2) Special Section
- 3) Postal Service
- 4) Society Movement
- 5) Authors

The first Section includes all of the concepts, events, etc. which affect philately or are related to it.

Since the postal service is closely related to philately, a number of postal terms which really belong in Section 3 are also included here.

The second Section contains principally the items relating to the trade and commerce of individual countries, and also everything not specifically relating to philately in general.

Dividing the material between these two Sections was a difficult task, and if the reader thinks it has not been carried out quite consistently, he should bear in mind that there are items and things that could just as well be included in the first Section as the second.

The extent of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Sections should be obvious.

It should always be borne in mind however, that this book is not a specialist philatelic encyclopaedia - which must wait to be written - but only contains topics to which some reference is made in the German philatelic periodical literature.

Page 69

Subjects which are familiar to every philatelist and which are covered in every textbook on philately, but about which nothing worthy of note has appeared in the periodical literature will therefore not appear in this reference book.

For example, the only societies mentioned will be those that have figured in the periodical literature by the publication of society records, reports of meetings, etc., or about which something noteworthy has been published.

Finally, the author would like to set out some of the principles which have guided him in drawing up this reference book.

The page number is not given in quoting the references. The issue number is enough for a given article to be located. The reader must be ready to take a little trouble in searching.

For most subjects, the reference is to the article in which they appear. However, when the article is very heterogeneous in nature, the page reference is given instead.

When articles deal with more than one topic, they are given separate entries under the various keywords, so long as they relate to something of interest to philatelists.

As for notices of new stamp issues, preference is given to those which give exact details of the date of issue.

As for reports on individual misprints, varieties, etc., preference is given to those relating to the older postage stamps, since more recent misprints, etc. appear almost without exception in the larger recent handbooks.

Revenue stamps used as postage stamps and articles on the individual postage stamps of Peru are left out, partly because there are so many articles on these topics that the reader would become confused, and partly because the description of the individual stamps referred to in an article often presented insuperable difficulties if the work was not to be excessively enlarged.

Moreover, there are excellent monographs on the stamps of Peru.

As for the details of the stamps, these could not be as precise as they are in a catalogue. If the reader looks at the date when the article concerned appeared, he will easily be able to work out which issue of stamps is concerned.

The date at which the number of a magazine containing a particular article appeared can easily be obtained from the index to literature.

Foreign words could not be avoided, and there was no uniformity in the terminology used for one and the same subject, since writers often use foreign words in their articles and employ different designations for the same object, and the title had to be quoted in the form in which it actually appeared.

The bibliography is designed for philatelists, and it is not necessary therefore, to give lexicographic attention to all of the technical terms used in philately, and to explain them. Rather, they must be assumed as known.

Page 70

To give one example, the word Potschefstrom is not used as an individual keyword, but the relevant literature is given under Transvaal.

Anecdotes stories, comic pieces, riddles and so on are completely ignored, and articles which merely amount to personal attacks are not included.

When it comes to surveys and critical accounts of philatelic-literary works, especially foreign ones, only the most important are included.

In general, the more recent literature is given more attention than the older, as it is more important.

When no author is named, none is given. With some few exceptions, ciphers and initials are disregarded.

Articles that could be entered under a series of keywords receive this treatment as far as practicable.

The reference book covers the entire German periodical literature. Items not in the author's own extensive library were kindly made available to him by a number of the larger German societies.

The author failed to trace only a few insignificant ephemera, such as Bauschke's *Deutschen Briefmarken-Sammler of 1869, and the Regelmässigen Wochen- und Marktberichte der Hamburger, Lübecker and Bremer Briefmarkenbörse published by Theodor Müller in Hamburg in 1872, and so on. For the same reason, their contents cannot be abstracted.

As for multilingual journals, such as H. Kirchhoffer's *Schweizer Briefmarken-Journal of Lausanne, or any that contain foreign language articles. The author decided to include the foreign language contributions as well, since these journals form part of the German philatelic literature, and the reference book should include everything that contains German philatelic literature.

These explanations should enable everyone to become quickly familiar with the reference book, and once he has done so, to use it readily to locate what he wants, always provided that his subject has been treated in a noteworthy manner in the German philatelic literature.

It should be noted finally that in every case in the journal references the Roman numeral gives the volume, and the Arabic the issue number.

TRANSLATOR'S NOTE

The sections which follow in the original consist of detailed indexes to the German language periodical literature. There are two sections:- General topics and Countries (including stamp-issuing states and cities). Since the entries are self explanatory (possibly with the aid of a dictionary) and consisted mostly of author's names and bibliographic entries, they have not been translated here.

PART 5

PHILATELIC AUTHORS AND OUTSTANDING PHILATELISTS

The Sections on postal undertakings and societies have had to be left out, since the work was already too extensive. However, the author hopes to issue them separately some time.

INTRODUCTION

My original intention for this Section was to list everyone who has written and published anything related to philately in one alphabetical sequence, and give details of all the books, periodical articles, etc. that they had issued.

This was originally expected to occupy 12 issues, but it became obvious that at least 2 to 3 more would be needed. Also, the authors were listed with their monographs in Part III, and their periodical articles in Part IV, so I thought it as well to abandon this plan.

Hence, this Section will only mention those philatelic writers and outstanding philatelists, accounts of whom, or of whose work, have appeared in the philatelic literature.

TRANSLATOR'S NOTE

Once again, the bibliographic nature of this Section removes the necessity of it being translated.

All of the people listed in this Section have been incorporated into my Bibliography of Biographies of Philatelists and Dealers.

END

Die Philatelistische Literatur
January 1934, Volume 3, Issue 1, Whole number 19

Translation Digest

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
May 1998

Note: A Translation Digest provides translations of the titles of the articles in a complete issue of a specialised bibliographical periodical and includes full translations of any articles of special interest to me.

p.1

Preface.

Dr. F. Kalckhoff

Literature has always been looked on as the stepchild of German philately; only catalogues with details of prices found favour with the mass of stamp collectors. Nevertheless there have been and still are small groups of people concerned to collect and study philatelic literature and cherish it. Carl Beck, who unfortunately died too early, was the first to try and bring together the German friends of philatelic literature in 1921. He managed to do this in the shape of the Verein Philatelistischer Literatursammler (Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors), which he got up to 252 members. Its organ was Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, edited by Beck and Bungerz. After Beck's death the Society folded up. It is the achievement of Schmitt diel to have started uniting the friends of philatelic literature once more. The original society was simply thought of as an "interest group", but it immediately became the Gesellschaft Philatelistisches Literaturfreunde e.V. (Union of the Friends of Philatelic Literature), with their own special journal Der Philatelistische Literatursammler as a regular supplement to the journal Grüne Sammler-Welt.

This supplement is now an independent journal. This opens the possibility of further development, and gives the young Union of the Friends of Philatelic Literature a means of publicity of which they can make absolute use.

There will be no shortage of material. There are so many German philatelic journals that no individual can buy, or even read, them all. This is where our new magazine will come in, since it will give a brief report of the contents of all the journals, so that everyone will be readily able to locate and get hold of the items that particularly interest them. A large staff of helpers have made themselves available for this task from the circle of our members. Objective descriptions of new journals with a philatelic content will follow. Articles of general interest on the development and extension of philatelic literature will alternate with papers on special subjects. Thus, on the one hand our journal should raise the level of interest in philatelic literature and contribute to its development, and on the other it should give our members the opportunity to exchange opinions and experiences.

Without literature, there is no philately: a stamp-sticker can only be made into a philatelist by means of the literature. And so, may the new journal be a total success in its declared aim of bringing true philately to the light.

pp.1-2

The airpost catalogue.

Dr. Robert Paganini (Zweisimmen, Switzerland)

In connection with my earlier article “the aerophilatelic journals’ (Der Philatelistische Literatursammler No. 2 of February 1933) it may be permissible to give brief details of another section of aerophilatelic literature. As new as this branch of collecting is, the following compilation will show how far this movement has developed in a relatively short space of time.

The year 1911 must be taken as the year of birth of aerophilately, since the first actual air mail was carried at that time (Allahabad, India), and the first interest was shown in the systematic collection of the relevant covers. What had been collected previously (balloon and pigeon post) could give rise to extremely interesting articles, but not to either systematic independent cataloguing nor to co-operation between specialist collectors, assuming there to be anyone who limited themselves to these topics.

The first society for those interested in air mail was set up in the United States in the year 1913 under the title “Aero Mail Club”. This was also responsible for the first special articles. These were published in various organs, principally the Philadelphia Stamp News.

The year 1913 also led me to the guild of “Air Postmen”. At that time there were propaganda flights in Switzerland to promote military aviation, and I decided that the term “Air Mail” had a future and it would be a good idea to collect the whole of the relevant literature. In this way, the first groundwork for what is today the extensive “air mail archive” in the Swiss Postal Museum in Berne was established.

My archival activities led to me go right on to begin a chronological collection on postal flights, in other words to begin to produce a catalogue. An extensive correspondence and a lively exchange of air mail items aided my attempts to bring together all relevant material so as to get an authentic historical record of the development of air mail for the benefit of later generations. At that time we were still a very small group, but my friends helped wherever they could and contributed a steady flow of written contributions, documents, newspaper cuttings, illustrations, etc. The outbreak of war meant great difficulties for my historical work, but my resolve once made could not be shaken.

There could be no question of printing during this period: there were too few specialist collectors for one thing and the topic was easy to overlook. This changed after the conclusion of peace; more people became interested, the old warplanes needed to be used; “air mail” became glamorous. I received enquiries about my little work and began to look for a publisher. An enquiry in Switzerland laid down conditions that I could not meet, the “Air Force – Air Post” publishers in Berlin declined, then it was Edmund Stein in Potsdam who decided to publish. However not till 1920 did the History of the Air Mail with Historical Catalogue of All Air Posts get published. I could not put a price on any items, since there simply was none at that time, so we exchanged it item for item for preference.

The year 1920 brought other very interesting publications, though they did not cover the entire field. These were:-

Ermes Jacchia	The pigeon post of 1918 and the air mail of today. , Geneva
Fred J. Melville	Aero Stamps. , London 1920 and 1924
Georges Brunel	The aerial post route. , Paris

In 1921 Champion set to work on a large scale. His world-wide organisation enabled him to go into things more intensively than was possible for a single collector. His experience as a dealer also enabled him to put a price on the items. His Historical and Descriptive Catalogue of the Stamps of the Aerial Post, has already gone through 6 editions and a supplement.

In the same year a tendency became obvious to catalogue only the air mail of individual lands or regions. There were the handbooks:

Stenper & Matzenan	The German Air Mail. , Berlin 1921
later followed:-
W. E. Hughes	Stamps of the flying post. , London 1922
R. Ridgway	Air post stamps. , London 1922
Alan Turton	Price list of air postage. , London 1923

It should be mentioned that the major general stamp catalogues also began to include air mail stamps and even airmail entires, even when they were only semi-official.

(Continuation follows)

p.2

The literature of Memel philately.

Compilation by Ing. E. Becker, Anklam

(3rd continuation)

The well-known Germania Berichte, the philatelic journal of the Germania-Ring, took notice of the Memel region quite early, there are short sections in 1923 nos. 5 and 6, and 1924 nos. 2, 3. The last of these contained the first report by Frd. Wilh. Thalmann on the use of German official service stamps in the Memel regions. Later in the year 1929 we find supplements to this in the Danzig Exhibition Catalogue by Ing. E. Becker. The Three States Provisionals were described in a shorter article by Post Councillor Scheuermann, under the title The Lithuanian provisionals of French Memel stamps and the reason for collecting them" (compare Dr. Nord's opinion in Sammlerwoche 1923, no. 37).

However, the essential article was that by the Memel collector, K. Spillner of Berlin, who unfortunately died too young. This was originally a contribution to the meeting of the Brandenburg district of the Germania-Ring on 2nd March 1924, then it was republished for readers in 1924 No. 3, and 1925 No. 3, by the Berlin member Dr. P. Pirl, who was well-known in other connections. The content of these papers was treated at more length by P. Neubrand, Danzig in a paper on the subject of Memel-Lithuania published in 1925, No. 6. Both papers gave the best possible account of the then state of research, and still have value today for both beginners and advanced students of this topic. Spillner's work was based on what was for those days very extensive material, dealing with both the Lithuanian and the French issues under the title Memel.

The Lithuanian ones were, unfortunately, first published as a supplement in the year 1925, after Spillner had proved the concept to be worthy of study and publication in November 1924. In his paper we find an enumeration of the issue numbers of the final markiu issue 141-150, also the arrangement of the figures in words and the differences in imprint of the I, II and III cent-litas issues. Since the magazine could not print illustrations at that time, especially detailed descriptions of the types were given. Amongst others, P. Neubrand established type V of Nos. 178 and 179, and gave it the name "Keulen-3". It has retained this name to the present day. Detailed descriptions were given of the figures in words, which consisted of two number. Since two or more elements were involved, which could be arranged in arbitrary combinations, the producers of catalogues and albums did not then follow this idea, and could not decide to give pictures of all the types. Even today we must state that neither Michel nor Senf 1933 can show all of the types of this issue alone without omissions, and thus the long and short of it is that album publishers, especially KaBe of Aschersleben and Borek of Brunswick still have gaps in their treatment of Memel, in spite of their zealous efforts.

Thus to sum up:

No. 4, Germania-Berichte, Leipzig 1923-1925
"Memel Disgust" 1923, no. 5/6

One can see from this title how angry the collector was over the fact that the newly established Lithuanian administration of the Memel region had nothing better to do than announce their presence in Memel to the whole world by issuing three provisional stamps in German currency.

Memel region. 1928, No. 5/6, p.40

Lithuania. 1924, No. 2

German official stamps used in Memel region. First report by Fr. W. Thalmann, Potsdam, 1924, No. 3, p.49

The Lithuanian provisionals of French Memel stamps and how to collect them. Post Councillor Scheuermann, 1924, No. 2

Memel. a report by Karl Spillner, Berlin-Charlottenburg, 1924, No. 3, pp.34-37

Memel region. by Karl Spillner, Berlin-Charlottenburg. (Deals with the Lithuanian issues), 1925, No. 3, pp.42-44 and No. 4, p.59

Memel-Lithuania. by P. Neubrand, Danzig, 1925, No. 5 and 6.

It should be pointed out here that the last author has published readable articles on Memel in several other papers besides Germania-Berichte. These will be quoted in the appropriate place. Germania-Berichte has published nothing else about Memel since 1925.

(4th continuation follows)

p.2

The lifespan of philatelic magazines – Part 8 (Conclusion)

C. Michaelis (Certified Agriculturist, Schleswig)

I have only received a few supplementary details and corrections to my articles so far. May I pat myself on the back about this and assume that in general the details were correct? The other possibility, that no interest has been interested, is contradicted by the fact that my articles have given rise to a lively correspondence and that there have been requests from all sides for the speedy appearance of the catalogue of all the German journals. My articles in fact arose from the preliminary work on this. Today here are some additional details. At the same time I can state that a further series of articles will follow in the third year of our journal.

1. Archiv für Briefmarkenkunde

Monthly supplement to the Dresdener Anzeigers was reported by me as having ceased publication with 1931 No. 12. The Vindobona Austrian Philatelic Club inform me that they possess 1932 Nos. 1 and 2. Subsequent enquiries have shown that the journal did not finish until No. 4 of 1932. However, the four issues for the year 1932 were not published by the Dresdener Anzeigers, but by the daily papers of the Stolle publishing firm, which includes about 12 Saxon newspapers (amongst them the Freital Daily News, the Tharandt Daily News, the Dippoldiswald Daily News, etc.) (See Der Philatelistisch Literatursammler, 1933 No. 3).

2. Vereinsmitteilungen des Hambg.-Altonaer B.S.V.

Was reported by me in 1932, No. 5 as having finished in the year 1923. The Society informs me that this publication is still appearing. It has been issued as follows: 1924 Nos. 1-5; 1925 Nos. 1-6; 1926-1929 Nos. 1-5 each; 1930, Nos. 1-6. Following the amalgamation of the 1885 and 1888 Societies, the new name of Hamburg-Altonaer Verein für Briefmarkenkund has been adopted. This is still issuing the publication. The issues have been:

1931 Vol. 1 (35 th year), Nos. 1-5	1932 Vol. 2 (36 th year), Nos. 1-6
1933 Vol. 3 (37 th year), Nos. 1-6

3. Der Deutsche Philatelist

Which I reported in 1932, No. 4 as finishing with vol. 25 for 1931, is now being issued by the firm of Alfred Bock, Berlin. The volume is numbered as XXV, 1931/32. Nos. 1/2 and 3/4 were still issued by Stock, and Nos. 5 and 6 by Bock. Before the take-over, the Bock Company issued a few numbers of Zeitung des Brfm.-Hauses Alfred Bock.

4. Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal

Was taken over by Senf Bros. of Leipzig from 1881, No. 5, and not from 1884 as I reported in 1932, No. 4.

How difficult it is to carry out research particularly as far as journals are concerned, may be illustrated by an example. In spite of the exchange of several letters, and despite the fact that I had 1931, No. 10 in my hand, the publishers of the Dresdener Anzeigers, who then owned the Archiv für Briefmarkenkunde, continued to say that this had ceased publication with 1931, No. 6. Only after repeated letters was I finally able to get the definitive information given above.

(A new series follows)

pp.2-3

Disposal point for philatelic literature

At the request of various members of the Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreund e.V. (Union of the Friends of Philatelic Literature), Hamburg, a central point for the exchange and disposal of philatelic books, journals and auction catalogues is to be set up. We all know that an exchange of literature between one enthusiast and another is very difficult and costly, and rarely leads to the disposal of all duplicates. Thus, the circle of those willing to exchange needs enlarging. Many of our readers have tried to help matters by means of what is called an exchange circle, but this involves still greater difficulties. Hence, the proposal is now for the Society to organize an exchange point for literature. This would operate so that every participant would send his complete stock of duplicates in to the exchange point, with details of any literature collectors who are not yet members of our Society. Items sent in would be accompanied by a list and entered on an account which would enable duplicate numbers to be simply estimated. Along with this the sender would enclose his own list of wants, which would be dealt with as quickly as the stock allowed. As a rule, journals would be exchanged one number against another. Exceptions would only be permissible for individual very rare issues and by arrangement with the organizer of the exchange scheme. Only clean, undamaged items would be accepted. Bound volumes will be calculated on the basis on 10 extras. The value of books, brochures etc. will be agreed from case to case with the organizer. 15% of the literature sent in will be deducted to cover the work involved and the expenses. Normally, the recipient will only have to pay the postage on what he receives, and this will only be sent in large batches as far as possible. This scheme will thus have the great advantage of saving the collector of literature a good deal of the postal charges and outlays for the supply of missing material. Also, material scattered all over the place will finally find its way into libraries. The success of the scheme will depend on the number of people taking part and the amount of material that each individual sends in. To date, almost 10,000 issues have been reported. If the scheme is now publicly announced, we hope to get it going along lines that our members and friends will find most useful for their own collections. The principal difficulty, that of finding someone to undertake this toilsome job in the interests of collectors of literature, has also been overcome. Our member, Certified Agriculturist C. Michaelis, of 1 Callisenstrasse, Schleswig has already volunteered. We ask you not to send any actual material in yet, but only to let us know as soon as possible if you are willing to participate and roughly how many duplicates you have, so that we can determine whether there is sufficient interest in an exchange scheme along the lines proposed.

It should be made clear from the outset that of course no member should expect to have his entire list of desiderata supplied a few days after he has sent his duplicates in. It will often be a matter of months before exactly the items come in that this or that person is particularly looking for. The exchange scheme will also sell off remainders though the first aim will always be to save participants expense.

Suggestions and desiderata will be gladly received by the organiser named. To get the scheme under way really quickly, contact with the organiser is sincerely requested.

p.3

Review

Much luck in the New Year to all friends and readers of this journal, Editors and publishers.

A new title for an independent journal. Following a suggestion from Privy Councillor, Dr. Franz Kalckhoff, and, on the occasion of our journal being independently published, we have decided to give it the title Die Philatelistische Literatur.

Our journal joins the Federation Internationale de la Presse Philatelique. We bring it to your notice that our journal has joined the Federation Internationale de la Press Philatelique. We hope that this action will enable us to do much more than before for the interests of Philatelic literature. We ask all members of the FIPP to support us in our endeavours. Our work is not for ourselves alone, but for the whole of the specialist philatelic press. The magazine Grüne Sammler-Welt also joined the FIPP.

Society for the Friends of Philatelic Literature e.V., Hamburg. Registration for the first General Meeting of the “Gesellschaft philatelistischer Literaturfreunde” is now closed.

Note: The remaining notes relate to the award of medals and reviews of individual publications.

p.3

Survey of contents.

We ask philatelists with language knowledge to help us in surveying the contents of foreign journals. Journals, guidelines and stationery are available. Postal charges will be refunded. Please write to C. Schmitt diel, 45 Toruquiststrasses, Hamburg 19.

pp.3-4

Literature previews.

p.4-6

New philatelic literature.

p.4 (Bottom of page)

Help everyone!

p.5

Gesellschaft Philatelistischer Literaturfreunde E.V., Hamburg [Society news section.]

p.6

Article selection.

New foreign literature.

Literary letterbox.

C. St. of L. Köhlens Philatelistisches Magazin No. 10 has not yet appeared, though ten issues were promised of the magazine. No. 1 appeared in December 1925, and No. 9, the last one, in September 1930 according to IPOSTA.

P. Gr of W. You share the fate of many other collectors of literature. The wants lists of philatelic magazines very often mention the lack of the first number of Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung, which you are looking for. Actually, the correct title is Philatelistische Nachrichten (Frankfurter Briefmarken-Zeitung) without any indication of the number, etc. Philatelistische Nachrichten is a supplement to the auction list put out by the firm of S. W.

Hess, Frankfurt-am-Main, (27th-29th April 1925). The copy owned by us contains a postcard from S. W. Hess dated 25th November 1925 which says This is the last copy I have. I hope you have the luck to track down the next-to-the-last copy!

R. G. of B. The article you want The philatelic journals of Germany and Austria-Hungary during the 1914-18 war by A. Bungerz, is not to be found, as you wrongly assume, in the Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, but in the Germania-Berichten, 1919, No. 1/2 (whole number 211/212), p.8, and No. 3/4 (whole number 213/214), p.27. If you do not possess these two issues, we are quite willing to lend you ours if you will pay the postage.

B. v. W. of K. Viktor Suppantschitsch has two distinctions. He was awarded the Lindenberg Medal on the 9th February 1913 and the Hans Wagner Medal on the 31st October 1918 for his services in the field of philatelic literature. He died in Graz on the 2nd March 1919 at the age of 80 years. In one of the next issues of our journal we intend to publish a detailed biography of this most important of all students and researchers of philatelic literature.

p.6 (Note in box at foot of page)

Every philatelic researcher, editor, writer, publisher, society chairman, librarian and literature collector belongs in the Society of the Friends of Philatelic Literatur e.V, Hamburg. Membership RM3- per year incl. the society journal Die Philatelistische Literatur, Editor – C. Schmittdiel, 45 Tornquiststrasse, Hamburg 19.

pp.7-9

Periodical review

Under this heading are included only the journals actually received regularly by the editorial staff.

The abbreviations used have been taken where possible from Kohl's Briefmarken Handbuch or the Deutsche Philatelistischen Jahrbuch [German Philatelic Yearbook]. New abbreviations used here and not yet in the Yearbook will be transferred to a forthcoming new edition.

The editorial board receives the following journals (See the original for the list of journals).

Contents overview

Collected and edited by C. Schmittdiel with the assistance of R. Körner, C. Michaelis and P. Preuss.

Reproduction of material from this section is forbidden.

The abbreviations used are as in the references above. The first figure represents the year, the second the issue number, and the third the page number of the magazine concerned.

References

Translator's Note: This section was translated in error as it was left attached to the part I sent to the translator.

Although the country names have been rendered in English, they are still in the alphabetical order of the German originals.

The following references and the periodical abbreviations have not been rigorously edited and should be checked against the original text.

- | | | |
|---------------|---|---|
| Allenstein | Stamps: new researches. (F. K. Fischer) | PmK 1933/300:229 |
| Armenia | Stamps: fancy issues. (P. P. Lindenberg) | BmS 1933/47-49 |
| Azerbaijan | Stamps: fancy issues. (P. P. Lindenberg) | BmS 1933/49 |
| Ethiopia | Stamps: 1931, defective printing ½ on 1 mehal. | IBJ 1933/22:351 |
| Bavaria | Cancellations: numbered kind. (W. Schrader) | DDPh 1933/3:17 |
| Belgium | Forgeries: 1902/1914: Railway stamp defectives and with false cancellations. | GB 1933/10:129 |
| | Stamps: 1863, 20 centimes embossed medallion. (A. de Cock) | PhBelge 1933/142:128 |
| | Telephone stamps. (A. de Cock) | PhBelge 1933/143:160 |
| | Essay on rare stamps. (P. de Smeth) | PhBelge 1933/142:134,
143:155, 144:187, 145:197 |
| | 1933, Orval issue. | BBZ 1933/12:168
BaW 1933/12:107
IBJ 1933/22:340 |
| | 1928 & 1933 The stamps of the Abbey of Orval. | MadrFil 1933/10:308 |
| | The Ambulants cancellation. (E. Corbisier de Meaultsart) | PhBelge 1933/144:182 |
| Belgian Congo | Stamps 1894-1916, Retouched dies for certain values. | PhBelge 1933/145:202 |
| Bergedorf | Block of four - a Classic stamp discovery. | GSW 1933/12:164 |
| Bolivia | Forgeries: 1930, 50c and 1Bol. | BsW 1933/11:102 |
| | Stamps: 1933, 15c on 35c upside down imprint. | IBJ 1933/22:351 |
| | 1933 issue of provisionals. | IBJ 1933/22:351 |
| Brazil | Air Mail: Rio Janeiro-Fortaleza route. | MP 1933/12 |
| | Stamps: 1843, the "bulls-eye" stamps. (K. Kayssner) | Portfil 1933/41:7 |
| | 1933 Stamps commemorating the visit of the Argentine President Gen. Justo. | GB 1933/10:136 |
| | Zeppelin Post: 1933, Chicago route. (H. Gerdessen) | LPK 1933/47:2 |
| Brunswick | Cancellation stamp: numbered kind. (W. Schroder) | DDPh 1933/3:18 |
| Buenos Aires | Stamps: Why are these stamps so rare? (L. Senf) | FBZ 1933/10:3 |
| Denmark | Stamps: 1851, 1857 and 1902. Variations in the crown watermark. | |
| | (R. Glasewald) | PhZ 1933/11/12:50 |
| | 1864-1870 (Danish text). (G.A. Hagemann) | NFT 1933/10:213 |
| Germany | | |
| Letters: | Collection of inflation letters, a sourcebook for cultural history. | |
| | (G. Kobold) | DIS 1933/31:504 |

- Franking: Further additions to firms franking apparatus. PhZ 1933/11/12:56
- Postal Stationery:
Postcards for 5 pf with extra stamps for 2½ pf. G-Pmk 1933/11:41
Studies on picture postcards. (Juncker) G-Pmk 1933/10:37
1933, picture postcards. BFG 1933/3:4
Collectors Corner? SEN Dec 1933:10
- Catapult post:
1933, the "Bremen" and the "Europa". (Scheer) MP 1933/12
The Bremen & the Europa. (H. Gerdessen) IML 1933/10:115
- Air Mail:
German air traffic. (Dr. R. Knauss) APT 1933/11:269
On the balloon post. Pmk 1933/300:234
Air mail charges. IML 1933/11:131
Do X. Pmk 1933/298:208
SgB 1933/50:11
Do X. (W. Prell) IML 1933/11:131
Special Cancellation for test flights of the "Westfalen" to South America. GB 1933/9:121
- Stamps:
1923, 125T./1000 W/W. Wz. waffle. Scientific results. (A. Burneleit) DIS 1933/31:519
1923, 250 000 provisionals. Study of plates. (A. Burneleit) DIS 1933/32:534
1923, Overprint provisionals. Series numbers. (A. Burneleit) DIS 1933/32:533
1923, Error 100T./100M. lilac inverted. IBJ 1933/22:351
1932, 15 pf red Hindenburg and others. GB 1933/10:135
1933, Figures of use for charity stamps. PhZ 1933/11/12:57
1933, Fredericus and other stamp booklets. (B. Handel) GB 1933/9:118
1933, Charity issue. IBJ 1933/20:308
MP 1933/12
Pmk 1933/299:220
1933, Charity stamp booklet. BFG 1933/4:4
1933, Richard Wagner memorial stamps. (Dr. A Lotze) IBJ 1933/21:325
1933, Edge perforations on Wagner Stamps - two types. Pmk 1933/309:232
1933, Charity stamp booklets, edge perforation and watermarks. (B. Kruger) IBJ 1933/23:355
1924/33, Commemorative stamps for 10 years existence of the German Charity Fund. IBJ 1933/23:356
GB 1933/10:135
SP 1933/12:213
BBZ 1933/12:168
1924-1933, Welfare stamps. (Dr. F. Gumpert) IBJ 1933/21:323 & 22:339
1924-1933, Printing together of the welfare stamps. (G. G. Müller) PhZ 1933/11/12:53
Differences in perforations in the stamps of the German State Post. (A. Metzner) PWZ 1933/11:103

- Airmail Stamps, remaining German...* (Ing. R. Reinmann)
Post 1933/12:261
Collections Corner. SEN Dec 1933:9
- Postal Undertakings:
Bavarian Free State, State Postal Regions. (O. Köhler)
IML 1933/10:108
Thuringian Free State, State Postal Regions. IML 1933/11:125
Wurttemberg Free State, State Postal Regions. (O. Köhler)
IML 1933/10:108
The private posts. (R. Strohmeyer) GSW 1933/12:161
Postal supervision for the Entente in the Rhineland. (K. Zirkenbach)
DIS 1933/32:523
Basis and aims of postal statistics. (Postmaster Dr. Raabe)
UPB 1933/11:371
German air traffic. (Dr. R. Knauss) APT 1933/11:269
- Rocket post: 1 and 3 Reichsmark rocket stamps. (Zucker) SBR 1933/51:10
Start Hasselfelde. SBr 1933/50: 14, 51: 10
Start of the rocket post by Gerhard Zucker. (E. Ehrmann)
FBZ 1933/11:16
- Cancellation: New occasional cancellation stamps. (K. Vieth)
PMK 1933/279:200, 298: 212, 300: 235
Special non-official cancellation stamps for test flights to South America. PMK 1933/300:232
1933 Novelties in advertising stamps. BPG 1933/4 :7
New advertising and occasional cancellation stamps. (J. Bochmann)
PH2 1933/11/12: 54
Charity advertising cancellations. PMK 1933/300:232
- Zeppelin Post: Passages 1933. (H. Gardessen) IML 1933/10:115
1933, Chicago route. (H. Gardessen) LPK 1933/47:1
5.-8. South America route. (W. Prell) PMK 1933/299: 222
Long Triangular Journey for the airship "Graf Zeppelin". (W. Prell)
IML 1933/11: 130
Use of off-course airmail stamp Senf No.437. GAB 1933/10:136
- German Colonies
Cancellation pricing. (Konr. K. Starke, Prof. W. Strohmeyer)
GB 1933/10: 127
- German Post in China
Cancellation: railway posts. (R. Glasewald) PhZ 1933/11/12: 50
- Estonia Air mail: forgeries. SGB 1933/50:12
Stamos: 1933: Tuberculosis issue. PMK 1933/299: 221
- France Forgeries: 1929, Exhibition stamps from Le Havre. GB 1933/9: 122
- Air Mail:*
Air mail label from the Airport Society. (K. Dahmann) MP 1933/12
Air Mail Societies. SGB 1933/50: 12
- Stamps: Law I classified 60,000 examples of the 25 centime Ceres (L'Abonné du Cinéma).* RPF 1933/101: 3
The various imperforate "20 c. blues". N under U (Sage type).
ET 1933/907: 891
Dated dies for French stamps. (Baron de Vinck) ET 1933/907: 892

- 1933, the new 90 cent. 908: 955, 909: 1025, 1910: 1089
BSW 1933/12: 104
- Greece Postal Undertakings: The little post of Nantes. ET 1933/910: 1079
Air Mail: 1926, 1933: Air mail stamps. PMK 1933/298: 210
Stamps: 1831, issue of the first stamps. BBZ 1933/11: 169
BMS 1933: 46
- 1840 - The first adhesive postage stamp. Ph/Gr Brit 1933/514: 192, 515: 214
- 1861 - Discovery of the printing plates. PMK 1933/299: 221
- 1861 - Discovery of the original plates. (P. L. Pemberton)
PhJ Gr Brit 1933/515: 220
- 1861 - Plates of the first issue rediscovered. ET 1933/909: 1019
- Postal Undertakings: Invention of the postage stamp as early as 1831 in Greece?* Post 1933/12: 263
- Zeppelin Post: Zeppelin stamps from the Greek Airline Society.*
MP 1933/12
- Great Britain
Air Mail: London - India and London - Plymouth Lines. MP 1933/17
Private air mail stamps of the Great Western Railway.
Bern BZ 1933/12: 152
- Stamps: Production of the first Edward issues.* SP 1933/12: 223
Debate in upper chamber on postage stamps. DSW 1933/11: 93
- Postal Undertakings: British Marine Post. (Corvette Capt. D. Crüsemann)*
PMK 1933/297: 195
- Hamburg Motor vehicle transport in the postal service. UPB 1933/11: 373
- Hanover Stamps: Post-free stamps. (P. Ohrt) Pmk 1933/300: 228
- Postal undertakings: The post offices. (W. H. Schnoor)* GSW 1933/12: 159
- Disinfecting letters.* DDPH 1933/4: 23
- Iceland Air Mail: Special Balbo Stamps. MP 1933/12
- Stamps: 1930 Jubilee issue in faulty impression.* Pmk 1933/300: 233
- Cancellations: Inland cancellations. (Text in Danish)*
NordPT 1933/11: 237
- Jhind The plating of No. 1. PhJ GrBrit 1933/515: 221
- Johore Stamps of the 19th century are rarer than the "Post Office" Pmk 1933/300: 231
- Canada Precancellation: precancelled stamps. (H. Menard)
EchUniv 1933/358: 727
- Papal States Postal undertaking: Post and Telegraphs in the Vatican State, and the first installations in the Papal States. (Ing. L. Respighi)
UPB 1933/10: 340
- Colombia Philatelic Science: Philatelic Encyclopaedia. (P. Roullé)
Ech Univ 1933/358: 751
- Costa Rica Air Mail: Opening of the first inland air mail route. IML 1933/11: 131
- Stamps: 1923 1 Colon, Conductor Manuel Gutierrez.* BSW 1933/11: 98
- Latvia Air Mail: 1932/33 flyer issue. S-PMK 1933/10: 33
- Liechtenstein
Stamps: 1933 Commemorative issue: 80th birthday of the Prince. (He)
Bern BZ 1933/11: 133
- Off-course issue of the 45Rp air mail stamp.* Bern BZ 1933/12: 153
- 1920 plate numbers of the consortium stamps. (T. Roth)* IML 1933/11: 122

- Cancellation: Cancellations on stamps from other countries.*
- IML 1933/10: 118
- Lithuania Postal undertakings: Scandal in the postal service. PMK 1933/300: 233
- Lubeck Stamps: 1859 defective 2½ sch: Production and number issued. (Maj. D. P. Ohrt) FBZ 1933/11: 1
- Macao Stamps: The "Mouchan" stamps. (C. George) PortFil 1933/40: 9
- Mauritius 1847 - commemoratives on a Post Office 1d. (Ph. K) BBZ 1933/12: 165
- Memel Region
- Stamps: basic research. (Ing E. Becker)* MR 1933/8: 12
- 1920/21 Plate Number, Sheet Numbers (of) millesimes.* MR 1933/9: 17
- Monaco Stamps: 1933, The 45c red. (Compte de Pomyers) RPF 1933/101: 8
- Naples Stamps: 1858, Naples issue. Ph Belge 1933/142: 150
- Newfoundland
- Forgeries: 1933 Balbo stamps.* PMK 1933/300: 233
- Stamps: 1933 issue commemoratives 350 years occupation by the English.* IBJ 1933/21: 334
- Nicaragua Cancellation: Postal cancellations on issues 1862-1905. PMK 1933/299: 215
- Netherlands Stamps: more about the 1876 issue. DPhR 1933/11: 249
- 1933 12½ C picture on the "Peace stamps".* BSW 1933/12: 105
- Norway Stamps: 1855 45K lion emblem with split claw. (R. Glasewald) PhZ 1933/11/12: 50
- 1863/66 - 3 skill retouched.* PhJ Gr Brit 1933/515: 228
- 1863, 24 - 24 skill. (Text: Norwegian) (Dr. J. Andersen)* Nord FT 1933/10: 215, 1933/11: 229
- Austria Entires: postcards with German-Czech imprint. (L. Greinholder) PhH 1933/13: 162
- Air Mail: Kronfield - Vierland flight.* Pmk 1933/300: 235
- Kronfield stamps planned.* Pmk 1933/300: 232
- Stamps: 1850/58, production of plates for the 9Kr and 45c. (P. de Frank)* Pmk 1933/300: 226
- 1895 Bisection of newspaper stamps.* Pmk 1933/299: 220
- 1933 Catholic connection stamps on Japanese paper.* Pmk 1933/299: 220
- 1933 The so-called Karschberg stamps.* Pmk 1933/299: 220
- 1933 Winter aid notice.* Pmk 1933/200: 232
- The nibeling stamps on sale for 8 years already.* SP 1933/12: 214
- Rocket Post: 1933, cancellation "St. Jacob bei Mixnitz".* MP 1933/12
- 1 Sch rocket postage stamp. (Smiedl)* SBr 1933/5: 10
- Cancellation Stamps: New special-occasion cancellation. (K. Vieth)* Pmk 1933/297: 200, 298: 212, 300: 234
- Special WIPA cancellation stamp.* DKB 1933/12: 107
- Zeppelin post: 1928-1932. (W. Prell)* DONP 1933/11: 145
- Paraguay Zeppelin post: 1933, Chicago Trip. (H. Gerdessen) LPK 1933/47: 2
- Perak Stamps: Stamps of the protected states of Straits settlements. (F. Wood) PhJ Gr Brit 1933/514: 200
- Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type.* PMK 1933/300: 231
- Poland Stamps: Allegories on stamps. (R. Kautz) DonP 1933/12: 154
- Portugal Stamps: 1931, Nuno Alvarex Pereira memorial issue. (text in Portuguese) PortFil 1933/41: 1

- 1931 Antony of Padua memorial issue. (text in Portuguese)
PortFil 1933/41: 1
- Prussia Stamps: 1850/56: Narrow and wide intermediate spaces. (W. Thalmann)
DDPh 1933/4: 21
Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/299: 219
Postal undertakings: Pomeranian ducal post. (A. Galiltsch)
APT 1933/11: 291
Cancellation stamps: hybrid from Halberstadt. GB 1933/10: 137
- Prince Edward Island
Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/299: 213
- Romania Stamps 1858-1872. The stamps of the Danubian principalities and Romania. (R. Poncelet)
Ph Belge 1933/42: 138, 145: 205
1866-72, reconstruction of the transfer block. (Dr. H. Birnbach)
IML 1933/10: 107
1893/99, degenerate varieties. S-Pmk 1933/11: 37
1896, 1 bani-degenerate varieties. PhJGrBrit 1933/514: 207
Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/299: 219
Cancellation Stamps: some guidelines for the study of Romanian cancellations. (I. W. Von Witzleben)
FPT 1933/23: 4, 24: 4
- Russia Entires: propaganda cards from Central Asia. (Voelkel)
G-Pmk 1933/298: 39
Air Mail: air mail post of the USSR. (W. Sonnenberg-Fedorowsky)
UPh 1933/9/10: 5
Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/299: 219
Stamps from Imperial Russia. (P. Preuss) BV 1933/11: 219
Perforation of postage stamps. (S. Mangeley)
IBJ 1933/21: 310, 1933/23: 357
- Saar 1933, description of the ethnographic series. IML 1933/11: 217
Stamps: Its postage stamps. (H. Liessenheim)
SchweizBZ 1933/10: 169, 1933/12: 193
Old and new from the Saar. (K. Petermann) Post 1933/12: 252
Vertical or diagonal printing on the official stamps. IBJ 1933/23: 366
Soon out of business as a stamp country! PhZ 1933/11/12: 57
- Saxony Cancellation Stamp. (A. Grossmann) PhZ 1933/11/12: 51
Line cancellation stamp. (A. Grossmann) PhZ 1933/11/12: 51
Interesting letter with Dahlen stamp on ½gr. (Johann) BV 1933/11: 139
- Serbia Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. PMK 1933/299: 219
- Sierra Leone
Stamps: 1933. Memorial issue for 100th anniversary of death of W. Wilberforce. IBJ 1933/22: 347
- Spain Stamps: 1850, interesting stamps. (R. de Arcaute) Mdr Phil 1933/10: 303
1892, unofficial military stamps. (R. Glasewald) Mdr Phil 1933/11/12: 50
Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/300: 23
Cancellation: 1893; unofficial military service cancellation. (R. Glasewald)
PhZ 1933/11/12: 50
- Swahililand Stamps: Dispute as to the authenticity of stamps. (Ph.K) BBZ 1933/12: 163
Court case regarding recognition of stamps. Pmk 1933/299: 213
- Sungei Ujong
Stamps of the protected states of Straits Settlements. (F. Wood)

- Phj GrBrit 1933/515: 216
- Schleswig Holstein
- Sweden Numeral cancellation stamps. (W. Schrader) DDPh 1933/3: 18
 Stamps, 1930/32: Field postage stamps. (Fr. Radfux) IML 1933/11: 121
 Stamps that are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/300: 231
 Special rarities. (Georges Brunel) (French text) Bern BZ 1933/11: 132
- Switzerland Forgeries Warning. Pmk 1933/299: 220
 Entires: Valuation of the first entires and piece cut from them.
 Bern BZ 1933/12: 148
 Stamps that are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/300: 231
 First use of the 1 Rayon light blue. Bern BZ 1933/12: 154
 Stamps: Introduction of matt-laid (Slightly chalked) paper.
 Bern BZ 1933/12: 152
 New gumming method. Bern BZ 1933/12: 152
 Pro Juventute (for youth) stamps 1933 Schweiz. BZ 1933/12: 198
- Thurn and Taxis
 Stamps which are rarer than those of the "Post Office". Pmk 1933/300-231
 Numeral cancellation stamp. (W. Schrader) DD Ph 1933/3: 19
- Transvaal Forgeries: an infested stamp country. GB 1933/10: 133
- Czechoslovakia
 Forgeries: SO 1920 and bisected Hradny IV to 10H yellowish-green, 20H red and 3H Lilac. Ph H 1933/13: 177
 Entires: types of cancellation on armorial entires. Don P 1933/12: 161
 Postal Systems: The Prague pneumatic post. Ph H 1933/11: 164
 Cancellation: Special-Occasion cancellation. (B. Base) Ph H 1933/11: 165
 28.10.1933 - Special cancellation in connection with the unveiling of a memorial to President Masaryk in Podersam. Ph H 1933/12: 177
- Tunis Forgeries: 1906, 1fr without middle section. ET 1933/907: 902
- Turkey Stamps: for the 10th year of existence of the new Turkey. (W. Stahncke)
 Post 1933/12: 254
- Ukraine Stamps: future and "vogue" of Ukrainian collections. (I.K.T.)
 Uph 1933/9/10: 5
- Hungary
 Stamps: 1874/76 and 1881/88, typical printing mistakes. (M. Biro)
 Don P 1933/12: 151
 1898-99, Postage stamps. (M. Biro) Don P 1933/11: 138
 Cancellation stamps: place of production of cancellation stamps.
 Pmk 1933/300: 232
- United States of America
 Entires: Notes of sender on envelopes. (Dr. P.) G-Pmk 1933/10: 39
 Stamps: 1933, N-R-A stamp criticised. Pmk 1933/300: 233
 Zeppelin post: 1933, Chicago route. (H. Gerdessen) LPK 1933/47: 1-B
 Zeppelin flight to Chicago. (Schew) MP 1933/12
- Wend Stamps which are rarer than the "Post Office" type. Pmk 1933/299: 219
- Wurttemberg
 Stamps: 1869 production and development of the strictly rectangular numeral postage stamps. (C. Köhler) SP 1933/12: 216
 1857/62; History of the heraldic stamps. (C. Köhler) DDpH 1933/4: 26

Subjects

Exhibitions	Basle: Postage stamp exhibition, 7-9 Oct. 1933.	Schweiz BZ 1933/12: 207
	Berlin: AEG exhibition, 13 Nov. 1933.	BMS 1933/46
		BBZ 1933/12: 168
	BSV Centrum.	GB 1933/9: 122
	BSV Pankov.	BmS 1933/41
	“South-West” Stamps Exchange Society.	BMS 1933/47
	New Cologne Philatelists Club.	BMS 1933/41-48
		GB 1933/9: 122
	Three-man exhibition! (Dr. G. Gewande)	Post 1933/12: 255
	Hamburg: Barmbeck-Uhlenhorst-Winterhuder Stamp Collectors Society.	DIS 1933/31: 514
		DIS 1933/31: 514
	Society of German Collectors.	GB 1933/9/114
	Special Air Mail Show. (E. Ehrmann)
	Kattowitz: 1st General Slavic Postage Stamp Exhibition 1934.	Pmk 1933/299: 222
	Leipzig: “The German Saar”. Collection of Saar stamps by Fr. Seifert in the
	Museum of Geography.	GB 1933/10: 135
	Troppau: Advertising show by the Arb. Stamp Collectors Society.	Ph H 1933/12: 170
	Vienna: WIPA. (Dir. N. Strandell) (Text in Swedish)
		Nord FT 1933/10: 218, 1933/11: 232
	WIPA.	IML 1933/10: 106
		DKB 1933/13: 106
	WIPA, youth for youth. (W. Luschin)	J-Post 1933/6: 31
	Exhibition of Christmas Stamps, 1933.	Pmk 1933/300
	Exhibition for young philatelists.	Pmk 1933/300-233
	Zurich: National Stamp Exhibition 1934.	Pmk 1933/299: 222
		Bern BZ 1933/12: 152
		Schweiz BZ 1933/12: 198
	Italy: International Exhibition of Philatelic Journals and Literature 1935.	Pmk 1933/299: 222
Awards	1933, Bungerz medal for Fritz Seifert.	GB 1933/10: 135
	Royal Phil. Society 1933.	Pmk 1933/300: 233
Postal Stationery
	What is a postal entire? What types are there? (Ing. E. Müller)
		Pmk 1933/290: 203
Philately for the young
	What has stamp collecting to offer the young? (W. Forsterling)
		PhZ 1933/12: 47
	Philately in the teaching of geography.	BSW 1933/12: 102
	“The Young Collectors Circle”.	BSW 1933/12: 102
	Report of 2nd meeting of the Youth Section of the Society of Leipzig Stamp
	Exchanges.	BV 1933/11: 134
	Youth Section of the Nuremburg Stamp Collectors Society and “The Black
	One” a new guide.	GB 1933/11: 134
	Exhibition of philately for the young in Vienna, Dec. 1933.	Pmk 1933/300-233
Literature	International Exhibition of Philatelic Journals and Literature in Italy 1935.

		Pmk 1933/299: 222
	Rarities of Philatelic Literature. (M. Ton)	Pb 1933/5
	Survey of articles Sept. - Oct. (Fr. Seifert)	Pb 1933/5
Air Mail	Explanation of double terms in aerophilately. (Dr. M. Kronstein)	LNN 14 Oct. 1933
	Determination of the terms in aerophilately.	Schweiz BZ 1933/12: 200
	Air Mail and air commerce. (Dr. M. Kronstein)	BHF 14 Oct. 1933
	Various new air mail labels.	MP 1933/12
	Aerophilately.	ET 1933/910: 1064
Personalities
	Bacon, E. D.	Pmk 1933/300: 233
	Bernhard, D.	Pmk 1933/300: 233
	Blanchard + Louis, Lausanne.	Schweiz BZ 1933/10: 185
	Chiossone, Edoardo.	Ph J Gr Brit 1933/514: 202
	Gelli + Gustave, Brussels.	Pmk 1933/299: 221
		Ph Belge 1933/144:181;
		BSW 1933/12: 102
	Habermann, Dr. Peter.	Pmk 1933/299: 220
	Hind, Arthur.	IBJ 1933/21: 322
	Koch + Albert, Basel.	Schweiz BZ 1933/10: 186
	Konig, Karl (forger).	Pmk 1933/300: 234
	Lee, E. J.	Pmk 1933/300:233
	Lissink, Kalenin.	Pmk 1933/299: 214
	Metzger + Oskar, Karlsruhe.	PhZ 1933/11/12: 56
	Steyskal, Dr. Julius.	Pmk 1933/300: 232
	Thalmann + Bruno.	GB 1933/10: 134
	Walenta + Franz.	BSW 1933/12: 102
		GB 1933/10: 135
	Alois Kolb, Leipzig, the creator of the Wagner Stamps. (B. Kruger)	LNN 29 Oct. 1933
	Professor Alois Kolb, Leipzig (creator of the Wagner Stamps).	PhZ 1933/11/12: 57
	Kolo-Moser as postage stamp designer. (H. M. Mauthner and K. Moser)	Don P 1933/11: 133
Postal Undertakings
	Our post then and now. (E. Bindl)	SEN Dec 1933: 7
	Postal Sidelights round 1790. (K. Kayssner)	Post 1933/11: 230
	General Postmaster Strechinelli. (W. H. Schnoor)	Post 1933/11: 233
	History of the Barter: Stamps of old postal undertakings. (L. Kalmus)	BBZ 1933/12: 166
	The post horn in postal history. (W. Petrausch)	J-Post 1933/6: 22
	Postal Undertakings again save paper.	SP 1933/12: 214
	The Universal Postal Union.	ET 1933/908: 943
Price Formation
	Level of issue & stamp price (A. Grosmann)	Post 1933/11: 238
	Level of issue and demand.	Pmk 1933/299: 213
	The fate of residuals.	Pmk 1933/297: 189
	Turn of the market in Kiloware.	SP 1933/12: 215
	Falling prices. (C. G.)	Ph H 1933/12: 177

	Rates of exchange hard to determine. (R. Glasewald)	PhZ 1933/11/12: 58
	Lands with forced currency. (D)	MB 1933/10: 4
	Russia has no forced currency.	MB 1933/11: 1
Administration of Justice	Postage stamp forgery and its criminal status in present-day German law. (G. Heyer)	T. 1933/10: 4
	Is the export of postage stamps outside the turnover tax? (H. Sinn)	MB 1933/10: 14
Collecting	Court case over the Swahili stamps.	Pmk 1933/299: 213
	What is philately? (Ing. E. Müller)	Pmk 1933/299: 217
	What is stamp collecting? (Ing. E. Müller)	Pmk 1933/299-218
	What is the difference between a stamp collector and a philatelist? (Ing. E. Müller)	Pmk 1933/299: 218
	What types of stamp collection are there? (Ing. E. Müller)	Pmk 1933/300: 225
	What and how shall I collect?	BFG 1933/3: 2
	How do I preserve damaged stamps. (G. Heyer)	T. 1933/10: 7
	For young and old specialists, and those who wish to become such without heavy expenses.	BFG 1933/4: 3
	Philately and numismatics. (G. Mathescu)	FPT 1933/23: 2
	Us Collectors. (Dr. P. Wotta)	FPT 1933/23: 7
	Value and preservation of stamps.	BPG 1933/4: 1
	Quality requirements.	Pmk 1933/299: 213
	Philatelic scrap trade: repaired stamps. (Major A. D. P. Ohrt)	Ph H 1933/12: 174
	Desirable and undesirable countries.	Don P 1933/12: 164
	Cheap areas for the collection of postage stamps. (A. Metzner)	GB 1933/9: 113, 10: 130
	New ways of collecting. (M. Büttner)	BSW 1933/11: 97
	Modern collecting trends. (M. Büttner)	FBZ 1933/11: 15
		SB 1933/11: 140
	Recruiting through a French chocolate factory.	BSW 1933/12: 106
	How Ferrari "collected". (M. Büttner)	BSW 1933/11: 95
	Stamp Collecting a popular hobby.	BSW 1933/12: 103
	Germans, collect German stamps. (M. Büttner)	SB 1933/32: 521
	Collecting national stamps. (M. Büttner)	SB 1933/11: 141
	Free Philately!	BFG 1933/3: 1,4: 3
	Last-free exchanges.	DIS 1933/32: 529
	Variety finder.	FBZ 1933/11: 16
Protection for Collectors	Tests and testers. (R. Siegel)	Pmk 1933/299: 214
	State testing station.	PwZ 1933/10: 88
	"Infla" State testing station.	DIS 1933/32: 525
	Draft of stamp forgery paragraph.	T 1933/11: 3
	Edge and perforation forgeries.	DKB 1933/13: 108
	Flourishing trade in forgeries.	BSW 1933/12: 106
	Sale of forgeries by Karl Konig, Leyden.	Pmk 1933/300: 234
	Criminal Charges against Karl Heissengerger.	IML 1933/10: 117

	Ouderka Stamp House, Breslau.	PhZ 1933/11/12: 58
	Private production of special cancellation stamps for test flights to S. America.
	CD "Westphalia".	PhZ 1933/11/12: 50
	Postage stamp rackets in the Lithuanian postal system.	GB 1933/9: 121
	Warning about Swiss forgeries.	Pmk 1933/299: 230
	Post in USA against swindlers.
	East European fantasy issues.	Bms 1933/47
	The suppression of postal frauds.	RPF 1933/101: 4
Collections	The Swedish postal museum.	DD Ph 1933/4: 28
	Official stamp collection in Switzerland.	DD Ph 1933/4: 28
	Concerning A. Hind's 1c British Guiana.	GB 1933/10: 137
Special Areas
	Registration slips. (P. P. Lindenberg)	BMS 1933/45
Study of Cancellations
	The history of cancellations. (K. Dopf)	FBZ 1933/11: 7
	Valuation of cancellations. (H. Emmenegger)	Schweiz BZ 1933/10: 175
	Cancellation Studies. (P. P. Lindenberg)	BMS 1933/42
Meetings
	Philatelic gossip relating to the Collectors Congress in London. (M. Buttner)	SB 1933/11: 139
	Debate on postage stamps in Oberhaas. (M. Büttner)	BSW 1933/11: 94
	Big meeting in Lugano 1934.	Pmk 1933/299: 222
	Vienna - 4th congress of the International League of the Philatelic Press
	Report.	BV 1933/11: 136
	Vienna - 4th Congress of the International League of the Philatelic Press.
	(A. Leao)	PWZ 1933/10: 88
Society Matters
	International Federation of Philately.	BMS 1933/49
	Choice of President & Council for the International League of the Philatelic
	Press for the year 1934.	FIPP 1933/137: 183
	International League of the Philatelic Press. Periodical Report.
		FIPP 1933/136: 179
	New post of Chairman for the special area Ob. Ost. Russia, Poland and the
	Warsaw General Government Area.	GB 1933/10: 129
	Making the Society's president known.	PWZ 1933/11: 99
	International Federation for Philately.	PWZ 1933/11: 101
	Programme for the State Union for the German stamp trade.
		PWZ 1933/11: 101
	Second meeting of the State Union for the German stamp trade.
		MB 1933/10: 1
	Reports of the State Union for the German stamp trade.	MB 1933/11: 1
	State Union for the German stamp trade.	BBZ 1933/11: 14
	Withdrawal of the German Philatelic Society in Czechoslovakia from Society
	reports.	Pwz 1933/10: 87
	Society reports.	Pwz 1933/10: 87
	Collections and dealers. (P. P. Lindenberg)	BMS 1933/47
Society Matters
	International Union of Collectors of philatelic letters and postal documents
	"Savo".	GB 1933/10: 137
	Union of collectors of German inflation stamps.	DIS 1933/31: 509; 32: 530

	From the Sudeten German Collectors Society.	PhH 1933/12: 173
Miscellaneous
	Photographic postage stamps. (Ing. R. Reinmann)	Post 1933/11: 239
	Aesculapius and his helpers talk about the stamp picture. (Dr. H. W. Gewande)	Post 1933/11: 234
	Struggle for freedom from the Turks on stamps. (Dr. A. Lotze)	IML 1933/10: 105
	Postage stamps with music. (M. Buttner)	LNN 29 Nov. 1933
	Animals, plants and postage stamps.	PMK 1933/10: 35
	Etymology of countries names.	J-Post 1933/6: 23
	Poem - Help! (H. Wüstefeld)	GB 1933/10: 134
	Giants and dwarfs on postage stamps. (Ing. R. Reinmann)	T.1933/11: 4
	Megalomaniac stamp issues. (G. Heyer)	T.1933/10: 6
	Stamps and espionage. (G. Heyer)	T. 1933/11: 7
	Honouring heroes by postage stamps. (M. Buttner)	SEN Oct/Nov 1933
	Arthur Hind's collection.	PWZ 1933/10: 93
		BEZ 1933/11: 151
Postage Stamp Science
	Distinguishing between different types of issues. (Edwin Muller)	Pmk 1933/297: 192
	Sheet studies. (Dr. Med. A. Szalay)	Don P. 1933/12: 157
	Stamps in miniature sheets. (Dr. A. Lotze)	IMZ 1933/11: 124
	Numbers printed.	BFG 1933/4: 4
	Colour in philately. (L. Reinhardt)	Post 1933/12: 258
	Printing postage stamps then and now.	Bern BZ 1933/11: 131
	Test printing and draft reproductions of postage stamps. (E. Cohen)	FPT 1933/23: 10; 24: 2
	The "Plate". (Dr. Med. A. Szalay)	Don P 1933/12: 155
	Watermarks.	DK B 1933/13: 108

p.9

Catalogues and pricelists.

pp.9-12

Advertisements

END

A. Marx

Dr. Wilhelm Blank is 65 years old

[Dr. Wilhelm Blank 65 jahre]

Der Sammler-Dienst, 9th August 1969, Volume 20, Issue 16, p.1019

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1991

DR. WILHELM BLANK IS 65 YEARS OLD

Wilhelm Blank was born on the 9th August 1904 in Eichstatt (Bavaria). He grew up in Lorrach (Baden), where he attended the Hebel High School. He studied philosophy, history, geography and political economics at the Universities of Wurzburg and Leipzig. In Leipzig he attended the Institute for Press Studies and did a thesis on Philatelie in Fach- und Tagespress (Philately in the Specialist and Daily Press) for his doctor's degree in 1928. He was then active as an editor and press agent and worked for nearly twenty years in Bonn as a Parliamentary journalist.

Postage stamps cast their spell on him whilst he was studying German history and geography at High School. The initial spark came in the summer of 1911, when the large-sized commemorative German stamps were issued by the Bavarian Royal Post to mark the jubilee of the Prince Regent Leopold. When he was in the third form at high school he started a school "swaps" circle with the aid of an understanding teacher. He built up his philatelic knowledge with the aid of Senf's Briefmarken-Journal and the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung. His first articles and descriptions of new issues appeared during his high school days. In 1927 he was given the task of setting up the philatelic section of the International Press Exhibition "Pressa 1928" in Cologne, with the aid of material from the German Library in Leipzig. He worked for several months under Carl Lindenberg, curator of the State Postal Museum, at this museum in the Mauerstrasse, Berlin.

Dr. Blank was a founder member of FIPP, the International Federation for the Philatelic Press, and is still a member of its successor organization, the AIJP, the International Association of Philatelic Journalists. In 1930 he was awarded a bronze medal at "Iposta" in Berlin, and numerous other philatelic distinctions followed in the course of the years. He was retained as a regular or occasional advisor by a series of postal authorities.

As well as a specialist in philatelic literature and the German region, Blank's particular love was the stamps of the Principality of Liechtenstein with which he had had connections since his *association/consortium days. He was also an expert on the German colonial field which he did not look on as a closed area for collecting, but as an ongoing subject covering the colonial and mandatory periods down to the present day independent successor states. He wants to get today's young collectors interested in the current stamps from this interesting region. A short time ago he traced and visited the old postal stations and routes dating from the Imperial Protectorate in the hinterland of Cameroon and Togo. His experiences are recorded in special articles and his work on the new "Friedemann", in collaboration with Dr. Wittmann. He has also lectured on his contributions to and evaluation of the history of the German post in Africa.

*Translator's Note: I do not know what this really means.

END

Alfredo Alabiso

Cumulative Index to "Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica" 1951 - 1985

35 Years of Philatelic Journalism

[Indice Bibliografico "Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica" 1951 - 1985

35 Anni di Giornalismo Filatelico]

Edizioni S.C.O.T., Turin, Italy, 1986, 14pp.

Translation of the Introduction only, p.3

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

January 1991

CUMULATIVE INDEX TO

"IL COLLEZIONISTA-ITALIA FILATELICA" 1951 - 1985

35 YEARS OF PHILATELIC JOURNALISM

INTRODUCTION

Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica was born in January 1951 from the combination of La Settimana del Collezionista, published by Giulio Bolaffi and Italia Filatelica, published by Luigi Raybaudi Massilia.

Up to 1963 the magazine appeared monthly, then in response to the special and intense ups and downs undergone by the philatelic market during that period it became first a fortnightly and then from April 1966 even a weekly, reaching a circulation of more than 66,000 copies (statement on the cover, November 1966).

Once the "boom" had passed, the periodical returned to being a fortnightly in 1968, and then a monthly again starting from 1981.

From 1984 Il Collezionista incorporated Francobolli.

The number of issues published reached 723 with the one for December 1985.

The cumulative index does not include the articles published previous to the birth of Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica. It was designed as a tool by means of which collectors could easily locate articles of interest published from 1951 to 1985.

For reasons of space the index has been restricted to articles dealing in a sufficiently exhaustive manner with their subject; hence short items, readers' letters, regular notes, and articles with only a slight philatelic content have been left out, along with reports on events, financial matters and philatelic doings in general.

The material has been subdivided using the criteria traditionally adopted for catalogues and lists, with further subdivisions in those cases (e.g. postage stamps, cancellations, postal history) where the material was extensive enough to call for it.

Some articles appear under more than one heading for the convenience of researchers.

END

Carl Beck

Bibliography of German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries
[Bibliographie der Deutschen Sonderschriften über die Postwertzeichen Einzelner Länder]
2nd edition, Carl Beck, Berlin, Germany, 1919, 16pp.

Translation of the Foreword only, p.3

(The work was originally published in: Germania-Berichte, October 1915, Volume 12, Issue 9/10, pp.129-130; February 1916, Volume 13, Issue 1/2, pp.14-16; March, Issue 3/4, pp.44-45 & June, Issue 5/6, pp.70-71.)

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1991

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF GERMAN MONOGRAPHS ON THE
POSTAGE STAMPS OF INDIVIDUAL COUNTRIES

FOREWORD

The first edition of my Bibliography of the Most Important German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries appeared in Autumn 1915, and I now offer the new edition to the world of collectors under the title:

Bibliography of German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries

The friendly reception given to the first edition by both collectors and the technical press encouraged me to continue along the path I had taken and gave me the certainty that my work for the science of philately was not in vain as far as collectors were concerned.

Now that there is a growing trend towards collecting individual countries, every philatelist is certain to greet this bibliography with joy, and every collector who has got beyond the schoolboy level of buying stamps to stick in an album, and is taking a serious interest in his stamps, will find it of great use and profit to find out what other experts and researchers are doing in the field of special collections. For this reason we have put together this Bibliography of German Monographs on the Postage Stamps of Individual Countries. We hope it will be of service to the world of collectors, and if it persuades a wider circle of collectors to take up the study of our scientific literature, the bibliography will have fulfilled its purpose.

Like the first edition, this one lists practically all of the German-language monographs published at home and abroad: I have received corrections and additions from many sides and it is my pleasant duty to thank all those who have aided me in the production of the present work, in particular the late Senate President Victor Suppantschitsch of Graz, and my artist friend A. Bunnerz of Tegernsee, in the warmest possible manner.

Berlin, Autumn 1919

The Author

END

Max Bloch

General Index - 1919:

in all the German speaking philatelic Magazines of 1919: Articles, Notes and Comments, etc. Included.

[General Index - 1919:

*aller in den Deutschsprachigen philatelist. zeitschriften des jahres 1919 enthaltenen:
Artikel, Notizen und Bemerkungen etc.]*

Weltpost-Echo, Teplitz - Schonau, Germany, 1920, 48pp.

Translation of the Preface and abbreviations only, pp.3-4

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1991

GENERAL INDEX - 1919

PREFACE

When I published the General Index for 1918 in the Briefmarkensammler, Vienna, last year, this work attracted relatively little attention, in spite of the immense amount of effort that had gone into assembling the material.

One reason for this is that the journal concerned is not yet widely known outside Austria, another is the method of publication in separate issues.

Only the Donaupost found the work worth mentioning to its readers.

I have therefore decided this year to let the General Index for 1919 appear as a book, since a reference book must have a more concise form than a series of periodical articles.

My call for co-operation with this extensive philatelic bibliography also went practically unheeded in the previous year. Only one co-worker came forward - Adolf Fehmel of Bruck, who was good enough to cover the following journals for the current General Index - Briefmarkensammler, Donaupost, Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, and Universal-Anzeiger. I thank Fehmel again for his support, and trust he will not leave me in the lurch when it comes to further philatelic work.

Unfortunately, my work gained little appreciation from the editors of various journals. I wrote in vain several times in my own name and in that of the Weltpost-Echo to Mr. Friedemann of Leipzig for his bulletins, even as a loan, and to the offices of the Postmarke, Vienna, in the same way. I was not once rewarded with an answer. Hence, both of these publications are missing from the survey.

Turning now to the contents of the Index, I must mention that I have taken the abbreviation practically unaltered from the excellent index in the Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung, by Krotzsch. Unfortunately, under its new management, this very important part of the journal does not seem to be getting the attention it once did.

The notation for journals with continuous pagination is easy to understand, but in the case of the Universum Briefmarken-Journal for example, or Sammelwarte, for which every issue begins with Page 1, the Roman numeral denotes the issue, and the Arabic numeral the page. In the case of the Universal-Anzeiger Sportblatt am Mittag, and Wiener Sport-Tagblatt usually only the issue is given.

So, my part of the work is finished, now go out and serve the collectors who want to study and search: that is all I ask of you dear General Index.

Teplitz-Schönau. 15th March 1920.

Max Bloch
Editor of the Weltpost-Echo.

Directory of the magazines contained in the General-Index

There is no need to list these here as the full list can be found in the original work.

Meaning of the symbols following the page number:

a	size of impression
ad	surcharge
amt, amtof	official, officially opened.
bio	biographical details
d	publication details
e, eg	essays on stamps or entires
ex	separately paged
f, fg	forgery of stamp or entire fad, fS	forgery of imprint or cancellation
g	entire
gg	gumming
h	production
his	historical (reminiscences)
j, jg	jubilee stamp or entire k, kg	new impression of stamp or entire
l	local stamp
lit	literary lp	air mail
m	stamp
mak	flaw, damage
n, ng	newly reported stamps or entires
nis	new stamp envisaged
of	offer of postage stamps
p	political or non-philatelic postal notices
plfe	plate error

priv	private postage stamps
r, rg	remainders of stamps or entires
S	postmark
sp	speculation
sz	perforated mark. (Perfin)
t	types
V	decrees and statutes
vst	auction, auction price
w	watermark
z	indentation, perforations (round the edge of the stamp)

END

Luigi Piloni

Il Bollettino Filatelico d'Italia - a half century of life

[Title in original language]

Il Bollettino Filatelico d'Italia, Florence, Italy, 1960, ?pp.

Foreword & Introduction only, pp.7-14

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch

33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK

January 1991

IL BOLLETTINO FILATELICO D'ITALIA

- A HALF CENTURY OF LIFE

FOREWORD

In December 1920 in Naples, Roberto Palmieri was able to found a magazine and realise one of his dearest wishes: namely to start a journal which would give a vigorous impetus to the promotion of philately and to bring it out in all its best aspects. This was the programme laid down by the editorial in the first number, to which he adhered over the years that followed.

To survive half a century of existence is certainly nothing to sneeze at for a specialised magazine, especially in the field of philately, where the numerous publications that exist today have practically all begun to appear quite recently, with the exception of a very few- all from other countries, which have already passed their half-century.

But it is even less usual to see the publication of a complete bibliography of the articles that have appeared in a technical journal over such a long period. In fact, such a work calls for particular abilities and experience such as are certainly possessed by Luigi Piloni, already well-known as the author of a similar compilation, the "Bibliography of Italian posts and philately" (Library of Italian Bibliography, Leo S. Olschki, editor, Florence, 1960).

With the outstanding assistance of Danilo Fautoni, Piloni has gone patiently, page by page, through every volume of the Bollettino Filatelico, compiling with accuracy thousands of cards which were then accurately classified, sorted and catalogued in a simple and logical order which enabled whatever had been written on a given topic to be located rapidly.

Anyone who looks through the pages of the Bollettino bibliography will have many surprises, and even I, who have spent my whole life in the company of this journal have found that my memory has often let me down, and it is useful and convenient to have the vast range of articles and studies published in fifty years of the Bollettino condensed into a single volume.

Another of Piloni's merits is that he can present material as arid as a list of names, titles and dates could be, in a form not exactly attractive, but certainly simple and practical.

Hence this volume, which covers the years of the oldest Italian philatelic journal is a vital piece of documentation and not an occasional memorial.

Amongst the proceedings of the 1910 congress is the appointment of a commission for the formation of an Italian philatelic society, founded later in Rome and now in full activity. The commission was made up as follows: Emilio Diena, Romolo Mezzadri, Diego Filangieri de Candida Gonzaga, Ludovico Guarini, Leonardo S. Mazza, Giovanni Rocereto, Achillito Chiesa, Arturo E. Picchi, Leopoldo Rivolta, Alberto Bolaffi, Enrico Marchesi, Augusto de Brandis, A. Ravazzolo, Icilio Loli, Angelo Care Bondi, Pietro Bazan.

At the same time, the Neopolitan philatelists were spurred on by Roberto Palmieri's initiative to start a Philatelic Circle, amongst the members and leading spirits of which were some of the then best-known names in Naples.

Thus it may be said that the Bollettino Filatelico was the godparent of two of the first Italian philatelic societies.

Another of Roberto Palmieri's merits was that of introducing into Italy the method of selling by auction as a regular occasional way of publicizing and extending philately. He began on the 26th April 1908 with the sale of an important collection in the salon of the old headquarters of the Banco Popolare in Naples. We will quote some of the results of this sale as curiosities.

A "crosslet" was acquired by Marchese Diana for 80 lire, whilst a series of Sicilian stamps all used except for the 50-soldo, which was unused, was knocked down to Ernesto Jean Ravel for 49 Lire; a triplet of the used vermilion 5-rola Sicilian was sold for 43 lire. As well as Marquess Diana and Ernesto Ravel, the buyers included Cesare Bourillon, Duke Calvello, Engineer Rubinacci, Leonard Mazza, Baron Vinaccia, Count Filanpieri, Ciro Piscopo, Alessandro Brancaccio and others. The catalogue comprised 130 lots of stamps from all over the world, listed according to the Yvert & Tellier catalogue of that year, whereas the opening prices quoted were those of the Senf catalogue, the only ones used in Italy at that time in the absence of Italian catalogues. The total sum taken was 2,970 lire.

Again just for interest we will say that amongst the first 200 lots in the auction were the following: 31 used "crosslets" and one unused one, 21 used "Trinacrians" and three unused, 33 used examples of the Naples 50-soldo and one unused one, 5 used 50-soldo of the Provisional Government of Naples, 49 used Sicilian 50-soldos, 8 used examples of the Tuscany 60-crazie and one unused one, 19 used 9-crazies on white paper, and three used examples of the 3 lire Tuscany.

-0-0-0-

On presenting Luigi Piloni's bibliography to our readers, I wish to express publicly our great gratitude to him for carrying his labours to their conclusion with so much care and accuracy, and thus contributing so much to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Bollettino Filatelico.

INTRODUCTION

There are very few Italian periodicals – with the exception of those of a strictly scientific nature – which have attained their fiftieth year of life: amongst them, to the gratification of philatelists, is to be found a philatelic journal, namely Il Bollettino Filatelico.

This circumstance is certainly not without significance. It is a new and valid confirmation of the vitality and cultural value of philately, which has developed over the years from its early empiricism and by means of numerous, ever more exact studies until it has become a true and serious discipline in terms of the research methods it has employed and the complexity of the elements of which it is made up.

Only in a country with a high level of culture could arise the idea of publishing a bibliography of all the articles that have appeared to date in the magazine, to commemorate the completion of its fiftieth year of life, and only a high sense of patronage, based on a sense of filial reverence towards the man who thought of and founded the journal, could have brought this initiative to fruition.

The founder of Bollettino Filatelico was Roberto Palmieri. Born in Naples on the 5th January 1866, he passed many years of his childhood in Constantinople and Malta, then was a pupil at the Italian high school in Valletta. Returning to Naples, he took a course in mathematics and physics at the University there, obtaining a degree in those subjects. Sometime afterwards he began his philatelic activities in Great Britain under the aegis of a prominent merchant of Italian origin: Cosimo Melfi. In 1900 he returned to Naples, but by then he had given up all thoughts relating to stamps even going so far as to get rid of his philatelic library, which was quite outstanding for that period. A few years later however he opened a big philatelic shop at 66 Corso Umberto, to which was later added a Philatelic Exchange, certainly the first one of its type. In 1910 he organised the first Italian philatelic congress at Naples, along with friends whose names are given in the proceedings of the congress.

From then on he devoted all his activities to philately, editing the journal he founded with passion and competence, and presiding in person over his commercial firm with exemplary probity. He died in Rome on 24th March 1944 at the venerable age of seventy-eight years.

The first issue of Bollettino Philatelico saw the light of day in December of 1910, when Italian philately was taking its first steps.

The contribution made by his bold initiative to the development stamp collecting and the perfecting of philatelic studies in Italy is clearly demonstrated by this bibliography.

The story of the magazine during its first half-century of life is quite simple: it is perhaps also the secret of its vitality and success.

To date there have been only two editors of the Bollettino: the founder and his son Amadeo, who has carried on his father's work with intelligence and affection. Up to the end of June 1932 the editorial offices of the magazine were in Naples and it was printed at Scafati (Salerno) at the Rinascimento Printing Works owned by Antonio Pirolò. When the editorial offices moved to Rome, from July 1932 to May 1943, printed was carried out at the Zamperini Graphic Arts Printing Works, and then for a very short period (June 1943 – February 1944) by D.E.P.A. in Rome. In that year the editorial office was transferred to Florence, where it still remains – and was printed first by the Giuntina Printing Works (to the end of January 1950), then by the Vallecchi Graphics Co. (to the end of February 1957), and finally by Il Torchio Graphic Arts.

Two significant events in the life of the Bollettino were its amalgamation with Arturo E. Fiecchi's La Gazzetta Filatelica and with Ezio Ghiglione's La Rivista Filatelica d'Italia.

Notwithstanding many difficulties during its fifty years of life – it is enough to mention the two world wars – the Bollettino Filatelico has always appeared regularly, except for a few issues in 1939 and 1944, retaining an octavo format except for the period between the years 1940 and 1948.

The editorial format of the journal has been steadily improved with time till it has reached its present state, which impresses with the accuracy of the text, the wealth of illustrations and the clearness of the layouts. One not inconsiderable, indeed from the aesthetic point of view quite substantial, advantage is that the advertising never invades the text, but is always grouped together on facing pages.

After this description, it is proper to give a brief account of the criteria on which the compilation of the bibliography was based.

The material, indeed very copious, could be listed under 2,358 headings, divided as mentioned by subject and subdivided into sixteen groups, namely:-

1. Philately
2. Post and postal services
3. Stamps in general
4. Italian Stamps:
 - (a) Early states
 - (b) Kingdom and Republic
 - (c) Military occupations – foreign
 - (d) Vatican and San Marino
5. Foreign stamps
6. Commemorative stamps:
 - (a) General Section
 - (b) Italian commemoratives
 - (c) Commemoratives from the Vatican and San Marino
 - (d) Foreign commemoratives
7. Cancellations:
 - (a) In general
 - (b) Early Italian States
 - (c) Italy
 - (d) Foreign countries
8. Airmail
9. Tropical collections
10. Philatelic exhibitions:
 - (a) Exhibitions in general
 - (b) Exhibitions held in Italy

- (c) Exhibitions held abroad
- 11. Philatelic Trade
- 12. Philatelic Societies
- 13. Biographies
- 14. Philatelic printing and editing – reviews
- 15. Curiosities
- 16. Miscellaneous

Each group is prefaced by a short informational note, drawing the student's attention to its special features and giving brief but useful explanations of each.

Along with articles of outstanding importance from the historical, technical and scientific points of view, the journal sometimes published articles of lesser value: these are given equal and accurate mention since they may also be relevant to an overall picture. A summary is given as well for the more important articles.

Apart from more or less extended articles, some of which were continued over several issues and because so to speak short monographs, the Bollettino Filatelico also published regular features. At the beginning there were essentially two of these, Philatelic News and Monthly Bulletin of Philatelic New Issues.

Today because of the increase in specialisation, the regular features have increased in number and improved in quality, being now entrusted to regular editors and specialising in individual topics. Here is the current list of regular features published in the magazine:

- I Italian stamps, edited by Renato Russo.
- II Types, varieties and errors in Italian stamps: editor "El Barbisa".
- III Air Mail: editor Giuseppe Schenone.
- IV Review of the daily and periodical press: editor Igino Neri Serneri.
- V Commercial mail: editor Camillo Spingardi.
- VI Review of the foreign press: editor Enrico Janin.
- VII News of New issues: editor Ezio Ghiglione.
- VIII I'd like to know ... : editor Dino Sassone.
- IX Historical philatelic degenerations: editor Guilio Giaccherio.
- X Life in philatelic societies: editor Emilio Becuzzi.
- XI Liaison with the Federation of Philatelic Societies: editor G. Martelli Calvelli.
- XII Philately in Trieste: editor Vittorio Scortecchi.
- XIII Special collections by subject: editor Gino Bassani.
- XIV Selection of first-day covers: editor Guido Assereto.
- XV Maximum cards and similar: editor A. Luigi Morera.
- XVI Postmark Collecting: editor Edgardo Arno.

Other regular contributors are: Renzo Bernardelli, Roberto Bocciardo, G. Marre Brunenghi, Nino Bruschini, Giuseppe Dosi, Renato Mondolfo, Guide Oliva, Mario Onofri, Spiro Raftopoulos, Ernani Romagnoli, Andrea Salvo, Franco A. Spinelli.

It is not necessary to spend much breath on the practical utility and cultural interest of the present bibliography to anyone interested in philately, who is like me, convinced that only methodical study and the scientific advance of our subject will enable stamp collecting to attain real historical value and documentary importance.

After the publication of the “Bibliography of Italian Post and Philately” which saw the light last year from the publishers Olschki of Florence, as part of their series “Library of Italian Bibliography”, I was encouraged to make my own modest contribution to Italian philatelic studies and to place a new and useful tool in the hands of enthusiasts for philately.

Again, as with my earlier volume on “Stamps of the Italian States” published by the Ministry of Posts, my friend Danilo Fantoni has been of the greatest help.

Finally may I express the hope that similar bibliographies will be published for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Corriere Filatelica of Milan and the forty-sixth anniversary of the Rivista Filatelica d'Italia of Genoa, and wish that the Federation of Italian Philatelic Societies will be bold enough to take the initiative over these publications, which would certainly favour their greatest success.

If this hope is fulfilled, Italy will not only acquire an indisputable “first”, ahead even of countries which boast of their long record of achievement in the field of bibliographic studies related to philately, but will also have a complete “corpus” of postal and bibliographic philately which will enormously facilitate the researches of scholars and without doubt form the best basis for the promising future cultural development of Italian philately.

END

Osvaldo Mario Giordano*The philatelic press in Argentina[La prensa filatélica en la Argentina]*

PRENFIL '88, Bulletin 2, Buenos Aires, Argentina, 1988, pp.16-21

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
 33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
 January 1991

THE PHILATELIC PRESS IN ARGENTINA

Walter Bjorn Ludovico Bose has produced a monumental work in the field of philatelic literature, not only because of his extensive and fruitful range (more than half a century) but also because of the variety of his topics, always treated in a scientific manner and conveying information and documentation for the study of philatelic development.

Amongst other activities, Bose was a steady contributor for more than a decade to what was then Revista de Correos y Telegrafos (today Postas Argentinas). His works form a valuable contribution to our understanding of the past history of our Post and that of America. Philately and everything relating to it has likewise been the object of his serious labours.

As a small token of homage, we shall reprint here part of one of his articles published in Revista de Correos y Telegrafos, No. 33, of 15th May 1940, entitled Philately in the Republic of Argentina. With his capacity for analysis, he tackles the question from its component aspects: philatelic institutions, the philatelic press and the philatelic trade.

We shall cover the philatelic press, and Bose's article says the following:

*The majority of philatelic societies, along with private individuals and stamp dealers, have put out a large number of philatelic journals in the years since 1874, and at the present time * they amount to 65. Their titles are as follows:-*

* i.e. in 1940 when this was written.

Order	Name and place of publication	Date(s)	Issue(s)
1	La Revista Filatélica , Buenos Aires	1874	Single
2	Internacionales Post , Buenos Aires	1891	6
3	El Coleccionista Argentino , Buenos Aires	1892/1893	8
4	El Filatelista Sud-Americano , Buenos Aires	1893/1896	70
5	Revista Filatélica de la C.P. , San Juan	1893	Single
6	El Rosario Filatélico , Rosario, Santa Fe	1893/1897	10
7	El Comercio Filatélico , Paraná, Entre Rios	1893	3
8	Buenos Aires Postal , Buenos Aires	1894	3
9	El Buenos Aires Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1894	Projected
10	El Filatélico Argentino , Buenos Aires	1894	Single
11	El Argentino Filatélico , Rosario, Santa Fe	1894/1895	9
12	Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica Argentina	1894/1940	310

13	El Correo Sud-Americano , Buenos Aires	1896	6
14	Aguinaldo , San Juan	1897	Single
15	La vida en el Hogar , continued as: Buenos Aires Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1897/1900	125
16	El Filatélico Americano , La Plata	1897	8
17	La Voz del Filatelista Americano , Rosario	1898	6
18	La Revista Postal , Buenos Aires	1898/1899	9
19	Filatelia , Buenos Aires	1901/1904	41
20	El Investigador Americano , Buenos Aires	1903/1904	4
21	Argentina Filatélica , Buenos Aires	1903	3
22	Guía Filatélica Mensual , Mendoza	1904/1906	34
23	El Coleccionista , Rosario	1904/1907	12
24	El Macaneador Fi...latélico , Buenos Aires	1904	Single
25	Heraldo Filatélico Argentino , Buenos Aires	1904	Circular
26	El Mundo Filatélico , La Plata	1911	Circular
27	Buenos Aires Filatélico , La Plata	1912	Circular
28	Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica Libreña , Paso de los Libres, Corrientes	1912	Circular
29	El Eco Filatélico , Mendoza	1915/1916	8
30	El Filatélico Argentino , 1 st Series, Santa Fe 2 nd Series, Buenos Aires	1917/1919 1939/1940	5 5
31	La Hoja Filatélica , Buenos Aires	1917	2
32	Labor (published in Tucuman, then in Dolores, Buenos Aires, and then in La Plata)	1919/1926	49
33	Avisador Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1919/1920	12
34	The Argentine Exchange , Buenos Aires	1919/1925	22
35	Mundo Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1919	3
36	Buenos Aires Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1920/1940	61
37	El Filatelista , Buenos Aires	1920/1921	7
38	Revista Filatélica Argentina Mitre , Paso de los Libres, Corrientes	1921	5
39	Mitteilungen , (of the German Philatelic Society of Buenos Aires) and its supplements	1921/1940	45
40	La Filatelia Argentina , Buenos Aires	1922/1931	38
41	El Mundo Filatélico , Buenos Aires	1923/1940	63
42	Boletín Filatélico , Mercedes, Buenos Aires	1923	Circular
43	Revista Filatélica Americana , Rosario	1924	6
44	Club Coleccionismo Mundial , Buenos Aires	1924	Circular
45	Entre Rios Filatélico , Concordia	1924	Circular
46	Patagonia Filatélica , Comodoro Rivadavia Chubut	1924/1927	13
47	Argentina , Buenos Aires	1926/1938	47
48	Revista del Centro Filatélico Córdoba , Córdoba	1927/1930	8
49	Revista Filatélica de la Sociedad de Comerciantes en Sellos Postales de Buenos Aires	1927/1940	80
50	Argentina Postal , Buenos Aires. 1st Series 2nd Series	1928/1932 1937/1939	20 12
51	Semanario Filatélico , continues as:- La Hoja Filatelica , Buenos Aires	1929/1930	22
52	Boletín Ferrari , Buenos Aires	1929/1932	5
53	El Momento Filatélico , Mendoza	1929/1932	2

54	Boletín del Canje , continued as:-
	Magazine Filatélico , Pellegrini, Buenos Aires	1931	4
55	El Mundo Postal , Pellegrini, Buenos Aires	1932/1933	7
56	Boletín de la Asociación Filatélica de Bahía Blanca , Bahía Blanca	1932/1940	33
57	Chasqui , Tucuman	1934/1940	25
58	Filigrana , Buenos Aires	1935/1940	21
59	Revista del Centro Filatélico de La Plata , La Plata	1936/1940	14
60	Presente , Mar del Plata	1938/1939	5
61	Revista de la Institución Filatélica del Oeste , Mendoza	1938/1940
62	Corrientes Filatélico , Corrientes	1939/1940	12
63	Revista Filatélica Argentina AFRA , Buenos Aires	1939/1940
64	Revista de la Sociedad Filatélica de Junín , Junín, Buenos Aires	1939/1940	3
65	Centro Filatélico de Paraná , Paraná, Entre Ríos	1939	Single

In addition to these magazines, numerous books and pamphlets have been published containing historical studies on philatelic subjects by well-known Argentine philatelists Dr. José Marcó del Pont; Ernesto Marcó del Pont; Wladimir Loescher; Eduardo Rocha; Carlos J. Christophersen and the author of the present article.

Later work has brought Bose's list up to date, but we still lack a complete study of the entire range of philatelic books and journals brought up to the present day. Thus a wide field still exists for the researcher who wishes to make this contribution to Argentine philately.

END

Alexander Bungerz

The German-Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1921
[Die Deutschsprachliche Philatelistische Literatur im Jahre 1921]
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, 1923, 12pp.

Translation of Foreword and [Introduction] only, pp.[i]+1-3

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1991

THE GERMAN-LANGUAGE PHILATELIC LITERATURE
IN THE YEAR 1921

FOREWORD

We send our members herewith the first special publication on philatelic literature, which will be followed by others at irregular intervals.

As the technical magazines become steadily more restricted in their coverage, the publications from our Society are the only ones that deal systematically, if only in summarized form, with the entire range of philatelic literature. Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm (The philatelic Bookworm) brings all new publications (books; magazines, special publications, catalogues) to the attention of members; the Sonderschriften (Special publications) will supply precise details of the material concerned to book collectors, librarians and researchers.

Numerous voluntary contributions have made it possible for us to bring out the first special publication at this time, though to our deep regret the enormous cost of printing has made it impossible to produce it in book form. We express our heartfelt thanks here to all those whose generous contributions have helped us to put out this special publication.

Although we by no means intend to keep our special publications confidential, we can still only make them available to our members. All collectors, researchers, authors, and societies are hereby recommended to join our society as a matter of urgency!

Verein Philatelistischer Literatursammler
(Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors)
Berlin, February, 1923.

pp.1-3

The year 1921 saw the specialist press on a rising curve after the horrors of the war and post-war periods, although the costs of typesetting, printing and paper have reached such levels as to be almost unaffordable. It speaks all the better for the science of philately that the main journals continue to appear, a whole series of newer, if smaller, ones has suddenly cropped up, and only a few have responded to the pressures of the hour by disappearing.

Foremost amongst new journals in Germany we must mention Die Ganzsache, published by the lively Berliner Ganzsachensammler-Verein (Berlin Society of Entire Collectors), under the editorship of Dr. Ascher. Next comes the reappearance of the Vertraulichen Korrespondenz-Blattes, in a "New Series", under the direction of the Nürnberger Briefmarkensammler-Vereins (Nuremberg Stamp Collectors' Society). The firm of Marken-und Ganzsachenhaus in Berlin puts out a house journal, the M.u.G.-Zeitung, and the firm of Alwin Hamann in Charlottenburg publishes the Hamalbrief-Bericht, which may not however appear any more. The Berichte des Vereins Leipziger Briefmarken-Börse stopped in 1914 at No. 18/19, but recently began to appear again: there has been a single issue of a magazine Mitteilungen der Genossenschaft der Briefmarken-Freunde of Dresden; further publication was suspended because of the collapse of the Association. An offers circular we have seen is the Internationale Briefmarken-Börse Munich, which then appeared as a section of the earlier publication Sammler-Woche under the title Sammler-Woche-Offerten-Blatt.

From Austria, the Vienna Dorotheum issued a Nachrichtenblatt für Briefmarkenauktionen; also from Vienna came the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Blätter from Norbert Frischer, Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung from the Meidlinger Tauschzirkels (Meidling Exchange Circle), Fix, from Heinrich Swoboda, Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung by Klotzl & Steigberger, and the Philatelistische Nachrichten by Max Gebert. From Leoben, Steiermark, came the Oesterreichische Briefmarken-Rundschau, from Wels-Traunsleiten, Newspaper-ab No. 4 Exportblatt für Briefmarken u. Notgeld.

In Hungary, the Verkehrsgenossenschaft der Amateur (Amateur Trading Association), Budapest, issued its Tabularium. There has been only one journal from the Czechoslovak Republic, Die Briefmarke from the Philatelisten-Vereins (Philatelic Society) of Teplitz-Schonau. From Estonia came one issue of Eesto from Reval, from Rumania Filatelistul Roman, written in Rumanian and German, whereas the Erste Bulgarische Briefmarken-Zeitung was announced from Sofia by an advertising issue. From Luxemburg there is a little society journal, Der Kurier, and from the United States a publication with the apparent title of Philatelistische Mitteilungen, appearing in Boston, Mass., and there is a society magazine from Argentina.

The Internationale Briefmarken-Courier saw the light of day in Munich, and from Rantrum in Schleswig-Holstein came the Deutsche Uebersee-Briefmarken-Zeitung. Der Sarg der Philatelie (The Coffin of Philately) is the title of a periodical from Dortmund which has undertaken to fight against the abuses of philately. The Schutzgemeinschaft der Postwerthzeichenhändler und -Sammler (Protection Society for Stamp Dealers and Collectors) in Lobenstein publishes a circular with the same aim in view. The Internationale Anzeiger für Briefmarken- und Notgeld-Händler und -Sammler of Hamburg announces its appearance next year by means of a prospectus. Next come a few semi-philatelic organs, Die Sammler-Fundgrube, of Weimar, Die Freunde, from the same city, Der Sammler from Niebull, and Cosmopolite from Weinsberg.

The daily papers attempted to meet the information needs of their stamp-collecting readers by publishing new columns, but these are not worth individual mention; however an important exception is the Berliner Abendpost, which publishes a weekly, brilliantly-written supplement, Der Briefmarkensammler under the byline of Provincial Superior Court President C. Lindenberg. Finally, mention should also be made of Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, which is the house journal of the Vereins Philatelistischer Literatursammler (Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors) of Berlin, and the first magazine of its kind in Germany.

Against these new publications must be set the following losses. The following have disappeared in Germany, Verbandsblatt from Koch & Bitriol in Cölleda, the Hamburger Briefmarken-Zeitung, the Briefmarken-Neuheiten-Offertenblatt from L. Kipke of Hamburg, Der Deutsche Sammler of Brunswick, Briefmarken und Ganzsachen of Oberneusulza, and the Hamalbrief-Bericht and Mitteilungen der Genossenschaft der Briefmarkenfreunde, both mentioned above.

In Austria, Der Briefmarkenbote and the Wiener Briefmarken-Offertenblatt, the statisticians child of sorrow, are no longer appearing. Likewise, the Deutschösterreichische Briefmarken-Zeitung of Vienna, the Internationale Tausch-Adressen-Liste of Innsbruck, the Brünner Briefmarken-Zeitung, the Welpost-Echo Das Postwertzeichen, Vienna, and the Philatelistische Rundschau issued no further numbers in 1921. The Universum-Briefmarken-Offertenblatt merged with the main paper, and the Universal-Anzeiger merged with the Postmarke. In the Czechoslovak Republic, the Offertenblatt für Sammler und Tauschfreunde of Zittau folded up, and the Sammler-Blatt of Lwowek-Neustadt in Poland has ceased to appear.

Large numbers of books, pamphlets, special numbers, catalogues, etc. are also to be reported, which clearly proves that interest in philatelic literature is continuing its steady growth. First place here must go to the very important work by Dipl. Ing. W. Richter, Die Deutschen Kriegsmarken (German War Stamps), four parts of which have appeared to date. This standard work has received unanimous praise, and the German collecting world cannot thank the author enough for his immense labours in this now closed area. Second place is taken by the 2nd edition of the book by Albert Friedemann that originally appeared in 1908, Die Postwertzeichen und Entwertungen der deutschen Postanstalten in den Schutzgebieten und im Auslande (Postage stamps and cancellations from the German post offices in the colonies and abroad). H. Jäggli-Weber has provided us with an outstanding work, Die Schweizerischen Post-und Entwertungstempel 1843-1862 (Swiss Postage stamps and Cancellations 1843-1862). The Senf brothers, particularly Louis Senf, have issued Leitfaden (Guidelines), whilst Ernst Marre and the author attempted to solve problems relating to colour. Dr. Erich Stenger again gave us some valuable papers on sheet divisions, issue numbers and stamp booklets, and produced Die Deutsche Luftpost (The German Air Mail) in conjunction with Conde de Matzenau.

Turning to the catalogues, we first welcome the Ganzsachen-Katalog 1913-1920 (Catalogue of Entireties, 1913-20), by Dr. Ascher, and then the well-known catalogues of Senf and Michel, and the 2nd and 3rd edition of the S. W. World Catalogue. The new European section of this has been christened the Kürzli-Katalog by its publishers. If I also mention the Donaupost-Katalog (Danube Post catalogue), the Weka Katalog, the special lists from the firm of Paul Kohl, the 2nd edition of the Rohr'schen Adressbuches (Rohr address book) and the various auction catalogues, I have put down everything worthy of note in this short catalogue, and can go on to describe the magazines, books, etc.

END

A. Bungerz

The German Language Philatelic Literature in the Year 1922
[Die Deutschsprachliche Philatelistische Literatur im Jahre 1922]
Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm, Berlin, Germany, 1923, 13pp.

Translation of the Foreword and introductory text only pp.3 & 5-6

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1991

THE GERMAN LANGUAGE PHILATELIC LITERATURE IN THE YEAR 1922

FOREWORD

After a short interval since the appearance of our 2nd special publication, we are in the happy position of being able to make our 3rd special publication available to our members. This will give an account of the periodicals or books in the German language that appeared in the year 1922.

As a general rule, and in the interests of our individual members, we try to follow a strict plan in this account. Thus, all numbers published have been obtained from the publisher, so that all mistakes due to typesetting, or in this case typewriting, will be avoided. However, there have possibly been other magazines, or single issues, published in the course of the year 1922 which this author does not know about. If our members have any such, they will earn his thanks if they kindly let him have them.

We now offer the 3rd special publication in the hope that our members will again find it a valuable addition to their libraries, a point which should be borne in mind with respect to all periodicals in these hard times, even when the publication will only have a limited circulation.

Society of Philatelic Literature Collectors

Berlin, August 1923

Page 5

We are accustomed to reporting a high death rate amongst German periodicals: in line with the necessities of the time, a large number of German dailies, scientific and family magazines must cease to appear. On the other hand, the number of purely philatelic journals which find themselves unable to continue is remarkably small. The loss of well-known and well-read periodicals is so regrettable in every single case that we can be really pleased with the results for the year 1922. However, we have learned to accept the situation, and be pleased whenever a new issue of whatever magazine flutters on to our desk, as a sign it has not yet had to close down. It is deeply regrettable that some of our oldest journals, such as Der Philatelist, and Philatelisten-Zeitung, had to cease publication in the course of the year, and that the revived Vertrauliche Korrespondenz-Blatt had to report its closure.

Other older journals cut down drastically on their number of issues and extent, but continued to hold out valiantly: nevertheless, philately does continue to show more vitality than any other field of collection. Books, pamphlets and catalogues go on appearing in a profusion in no way less than that of earlier years.

Apart from those mentioned above, the following journals did not appear, or ceased publication during the year: Hamal-Brief-Bericht, Internationale Sammler-Welt Chemnitz, Philatelistische Mitteilungen Hennig, Mitteilungen der Genossenschaft der Briefmarkenfreunde Dresden, and a few small semi-philatelic magazines. The Internationale Briefmarken-Börse Munich, and the Sammler-Woche-Offertenblatt have merged with Sammler-Woche.

On the other hand the following are new: Bayerische Händlertags-Zeitung, Deutschvölkische Sammler-Rundschau Oettingen, Mitteilungen des Münchener Ganzsachen-Sammler-Vereins, Mitteilungsblatt der Sammlervereinigung Briefmarkenbörse Stuttgart, Mitteilungsblatt des Weltsammler-Rings Wesari, Internationaler Anzeiger für Briefmarken- und Notgeld-Handler und Sammler Hamburg, Internationales philatelistisches Auskunftsblatt Halle, Internation. Sammler-Offertenblatt und Vereinigte Sammler-Rundschau Rantrum. Mainpost Würzburg and the Marken-Sammler der Münchener Zeitung, whereas the Vereinsnachrichten der Tauschverbindung Münchener Briefmarken-Sammler appeared again after a three-year break. The Gelsenkirchen Briefmarken-Post split into two: one part appeared under the old title, missed out a year (the 8th), and started numbering again at the 9th year: the other part called itself Die Briefmarke, 8th year.

In Austria the following disappeared: Foederation, Illustrierte Briefmarken-Blätter Frischer, Nachrichtenblatt der Tauschvereinigung für Postwertzeichen in Wien, A newspaper, Oesterreichische Briefmarken-Rundschau Loeben, Philatelistische Nachrichten Gebert, Sammlerbund Sabu, Transocean, Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung Klötzl & Steigberger, whilst Der Briefmarkenbote Bisamberg and the Verieins-Mitteilungen des Oesterr. Händlervereins have reappeared. The only new title is a humorous one, the Wiener Briefmarken-Börse Zeitung.

The Czechoslovak Republic sent us a few new magazines: Der Philatelist Leitmeritz, Der Briefmarkensammler, Supplement to the Deutschen Zeitung Bonemia (Bohemia, I feel - translator) and Der Philatelist, supplement to the Prager Presse.

In Switzerland the Schweizer Philatelist Hruby reappeared, and in Russia, the Sowiet-Philatelist. Other changes will be found under the names of the countries concerned.

Unfortunately I could get no information from certain publishers, who did not send me their magazines although I supplied the return postage several times. This lack of response from a number of magazine publishers necessarily leads to gaps in our survey, which is very regrettable from the point of view of our statistics. If I today cannot arrive at a complete survey of the German-language periodical literature, later researchers will find it completely impossible. For this reason I ask all members to let me have any missing items, so that missing titles or issues can eventually be made known in the Philatelistischen Bücherwurm.

Appearing amongst the books were the volume on Thurn and Taxis by Bütow and Ton, the Neudrucke de Württembergischen Kreuzermarken (Reprints of the Wurtemberg Kreuzer Stamps) by Köhler, the Postgebiet Ob. Ost (Eastern Front Postal Region) by Noske, Postwertzeichen Oberschlesiens (Postage Stamps of Upper Silesia) by Haertel, continuations of the works by Richter, Ohrt and Meister, the volume on Hungary by Payer and others, which will be found in the following survey.

The catalogues appeared in the usual way: the list of auction catalogues, which contain much wonderful material, is particularly valuable. The beautiful appearance of many of these catalogues leaves us regretting that the same fine paper cannot always be used for books!

Looking at the balance for the year 1922, we see that it was a worthy successor to earlier years and affords a good prospect for the coming year.

The Lindenberg Medaille was awarded to Major Paul Ohrt in 1922, and the Sieger Prize for Philatelic Literature went to Karl Köhler.

There now follows an exact review of all journals, books, etc. that appeared in the German language in 1922, as far as they are known to me.

Editor's note: Refer to the original for these data.

END

Dr. Fritz Haubner

Index to the Philatelic Literature on the Old German Field of Collecting: Hanover
[Verzeichnis der Philatelistischen Literatur über das altdeutsche Sammelgebiet: Hannover]
Neues Handbuch der Briefmarkenkunde, Soest, Germany, 1984, 221pp.

Translation of the Foreword (p.3) and Contents [p.221] only.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
June 1991 (Digitised and re-edited September 2010)

INDEX TO THE PHILATELIC LITERATURE ON THE OLD GERMAN FIELD OF COLLECTING: HANOVER

FOREWORD

This bibliography, which covers some 400 authors and more than 900 publications, attempts to give as complete a survey as possible of the literature to date covering the Hanover field of collecting.

The bibliography is arranged chronologically for the most part, and differs from similar ones in that a short list of contents is given for each title, as well as the details of author and source. Thus, although the work does not claim the ultimate degree of completeness, it should give a better impression of the numerous and diverse publications and in particular form the basis and support for further researches. If the author of an item is listed as unknown, this generally means that it is only a short report or notice from the editors of the journal concerned. On the whole, it should be noted that words and parts of sentences, and for the older items style and spelling, have been taken over as written.

In view of the earlier close connection between the principalities of Hanover and Brunswick one often encounters philatelic publications which deal with both from the historical point of view. In such cases the contents may also be listed in the already published Brunswick bibliography as well as in this one for Hanover.

Finally, we must not omit to thank several members of the Hanover Study Group for their support, Professor Dr. Weidlich in particular, as his great helpfulness and advice has done much towards the completion of this work. Thanks are also due to the Librarian and staff of the Philatelic Library in Munich for their considerable efforts in supplying all of this material.

Very special thanks to the Foundation for the Promotion of Philately and Postal History, without whose valuable support this work could not have been published.

The work was finished on 1 July 1983.

Dr. Fritz Haubner

CONTENTS

	Page
Foreword	3
A History of the Hanover Postal System
I as a whole	4-12
II subsections and postal districts	12-25
III miscellaneous	26-34
B Postal Administration
I postal districts	35-46
II post from "foreign" locations	47-51
III miscellaneous	52-62
IV laws, regulations and special arrangements	63
C Bibliographies	64-65
D Catalogues, Handbooks, Monographs
I world and national catalogues	66-67
II handbooks	68-70
III monographs	71-76
E Literature with diverse contents	77-95
F Postage Stamps
I generalities on postage stamps	96-107
II individual stamps	108-118
III bisects	119-121
IV counterfeit stamps	122-128
G Postal Stationery
I city post (no delivery charge)	129-132
II entire Kingdom	133
III postal orders	134
IV post-paid letters (return letters)	135-136
V miscellaneous	137-139
H Trials and New Printings	140-148
I Postmarks and other Cancellations	149-178
K Precancels and Advance Cancellations	179-184
L Field Post	185-188
M Post-Office and other Receipts	189-196
N Valuation of Stamps and Cancellations	197-198
O Merkur Private Post	199-201
P Messenger Services	202-203

Appendix:

Map of the Kingdom of Hanover, 1815	204
Philatelic Literature Abbreviations	205-208
Author Index	209-221

END

Dr. Franz Kalckhoff: Obituary
[Dr. Franz Kalckhoff †]
Sammler-Express, 15th March 1955, Volume 9, Issue 6, p.95

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
July 1991

DR. FRANZ KALCKHOFF: OBITUARY

The Nestor of German philately, Dr. Franz Kalckhoff, died in Einbeck (Hanover) a few months after his 94th birthday. His love of philately dated from his earliest youth. The thoroughness with which he studied all branches of philately soon earned him a reputation which resounded far outside the borders of our German fatherland. He was writing, not only on collecting stamps, but in his deep devotion to the many auxiliary branches of philately, many of which were initially opened out by him. Many philatelists have found the right way into philately from Dr. Franz Kalckhoff.

If we turn over the pages of old volumes of the philatelic press, we shall continually happen on contributions from his pen. He paid attention to the smallest problems and we often find short items signed ff giving the answers to these problems. Sixty years ago the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal published a paper on the R label. It was a first attempt, and the author himself was still groping in the dark. A few issues later Dr. Kalckhoff gave a detailed supplement to this research. He used data from Post Office circulars to cover individual orders as to the introduction of the R label and its later variants. He always worked that way. He was never content with superficiality. Even with items only collected by a few people, such as private postage stamps, telegraph stamps and the many kinds of revenue he gave concrete information and published long papers on them that revealed his inexhaustible knowledge.

Dr. Franz Kalckhoff was a member of many societies. Whilst employed at the Patent Office in Berlin, he belonged to the Berlin Philatelists Club from the year of its foundation in 1888 and was made an honorary member on the 2nd March 1908. Dr. Kalckhoff was also a member of the Berlin Society of Collectors of Entires and was for years a member of the editorial board of the magazine Die Ganssache which later became Deutsche Sammler-Zeitung. The Special Topics feature that he contributed still yields valuable answers to many questions today. He produced numerous papers for foreign journals. He was intimately concerned with the various editions of the Senf catalogue, and many of the collectors who use the Lipsia catalogue today would be surprised to learn how much of the data is taken from Dr. Kalckhoff's work in the Senf catalogue.

This tireless philatelist has left us a rich inheritance. We cannot mention all his work here, since he continued to be tirelessly active into old age. Whether we look at his paper on the invention of the postcard, or take up his book on Prussian covers put out in 1943 by Fritz Seifert of Leipzig, we continue to be struck by the freshness of his work and the thoroughness with which he carried it out.

Is it thus any wonder that numerous foreign societies and association made him an honorary member. In 1934 he was the second German to be entered on the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists in Manchester. He was one of the first recipients of the Lindenberg medal, with whose foundation he was intimately connected, and the Wagner-medal, the second great distinction that German philately has to bestow, was awarded to him in the year 1947.

After he reached pensionable age, Dr. Franz Kalckhoff devoted himself to philately alone. He collaborated closely with Carl Lindenberg, the founder of the National Postal Museum. Though in old age he became unable to make long journeys, he still followed all developments in philately with close attention down to his last days. He studied the specialist literature with zeal, and only a few months ago we received a detailed answer from him to a query published in Sammler-Express. Thus, he remained active into his old age and always helped whenever he still could.

We shall not only retain Dr. Franz Kalckhoff, the greatest German philatelist after Carl Lindenberg, in respected memory, but we shall take care to guard his legacy and seek to emulate him, as he will remain for ever unforgotten.

END

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur
February 1950, Volume 3, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
January 1989

ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR

February 1950, Volume 3, Issue 2

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

p.29

A wake-up call to all friends of literature.

Since the shops filled up again with all types of goods, there has been a sharp loss of interest by collectors in the scientific literature provided for them. The damage this will do can already be predicted today. It must therefore be the first task of clubs and societies not to let philatelic ideas fade away. We must bring our more deeply-thinking associates into the movement, and make their ideas known.

Since much less reading is done today than before the last war, information on new discoveries seldom reaches the circles where it could be evaluated and used for further study. Hence it seems all the more important to have a survey of the entire scientific literature. This praiseworthy task can, however, only be undertaken by a man who combines a timeless appetite for work with the indestructible optimism needed if the work is to flourish. No material rewards beckon: this is a pioneer study whose full significance will only be appreciated by later ages.

Thus, now that Alfred Ihm again takes up his promising work from where circumstances compelled him to break off, all true philatelists and all organised collectors should give his efforts their energetic support. They would be doing themselves the greatest favour and ensuring the existence of a reference work they are certain to need in the future when a hunger for scientific literature again makes itself felt.

Every further development in literature deserves our approbation. Its widely scattered examples must be collected somewhere if they are not to be blown away by the winds. This is a relatively easy task today, but in a few years' time it will be impossible. Thus the "Archive for Philatelic Literature" is an indispensable tool which should be scattered as widely as possible. It should be in every library worth the name.

Dr. H. W. Gewande

p.30

Jubilee.

60th birthday of J. C. Norenburg, Editor in Chief. Reported in Nederlandsch Maandblad voor Philatelie.

A. Ihm

p.30 (Final Paragraph)

Good scientific literature is more than just an occupation for idle hours.

p.31

Award of the Hans Wagner Medal.

p.31 (Final Paragraph)

Recommend the Archiv der Philatel. Literatur to your philatelic acquaintances.

p.32

Philately on the Air.

Radio Munich, Herr Wilhelm Hofinger speaks on 15.3 about exchanges and exchange values.

(How the values of individual stamps are related to one another, how a real value is determined, and what pros and cons should be borne in mind for exchanges). Herr Hofinger appends a list of his philatelic contributions on Radio Munich: see original for list

p.33

German philatelic press.

The following journals have appeared in 1949. (See original for list.)

The next issue will contain a list of the German philatelic journals still appearing.

The journal “Merkur” published in Gelsenkirchen by Dr. Lenig for the local – postage-stamp collector contains not only outstanding articles in the field of the local-stamp collector, but also detailed reports on the philatelic literature and stamp journals from home and overseas.

p.33

Publisher's Announcement

The firm of Werner Kuhn, Dassel, publisher of the Journal DBZ – Deutsche Zeitung für

Briefmarkenunde (German Journal of Philately) advised us that during 1949 the following journals were bought up by or amalgamated with the DBZ: (See original for list)

p.34

New Philatelic Literature!

Special and Publicity postmarks in the New Germany.

A list of all special and publicity postmarks used in Germany since 1945. Collected and edited by Werner Robert Kuhn (10a), Freital I, Dresdnerstrasse 124. Reprint from Die Briefmarke, revised and extended to October 1948. A5 size, 20 pages.

Also published: Supplement 1 (1949, October)
 Supplement 2 (1949, December)

Examples of philatelic literature and stamp magazines from abroad are only coming in very slowly. If any of our readers have specimens available, will they kindly send them here to be listed.

Listings of the literature are only made on the basis of actual examination of the issues, and reports can only issues quickly if these are sent in in good time.

It is hoped to achieve friendly co-operation with philatelic authors as well. Our readers will be interested to hear about books articles, etc., in preparation or unpublished. The Archiv will be pleased to report on them.

A. Ihm

p.35

Further Aims of the "Archiv der Philatel. Literatur".

Many serious friends of literature, societies and publishers have given a warm welcome to the reappearance of my philatelic reports and have promised their thoroughgoing support.

Also, many honorary co-workers have come forward in a very helpful manner to take part in the future development of the Archiv der Philatel. Literatur; the detailed work involved can only carried out by this kind of close co-operation.

Our survey of the contents of home and foreign philatelic journals has been restricted so far to the technical press: however, interesting articles on philately often appear in daily, weekly and monthly papers. It would be extremely desirable to pick up and record these articles, since it is much harder to trace them later than it is to keep track of the technical journals, which also tend to be kept more than the others.

However, this enormous task can only be carried out by the intensive efforts of our whole circle of readers, and so it would be very nice if relevant articles could be supplied with details of the author and the journal, if possible, the journal itself should be sent.

In the same way, useful scientific articles are often published in society magazines, and it would be very desirable if these could be recorded, and if Society Chairmen would take the trouble and kindly send examples of their publications in to us. Furthermore, attempts are being made to cover broadcast talks on philately and get detailed descriptions of them into the Archiv, accompanied if possible by a brochure giving the text in full. Many efforts have been made to have the manuscripts of radio talks made available for this purpose.

The Editor

pp.36-48

Contents of home and foreign periodicals.

pp.48-49

List of journals included in the report.

Non-philatelic leaves.

Radio broadcasts.

Foreign-language journals.

p.49 (Last 5 lines)

The domestic postage stamp papers not discussed here were not submitted by the publishers for a period of time. A subsequent listing may take place in the next number.

p.50

Catalogues and price lists.

Auctions

pp.V-VIII

(Four page insert between pages 40 & 41.)

Exchange Index

END

Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur
March 1950, Volume 3, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Translated by Betty Howarth for Brian J. Birch
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
February 1991

ARCHIV DER PHILATELISTISCHEN LITERATUR

March 1950, Volume 3, Issue 3

Translation Digest

Note: A Translation Digest provides a translation of all of the article titles and general headings of a complete issue of a specialised bibliographic periodical. It also includes full translations of all articles that appear to be of interest to me.

pp.51-54

APPEAL to the German philatelic community.

The Archive of Philatelic Literature and Alfred Ihm.

The last big stamp exhibitions in Germany have shown us how much philatelic knowledge slumbers amongst our collector friends, so that it is totally false to think of lethargy existing in many philatelic circles. Certainly the economic outlook is not very bright, and the future of Germany is shrouded in gloom. Many people are no longer in a position to afford even one specialist journal. Should we sink into total apathy on this account? Alfred Ihm, the idealist and specialist, says a firm "NO" to this, and has begun to work with very limited means. This makes it all the more the duty of all responsible bodies in German philately, i.e. the BDPH with its local sections, the East Zone cultural departments, all the society members in the East and West, to support this work by every means, either by taking an actual part in it or by subscribing.

Valuable pioneering work in bibliography has been carried out since the end of the year in Leipzig by Jähnig, the founder and director of the Central Office for Collecting. He too was on his own, and his voice often died away in the wilderness.

Alfred Ihm had had the valuable support of many important circles in the world of German collecting for his many years of preliminary work, and his work cannot be passed over without notice. There should not be a repetition of the "Globus affair" in Stuttgart, where a valuable philatelic paper failed simply because the esteemed president of a respected society with over 500 members would only order a single copy. People like this, who show such indifference during Germany's greatest need, should be publicly exposed so that they will disappear all the quicker from public life.

The most important thing is for all public and private Libraries in Germany to cooperate by exchanging their catalogues. Where there is no catalogue or cards, the information must be retrieved at all costs. If sufficient budgetary resources are not available, an appeal should be made not only to collectors, but also to dealers, who in the last resort derive a profit from all scientific findings. On the very front line of effort stand the scientific writers, who today live more or less despairingly in extreme poverty. There is still much work to be undertaken in various directions. The most significant from this point of view is the model work carried out to the present time in the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, which has been done with the greatest skill and vitality that only an inveterate philatelist can produce. Here there are connections well beyond the boundary of our Fatherland with bibliographic societies all over the world, and all nations meet in friendly contest.

In particular it would be welcome if the Archiv der Philatelistischen Literatur could set up a service post in support of this Library, the aim of which would be to draw up a card index of all the German philatelic literature from 1945 on. Even though it would be very difficult to go back and cover the literature of earlier times as well, I would not like to omit at least the most important standard works. It is of the greatest importance for both the specialist collector and the technical author to have the location of these works given. As an example I may mention a single work: de Reuteskjöld The Swiss postage stamps of 1843-1852, of which only 150 examples are known to exist in the German language. Details of where to find it are lacking from all German bibliographies. Details of locations should be systematically extended from year to year until the individual libraries are all covered (loose-leaf system). People will moan and groan: who is going to finance this work? If every society member gave only 5 to 10 pfennings a month to the cultural fund (that is one cigarette, puffed away in 5 minutes) permanent researchers could be put to work. Where there's a will there's a way, and worthless advice is always cheap.

On top of this, many well-known writers and experts have books and manuscripts laid by that cannot be published because they cannot find a publisher. I will not name the authors, though everyone will know them as soon as I mention the titles.

- 1) The great Saxony handbook
- 2) The history of aero philately
- 3) The continuation of the Handbook of Philately by the late Hans v. Rudolphi, which it is hoped will be taken over by Cottbus.

Will v. Rudolphi be proved correct in writing at the outset of his work that it would meet the fate of so many handbooks and remain "uncompleted"???

I pronounce a decisive NO to this opinion, and call on the BDPH and also on the Philatelic Section of the Cultural Union to form an emergency association to meet this pressing need. Further volumes of the Handbook are waiting in manuscript ready for publication. Both of the big societies are agreed on cooperation. There is, thank Heaven, no disunion here and the organizing Committee should get things moving not in a hesitant manner but at once.

One point must be stressed: the emergency association should publicize German philately in all the Technical journals as much as possible. The nestor of German philately, Dr. Kalckhoff of Einbeck, has expressed himself as very willing to underwrite this appeal, and so are all prominent philatelists.

This board should be set up as soon as possible. We can simply not count on help from abroad. We must pull ourselves together and I think I have given German philately a few useful signposts as to what could be carried out. Protracted discussions never get anywhere, we should get up and get on with things, if we want to get over this difficult time.

Paul Friedrich
Technical writer

pp.54-55

Federal Society for Philatelic Literature.

1) Disposal of Literature: To satisfy numerous requests for literature and make no-longer wanted items available to interested parties, Section B of the Federal Society has set up a Literature Supply Service (LIVED). Anybody looking for, or disposing of, literature should supply a card of about half postcard size for each item, with details in wide format of author, title, publisher, year of publication, price, and address of person offering or requesting, to Section B, Munich, Room 366/III, Town Hall.

People looking for items can obtain lists of those available from Section B. The regulations for LIVED can also be obtained from there at the cost of return postage.

2) The conditions for external borrowing of philatelic literature from the Munich City Library (Munich Town Hall, Room 366/III) can also be had on request against return postage.

3) Index of Philatelic Periodical Literature. Honorary collaborators are needed to bring the Index of Philatelic Periodical Literature to a conclusion. Anyone who already has a card index of periodical articles should let Section B know which years have already been covered, and whether Section B can have it. Anyone prepared to work on the Index in future can obtain the rules for working on the index from the Library. Since philatelic science is concerned about the early completion of the index, numerous collaborators are sought.

The BDPH Working Party can make an essential contribution to success, if they would help to collect and collate the index cards relating to their special regions.

pp.55-56

Round-up.

The March news bulletin is available from the Altona Philatelic Society, Hamburg, in the Union of German Philatelists. It contains (details of) the new Society year, the report of the Committee, and general news of Union matters.

The German Society for National and Private Philately, part of the League of Berlin Philatelic Societies of 1888, is issuing its society news bulletin again from the 15th February 1950. The editorship is undertaken by Konrad Ferdinand Mayer, Berlin.

D.F.C. Scandinavian Gazette for Philatelic Addresses and Advertisements is published four times a year by Verner Ostergaard, Box 240, Aarhus, Denmark.

State Society for Hungarian Philatelists.

This Society issues publications to its members under the title "Circulars", nos 1, 2 & 3 of which have been received. Modest octavo sheets. Only of interest to members.

The Swiss Postage Stamp Review, part 33 gives the address of Dr. Siegfried Ascher, 11 Hursha St., Moses House, Haifa, Mt. Carmel (Israel), which should interest many of his collector friends. An "Ascher Medal" was struck in honour of his 70th birthday, and will be awarded in Israel to whoever has done most service to the philately of the nation.

p.56

Exhibitions.

The Lower Saxony Stamp Collectors' Society has large-scale plans in Autumn for the "Lower Saxony Stamp Exhibition, Hanover 1950". The first advertising pamphlet is already available and is well-written.

p.56 (Last 11 lines)

Many valuable suggestions for the further development of the Archiv have been given to me by numerous lovers of literature, writers, publishing firms and societies; unfortunately not all of them can be put into practice for economic reasons. However, they will be kept in mind for a later stage. I am delighted at the lively response shown in all circles and am grateful for the readiness shown to co-operate. By close collaboration with the Munich City Library and the Society for Philatelic Literature, I hope to incorporate further textual improvements in the next edition of the Archiv.

p.57

Where shall I find it?

The scientific collector must also know of the sources outside the specialist literature, and information in this direction will be published here from time to time. Contributions will always be gladly received by the Central Office for Collectors, P.O. Box 582, Leipzig, C 1.

p.58-60

New Publications of Philatelic Literature.

p.60

Possibility of Subscribing to Foreign Philatelic Journals.

According to a circular from the Society for Philatelic Literature, subscriptions can be placed to the following foreign magazines via any dealer:

The Stamp Magazine, London.

Weekly Stamp Collecting, London.

The Philatelic Magazine, London.

Gibbons Stamp Monthly, London.
The London Philatelist, London.
Philately, London.

It will shortly be possible also to subscribe to material from Switzerland, Netherlands, Denmark, Luxemburg and Portugal (more details later).

pp.61-75

Contents of Home and Foreign Philatelic Journals.

pp.75-76

List of Periodicals indexed.

p.76

Non-philatelic magazines.

Radio programmes.

Foreign language periodicals.

p.76 (Last two paragraphs)

The local philatelic journals not dealt with here did not reach the publisher in time to be dealt with. A supplementary list will appear in our next issue.

Descriptions of literature can only be given if copies are supplied, and these should always be sent in good time to receive a prompt listing in the journal.

p.77

Catalogues & Price lists.

Auctions.

p.78

Report on the 127th Stamp Auction By the Firm of Heinrich Kohler, Wiesbaden.

The auction held from the 13th to the 15th April brought the following record results above the catalogue prices, which may be ascribed in the main to the outstanding quality of the material on offer:- (See original)

END

Carlrichard Brühl

History of Philately

[Geschichte der Philatelie]

2 Volumes, Georg Olms Verlag, Hildesheim, Germany, 1985, 1250pp.

Translation of various sections and Chapters of interest to my researches as follows:-See the Contents pages which follow for details.

Translation produced by Betty Howarth, Philip Robinson and others for Brian J. Birch,
33 Boar's Head Avenue, Standish, Wigan, WN6 0BH, UK
December 1998 to May 2021

HISTORY OF PHILATELY

AIM OF THE TRANSLATION

The aim of this translation is to make available to myself and other non-German-speaking philatelists those parts of this magnum opus of interest to me.

The translation was not intended to be of publishable quality and accordingly, the editing was kept to the minimum that gave a reasonably fluent text. It is not a stand alone document and therefore needs the original volumes to hand, both to check titles in their original languages and other important data as well as for the illustrations.

EXTENT OF THE TRANSLATION

Only those Chapters dealing with the earliest history of philately, up to about 1920, and those relating to philatelic literature have been translated. The full extent of the translation is indicated in the CONTENTS. Those Chapters and sections which have been translated have their page numbers in the translation given in italics following their page numbers in the original.

Brian J. Birch

Note: In the Contents list that follows, the original page numbers are included to provide a ready correlation between the translation and the original German text as this translation does not include the illustrations.

New page numbers in italics relate to this translation and can be found at the top left hand side of each page.

CONTENTS

	Old	New
PREFACE
By John R. Boker Jr.	IX	5
By Dr. Enzo Diena	X	6
FOREWORD
By Dr. Carlrichard Brühl	XI	7
PART 1: COLLECTORS, DEALERS, SPECULATORS
CHAPTER 1 At the outset it was a fad ... The prehistory of philately (1840 to ca.1860)	1	10
CHAPTER 2 “Storm and Stress” or the foundation years of philately (ca.1860 - 1878)	13	17
CHAPTER 3 Heroes of the early period	49	37
1. Jean-Baptiste Moens & Louis Hanciau	49	37
2. Dr. Amable Legrand & Arthur Maury	65	44
3. Edward Loines Pemberton & Judge F. A. Philbrick QC	77	52
4. John W. Scott	89	58
5. Dr. Alfred Moschkau	95	62
CHAPTER 4 A respectable society (1878 - 1914)	103	67
CHAPTER 5 On the search for new ways (1914 - 45)	143	90
CHAPTER 6 The great collectors:-	167	104
1. Philipp La Rénotière von Ferrary	169	105
2. Friedrich Breitfuss	204	127
3. George V of Great Britain	211	131
4. Alfred F. Lichtenstein	221	137
5. Maurice Burrus	226	141
6. John R. Boker Jr.	234	146
CHAPTER 7 Quo vadis Philately? Philately in our times (since 1945)	239
CHAPTER 8 From the corner shop to the mail-order firm: The development of business from 1860 to today	269
CHAPTER 9 Major dealers and Firms:	309
1. Stanley Gibbons International Ltd.	309
2. Warren H. Colson	324
3. Herman E. Sieger	333
4. Henry E. Harris & Jacques Minkus	342

CHAPTER 10	Where the Rouble rolls: Auctions and their catalogues	351
CHAPTER 11	The Post Office meddles: The Post Office as a dealer	415
CHAPTER 12	The art of conservation and restoration	433
CHAPTER 13	The forgers	447
CHAPTER 14	Genuine or fake? The role of the Expert in philately	479
CHAPTER 15	Visiting cards of philately: The International Exhibitions	511
CHAPTER 16	The Post and its history: Postal museums Philately in museums	581
 PART 2: WITHOUT PRINTERS INK THERE IS NOTHING
CHAPTER 17	In the beginning was the catalogue: The general and specialised catalogues as well as general handbooks with the characteristics of catalogues	601
CHAPTER 18	He who sticks once, sticks and sticks so long as he lives: The album and other aids	709
CHAPTER 19	Current information: The magazines	763
CHAPTER 20	For the scientific collector: monographs and handbooks	887
CHAPTER 21	The philatelic researchers:	935
	1. Carl Lindenberg	937
	2. Dr. José Marcó del Pont	945
	3. Dr. Emilio Diena	951
	4. Sir Edward D. Bacon KCVO	959
	5. Dr. Carroll Chase	967
	6. Ing. Léon Dubus	975
	7. Ing. Edwin Mueller	981
	8. James R. W. Purves	991
	9. Dr. Soichi Ichida	1003
	10. Paolo Vollmeier	1009
CHAPTER 22	Who seeks will find: Philatelic Libraries The trade in philatelic literature	1013

PART 3: ORGANISATIONS MUST EXIST

CHAPTER 23	The spiritual home of collectors: Societies and Study Groups	1049
CHAPTER 24	The house becomes greater: Philatelic Congresses and National Societies The International Federation of Philately (FIP) Philatelic Academies and other promotional organisations	1091
CHAPTER 25	Recognition does one good: Philatelic honours	1125
EPILOGUE	And leads, where you don't want to go?	1151
LITERATURE LIST		1163
AUTHOR INDEX		1171
ILLUSTRATION ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS		1191
ADDENDA AND CORRIGENDA TO VOLUME		1203
INDEX		1207

PREFACE

This carefully researched book on the History of Philately shows what stamps have done for the collector and discusses the history of this discipline, i.e. stamp-collecting, in parallel with other hobbies relating essentially to collecting. It illustrates the role and importance of philately as a need of humanity, and relates the efforts involved to the spiritual efforts and achievements of the present day.

As well as the material aspects of trade, auctions and exhibitions, the book attempts to bring the wide field of literature into focus so as to make the reader understand what a high degree of scientific zeal and intellectual effort has been expended in deepening our hobby, and this from pure love of the subject and not to earn any money, which tends to have more of a symbolic importance in the field of philately.

I hope from the bottom of my heart that the monumental work of my good friend Professor Carlrichard Brühl will find as wide a circulation as possible, even perhaps beyond philatelic circles alone. Professor Brühl has built up gold-medal collections, written a handbook on the philately of Wurttemberg and is a member of many leading philatelic organisations. However, the present work is indisputably the high point of his already uncommonly prominent philatelic career.

I wish the book many readers. If the adherent of another hobby is stirred to become a philatelist by reading this book, then I wish him as many years of satisfaction and friendship as I have experienced in the many years of my own philatelic activity.

Scarsdale, New York, December 1984

John R. Boker Jr.

PREFACE

Few of the pioneers of Timbrologie who fill the early pages of this book would have been aware that they were laying the foundation stones for an activity which would occupy people from then to the mythic year 2000; and certainly none of them could have foreseen that on the threshold of the new century a man of learning would have decided to write a History of Philately in the spare time from his researches into the history of the Middle Ages.

But it has happened, and the result of the work of the great medievalist and outstanding philatelist that is Carlrichard Brühl, is first of all to demonstrate his quality as a historian. Every chapter, every page every line of this book is in fact the fruit of careful research and prolonged sojourns in specialised libraries all over the world, as well as of discussions and meetings amongst philatelists. Although this is the first history of philately ever to be written, it is nevertheless notably free from mistakes.

However, the book does honour to philately, since the author combines the passion of the philatelist with the cool distance of the scholar. This has produced a vivid picture of our hobby, full of fascination, which is yet a historical portrait: an accurate and convincing picture of philately and at the same time a really gripping read.

Rome, February 1985.

Dr. Enzo Diena

FOREWORD

This is not a book about stamps, and still less an introduction to correct collecting or even investing. Rather, I have tried to cover the phenomenon of philately historically in its many aspects: thus, to write a history of philately which as far as I know has not been attempted before. A first attempt of this kind is bound to come up against many deficiencies, and nobody knows the shortcomings and defects of this book better than the author himself. It is always possible to disagree over the choice of people: but I am sure that the pioneers, collectors, dealers and researchers mentioned here are representative of their countries and topics, even when and if another name might have been picked out just as well. It was more difficult and more important to choose and evaluate the material for individual chapters as well as for the work as a whole, but a one-sided emphasis on individual countries was avoided as far as possible, even though it is the nature of the subject that the Anglo-Saxon countries, particularly Great Britain of course, must take a leading place. In one place I have allowed a gross disproportion to creep in: Ferrary is dealt with in far more detail than he really deserves. I freely admit that in this case my biographical interest in a man about whom practically nothing but nonsense has been written so far, has overcome the strict historian in me.

As far as the choice of material goes, I can only hope that nothing of basic importance has escaped me: I have read a great deal, but naturally not everything. Both time and opportunity were lacking, since the preparation of the book, which had already taken eight years, could not be prolonged beyond reason. In addition, great difficulties in getting hold of source material had to be overcome, since the philatelic libraries of Germany are not sufficient for a study of this kind. Thus, I flew to the USA three times during 1978/80, to spend some weeks in the library of the Collectors Club in New York and to work in that of my late friend George T. Turner of Washington, DC. During my research period at the Princeton Institute for Advanced Study in 1981/82, I frequently managed to get to the outstanding library of the Collectors Club in New York, where I had the invaluable help of the distinguished librarian Dr. W. Elias. He was tireless in answering my questions during innumerable telephone conversations between Princeton and New York, and made me aware of many aspects that would otherwise have escaped my attention.

I was many times a guest at the Royal Philatelic Society in London, where I could use their extensive library. I always enjoyed the help of the Honorary Librarian, at first R. A. Butler, and later F. E. Kiddle. The Secretary of the Royal, Miss Flora Brown, met my numerous requests in a most obliging manner. During my sabbatical in Rome in the winter term of 1979/80, I was frequently able to work in the evenings in the rich library of my friend Dr. Enzo Diena, and I also uncovered material in the Bibliothèque Nationale and the library of the Musée Postal in Paris. Moreover, I have received the most welcome support from O. Gleixner, the head of the Philatelic Section of the Munich City Library, and his staff, especially G. Geierhaas, whether during my numerous visits or in providing information by letter and phone and sending me photocopies.

As is proper for a work which wants to avoid being classified as belles-lettres, this book contains a series of notes intended as references or pointers to further literature. Every author knows that the meat of a book is in the references, but reading them may be too slow or too boring, in which case they are left out, for which reason they have been kept short and always grouped together at the end of a chapter or section. Their rather greater number in the second part of this work is due to the fact that this section deals with the publications and so has more of a research character than the other two parts, which are mainly descriptive.

Chapters 17, 19 and 20 are bibliographic in character to some extent, without being intended as an actual bibliography. Since the entire world had to be covered, gaps and errors are unavoidable although I have honestly tried to keep them down. I have seen at least 90% of the titles quoted, but in some cases I had to be content with indirect quotations, always a dubious thing to do. Also, I freely admit that the main emphasis of my work has fallen on Middle Europe and North America, which must obviously come out as well in the account of the literature, the catalogues, etc., but I hope I have managed to get at least the most important titles. For aerophilately I have enjoyed the authoritative advice of H. Aisslinger, and for Japanese philately that of Dr. R. Spaulding.

The list includes of all those who have helped this book with information of all kinds, the supply or provision of pictorial materials and literature, researches, long chats or detailed letters. In the hope that no-one has been forgotten, they are listed here in alphabetical order, with gratitude.

Translator's note: The list is omitted here for brevity and because translation is unnecessary. It may be referred to on pages XIII-XV of the original.

However, thanks are due above all to the philatelists to whom this book is dedicated. John R. Boker Jr., Ronald A. Butler and Dr. Enzo Diena, whose support and steady interest have done so much for this book. Always in my thoughts is my friend George T. Turner, in whose library, the basement of his house at 408, A-Street, S. E., in Washington, DC, I have spent so many hours. I have without doubt profited most from his profound knowledge and ready helpfulness. He died a few days before a third arranged visit from me. I spent his last Christmas and New Year with him in Washington in 1979. No-one who knew him will ever forget him: requiescat in pace. Heartfelt thanks are due to my friend Dr. H. C. Faussner of Munich, in whose house in Steinach/Tirol many chapters of this book were written during the years 1979 to 1983. Though my original intention was to finish this book before my research visit to the Princeton Institute for Advanced Study, in fact I kept working at it until the Winter of 1984/85: the final editing was done by the 1st April 1985. By far the greatest part of Chapters 19-21 was written during my evenings at Princeton, and I subsequently realised that these chapters could not have been written anywhere better than in the USA, where I had rich opportunities for new contacts and access to extra information which benefited almost every part of the work.

The manuscript was produced by Frau A. Höppner, formerly Weimer, of Bremen, Frau E. Brändle and Frau E. Burger of Giessen. I would like to thank them here for their care and patience, even with the 10th version of a paper - the Ferrary chapter was completely rewritten five times. The index of personal names was compiled by research student B. Veith of Giessen: G. Welter of Camberg was responsible for the first outline of the subject index, though in the end it was not used, and moreover gave much useful extra information and several times helped in producing a clearer rendition of particular passages. My sincere thanks are due to all the people named for their interest and help.

The book was written on commission from the firm of R. Borek of Brunswick, who should also have published it. As the Borek company finally gave up publishing in the year 1983 at a time when the first volume was just completely ready, the firm of Georg Olms of Hildesheim, sprang into the breach and took the book under its wing. I thank the publisher W. Olms from the bottom of my heart for this brave decision in a difficult hour. This decision was made easier by generous contributions from my friends John R. Boker Jr. of Scarsdale, New York, B. Hennig of Chicago, IL, V. Parthen of Wiesbaden and H. Aisslinger of Aalen. However, all their trouble would have been in vain had not Erivan Haub of Wiesbaden, demonstrated his interest in and support of this work by a very substantial donation. Thus, private initiatives alone are to thank for the appearance of this book: a beautiful example of the vitality of philately.

My hearty thanks are due to Dr. E. Mertens, the manager of Olms, and his colleague J. P. Pracht for working together harmoniously on the technical aspect of the printing. Finally, I would like to say that writing this book always gave me great pleasure to the end, a claim I cannot make for all my books. Thus, it only remains to hope that this book will find a friendly reception amongst philatelists, even those cried down as narrow-minded and indifferent to literature, and that they will find it stimulating.

Düsseldorf, April 1985

Prof. Dr. Carlrichard Brühl RDP, FRPSL, AISP

PART 1: COLLECTORS, DEALERS, SPECULATORS

CHAPTER 1 AT THE OUTSET IT WAS A FAD . . .

THE PREHISTORY OF PHILATELY (1840 TO ca.1860)

The first two stamps in the world went on sale in England on the 6th and 8th May 1840. These dates cannot be disputed, and stamp collecting must necessarily have begun after these memorable days. Naturally it can be expressed in a learned and more pompous way: the 6th May 1840 is a definite “terminus post quem” to be used in dealing with philately. Now we know that the first catalogues, albums and magazines appeared during the years 1861/63, as will be described in the next chapter. The lively response to these publications proves that at that time there was already a wide spectrum of collectors ready to purchase aids of this sort: in short there were philatelists “avant la letter”, since the term Philately had not been coined. To stay with the jargon of historical scholarship: the year 1861 is a definite “terminus ante quem”, i.e. serious stamp collecting must have begun sometime between 1840 and 1860. However, for the historian of recent times, the 19th century in particular, is left groaning over an unending flood of useful material, but the historian who tries to locate the beginnings of philately quickly finds himself back in prehistoric times. A careful search had to be made through old newspapers for references to postage stamps however slight without getting a definite answer to the question, even when serious collecting must obviously have started. It was also necessary to try and find the first stamp collector: his name will remain for ever unknown, though a philatelic legend grew up about him quite early on.

The first literary evidence of the collection of postage stamps goes back to the year 1842: the obviously highly eccentric uncle of a young lady promised her a dowry of the order of £3,000 for her imminent marriage, if she could provide him with the equivalent in used stamps. Since this amounted to 720,000 penny blacks, the lady turned in her need to an advert in The Times of 1st October 1842, addressed especially to the ladies of England, asking for their help. On the 6th October the newspaper reported, under the heading Curious Contract, that a generous old man had promised first £2,000, and then as much as £4,000 for the building of churches, under the same conditions: in both cases “ladies of rank” were closely involved. The mania spread: on the 29th October another young lady advertised in The Times with a request for help in papering her room with stamps: the 16,000 she had already collected had unfortunately proved not to be enough.

Figure 1 A remarkably preserved first day cover of the World’s first stamp. The letter went from London to Nottingham. The outgoing postmark “LS (Lombard Street) 6 My 6, 1840” can be clearly read on the left part of the flap.

An anonymous reader’s letter of the 2nd November was quick to suggest that the eccentric uncle, the generous old man and the young lady were in all probability one and the same person, who had found a way to get the postmarks off the stamps and give himself a purpose in life by this means - in other words, a definitely dubious undertaking. The famous satirical weekly Punch was in the second year of its life in 1842, and could not restrain itself from remarking that the English ladies of that period seemed more anxious to collect Queen’s heads than Henry VIII had been to cut them off: it published a satirical poem on this subject (Punch, Volume 2, p.76)⁽¹⁾. It is perfectly obvious that none of this has anything to do with the serious collection of stamp. “Perforce-collecting”, as this accumulation of stamps has been called - Melville refers to it as hobbyhorsical in the extreme - is an eccentric notion, even a fad, but not philately. Nevertheless this way of dealing with stamps - the pointless accumulation of as many as possible - was without doubt the earliest, and was predominant subsequently. Bets were made about getting together a given number of stamps by a given date, and in particular, rooms were papered with stamps. Thus philately was still a long way away. An advert in the Family Herald for the 22nd March 1851 appears to indicate a new departure: the T. H. Smith bookshop in Brewer Street offered four used red penny stamps in exchange for an oval imprint from an envelope. This looks like an attempt at a philatelic barter arrangement, but is actually not, as we find by reading further: The panelling of the bookshop is decorated with 80,000 stamps in different patterns, and is known as the most modern in England. As Goethe would have said This is the heart of the matter⁽²⁾. As late as 1859 (!) the magazine Leisure Hour in an article called Something about postage stamps had nothing to say about used stamps except that they were more-often used as wallpaper than people might think, since the stamps gave not at all a bad effect: (The walls) ... giving the effect of larger space in the apartment. The questionable statement in two English magazines of the year 1860 that it was mainly ladies who collected stamps leads to the suspicion that these were always “wallpaper collectresses”. Thus, a careful survey of the contemporary magazines - we should not talk about literature - has yielded pitifully little for our purposes. Of course, purely informative articles about the production of stamps, postal rates, etc. have been left out of consideration, as they tell us nothing about collecting as such.

Figure 2 The Times of October and November 1842 contain the first evidence for the non-postal use of English stamps: cancelled stamps were collected in large numbers for quite surprising reasons.

All the same, the year 1860 does seem to represent a turning point. In that year a schoolmaster, S. F. Cresswell, sent a letter to the magazine Notes and Queries, which published it on the 23rd June. Cresswell speaks of the educational value of stamp collecting for young people: This seems a cheap, instructive and portable museum for young people to arrange, in the same breath he bemoans the lack of a cheap fac-simile catalogue and asks for the address of a firm in London where stamps or lists of them could be procured. The worthy schoolmaster's enquiries seem to have roused no response, but the October issue of the magazine Young England published a genuine offer of exchanges from a certain A.D. He even offered to send anyone interested a list of his own stamps so as to let them know the ones he did not want. There is no doubt that A.D. was not trying to paper his room with stamps but was a genuine collector: but there is also no doubt that he was finding it hard to get in touch with other collectors. In 1861 there were a number of enquiries from people who wanted to contact others for exchanges and in November 1861, Beeton's Boy's Own Magazine published one of the oldest adverts from a dealer, a certain H. Barber. In January 1862 the magazine informed its young readers of a favourable rate for exchange adverts (1s. 6d. per advert): in March there were five adverts in all, but by December of that year there was already a double column of them!

So far we have dealt exclusively with contemporary sources, since human recollections are so unreliable. A good example of this is provided by the advert from a certain W. G. Diamond in the February 1863 number of the Boy's Own Magazine. W. G. Diamond states in this that he had been a dealer since 1857 and has the largest stock in London. This should mean that such an announcement might have been made any time over the previous six years, but the name of William Gibbons Diamond, whose main trade was that of tobacco dealer, does not appear in the London address book before 1859. Probably, it was also only a nostalgic memory when James J. Robinson told Fred Melville many years later that he had been trading in stamps in Liverpool as early as 1857. However, closer examination of what he claimed does confirm his story to some extent: as a 14-year-old apprentice he had to collect his firm's post daily from the Post Office and there, amongst horses and carriages and much to the annoyance of the postal staff, he carried on a flourishing trade with boys of his own age, older people rarely putting in an appearance, they preferred to engage young college boys to buy and exchange on commission.

According to his own statements, Edward Stanley Gibbons was trading in stamps from his father's chemist shop in Treville Street, Plymouth as early as 1856. This date is extremely early, and to me it seems likely that Gibbons' memory has played him false. He is referring at best to a very restricted local business in stamps. We may however grant that he might have started a limited business - hardly yet his main occupation - as early as 1860, although his name was still unknown to other English dealers in 1862, and his earliest advertisement dates from 1864. Maury's memory has also played tricks on him: he claims to have begun stamp dealing in 1860, whereas it cannot have been earlier than 1862. Bertram T. K. Smith is thus of the opinion that the firm of Stafford Smith in Bath, founded in 1861, is the oldest stamp business in the full sense of the word⁽³⁾. Stafford Smith was the uncle of B. T. K. Smith.

 Editor's note: Brühl gives the name as Alfred Smith but this is an obvious error. Stafford Smith founded the business which Alfred later joined. Also, Alfred Smith was B. T. K. Smith's father.

After what has been said it will hardly come as a surprise that Frederick Booty says, in the introduction to his Stamp Collectors Guide of 1862: two or three years ago ... collectors were to be numbered by units (they are now numbered by hundreds). This was not English understatement, but a plain statement of fact which is confirmed by what Th. Lewes and E. L. Pemberton wrote in 1863 in the preface to their pamphlet on forgeries: according to them, the number of collectors six or seven years earlier (i.e. about 1857) was very small, and then became even smaller, only three or four gentlemen (!) - certainly not more, as they positively state. Not till about 1860/61 did stamp collecting begin to expand in the manner that distinguishes it today (i.e. 1863). All the available facts and the concordant voices of all authors of the 1860s agree that Pemberton and Lewes have given a very accurate description of the beginnings of stamp collecting in England. The famous English philatelist Dr. C. W. Viner claims to have seen the first stamp collection of his life about the year 1855, which would fit in very well with the above statements⁽⁴⁾. Serious collecting was thus obviously a product of the 1850s, and of the later rather than the earlier years of this decade. Initially it was restricted to only a few enthusiasts; one of the first English collectors must have been Dr. J. E. Gray⁽⁵⁾, whose personality is still with us. A more general spread of this new form of collecting cannot be detected till about 1860. Nothing can be said about a stamp trade in the full sense of the word. At the end of the 1850s, trading in used stamps was at best a sideline for schoolboys, students or the proprietors of small mixed tobacconist and newsagents shops.

Figure 3 The Introduction to Frederick Booty's catalogue of 1862, in which he writes briefly regarding the beginning of collecting in England.

So far, we have dealt exclusively with the motherland of stamps, England, though it does not necessarily follow that because the first stamps appeared in England, stamp collecting must have its origin there as well. The oldest English philatelic journals are in fact unanimous in stating that the origin of stamp collecting is to be found in France and Belgium. In fact, there is much to support the view that serious collecting in these countries is at least no more recent than in England, whereas the perforce-collecting described at the outset was definitely a craze restricted to England. The Continent went in for other freaks: a gentleman at the carnival ball of the Paris Opera in 1865 caused a general sensation with a costume stuck all over with stamps: on his chest he carried a placard reading affranchissement insuffisant (insufficient postage)⁽⁶⁾. The postage stamp pictures, i.e. pictures made up of postage stamps, that are frequently referred to in late 19th century also seem to have originated on the Continent, whereas in England they went in rather for papering rooms.

However, to get back to actual collecting: precise details of when it began are naturally as rare as in England, and the nostalgic recollections of later years are known to be deceptive. Hence it does not prove very much when Dr. P. Kloss in his official speech as chairman of the Internationalen Philatelistenvereins (International Philatelic Society) of Dresden at the 50th Jubilee meeting of the Society in 1882 states that he knows from his own experience that collecting was going on vigorously at the end of the 1850s. It cannot be proved from contemporary records that Germany failed to be amongst the pioneers in this direction. More serious attention should be paid to the statement made by J.-B. Moens in the first number of his periodical Le Timbre-Poste of 1863, that he had already been collecting for about 12 years⁽⁷⁾. Moens was not one to hide his own light under a bushel, and he claims with all due modesty that he played the leading part in establishing the new hobby. At that time he was the leading European dealer, and his claim may have been coloured by a certain self-interest, but even taking it with a very large pinch of salt, we may allow he could have been collecting since about 1853/54, which takes us back to roughly the same time as the earliest English evidence. It is worth noting that the Vandermaelen Museum in Brussels – this vast caravanseraï of all the curiosities of the globe as Moens called it – is alleged to have had a tableau of about 100 postage stamps on display in the early fifties, although Hanciau dates this occurrence to the period about 1860 in his own reminiscences⁽⁸⁾. However, it is out of the question that this represented a serious collection; this tableau was just one curiosity amongst many others.

Figure 4 This is a water-colour done from memory by Adolf Reinheimer and presented to Lord Crawford in connection with the London Exhibition of 1906. It represents the first public display of postage stamps in the Vandermaelen Museum, Brussels. Reinheimer dates this exhibition to 1852, but this date is by no means certain. Original size 23.5 x 15 cm.

If we now recall that Moens must have begun collecting about 1853/54, actual stamp dealing in his bookshop in the Galerie Bortier must necessarily have begun later, if only by a year or two. We may thus state with certainty that Moens was dealing in stamps some time before 1860, or to put it more precisely, was selling stamps amongst other things in his shop: the oldest evidence known to me can be dated to 1858⁽⁹⁾. In addition to Moens, people like Dr. J. E. Gray in London, Oscar Berger-Levrault in Strasbourg, etc. – names we shall meet again in the next chapter – were certainly collecting before 1860, but in no case can it be proved with certainty that their collecting activity began in the early 1850s or before that.

Figure 5 Two “snapshot” sketches from an issue of the Magasin Pittoresque from the year 1889.

There are some quite legendary romantic tales like that of a certain Auguste Maucin, an engraver in Paris, who is supposed to have been a collector since the year 1840: later he fell ill with tuberculosis and had to sell his - of course complete - collection for a hundred francs to one of the three dealers in Paris in the year 1855 in order to buy medicine. This lachrymose tale is just as much an invention as that of Vicomte Victor Wetzel in Lille, who is supposed to have collected stamps from 1841 onwards. In fact Wetzel - not surprisingly a numismatist above everything - was without doubt a collector, who could possibly have started collecting in the 1850s. It also seems doubtful to me whether the public exchanges in London (Birchin Lane) and Paris (in the Tuileries gardens) really date back to the period before 1860, as has often been claimed. Birchin Lane or Change Alley was certainly going in April 1862, and the bourse in the Tuileries could be a little older, but hardly by three whole years⁽¹⁰⁾. Thus, as the Continental centres of the new stamp craze, Paris and Brussels give much the same picture as London: the number of serious collectors is extremely small, and we cannot yet speak of a genuine trade.

It is not surprising to find that philately is a child of the mid 19th century. It was not even firmly established before people began thinking about its history. However, anyone who thinks this means that all the problems involved in researching the origins of the new craze have been solved, is in for a grave disappointment. Both Moens in his 1893 article On the stamp mania and Herbert Camoens in the first number of the Philatelist in 1866 under the title Philately. From its earliest age to the present time agree in saying that collecting by children was the beginning of philately. Collecting began in schools, then slowly spread to adults as well⁽¹¹⁾. This is definitely downright nonsense, and contradicts all human experience: Adults did their collecting at home and kept quiet about their hobby so as not to provoke derision, and so did not try to trade with one another, whereas schoolboys collected openly inside and outside school. This meant that the young people soon knew more about stamps than the adults⁽¹²⁾. This is the picture of development given by Victor Suppantshitsch; whether it is accurate in every respect is still an open question. The last part is certainly true. There is a neat parallel from our own days: children usually know about cars and aeroplanes down to the least detail much better than the adults who actually drive the cars or use the planes.

The oldest German specialist periodical, the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, in its issue for August 1864, renounces any idea of promoting collecting amongst young people: Our paper can never be reproached with spreading the gospel of stamp collecting amongst young people ... ⁽¹³⁾. This was an answer to the Gartenlaube - a popular German family magazine of the 19th Century, which had made pungent criticisms of the stamp trade amongst young people (“swapping”). This shows that young people were definitely taking an interest in stamp collecting quite early - probably more so in the 1860s than they are today - but it is still just a historical legend that serious stamp collecting had its origin with them. An indirect proof of this is supplied by what Moschkau wrote in 1877: The stamp collector is getting bolder. In earlier days adults claimed if asked only to be collecting for their children - since collecting was looked on as absurd and childish. ⁽¹⁴⁾

To sum up, the following statements may be made about the primitive age of philately: Serious collecting is not traceable before 1850, and in the early fifties the situation was not much different, the number of collectors began to increase slowly after about 1855. Collecting was originally essentially limited to England and France (with Belgium). Before 1860 only a very few people in the German-speaking countries showed any inclination towards collecting. Overall, this epoch of philately is characterised by a long list of negatives: no catalogues, no albums, no specialist magazines or specialist literature, no societies, no specialist dealers: as a positive correlative to these there are three further negatives: no speculative issues from postal undertakings, no forgeries to damage the collector, no cancelled-to-order stamps. Philately was in a paradisaical state of innocence: it was a Garden of Eden, but its fall into sin was not very far in the future.

Notes to Chapter 1

1. B. T. K. Smith: Philately, in “The Times” (1839-1862)., The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, 1911, Volume 4, Issue 1, pp.18-19: See also Anderson & Smith, pp.1-3; M'Coy: pp.46-47.
2. Suppantchitsch, on pp.7-8, has totally missed the point of this announcement; Anderson & Smith, p.4 also refers.
3. Smith: Early days, pp.9-10. See Chapter 3 below, Section 2, p.71, my note 17. The date of founding of Stanley Gibbons Ltd. was initially given as 1854, which the founder corrected by word of mouth to 1893 (!) to his successor Charles J. Phillips; see Phillips: History, p. 5. However, The London Philatelist, 1906, Volume 15, Issue 171, p.60; and Smith: Early days, p. 9 differ. See also Chapter 9, Section 1, p.309. In the year 1909 the firm of W. S. Lincoln of London, celebrated the 50th anniversary of its foundation as “The oldest established stamp dealer in the world”. However, see Note 9 below.
4. Stamp Collectors Magazine, 1865, Volume 3, Issue 23, p.2. The unsigned article is rather vague and says that the author saw the first stamp collection of about 150 items more than ten years ago. See also: The Philatelic Journal, 1872, Volume 1, Issue 10/11, p.191, and Anderson & Smith: p.7-8, Melville: Chats, pp.116-117.
5. According to a statement he made in the June 1862 number of the magazine Young England (p.91) and repeated in the introduction to the 1st edition of his catalogue, he started collecting directly after the introduction of the new penny post: I began to collect them shortly after the system was established and many years before it had become the fashion, simply because I believe that I was the first that proposed the system of a small uniform rate of postage to be prepaid by stamps ...: quoted by Anderson & Smith: p.12; who give in the same place the reaction to Dr. Gray's assertion that he was the first person to suggest the penny post. In any event however, he was one of the earliest collectors in England, see also Melville: Chats, pp.124-125. See also Chapter 2, p.30, my Note 35; Chapter 17, p.613, my Notes 19-20.
6. Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, 1865, Volume 1, Issue 8, p.55. The same story was also told at an earlier date. See Chapter 2 p.41.
7. Thus at best since 1851, and not since 1848 as Kehr: p.39, claimed. Ton: p.10 is also wrong in stating that Moens was in the trade as early as 1850. See below, Chapter 8, pp.272-273.
8. Louis Hanciau: Yesterday and today. in Le Philatéliste Belge, 1921, Volume 1, Issue 10, pp.224-227, especially p.226: about 1860! Hanciau wrote these reminiscences in 1921, but gives precise details. His statements as to dates can thus not be simply brushed to one side.

9. In a reprint by Moens of the book Simple and Advanced Chess by Count Aloïs de Robiano (Paris 1835¹, Brussels 1852²), he describes himself at the beginning of 1858 as a bookseller, purveyor of stamps for collections. The year is unfortunately not given on the photocopy of the title page now in front of me: I have the kindness of A. Leclercq of Brussels to thank for this information. Smith: Early days, p.9, doubts that Moens was a dealer before 1860, but he is wrong. Doubtless, though, his stamp dealing was just a quite insignificant sideline. Moens, as is known, remained a bookseller all his life. See also Chapter 3, Section 1, pp.49 & 51.
10. For stamp bourses see Smith: (Note 1 above) p.19; Brunel: pp.5 & 33, and Chapter 2 below, pp.15-16, Note 3. The information about Vicomte Wetzel comes from a letter sent by a certain Désiré Descamps to the editor of the Journal des Philatelistes, 1912, Volume 20, Issue 15, p.199. This in fact claimed that Wetzel was collecting as early as 1840, which is of course nonsense. However, according to Descamps, Wetzel possessed a Lallier album, changed over later to a Mauray album, and was thus without question one of the pioneers of philately in France, even though Lille could not be thought of as “the cradle of philately” as Descamps believed. Descamps’ statements were repeated by Franz Kalckhoff in Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1912, Volume 23, Issue 8, p.125.
11. Stamp mania. Its origin and development, in: Le Timbre-Poste, 1863, Volume 1, pp.27-31, especially p.29 (of the new edition): Camoens: p.1. Similarly Hanciau: (Note 8 above), p.224-225.
12. Suppantchitsch: History, p.17, see Note 14 below.
13. Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, 1864, Volume 2, Issue 40, p.20: see also Brunel: p.10 and below, Chapter 2, pp.41-42; Chapter 4, pp.108-109.
14. Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal, 1877, Volume 4, Issue 40, p.20; see also, Brunel: p.10 and below, Chapter 2, pp.41-42; Chapter 4, pp.108-109.

CHAPTER 2 “STORM AND STRESS”

OR THE FOUNDATION YEARS OF PHILATELY (ca.1860 - 1878)

There is no decade in the history of philately even approximately comparable in importance to the decade 1860-1870. These are the actual foundation years in which the bases were laid for later developments in all subjects. No decade was more creative, yet at the same time more confused and opaque, one might almost say chaotic, than the '60s of the last century. Everything that today goes to make up philately: trade, catalogues, periodicals and literature, societies, aids such as albums etc., are found to have an origin dating back to these years. Finally, a thriving trade in forgeries also developed from the “imitations” of the '60s. Each of these individual topics is given its own chapter later, in which the development of such things as the stamp trade, the philatelic press, the societies etc., is dealt with in detail⁽¹⁾. It thus remains for this general introductory chapter to set out the topics which will be dealt with in detail later. This means that certain factors can not be ignored - even at the risk of repetition – since they have an important place in the historical development.

The sudden upsurge in the collection of postage stamps as such is based on the fact that over the course of years the number of different items available to be collected – as understood then: nobody was collecting plate numbers or the like – had grown big enough to make an attractive collection possible. However it has never been clearly established why this upsurge took place exactly in the year 1860, not earlier and not later. It is nevertheless a fact that the number of collectors suddenly increased enormously, and in many countries simultaneously. I will start by quoting the words of Frederick Booty in the introduction to his 1862 catalogue: Two or three years ago ... collectors were to be numbered by units (They are now numbered by hundreds). An article published in 1862 in Weber'schen Illustrirten Zeitung stated that this hobby had already reached “the highest circles” in London, Paris and Brussels. Alfred Moschkau wrote in 1872 that half the world, so to speak, was collecting during the years 1861 to 1865 and conceded that the number of collectors was lower in 1870/71 than it had been earlier.

Figure 6 The first page of the best-known English magazine of the 1860s, The Stamp Collector's Magazine. The first issue appeared on 1st February 1863. The editor was Dr. Ch. Viner. The magazine lasted for twelve years.

The first task faced by any collector, even when he kept his collection in a cigar box as was common at that time, is to enlarge his own holding. This was not so easy since letting strangers now that one collected these little pieces of coloured paper involved the risk of looking foolish, and even incurred the mistrust of the postal authorities. The Postmaster-General of France, Count Edouard Vandal, stated publicly in 1863 that collecting used stamps struck him as an unpleasant development that could lead to abuse since there was no way of knowing exactly why stamps that had already been used were being collected, the Administration had reason to fear that this is being done with criminal intention. The good man could simply not accept that the “figurines” were being collected for their own sake⁽²⁾.

Figure 7 This woodcut by Jules Germain (1877-1946) gives a very lively impression of the Tuileries bourse. However, this work first appeared in 1900 and is not a contemporary record as is often assumed; it does not illustrate this market at its start in the year 1860.

There were then no dealers, or only odd ones in a very few towns. People of a like inclination were sought-for in the street. On the first page of the first issue of the Stamp Collector's Magazine from 1st Feb 1863 appeared under the heading Postal chit-chat an article that has been frequently quoted and began with the words Have you a yellow Saxon? – I want a Russian – I'll give you a red Prussian for a blue Brunswicker – and so on. The anonymous author – it was probably Dr. Charles Viner – recalls his memories (“two years or so”) of the lively exchange conversations of young people in Birchin Lane, the London exchanges market of the years 1861/62. The Paris market of the Tuileries Gardens was actually a few months older: it was in full flower in 1863. It was much more important than the London market and drew some 300-400 people every Thursday and Sunday. The rate of exchanges was correspondingly high. Owing to some unfortunate circumstances the market was moved to the Luxembourg Gardens about 1865, but did not stay for long. Thus, for over a hundred years now people have gathered on Sunday mornings at the Carré Marigny, in the immediate vicinity of the Champs Elysée⁽³⁾.

Figure 8 A drawing of the stamp market in the Champs Elysée from the Magasin Pittoresque of the year 1889.

Victorien Sardou, a boulevard littéraire well known in his day, set up a literary memorial to the market in the Tuileries Gardens in his most successful theatrical piece “The Benoîton Family”, first produced in 1865. In this, the precocious schoolboy Fanfan (Benoîton) first speculates successfully in this market, but then undergoes a shipwreck. At the same time, however, there were commercial markets at the Palais Royal in Paris, in Leipzig, in Kaufbeuren, etc. though none of them lasted very long⁽⁴⁾. The material element thus moved to the centre of interest at a very early stage. The argument that stamp collecting roused in young people an undesirable tendency towards trading was often heard at this time.

Figure 9 What may be the oldest picture of a stamp shop: The premises of Stafford Smith and Smith in Bath in the year 1864. This picture also makes it clear that Stafford Smith and Smith were primarily booksellers. cf. Figure 91, Numbers 3-4.

However, exchange dealings alone could not satisfy the material needs of collectors, and so there was a gradual rise in the number of commercial dealers, particularly in England and France, though stamps were practically always a second line of trade, the main one being cigars, stationery and the like, a few sheets of stamps being displayed in the windows to attract some extra trade. The number of people dealing in stamps alone remained very small: There was not a single one in Berlin before 1870. The first full-time dealer was probably Arthur Maury of Paris who described himself as a private dealer in Paris in 1863. He was followed by Alexander Bailleu, Stanley Gibbons, Edard de Laplante, E. L. Pemberton, J. W. Scott, Alfred and Stafford Smith, Young and Stockall, etc, all of whom were active as professional dealers during the mid-Sixties. By Moschkau's own admission, nobody in Germany measured up to these names⁽⁵⁾. About the middle of the Sixties, the number of dealers world-wide increased sharply, as can be deduced from the advertisement sections of the various stamp magazines. The first specialist auctions of postage stamps took place in the USA during the early Seventies, but this form of trade remained a sort of curiosity at first.

Thus collectors and dealers were at the beginning of the development, as indeed it could hardly be otherwise, but both depended entirely on themselves. Buying and selling were purely matters of sentiment. Nobody knew what was actually a rarity, or what stamps were intrinsically worth. The rule of thumb used was that stamps must become more valuable the further they were from their country of origin, so that people were naturally least interested in the stamps of their own country. It was thus a truly epoch-making event when the first commercially available catalogue appeared on the 21st December 1861 from the pen of Alfred Potiquet. It ran to 1112 numbers, 884 of which were devoted to current postage stamps! This was in fact not the first publication on philately but it was the first to be made generally available. The extraordinary success enjoyed by this and practically all catalogues issued in the 1860s - the second edition of "Potiquet" appeared in March 1862 and was by then the 4th or 5th catalogue - showed the urgency of the need. Although from the modern standpoint practically all of the early catalogues contained numerous errors of fact, were almost without exception lacking in illustrations and gave only the scantiest details - in the first edition of his catalogue (November 1862), Dr. J. E. Gray hardly ever bothered even to mention the colour of the stamps - their value to collectors of those days can hardly be overestimated and each list was readily snapped up⁽⁶⁾. If we also remember that on average 1000-2000 copies of each of the early catalogues were printed, that these were snapped up in a very short time and that only serious collectors would spend money on a catalogue, it becomes quite obvious that the collectors in England, France and Belgium alone must have numbered in the thousands. Of the abundance of catalogues appearing between 1862 and 1878, we will now highlight the two that can be looked on as the best of these early years. One was published in German in 1864 and in French in 1867. It is the catalogue prepared by the Strasbourg publisher Oscar Berger-Levrault⁽⁷⁾, which was by a long way the best catalogue of the 1860s. The other is the 6th edition of Dr. J. E. Gray's catalogue edited by Overy Taylor and this may be reckoned the outstanding catalogue of the 1870s. these catalogues appeared in traceably higher numbers than the earlier ones of their kind.

Figure 10 Oscar Berger-Levrault (1826-1903), one of the earliest collectors in France. (A photograph from the 1860s.)

Figure 11 Jean-Baptiste Moens (1833-1908). (A photograph from the 1860s.)

An honourable mention should be given in particular to the splendid work by J.-B. Moens: Les Timbres-Poste Illustrés which appeared for the first time in 1864. An English edition appeared in the same year under the title Postage Stamps Illustrated⁽⁸⁾. This catalogue - it corresponded to the 3rd edition of the Moens' Manual - was a solid piece of work, but its outstanding feature was the 54 tables of engravings of all of the stamps that had appeared up to then, which remained the best of their kind for many years. This slim volume - the first parts were issued as early as 1862 - was thus the first illustrated manual on philately and this is not affected by the fact that Moens used forgeries as his models for some stamps, e.g. those of the Swiss Cantons. This merely shows the condition of collectors and dealers in the year 1862⁽⁹⁾. All of the 1862 catalogues were alike in not giving details of price: this was the prerogative of the "Price Lists" from the leading firms of dealers, who naturally restricted them to the items they had in stock and made no attempt at completeness. Such "Price Catalogues" also appeared from 1862 onward and were very popular as they gave the collector some guidelines as to price. However, even in the 1870s a strict distinction can be drawn between the actual catalogues (without prices) and dealer's lists (with prices).

Figure 12 A page from the first illustrated work on philately, the 1864 edition of Les Timbres-Poste Illustrés by J.-B. Moens. Original format 22 x 14.4cm.

The year 1862 saw not only the first catalogues, but also the first albums and the first literary efforts. J.-B. Moens published a little pamphlet De la Falsification des Timbres-Poste during this year. This was the first literary study of postage stamps and was translated into English the same year: its subject is still alive today. In collaboration with L. Hanciau, who however was not named, Moens described a number of forgeries known to him as well as he could – this pamphlet too lacked illustrations. He described them as “forgeries”⁽¹⁰⁾ and thus founded a whole body of literature which now covers hundreds, if not thousands, of titles. The time was not yet ripe for an actual monograph on the stamps of a given country for example. Not till 1867 did Dr. A. Legrand publish, under the pseudonym Dr. Magnus, an independent study on the watermarks and paper of all stamps known at the time, following it two years later with a study of the stamps of Moldavia and Wallachia⁽¹¹⁾. These were the first philatelic studies to deserve the name: thus, true philatelic literature as distinct from catalogues and tracts on forgeries was born in the year 1867⁽¹²⁾.

Justin Lallier (1823-1873) put the first album for stamps and cut-outs from postal stationery on the market in Paris as early as June 1862. It had an unexpected success. The English translation appeared in August 1862. As in the case of the catalogues, whatever came on the market was promptly taken up by collectors, although the problems involved with printed albums were soon apparent and critical voices could be heard only a few months after publication of the first albums. A wide variety of albums very quickly appeared in Belgium, Germany, England and USA. They were commercially successful almost without exception. All the early albums took the form of a single bound volume, and so became quickly out of date. The search for a “permanent album” filled the columns of the specialist press during the subsequent years. Although France was the first country to produce a stamp album, Germany soon took the lead in this sector of the requisites industry and has retained it to the present day. The first albums were so poorly adapted to some needs of the collector that their effect on collecting was catastrophic. On the one hand, there was the unsuitable method of fastening stamps into albums by simply sticking them down, on the other there was Lallier’s unfortunate decision to allow only a very limited space for entires, just enough to show the actual stamp. His example was followed by all of the other editors. Although Dr. Legrand raised his voice quite early against this vandalism, millions of them were destroyed in this way before the correct point of view took over.

Finally, right at the end of the year 1862, the first philatelic journal in the world also appeared in England or to be more specific, in Liverpool: The Monthly Advertiser on 15th December 1862. It soon changed its name to The Stamp Collectors’ Review and Monthly Advertiser, but it never had much success and ceased publication in 1864. The leading specialist magazine in England was The Stamp Collector’s Magazine, published for twelve years (1863-1874) from the 1st February 1863. Only two weeks later, on 15th February 1863, J.-B. Moens published his Le Timbre-Poste for the first time, this lasted without interruption until the year 1900, and rapidly became the leading specialist magazine. On May 1st 1863 came the first magazine in the German language, the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, which was praiseworthy but could never bear comparison with Timbre-Poste or its English namesake. The first magazine in France appeared amazingly late. It was Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste by A. Maury, which was followed only a few months later by Le Timbrophile from P. Mahé. However the market for periodicals was swamped like no other by ephemera: in the USA in particular an uncommon number of magazines were started that only survived for two issues at most. However, at the end of the period we are dealing with, i.e. the close of the 1870’s, philatelic magazines had spread over almost the whole of Europe and North America, and had penetrated as far as South America by 1874.

Thus, by the middle of the 1860s, the collector had catalogues, magazines and albums at his disposal and trade was flourishing, but efforts to bring the collectors together into societies did not meet with success. The first proven attempt at starting a society did not take place in Germany, the classical home of societies, but in France. A Société Philatélique de Paris was founded in that city in January 1865, but unfortunately it only had a short existence. Its President was G. Herpin and its Vice President L. de Saulcy; more will be said about both of them later. The oldest society still in existence is the Philatelic Society, London (later the Royal Philatelic Society), which held its first meeting on the 10th April 1869 and numbered the leading English philatelists among its members. From the start of the 1870s onwards the number of societies founded increased rapidly, but just like the magazines, many were very short-lived. The most important are the National Philatelic Society in New York, the Société Française de Timbrologie to which the leading French collectors belonged, and which was founded in 1874 like the National Philatelic Society and the Internationaler Philatelistenverein of Dresden. This came into life on the 1st January 1877 and rapidly became the leading society of middle Europe. We shall return to both of these later on.

Thus everything needed for the thriving development of stamp collecting was available: collectors and dealers, a market, the beginnings of a specialist literature, even if it is still rudimentary and confined initially to catalogues and magazines. The new discipline thus had a number of aids available but had not got a suitable name. The first names that occurred to people were really pathetic. The Stamp Collector's Magazine obstinately used the not very friendly expression "Timbromania", which would be "Markomanie" in German. Since the structure of the German language makes it particularly suited to long words, it was left to a German author to put forward the atrocious term "Epistolofrankomarkomanie"⁽¹³⁾. Justin Lallier complained in 1864 that stamp collecting was not a mania but a "science, one of the new branches of archaeology"⁽¹⁴⁾. In fact "markomaniac" and "Timbromaniac" were used in the earlier days as ironical names for a stamp collector, but Moschkau, speaking in 1872 at a certain distance from these hectic years, referred to "philately as being often called a 'mania' with some justification". However we must ask why collectors of those days made use in their own publications of expressions so unflattering as to have come from the pens of opponents. For example, an English evening paper greeted the appearance of the first specialist magazine with the words: that weakest and most puerile of manias, postage stamp collecting, has found a literary organ ...⁽¹⁵⁾.

A more significant and objective designation was thus needed. Amongst the possibilities were words like "Timbrophily" or "Timbrology", both of which had the advantage of being usable as foreign words in both English and German. Mahé Christened his journal that appeared from the end of 1864 Le Timbrophile, and The Stamp Collector's Magazine began to use the term "Timbrophilist" from its third year onwards⁽¹⁶⁾ but the onwards march of the wise word-builders was soon brought to an end. On the same day as the first number of Le Timbrophile appeared, the 15th November 1864, Issue 5 of Maury's Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste contained an unsigned article with the heading Baptism⁽¹⁸⁾. The unknown author proposed a new artificial word made up exclusively of Greek components: philately, made up from φίλος (friend or supporter) and ἀτελεία (free of any charge or control). A "Philatèle" – this was the original form – was thus a supporter of freedom from charges, in other words of prepayment, and this would do at a pinch, even though “Timbrology” or “Timbrophily” were a hundred times clearer and more striking.

Figure 13 This anonymous article Baptism in which the word Philately was created appeared in Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste on the 15th November 1864. The author was probably G. Herpin.

BAPTISM

Isn't it strange that over the six or seven years that people have been studying and relaxing with postage stamps no-one has thought of giving a name to this attractive occupation which gives pleasure to some and fortune to others? It is impossible to accept the word Timbromania as a suitable designation. This is in fact a rather insulting term, as certain people, trying to be clever, utter in a sarcastic tone what was meant to be quite innocent. Hence it has been used so far for want of a better name, but the time has come to banish it ignominiously from our vocabulary. Even more, as readers and writers we should make ourselves forget this odious expression and even blot it out of existence. However, assuming the beast to be dead along with its poison, we have to find a successor which will have nothing in common with it and will, if possible, have as many good points as it has bad ones. But where shall we find this rare bird? Since everyone can have an opinion on this serious topic and fortune favours the bold, we will take this opportunity to put our view forward.

Everyone must have noticed that the majority of new words have classical words for their roots, doubtless because of the affinity that extremes have for one another. Now as neologisms tend to borrow their elements from Latin and Greek, we too shall try an incursion into one of these languages. We already hear the voices of a hundred critics crying:

“Who will deliver us from these Greeks and Romans”

We shall ignore these vain clamours and continue on our way according to the sayings of Mr. Baour-Lormian and we shall state that as numismatics took its name from the Latin numisma, a medal, and sphragistics (the study of seals) from the Greek σφραγίζω I seal, we too may borrow from this rich language and put forward to enthusiasts the word Philately to express the idea which the odious term we denounced above has tried to make ridiculous. Philately is formed from two Greek words: φίλος friend, enthusiast and ἀτελής (speaking of an object) free, having no charge or tax, prepaid. The substantive form is ἀτελεια. Philately thus means: love of studying anything relating to the prepaid post.

Now the word has been released and the new-born has seen the light, we will straightaway beg our young and charming lady readers to be its godmothers, so as to increase its chances of health and prosperity. What's this, someone will say, you're talking Greek to young ladies? This is a queer way to please them and ask for their patronage? Perhaps this is not such an odd idea as you may imagine. Who knows whether the very oddity of the request might not be its best recommendation. Moreover, where can new ideas, new words ask for protection if it is not from young ladies who like new things and whose generosity is rarely appealed to in vain by the weak? Indeed, we are not attaching to the name in Greek any of the silly pretensions of Vadius in our Molière. Thus, without rashness but equally without embarrassment we solicit the approval of the most beautiful half of the human race, sure that if we get this we will soon have that of the other half.

To sum up, we are not trying to impose anything: simply, the lists being open, we hope and even beg for letters on this subject, whilst stating in advance our entire readiness to follow the advice of a more-inspired Philatelist.

The author of this article is always supposed to be Georges Herpin, one of the leading French collectors of the period⁽¹⁹⁾ although he never expressly admitted as much. Most of the “readers’ voices” that made themselves heard on this topic naturally assumed Maury was the author. A final judgement is not possible: in Herpin’s favour is the fact that the inventor of this word must have had a good knowledge of Greek, which can hardly be true of Maury. Anybody with a less-sound knowledge of Greek would certainly have hit on the word-form “Philotely”⁽²⁰⁾, which did in fact give philately some competition for a time, especially in South America. The propagator of philatelic ideas in this region was E. C. Eberhardt of Valparaíso, a Chilean of German descent, stuck rigidly to the term “Filotelía”, the result of which was that many societies took the name Sociedad Filotélica ... and the like. Discussions on the correct form of the name were going on as late as 1890. “Philotelía” was the word generally used in Greece, but this is a derivation from modern Greek, to which Herpin was a stranger⁽²¹⁾.

Figure 14 The struggle between philately and philotely had not been decided even by the 1880’s.

The new terminology established itself remarkably quickly outside France. The Stamp Collector’s Magazine changed from “Timbrophily” to “Philately” in December 1865, thereby setting a trend⁽²²⁾. Herbert Camoens, alias Lucy Adelaide Fenton (†1897) could write in her History of Philately at the end of 1866 that it is the right word in the right place ... having the double charm of being very euphorious as well as slightly incomprehensible to all but the learned. Major Evans remarked ironically in 1894 that “Philately” would not be confused with “Philanthropy” in publications any more often than “Etymology” was confused with “Entomology” and in 1886 Ost even uttered the appeal God forgive the sins of him who invented the word⁽²³⁾. The word found tardy acceptance only in France itself, which is quite understandable since “Timbrologie” sounds very much better than “Philatélie” to the French ear. Maury was at once in favour of the new term created in his own journal but it was not till the 1890s that “Philatélie” gradually established itself. Mahé stuck by his “Timbrophilie”⁽²⁴⁾, Dr. Legrand preferred the word “Timbrologie”. Hence, the most important French philatelic Society was called the Société Française de Timbrologie, and the best-known French specialised magazine is called L’Écho de la Timbrologie right up to the present day. Personal motives obviously played a part here: Legrand and Herpin were enemies⁽²⁵⁾. Moschkau also thought that “Timbrologie” would be a suitable designation, but then he decided in favour of the “pure Greek” of philately, though to all appearances, he translated it entirely wrongly as “heartfelt concern with matters relating to franking”⁽²⁶⁾. It remains worthy of note that other terms such as “Timbrophily” and especially “Timbrology” are still used today in the very country where the word philately was discovered, whereas all attempts to launch new names outside France foundered without trace⁽²⁷⁾. In his reminiscences, Yesterday and Today written in 1921, Louis Hanciau uses the word “Timbrophilie” or “Timbrophile” throughout.

* Translator's note: actually, Adelaide Lucy Fenton.

Once the new discipline had been christened in this way – “Philatelia” was jokingly proposed as a name for girls in England – the next question to arise was what exactly did it cover, in other words, what did people understand by “Philately” in the 1860s and 1870s. To put it more simply, what was collected and how? It hardly need be said that the ideal in those days was a general collection as complete as possible, containing all postage stamps, post-paid stamps, telegraph stamps, etc. issued to date, obviously including all entires and frequently revenue and private stamps as well. When, for example, Oscar Berger-Levrault gave up collecting in 1870, he was short of only 50 stamps. According to his own data, he owned 6,300 unused and 700 used stamps and entires, plus about 1,400 official essays and about 1,800 used duplicates⁽²⁸⁾.

Figure 15 Oscar Berger-Levrault (1826-1903). (A photograph from about 1890.)

Figure 16 William A. S. Westoby (1815-1899). (A photograph from about 1880.)

On the whole, the large collections were found almost exclusively in England and especially in France: Judge Philbrick, Dr. Ch. Viner, E. L. Pemberton, [W.] A. S. Westoby, Dr. A. Legrand, O. Berger-Levrault, G. Herpin, L. de Saulcy, Ph. De Ferrary, A. de Rothschild, Count P. Durrieu, etc. in Paris and Strasbourg were the best-known collectors of the period and the rest of the world had little to compare with them. In Germany, Prof. Dr. Volpi of Munich, W. Herrmann of Berlin and of course Dr. A. Moschkau deserve mention and possibly J. K. Tiffany in the USA. Italy, Spain, Scandinavia, South America, etc. were still developing countries who had no outstanding personalities as collectors and lagged far behind in trade, society development, etc. The style of collecting was related entirely to individual items, pairs or larger units played no part at all. Even letters were not in demand, since the cancellations were simply cut off entires, and Dr. Legrand's warnings were almost totally ignored⁽²⁹⁾. There was argument - then as now - over the question of unused or used. Ernst Regnard, in Le Timbrophile came out strongly for the collection of unused items and was no doubt expressing the preference of most collectors in France⁽³⁰⁾, whereas people in England and Belgium tended to prefer cancelled stamps at first. However, even before 1870 Oscar Berger-Levrault had had the idea of collecting every stamp in both used and unused condition and tried to get what he called a “nine-block” i.e. stamps that had been cut in such a way that the edges of all of the adjoining stamps could still be seen. He really was the first high-grade collector, but he gave up collecting after the War of 1870/71.

Figure 17 Dr. Ch. W. Viner (1812-1906). (The photograph belongs to around 1880.)

Figure 18 Dr. A. Legrand (1820-1912). (A photograph from the 1880s.)

The preference for unused in France did not come about by chance. The leading collectors were in most cases numismatists and in numismatics worn, i.e. used coins, are much less valuable than those in mint condition, so they are the second choice that an enthusiast would only tolerate in his collection in the hope of replacing it with a better one. In 1862, Weber'sche Illustrierte Zeitung described postage stamps as a type of paper money, whose collection and preservation might be looked on as a special branch of coin collecting. An Italian “Timbrophile” also, in a letter to Mahé's magazine in 1865 referred to stamp collecting as a branch of numismatics in so many words, and at roughly the same time Payne's Family Magazine spoke of philately as the “paper numismatics of the 19th Century”⁽³¹⁾. Amongst the numismatists were Viscount Wetzel, G. Herpin, the President of the oldest philatelic society, and L. de Saulcy (1807-1880), the Honorary President. Louis-Félibien*-Joseph Caignart de Saulcy, a former artillery officer, was elected a Membre de l’Institut in 1842, i.e. he became a member of the French Academy of Sciences on the basis of his numismatic studies, and was appointed a member of the senate as well in 1859⁽³²⁾.

* Translator’s note: should probably be Félicien.

However, stamp collecting was not restricted to French numismatists⁽³³⁾; the publishers of the oldest German philatelic journal, the firm of Zschiesche & Köder of Leipzig, were coin dealers, who gave up dealing in stamps after a few years in order to devote themselves entirely to the coin trade again. It is hardly possible to overestimate the influence of numismatic thinking on the early days of philately. Such things as the preference for the unused condition, the tendency towards single items, the refusal of entire letters, etc., etc. are distinct proofs of this. Moreover, stamp designers themselves frequently used coins and medals as their inspiration, e.g. the sovereign’s head on the stamps of Great Britain, Prussia, Saxony, etc. Even the figure of the sower, standard on French stamps from 1903-1938 was based on a coin design.

The next development was the scientific approach of a certain Dr. Gray, who compared the arrangement of a collection of stamps with that of a collection of butterflies⁽³⁴⁾. Dr. John Edward Gray (1800-1875) was one of the big names in 1860s philately. He was a famous zoologist, a fellow of the Royal Society (FRS) from 1832 and from 1840 Keeper of Zoology at the British Museum – he was never Director of this, as one occasionally reads. His widespread interests included such different topics as museum management, prison reform, sanitary questions, the introduction of the decimal system and last but not least philately, to which he was led by his interest in the reform of the English postal system. He is looked on as one of the fathers of Hill’s postal reform. As a philatelist he was the author of one of the best-known English catalogues of the 1860s, four editions of which he prepared himself⁽³⁵⁾. Dr. Gray was without doubt a distinguished scholar but naturally as a zoologist, not a historian. It is small wonder that he drew no methodical distinction between a butterfly collection and a stamp collection.

Figure 19 The title page of a little pamphlet from the eccentric François Valette, who tried to classify stamps on the basis of scientific criteria. Original format 17 x 11 cm.

However, after these learned men we must not forget to mention the eccentrics. One of these was François Valette or Vallète, whom Mahé referred to as a “demi-savant”. He originally had a post in the Ministry of the Interior and later became a journalist and editor of Pariser Bazar, a German-language magazine in Paris. After that he was editor of the journal Science, then an antique dealer in the widest sense of the word. As Father Valette, the name he preferred to use, he published in 1862 a Petite Manuel de l’Amateur des Timbres-Poste Créés Chez lews Diffèrents Peuples de la Terre, one of the oddest, and at the same time rarest, tracts on philately that had ever been written. A great deal could be said about this slender, small-format little book, which was brought to light again by Pierre Mahé⁽³⁶⁾. Valette deals with practically everything that concerned the collectors of that period, down to practical hints for cleaning stamps (he recommended Eau de Javelle [Translator’s note: a bleach based on potassium chloride.]). However, I mention this little book here primarily because Valette – as befitted a former editor of Science – proposed a “scientific-genetic” classification system which had no parallel. A glance at his “genealogical trees” will be more informative than any amount of description (Figs. 20-21). Valette’s little book was in fact the third oldest catalogue in the world, as it came out before the second edition of Potiquet. Valette’s end was as bizarre as his life. Although he was a man of about 70, he made no secret of his sympathy for the Communards, after the siege of Paris in 1870/71. When the horse- tramway was taken in 1871, he made speeches inciting people to riot, was arrested on the spot and shot under martial law. Valette’s little manual provides further evidence of the numismatic and scientific orientation of philately. For decades, this prevented philately from being considered in its own right as what it really is, a branch of postal history.

Figure 20 This is one of the “genealogical trees” from Valette’s book, in which he brings all of the French stamps into one system. Abstruse as this may be, it does amount to a first attempt at a simple classification of the stamps.

Figure 21 Valette also tried to classify the colours “scientifically”, although the results were not as striking as his “genealogical trees”.

However, it was not only the used/unused controversy that split the world of collectors into two hostile camps. There was apparently a much more serious division between what were called the English and French schools, and this aroused a great deal of emotion in the 1860s, when a certain Pendragon (J. H. Greenstreet) championed the English school against the French school. The English school, in the words of Overy Taylor, believed in collecting the stamp and nothing but the stamp, whereas the French school thought the stamp and everything connected with the stamp to be worth collecting. The heated discussions on this question, which the supporters of the French school easily won even in England, lost their point very much when it turned out that Pendragon himself used the French system in his own collection⁽³⁷⁾. Many things which seem obvious to us today were still matters of fundamental controversy then.

When Dr. Legrand recommended paying attention to the perforations on stamps and even went so far as to invent a key to them (odontomètre), he was attacked in the most vigorous way from many quarters. The Postman’s Knock of New Brunswick in present-day Canada remarked caustically “If a high stress is going to be placed on meaningless trifles like these, it would be better for stamp collecting to come to an early end, as this kind of thing is simply childish”, and the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler could not refrain from saying that “this appears to us to be going too far into trivialities and we take no notice of it”. This was only natural in view of the fact that in 1865 the same magazine spoke of difference between imperforate and perforated stamps as unimportant: “Hence the difference between perforated and imperforate stamps strikes us as having no particular importance: the only point that need be noted is that imperforate stamps were put into circulation before the perforated type”⁽³⁸⁾. Philately was still in its childhood years and found it difficult to outgrow early attitudes. Many of its childhood ailments were left behind quickly and without too much upheaval: however, one of them developed into a chronic ailment which could have put the long-term health of the patient at serious risk: I speak of intrinsic value versus the state of the market for stamps.

How often do we hear collectors say “Oh, if I only had my great-grandfather’s collection, I would be a millionaire today”. If anyone who talks like this actually had the collection concerned, he would be sharply disillusioned. Even if it were one of the outstanding collections of those days, the proceeds of its sale would have difficulty in reaching only 5% of today's catalogue prices, since hanging on to stamps does not necessarily guarantee a higher price. So there is not the slightest reason to long for the good old days: from the point of view of modern philately, all of the big collections of the 1860s and most of those of the 1870s would be a total disappointment to the present day collector. In his 1867 report on the World Exhibition in Paris, Dr. Legrand criticised the show collection exhibited there by L. de Saulcy on the grounds that the stamps were completely stuck down on the sheets, that the collection included used stamps as well – “we have never understood the point of this”, says Legrand – and that it contained proofs and reprints jumbled together without order⁽³⁹⁾. It should be borne in mind that the de Saulcy collection, which Edard de Laplante was in charge of, ranked as one of the best of its time.

Legrand broke the silence about the way to preserve stamps as this question was as important to him as to de Saulcy. There was a far-reaching change of outlook on this in the course of time, and the development of philately was fundamentally affected thereby. This change was due in the first place to the invention of stamp hinges. Securing stamps in albums or – in more general terms – to any support was one of the chief problems of the early years. At the outset, used stamps were stuck down in the full meaning of the term with sticky paste or the like, and unused stamps were stuck down by their original adhesive, if present. Good advice given at the time was to use gum Arabic instead of sticky paste or joiner's glue and “only put it along the edges”, and the latest thing in 1867 was “egg white with alcohol” – “a drop is enough”. Even gelatine – “warm it before use” – was recommended in England in 1866 as perfectly clean and practical. The recommendation for stamps printed in relief was to spread the stamp with “well-moistened gum”, allow this to dry and then stick it down by a little slip of paper in the middle of the stamp to preserve the relief⁽⁴⁰⁾.

Advice like this leaves us asking in all seriousness where the valuable classic items of our own day actually come from. Never from the albums of our grandfathers and great grandfathers. It was thus an epoch-making event in the history of philately when, in the year 1867, little strips of folded paper, i.e. stamp hinges, were suggested for keeping stamps. The suggestion came – once again – from Dr. A. Legrand. In 1869, W. Dudley Atlee, one of Pemberton's authors and a rather shadowy personality, took up this idea and also pleaded for the retention of the original gum – this should not therefore be used any longer to stick stamps into an album – and against sticking entire envelopes down onto a page⁽⁴¹⁾. Naturally, such excellent advice was still a long way from being generally accepted, even though Atlee gave the impression that stamp hinges could speak for themselves. In fact, the triumphal march of the adhesive hinge did not begin until the late 1880s, and Lindenberg with justice named its invention as a milestone in the history of philately.

It is a widely accepted view that during the 1860s the greatest rarities could still be purchased for a few pence. This is true if one thinks of rarities which have been uncovered as such in our own time, e.g. rare cancellations or frankings, some unique stamps, etc. These were items not bought at that period because there was practically no market for them, and so they could in theory have been picked up very cheaply – except that nobody bothered. Pierre Mahé, for example, in his not otherwise specially interesting Souvenirs d'un Timbrophile, relates how during the 1860s he light-heartedly split a block of four of the red Mercury into four individual stamps⁽⁴²⁾. However, really high prices had to be paid for items in demand at that time. Even then it was not possible to build up a large collection for pennies. Valette, who was mentioned above, sold all of his stamps at a uniform price of 2 francs: it was said of one Paris dealer – probably Edard de Laplante – that he would simply not bother with customers who wanted to spend less than 30-40 francs and this in the year of grace 1863! In Leipzig in 1862 rarities cost 15-20 groschen (1-2 marks), and 25-30 francs (20-24 marks) in Paris or Brussels according to the same source, and the author of the article in Weberschen Illustrierten Zeitung (1862, Issue 1014) commented that “at our distance from the capital cities we are not in a position to comprehend these prices”.

In London two years later, £5-10 was the normal price for an average collection, but one containing over 1,800 items had already reached the magnificent price of £100. A little later, £300 was refused for a “recherche collection”, whilst in Paris at about the same time 5,000 francs was agreed on for a better collection. Moreover, in May 1863 Moens asked 550 francs for a collection of 784 stamps (360 of them unused) and as much as 2,200 francs for an almost complete collection (with 1,000 unused) in December of the same year. The prize collection at the Paris International Exhibition of 1867 was valued at 10,000 francs and offered at 3,000-3,500 francs - a not insignificant discount – but proved unsaleable, a fact which provoked ironic comments from Maury, to whom it had obviously been offered previously. In Germany, a fully complete collection would have cost about 800 thalers in 1866, but the firm of Zschiesche & Köder mentioned that it would be hard to get about 120 stamps for about 350 thalers, at least they would not be readily available. The sale of Herpin's collection to Judge Philbrick for 10,000 francs (about £400) in the same year thus attracted a great deal of attention⁽⁴³⁾.

Enough of examples: we can see that even 120 years ago good stamps cost good money, and were not sold cheaply. In 1864 someone even had the idea of starting a limited company for the supply of new stamps: Dr. C. W. Viner founded the London, Provincial, Colonial and Continental Stamp Company, with a planned capital of £500 divided up into 1,000 ten shilling shares, but the enterprise was still-born⁽⁴⁴⁾. Then as now, there were risks involved in buying stamps. For example, large amounts were invested in revenue stamps, which today – after more than 100 years – sometimes hardly make their price in modern currency, since in those days such stamps were priced on the gold standard with a much-higher purchasing power.

The decade of the 1860s experienced a unique boom in philately, followed by stagnation resulting partly from the war of 1870/71, since this was followed by a detectable decrease in market activity. A good deal had changed from when philately appeared to be a mere fad, since it had enough substance to pull through the barren years of the early 1870s. As early as January 1867, Herbert Camoens, alias Lucy Adelaide Fenton [Translator's note: actually, Adelaide Lucy Fenton.] remarked in an article in The Philatelist: “The future of philately ... looks bright and promising. In the course of time it will doubtless cease to be the fashion ... But even then, philately will have its quiet friends ... still proud of, and deserving the name of philatelists”⁽⁴⁵⁾. The fat years of the 1860s (from 1862) naturally showed all of the disagreeable phenomena that are unavoidably connected with a new fashion. Postage stamps were in every mouth and had to bear the brunt of all the speculations which clever operators put forward.

Amazingly enough, music took particularly well to the new fashion. J. V. Hamm composed a postage stamp polka as early as 1863, and the publisher stated in his advertisements that the title page would be adorned with 42 colourful postage stamps. This polka was so popular that it was still in the repertoire of Hamburg street organs as late as 1880. The Postage Stamp Polka of J. H. Doppler was put on the market in the same year. The Stamp Polka of A. Müller, published in Vienna in 1877, bore the picture of the Viennese stamp dealer S. Friedl. In 1873, V. Hönecke dedicated his Postage Stamp Waltz: The Philatelists, to the Hamburg Philatelic Club. Of course, musical production was not limited to Germany. A certain Arnold composed a Postage Stamp Polka in Belgium as early as 1857: in France in 1864, Émile Perrier produced a polka of the same name, which Gautier de Valbrey followed with a Postage Stamp Polka-Mazurka, in the same year. In New York Maria Sequin wrote The American Stamp Polka, etc. A certain degree of fame was attained by the oldest Stamp Gallop, from the Briton Arthur O'Leary in the year 1862. This was not only the most successful gallop of the season, but above all the only piece of music that – though totally unintentionally – contributed to philatelic history: the cover of this piece was also decorated with a number of coloured stamps, one of which was the Swiss Rayon stamp. Cut off the cover, this had an unexpected career as a rare trial, and was still appearing in 1924 in the 3rd edition of Zumstein's specialised catalogue as Figure 10 on page 285, until Baron Percy de Worms put an end to the confusion⁽⁴⁶⁾.

However, the muse of poetry would not be left behind. We will spread the mantle of kindly oblivion over the numberless occasional verses turned out every year, with or without a concrete reason, in honour of philately. One trial sample will be enough. It is the poem My Stamp Album by W. Nöldecke, which appeared for the first time in 1865 and enjoyed great popularity. In fact, it would be hard to maintain that there are any worse verses than these, which Moschkau reprinted in 1880. [Translator's note: See the original book for the German version. It would noit translate well.]

Even plays – usually one-acters, thank heaven – have been written about postage stamps and one actually got put on at the Thalia Theatre in Hamburg. The authoress, Marie von Ernest, called it a dramatic trifle and one can well believe her⁽⁴⁷⁾.

However, that was by no means all: as early as 1863 – note the date – W. Anton sketched out a postage stamp play: still in the same year, Moritz Ruhl put on the market The Stamp Exchange, a card game with sixty large and splendid pictures. As this was not a speculation, he published the Briefmarkenfreund in 1864/65 and increased the number of monochrome pictures to 96 in large format⁽⁴⁸⁾ (Figures 22 & 23). Stamp dominoes appeared in England in 1865: in 1873, H. Rübke imitated these in the form of dice for a game of Postage Stamp Craps. The Neu-Ruppiner Bilderbogen published, with the best of intentions, two pictorial sheets (Nos. 3790, 5146) of postage stamps for children (with some 120 coloured illustrations), but even these harmless little pictures – one could not call them imitations with the best will in the world – were cut out and passed off as stamps on unwary collectors.

Figure 22 This is a plate from Moritz Ruhl's Briefmarkenfreund. This work included a total of 96 “stamp portraits”; it appeared in 1864/65 and is regarded today as one of the treasures of philatelic literature.

Figure 23 This is a second plate from Moritz Ruhl's Briefmarkenfreund.

In addition to all this, stamp motifs were employed to an enormous extent: pictures of stamps of all sorts appeared on boxes and bottles. The smoker in North Germany could avail himself of “Best North German Postage Stamp Tobacco”, which was promoted to “Best Imperial Postage Stamp Tobacco” in 1871. Postage Stamp Costumes were the latest thing at fancy-dress balls, and even the fashions paid their tribute: the London ladies wore silk hat bands with stamp motifs⁽⁴⁹⁾. This should be enough to convince the last doubter that stamps have never been more popular than in the 1860s. Also, stamp collecting was never more common amongst school children than it was then: Moschkau estimated that at least every other school boy was collecting, and Lindenberg confirmed this⁽⁵⁰⁾. Things must have been the same in England and France.

However, though stamps and stamp collecting were so popular in general, to “good society” they remained an amusement, a popular fad to which serious people, especially gentlemen, would not pay attention. People of the rank of L. de Saulcy – who published nothing, however – Dr. J. E. Gray and Dr. A. Legrand were the praiseworthy exceptions. Hence, people often preferred to write under a pseudonym and not all of these were as obvious to the initiated as Dr. Magnus (Dr. A. Legrand), or D. Richter (C. Lindenberg); the Lord of the Manor [Translator’s note: this is an official title in Germany] Alexander Treichel (1839-1902) generally signed himself Yo, Pierre Mahé occasionally used Argus (and Pharès as well?), Captain de Belleville called himself de Rives de Seine, and even Alfred Moschkau now and again availed himself of the enigmatic pseudonym A. v. D. Lubota. One French Collector unknown to us signed himself Un citoyen de Timbropolis, whereas Albis and Amateur des Montagnes Rocheuses later turned out to be the well-known geologist Jules Marcou (1824-1898).

In England, Pendragon concealed the true identity of J. H. Greenstreet himself; W. A. S. Westoby, who lived for some years in Paris, signed himself A Parisian Collector; whereas Lucy Adelaide Fenton [sic], the first female philatelist of note, chose to preserve her anonymity as Fentonia or also as Herbert Camoens; the author who appeared in The Philatelist for 1867 under the name Repandunensis has never been identified, whereas Major E. B. Evans later owned up to his use of the pseudonym Cheth during the 1860s and 1870s. Judge Philbrick occasionally signed himself as An Amateur, or with the motto on the stamps of British Guiana Damus petimusque vicissim⁽⁵¹⁾. One of the best-known pseudonyms is that of Dr. Thebussem = Don Mariano Pardo de Figueroa (1828-1918), who stood at the beginning of philatelic literature in Spain with his two works Kplanka and Klentrron [sic]. He was one of the most gifted satirical writers in Spain – someone called him an expert literary alchemist – whose interests ranged from scientific history, archaeology, philology and heraldry via the art of cooking and bullfighting to philately. He was in particular a leading expert on Cervantes, and his Epistolas Droapianas – a further pseudonym in the form of an anagram – were authoritative contributions to the celebrations of the 300th Anniversary in 1905 of the first publication of Don Quixote. He was a member of the Spanish aristocracy and a Knight of the Order of Santiago as well. In 1880 he was named the first Honorary Postman of Spain, with the right to free letter carriage⁽⁵²⁾.

Figure 24 A photograph of Dr. Thebussem dating from 1885 wearing the insignia of a Knight of Santiago.

During the 1870s, there was an increasing tendency to the open acknowledgement of philately, once a kind of philatelic society life – even if still a very rudimentary one – had been built up. Two societies in particular can be given the credit for the expansion and in particular the intellectual recognition of philately. These were the Société Française de Timbrologie of Paris and the Internationale Philatelisten-Verein of Dresden. These two societies took the initiative in organising the Congress that took place in Paris in 1878. The idea originated in Dresden, where the magazine Union proposed in 1877 a large Congress in Paris for the year 1878. The Société Française de Timbrologie took up the idea at the urging of Dr. Legrand, and the opening session took place in Paris on the 20th June 1878.

The first session was presided over by Alwin Nieske, then Chairman of the Dresden Society, but he was compelled to quit his post by unpleasant intrigues and was excluded from the Society⁽⁵³⁾. The sessions extended – obviously with intervals of some weeks – till the 25th of September 1878; The main sessions, however, took place from 24th-26th June. The Congress was not a great public success, but it did provide a rendezvous for the leading philatelists of England, France and Germany, and papers from Italy, Spain, North and South America etc. were read; There was no anonymity here. The best minds in philately, those of Dr. A. Legrand, Ph. de Bosredon, Sir Daniel Cooper, E. B. Evans, Dr. P. Kloss and many others ensured by their work that this was a scientific congress on the international plane, which meant that philately had finally outgrown its childish trappings⁽⁵⁴⁾.

Amongst the published proceedings of the Congress is one of special interest. It is by no means outstanding from the philatelic viewpoint, but is an attempt to classify the stamps that had appeared up to 1878 on the basis of their pictures⁽⁵⁵⁾. In the course of a very long paper (more than 60 pages) Ph. de Bosredon divided the stamps into seven categories:

1. Pictures of rulers
2. National coats of arms
3. Famous people
4. Historical scenes
5. Inscriptions
6. Allegorical figures of all kinds
7. Numbers (shown as 8 in his list)

Bosredon could only produce three examples of category 4, all of them from overseas, although as early as 1863 Captain de Belleville had suggested that stamps be used to perpetuate the facts of history⁽⁵⁶⁾. Of course, de Bosredon's idea was not to recommend stamp collecting from this point of view, he was only trying to describe and classify, and he did make the statement that he was interested in ornamental motifs. He certainly never imagined that these motifs would one day have an unexpected career. The Western Australian swan and the Canadian beaver were classed – quite rightly, by the way – as allegorical figures: Bosredon did not think of “animals” as a category. His categories included all of the stamps issued up to that time which shows that the range of invention of stamp designers still had very narrow limits. Moreover, it had been noted in Germany in 1862 that a collection of “clean and well-kept” postage stamps could be used as an adjunct to a collection of portraits or heraldry, or could even be expanded into a miniature gallery of the reigning houses. Hence, these stamps possess historic, heraldic and genealogical interest⁽⁵⁷⁾. The terms Heads, Heraldry and Numbers, under which 90% of all stamps were listed, again recall the close connection between philately and numismatics.

Because of anxiety about forgeries, a new series of stamps was issued every year in Spain, so that Moschkau thought that it was not called the machine-gun of stamp publication without reason⁽⁵⁸⁾. Commemorative or Charity stamps did not yet exist; collectors got annoyed even about unnecessary reprints and “provisionals”, also the nominal value of the stamps was often quite high, but what does that amount to in the face of later developments. For the present-day collector, stamps of up to about 1875 rank as “classical”. Philately had established itself, had got over the inevitable childhood ailments, and was ready to enter the phase of its greatest prosperity.

Notes to Chapter 2

1. See below, Chapters 8, 17, 19, 23, etc.
2. Quoted from L'Écho de la Timbrologie, Volume 94 (1980), Whole number 1514, p.3: A biography of Vandal appeared in 1866: Jacques-Pierre-Lois-Edouard, Count Vandal, Councillor of State, Postmaster-General, Paris 1866, 29 pages in twelvmo (Blanc, number 1331). See also Moschkau, Reminiscences, p.26; Ibid, Watermarks, p.6, 13. See above, p.5.
3. Timotee Trimm: Postage Stamps., Le Petit Journal, Volume 1, (23rd November 1863) Whole number 235, p.1. Suppantchitsch, History, p.19 is telling fairy tales when he claims to have heard about a stamp exchange in Hamburg "towards the end of the fifties". The Paris exchange existed from 1860; Birchin Lane certainly from April 1862. See also Smith, Early days, and above, p.9, note 10. A very clear account of Postage Stamps on Change, appeared in the September 1862 issue of Youth's Magazine, and was reprinted by Anderson & Smith, p.22-24; see also their pp.24-26.
4. Brunel, p.7-8 gives a short extract from the text, as does Leroy, p.152-53. For the commercial exchanges of Moschkau, Watermarks p.7, note 13.
5. Moschkau, Watermarks, p.7. For the French dealers, see Mahé, p.3ff, p.99ff: also see under Chapter 3, Section 2, p.70ff, Section 4, p.89ff, and Chapter 9, Section 1, p.309ff. Moens was also a bookseller during his lifetime: see Chapter 3, Section 1, p.51. In general, see Chapter 8, p.272ff.
6. See especially Chapter 17, pp.604-06 and notes 6-10, and p.631 with note 50.
7. For Berger-Levrault, see below, Chapter 17, p.602 and notes 3-5, and p.620, with notes 34-35.
8. See below, Chapter 3 section 1, p.61 with note 16, and especially Chapter 17, p.632, plus note 52.
9. E. L. Pemberton in: The Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1 (1863), Issue 4, pp.63-64.
10. For this tricky term see below, Chapter 13, pp.447-448 plus notes 1-5, and also pp.448-453.
11. Both these small volumes have the notation "2nd edition" on their title-pages, since both had been previously published by instalments in the magazines Le Timbrophile and Le Timbre-Poste. See also under Chapter 3, section 2, p.68 and note 8, p.69, notes 12-13 and Figure 35.
12. This obviously applies only to independent publications: serious contributions had already appeared in the literature two or three years earlier. McCoy, p.50-51 is unsatisfactory.
13. Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler Volume 1 (1863) Issue 3, p.18; see also Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1, 1863, Issue 1, p.2, & Issue 11, p.170: "On the increase of timbromania" in Le Timbre-Poste Volume 1, (1863), pp.27-31 (of the new impression); Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler Volume 1 (1863) Issue 5, p.35; Volume 2 (1864), Issue 14, p.106; Issue 15, p.115, etc.
14. Le Timbrophile 1 (1864), no. 2, p.10.
15. Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1 (1863) Issue 2, p.25. The article must have appeared in January 1863. cf. Moschkau: "Watermarks", p.8.
16. Stamp Collector's Magazine, Volume 3 (1864) Whole number 24, p.1; Whole number 26, p.45; Whole number 32, p.135; Whole number 33, p.157, etc.

17. Mahé expressly drew up a small miscellany of the new word in all its permutations (timbrophily, timbrography, timbrologist, timbropolist = stamp dealer): “New names for new things” in Le Timbrophile, Volume 1, 1864, Issue 2, p.10; See also Legrand, pp.20-21.
18. Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste Volume 1, 1864, Issue 5, pp.20-21: an extract printed in Brunel, pp.10-11.
19. With all precision e.g. by Brunel, p.10; but see also Legrand, p.19; also see (F. J. Peplow): The origin of the word philately, in The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society Volume 8 (1915), Issue 2, p.14-15 (with a complete English translation of the Baptism article).
20. Linguistically only Philately is acceptable, as I was expressly informed in answer to my enquiry by the Grazist [Expert on ancient Greek philology.] of Giessen University, G. Müller. Note that Haas’, Lehrbuch, pp.507-08 is wrong.
21. cf. Kehr, p.43, note 1; also as usual Moschkau, History, p.18. At the opening of the London Exhibition in 1890 the Duke of Edinburgh remarked that it ought to be called “Philately”. At the Lubeck Philatelic Meeting in 1872 a vote was taken in favour of “Philately”: cf. Bergrath, p.25. Also see below Chapter 19, p.837 and note 173.
22. What shall we call it? in Stamp Collector’s Magazine Volume 3 (1865) Whole number 35, pp.182-83. Also, the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler speaks of nothing but “Philately” from 1866 onwards.
23. Camoens p.2; E. B. Evans: Stamps and Stamp Collecting (London, 1894), p.50; A. Ost: “Random reflections of a country collector” in Ill. Briefmarken-Journal Volume 13 (1886), Issue 11, p.132-34, especially p.133. See Note 27 below.
24. More than 20 magazines with this title were published before the First World War, in Egypt, Belgium, Brazil, Holland, Romania, Switzerland and the USA: See The Crawford Catalogue, columns 799-801.
25. See Legrand, p.22. It only remains for us to protest against a detestable (sic) denomination. Thus, in the course of this book we shall avoid the use of an expression which is both ridiculous and out of place. He wrote this in the year 1894, whereas he had begun by taking up a neutral position in 1865; See below, Chapter 3, pp.1054-55, and Note 11. Kausch, p.198, also states in the year 1894 that “Timbrology” had been adopted instead of “Philately” in France.
26. Moschkau, History, p.19; see also his Watermarks, p.6.
27. Thus, on 1. 1. 1882 appeared the only issue of a magazine, The Philotypist, or Stamp Amateur, from Dr. Ch. Viner, who had invented this word, see The Crawford Catalogue, column 722. See also Evans (note 23 above), p.50 It is too late now to enquire whether better words could not have been invented.
28. Oscar Berger-Levrault: “Stamp collecting 30 years ago”, in: Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, Volume 17 (1890), Issue 12, pp.177-78, and Phillips, Stamp Collecting p.34 (inexact). Berger-Levrault stated in his 1890 reminiscences of the 60s that in September 1861 he already possessed 673 different stamps, and by July 1864 the total had reached 1,827.
29. Berger-Levrault, p.XIV remarks that “bigger collectors” got “postal stationary” twice; once as a rectangular cut-out and once “uncut”, though in general he recommends cutting. However see below, Chapter 3, section 2, p.68 and Note 10.
30. “New or cancelled stamp collections” in Le Timbrophile Volume 1 (1864), Issue 1, p.3; the discussion was extended over issues 2 to 5. G. Herpin in Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste Volume 1 (1864/65), Issue 8, pp.60-61 took an intermediate stance - as P. Mahé also tended to do - and allowed the validity of “collections of various types of

- cancellation”, however neither he nor Mahé had any doubts as to the primacy of “unused” collecting. Financial reasons were given as the main “mitigating circumstance” for collecting used stamps. For Legrand’s opinion, see below p.34, and Note 39.
31. See Moschkau, “Reminiscences” p.27, Suppantchitsch, “History” p.36, and Timbrophily in: Le Timbrophila Volume 1, (1865), Issue 3, pp.21-22.
 32. He had strong archaeological interests as well, but was only a dilettante in this field: “Travels Round the Dead Sea and in the Bible Lands”, 2 Volumes, Paris, 1852-54, in quarto: L. F. Caignart de Saulcy: “Notebooks of travels in the Orient (1845-1869)”, Editions Fernande Bassan, Paris, 1855, 248 pages in octavo. His wife was lady-in-waiting to Empress Eugénie, see the New Universal Biography, Volume 44, (Paris 1864), columns 353-55.
 33. The Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1 (1863), Issue 7, p.109 also makes it plain that many English numismatists had taken unused postage stamps into their collections, as these represented a monetary value; see also the following Note. For Germany, see the article “Coin collecting and stamp collecting” in Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, Volume 1 (1863) Issue 3, p. 33-35, and Note 31 above.
 34. On postage-stamp catalogues in Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1, (1863), Issue 3, p. 41-43, esp. p. 42. See also Berger-Levrault, p.V-VI, who spoke in favour of a geographic arrangement of collections (and catalogues), since “it has already been adopted for the catalogues of coin collections”! See Chapter 17 below, p.629-30.
 35. See Melville, Catalogues pp.43-48; A. R. Butler: Dr. John Edward Gray, F.R.S. F.L.S. F.Z.S. etc.” in The London Philatelist Volume 75 (1966), Whole number 886, pp.198-99, and Chapter 17 below, p.613, and Notes 20-21.
 36. Crawford Catalogue column 401, and Mahé, pp.41-95, which was copied by Brunel, pp.22-28.
 37. Pendragon: A few remarks on the English and French schools of philately, in: Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 6 (1868), Whole number 62, pp.37-39; Overy Taylor: The two schools in: ibid, Volume 6 (1868), Whole number 67, pp.113-114. See The Pendragon controversy, Ibid, Whole number 71, pp.177-178; also The Royal Philatelic Society, pp.14-15. There is an interesting contribution from Dr. Magnus: “Timbrophily in France and England”, Le Timbrophile, Volume 3 (1866), Whole number 26, pp.211-212.
 38. Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler Volume 2 (1865) Whole number 24 pp.187-188 and Volume 4 (1867) Whole number 47, pp.372-373.
 39. Le Timbrophile Volume 3 (1867) Whole number 34 p.272.
 40. All this advice was given - with the best intentions - in Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler, Volume 1 (1863), Issue 6, p.41; Volume 3 (1865) Whole number 38, p.221; Volume 4 (1867), Whole number 47, p.373; but also see the account of Valette in Mahé, pp.59-62. There is an English example in: Stamp Collector's Magazine, Volume 4 (1866) Whole number 43, p.126 (A substitute for gum). Lindenberg as a boy (at least before 1860) strung his stamps on pieces of twine: Lindenberg, p.2. Also see Chapter 18 below, pp.738-739.
 41. Dr. Magnus: “On the arrangement of an album” in: Le Timbrophile Volume 3 (1867) Whole number 29, p.231-234, especially p.233; see below, Chapter 3 section 2 p.48 and Note 10, and Chapter 18, p.715 and Note 14, p.738 and Note 68. W. D. Atlee: On permanent albums and the mounting of envelopes in The Philatelist Volume 3 (1869) Whole number 34, pp.135-138, especially pp.137-138. Atlee was dismissed by

- Pemberton in 1872 because of irregularities with the injunction never again to concern himself with the buying and selling of stamps: The Philatelic Journal Volume 1 (1872) Issue 10-11, p.167. He kept to this, but received a sentence in Birmingham in 1877 for embezzlement on another occasion: See Fred Melville in The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain Volume 32 (1922) Whole number 382, p.191.
42. L'Écho de la Timbrologie Volume 21 (1907) Whole number 363, pp.85-86.
43. See for example Stamp Collector's Magazine Volume 1 (1863) Issue 3, p.46; Volume 3 (1865) Whole number 24, p.2; Whole number 26, p.45. Le Timbre-Poste Volume 1 (1863), Issue 4; Issue 11; Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste Volume 4 (1867) Whole number 33 p.346; Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler Volume 4 (1866) Whole number 41, p.327. Le Timbrophile Volume 2 (1866) Whole number 21, pp.171-172; see also Brunel, p.10. The quotation from Weber's Ill. Zeitung is from Moschkau, "Reminiscences", p.27.
44. See Moschkau, "History" p.65.
45. Philately as it is, in: The Philatelist Volume 1 (1867) Issue 2, pp.17-18, especially p.18.
46. The Stamp Gallop in: The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain Volume 36 (1926) Whole number 424, pp.44-45. The German title is recorded by Moschkau, "History" pp.52-53, & 73-74.
47. See Moschkau, "History" p.52. The original appearance was on the 15th February but unfortunately there is no number for the year (1879 or 1880?). It is not known what success was achieved by Angelo Consigli's one acter Il Maniaco dei Francobolli [The Stamp Maniac], Florence 1869, 24 pages in 8° (Piloni No. 2753). The poem by Nöldeckes is in Moschkau's "History" on pp.74-75; also on page 74 are references to poems in English and Italian. See also below Chapter 4, pp.138-139, with Note 50.
48. Crawford Library Catalogue, column 334. Today a bibliographical rarity: more details in: Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 2 (1909) Issue 4, after p.74. Alexander Bunnerz published 64 of Ruhl's 96 plates under the original title: "The Stamp Friend. 64 original wood engravings of classical stamps" Munich, 1924, 72 pages (Kurz's Stamp Library, number 6). See also, "The stamp friend" in: Der Philatelistische Bücherwurm Volume 4 (1924) Issue 1, pp.2-3; Issue 2, pp.14-16.
49. Also in this connection see Moschkau, "History", pp.54 & 76; also see above, p.7 and Note 6.
50. Moschkau, "History", p.20; Lindenberg, pp.3-4.
51. Edw. B. Evans: Fifty years after, in: Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society Volume 7 (1914) Issue 4, pp.35-37. This amounts to a reprint of Evans' first philatelic writing, On Stamp Collecting, published by the North of England Stamp Review in its last issue (November 1864), and gives a good idea of collecting at that period. For Albis see Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society Volume 5 (1912) Issue 1, p.7, Note *. For Philbrick see below, Chapter 3, Section 2, p.85.
52. Kplanka. "Letter to Sr. D. Eduardo de Mariategui, from his friend Dr. Thebussem". Medina Sidonia, 1870, 24 pages in 12°. (Second edition of) Kplanka (and first of) Klentrron. Letters of Dr. Thebussem and Don Eduardo de Mariategui, Medina Sidonia, 1871, 64 pages in 8°. Dr. Thebussem's further work is recorded in the Crawford Library Catalogue, columns 116-117, 378; see also Don J. A: Catalogio Thebussiano, Medina Sidonia 1911, 55 pages in 8°. Figuro retains the pseudonym in publications of the 80s and 90s; see Suppantshitsch, "Origin", p.27. During 1871-73, Don Eduardo de Mariategui was editor of El Averiguador at that time a stamp magazine as well: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 460. An exhibition in memory of Dr. Thebussem was staged in connection with the opening of the Spanish Postal Museum in 1980; See for this: Manuel Tomás Espinosa: “Dr. Thebussem, an extraordinary character of the XIX century, polymath, author and Spain’s first honorary postman” (special publication from the Spanish Postal Museum).

53. See Tyler, pp. 31-32; see also Williams, Philately, p.55.
54. Memoires du Congres international des Timbrophiles, Neuilly, 1880 (Blanc no. 938). See. Suppantchitsch, “History”, pp.44-45.
55. Phillipe de Bosredon. “Note on stamps from the point of view of the emblems shown on them”, in Memoires du Congres international des Timbrophiles (Neuilly, 1880). Sixth session, pp.269-332: See also Legrand, pp.36-43: “The design of stamps”, and Haas, Manual, pp.348-366: “The representations on postage stamps”.
56. E. de Rives de Seine. “Postage stamps considered from the point of view of history” in: Le Timbre-Poste, Volume 1 (1863) pp.25-27, esp. p.26 (of the reprint). The author states that of the six values in one issue, two carried a portrait of the ruler, two the coat-of-arms of the state, and two, selected “important deeds”.
57. See Moschkau, “Reminiscences”, p.27.
58. Moschkau, “Watermarks”, p.37.

CHAPTER 3 HEROES OF THE EARLY PERIOD

This chapter will deal with some of the pioneers of philately, who have given special services to its development. Here the author is up against the difficulty of choosing: many names suggest themselves but only a few can be dealt with. This is particularly the case for England and France, which were the philatelic centres of Europe in the 60s and 70s of last century. The outstanding part played by Belgium in the foundation years of philately was entirely the work of Moens and Hanciau, who were however, more or less on their own. Germany, too, lagged behind in development, as is shown amongst other things by the fact that only one name is worthy of appearing in this chapter. The same applies to the USA, the only overseas country worthy of mention. The final criteria for choice was that the person concerned emerged as a leading philatelist during the years 1860-1880, even though they all survived into the 20th century, with the exception of Pemberton, who died early. Hanciau indeed survived to 1924. Most of them were dealers or professional philatelists, which is not surprising when we consider that they were the people who basically determined the development of philately in its early days.

1. Jean-Baptiste Moens & Louis Hanciau

Jean-Baptiste Philippe Constant Moens was born on the 27th May 1833 in Tournai, where his father was stationed as an officer in the 1st Cuirassier Regiment. He was not a good pupil⁽¹⁾, but took an interest in “old things” such as old books and coins, which led his father to place him with a Brussels bookseller in 1848. He decided to start his own business in 1852 and opened a little antique shop at No. 7 in the Bortier Gallery, which was pulled down a few years later. This date of 1852 is often given in the philatelic press as the beginnings of Moens’ stamp dealing, but hardly with justification. Possibly Moens did now and again during the 50s sell the odd stamp to a collector, but we cannot yet speak of him as a real stamp dealer. However, in the covering foreword letter to a book he published he described himself as a “dealer in postage stamps for collections” as early as 1858 and he would hardly have just begun this trade in that year. This is the oldest contemporary reference to a stamp trade that I have found. Moens rapidly rose to become the most important stamp dealer of his day, numbering amongst his customers the greatest collectors of the 19th century, foremost amongst them the legendary Ferrary, but also including Baron Arthur de Rothschild, P. Mirabaud, F. Breitfuss, Th. K. Tapling and many others.

Figure 25 Jean-Baptiste Moens (1833-1908). The most important dealer of the 19th century. (A photograph from about 1870.)

However, it is only too easy to forget that Moens spent his whole life as a book dealer and publisher. As well as his philatelic works, he published a whole series of literary and historic works, put out special reprints for bibliophiles and in 1884-1886 he even issued a literary periodical La Basoche in which such well-known intellectuals as J.-K. Huysmans and St. Mallarmé appeared, amongst others. Moreover his four sons - Alexandre, Louis, Charles and Alexis were all booksellers and not stamp dealers. This family tradition only came to an end a few years ago when Alexandre Leclercq, a grandchild of Alexandre Moens and a distinguished Brussels antiquary withdrew from the book trade⁽²⁾.

In an outstanding book published in Brussels in the year 1866, a sort of intellectual “Who’s who”, Moens is listed primarily as a bookseller and publisher, but as a dealer in postage stamps at the same time⁽³⁾. This makes it all the more surprising that Moens, an experienced auctioneer, never thought of auctioning postage stamps, even when this method of selling had begun to spread throughout Europe. Moens was a genius at selling, and was successful with everything he took in hand in the business line. This was reluctantly acknowledged even by Brunel, who otherwise attacked Moens vigorously for not being enough of a stamp lover⁽⁴⁾. This does not alter the fact however, that Moens had an unequalled record as a philatelic expert, and ranked as the leading philatelist of his day. We shall see that this reputation was not entirely deserved, and really belonged to Hanciau, but in the symbiosis of these two men Moens was allotted the role of external representative of the firm and filled it in a masterly way.

His business dealings did not always correspond to the modern rules of stamp trading but a sort of code of honour has to develop in every pioneering period. Thus, whenever he got the chance, Moens bought up old original plates and printing stock and used them to bring out new impressions: his reprints of Bergedorf, Romagna, Papal States, etc. are well-known⁽⁵⁾. Naturally it did not occur to him to call them such - nobody did so at that time - but he always sold them correctly as new editions. Hence to class them under “forgeries”, as happened recently, does not take into account the circumstances of the time and is to a great extent incorrect.

Figure 26 The “standard photograph” of Moens in the uniform of a Belgian officer. (A photograph from 1885.)

The London Philatelist was much more realistic in its farewell article in honour of Moens. It applied the standards of the year 1900 and disapproved, but summed up: “autres temps, autres moeurs”⁽⁶⁾.

Figure 27 a business card of Moens. Note that the book business is always the focus.

Moens also made extensive purchases of the remainders of runs of stamps direct from the postal authorities. Thus in 1868 he purchased about 300,000 originals of the Bergedorf stamps that had already been taken off the market. He also bought large quantities of remainders from the Belgian Post Office and this brings in the only real misdemeanour that can be ascribed to Moens the dealer. The post office made the stamps invalid by means of inked lines, and they were bought by Moens in this condition. He removed the lines by chemical means, and sold them as “unused” without details of their provenance. The term “Moens-washed” has come into use for such stamps.

Whatever one thinks about this, there can still be no doubt that of all the dealers of the early days, Moens really was the one who did most for the expansion of philately⁽⁷⁾. The publisher of numerous philatelic monographs, and above all the most-read philatelic journal of the time, the producer of famous albums, and one of the first catalogues⁽⁸⁾, Moens was a sort of “philatelic oracle” for the 60s and 70s. In his amusing “Triumph of Philately” published by Adolf Reinheimer in 1887, in honour of the 10th anniversary of the Dresden Society (Fig. 54), Moens figures as the “Father of Philately”, by which Reinheimer was only expressing the general opinion of his time. High-flown as ever, Moschkau speaks of Moens as the “central sun of philatelic science ... casting light in all directions” and calls him “a philatelist from top to toe”, whereas Suppanschitsch is content to refer to him as “an Olympian amongst the philatelist of the entire world”⁽⁹⁾. Thus it was quite natural for Moens to be Chairman of the jury for the Antwerp stamp exhibition of 1887 - the second in the history of philately. He was also a regular exhibitor in the classes for literature, albums etc. and gained high distinctions. When he visited Berlin in 1895, Lindenberg personally showed him over the State Postal Museum: his winning manners made the best impression on all sides. His work for philately gained recognition even from foreign governments: in 1875 he was awarded the cross of the Spanish Order of Isabella the Catholic, and in 1887 the Officer’s Cross of the Order del Liberador of Venezuela. These are in fact the oldest official distinctions for services to philately that we know of. Moens was also active in politics: he was for 20 years a liberal town councillor in Ixelles, the genteel suburb of Brussels where he lived.

Figure 28 The Galerie Bortier in the period before the First World War.

Figure 29 Literature price list of the House of Moens from the year 1897. The upper parts of the medals are shown in Figure 30 as originals.

Figure 30 These must be the earliest medals that have come down to us, they date from 1878-1890. All medals shown here figure on the Moens literature catalogue. The medal of 1878 was not an exhibition medal, rather one from the Société Française de Timbrologie which awarded this honorary medal for services to literature. The gold medal from Vienna 1890 is the oldest gold medal for Literature, the Magdeburg medal, the Magdeburg Medal of the same year is the oldest German exhibition medal.

- | | | |
|----------------|-------------------|-------------------|
| 1. Paris | 2. Amsterdam 1889 | 3. Magdeburg 1890 |
| 4. London 1890 | 5a-b. Vienna 1890 | |

In the year 1900 Moens gave up his activities as a stamp dealer and philatelic publisher. The selling off of his immense stock, which was the largest in the world at that time, had begun in 1899. Accordingly to the Moens catalogue of 1893, its total value was about £200,000. The remainder was bought up by the Danish dealer Eduard M Ruben in 1900 for about 800,000 francs, in partnership with the leading German dealer of the time, Philipp Kosack of Berlin. The total proceeds were of course much higher. Moens’ fine philatelic library was bought in 1902, and came into the possession of Hiram E. Deats of Philadelphia. The last years of Moens’ life were overshadowed by serious illness: he died at his Brussels home on the 28th April 1908. In him philately lost its leading promoter, who had made Brussels a mecca for philatelists. In 1973 Belgium remembered this great pathfinder in philately with a commemorative stamp (Michel 1739). (Shown on page 57 without a caption.)

Figure 31 Old picture of J.-B. Moens from about 1900.

Moens’ activities as a writer have hitherto hardly been questioned, though a large part of his reputation as an expert depended without doubt on the philatelic works published under his name. Even the initiated did not know at the time that Moens was not the author of the works on which his fame as a philatelist was based. The true author was Louis Hanciau, who was Moens’ oldest and most reliable collaborator, but not his brother-in-law as is often stated⁽¹¹⁾. Brunel rather cuttingly remarks “this is one of the greatest pseudographs one can quote along with Shakespeare”⁽¹¹⁾. Apart from the rather odd word formation - “pseudograph” does not appear in any dictionary - this is not factually correct, which is not surprising from Brunel, who was only too ready to pick holes in Moens.

Naturally, this does not mean that Moens was some sort of illiterate it is absurd to think that everything published under the name of Moens actually came from the pen of Hanciau. Obviously the deep knowledge that Moens undoubtedly possessed was reflected in the books. It would be absurd and wrong to look on Moens as a sort of puppet of Hanciau: after all Moens, not Hanciau, was the Chairman of the jury in Antwerp. However, it cannot be denied that Hanciau was chiefly responsible for the literary productions from the firm of Moens.

Figure 32 Moens' bookshop in 1960.

Nor is it the case that Moens deliberately wanted to suppress his co-worker Hanciau; there was a complete understanding between the two men as to this division of roles. No one had any idea of the true state of affairs as long as the firm of Moens existed, i.e. up to the year 1900. A characteristic comment is the one made by the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung 1895, in reference to Moens' visit to Berlin: it praises Moens' "winning charm", which "one would hardly think belonged to the same personality who is the author of the sharp and witty articles in Le Timbre-Poste" (sic), which is an indirect rebuke to Hanciau's disagreeable sharpness. Hanciau first appeared as an author under his own name in 1900 - and from that time on Moens did not publish another line⁽¹²⁾. Word quickly got about and in 1907 - whilst Moens was still alive - Hanciau was awarded the Lindenberg Medal, which Moens acknowledged fairly, as there were no longer any business interests involved. In 1921 Hanciau was one of the first groups of people to sign the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists, Hanciau was indeed the world's first "professional philatelist" who was not in trade on his own account. Only two years younger than Moens - he was born on the 9th April 1835 - he outlived him by a good 16 years: he died in Brussels on the 12th November 1924 in his 90th year.

Figure 33 Louis Hanciau (1833-1924). One of the most prolific philatelic writers of all time and closest collaborator of J.-B. Moens. (A photograph of about 1912.)

Hanciau's literary output was prodigious: he published continuously from 1862 to 1924, the year of his death. His principal work was initially published a few years after his death: La Poste Belge et ses Diverses Marques Postales 1814-1914⁽¹³⁾. This was the "bible" of a whole generation of Belgian philatelists, written by a man of over 80 who had known philately in its infancy. One point worth noting is that even the aged Hanciau was still alert enough to appreciate how important the study of cancellations would be for the future of philately⁽¹⁴⁾. Hanciau edited what was then the leading philatelic magazine of the world Le Timbre-Poste from 1863 to 1900, and from 1878 to 1896 he edited the other magazine published by Moens Le Timbre Fiscal as well⁽¹⁵⁾. He was the main compiler of all the catalogues and price lists from Moens' firm and editor of their albums. The first catalogue, the famous "Manuel" appeared as early as January 1862, and was thus the second oldest catalogue in the world. The first work on forgeries De la Falsification des Timbres-Poste, also published in Brussels in 1862, had Hanciau as at least a co-author, and the Illustrations du Manuel du Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste - the most magnificent illustrated philatelic work of the entire 19th century - was largely due to his initiative⁽¹⁰⁾.

Above all, however, he produced a great number of philatelic monographs for the "Bibliothèque des Timbrophiles" between 1877 and 1887. Of the 18 numbers of this library, 16 were written by Hanciau alone (on the stamps of Naples - Sicily, Peru, Parma-Modena, Romagna, Tuscany and San Marino, Mauritius, Saxony, Luxembourg, Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Thurn and Taxis, Egypt and the Suez Canal Company, Belgium in 2 Vols., Württemberg in 2 Vols., Argentina in 2 Vols., Schleswig-Holstein with Lauenburg and Bergedorf, Natal and Prussia. These volumes, which were almost without exception the first monograph treatment of the country concerned, had editions of about 150 copies⁽¹⁷⁾. All of these were written by Hanciau practically alone; only the volumes relating to the United States of America were authored by specialists from the USA⁽¹⁸⁾. There were also distinguished volumes in a larger format on the stamps of Heligoland and Spain⁽¹⁹⁾ and numberless articles in Timbre-Poste. His literary fecundity went on in the years after 1900 when he was publishing under his own name in, amongst others, Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal, Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, Nordisk Filatelistisk Tidsskrift, L'Écho de la Timbrologie, Journal des Philatélistes, and many others. At the Paris Exhibition of 1913 he was distinguished by the award of one bronze and three silver medals. Some of his papers appeared in German translations⁽²⁰⁾. Between 1921 and 1924, when he was over 80, he wrote numerous papers for Philatéliste Belge.

Hanciau had without doubt a profound knowledge of stamps and was an accomplished stylist at the same time. Although his philatelic monographs, with the exception of the one on the Belgian post 1814-1914, have now been superseded, it should not be forgotten that they were pioneering in their time and formed the basis for all later work. The same thing applies to many of his articles, particularly those in Le Timbre-Poste. Regrettably there is often an unnecessary sharpness of tone, going hand in hand with a rather self-satisfied obstinacy, which is all the more harmful in that he was actually right in most cases. He maintained his asperity even towards the work of a man like Dr. Legrand, which led to his withdrawal as a contributor to Timbre-Poste and as editor of Timbre-Fiscal.

His running quarrels with Pierre Mahé in the Timbrophile were only initially amusing: in the long run they became painful. He played an "April fool" in the year 1867 by advertising his own stamps as the "Free Municipality of Moresnet", and Mahé promptly fell for it: this was in bad taste. The "Moresnet affair" upset people for a long time⁽²¹⁾. Hanciau, who for all his sharpness never lacked wit, also proposed the word Ferrarities for the "rarities" created for Ferrary⁽²²⁾. However, in spite of the "human - all too human" qualities met with everywhere in his work, the fact remains that Hanciau must be classed amongst the great pioneers of philately and one of the first philatelic researchers to truly deserve the name.

Notes to Part 1 J.-B. Moens & L. Hanciau

1. It is however a total slander for Brunel, p.18 to say that he could hardly write his name and was a man "without education". See below, p.58.
2. His shops were always situated in the Galerie Bortier and the adjacent "Rue St. Jean". Alexandre, Alexis and Jeanne Moens carried on a modest trade in stamps even during their father's lifetime, but it was insignificant compared with their father's business, see the Crawford Library Catalogue, columns 267 & 274. A biography of Moens from the pen of Alex Leclercq recently appeared in the Belgian Biographie Nationale, Volume 41, 1980, columns. 555-564, which is strongly indebted to the traditional picture of Moens. (Alex Leclercq of Brussels - I am indebted to him for a series of letters giving - information about his great-grandfather, and I would like to thank him for making available a number of photos and photocopies. I remember with pleasure his hospitable welcome when I visited his home in the year 1982). For the 1858 foreword, see above, p.9, Note 9: the date was obtained from a friendly communication by Mr. A. Leclercq.

3. Josse Sacré: The mysteries of the black bands. (Brussels 1866) p.68; Sacré states that Moens began his trade with “a little table covered in old books”.
 4. Brunel, p.18: “He was a born merchant: he acquired a pretty large fortune selling postage stamps: he would have done as well selling boxes of pickles”: see also Doberer, “Cultural History”, p.174.
 5. See Doberer, Philatelie, pp.81-84, ibid: Cultural History pp.174-182.
 6. Finis coronat opus [The finish crowns the work], in The London Philatelist Volume 9 (1900), Whole number 100, pp.97-99, esp. p.99; Tyler, pp.30-31 is mistaken, see below, Chapter 13, p.449 and Notes 6-7. Louis Senf: The development of the stamp trade, in Die Post Volume 16 (1909) Issue 12, p.189. He gives special praise to the high commercial reputation of Moens, who was then dead.
 7. As was suppressed by Brunel, pp.18-19, on request.
 8. See below, Chapter 17, pp.604-606 and Notes 8-9, p.641 and Note 68; Chapter 18 p.713 with Note 4, pp.718-720 with Note 33; Chapter 19, pp.772-777 with Notes 16-20.
 9. Suppantisch, origin, p.19 and A. Moschkau in Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung Volume 1 (1888) Issue 12, pp.169-70. The article naturally also praises Moens as a great researcher and the name of Hanciau is simply not mentioned.
 10. Personal communication from A. Leclercq of Brussels: Note 2 above.
 11. Brunel, p.18.
 12. Georges Waroquiers: Jean Baptiste Moens 1833-1908, in: Balasse-Magazine Whole number 237 (1978) pp.72-74 and Whole number 238 (1978), pp.132, does not take this fact into account and still quotes Moens as the only author of the publications that appeared under his name: likewise in Leclercq-Waroquiers, p.9 where Hanciau is merely described as the “administrative part of the Moens editions”. The 1895 quote in DBZ, Volume 5 (1894/5), Issue 9, p.139.
 13. Brussels 1929. The book runs to 475 octavo pages, with 15 tables of stamps (Blanc no. 657). A reprint appeared in Anvers in 1981.
 14. On the other hand his memoirs of the early days of philately Autrefois et aujourd'hui [Yesterday and today] in Le Philatéliste Belge Volume 1 (1921) Issue 10, pp.224-227, were disappointing.
 15. The 1874-1878 volumes (up to Whole number 49) were edited by Dr. A. Legrand (Dr. Magnus): From 1879 Le Timbre Fiscal appeared merely as a supplement to Timbre-Poste; see also below, pp.772-777 with Notes 16-19, p.852 and Note 201.
 16. Crawford Library Catalogue, column 268 (Blanc, number 972, Leclercq-Waroquiers p.16 numbers 100-101). English translations of both works appeared, ibid. column 269: see below Chapter 14, p.508, Note 7; Chapter 17, p.697, Note 52. The illustrations were published as a separate book in 1864 under the title Les Timbres-Poste Illustrés. Crawford Library Catalogue column 268 (Blanc number 980; Leclercq-Waroquiers pp.13-14 numbers 3-5), see “Early Publications” pp.6-8, and below Chapter 17 p.632 and Note 52; also Chapter 14, p.479 and Notes 4-5, see above p.19 with Note 8, p.21 with Note 1a.
 17. For the first volume, Naples and Sicily only, the edition was limited to 108 copies. The volumes often carry the notation “2nd edition”, which refers to a new printing of material from Le Timbre-Poste: see Crawford Library Catalogue, column 271-273. Pio Fabri

- contributed material on the Papal States to Volume 4. Volume 15, on Natal, was written in collaboration with L. H. J. Walker (Blanc. number 981-996, 1356 and Leclercq-Waroquiers, p.16-18 no. 103-18, p.25 no. 405). See also Leclercq-Waroquiers, p.7-9, and below Chapter 20, p.897 with Notes 42-45. All volumes were octavo.
18. Charles H. Coster: The Private Posts of the United States of America, 2 Volumes, Brussels, 1882-89; John K. Tiffany: The stamps of the United States of America from their origin to our days, 3 Volumes, Brussels, 1883 (Library ... numbers 13 and 16; Blanc numbers 346, 1293; Leclercq-Waroquiers p.26, numbers 408-409). See below Chapter 20, pp 892-893 and Note 12.
 19. Heligoland and its stamps (with 104 "engravings"), Brussels, 1897, 272 pages in large octavo; History of postage stamps and all prepayment stamps used in Spain ... (with 460 woodcuts), Brussels, 1891, 564 pages in large octavo (Crawford Library Catalogue column 173; in large octavo; Blanc number 973-974; Leclercq-Waroquiers p.18 numbers 119-199, 122).
 20. The postage stamps of the Grand Duchy of Finland, Berlin, 1909, 59 pages in quarto (published in German only). This volume was based on a series of articles in the Berl. Briefmarken-Zeitung Volumes 3-4, (1907-08), published by Ph. Kosak. In the "Festschrift in Celebration of the 25th Anniversary of the Berlin Philatelists' Club" (Berlin, 1913) pp.66-77, he published an article "The "Diligencias" of the Republic of Uruguay". However, his knowledge of the stamps of Uruguay was a matter of some controversy: see below, Chapter 21, p.2, p.946 and Notes 9-10.
 21. See Georges Brunel: History of two soothsayers and the stamps of Moresnet, in: L'Écho de la Timbrologie Volume 32 (1918) Whole number 563, pp.195-198, and more recently Georges Waroquiers: Moresnet- "April fool", in: Balasse-Magazine Whole number 240 (1978) pp.220-223, Whole number 241 (1979) pp.270-272. For the unhappy consequences of this affair see below, Chapter 17. p.627 and Note 42.
 22. See Paul de Smeth: Louis Hanciau, in: Le Philatéliste Belge Volume 5 (1924) Whole number 39, pp.1247-1248, especially p.1248; see also Raymond Poncelet: The scholar, the writer, the publicist, in ibid. pp.1248-1251, especially pp.1249-1250; Ch. J. Phillips: Louis Francois Hanciau, in: Stamps Volume 7 (1934) Whole number 83. pp.45-46, 67, and finally Lucien Herlant: address in memory of Louis Hanciau (1835-1924) in: Balasse-Magazine, Whole number 178 (1968) pp.131-133; Whole number 179, pp.178-181; Whole number 181, pp.287-289.

2. Dr. Amable Legrand & Arthur Maury

There is no question that the lead in the field of philatelic research during the 1860s and 1870s belonged to France. This was due in the first place to the work of Dr. Amable Legrand, who has every right to be called the founder of philatelic research⁽¹⁾. Whilst most of our “Heroes” took completely to philately in their young years, Legrand first came to it as a mature man, and even then by accident. It is said that his son followed a widespread fashion and began a stamp collection, but quickly lost interest, which led the father to go on with it.

Figure 34 Dr. A. Legrand (1820-1912). The founder of scientific philately. (Photograph from around 1880).

We are very well informed about the external life of Dr. Jacques Amable Legrand. He was born in Paris in August 1820, and studied medicine there in the 1840s, finishing with the degree of Doctor. At the close of his student years he settled down in Neuilly near Paris in 1847 and lived there till his death⁽²⁾. He came to philately in 1861 at the latest. At any rate he belonged then to the select circle to whom Oscar Berger-Levrault sent his lithographed list of stamps: he was a contributor to the early issues of specialist magazines published in France, such as Le Timbre-Poste and Le Timbrophile. He soon became one of the leading authors, with an internationally recognised name. Without either intending or realising, he was acknowledged as the founder of what was called in England “the French School”.

His literary activity, which began as early as 1865, extended over the whole range of philately, with the sole exception that he never put out a catalogue under his own name. He published philatelic studies on individual countries and stamps, and also on special features of stamps such as perforations or watermarks: he described new issues, dealt with the philatelic questions of the day, and acted as the editor of a specialist journal as well⁽³⁾. After his favourite magazine, Le Timbrophile had ceased publication in 1871, he was principal editor for the first year of its successor organ the Gazette des Timbres, 1872-1876, which was also published by Pierre Mahé. He was a regular contributor in the second year as well, only in January 1875 did Mahé become the sole editor. The Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie also owed much to his pen: the catalogue published by the Société was almost entirely edited by him. He drew up all the associated reports of meetings and occasional supplements⁽⁴⁾.

However, he also worked unceasingly for the organisation of philately. He was the co-founder and active centre of the Société Française de Timbrologie and his was essentially the initiative behind the famous Congress of the year 1878, which is a landmark in the history of philately. Because of internal dissent, he left the Société in 1894 after twenty years of activity as Secretary and Treasurer – his letter of resignation is dated the 21st March 1894 – and this led to a serious crisis for what had till then been one of the leading societies in Europe. Legrand’s new foundation, the Société Nouvelle de Timbrologie, whose President he was, never attained the prestige that the Société Française de Timbrologie had enjoyed during its peak years in the 1870s and 1880s. As so often happens, the split in this case again led to a decline.

During the 1880s, exhibitions grew very swiftly from small beginnings, and in 1892 an international exhibition was held for the first time in Paris and the President was Legrand⁽⁵⁾ – who else? The same was true in 1894, whereas in the year 1900 – when he was 80 years old – he no longer took part as a juror, but he appeared as an exhibitor: of his philatelic library! He even won a gold medal with it. He had already sold his stamp collection in 1897 to the well-known Parisian dealer and collector Th. Lemaire for the then very considerable sum of 250,000 gold francs, and afterwards went over entirely to the collection of philatelic literature. Dr. J. A. Legrand, E. D. Bacon, Dr. E. Diena and Th. Haas were the first four philatelists to be distinguished with the Lindenberg Medal in 1906. He died at the remarkable age of 92 on the 6th June 1912 at his home in Neuilly. After his death Gilbert & Köhler acquired his library and sold it on to Charles J. Phillips, who had the parts of no interest to himself auctioned in London in 1913.

Figure 35 This little pamphlet on watermarks marked the beginning of scientific philately in 1867. Dr. Magnus is the revealing pseudonym of Dr. A. Legrand. The notation “2nd edition” refers to the fact that the work had been published earlier in instalments in the magazine Le Timbrophile. [The full title reads: Essay on the Watermarks and the Papers employed in the manufacture of Postage Stamps.]

Legrand’s literary work deserves more detailed treatment; it will not be possible to mention every publication, but the most outstanding can be described. Legrand’s collaboration on Le Timbrophile along with his literary activity began in 1865 with his famous paper Essai sur les Filigranes et les Papiers Employés à la Fabrication des Timbres-Poste⁽⁶⁾. This paper on watermarks and stamp paper appeared in an English translation the following year in Stamp Collector’s Magazine⁽⁷⁾, but in particular Pierre Mahé published a second edition in the form of a 64 page booklet. The edition consisted of 527 copies and was the first monograph that was not a catalogue or about forgeries⁽⁸⁾. Philatelic research and literature takes its origin from this slim pamphlet on watermarks!

The following year in Timbre-Poste he wrote a famous article on the perforation of stamps, with a model of a perforation gauge⁽⁹⁾. Here again he was a pioneer, and the Odontomètre he designed is still unchanged in principle today. The significance of this discovery is, to be exact, as follows: understanding the importance of the perforations for the overall aspect of a stamp becomes all the more when we recall that formerly many collectors looked on the perforations as damaging and not belonging to the stamp and simply cut them off. The reaction to Legrand’s findings varied at first between caution and outright rejection, but his perforation gauge gained acceptance more quickly than could have been foreseen on the first publication. He also began to use a hinge (paper hinge) to secure stamps in 1867: he suggested this at the outset as a warning, though at first his was a voice crying in the wilderness: in his sharp attack on the Lallier album, he criticised the bad habit of providing only a limited area for the stamp on an entire. “Has one never seen an amateur cut off the figures from valuable stamps?” he asked angrily⁽¹⁰⁾, but nobody took notice of his protest, and millions in value were unthinkingly destroyed in this way.

However, Legrand’s principal interest was naturally in stamps themselves, and quite understandably at that time this would include entires as well: he gave the world uncounted papers, miscellaneous items and marginalia to the publications of the entire world during the 50s (sic) to 70s. Nor did he scorn to report on new issues. Thus he wrote - mainly in Timbrophile or Timbre-Poste, and also in the Gazette des Timbres after 1871 - on the stamps of Cuba, Finland, Hawaii, Kashmir, Mauritius, Natal, Spain, on Italian trials, on new issues, etc., etc. Over a period of years (1868-1876) he published ground-breaking studies on stamped envelopes and so was the first to bring entires into view. His researches on the stamps of Victoria, published in 1865 in Timbrophile should have been published as a separate item like his study of watermarks, but nothing came of this⁽¹¹⁾.

His Stamps of Moldavia and Romania was actually published separately after it had earlier been published from September 1867 to February 1868 as a series of articles in Timbre-Poste⁽¹²⁾. He demonstrated for the first time that the 27 parale stamp had actually been issued (pp.36-40), which had hitherto been contested. In 1872/73 he published an article on the stamps of Japan in Volume 1 of Gazette des Timbres: a short item the “Writing and inscriptions on the stamps of Japan” followed in 1878 as Volume 1 of the Bibliothèque Timbrologique of the Société Française de Timbrologie⁽¹³⁾. This must be the first serious treatment of the stamps from a Far Eastern country: Legrand had a particular affection for Japanese stamps and Japan was a highlight of his collection.

At the Paris Congress of 1878, which he organised, he reported on both the stamps of New South Wales and The locally-engraved stamps of Mauritius⁽¹⁴⁾. If we bear in mind that he was managing editor of Timbre Fiscal, he also wrote regularly on the stamps of the entire world, made countless small contributions to philatelic questions of the day, called attention to defective printing, a newly discovered variety, etc., we shall get an idea of the whole range of his philatelic activity. He gave a summary of it in 1894 in a handbook of timbrologie which gives an excellent survey of the state of philately in that year. This would have remained the leading handbook up to the First World War if it had not had the misfortune to be overtaken only ten years later by the more-complete and extensive handbook of Theodor Haas⁽¹⁵⁾.

Legrand's philatelic efforts were never purely for publicity but were always meant to expand our knowledge scientifically. Naturally, most of his purely philatelic work has been overtaken by now and naturally also, Dr. Legrand was a child of his time: letters (Translator's note: presumably postal history), blocks and cancellations did not interest him. He was a researcher at a time when the ideal collector was represented by Breitfuss, Ferrary, Philbrick, Tapling, etc. This should always be borne in mind. However, we may still marvel at the breadth of his knowledge, the seriousness of his efforts and his striving towards scientific appreciation of the subject. From this point of view, he is still a prototype, the first philatelic researcher in the true meaning of the words. Suppantchitsch wrote in the year 1901, i.e. when Legrand was still alive: “The literary activity of this man is really phenomenal: we may call him the centre of gravity of all literary-philatelic life and work at this period”⁽¹⁶⁾; and in his obituary notice, E. D. Bacon wrote as follows: the memory of the worthy Doctor will always ... remain associated with the highest respect and admiration as a man who by lifelong example and endeavour, was a great factor in the elevation of philately to its present position⁽²⁾.

Figure 36 Arthur Maury (1844-1907). One of the earliest full-time dealers. Publisher of the Maury Catalogues and the Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, “Father Maury” was one of the leading philatelists of his time. (A photograph from the last years of his life.)

Arthur Maury, who was born In Paris on the 31st January 1844 was a completely different type. Over a decade younger than Moens, he resembled him in his commercial instinct and genius for commercial undertakings. However, he was not just an outstanding dealer, he also undertook literary activity and promoted philately in France in many directions. Arthur

Maury's parents were small trades people: a few years after the birth of her son his mother opened a small glove factory in Boulogne-sur-Mer and the young Maury initially learned the trade of a glove-maker, which however gave him little satisfaction. In his "Memoires of a Stamp Dealer" of 1866, the 22-year old described how he began to collect and then to deal. An acquaintance asked him for the stamps from his father's correspondence, which the young Maury initially found laughable: then stamps began to fascinate him – and he bought himself a "Manual" that had just appeared⁽¹⁷⁾, obviously this could not have been before 1862, and the first stamps must have appeared in his mother's shop window in Boulogne and must necessarily have been later, certainly after 1862 and not 1860 as Maury always maintained. Business prospered and the enterprising young man – then 19 years old – made the move to Paris in 1863, where he took a small shop at 5 Rue de Richelieu, opposite the Théâtre Français (what is known as Comédie Français). This was devoted to stamps alone so that he was one of the first stamp dealers to devote himself to this calling alone, without any subsidiary occupation⁽¹⁸⁾. In the Annuaire de Commerce, his name appears for the first time in 1865 as Maury Junior, though his first price list had already appeared in 1863. Maury never had reason to regret his brave decision, as his expanded from year to year. In 1866 he moved to 23 Rue Le Peletier, and in 1869 to the very prestigious shopping street 80 Rue St.-Lazare, where he employed a larger staff. During these years he was the only highly-qualified stamp dealer in Paris! In 1886, he rented an entire house, the Hôtel des Timbres at 8 cité Malesherbes, for his stamp trade, but he kept on his business in Rue St Lazare as a branch. Finally in 1891 he moved his business again to the centre of Paris, 6 Boulevard Montmartre, where the firm of Maury had its headquarters from 1895 to the year 1981.

Figure 37 The opening of the "Memoires" of the 22-year old Arthur Maury (1866). The vignette shows a portrait of the young Maury.

As well as his calling as a philatelist, which provided his living, Maury also found time for his hobby, puppetry. He had an outstanding collection of puppets and marionettes from the 17th and 18th centuries, of both European and Asian (Chinese) origin. He was a talented puppeteer, and his passion for puppet shows led him so far as to start his own puppet theatre in the neighbourhood of the Opera in 1900. This was the only undertaking of Maury's that was a total failure, but his love for puppets and marionettes remained unaltered. He organised a small museum in Rue Spontini, which also included interesting documents on the history of puppetry, including the papers of the famous French puppeteer Séraphin, who died about 1814. After Maury's own death, his unique collection was auctioned off on the 12th March 1908 and thus scattered to the winds.

As well as the puppets, Maury had yet another hobby, this time of a historical nature; he, who did not even get his leaving certificate, wanted at all costs to create a new emblem for the French Republic and his idea was to use the Gallic cock. He fought obstinately for this idea and even published in 1904 – at his own cost – a book 354 pages long with 350 illustrations entitled "The Emblems and Flags of France. The Gallic Cock." Which cost only five francs (four marks)⁽¹⁹⁾. The Government was against this project from the start – the cock was the symbol of the July Monarchy of 1830 – Maury's efforts remained without success.

Maury was without doubt the leading French dealer of the 1870s-1890s, his commercial success was unusual and obtained general recognition. However Maury was not only a successful businessman, but also a distinguished philatelist. As early as 1864 – at the age of only 20 – he published the first French philatelic magazine, the Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, which he himself edited till his death in 1907. The word Philately was used for the first time in this magazine in the year 1865, and Maury was one of its most passionate advocates. Apart from an interruption between 1874 and 1884⁽²⁰⁾ the Collectionneur was for decades the punctual guide and commentator for the French market⁽²¹⁾.

The same applies to catalogues which Maury published from 1865. A folio sheet printed on one side only; “List of Postage Stamps with Prices which can be Obtained from Maury Junior”, from the year 1863 was a forerunner, and then in 1865 appeared his Complete Catalogue of Postage Stamps with their Sale Prices for Collectors, which ran to 46 pages. The second edition had 76 pages in 8°, and appeared in 1866 under the title “Description of all Postage Stamps Issued from 1840 to 1866”⁽²²⁾. It was important to the history of stamp catalogues in that for the first time the stamps were not numbered through but began again at No.1 for each country. The third edition of 1868 gave the title its final form “Descriptive Catalogue of all Postage Stamps Issued from 1840 to 1868”, after which only the year of closure was altered. The catalogue did not appear absolutely once a year; there could sometimes be two or more issues, and in the year 1889, for example, no fewer than five editions (Nos.20-24). In 1897 there were four (editions 36-39). In 1890 Maury published his first special catalogue: “Descriptive Catalogue of all Postage-Stamps, Wrappers, Envelopes, Postcards, Telegraph Stamps and Essays of France”. The second edition of this appeared in 1892, the third in 1900 and the fourth in 1905⁽²³⁾. This was originally only a sort of extract from the main catalogue, as the first 16 pages of the first three editions reveal. These had doubled by the fourth edition, and the “Maury France” went on appearing until 1980, whereas the whole-world catalogue had to cease publication soon after Maury’s death.

These publications showed Maury to be very knowledgeable, a true philatelist in all ways, even if not immediately a philatelic researcher. However, he did make valuable contributions in this field as well. This “dawn philatelist” supplied in 1898, the first comprehensive work on cancellations in France: “Descriptive Catalogue of all the Postage Stamps of France. Inscriptions, Hand-Stamps and Cancellations from their Origin to Our Own Days, with Sale Prices for Collections”⁽²⁴⁾. This was really a ground-breaking work at a time when cancellations were still looked upon by most collectors as a sort of curiosity. In this case Maury showed much more foresight than someone like Legrand who never shifted from his own unexamined dogma.

However, Maury’s main philatelic work must be his massive “History of French Postage Stamps”, an exhaustive handbook on the philately of France (including cancellations) Which became the indispensable guide for a generation of French philatelists⁽²⁵⁾. The second part only appeared after his death, which occurred on the 1st December 1907⁽²⁶⁾. In Maury, French philately lost perhaps its most gifted representative: although he never got his leaving certificate (Translator – from secondary school) he became “Officer of the Academy” in 1888 and “Officer of Public Instruction” in 1900, honours which are reserved for academics in France as a rule. If he had lived a little longer, the red ribbon of the Legion of Honour would not have been withheld from him.

The firm of Maury existed till Spring 1981, and kept its premises at 6 Blvd. Montmartre, unaltered. The immediate successor to Maury was the well-known philatelist Th. Lemaire (†1944), later Roger North the long-time president of the Chambre syndicale Française de la Philatelie, took over direction of the firm. In 1974 Jean Vavrowsky took over and made Maison Maury into one of the leading French stamp firms again, but then he capitulated to the French fiscal system and emigrated to the USA. However, he did not sell the firm again, he liquidated it, so that the second oldest commercial house in Europe was regrettably extinguished.

Notes to Part 2 Dr. Amable Legrand & Arthur Maury

1. There is complete agreement about this: See Suppantchitsch, "Origin", p.19; Brunel, pp.9 & 11; L. N. & M. Williams, pp.14, 57, et seq.
2. See J.-B. Moens in Le Timbre-Poste, Volume 25, 1887, Jubilee Number, pp.XX-XXII; a short appreciation by A. Moschkau in Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1888, Issue 17, pp.249-250; see also the obituary by E. D. Bacon in The London Philatelist, 1912, Volume 21, Whole number 247, pp.177-178.
3. He undertook the editorship of Le Timbre Fiscal, published by Moens, from its first appearance and remained its acting editor for four years from January 1874 (Issue 1) to September 1878 (Issue 49): see above, p.60 and Note 15, also Chapter 19, p.852 and Note 201.
4. He edited the Bulletin from 1875-1893: see also A. Legrand: "Stamps with a surcharge", in Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, 1883-86, Volume 3, Whole number 49, pp.289-293. see also Chapter 19, pp.788-789 and Chapter 23, p.1071.
5. He was President of the Exhibition Committee and also of the Jury. he showed his Japan collection outside competition.
6. Le Timbrophile 1865, Volume 1, Issue 6, pp.47-52; Issue 7, pp.57-58; Issue 8, pp.63-68 & Issue 9, pp.73-76.
7. Postage stamp paper and watermarks., in Stamp Collector's Magazine, 1866, Volume 4, Whole number 36, pp.5-7; Whole number 37, pp.17-18; Whole number 38, pp.33-35; Whole number 39, pp.49-50; Whole number 40, pp.65-67; Whole number 41, pp.81-83; Whole number 42, pp.97-99; Whole number 43, pp.113-115. See the reaction of Pierre Mahé in: Le Timbrophile, 1866, Volume 2, Whole number 17, p.138.
8. Paris 1867 in 12°: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 246 (Blanc, No.868). This and the following paper appeared under the pseudonym Dr. Magnus. See Chapter 19, p.777 and Note 22.
9. "Perforated and not perforated", in Le Timbre-Poste, 1866, Volume 4, Whole number 46, pp.79-84; (especially p.84) Whole number 47, pp.88-89; Whole number 48, pp.98-100; 1867, Volume 5, Whole number 49, pp.4-6; Whole number 50, pp.15-16 & Whole number 52, pp.26-30. See Chapter 18, p.743 and Note 77.
10. Dr. Magnus: "On the arrangement of an album", in Le Timbrophile, 1867, Volume 3, Whole number 29, pp.231-234 (especially p.233). See Chapter 18, p.715 and Note 14.
11. Reported by Pierre Mahé in Le Timbrophile, 1867, Volume 3, Whole number 30, p.240 et. seq. The articles were in 1865, Volume 1, Whole number 12, pp.96-99; 1866, Volume 2, Whole number 13, pp.103-106; Whole number 14, pp.111-114; Whole number 15, pp.119-122 & Whole number 16 pp.127-131. The article on entires: "Stamped envelopes", in Le Timbre-Poste, 1868, Volume 6, Whole number 65, pp.35-37 & 1876, Volume 14, Whole number 163 pp.44-47.
12. 65 pages in 12°, Brussels 1869: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 247 (Blanc No. 869; Leclercq-Waroquiers p.26, No.400-400a). An English translation had previously

- appeared in The Stamp Collector's Magazine, 1868, Volume 6, Whole number 61, pp.17-19; Whole number 62, pp.34-36; Whole number 63, pp.51-53 & Whole number 64, pp.73-75. See Chapter 20, p.897 and Note 40.
13. 43 pages in 8°, Brussels 1878: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 225 (Blanc, No. 806; Leclercq-Waroquiers, p.26, No.407-407a) the article was originally published in Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, 1875-78, Volume 1, Issue 9, pp.244-255 & 288, carried Legrand's real name on the title-page with Dr. Magnus beneath, in brackets. Supplements to it in Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie, 1887-94, Volume 4, Whole number 52, pp.135-136; Whole number 55, pp.199-204 & Whole number 56, pp.209-214. The article on the stamps of Japan on the other hand was published in 1872/73: The stamps of Japan., in La Gazette des Timbres, 1872-73, Volume 1, Issue 5, pp.57-59; Issue 6, pp.69-71 & Issue 11, pp.131-132.
 14. The locally engraved stamps of Mauritius in: Memoirs of the International Congress of Philatelists (Neuilly) 1880, First session, pp.65-85, and: some details of the Stamps of the first issues of New South Wales, in, Ibid: sixth session, pp.218-255.
 15. Dr. A. Legrand: "Manual for the Stamp Lover", Paris 1894. 396 pages in 8° (Blanc, no.807). there was an "international edition" of this in New York in 1896 (173 pages in 8°) translated by Henry P. du Bois: Crawford Library Catalogue column 225; Theodore Haas: "Textbook of Philately", Leipzig 1905, 580 pages in 8°, more than 1,300 illustrations. The "Textbook" appeared in sections from 1903 as a Supplement to Senf's Ill. Briefmarken-Journal. Crawford Library Catalogue, column 173.
 16. Suppantischitsch. "Origin", p.19.
 17. "Memoirs of a Stamp Merchant" in: Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, Volume 3 (1886) Whole number 26, pp.204-206; Whole number 27, pp.212-213; Whole number 28, pp.220-221; Whole number 31, pp.245-246; Volume 4 (1867) Whole number 33, pp.344-345; Whole number 35, pp.360-362, see especially p.206.
 18. See also Mahé, p.17, Note 2. Edard de Laplante was dealing in stamps in the Summer of 1861, but only as a "sideline". See below, Chapter 8, pp.273 & 277.
 19. The campaign for the Gallic Cock was begun by him in September 1892 with the article "French armorial bearings" in Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, Whole number 143, pp.124-126.
 20. Only ten issues appeared between December 1867 and October 1974 (Whole numbers 38-47). Whole numbers 48-50 were purely price lists: the real new beginning was with number 5 of the 15th January 1885: Crawford Library Catalogue, columns 501-502. See below, Chapter 19, p.777 with Note 21.
 21. The last issue (Whole number 734) is dated July-October 1969, but it had appeared very irregularly and at wide intervals in the years prior to that.
 22. Crawford Library Catalogue column 253 (Blanc numbers 917, 902, 914). See below, Chapter 17, p.630 and Note 47.
 23. Here again there was a sort of "forerunner" in the shape of an eight-page "Descriptive catalogue of Stamps" which appeared in 1887. See Crawford Library Catalogue column 257, and under Chapter 17, p.639 and Note 67.
 24. 143 + 46 pages, Paris 1898: The 2nd edition appeared as early as 1899, and had 239 + 14 pages: a "supplement" is dated 1905 and has another 208 pages in 8°. The complete work thus amounts to some 500 pages! See Crawford Library Catalogue column 257 (Blanc no.905-906 & 920) and Chapter 17 below, p.668 and Note 128.
 25. Part 2, Paris 1907-08, total of 649 pages in 8° with 800 illustrations. (Blanc no. 915). A new version, prepared by Em. Blanc appeared in 1949 for the hundredth anniversary of French stamps. This was the “Centenary Edition” with only 370 pages in 8°. (Blanc no. 916).

26. All details of the life of Arthur Maury and the firm of Maury have been taken from the Jubilee volume “The Centenary of the House of Arthur Maury 1860-1960” by Henri Leroux & André Maurice. The historical part is from the pen of André Maurice (pp.7-31). For further details see (F. J. Peplow: Paris Stamp Dealers in the Annuaire de Commerce, in: Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society Volume 6 (1913) Issue 3, pp.33-36, especially p.33 in the year 1865.

3. Edward Loines Pemberton & Judge Frederick Adolphus Philbrick, Q.C.

Edward Loines Pemberton was born in the USA on the 10th December 1844, the son of English parents. Although the second youngest of the notabilities in this chapter, he is the only one who did not live until the new century, as he died at the age of only 34. The inclusion of such a young man in the series “Founders of Philately” means that Pemberton was something exceptional. In a chapter devoted to him in the pamphlet by the Williams Brothers, he is simply denoted as “the father of scientific philately”⁽¹⁾. This is not true as a generalisation – the title belongs without a doubt to Dr. A. Legrand – but it is correct if limited to Great Britain.

Figure 38. Edward Loines Pemberton (1844-1878). The founder of scientific philately in Great Britain. (The only known photograph of Pemberton from the later years of his life; See also Figure 91, number 6.)

Pemberton was orphaned early and subsequently taken back to England, where he was raised by his father’s brother in Birmingham. Along with his cousin Edgar he built up various collections, mainly of a botanical/mineralogical character. In a “split” between the two boys, the stamps went first to Edgar, then in 1861 the “split” was reversed; the stamps went over to Edward in exchange for a collection of birds eggs and feathers. The stamps took a hold on him and he never gave them up again for the rest of his life. In 1862 he decided to become a “stamp dealer”; in No.1 of the Monthly Advertiser of December 1862 was an advert in which he offered a collection of 850 items for sale⁽²⁾. In October 1867 he published a carefully edited price list, through James Woods of Hartlepool, and this can be looked on as to some extent the forerunner of the catalogues that appeared in later years⁽³⁾. From 1871 he carried on his stamp trade under the name James R. Grant & Co. He became friends with the dealer Wilson, who after his early death carried on the firm in London under the name Pemberton, Wilson & Co. In 1892 Edward’s son Percy Loines Pemberton (1875-1949) became a professional philatelist and went independent. His firm survived until 1956 when A. L. Pemberton, the son of Percy Loines, merged the firm of Pemberton & Co., with that of Robson Lowe and became a director of the firm of Robson Lowe. In association with this event, the “Pemberton Exhibition” took place at 50 Pall Mall on the 11th-15th February 1957. For the first time in the history of philately this celebrated the work of one family for philately⁽⁴⁾.

As a dealer, Pemberton was a well-known and generally well-liked personality in collecting circles: the “war” between dealers and collectors had then not yet taken place. His jovial, friendly manner won him new friends easily. The well-known philatelist Edmund Shorthouse (died 1916) recalled how he made the acquaintance of Pemberton as a beginner in June 1878. He found out that Shorthouse was beginning, and turned up at his door one fine Saturday and declared I hear that you are beginning to collect stamps, you must therefore know me. They all do. It is a fatality⁽⁵⁾. Shorthouse had never seen Pemberton before but said that within a few minutes he felt as if they had known each other for years.

Pemberton played a decisive part in the foundation of the London (later Royal) Philatelic Society in the year 1869. As early as September 1868 he said in a letter to The Philatelist: I think it is a great pity that the collectors of London cannot form a Philatelic Society amongst themselves⁽⁶⁾. The Society then formed in Spring 1869. Although according to its statutes only “amateurs” were eligible, and though he was not personally present at a constitution meeting on the 10th April 1869, Pemberton was immediately elected a member of the Committee. His co-worker, W. Dudley Atlee, whom he later discharged because of irregularities, acted as Secretary⁽⁷⁾. However, fate had not allotted Pemberton a long life. He became ill with rheumatic fever as early as 1872; the attacks were repeated, and he died on the 12th December 1878, only two days after his 34th birthday. It was an irreplaceable loss for early British philately. His obituary in The Philatelic Record closed with the words of Fortinbras [Translator: Actually Hamlet's words] in "Hamlet"

He was a man, take him for all in all
We scarce shall look upon his like again

Pemberton began his literary work very early; in April 1863 at only 18 he published, along with Thornton Lewes (1844-1869), a college student of the same age, a pamphlet on forgeries: Forged stamps: How to detect them⁽⁸⁾. This was originally a series of articles in The Monthly Advertiser by T. Lewes which was then carried on by Pemberton alone. Fate decreed that neither author would live long: Lewes died at the age of 25, Pemberton at 34.

This little pamphlet without illustrations was still an immature early work and contained a whole series of mistakes, but it was a considerable improvement on the pamphlet on forgeries issued under the name of Moens, which Pemberton considered risible. Forgeries were a favourite topic of Pemberton's, and he returned to it again and again in his publications. A sort of second edition of "Forged Stamps" appeared in the form of a series of articles in the first two volumes of The Philatelist during 1867-1868, but only got as far as Oldenburg⁽⁹⁾.

Further contributions on forgeries appeared under the title "The Spud Papers; or Notes in Philatelic Weeds" in The Philatelist between the years 1871 and 1876. Lowell Ragatz recently collected and reissued these⁽¹⁰⁾. His very interesting "Note-Book" (1867-1872), today in the library of the "Royal Philatelic Society" contains many items on forgeries. Pemberton was without doubt the greatest expert on forgeries of his time, even though he had no official test point (Translator: i.e. was not a formal expertiser). Like Moens in Belgium, Pemberton was, so to speak, the oracle of English philately, whose origin was improvisatory in character.

Figure 39 A page on forgeries from Pemberton's handwritten "Note Book" with notes on forgeries from Baden and Bavaria.

From the early 60s onwards, Pemberton was a regular and valued contributor to practically all the philatelic magazines in Great Britain that appeared during his lifetime and, in addition, he was often active as an editor. Thus from 1864 he edited the last issues of the oldest philatelic journal in this world, The Stamp Collector's Review and Monthly Advertiser which, however, ceased to appear in June 1864 through the folly of the proprietors judged Pemberton blaming them⁽¹¹⁾. He then wrote all the more eagerly in The Stamp Collector's Magazine and (from 1867) in The Philatelist.

In the year 1872 he again began his own magazine The Philatelic Journal which, however, ceased after only one year as by then his health prevented him from working any further on the journal. It started up again in 1875, but failed again after only four issues which cannot be sufficiently regretted, since The Philatelic Journal was on a level far above its competitors. Pemberton's report on the first ever stamp auction in England in the April 1872 issue immediately became a “classic” of philatelic journalism⁽¹²⁾. Shortly before his death he founded a new magazine: The Philatelic Record, (Translator: No, it was published after his death by A. H. Wilson as a tribute to Pemberton.) but the first issue contained only Pemberton’s obituary and his photo. The subsequent volumes were edited by Maitland James Burnett, the Secretary of the “London Philatelic Society”.

Figure 40 The first page of Pemberton’s historic report on the first stamp auction which took place in England and Europe on the 18th March 1872, in the April number of The Philatelic Journal. Pemberton criticises the behaviour of Scott, who eagerly bid for his own lots, which had a negative effect on other bidders present. Pemberton very rightly says that the correct thing would have been to set a reserve price. The report covered three pages. Some of the prices reached should be noted: Lot 6, an inverted centre of the USA 15cents, 1869 brought the “good price” of 36 shillings = 36 RM. “Bought in” generally means that the lot was knocked down to its owner, Scott.

Pemberton was not, however, the author only of numerous articles in periodicals, he was also the author of a noteworthy catalogue that appeared under the title The Stamp Collector’s Handbook. This was an illustrated catalogue in strict alphabetical order – the word “handbook” is a mistake. The first edition appears in 1874 and the second in 1878, just before Pemberton’s death⁽¹³⁾. As was usual in catalogues of the period, the Handbook contained no valuations, and the stamps were not even numbered. The “handbook” was a good production and surpassed most catalogues of the period: Peplow calls it The standard English guide for stamp collecting” in the 70s⁽¹⁴⁾.

However, Pemberton himself planned a much more complete and extensive work of philatelic information: The Philatelic Catalogue, being a complete catalogue of postage stamps and postal envelopes and cards with voluminous notes on reprints, forgeries, and every subject of interest”. The first number of 52 pages went from Alsace to Bolivia and appeared in 1874. Unfortunately it remained the only one. Pemberton’s monumental work would have cast into the shade everything that had appeared till then, but he was discouraged by the competition from the catalogue by Dr. Gray and gave his own up though there was not the slightest need to do so.⁽¹⁵⁾ His early death would have prevented its completion in any case, but the Philatelic Catalogue remains a torso from which we can see what English philately lost in him.

Figure 41 Judge Philbrick (1835-1910). (A photograph from the 1890s.)

Frederick Adolphus Philbrick was born on the 30th June 1835 in Colchester⁽¹⁶⁾. His father was a solicitor: the son studied law as well and was admitted as a barrister in 1860. He built up a good legal practice in London, before being appointed Recorder of Colchester in 1870, and a Queen’s Counsel (QC) in 1874⁽¹⁷⁾. Around 1890 he rose to be a County Court Judge in the county of Hampshire. Philbrick was one of the founder members of the “London Philatelic Society”, and was its first Vice-President; in 1878 he followed Sir Daniel Cooper as President, and held this office till May 1892. His urbane and social nature was revealed by his introduction of an “Annual Dinner”: the first took place on the 21st December 1883 in the “Holborn Restaurant”. The 22 people present were Philbrick’s guests: not till 1885 did the “Annual Dinner” take its later form by which every member paid for his own meal⁽¹⁸⁾.

As Philbrick felt that his judicial duties did not leave him time any longer to carry out his duties as President, he gave it up in May 1892 after almost 14 years of service, and at the same time was made an honorary member for life. As well as his honorary philatelic office, he also had a high rank in the premier Freemason's Lodge of England. Philbrick was a born collector. As well as his stamp collection which will be mentioned later, he also had a fine collection of old porcelain and above all, a notable library. He collected in particular 17th century first editions and expensive bindings, a passion he shared with Lord Crawford and M. Burrus. He passed the later years of his life in Bournemouth where he died on the 25th December 1910, in the 76th year of his life.

Philbrick was one of the "philatelists of the first hours". He was already collecting in the early 60s, and when he bought the collection of G. Herpin in 1866 for the then unheard of price of £400, he became without doubt the leading philatelist of his time. He collected unused above all, and possessed amongst other things both Mauritius, Post Office, 1st issue Hawaii complete, British Guiana and many others. For his two "Post Office" stamps Philbrick paid a total of £20 in response to a notice by Miss Fenton in the May 1870 issue of The Stamp Collector's Magazine. However if he had put off his purchase for six months, the price would have fallen. In 1880 Philbrick sold his collection for the then record price of £8,000 to Ferrary, who became the undoubted No. 1 in the world with the acquisition of this collection. The collection contains many essays and specimen printings of the stamps of Great Britain in particular. However Ferrary did not collect essays, and passed them to his friend S. Friedl for his philatelic museum. When this was closed, they were acquired by the Reichs Post Museum. However, even after the sale of his general collection, Philbrick still remained a passionate collector: he again specialised in "unused Great Britain", and once more built up a very fine collection, which he sold to Ch. Phillips in 1894 for £1,500. However he retained his entires and his tax stamps, which went into Lord Crawford's collection at a later point in time.

Philbrick also had literary connections with philately, and to a much greater extent than might appear from the author index to the Crawford Library Catalogue. Apart from handwritten notes which Philbrick sent to Lord Crawford in March 1909, it lists only the handbook The Postage and Telegraph Stamps of Great Britain⁽¹⁹⁾ published in 1881 along with William A. S. Westoby (Figure 16) on behalf of the Royal Philatelic Society London. This was a pioneer work, the first complete historical survey of the stamps of Great Britain. The Philatelic Record gave regular reports on the meetings of the "Philatelic Society of London", and he published several addenda in it in conjunction with Westoby⁽²⁰⁾. Above all else he was a zealous but usually anonymous contributor to The Stamp Collector's Magazine from volume 2 onwards – he signed them sometimes as An Amateur or Damus petimusque vicissim (the motto on the stamps of British Guiana) – and in The Philatelic Record. He also made a contribution to Pemberton's Philatelic Journal in 1872, once the "Philatelic Society" began to publish its own journal in 1892, he must have published in that as well⁽²¹⁾. His last two papers with the philatelic content appeared 1895/96 in volumes 5 and 6 of the The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain⁽²²⁾. Philbrick was thus not only a significant collector of last century, he was also a pioneer and promoter of philately, taking an active part in its development from its earliest beginnings to its full flowering.

Notes to Part 3: E. L. Pemberton/Judge Philbrick

1. The basic work is that of Fred J. Melville: Edward Loines Pemberton: A record of the most brilliant of the pioneer philatelists., in: The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain Volume 32 (1922) Whole number 382, pp.176-197 (with many illustrations)., also L. N. & M. Williams, pp.81-88; see also the anonymous obituary in The Philatelic Record Volume 1 (1879) Issue 1, p.2. Also important is F. J. PELOW: The Philatelic Publications of E. L. Pemberton in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 3 (1910), Issue 2, p.15-19 (with two pages of illustrations: cont. on p.24).
2. A printed price list appeared as a supplement in the first number of "Monthly Advertiser" in December 1862: See Crawford Library Catalogue, Column 306. A coloured facsimile appears in Melville, loc.cit, before p.159; also in: The Pemberton Exhibition (London 1957), p.5; see also Peplow, loc.cit, p.15-16.
3. Catalogue of the fine and very complete collection of postage stamps selected with great care by E. L. Pemberton of Birmingham, comprising all the rarest varieties of perforating watermarks etc., known, including full series of the stamps of the various countries upon which Mr. Pemberton has been writing during the last years. All orders to be addressed Jas. J. Woods, Hartlepool, Hartlepool (1867), 20 pages in 8°; Crawford Library Catalogue, column 416; a facsimile is given in: Melville, loc.cit, p.178, and: The Pemberton Exhibition (see Note 2 above) p.3.
4. Memorial issue of 12 pages: Note 2 above; a type-written catalogue of 6 sides, listing the contents of 28 frames and showcases was obtainable at the exhibition. See also Peplow, loc.cit. p.16-17, and in The Royal Philatelic Society, p.25.
5. Quoted in Melville, loc.cit, p.193.
6. The Philatelist Volume 2 (1868), Whole number 22, p.127.
7. The Royal Philatelic Society, pp.15-17.
8. Thorton Lewes & Edward Pemberton: Forged stamps – how to detect them; Edinburgh 1863. 36 pages in 8°. Crawford Library Catalogue column 228. This is a reprint of a series of articles: for details see Melville (Note 1 above) pp.180-181: a coloured picture on p.214. See below Chapter 14, p.479, with Notes 1-3 and Figure 185.
9. Forged stamps: How to detect them, in: the Philatelist, Volume 1, (1867), Issue 1, pp.3-6; Issue 2, pp.26-28; Issue 3, pp.33-34; Issue 4, pp.54-56; Issue 6, pp.85-88; Issue 9, pp.131-135; Volume 2 (1868), Whole number 15, pp.20-25; Whole number 16, pp.35-38, Whole number 17, pp.53-54, Whole number 18, pp.66-70, Whole number 22, pp.121-122. See Chapter 14 below, p.508, Note 2.
10. Pemberton himself wrote only "Spuds" numbers 22-25 (RAGATZ edition, pp.61-66) in: The Philatelist, Volume 7 (1873), Whole number 74, pp.13-14; Whole number 75, pp.23-24; Whole number 76, pp.38-40; Whole number 77, pp.50-51; see Chapter 14 below, p.503 and Note 32.
11. Crawford Library Catalogue, column 639: See Anderson & Smith, p.17 and Chapter 19 below, p.771 and Note 11.
12. The Philatelic Journal Volume 1, (1872), Issue 4, pp.61-63. The first volume ran to 218 pages, numbers 10 and 11 form one issue; the magazine has illustrations in various colours on one side, which was highly unusual at that time. For 1873, quarterly publication was announced, but Whole Number 13 appeared in January 1875 and it finally closed in April 1875 with Whole number 16, although Pemberton announced a revival in December 1877: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 708, see Peplow (Note 1 above), pp.17-18, and: The Philatelic Journal (1872-75) in: The Journal of the - Philatelic Literature Society Volume 9 (1916), Issue 1, pp.1-2: Melville (Note 1 above), p.191 and H. R. Holmes: Edward L. Pemberton's Philatelic Journal in: The London Philatelist Volume 81 (1972), Whole number 949, pp.5-6. See chapter 19 below, p.787 and Note 42.

13. The 1st edition had 202 pages, the second 340 in 8°: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 307. The publisher was Stanley Gibbons. See below Chapter 17, p.642 and Note 72.
 14. Peplow, loc. cit., p.19, see Melville, loc.cit., pp.187 & 193.
 15. In this connection see exchange of letters between Alfred Smith and E. L. Pemberton, reported by Fred Melville, Catalogues pp.46-48, and Peplow, loc. cit., p.19. See especially Melville, loc.cit., pp.190-193.
 16. On Judge Philbrick, see the obituary in: The London Philatelist, Volume 20 (1911), Whole number 229, pp.1-3 (M. P. Castle), and in: The Journal of Philatelic Literature Society Volume 4 (1911) No. 1, p.1 (E. D. Bacon) and Edward D. Bacon: The Philatelic Writings of Judge Philbrick in: ibid, Volume 4 (1911) No. 2, pp.23-24. See also Charles J. Phillips: A Founder of British Philately: Judge F. A. Philbrick, in: Stamps Volume 2 (1933) Issue 26, pp.441-42; The Royal Philatelic Society, p.118, etc.
 17. The English legal system and the legal profession both differ basically from the Continental: solicitors and barristers are both lawyers, but only barristers plead before the Courts. Also, in England no young man of 25 can act as a Judge. Rather, one is raised to be a Judge after several years practice as a barrister, which is looked on as a great honour. An English Judge, who always sits alone in the first instance, is addressed as "Your Honour".
 18. The Philatelic Record Volume 5 (1883), Whole number 60, pp.228-229, and the Royal Philatelic Society, p.27: see also p.15, 17, 25.
 19. London-Brussels 1881, 384 pages in 8°: Crawford Library Catalogue, column 312: see also columns 239 & 412. The co-author was J-B. Moens, who published in Brussels (in Leclercq-Waroquiers, pp.25-26, not indexed). A second edition was planned for 1899, but was never published: see below Chapter 20, pp.898-899 and Note 51. See also: the Royal Philatelic Society, pp.25-26, and below Chapter 20, p.898 and Note 48.
 20. An Appendix to the Postage and Telegraph Stamps of Great Britain, in: The Philatelic Record, Volume 5, 1883, Whole number 52, pp.80-82; Whole number 53, pp.95-97; Whole number 54, pp.112-114; Whole number 56, pp.148-152; Whole number 57, pp.169-172; Whole number 59, pp.200-204; Volume 6 (1884), Whole number 61, pp.23-26; Whole number 65, pp.96-98; Whole number 67, pp.133-136; Whole number 68, pp.155-157, Whole number 70, pp.196-199; Volume 7 (1885), Whole number 77, pp.92-95; Whole number 80, pp.150-152; Whole number 81, pp.165-168; Whole number 83, pp.194-198, and Volume 12 (1890), Whole number 141, p.161.
 21. Notes on the Envelopes for Temporary Postage, used at the Houses of Parliament in 1840, in: The London Philatelist, Volume 3 (1894), Whole number 32, pp.182-187.
 22. His entire philatelic œuvre has been dealt with exhaustively by E. D. Bacon, see above Note 16.

4. John W. Scott

Figure 42: John W. Scott (1845-1919)
The founder of philatelic auctions and “father of American philately” (a photograph from the last year of his life)

Scott's services could also be recognized in the chapter on the major dealers or the large catalogue and album producers. If I include it here, it is only because the United States cannot be omitted from this Chapter, even if at that time it was still a long way from the leading position it assumed in later decades.

John Walter Scott was born on the 2nd November 1845 to John Scott and Martha Stone in London; he enjoyed his average schooling and began an apprenticeship in a London trading company in 1860⁽¹⁾. Foreign correspondence received by this company may have piqued his interest in postage stamps; Also, as an apprentice, Scott increased his pocket money with little to buy. In the summer of 1863 he emigrated to the USA; he had a few stamps in his luggage, and his first period in New York was a modest open-air stamp store on Chambers Street. He then sold everything to W. P. Brown for $10, tried unsuccessfully to get a job and finally decided to join the army. However, Brown persuaded him to return to selling stamps; he loaned him $100 worth, which made Scott $100 in net income after three months⁽²⁾.

The years of the Civil War (1861-1865), which then began in the United States, were not favorable to the stamp trade; the business was - still in the open air! - with too little business, and Scott tried his luck in the west as a gold prospector. In May 1865, he lost everything he owned in a fire in Idaho City. He contemplated becoming a clergyman - Scott was a very religious person who knew the Bible almost by heart - but he lacked the means for education. In July he hiked on foot to California, where he worked as a carter. In November 1865 he worked in Sacramento City for a German grocer. After six months, he wanted to return to New York on a sailing ship, but the ship was shipwrecked off Panama. Somehow he managed to get back to New York at the beginning of 1867 - poor as a church mouse.

Here he tried again with the stamp trade and this time with better success. His business - he had rented his shop for the first time - was at 34 Liberty Street, in close proximity to what was then New York's main post office. The date of the establishment of the business is clearly the year 1867, but in 1981 that did not prevent the Scott Publishing Co. from advertising with the slogan: “Serving collectors since 1863”. It's like Moens, Stanley Gibbons, Maury and others: what one counts as a “business start-up”, was actually a first contact with the trade.

Figure 43 Scott's Postage Stamp Store at 146, Fulton Street in 1876.
The interior is shown in Figure 44.

Figure 44 Company advertising in the 1870s: the Scott company introduces itself in drawings (1876).

In June 1867, Scott published his first price list, which was later counted as the 1st edition of the Scott catalogue⁽³⁾. In March 1868 Scott published the first issue of the American Journal of Philately, which he edited until 1886. It was one of the oldest philatelic magazines in the United States and definitely the first to survive: G. Turner aptly describes it as the outstanding classic of the early days⁽⁴⁾. Scott of course also played a leading role in the “New York Philatelic Society”, whose publication organ was the Journal. The year 1868 was a decisive year for him in many respects: in July he released his first album for $2.50: Scott’s American Postage Album, which was to be followed by many more albums⁽⁵⁾. The first Scott catalogue worthy of the name appeared in September under the euphemistic name “16th Edition”⁽⁶⁾, and in October he married Minnie Peyton, a New York merchant’s daughter, who bore him six children, among them one who also became famous in philately Walter S. Scott.

J. W. Scott cannot claim to have been groundbreaking either for his albums, for his magazine or for the catalogues. There were predecessors in each of these areas, not just in Europe, but also in the USA. At best, one can say that Scott was successful when others had failed before him; but in no case did the original idea come from him. It is only in this sector that you cannot deny his priority: he was the first to ever hold a special philatelic auction in the world, thereby inaugurating a form of sale that must be considered the most important in philately today; on the 28th May 1870, this event took place, and the setting was, of course, New York⁽⁷⁾.

His business flourished, and in 1871 he moved his store to 73-77, Nassau Street, which later became the New York philatelic shopping street. In the same year Scott went on a trip to his old home. He was planning an English edition of the American Journal of Philately in collaboration with E. L. Pemberton, but the project did not come off. To this end, on the 18th March 1872, he held with Sotheby, the first stamp auction in England, at which it was noticed that Scott was eagerly bidding on his own material⁽⁸⁾ (see Fig. 40). In 1873 he returned to the USA. In April 1875 he moved from Nassau Street to 146, Fulton Street, where he also turned to the coin trade with good success. He had his albums and catalogues produced in his own print shop, which unfortunately was destroyed by fire in 1878, and all old business documents fell victim to the flames. In 1878 the “First Series” of the American Journal of Philately ended with No. 156 of Volume 12⁽⁹⁾, but he immediately published a new magazine with a slightly changed title, which showed Scotts new numismatic interests⁽¹⁰⁾. Soon after, he moved his company one last time to 721 Broadway.

In 1886 he sold his business to Henry L. Calman, who founded the Scott Stamp and Coin Co. Ltd. with his brother Gustave Bernard. J. W. Scott was considered a wealthy man and had no doubt the honest intention to retire from the stamp business, as Stanley Gibbons had done at a relatively young age. Through unfortunate speculations, however, he lost practically all of his fortune in a few months; In 1889 he opened a stamp store again under the name J. W. Scott Co, Ltd. at 40 John Street. This led to a lawsuit with the Scott Stamp and Coin Co. that went as far as the Supreme Court and resulted in the famous landmark judgment that the right of a person to earn a living by the only job with which he is familiar cannot be contracted away and such a business clause can be waived.

Scott was back in business. Since his rights in the American Journal were transferred to the Scott Stamp and Coin Co. In April 1890, he founded his own magazine, The Metropolitan Philatelist, which barely survived its founder and had 38 volumes with a total of 800 numbers by 1919, 765 of which were published under Scotts’s own direction⁽¹¹⁾. However, the paper never reached the rank of the American Journal. The new company also carried out its own auctions again, which gave rise to various mix-ups⁽¹²⁾. In September 1895, it began to send out its Weekly News Letters, which had a circulation of just 100 by May 1897 and had 34 issues. They were intended as private and confidential communication to the one hundred leading amateurs in America⁽¹³⁾. In November 1916 he sold his business - this time for good - to J. E. Handshaw, who continued both the Metropolitan Philatelist and the auctions.

Scott has undoubtedly made great contributions to the distribution and organization of philately in the USA. He belonged to the Collectors Club from the moment it was founded in 1896 and was its first treasurer. In the last years of his life, he spent a few hours in the club almost every day and as a librarian completed the first catalogue of the library of the Collectors Club in February 1917, to which he also donated many books⁽¹⁴⁾. In 1917 he was elected President of the American Philatelic Society, he was also made a member of the Board of Directors the following year. He has made a special contribution to the American exhibition industry. In 1876 Scott had caused a stir at the Centennial Exhibition in Philadelphia because of the exhibition of his collection, but this was more of a commercial advertisement than a real exhibition. In 1889, the Eden Musée, a New York wax museum, organized one of the first postage stamp exhibitions in the United States, organized by members of three societies, the Brooklyn Philatelic Club, the National Philatelic Society, and the Staten Island Philatelic Society (see Fig. 193). Only the Boston exhibition in 1888 was chronologically earlier. It goes without saying that he also played a leading role in the preparation of the first international exhibition in the United States, the New Yorker of 1913⁽¹⁵⁾ (see Fig. 206).

Little can be said about the man J. W. Scott. He was not as picturesque a character - Americans would say "colorful" - as W. H. Colson, for example. Scott was deeply religious, vegetarian and led a very modest life even in the years of successful business. Lunch seemed an irresponsible luxury to him. Far less than E. L. Pemberton or A. Maury did he associate research with the commercial; he was first and foremost a businessman, and it is no exaggeration to say that he was the founder of the philatelic market in the United States. But besides that, he always knew how to put himself at the service of the cause and contributed like no other to the spread of philately in the USA. He was not a researching philatelist, but rather a solid expert and a first-class organizer. Even though he died in New York City on the 4th January 1919, it was fair to say that "The Father of American Philately" had passed away.

Notes on Chapter 4: J. W. Scott

1. The information on Scott's life is according to J. Brace Chittenden: John Walter Scott, The Collectors Club Philatelist 1923, Volume 2, No. 10, pp.126-41; thereafter Ch. J. Phillips: John Walter Scott, the Father., Stamps, 1932, Volume 1, No. 6, pp.188-90. The Reminiscence by J. W. Scott himself in: The Metropolitan Philatelist, 1913, Volume 31, No. 685, p.174; More interesting is the appreciation: Fifty years a stamp dealer., The Philatelic Gazette, 1910-11, Volume 1, No. 4, p.50.
2. Interesting memories of W. P. Brown, who only withdrew from the stamp trade in 1920, are told by Kehr, pp.92-95.
3. Stanley Gibbons proceeded in a similar manner; see below chapter 17, p.624, 626 with notes 40-41; see note 6 below.
4. Turner: Trends, p.147. See especially J. Brace Chittenden: Scott in philatelic literature., The Collectors Club Philatelist, 1924, Volume 3, No. 7, pp.119-24; see below note 8-9 and below chapter 19, pp.782-783 with notes 34-35.
5. See below, chapter 18, pp.713-714 m. Note 9, p.720 m. Note 34, p.729, p.732 m. Note 57, p.735 m. Note 64.

6. A reprint of this exists o.O.u.J. Cf. Turner, Catalogues, p.215 and in detail below chapter 17, p.624 with note 40, p.643 with note 76, pp.653-654 with note 103, pp.664-665 with note 113.
7. See below, chapter 10, p.355 and Figure 127.
8. The article by E. L. Pemberton in: the Philatetical Journal 1872, Volume 1, No. 4, pp.61-63, was the first detailed account of a philatelic auction and quickly gained the rank of “classic”; see also Fred. J. Melville: Edward Loines Pemberton., The Philatelic Journal of Great Britain, 1922, Volume 32, No. 382, pp.176-97, esp.p.185-186, 188 and above Figure 39.
9. Crawford Catalogue, column 442 (Smith, no.1090). The “Second Series” was published under the old name from 1888-1906 by the Scott Stamp & Coin Co. Crawford Catalogue, column 442 (Smith, no.1100).
10. The American Journal of Philately and Coin Advertiser appeared from January 1879 to March 1886: Crawford Catalogue, column 443 (Smith, No. 1110). The dates show that the printer’s fire could not have played a role in the abandonment of the “First Series”, as was sometimes assumed, since the new magazine follows directly without interruption.
11. Turner: Trends, p.148; see Crawford Catalogue, column 628-629 (Smith, No. 15, 410); see below chapter 19, p.823 with note 140.
12. See below chapter 10, p.361.
13. Chittenden (above note 4) p.121. They are not listed in either the Crawford Catalogue or Smith.
14. ANPHILEX ‘71, p.96. Scott had even chaired the preparatory organizing committee. See the letters of Scott published by Chittenden (above note 1) pp.137-140 from the early days of the Club.
15. George T. Turner: International stamp shows. Notes from philately’s past., Minkus Stamp Journal 1966, Volume 1, No. 2, pp.3-9, esp. pp. 3-5 and J. Brace Chittenden: Scott and the Exhibitions., The Collectors Club Philatelist, 1924, Volume 3, No. 10, pp.160-163.

5 Dr Alfred Moschkau

Alfred Moschkau is not only younger than the rest of the ‘Heroes’ dealt with in this chapter, he can also not be ranked philatelically with any of them – perhaps excepting Scott. However this points only to later development and also the lower level of early German philately in comparison with England or France. Nevertheless, there can be no doubt that Moschkau was the leading German philatelist of the 70s and early 80s, and that nobody did more to extend and gain respect for philately in Germany.

Figure 45: Dr. Alfred Moschkau (1848-1912), who made philately popular in Germany. (A photograph from the last years of his life.)

Otto Carl Alfred Moschkau was born on the 24th January 1848 at Löbau in Saxony. His father was a vet, and his mother formerly an actress at the Court Theatre in Dresden⁽¹⁾. He was destined to go into business, and thus went not to the Arts High School but to the Higher Middle School in his home town. At the age of 17 he changed to the Trade School in Bautzen, which he left in 1868. However he later attended lectures on natural sciences and anatomy, took courses at the Royal Academy of Art in Dresden, and succeeded in obtaining the Leipzig D. Phil. as an external student in the year 1873. He was what was then referred to as a ‘freethinker’ in religion; this corresponded politically to being ‘enlightened’ (Liberal).

After obtaining his D.Phil. he became an assistant at the Koch sanitarium in Dresden, where he again began to study medicine, when the Russian Count V Galitzin appointed him as his personal adviser at the end of 1875. He still dabbled a little with natural medicine, but soon afterwards became a editor for Senf in Leipzig. Homesickness for Oybin (near Zittau) where he had settle in 1870, led him to return there in the year 1878. He started a local museum there in 1879, and settled down with it in Oybin, where he lived, always in poor health, to the end of his life. Moschkau tried various professions – for a few months he was even a stamp dealer – but his real talent however was without doubt as an author.

He gained his first spurs with a small volume of sentimental verse, Spring Flowers which he published in 1868. After that there was no holding him. Moschkau was a born journalist, like Melville in many ways, with whom he shared the fate of losing his means to philately. However, Melville was much more one-sidedly devoted to philately than Moschkau. What did he not write about? Natural healing or cremation, local history or the migration of birds, lyric poetry or philately, Moschkau was always ready. Here is only a selection of the nonphilatelic writings which he produced – sometimes over a period of years:- The Medical Home Companion, The Guardian of Health, Notes for Autograph Collectors, Saxonia (Magazine of Saxon History), Oywina (journal of local history), Lusatia (historical-touristic magazine for Lausitz), The Mountain Friend (his own foundation), From German Mountains, Leaves from Local History, and so on. To these he added a large number of historical works, guides, etc. devoted above all to his beloved Oberlausitz and the Sudetenland.

Hence Moschkau was not a doctor, or an alpinist, or a historian, but rather a ‘dilettante’ in the best sense of that word; his cultural efforts quite early received due appreciation. The Free German Chapter of Frankfurt-am-Main named him Master and Honorary Member in 1878. This was the first in a long series of honorary memberships, too many to list here. He himself gained the greatest pleasure from his appointment to the Royal Saxon Advisory Committee. Though he was a dilettante in many fields, there was one in which he was certainly to be accepted as an expert; this was the field of philately, which without doubt takes the first place amongst the great number of his publications.

Moschkau himself⁽¹⁾ has related that he put together his first stamp collection at the age of eleven in 1859 when he was convalescing from a serious cardiac ailment that affected him for the whole of his life; a “torture of Tantalus” as he called it himself. He got stamps from his father’s correspondence – including five unused red Saxony three-pfennings found in a letter to his father! – and as gifts from his schoolfellows – but soon afterwards had to sell them again on his father’s order to the owner of a manor in Löbau. The money obtained went into a savings bank but did not stay there long, since in about 1863 young Moschkau began a second collection which he quickly built up to be the leading one in Germany. In 1870 it numbered about 5,000 items and – apart from a few really great rarities – was almost ‘complete’. According to legend, only five stamps were lacking at that time. The collection was offered to King John of Saxony and Crown Prince Albert, placed on open exhibition by officers of the Field Post – the first public exhibition of a philatelic nature that we know of – and served as the text for the Schaubek album as well as for the Schaubek catalogue.

In spite of the very modest means available to Moschkau during his life, this collection should have taken up the greatest part of his time, but this was not the case: Moschkau was a committed fighter against what in those day was the unrestricted prevalence of ‘imitations’, which in the frivolous jargon of philatelists were called ‘forgeries’⁽²⁾. He took a leading role in the formation at the end of 1869 of the Society for the Suppression of Anitphilatelic Elements. In 1871 he began his testing activities – he was indeed the first public tester – and at the same time carried out a vigorous literary campaign against ‘forgers’ and their activities. However Moschkau was no jurist, and his choice of words was not always temperate. The inevitable happened; in 1872 a dealer in ‘imitations’, naturally much stronger financially, sued for slander and damage to his business. Moschkau lost the action resoundingly, and suffered a financial penalty enormous for his circumstances; to this were added the court and lawyers’ costs – in brief, Moschkau found himself obliged to sell his house, and not least, his collection.

He never really got over this blow; he did indeed collect again, but the new collection never reached the level of the second even approximately; from then on he was only middling as a collector. His very important philatelic library also went under the hammer; it was bought – soon after 1880 – by the then newly founded Vienna Philatelists’ Club ⁽³⁾. Hence the collection and ‘library’ left behind on his death in 1912 were simply disappointments.

However collecting was a necessity for him all his life. In Moschkau’s own melodramatic-precious way: Well may many men ask from life only that the sun shine on their path; mine was the destiny, once youthful joy had turned to dust, to be gloomy, joyless, compelled to renounce earthly pleasures. The more my relationships turned to seclusion; in which my growing youth tasted the more or less full passage of the blooming time of life, the more it turned towards a better hope, and the more my withered body turned towards castles in the air, my spirit seeking a compensation for the lost golden days of youth⁽⁴⁾.

Moschkau’s own strength was also his publicity talent in the field of philately. It has already been said that we have no standard work from his pen which is still quoted today. His first book, published in 1871 was a little work on watermarks which was simply a plagiarism of a work by

Dr. Magnus which had appeared four years earlier: however, - in combination with a brief history of stamps and philately – it went to four editions by 1880⁽⁵⁾. A weightier publication, though only 60 pages long, was the study on essays (trials) published in 1875. This was new territory for philately, as was the catalogue of private postmarks planned for 1880 but never actually published⁽⁶⁾.

Although his historical studies of 1879 attracted only slight attention⁽⁷⁾, it was above all his 'Handbook of Stamp Collectors' derived from a short catalogue⁽⁸⁾ that made Moschkau's name known in the philatelic world⁽⁹⁾. Although doubtless a respectable work, it does not bear comparison with the later Gray catalogue or even the planned catalogue from Pemberton, which used the word Handbook much earlier⁽¹⁰⁾. Then apart from a German Philatelic Calendar for 1877, a Pocket-Book for Stamp Collectors of 1888 and the editorship of stamp albums⁽¹¹⁾, his independent literary activity was soon exhausted.

It is striking that his period of philatelic activity is concentrated in the decade 1870-1880. It is as if Moschkau, who did not die till 1912, realized himself that his time had passed and that an era of newer – and greater – names had dawned. The same is also shown by the fact that his name was never more popular than during that decade. When he was not yet thirty (!) in 1877 Rudolf Schmidt published a 16 page Biographical Sketch, which was translated into Croatian by P. Oscar in the same year, and even went to a 2nd edition⁽¹²⁾. Moschkau never after enjoyed such esteem as he did then.

His own strength lay, as already said, in the field of publicity. It was he who in 1874 contributed an article on Postage Stamps for the first time to Meyer's Conversations – Lexicon (Vol. III, p.736). He contributed the first philatelic article on the Dresden Stamp Trade to the October 1869 number of the short-lived Bazar für Briefmarkensammler published by the Heidelberg student W. Faber. Over 1870/71 he edited for a year the Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung started by A. Zschiesche. In July 1871 he published the first number of a magazine of his own, A. Moschkau's Magazin für Deutschlands Markensammler (titled thus from No.4), but this ceased with twelve issues after a year. The successor to this was Der Philatelist, Organ des Vereins Deutscher Philatelisten but this ceased in October 1872 after only two issues, whereas the Vertraulichen Mitteilungen of the society founded by Moschkau himself, and whose first president he was till 1877, published at least four numbers between 1871 and 1875⁽¹³⁾.

Obviously this was all quite small-scale and insignificant. Moschkau found his true field of activity in 1874 in the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal founded by H. Werninck but soon taken over by Louis Senf. This magazine rapidly developed into the most-read German philatelic journal, aimed mainly at the small and medium collector, and reaching the approximate level of today's DZB. Moschkau was in his element here. From 1876-1881 and again from 1884-1887 he guided the Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal as its acting editor⁽¹⁵⁾, though in 1883 he made a last attempt at publishing a philatelic journal of his own, the Germanic. Allgemeine deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung⁽¹⁴⁾. In between 1881/82 he edited Sigmund Friedl's Weltpost in Vienna and in 1883 his own Germania. From 1888-1892 he preferred to edit Heitmann's Illustrierte Briefmarken-Zeitung. After that he drew back from journalism and subsequently published only regular contributions in Der Philatelist, the organ of the Dresden International Society.

His fiftieth birthday in 1898 brought him best wishes from all sides, which – as far as they were expressed in writing and published – were fatal to his posthumous reputation; since it was obvious that he had not been for a long time the representative of German philately, as he appeared to be in the respectful ‘biographies’ of earlier years. By 1900, though he was only in his fifties, Moschkau was a man of the past, remembered with a certain amount of sympathy. Many societies made him an honorary member, but by then German philately was represented by Lindenberg, Kalckhoff, and Kloss, to name but a few; Moschkau was then a star of the third order.

During the decade 1870-1880 Moschkau played a decisive part in the extension of philately in Germany; at the time he was far and away the best-known German philatelist, who was awarded a Diploma of Honour even by the Société Française de Timbrologie. It was his tragedy – as he must have realized – to see other people building on the foundations he had laid and taking German philately to the international level within a very short time – without Moschkau. The situation is characterized only by the lack of discussion, over his award of the Lindenberg Medal. When he died in May 1912 in the town of Oybin, people remembered with sorrow the ‘Old Master’, whose work had passed into history so long ago.

Notes to Part 5: Dr. Alfred Moschkau

1. Alfred Moschkau: Also a reminder, in: On the history of philately. Collected contributions to stamp science (Leipzig 1879) p.77-80; also: Memories of an old philatelist, in: Der Philatelist 14 (1893) No. 3 (180) p.90-93, especially p.91, From the rich, but mostly unsatisfactory, references to Moschkau in the obituaries by Dr. Fr.. Kalckhoff in: DBZ. 23 (1912) No. 6, p.97; Dr. P. Kloss in: Berl. Briefmarken-Zeitung 8 (1912) No. 12, p.279 (with noticeable distance); (Joseph Kröger): Alfred Moschkau†, in: Ill. Briefmarken-Journal 39 (1912) Nr.13, S.323-25 and B. T. K. Smith in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society volume 5 (1912) Nr. 3, pp.51-52. See also Otto Sedlmayr: Thirty Years from the Life of a Philatelist, in: Das Postwertzeichen 2 (1889) Nr.10, p.98-99; No. 11, pp.122-23. The recently published monograph by Köth-Springer, passim, shows the critical distance. The finding made several times there that Moschkau was a “philatelist of international standing” however ibid. p.40 - is probably based primarily on ignorance of the achievements of the truly great names of the early days. See Note 12 below.
2. See Moschkau (note 1 above) p.92; “Nevertheless, it must be said here that the term counterfeiting was completely lacking in its meaning at the time and only became clear later.”
3. See Moschkau’s own statement in: Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung 1 (1888) p.138.
4. Moschkau (note 1 above) p.90.
5. The watermarks on the stamps and envelopes issued since 1818 along with a history of stamps and stamp collecting (philately), Dresden 1871, 43 pages in 8° (Philatelic Library, Volume I); Dresden 1872², For the greatly expanded 3rd edition, the title was changed: History of stamps and philately (stamp science) plus illustration Description of all previously known watermarks on the postage stamps, postal covers ... Leipzig 1878³ = 1880⁴, 98 pages with 12 plates in 8°. Both first editions were only equipped with 70 or 84 woodcuts. See above p.68 m. Notes 6-8 and Crawford Catalogue, column 277-78.

6. Manual for Essay collectors. Directory of all official postal essays known to date, Leipzig 1875, 51 pages in 8° (Philatelic Library, Vol. II): Crawford Catalogue, column 179. The volume had appeared without any illustrations. The "Catalogue of all private postage stamps known to date" was announced in 1880 as "in the press", but is unknown and has never been published. See also Köth-Springer, pp.34-36.
7. On the history of philately. Collected contributions to the history of stamps and stamp science, Leipzig 1879, 80 pages in 8° (Philatelic Library, Vol. IV): Crawford Catalogue, column 279.
8. Catalogue of all stamps, letter envelopes, postcard-all countries issued since 1818 to April 1874, Leipzig 1874, 88 pages in 4° with four plates; see the following note
9. Manual for Postage Stamp Collectors, Catalog of all stamps, letter envelopes, postcards, postal orders and wrappers from all countries issued since 1653 to December 1875 ... With the sales prices of the stamp shop by Louis Senf, 2nd edition (!), Leipzig 1876, 233 pages in 8° (Philatelic Library, Vol. III), Moschkau edited the "4th increased and improved edition" from 1880, W. Hermann 1884 the 5th, Richard Senf 1888-90 the 6th. The 7th, improved edition was published in 1896 in two volumes Volume 1 edited by Richard Senf, Volume 2 by Theodor Haas, 632 and 329 pages in 8° Crawford Catalogue, column 278.
10. See above p.82 Note 15 and also Below Chapter 17, p.644 Note 82.
11. Generally see Crawford Catalogue, column 277-280 and below Chapter 18, pp.722, 723, 724.
12. Rudolf Schmidt: Dr. Alfred Moschkau. A biographical sketch., Leipzig 1877, 16 pages in Klein-8°, Oscar Simic: Zice Ottona, Dragutina, Alfreda Moschkau a doktora filosofije., Agram, 1877, 16 pages; 1878⁽²⁾, 15 pages in 16° (each with a portrait photo), see also Gustav Reitz: The head of the German philatelists, Dr. Otto Carl Alfred Moschkau., Vienna, 1882, 4 pages in 8° (reprint from the International Philatelist Address Book, this year): Crawford Catalogue, column 340, 353, 325, see also note 1.
13. Crawford Catalogue, columns 449, 710, 820; Suppantisch: Geschichte, p.114 No. 15, 121, No. 59, 150, No. 274. The original title of the magazine read: A. Moschkau's Magazin für den Sammler von Essais, Wechsel-, Stempel-, Telegraphen- und Eisenbahnmarken and therefore did not address the average collector. See below Chapter 19, p.852 m. Note 200.
14. Crawford Catalogue, column 570; Suppantisch: Geschichte, p.130, no. 114, The paper lasted a full year, but the last six numbers appeared in the form of double numbers (No. 7/8, 9/10, 11/12).
15. See chapter 19, pp.791-793 m. Notes 60-61.

CHAPTER 4 A RESPECTABLE SOCIETY (ca.1878-1914)

In the year 1879 a certain Georg Kaufmann (pseudonym used by Georg Wende), a pharmacist by profession, wrote a then widely read paper on “The Philately of the Future”⁽¹⁾. The author was a respected philatelist; it is worth while taking a look at what he said. Kaufmann was anxious about the future of philately: If we count up the stamps that have been issued up to the present day, the result is a considerable number, and only a few people can hope to own them all. We are compelled to think how many postage stamps there will be when their number is increasing progressively every day. How many new issues has the recent World Postal Union produced? We have the oriental conflict to thank for a large number. The number threatens to grow ad infinitum, making it quite impossible to own them all ...

At the same time the thought occurs to him that in future only expensive unused stamps will be available, since to prevent unauthorised re-use the postal authorities might well decide to destroy stamps completely, ... used stamps will no longer be available for collections. Chemical preparations or the electric spark will destroy our little friends to make them unavailable for re-use. However, he at once sees a number of dangers: heat, sunshine, moisture, various types of vapours ... after barely four decades we already know of a large number of this sort of influences on our darlings. How do we counter these influences? Questions of stamp conservation pre-occupied Kaufmann to an extraordinary degree. He agrees with Herr apothecary Ferdinand Mayer of Franzenbad⁽²⁾, who recommends the removal of the old gum adhering to the stamps and the use of fresh, acid-free gum to mount the stamps. However, he has dealt with this problem himself: Of all the tests I have made, the best seems to me to soak [sic.] the stamps in a solution of oil in spirits, which gives the stamps ... greater resistance without any essential changes in their external appearance. However, the fact that stamps treated in this way easily trap dust (!) is against the adoption of this process.

However, this is not enough: Let us think of an album, in my case from the year 1900. Nothing but gaps, many new issues and even more reprints meet our eyes. Poor collectors of the future! How many will have to abstain from philately because of the unavoidable cost involved. No blame will rest on the dealers, but they should take advice not to screw their prices up too much; in my view this is the greatest mistake they could make. After this well-meant advice he comes to his main concern: I fear that in this (i.e. the philately of the future) the new issue, that hybrid between real and false, between stamp and non-stamp, will play a fearsome part ... we can only prevent the increase of the issues if we dispute their equivalence with the stamps (!) and take them into our collections at best under the heading “New impressions”. Kaufmann closes his thoughts “of a serious collector” on the future of philately with the wise reflection who can know.

If we disregard the abstruse consideration of the complete destruction of stamps by “chemical preparations or the electric spark”, and the horrible idea of a “solution of oil in spirits” for “conservation” of stamps which would happily not be successful, we can break down Kaufmann’s worries into catchwords as follows; flood of stamps, conservation, the high price, the problem of new issues. At least as interesting as the problem is the questions that worried him is that of which problems he did not think worth mention: it is surprising that the problem of what are called “permanent albums”, very much to the fore then, did not bother him at all; moreover organisations (societies, etc.) obviously left him cold; it is also characteristic of the period round 1880 that preserving stamps played no part since “stamp conservation” had nothing at all to do with “preservation” in the sense of quality – we will search in vain for this word in Kaufmann. Our friend was thus not altogether a bad prophet, and we shall deal with the questions he raises in what follows, plus some more to which Kaufmann paid no attention. Moreover, I shall deal, in the second chapter also, with the development of catalogues, albums, magazines, trade societies, etc., with a brief account of everything to which a special chapter is devoted, so that I can devote myself above all to the development of stamps collecting.

In that same year broke out a quarrel which philatelists with a historical bent have kept up ever since, although the question is basically the same from the point of view of collectors or collecting methods, namely the question of whether it actually was Sir Rowland Hill who invented postage stamps, or a certain Joseph [sic.] [Actually James] Chalmers (1822-1853). In February 1881 his son, Patrick (died 1891) published the thesis that this honour was really due to his father. Whole barrels of ink have been spent on this question, with the result that fully and finally Sir Rowland has been posthumously shown by careful historical studies⁽³⁾ to be the actual inventor.

Figure 46 The painting by Constant Cap (1848-1915): The philately lesson gives a good idea of the atmosphere of the middle-class world of the late 19th century. It shows Mme Charlotte Moens and her daughter Sophie in the salon of 42 rue de Florence. On the wall is the portrait of Moens by G. Tassi from the year 1876.

In the years 1860-1878 the foundations were laid for the prosperous development of philately: the task is now to build on these foundations. The number of collectors increased considerably in the period 1878-1914 that interests us. An English calculation of the year 1904 came to a total of a clear three million collectors, a “counter-calculation” by Theodor Haas in the same year at the 16th German Philatelic Meeting in Leipzig gave “only” 1.8 million. Of course, the basis of such calculations is always questionable, but we are probably not far from the truth in assuming that at the beginning of this century there were about two to two and a half million collectors in the world. Haas started from the basis that in the year 1904, above 100,000 catalogues were sold worldwide, and about 125,000 collectors had subscribed to one or more journals, whereas the assumption was 250,000 catalogues and 185,000 subscribers to journals⁽⁴⁾.

I take it as unlikely there will be more subscribers to philatelic journals than purchasers of catalogues. However, Haas’s calculation relating to journal subscribers seem to rest on a solid knowledge of the actual numbers printed. This number must be taken as accurate, and we must thus assume higher sales figures for catalogues than Haas supposes. If we take the number of 125,000 as correct, the number of catalogues purchased must have amounted to at least 150,000. However, this is naturally just a very rough estimate, no accurate figure being available, but it does at least give us an order of size to work on for the turn of the century.

Only a tiny fraction of the – perhaps – two and a half million collectors in the year 1904 was organised: certainly not 5, probably not even 3%. For all that, the number of newly founded societies in the period we are considering increased to an unusual extent, which is easily explained by the fact that very few were started before 1878. At no time was philatelic society life more fervently celebrated than in the years round the turn of the century. Two names may be quoted as representative of all the societies started then, many of which are still in existence. The Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888, which quickly assumed the leading place amongst German philatelic societies thanks to personalities such as C. Lindenberg and Dr. F. Kalckhoff, and maintains its position today, and the Collectors Club founded in New York in 1896, which is far and away the leading collectors' society of the Western hemisphere.

In 1905 the Berlin Club founded the Lindenberg medal, the first international distinction of standing – the “Nobel prize of philately” as it was being called well before 1914. It was awarded for the first time in 1906 to four distinguished philatelists. It was in the nature of things that the societies of several countries would have national organisations at a higher state of organisation than was the case in Germany – at least to some extent – as early as 1879, assuming a broader basis in 1896. At the same time from 1889 there were annual philatelic congresses – what were called “Philatelic Days” – this example was soon followed by other countries.

Figure 47 A view of the Antwerp exhibition of the year 1887. The preponderance of glass showcases should be noted.

An essential novelty of the years 1878-1914 was the philatelic exhibitions, the first of which took place in Vienna in 1881. The first “International” was at Munich in 1884; it was followed by Antwerp 1887, London 1890, Paris 1892, etc. The wide public interest in these exhibitions contributed essentially to the extension of philately. The participation of high-ranking personages up to and including members of ruling houses, raised its social profile. This naturally applied above all to England, where the Prince of Wales, later King George V, led with a good example, but many members of the nobility also became dedicated collectors⁽⁵⁾, whereas in Germany princes and nobles scarcely came into the picture. Here philately as in practically every other country was the affair of the rising middle cases. In Germany, about 1900, philately was still rather looked down on: there was not a single “official” present at the opening of the International Exhibition in Berlin in 1904; not even the State Post Office found it necessary to send at least a postal official, whereas the International Exhibition in London in 1890 was opened by the Duke of Edinburgh. England was thus the great unattainable prototype for German philatelists⁽⁵⁾.

Figure 48 Aphilatelic Christmas and New Year card of 1890, celebrating the 50th Anniversary of Penny Postage. The portrait of Sir Rowland Hill is above that of Queen Victoria and to the left and right are the portraits of the Duke & Duchess of Edinburgh.

Amongst the leading philatelists of the time were Lord Crawford (1847-1913), The Parisian banker P. Mirabaud (1848-1908), F. Breitfuss (1851-1911), a Russian of German origin, Sir William B. Avery, Bart (1854-1908), the American William H. Crocker (1861-1937), George H. Worthington (1850-1922), John F. Seybold (1858-1909), and the prominent English art dealer Henry J. Duveen (1854-1918). The earliest name in Germany to be put alongside these is Johannes Elster (1864-1922), the long-term President of the Berlin Philatelic Club. The collections of G. Koch of Giessen or J. Lindau of Heidelberg also attained international rank without reaching the absolute peak. In Italy, the leading collector was without question Dr. Achillito Chiesa, along with Dr. Emilio Diena.

Figure 49 The firm of Benz - not then known as Mercedes-Benz - was the only Auto - Pardon: Patent Motor Car Works, that advertised in 1897 in the Fliegenden Blätter; there were many more advertisements for stamps.

Most of these people took part in the international exhibitions before 1914. However, the leading collector of all time, Philipp La Renotièrre Von Ferrary (1850-1917) never exhibited; the most important collector after Ferrary, Th. K. Tapling (1855-1891), who bequeathed his collection to the British Museum where it can still be admired, never took part in an exhibition either. Another passionate collector was George, Duke of York, who mounted the throne of Great Britain in 1910 as George V (1910-1936). He laid the foundation of the “Royal Collection” of several hundred volumes, confined to Great Britain and its possessions⁽⁶⁾.

Figure 50 An advert from the year 1894. It should not be thought that these were given away: 800 gold Reichsmarks for a Tuscany 3 lire was a lot of money, and whoever gave 700 RM for four cancelled Prussian octagonals in the small format did not get a bargain. It will also be noted that the 10Gr. Hanover was priced the same used and unused.

The stamp trade underwent continuous expansion in the stable years before the first World War: there was merely some stagnation in the last years before the turn of the century. The first stamp dealer, Stanley Gibbons Ltd., celebrated their golden jubilee – certainly a little prematurely – in the year 1906, after J.-B. Moens of Brussels had closed his business in 1900. Other well-known commercial houses of this period in addition to these two were Gelli & Tani of Brussels, Ph. Kosack (from 1890) and E. Stock (from 1889) in Berlin, M. Giwelb, H. Griebert (from 1884) and W. Peckitt of London, Ch. Whitfield King (from about 1875) in Ipswich, A. Maury, Th. Lemaire and Th. Champion in Paris, the Senf Brothers in Leipzig (from 1872), A. Larisch in Munich (from 1879), Edvard M. Ruben in Copenhagen, J. W. Scott and the Calman brothers in New York, Ch. Mekeel (from about 1880) in St. Louis, S. Friedl (from 1866) in Vienna, G. Bolaffi (from 1890) in Turin, J. Galvez (from 1886) in Madrid.

Figure 51 A humorous Christmas greeting from the year 1904.

The amount of business transacted was considerable and frequently exceeded a million marks. The amounts appearing in commerce can be worked out from the sums which leading collectors were willing to spend. Here, converted into Reichsmarks, are the sums obtained for important collections:

1878	Sir Daniel Cooper, Bart.	60,000	Australia (to Ferrary)
1882	Judge F. A. Philbrick	160,000	General collection (to Ferrary)
1889	Caillebotte Brothers	100,000	General collection
1893	Baron A. de Rothschild	120,000	General collection (to Ferrary)
1894	M. P. Castle	200,000	Australia
1897	F. W. Ayer	900,000	General collection
1897	W. W. Blest	ca. 100,000	Australia
1897	Dr. A. Legrand	200,000	General collection
1898	Th. Notthaft	ca. 140,000	General collection (to Breitfuss)
1900	M. P. Castle	500,000	Europe
1903	N. Sanabria Sr.	190,000	Principally South America but general collection
1906	R. Ehrenbach (London)	120,000	Old Germany
1906	W. W. Mann	600,000	Europe
1907	F. W. Breitfuss	over 600,000	General collection

1907	Le Roy d'Etiolles	ca.	725,000	General collection (Auction price)
1908	P. Mirabaud		240,000	Switzerland
1908	G. Koch	ca.	320,000	Old Germany (Auction price)
1909	Sir William Avery, Bart.		490,000	General collection
1913	Lord Crawford		480,000	Great Britain

Germany has little by way of contrast: in 1883 the Becker Collection in Nordhausen fetched 46,000RM and in 1894 the Winzer collection in Wiesbaden fetched 62,000RM, and was sold to Stanley Gibbons Ltd. Not till 1900 did German collections reach the six-figure level⁽⁷⁾. The great importance of the trade is witnessed also by the large number of trade address books that appeared in Germany and especially the USA (Directories). Many of these firms, such as Champion, Friedl, Galvez, Gibbons, Kosack, Lemaire, Maury, Mekeel, Moens, Scott, Senf, etc., published their own house journals, which are numbered amongst the leading philatelic journals. Auctioneering made great strides in both the USA and Europe, with London in particular taking the leading place after about 1890, when auctions had still not become widely common on the Continent.

In the meantime aids for the Collector had become firmly established, in particular albums and catalogues. From the 1880s onwards the dealers helped to equip the collector solidly. The problem of the “permanent album” so hotly discussed at the outset of philately was solved towards the end of the 19th century by the clamp or screw back binder which enabled yearly supplements to be inserted, but the major collectors used the non-pressure album, which first appeared about 1870. Since that time, catalogues have usually appeared annually at a given date and with details of prices.

Entires once formed a regular component of the catalogues, but from the end of the 19th century they first appeared in a separate volume and then were not catalogued at all. Album publishers shortly thereafter banned “cutouts” from the albums – thus meeting the wishes of collectors – and from the first decade onwards collecting entires fell into a rut and no longer gained the attention it deserves. As early as 1895 Dr. Nörgler (pseudonym used by Dr. H. Brendicke) said that entires were “now unmodern”, and in 1909 Louis Senf remarked that the collection of entires “had practically reached rock bottom”. However, it remained far more popular in Germany than in either France or Great Britain.

Philatelic literature was still in its early stages before 1878, but took a steep rise in the years before the first World War. Authors such as E. D. Bacon (1860-1938), Dr. E. Diena (1860-1941), H. Kropf (1857-1911), C. Lindenberg (1850-1928), Dr. J. Marco del Pont (1857-1917), A. de Reuterskiöld (1860-1937), to mention only a few, strove for a high level of philately. Excellent compendiums on philately came from the pens of such competent researchers as Dr. A. Legrand and Th. Haas, giving information that had all been in shadow up to that time. Nor should we forget the idiosyncratic book by Oscar Kausch on Philology in Philately. In spite of its bombastic title and affected language – he talks about “spirit and body” – it is a useful and beneficial work which deservedly went into three editions⁽⁸⁾.

Of the numerous philatelic journals of the time, Le Timbre-Poste, edited by L. Hanciau, appeared uninterruptedly in Brussels from 1863-1900 and was the leading journal. The greatest publishing success (in other words: the highest number of issues) was however Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal published by the Senf Brothers in Leipzig from 1874. It ceased publication only in 1903. Other widely distributed journals were Gibbons' Stamp Weekly in England (from 1905) and Echo de la Timbrologie in France (from 1887), whereas a more pretentious readership was obtained by Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung from Dr. H. Brendicke in Berlin (from 1890), Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal (also from 1890), the American Journal of Philately (second series from 1888), the Philatelic Record (from 1879), or the Philatelic Journal of Great Britain (from 1891).

To satisfy higher requirements, some leading societies also decided to produce their own journals. The first was the Société Française de Timbrologie in 1875; the Berliner Philatelisten-Klub of 1888 followed suit in its foundation year, but from 1890-on the Society Communications were sent only to members. However, Der Philatelist from 1880, the organ of the Dresden International Society, and the London Philatelist from 1892 put out by the London Philatelic Society – the leading philatelic journal of Great Britain to the present day – could also be subscribed to by non-members. On the whole it seems that just up to the year 1890 over 550 (!) different philatelic journals had appeared, many of which – particularly in the USA – never appeared beyond the first one or two numbers.

The most important new developments were, however, not in the field of aids to, but in styles of collecting, including how to collect. Let us first ask what Kaufmann said about the flood of stamps as early as the period round 1880, which to us looking back at it now seems a period of absolute seriousness and minimum worries about expenditure. The decades before the first World War were not nearly so serious and economical. The postal authorities knew exactly how to deal with collectors. However, they used other means than today: commemorative blocks, small sheets and similar collectors' items were not yet available, and welfare stamps (with extra charges) were total exceptions. In 1897 New South Wales issued two "Hospital Stamps" with face values of 1d and 2½d, which were issued to the public at 1 and 2½ shillings – without this being shown on the stamps – i.e. at a premium of 1,100% over the face value! This roused general indignation and people were advised – with the London Philatelist in the lead – to punish these stamps with profound dissatisfaction and contempt⁽⁹⁾, which has led to their present day high catalogue value, which is the fate of practically every call for a boycott in philately.

Table 1 All of the expensive stamps shown have roused bitter protests from collectors when they first appeared, but are now looked upon as "classics".

In any event, surcharged stamps of this kind are very uncommon. The times favoured other methods. Commemorative stamps were not very common, either. If we ignore German private posts, which were already putting out "commemorative stamps" in the later 1880s, the first truly commemorative issue was the Romanian of 1891 for the silver jubilee of King Carol I. There was a memorial series from New South Wales in 1889 to celebrate the centenary of the foundation of the Colony – the highest value was a 20 shilling stamp – but we may doubt if this is a true commemorative issue since the series was in circulation for a full ten years. The same is true for what was called the "Jubilee Issue" celebrating 50 years of the reign of Queen Victoria in 1887, since this was actually a permanent series, as is shown by the supplementary values of 1892.

In 1893, the USA put out a mammoth set in connection with the 400th anniversary of the landing of Columbus on American soil. They were very artistic in the style of the period, and the series covered 16 values from 1 cent to $5, and cost exactly $16.34 at the counter, i.e. almost 69RM in the year 1893! The outcry in the philatelic press resounded from Greenland to Tierra del Fuego, but today this issue is one of the most popular from the USA and gets the five-star treatment. America's achievement stirred Portugal to action: in 1894 and 1895 they put out two mammoth issues of 13 and 15 values in honour of Henry the Navigator and Saint Antony, but they did not enjoy the same success with dealers. In 1896, Greece put out a commemorative issue in honour of the 1st Olympiad of the modern period, which was traded under nominees for a long time – till the beginning of the first World War. In 1897, Canada put out a mammoth issue in honour of Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee which, in line with the American pattern, appeared in values of 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 dollars. Thus, when James Lyon published The Commemorative Stamps of the World in Boston in 1914 he was able to fill a book of 132 pages. However, this was not the first attempt at a survey. As early as the year 1900 Moens/Hanciau planned a 140 page book on "Jubilee, Commemorative and Anniversary Stamps" from their creation in 1876 to our time, but it never got beyond the planning stage as Moens liquidated his business in the year 1900⁽¹⁰⁾.

The above examples are enough to show that even before the first World War, people were not exactly backward at fleecing the collector. As early as 1894 Dr. Bryant invented the name "gumpaps" (gummed papers) for these little coloured slips of paper and in 1895 a Society for the Suppression of Speculative Stamps – it was christened the "4-page Society" in mockery. However, it did not have a long life, since the major dealers (Maury, Moens, Mekeel, Scott, Senf, Phillips, etc) who were originally in favour, withdrew their support after they had been angered by a call for a formal boycott of the Greek Olympiad issue of 1896. Another attempt was made in 1897, but it finished in 1899⁽¹¹⁾. It is only right for us to say, however, that the number of stamps for occasions remained within limits: states such as Germany, France and Great Britain never put any of this sort of stamp out before 1914. There were energetic campaigns against the "flood of new issues" in Germany and England.

Moreover, it was not the dealers in the first place, but rather "certain" states which were active in this direction along with some major dealers. Even Suppantschitsch noted in 1892 that many official undertakings ... were not ashamed (!) to put out entire issues simply for philatelists, and in his "Development of the Stamp Trade" Louis Senf says right out: Certain states met this modern large-scale commerce half-way or even all the way ... and thus developed a knowledge and understanding of the modern requirements of the stamp trade which is often astonishing. The commercial spirit of these states is almost amazing, since they cannot do enough as regards jubilee and special occasion series. This was written in the year 1909! The commercial proficiency of these undertakings is illustrated by the example given by Senf: in 1874 Heligoland sold its old surplus stock for 1,000RM: in 1890 it asked 70,000RM for its philatelically naturally much less interesting surplus stock, which it got⁽¹²⁾.

Although the postal authorities paid considerable attention to these occasion issues they were still not the principal source of revenue. The big money came from the unending series with enormously high face values. The German Reich with its 5RM highest value – France was satisfied with a 5 franc stamp (=4RM) – was a pattern of modesty. The USA generally went up to $5, and in Great Britain the limit lay at £1, but a £5 stamp was issued in 1885. This nominal value of 100 golden Reichsmarks is the only point of which one cannot even say that it was a speculation for philatelists. This was not the custom of the country in Great Britain. There really was a need for such a stamp in the motherland of the "Empire", comparable for example with telegraph duties.

However, with the issues for the great power in the motherland are now associated the issues for the colonies. In France it was originally rather naively thought that one issue would be enough for all colonies. Quite mistaken: the German Reich used the same design for its pfennig and mark values, but every colony had its own issue and the purchase price of what was called the “master set” of the German colonies came to 135RM. There was such a surplus it was a miserable investment for the purchaser, as this “master set” could be got for just 75RM in the year 1936 and even today – after practically 80 years – it costs about 1,500DM “post-free”.

The British colonial stamps were more fanciful in design, and the highest values frequently went up to £5 or even £10, and in special cases even up to £25 (Northern Nigeria, etc), $100 (Johore) or 500 rupees (East Africa and Uganda). As if this were not enough, values in the 1920s even went up to £50, £75 and £100 (Kenya and Uganda), $500 (Johore) and 1,000 rupees (Ceylon). We are dealing here with what is called the Straits dollar, whose value was “only” 2.33RM ($60 = £7), whilst the Indian rupee underwent violent fluctuations, but always stayed well above 1RM (ca.1.25–1.50RM), which gives an impression of the actual level of its face value.

However, we cannot speak here simply of plundering the collector, since these stamps were used practically exclusively for fiscal purposes, such as an alcohol or prospecting license, the permit to shoot an elephant, etc.: these things were paid for by means of a stamp whose inscription “Postage and Revenue” made their true purpose obvious⁽¹³⁾. They belong in a collection of revenue stamps rather than postage stamps: they lost nothing when used on letters and when they do appear on letters they are totally philatelic in origin. Beyond this, their face value was so abnormally high that the circle of interested parties was a priori very small. More money was earned from a 2½d memorial stamp in the corresponding issue.

The real philatelic nuisance of this period of time were the so-called “emergency issues” in the form of printings, so that philatelists spoke with truth of a “printing swindle”. In Germany we remained largely exempt from this mania, if we ignore the odd Vineta business for which the uninformed give five times the price today, because these frauds appear in the catalogues, cunningly entered under “German State” instead of under “Foreign Post Office” where they – in general – belong. Doberer describes this affair in his chapter on “The Vineta Swindle” which is still too polite and remarks cuttingly: if they were older they would be more genuine. Another obscure affair is that of the Iceland issues, the printers of which turned out all thinkable variations “out of good nature” to order, which led Lindenberg to talk about the “Iceland Swindle”. However, these are only two randomly chosen examples from hundreds. It is not necessary to say that these often very poorly produced issues were an invitation to forgers to put their skills into action. We need only recall – again one example from hundreds – the forgeries detected by Richard Borek Sr. of the Hellas imprint on the stamps of Crete, which the Greek dealer and forger Jean Spetsiotis put into circulation⁽¹⁵⁾.

Figure 52 the “Vineta Provisionals” always retains its full value as a leading item (Mi 67) in the German catalogues. In France, the “Isle-de-France Provisional” has recently been banned by the majority [of catalogues]; when will people in Germany follow this praiseworthy example?

A last swindle to the detriment of the collector was what is called the Seebeck Agreement. This involved the German-American Nicholas Frederick Seebeck (1857-1899) who, as a young man, was himself a stamp dealer, published his own catalogues and in 1896 was one of the founder-members of the Collectors Club of New York. In 1893 he was President for one year of the Hamilton Bank Note Co. and in the 1890s as a director he drew up an agreement with several Central American States such as Guatemala, Nicaragua, San Salvador, etc.: he supplied these states with the stamps they needed cost free on condition that there would be a new issue every year and he would have free disposal of the surplus. After Seebeck's death, Henry Calman (1863-1935) of the Scott Stamp & Coin Co. bought up the remainder of the surplus: there were over 90 million (!) stamps of which he still had a trifling 35 million in stock in 1917 when they fell into the hands of Bela Szekula⁽¹⁶⁾. The market was thus swamped with enormous numbers of unused stamps from these states – some naturally with high face values, which not unnaturally led European collectors to forego the pleasure of issues from South and Central America. It may be said in passing that letters with the high values of the Seebeck issues are sought after rarities, since their actual use was naturally extremely small.

Figure 53 These are some examples of the notorious Seebeck issues with which N. F. Seebeck flooded the market and thus dealt a death-blow to the previous high popularity of the states of South and Central America with European collectors.

We can see that it would be completely mistaken to look on the period 1878-1914 as a time of lost paradise. There were never more forgeries than then and there is no doubt that dealers were less scrupulous then than today. If we are still inclined to think of the issues from those years as “classics”, this only means that the policy behind the issues of the following years was still more impudent, and the attack on the pockets of collectors was still more shameless than in the simple years we are dealing with here. The Frenchman, V. Fremy⁽¹⁷⁾ has calculated that up to the year 1913, i.e. the end of this period, a total of 27,784 postage, service, revenue and telegraph stamps were issued. This strikes us as very modest and an indication of the political stability of those years: the contemporary period strikes us as quite frightful, on the other hand.

In fact, the Senf catalogue for the year 1913 already runs to 1,311 pages of text. This is not surprising, as the trade of certain “facsimile producers”, such as Fr. Fournier of Ghent, to name the most important, was in full flower: anyone still issuing forgeries is guilty of a crime. The war against the sale of facsimiles was carried on above all by the dealers: collectors had not yet decided what line to pursue. Before the turn of the century, facsimile producers were given gold medals and prizes of honour at a number of exhibitions, though they did not always admit they were facsimiles. Not till after the First World War did collectors and dealers form a unified defensive front.

In view of this far from rosy situation for collectors, the anxious question “where will this lead?” – this was the title of a paper by Paul Schardey of Vienna at the 18th German Philatelic Meeting at Nuremberg – expresses the worries of a majority of collectors. The general collection was still the ideal of most of them, but it was just an ideal, i.e. unattainable. In his paper The new direction, Ed. v. Neulinger states plainly: “Trying to collect everything today is simply a weakness of the brain”. It is thus generally agreed that a general collection can only be possible for a few very rich people: the motto of the time thus became “specialisation”. The question then became what exactly this meant. In 1885 the Philatelic Record made a few concrete suggestions such as: Great Britain and colonies, Spain and colonies, Italy including the old states, Germany and the whole Teutonic race, a fantasia that covered the old German States, the colonies, Austria and Switzerland, Asia, North America, South America, etc. To present-day eyes this sort of “specialisation” would make a collector’s hair stand on end, but in those days it was realistic and was repeated again by Lindenberg in 1905⁽¹⁸⁾. In 1887 the society Philatelia in Mährisch-Ostrau in its Festschrift to celebrate its third anniversary, took 18 pages to answer the question “From the philatelic standpoint, are special collections admissible, what should they consist of, and how does one go about planning them?”

Special collections appeared in the middle of the 1880s; in the foreword to his “Price Index” of 1888, Anselm Larisch remarked that German philatelists “have recently taken to a certain special collection: the thing is to start with Europe but complete the Old German States”. In 1895 Dr. Nörgler (pseudonym of Dr. H. Brendicke) was already talking of the “passion for collecting only Old Germany”, and in 1911 A. Wülbern complained that “Europe” and still more “German States” had simply become an illness⁽¹⁹⁾. This illustrates the reverse side of the medal: specialisation means narrowing. In 1885 Dr. Emil Pfeiffer wrote “On the limits on stamp collecting”: he thought that only the collection of used stamps had any meaning, unused ones were the same as facsimiles (!) and just useful for filling gaps. The collection of entires and stamps should be differentiated – naturally stamps on letters are not involved. Forms, receipts, etc., belong in a “postal collection”. Misprints are “curiosa” and hardly worth collecting⁽²⁰⁾.

The result was that the collection of unused stamps fell off sharply – at least in Germany. Not till dealers like Richard Borek Sr., began to push subscriptions to new issues – unused of course – and met with considerable success before the First World War, did the collection of unused stamps come back into favour. Another consequence was that people now tended to collect their own country: when “Europe” rated high, they lost interest in the rest of the world. The earlier rule was the more distant a country is, the more desirable – and therefore the dearer – will its stamps be. Hans v. Zobeltitz reports from the year 1883 that an exchange packet contained a whole sheet of the green 2 shilling Swedish stamp – priced at 75 pfennings (!). Not a single one had been taken out, whereas not a single stamp from El Salvador and Guatemala was left in the packet⁽²¹⁾. This would certainly not have happened ten years later.

The trend towards increasingly narrow specialisation developed with extraordinary speed. We can speak of the first onset in 1885, but twenty years later at the London Exhibition of 1906 Kosack believed that “the high point of special collecting” had been reached and “further progress was hardly possible”. There were even attempts to warn against excesses. Max Ton censures a Mecklenburg collection which struck him as too specialised, and is also annoyed by a “senior teacher” (member of an educational council) who has “completely filled 15 volumes with cancellations and other extravagances [sic.]” from Thurn and Taxis and has thus withdrawn this material from commerce [sic.]. His angry meaning was: “some common sense was needed here”⁽²²⁾. The market very quickly adapted to the new trend. The first specialised catalogues appeared well before the turn of the century, and specialised albums were naturally not very far behind.

This increasing specialisation with which Ton, as we have seen, showed no sympathy at all, now led to the study of cancellations which until then had been a fringe subject in philately. In fact, as early as June 1863 Henry Whympers published an article on “English and American postal defacement marks”, and in 1871 the well-known Don Mariano Pardo de Figueroa (Dr.

Thebussem) submitted – for once under his real name – an article to the London Philatelic Society on Spanish postal cancellations. This was translated into English by its secretary V. de Ysasi under the title Obliteration Marks Mata-sellos, on Spanish (Postage) Stamps. Private printings of this are available from the years 1871 and 1873. V. Suppantschitsch also wrote as early as 1880 on this branch of collecting, for which Adolf Reinheimer (1843-1910) suggested the horrible name “Sphragiphilie” [Translator’s note: Based on the word for a seal.], probably on the basis that a topic will have all the more success if it has an exotic name⁽²³⁾. Luckily it remained a suggestion. Reinheimer also produced the watercolour of the Vandermaelen Museum (Figure 4), and he was also responsible for the “Triumphal Progress of Philately” that raised a furore at the tenth meeting of the Dresden International Society in the year 1887.

Figure 54 This is from A. Reinheimer, produced for the 10th Anniversary of the Dresden International Society, it could be ordered for RM1.25 from the firm of E. Heitmann: the “Commentary” cost another 25pfg. The placards carried by the people represent Sections of the International Society.

The study of cancellations was undertaken in Germany above all: as early as 1891 the Reinheimer mentioned above had published his “Catalogue of the types of German cancellations from 1849 to 1875”, followed in 1894 by an “Illustrated price catalogue of the types of German postal cancellations”. In 1893 Arthur E. Glasewald published his “Cancellations on the stamps of the Thurn and Taxis postal region”, whilst the ice was broken in Switzerland by Otto Pfenninger with his little pamphlet “Cantonal and Swiss Postal Cancellations from the Years 1850-54” of 1891. On the other hand, A. Maury only published his “Descriptive catalogue of all the postmarks of France” in 1898⁽²⁴⁾.

However, Suppantschitsch is right in claiming that “the German (literature) earns the merit of taking up and developing the study of cancellations in a systematic manner”. Right to the present day cancellations remain a favoured field of research for German and French speaking philatelists. It is no accident that to the best of my knowledge the first purely cancellation collection was shown at an international exhibition in Ghent in 1896, and cancellations were given a class of their own for the first time in Berne in 1910. As early as 1892 Suppantschitsch noted that “pre-philatelic postmarks, franks, receipts, hand cancellations, prepaid cancellations, etc.” that rouse the interest of philatelic science “are taken up almost exclusively by Germans”.

Another two specialist subjects remain to be dealt with here. The first dates from the period before the First World War, the second came into prominence after the Second. These are aerophilately and thematic philately. There is not much to say about aerophilately: it was still only beginning. However, the first postal flights had taken place before the First World War, in 1911 to be exact but, of course, there was no question yet of fixed postal routes.

However we must mention a paper given in the year 1874 to the Berlin Scientific Society on the subject “World post and airship travel”! The speaker was Dr. Heinrich Stephan (1831-1897) who was Postmaster-General from 1870 (the title later became State Secretary of the Reich Post Office); this corresponded to the Reich Minister of Posts after 1918. Stephan, who was of noble origin, was almost clairvoyant in predicting the future importance of air travel: he even spoke of rocket mail. This paper may not have a direct connection with aerophilately but it did serve as a “forerunner” and so deserves an honourable mention.

Vignettes, e.g. of Regensburg 1912 were sold above all in Germany and Switzerland to finance flight days, but these were denoted “dangerous publications” against the purchase of which local philatelic societies were expressly warned. Only the balloon post during the siege of Paris in 1870 found favour in the eyes of philatelists. There was no catalogue and as good as no literature. This is quite surprising as airmail collections were shown well before the First World War: in 1913 at the New York International, and in 1914 at a National in Berne – and were given prizes in the second case least⁽²⁶⁾.

We are much better informed about the origins of thematic philately or, to be more precise, about the origins of what later became thematic philately, as there is naturally no information about thematic philately in the strict sense. We have seen that as early as 1878 Bosredon divided the existing stamps into subject groups according to the picture they carried, although he did not intend this classification to act as a possible division for collecting purposes. However, in 1892 Georges Lesourd showed a collection divided according to “motif” at the Paris Exhibition of that year, and in the mid-West in 1900 a collection with zoological motifs was exhibited and given a three column report in Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News. In 1894, a certain Rudolf Caspart, whom we have just come across, published a study “On Portraits on the Stamps of the South American Republics”, which can be looked on as a sort of “forerunner” of the new trend.

In 1902, two papers appeared at the same time in the Philatelic Journal of India. In one, the editor of the journal described the various possibilities for the systematic arrangement of a collection: by no means did he limit himself to Indian philately. As one of a number of possibilities (perforation, watermark, trials, etc.), he mentions arrangement by the subject of the stamp. However he makes it plain he does not like this form of arrangement, whereas the second paper inclines very definitely in this direction, and deals with “The Zoology of Philately”. In 1905, H. R. Oldfield wrote an article in Gibbons Stamp Weekly on “By-paths of philately: Picture stamps and methods of arrangement”, in which he points out the various possible means of arranging the “picture stamps” by subject groups, but finally states that “Of course, it is only a by-path”, which he looks on as a quite nice supplement to a normal collection by countries. In the following year, Bertram H. W. Poole published a frequently quoted paper on “The Philatelist's Zoo” in the same magazine⁽²⁸⁾.

It was noted that this type of article appeared in the Weekly, the popular magazine aimed at the little man by Stanley Gibbons Ltd., whereas the much more serious Monthly was not interested in this kind of contribution. It was the pair of similar magazines Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News and Gibbons Stamp Weekly that published a number of articles of this type during the period 1904-1907, including such things as religious symbols on stamps⁽²⁹⁾. No attention at all has been paid so far to the contribution made to the 21st German Philatelic Meeting at Karlsbad in 1909 by R. Caspart – the same Caspart who in 1894 tried to interest German philatelists in the heads of South American freedom fighters and presidents. This was “On systematic type collecting” and in my opinion represents a first attempt at a theoretical basis for a thematic collection. The paper is so humorous – a quality unfortunately completely lacking to the thematic collectors of our own day – that an extract from it at least deserves a place here⁽³⁰⁾:

Gentlemen, good-day! I bring you my greetings – from the Tyrol. Just now it is the Andreas Hoffer celebration and our old Emperor is with us. The others are coming along, all us

Innsbruckers stick together, so that a Tyrolese can never lie!

I want to show you a new type of collecting, which has put itself forward. It is now quite a while since I was a little lad, but I have never forgotten how important postage rates are to stamp collectors. Is it really so important how much a letter cost to post in individual years, countries and distances? What a colossal number of stamps must be collected on account of postage taxes and their alterations.

But who collects everything? Who today is a general collector? There are two gentlemen whose collection is the size of a library and is managed by a secretary (He means Ferrary: Note: Brühl). All other collectors specialize. First of all, entires are knocked out, although there is no reason for this, then collections are taken up to a certain year of issue or to 1900. Other people collect only Europe, or only one single country, or only what are called the "Classic Stamps" (published in a year which the present generation chooses to call the old classics). But then come the true specialists. I, who wish to bring in a new system, give respectful greetings to the older systems: my compliments, messrs. the block paperhanger and plate reconstructor! My compliments; messrs. the perforation mathematicians! My compliments, messrs. the x-radiators of watermarks, shade detectors, overprint geometers, poste-restante recorders, cancellation astronomers, middle-piece gymnasts and defective-print detectors! I only ask you to give me a place in the corner, I am the type fellow.

When I began to arrange my collection by types more than 70 years ago, nobody wanted to listen to me, and albums had simply the purest skeleton arrangements, since there was often only one stamp to a page. There was only one bird: the Basle dove, only one beast, the Canadian beaver. However, since then all the countries of the world have supplied recruits for my skeleton collection. I will give you an ocular demonstration afterwards. There are two types of collector, those who collect just to collect, and those who collect to learn. The first category is much more common than the second. Hence, most collectors know perfectly well that in 1876 there was an Argentinian issue, green, with the head to the left, such and such a value, such and such perforations, with watermark XY on thick and thin paper: quite a few will even put a name to the head (we called the American black Second Jackson head the minor head in lower school), but practically nobody cared who the man actually was, or in the case of a landscape, what mountain or bay is depicted. And yet the authorities who issue the stamps, who want their tiny works of art to show what beautiful and noteworthy things there are in their country, who were the founders of their state, depicted with skill.

"So you collect copper-plate engravings" a leading philatelist recently said to me. He collects whole strips of stamps (which is also known as type collecting). I would have liked to answer him: do you collect mosaics; but you can't say this to an Excellency since it would not be polite. So I had to swallow it. If every fool has his fools' cap, just leave me mine. There will be a whole corps wearing the same before long. One type of collecting will not displace the other. I am not trying to overturn anything but only to get my system accepted along with the others. Along with a systematic type collection, one can make a gorgeous collection of a single country.

By type I mean the picture shown on a stamp, since calling it a "representation collection" sounds awkward, and "collection of picture stamps" sounds too much like a picture book for children(!). A small quite incomplete picture book planned for children has actually already been produced: countries together, animals together, portraits together. These were arranged as follows: heads to the right, heads to the left, heads with moustaches, heads with beards, bald heads, heads with a luxuriant growth of hair. Hence a forerunner.

I shall now go on to my own system. I will start by saying that the headings to the album pages have only been stuck on for today – for demonstration – and would otherwise be omitted since every text looks unpleasant in an album (sic!). I divide my collection into three main sections: (A) Countries and folk art; (B) History; (C) Numeral and inscription stamps.

Under “countries and folk art” I distinguish a) geography, b) plants and animals, c) man and his life. Geography begins with stars plus maps, follows with landscape and buildings. I have brought you three sheets of landscapes. On Sheet 1 you will see European landscapes; the Hofburg and the Gloriette in Vienna, the main Post Offices in Berlin and Stockholm, the Kremlin. On Sheet 2, African landscapes in French Senegal, native villages in Liberia, native villages under palm trees in the Congo wilderness and views on the Isle of St. Helena. On Sheet 3, ocean landscapes from the Solomon Islands and New Caledonia. Amongst the most beautiful stamps stuck in belong to the charming landscapes of the Isle of Tonga, and the views of New Zealand are almost as beautiful. The plants and animals are obviously arranged scientifically. I show the second sheet of the mammals. You will see pachyderms with an unequal number of toes (tapir, rhinoceros), proboscians (elephants), web-footed beasts (seals), etc.

And in conclusion let me make a request; if anyone is interested in my ideas, please write to me at the courthouse, Salzburg. We can then work together. And if the subject meets with approbation, I will ask the scientific section of the Commission to take in hand the editing of the textbook, the rough draft of which I will gladly supply. Suggestions for changes in the classification and contributions to the text will be gratefully received, and I think a publisher might then be willing to accept it.

There are many gentlefolk for whom collecting by the new method has passed right over the head, who have embalmed their collections in boredom, will turn their back to us; others who have shuddered at the mass of material, will turn towards us under this system – to us, a group of scientific collectors(!). Thank you.

Figure 55 This amusing “Lexicon” of philatelic expressions was in fashion about 1900: Imperforate; Unused; Defective perforation; Transfixed; Perforated; Used; Cut-out; Good example; Forgery.

The first point to deduce from these humorous remarks is that Caspart must be listed along with Lesourd as one of the first motif collectors, since he must have started his collection as early as 1890. However, although he writes humourously, he takes the subject extremely seriously. What was for Oldfield of course a “by-path” is for him just as naturally a science. A German (pardon: Austrian) who does not treat a subject “scientifically” is just no such thing. Caspart, by profession an agent for a well known Royal and Imperial insurance company, was a member of the “Scientific Group” of the German Philatelic Days. In later years he also published papers on his range of interests, which are usually fun to read. Over and above this it was he who along with Hugo Krötzsch in 1910 took the first steps in persuading the government of the Duchy of Liechtenstein to introduce their own stamps⁽³¹⁾.

The concluding section of Caspart’s paper is also informative: he intends his “type collecting” to attract collectors back to philately who had drifted away because of the “flood of stamps”, the tiresome surcharged stamps, etc. These represent a real threat to philately, though it is another question whether Caspart’s system could ban these. I have deliberately concerned myself rather with the early days of thematic philately, since it has received little attention so far. I am led more and more to the conclusion that this form of collecting was looked on at best as a curiosity in the years before the First World War, or a childish pastime which serious philatelists will pass over with a shrug of the shoulders.

I would gladly go here also into the theoretical basis for the start of research into postal history but, unfortunately, the literature leaves us totally in the lurch. The paper by H. V. Cappeln “Philately as an aid to history” is a great disappointment in this respect. The author goes on 999 times about the oh-so-scientific character of philately and goes into boring geographical-historical explanations, but is not an advocate for a way of looking at postal history such as we might have expected from him. On the other hand, a distinguished philatelic researcher of the status of Dr. José Marcó del Pont has already dealt in a classical manner with postal history. We should not forget either that as early as 1881 Alfred Moschkau showed a “postal history” collection at the Vienna Exhibition. This was a postal documentation of the Franco-German war of 1870/71⁽³²⁾.

Much more important, and the second historically important development of these years after the trend toward specialisation, is the new feeling for quality, which naturally accompanied the wave of specialisation. For instance, anyone who collected the whole world could hardly afford to be very “picky” and to have “the whole world in blocks of four” was quite unthinkable. Here again, a deep-rooted change came about in the 1890s. In 1880 Viktor Suppantshitsch pleaded in his “guidelines” for the good preservation of stamps. However, in the same breath he writes that one can be a little more free as regards rarities: there can be an example where one or other corner or a piece from the middle(!) is missing. As a rule he goes on recommending sticking stamps down, even though they are only lightly touched with adhesive; only in the case of valuable stamps does a little piece of paper seem advisable as an intermediate⁽³³⁾. This is confirmed by the reminiscences of Kalckhoff, according to which the adhesive trip had its triumph first in the 1880s. However, the Écho de la Timbrologie published as late as 1908 an article with illustrations (!) on “the art of sticking in a strip”, with the informative statement that 97 out of 100 collectors have unfortunately not yet mastered this “art”⁽³⁴⁾.

People also concerned themselves then with the original adhesive. In 1894 Dr. Legrand advised leaving the original adhesive on the stamps, which means that this was not an obvious thing to do. In fact, Jacopo Gelli recommended the opposite in his “Philatelic Dictionary” of 1898, and also found it necessary to advise against cutting off the perforations! Lindenberg also allowed the adhesive to be removed from the collection in the Reich Postal Museum, a precaution for which Ph. Kosack defended him against a number of critics in his obituary of 1928⁽³⁵⁾. That there were other points of view is shown by a delightful satire in the The American Journal of Philately in 1896 (!) in which S. C. Offer took aim at the adhesive folly of certain fanatics, who must have made their views known beforehand.

A member of the twice-weekly original Adhesive Club was expelled because he refused to remove an unused Mauritius Post Office, without adhesive from his collection. Russia is said to be bringing out a new issue of coronation stamps every value of which will have a different adhesive. The President of the club, a professor, keeps his treasures between glass plates so that the reverse side can be admired as well(!) The heavy glass plates recently hit the Professor's step-mother on the head and hurt her so badly that she is not expected to recover: consequently several members have decided to adopt this form of preservation for their own collections, etc.

In 1906 Charles Phillips states that he thinks good centring more important than original gum, and publishes a five-verse poem which the American auctioneers R. R. Bogert and L. W. Durbin published in Philatelic Monthly under the title Original Gum, and three verses at least will be given here⁽³⁶⁾:

- (1) In point of condition, it need not be said
That a stamp's never better than when it just made
And even at that time there are only some
"Well centered", though all have "original gum"
- (3) The gum on the best of them crinkles and cracks,
And all sorts of matters stick fast to their backs,
So 'tis not long before most of those have becomes
"Well centered", but lacking "original gum"
- (5) I like all my stamps to be fine as a fiddle,
And vastly prefer them set well in the middle,
And am free to confess that I don't care a "dum"
If they have, or have not, "original gum"

Figure 56 Charles J. Phillips (1863-1940)

Owner of the firm of Stanley Gibbons Ltd. (since 1890), was one of the leading philatelists of the years before the First World War. (Photograph from the years about 1895).

It is all the more astonishing to find a sentence in Ewen's Weekly Stamp News of 23rd December 1905: "all mint unused condition, well centred full gum (never mounted)". This must be the first mention in a dealer's offer of a "post-fresh" condition, as J. B. Marriott rightly supposes. All earlier considerations can be best subsumed under the catchwords "Stamp conservation"⁽³⁷⁾. The point here is not the quality of the individual stamps, but the best way of conserving them. The 1890s were decisive for the future of philately, but development did not stop there.

Figure 57 Robert Ehrenbach of London, owned an outstanding Old Germany collection and was one of the earliest champions of the collection of singles and blocks. (Photograph from the years before 1887.)

Hand in hand with the more careful treatment and preservation of stamps went a need for higher quality. Stamps had to be trimmed widely or the perforations immaculate, show no thin patches but good centring, uncanceled and fresh-coloured. This was the "New School" of which Colson speaks with the greatest respect⁽³⁸⁾. They did not look only for top quality – Paul Mirabaud was one of the earliest campaigners for this demanding type of collecting, they were also enthusiastic about details such as blocks of four, selvedge, etc. Lord Crawford, the then Prince of Wales and later King George V were distinguished adherents of this type of collecting, which was propagated by Robert Ehrenbach well before the turn of the century⁽³⁹⁾.

In 1988 Dr. Pfeiffer expressly warned against this style: collectors of the old guard such as Ferrary, Tapling or Breitfuss stood out against the new ideals.

Finally, the letter came into its own. As early as 1893 O. G. Neidhard, in a paper to the 5th German Philatelic Meeting in Berlin, dealing with “The collection of stamps on letters”, and Ernst Stock offered franked entires in his 1891 advertisements. Also at this time the English rarities dealer M. Giwelb offered letters, and between 1896 and 1906 W. T. Wilson published three editions of a Priced Catalogue of a Collection of Stamps on Original Covers. One of the first collectors was the American John F. Seybold who also had a dubious-quality collection “on letters”. His collection came under the hammer in New York in 1910 and was found to contain forgeries! Collecting “on letters” rapidly gained very wide acceptance but it was still thought of as indelicate to enrich a stamp collection with letters. Stamps and letters were for a long time two separate things, which had to be shown in different classes at exhibitions – even as late as the Berlin IPOSTA of 1930!

The growing interest in cancellations, which I have already mentioned, was naturally accompanied by an increase in reviews of what are called courtesy cancellations whose suitability for collection was for a long time in dispute⁽⁴⁷⁾. The Senf catalogue of 1913 had its own section for courtesy cancellations, as required in 1911 for the 17th Ring meeting (of the Germania-Ring) and the 15th German Collectors’ Day in Kassel. This section was not, however, universally accepted, which would have been pointless, but only for stamps which had been given mainly courtesy cancellations. The new development was naturally not unproblematic. The rising interest in stamps led some adroit dealers or collectors to “beautify” their stamps. Their methods were originally very primitive, but they quickly refined their techniques and gave rise to the profession of stamp repairer which, in the early years, went hand in hand with the stamp forger.

The new development called, however, for the greatest care from the trade. Collectors were more demanding, more aware of quality but were not willing to meet their higher requirements with higher prices. Just as the post-fresh wave led to a grotesque down-grading of stamps with a fold, so the new quality wave led to a sharp devaluation of average material that had been looked on as of full value till then. The resulting loss in value led dealers to try and recoup by higher prices for their top material, which collectors – quite wrongly – found shocking. The antagonism between collectors and dealers, which often came almost to open warfare, faded out as far as I know in the years before the First World War.

Figure 58 P. Kosack used this sheet in 1908 to explain his ideas on quality. The highest quality designation is “luxury”. The relatively small differences in price will be noted. Those that Kosack simply calls “beautiful” here would at least be “super-luxury” in modern auction catalogues.

There was not even help from calls to reason. In the fourth year of the Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung a certain Herr Flatterer wrote a paper called “Preservation and Beauty”, which was immediately reprinted by the Écho de la Timbrologie⁽⁴³⁾. This gave quite sensible advice, such as only buying damaged stamps when they are very cheap: otherwise, however, the paper is as expected, a plea for the less beautiful stamps of average quality. To make his meaning clear, Kosack has not avoided prices and has given an excellent table of photographs in which he illustrates his quality concepts with data on price. The price ratio of “damaged” to “Luxury” is about 1:5.5, of “magnificent-edged” to “cabinet letter” – I use the modern terminology – is only 1:3, between “trimmed” and “luxury corner edge piece” not quite 1:8. Kosack’s aim was naturally to promote the purchase of the cheap items. I do not know if he was successful at the time, but would doubt it. Today the cheap items could probably only be disposed of to non-collectors and the ratio of the cabinet and luxury items would be much greater, about 1:20 – 1:50!

A few months later Louis Senf wrote in the Post under the title “Unperforated, wide-edged, Cabinet letter piece” that there was no end of the bother⁽⁴⁴⁾: “For over a year (!) a cry of distress has risen from the whole dealer world about these mottoes ... a certain class of awkward collectors” will only buy “cabinet pieces, luxury pieces, salon pieces, etc” – the terms “luxus” and “super-luxus” had not yet been discovered – and “even irradiation with lamps was undertaken”. Senf always concedes that “torn stamps are naturally to be excluded”, but for the general sale we need “not be so strict about cancellations”. Hugo Michel, whose catalogues were in the vanguard in Germany, wrote in 1913 a very angry article about the “snobbism” of collectors. He raged against “fashionable phenomena” such as original gum, singles, letters; Old Germany is now almost unobtainable, etc.”⁽⁴⁵⁾. The article could be written today, nothing would need alteration.

We must now consider some marginal matters which the philatelist looks on with pity, with forbearance, and sometimes also with serenity. That stamp collecting is a violent passion that does not even shrink from murder was shown by two notorious Parisian criminal cases of the years 1892 and 1896. “The philatelist Aubert” – this was the title of a book in a series about famous murders – murdered the young dealer Julien Emile Delahaeff to get hold of a collection he had bought shortly before. A still greater sensation was caused in 1892 by the murder of the well-known philatelist Gaston Leroux: there was apparently nothing missing from the murdered man’s dwelling: large amounts of money, valuable coins, etc., had not been touched. An observant criminal officer finally realised that the most valuable item in Leroux’s collection, a 2cent Hawaii from the 1851 issue was missing. This put him on the track of the murderer, a certain Hector Giroux who, after his arrest, remained unconcerned, and in his own defence before the Court simply stated that he could not go on living without this stamp⁽⁴⁶⁾.

“Stamp portraits” and “stamp paintings” had by no means died out, they were shown at exhibitions and awarded prizes⁽⁴⁷⁾. In the 1890s blow-ups of this kind of thing were used as an exotic attraction in hotels, railway restaurants, etc. In Leipzig about 1890 one could admire a “stamp painting” shown by Kaiser Wilhelm I, the King of Saxony, Bismarck and “Germania”. At the same time the Eden Hotel in Basle had a room decorated with 800,000 stamps. Many stamp dealers decorated their premises with postage-stamps: unfortunately, practically all of them have disappeared today: one of the few survivors could be seen recently in the firm of Maury in Paris⁽⁴⁸⁾.

Music also embraced philately with marches, waltzes and similar tunes – philately has been spared a symphony so far – but the great uproar of the 1860s had passed, and it would not be worth the trouble of enumerating here the composers of these “immortal” melodies. Literary activity was also marginal. It kept to the style of the popular philatelic magazines of the day, supplying tales of modestly romantic or harmlessly criminal types guaranteed to have a happy ending, in which the words philately and stamps occurred three times at least in each. Since Karl May never tried his hand at this genre, there is no prospect of their being excavated from the past.

However, one work does deserve a mention here: namely the widely-read novel by Georges de Beauregard & Henri de Gorsse (pseudonyms): The King of the Postage Stamp. This was published in Paris in 1898, and was at once translated into English⁽⁴⁹⁾, though it also enjoyed great popularity in Germany. The philatelic lyric bloomed in great profusion as there was hardly a Society meeting at which the white-clad little daughter of the President failed to recite at least two poems. There is still a wide field for German research. I will restrict myself to a morsel from a volume of poetry dedicated to Viktor Suppantschitsch, that also contains two English poems. The poem by Anonymous is called “Philatelical Sighs”⁽⁵⁰⁾:

What is Newfoundland’s flower chalice
With all forged clips
Against your rosy mouth
And your rosy lips

What is the sun of Peru?
What are Bolivia’s stars
They glow and glimmer just for you
Sweet-gazing from afar

You yourself are a rarity
You my dear benumber
For you, you rare variety
Moschkau has no number

You would well my pain apprise
If I could catch your eye
If you looked into my streaming eyes
A “watermark” you’d espy

It is not easy to give a summary appraisal of the years 1878-1914. They were definitely not a philatelic “Garden of Eden” but in this period of time the switch was made to the modern development of philately, and philatelic science in the full sense of the word was founded. On the whole though we may claim that in spite of all the negative aspects, of which there was no shortage, philately never had a time of greater blooming than in the decades before the First World War. Even though the famous music critic Ed. Hanslick said in the 1890s that he could understand any passion for collecting apart from that for stamp collecting⁽⁵¹⁾, there is no doubt that philately was the number one hobby in the world before the First World War.

Notes to Chapter 4

1. Illustrirtes Briefmarken-Journal, 1879, Volume 6, No. 11, pp.78-79.
2. The person meant is the important philatelist Ferdinand Meyer (with an e) who was closely connected by friendship with V. Suppantschitsch, and died young in December 1882. He was the author of a work on Afghanistan which was also translated into French, but above all he was the editor of a “Handbuch” (Catalogue) much used in the - 1880s. See 19 below and Chapter 17, p.644 with note 83; Chapter 20, p.902 with note 69, see also Suppantchitsch History, p.100.

3. See in particular Howard Robinson: The British Post Office. A History (London-Princeton/N.J., 1948, 1970 reprint), pp. 310-313, see also Williams, Philately (No. 3502) pp.123, 125.
 4. Haas, Diffusion, pp.25-27. See below Chapter 17, p.651 with notes 95-96.
 5. Cf. Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung (1906), Volume 2 No. 11, p.241. For Great Britain see Charles Phillips in: Philatelic Classics, No. 2 (April 1927), p.17, which names amongst others the Earl of Crawford, the Earl of Kingston – both were presidents of the London or Royal Philatelic Society – the Marquis of Ripon (better known as Earl de Grey), the Marquis of Bute and Lord Kintore.
 6. For Ferrary, Breitfuss and George V see below Chapter 6, paragraphs 1-3. For Lord Crawford see below Chapter 22, pp.1016-18 and notes 8-9. See further Charles Phillips: Paul Mirabaud. One of the leading French collectors in: Stamps (1933), Volume 3 No. 30, pp.45-46. For Worthington see Good, p.47-ff and Bierman, pp.98-113. For Sir William Avery, Duveen and Crocker see Bierman, pp.79-87, 88-97, 114-123. See also under Chapter 10, pp. 394 ff.
 7. According to a survey in Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, (1904), Volume 31, 603, p.68 (with its own supplements, etc., by H. Hunziker, Basle).
 8. 1866⁽¹⁾, 1894⁽³⁾: Crawford Catalogue, column 208. Kausch dealt first with the appearance of the various languages on postage stamps, and then gave a sort of lexicon of scientific philatelic language in a “Dictionary” (p.97 ff.), which is still consulted with interest today. For the works of Dr. Legrand and Haas see above p.69 with note 15. For Lindenberg, Marcó del Pont, Diena and Bacon see below Chapter 21, paragraphs 1-4. For the works of H. Kropf and A. de Reuterskiöld see below Chapter 21, paragraph 7, p.987, note 10; Chapter 20, p.901 with notes 62-63.
 9. The London Philatelist, 1897, Volume 6, No. 68, pp.235-236; See L. N. & M. Williams, pp.211-212; Doberer: Cultural history, pp.77-78.
 10. Leclerq-Waroquiers, p.19, No. 126: See also L. N. & M. Williams, pp.190-92; Doberer: Cultural history, pp.74-77, and kind communication from H. Hunziker, Basle, of 8 II 1981.
 11. John Geise: Pseudopostals and Philately., The American Philatelist, (1980), Volume 94, No. 12, pp.1111-1118, especially pages 1114-1117. See also The London Philatelist, (1893) Volume 4, No. 41, pp.121-122, 134-138, etc. The “revolt” of the dealers began in 1897: the attempt at pursuit by collectors alone soon failed. Geise, above, p.1113 also gives interesting statistics about the number of States who issued charity stamps for the first time: there were just three in the decade 1891-1901, six in 1902-11, but as many as 81 in 1912 to 1921, and another 56 in the following decade. Lindenberg (see note 18) would have like a new SSSS-Society in 1905. See below, Chapter 17, p.639 and Note 65.
 12. Phillip KOSACK: “Behind the scenes of the stamp trade” in Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung (1906) Volume 2, No. 9, pp.197-200, especially p.198. Also Louis Senf: “The development of the stamp Trade” in Die Post, (1909), Volume 16, No. 8, pp.116-118, No. 10, pp.153-154; No. 12, pp.183-186, especially pp.185-186. See also Suppantchitsch, History, p.47-48 and A. A. Bartlett The future., The London Philatelist, (1897), Volume 8, No. 70, p.278-279, who, with some justification, holds the USA and Canada with their issues of 1894 and 1897 responsible for this unhealthy development.

13. See The Encyclopædia of British Stamps., Vol. II, The Empire in Africa., (London, 1949), pp.192, 195, 314 with note to No. 13, Vol. III The Empire in Asia., London, 1951, pp.114, 358, 363, 364.
14. See Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1904), Volume 15, No. 9, p.122; (1905), Volume 16, No. 1, p.4. See also (Dr. Hans Brendicke) "The overprint surcharge swindle" in Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1892/93), Volume 3, No. 3, pp.33-34. See also Suppantschitsch "History", p.47. The Vineta story can be found in Doberer "Cultural History", pp.198-200.
15. Franz Kutscha: "The Hellas surcharge overprint on the stamps of Crete; their forgeries and forgers" and Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1909), Volume 20, No. 9, pp.134-135 and (1910), Volume 21, No. 3, pp.40-43; No. 4, pp.55-60. See also Die Post, (1910), Volume 17, No. 4, pp.51-53, No. 8, p.124 and Tyler, p.45.
16. For Seebeck see Crawford Catalogue, column 348 (catalogues of 1876 and 1882) and The Collectors Club Philatelist (1940), Volume 19, p.275; (1946), Volume 25, No. 2, p.60; Irving J. Green: That man Seebeck., 12th American Philatelic Congress Book, Boston (1946), pp.140-56; Balasse Magazine, (1980), No. 253, pp.255-256. See finally Joseph D. Hahn & Joseph M. Sousa: El Salvador. The Seebeck stamps, Part I. The issues of 1890 to 1895., 43rd American Philatelic Congress Book, Chicago, IL, (1977), pp.11-37. Part II. The issues of 1896 to 1899., 44th American Philatelic Congress Book, Kansas City, MO, (1978), pp.7-33. See also Ch. J. Phillips: How the market absorbs millions of stamps., The Collectors Club Philatelist (1940), Volume 19, No. 4, pp.271-283.
17. Quoted from de Rothschild, pp.26-27.
18. The Philatelic Record (1885), Volume 7, No. 81, pp.153-155; Carl Lindenberg "Philately in the year 1904" Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1905), Volume 16, No. 1, pp.1-8, especially §3. Lindenberg expressly states that one should not specialise too narrowly and proposes quite in the style of The Philatelic Record to use Western Europe, South America and Africa as examples.
19. Prize register of all postage stamps to 1888 and wants to list Koeppes Permanent Album and Ferdinand Meyer's Catalogue (Munich 1888⁽²⁾), foreword Dr. Norgler: "The World" in Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1894/95), Volume 5, No. 7, pp.107-108; Arthur Wülbern (see Note 42), p.57. See also below page 137 note 44-45.
20. Dr. Emil Pfeiffer: "The boundaries of stamp collecting" in Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, (1885), Volume 12, No. 19, pp.243-245; No. 20, pp.255-256; see also (1886), Volume 13, No. 18, pp.213-215; No. 19, pp.223-226; (1887), Volume 14, No. 16, pp.199-202; (1888) Volume 15, No. 11, pp.147-149; No. 12, pp.163-166.
21. Quoted in Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung (1912), Volume 25, No. 10, p.168.
22. Max Ton "Opportune [sic.] considerations on the limits of specialised collecting", Die Post, (1909), Volume 16, No. 11, pp.165-166, No. 12, pp.181-182. Kosack's opinion of the London Exhibition in Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, (1900), Volume 2, No. 11, p.268.
23. "Spragiphilie" in Der Philatelist, (1984), Volume 15, No. 8 (197) pp.260-266; No. 9 (198) pp.304-308; No. 10 (199) pp.346-348; No. 12 (201) pp.402-407. The word was thus unfortunately chosen, since sphragistics (the science of seals) was one of the seven historical auxiliary sciences. Suppantschitsch's contribution appeared in Wiener Briefmarken-Zeitung, (1880), Volume 1, No. 6; See also Suppantschitsch: "History", pp.46-47. See also Stamp Collectors' Magazine, (1863), Volume 1, No. 5, pp.77-79 and Crawford Catalogue, column 116.

24. For the works of Reinheimer, Glasewald, Pfenninger and Maury, see Crawford Catalogue, columns 324, 143, 310, 257 and above, note 24 and below Chapter 20, p.902 with note 70. An offprint from Reinheimer's "Catalogue" appeared in Essen in 1973. Other specialist literature from the period before 1900 is cited by Suppantchitsch, "Origins" p.57-58. However, see also Legrand p.295ff; Haas, Textbook p.493ff. See also below, Chapter 17, p.668 with note 128.
25. Suppantchitsch "History", p.51; Same author, "Origins", p.57. See below, p.131 with note 32.
26. See below, Chapter 15, p.558, see Paganini, pp.5,10-11 and ibid, pp.8-9. For Stephan, see below Chapter 20, p.917 with note 164.
27. Contributions to Postage Stamp Science II/6 (1894) pp.41-47; Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News (1900) Volume 14, No. 512 of 25th October 1900. Further references from this journal from the years 1904-07 are quoted by Schlunegger, p.788, who however does not know the rest of the literature. See above pp.43-44 with notes 55-57 and below, Chapter 15, pp.559-60.
28. E. W. Wetherell: A subordinate Type Collection., The Philatelic Journal of India, 1902, Volume 6, No. 7, pp.308-315; A. J. H. S[mith]: The zoology of philately., ibid. No. 8, pp.347-349. Herbert R. Oldfield: By-paths of philately. Picture stamps and methods of arrangement., Gibbons Stamp Weekly, 1905, Volume 2, No. 26, pp.5-6; Bertram W. H. Poole: The philatelist's zoo., Gibbons Stamp Weekly, 1906, Volume 4, No. 19, pp.293-296; No. 20, pp.306-308; No. 21, pp.326-327; No. 22, pp.339-341; No. 23, pp.359-360; No. 24, pp.374-375; No. 25, pp.390-391.
29. Quoted by George B. Griffenhagen: Who discovered topical collecting?, in TOPEX '77 (Dallas, Texas, 1977), pp.7-9, 11, 13. Bertram W. H. Poole: A 'History' of topical collecting., Sixteenth American Philatelic Congress Book (Philadelphia, October 27-29th 1950) pp.95-101, wrongly considers that Oldfield's paper of 1905 is the oldest one on motif collecting. Neither author knows of the English paper quoted above in note 27, nor the one by Caspart: notes 30-31 below and 27 above. See also Kehr, pp.58-60; Schlunegger p.21, says as good as nothing about the period before 1950.
30. Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1909) Volume 20, No. 9, pp.136-137, especially p.136. See also above note 27.
31. See Hermann E. Sieger: "The Post in Liechtenstein 1770-1970." in "50 years of Liechtenstein Postage Stamps 1912-1962" Jubilee volume (Vaduz, 1962) pp.33-105, especially p.6ff. Of course it was Caspart who first brought Liechtenstein into philately in 1912: Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1912), Volume 23, No. 9, p.150: see also Rudolf Caspart "What postage stamps can show and teach us. Philatelobotany and philatelo zoology"!, Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1913), Volume 24, No. 1 pp.30-31; No. 2 pp.52-54; No. 4 pp.85-86.
32. For this see Köth-Springer pp.15-18 who used the silly name "Contrast Collecting". For Marco del Pont see below Chapter 21 paragraph 2, p.947 with note 16, the paper by H. V. Cappeln in Der Philatelist (1884) Volume 5, No. 6 pp.75-77.
33. "Guidelines of Philately" (Leipzig 1880): Lahr 1890⁽²⁾, pp.15-16, especially p.16.
34. Kalckhoff: "Youthful memories" pp.10-11; "The Art of Glueing a Hinge" in L'Écho de la Timbrologie, (1908) Volume 22, No. 381 pp.693-694.
35. Legrand p.34: Jacopo Gelli: "Philatelic Dictionary: Manual for collectors of postage stamps", (Milan 1898-99) p.xxviii. Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung (1928), Volume 24, No. 7, pp.99-101; see also Trondel p.122.
36. Phillips: History, p.182. The satire by S. C. Offer: The original Gum Club., The - American Journal of Philately, Second Series, (1896), Volume 9, No. 11 pp.463-465. An almost complete translation is in Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, (1897), Volume 24, No. 6 pp.86-92; see also Die Post 1897 No. 7 p.68.

37. Dr. Franz Kalckhoff: "Stamp conversation", Der Philatelist, (1894), Volume 15, No. 8, (197), pp.270-271. John B. Marriott refers to the 1905 advertisement in The Collectors Club Philatelist, (1969), Volume 48, No. 2, p.79.
 38. Colson of Boston Postage Stamps and their Collection ... the Bowers Collection., (Boston, 1907), pp.4-5: Colson of Boston – His Stamps., (Boston, 1926) pp.8-9. See also Haas "Textbook", p.224, "For some years the larger collectors(!) have tried to supply their collections with perfectly bordered pieces which is however not always easy to do and sometimes needs great ... sacrifices of money"
 39. See Robert Ehrenbach: The advantages of Collecting Stamps in Pairs, Strips and Blocks., The London Philatelist, (1894), Volume 3, No. 34, pp.234-237. See on the other hand above pp.34-36.
 40. Pfeiffer: note 20 above in Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, (1888), Volume 15, No. 12, pp.163-164: he speaks simply of "connected stamps". For Ferrary see below Chapter 6, paragraph 2, p.194 with note 44.
 41. Crawford Catalogue, column 415. For Neidhard see the short notice in Der Philatelist, (1894), Volume 15, No. 8 ,(197), pp.269-270.
 42. There were violent discussions on this at philatelic meetings after the turn of the century. Arthur Wülbern: "Courtesy cancellations", Die Post, (1911), Volume 18, No. 4, pp.55-57, especially p.56, gives a reasoned argument for acceptance of the value of collecting, see the same journal No. 7 pp.110-111.
 43. Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, 1908, Volume 4, No. 32, pp.9-13; No. 33, pp.43-45; No. 34, pp.60-61; then "Conservation and beauty", L'Écho de la Timbrologie, 1908, Volume 22, No. 368, pp.265-267, with photographic supplement, Figure 58.
 44. Die Post, 1909, Volume 16, No. 1, pp.6-7.
 45. Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1913), Volume 24, No. 7, pp.117-118; however see also Suppantchitsch: "History" p.49 "Even the well-to-do specialist collector can hardly expect any longer to get a complete set in this specialist field of collection (Old Germany)".
 46. See L. N. & M. Williams, pp.128-129 and The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, 1915, Volume 8, No. 2, p.26.
 47. Thus in London in 1906: See below Chapter 15, p.535.
 48. See Leroy: pp.121-122 Photos of the wall decoration in the library of Ch. Whitfield King., Stamps, (1933), Volume 3, No. 33, p.153. This type of "stamp picture" is still seen in our own day. The leader in this field is the Frenchman Emile Tramoni: See Daniel Minassian: "10,000 stamps for a 'Napoleon' ", Briefmarken-Magazin, (1984), Volume 1, Part 3-4, pp.46-47, 49-50.
 49. The Stamp King. Translated from the French by Miss Edith C. Phillips, London, 1899. 260 pages in 8° and 80 illustrations. The publisher of course was Stanley Gibbons Ltd. Crawford Catalogue, column 42 (Blanc, No.86).
 50. "Poems on philately" collected by Hermann Mittelman (Czernowitz, 1891), p.12. See also Thomas Braun: "Philately (Poems)" Paris, 1910, 27 pages in 8° (Blanc No. 173) and R. P. DELAPORTE "The old stamps", Poetry, Paris, 1891, 8 pages in 8° (Blanc, No. 391).
 51. See Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, 1893/94, Volume 4, No. 4, p.58.

CHAPTER 5 THE SEARCH FOR NEW PATHS (1914-1945)

The years 1914-1945 encompass two world wars with a total of ten years of war and in between two decades of a highly precarious peace, which was characterized by severe economic depressions after 1919 and after 1929. These historical facts could not remain without influence on philately. The solid and so problematic peace years of 1878-1914 were over. During this period only very few European states had issued postage stamps for the first time: San Marino (1877), Monaco (1885), Crete (1898), Liechtenstein (1912) and Albania (1913), and only in the case of Crete and Albania, were new states founded. In the years mentioned, the three dwarf states had only just discovered philately as a source of income.

As a direct result of the First World War, a number of new states emerged in Eastern Europe - I will also restrict myself to Europe in the following: Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia (instead of Crete [? I think he means Croatia], Montenegro, Serbia, Thrace, etc.); Hungary received full independence. There were also artificial structures such as Danzig (until 1939), the Saar area (until 1935) and various so-called "Voting areas" (Allenstein, Marienwerder, Memel, Schleswig); Finally, the new independent states were Ireland (1922) and the Vatican State (1929), while the miniature state Andorra (1928/31) first discovered the blessing of philately for state finances.

Around the time of the Second World War, temporary state structures such as the so-called Reich Protectorate Bohemia-Moravia (1938), Slovakia (also 1938) and Croatia (1942), while Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Austria temporarily disappeared from the political map, the Baltic states Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania were swallowed up by the Soviet Moloch. But these are only the more or less permanent changes. In addition, in the wake of the actual acts of war, there were countless occupation, liberation, propaganda, shelter and local editions of pretty much all the nations involved in the war, and although the field post regularly works without stamps, there were even field post stamps here and there. In addition, the territorial upheavals in the numerous newly formed states caused countless "provisional" editions, which, like many war stamps, were produced by overprinting, which opened up a huge new field of activity for the international forgers' guild.

With this, a flood of stamps had already poured out on the philatelists, which even the greatest pessimist would not have thought possible around 1900, and we remember the outraged protests that broke out before 1914 about the "flood of stamps" at that time, which to the troubled philatelist of The 1920s, was more like a trickle of stamps. But that was by no means all. As is well known, the appetite comes with eating, and almost all states had now recognized that the state coffers could be refilled with the issue of new stamp issues without risk and effort. Before the First World War, commemorative stamps of all kinds were relatively rare. Then the "anniversaries" were almost pulled by the hair. When Prescott H. Thorp put together The Commemorative Stamps of the World in New York in 1934, he needed 512 pages for it, i.e. almost four times what J. Lyon had needed 20 years earlier. The tireless Georges Brunel published an article in 1940 - at that time already 80 years old - : Cent ans de Philatelie, in which he tried to statistically record the increase in the flood of stamps. His balance reads as follows:

	total	per year
1900-1909	8,350	835
1910-1919	11,200	1,120

1920-1929	18,300	1,830
1930-1939	18,600	1,860

According to Brunel's calculation, a total of almost 70,000 postage stamps had been issued by 1940.

The big “discovery”, however, were the surcharge stamps, which in the USA are aptly referred to as “semi-postals”⁽¹⁾, but mostly classified as “charity stamps”. While surcharge stamps were the big exception before the First World War, after the World War one charity issue chased the other: Red Cross, Caritas, War Orphans, Youth Welfare, Monument Preservation, Intellectual Aid, Winter Aid, Sponsorship of Sports, these are just some of the most popular occasions to attract collectors to ask for cash. Of course, the “literary” appreciation was not missing either: as early as 1925, Alex Mayer praised “The postage stamp in the service of charity” on 48 pages.

But they also had something new to offer: in 1923, Luxemburg had the idea of issuing the 10-franc value of the permanent set in a different color and as a single print in the middle of a small sheet of paper on the occasion of the birth of the heir to the throne: the miniature sheet was born and had an unexpected success between the wars. The fact that postal needs were not even considered with such sheets is shown, for example, by the French memorial sheet on the occasion of the international stamp exhibition in Paris in 1925 and the German emergency aid sheet from 1933, which have such a nonsensical format that even extra-large envelopes hardly fit.

Table II: Issues for Postage Stamp Day are popular today in many states and often give rise to issues with postal history or philatelic motifs. Probably the first time the stamp collector appeared on a stamp was the commemorative German Reich stamp from 1942 (top row on the right)

Figure 59: The “Day of the Postage Stamp” was first proposed from the German side, which included for example, a commemorative postal stationary card in 1937. (The text was written in German, English and French).

To calm the minds of desperate philatelists, they too were occasionally thrown a bone. In response to a German suggestion in 1937, the FIP suggested a “Postage Stamp Day” with commemorative stamps worldwide after this day had already been celebrated in Austria, Czechoslovakia and elsewhere. France has been issuing a special stamp every year since 1945 on this occasion⁽²⁾. Some postal administrations even generously granted that the philatelists were allowed to finance their international exhibitions themselves by means of approved special surcharge stamps, which in the USA first happened in 1976 on the occasion of the exhibition in Philadelphia - and on top of that in concealed form - and in France only, the Red Cross has been subsidized for some years by surcharge stamps, which requires complicated detours to occasionally give alms to philately.

Airmail stamps are a special feature of the period to be included here: “Airmail” in the experimental stage had already existed before the First World War, and several unofficial commemorative and donation stamps were also used. Vignettes have been issued; however, the first official airmail stamp did not appear in Italy until 1917. Soon almost all states followed this example - often under philatelic influences - and important Poinier flights gave rise to special issues. Above all, the German Zeppelins, in which the future of aviation was seen at the time, repeatedly gave opportunities in numerous countries for spectacular, unfortunately often speculative commemorative series. It was only after the Second World War that the postal administrations came to the - late - realization that the postage stamps on an airmail letter need not necessarily look different from normal definitive stamps; the issuance of special airmail series decreased rapidly and is now mainly used as a source of income by the young states of e.g. Africa. From the point of view of the issued stamp series, the period 1914-1945 is the great time of aerophilately.

Of course, the collectors got excited about the audacity with which their wallets were managed elsewhere, and some gave up, discouraged. There was a lot of rustling in the philatelic forest of leaves. On the occasion of the British "Wembley Issue" of 1924, The London Philatelist wrote We expect the day is coming when all this class of label will be relegated to a special category apart from the proper postal issues of a country and the sooner this happens the better⁽³⁾. The prognosis came true at first surprisingly quickly: at the international exhibition in Paris in 1925, a separate class was indeed created - class 27 - for commemorative and war stamps, but it was a Pyrrhic victory: in later years there was one Class no longer the speech. Of course, one foresaw the "downfall of philately" for the near future - after all, this is a favorite sport of the philatelists - and searched desperately for patent recipes that just didn't exist.

For many, it was still about saving general collecting: the greatest possible completeness in all achievable areas is the worthwhile goal of all (!), And every specialty first waives the need of the collector who strives for general completeness at the bottom of his collector's heart, writes H. C. von der Gablentz in 1926⁽⁴⁾ and sees salvation in the concentration on the "essentials": The first and only commandment is to free our collections from everything superfluous, whereby the decision about what is "superfluous" and what is not is a matter for an international commission (!!). That was meant deadly seriously: If we succeed in removing these two main blocks of the impetus - commemorative stamps and random varieties - from our collections, maybe in connection with a major catalogue and album reform (!), then ... the glimpse of an easy future opens up again.

Now H. C. v. d. Gablentz is certainly not one of the leading figures in German philately of those years, but that is precisely why his contribution is so interesting. This also applies to the decidedly more serious Dr. Lettau from Lörrach, who published an article "Superfluous Postage Stamps" in 1928, which seems to me worthwhile to find a place for the full text⁽⁵⁾. It is noteworthy that the author definitely sees a way to get out of the dilemma, but that he does not want to see it because he clings to the irredeemably antiquated idea of the General Collection:

Who doesn't know the "superfluous" and "speculative" stamp issues?! Everywhere from the mouths of desperate collectors you can hear: Another charity expense that is to be paid for out of our pockets! Once again there is an endless series of stamps in Portugal, which may be valid for a few days and then nine tenths and more are "pegged" to the philatelists. Again in San Marino, Romania and elsewhere new commemorative issues, some of which were immediately retained or were completely bought up by speculators. In the introduction to every Borek list we read moving complaints about such unpleasant things. And what does it help if this or that person says: I don't collect all of that stuff! Afterwards we will find it in all catalogues, if not "small print" sometimes, and in the preprinted album the new white fields stare at us expectantly for pages! With a thoughtful smile, the specialist collector thinks he can overlook the calamity: he is only interested in the classic stamps of his country with their cancellations, and he does not bother with the new speculative stuff.

And yet: isn't there an increasing threat to the development of philately as a whole? Our hobby cannot live without the General Collectors (!), And if they lose courage and angrily close their album, won't the specialised collection be endangered and lose its value? What will the unfortunate General Collector do in ten to twenty years when the dealer tells him that he needs a whole album for Portugal alone? Can the young beginner build a collection with a clear conscience when he has to buy thirty to forty or more albums to accommodate everything he might eventually have? Will he not shy away from the huge costs and shrink back more and more? Doesn't it become more and more impossible year after year to get an overview of the vast mass of all the new issues alongside the old ones? We all see the great danger that must threaten our "collecting sport" to an ever greater extent. Why didn't you object?

Many of the sentences that Lettau wrote down in 1928 could just as easily have been written yesterday. However, it is interesting to see the nostalgia with which many collectors still clung to their general collection at a time when this actually had to appear outdated, because the way things were, a rethink was simply inevitable. What had been announced as a new trend around 1885 now became a sheer necessity: specialisation. The general collections, which were initially defended so stubbornly, disappeared almost completely from the picture in the course of the 1930s. A man like Maurice Burrus could still afford the luxury of collecting the "whole world" at a high level until the end of his life († 1959), but the "normal" collector, even if he was prepared to use considerable resources, had to give up and relocate to sub-areas, whereby continent collections such as "Europe" or "America" soon turned out to be too broad and had to give way to further restrictions.

The overwhelming number of collectors decided to only collect their own country, possibly with secondary areas such as Wolonia, occupation issues and the like. to collect, as well as a few neighboring areas, e.g. in France Andorra, Monaco, Luxembourg, Belgium and the Saar area. Only a few expected themselves to have several large areas such as all of South America, Scandinavia, the British Empire or similar. However, in the 20s and 30s there were still philatelists with huge collections, it was just those like the just mentioned Maurice Burrus, Alfred F. Lichtenstein, Arthur Hind, Alfred H. Caspary or Charles Lathrop Pack, but from the guard of the important Anglo-Saxon philatelists there were Benjamin Goodfellow (1864-1946), the Barons Antony (1869-1938) and Percy de Worms (1874-1941) and many more to call. The most likely collectors from Germany would be J. Elster (1864-1922) and Gaston Nehrlich (1876-1929), whose collections, however, could not compete with the above in importance.

Options for specializing beyond the national collections have already been discussed in the previous chapter. The collecting of stamps was well received in the German-speaking countries, but also in France, while in the Anglo-Saxon area it was classified under the rubric "forms of use of a stamp", as Dr. H. Munk in his detailed Report from the New York exhibition of 1926 specifically highlights: In his (that is to say o Americans') opinion, collections of cancellations as an end in themselves are definitely not to be regarded as complete (unless it is about "Used abroad" or the like). In New York, for example, there was a separate class for "Cancellations", but there was not a single gold medal within this class⁽⁶⁾.

On the other hand, it must be said of thematic collecting that it did not make a breakthrough in the period discussed here. It was still considered to be a more or less eccentric quirk that enjoyed no international reputation, even if it was recognized here and there at exhibitions as a separate class from a didactic point of view and small tracts in book form had already appeared before 1920, which hardly deserve the denomination “literature”. The Dutchman J. H. van Peursen published a whole series of thin volumes between 1929 and 1935 in which he described the history of individual states (Hawaii, Lithuania, etc.) as well as the life of historical personalities such as Bolivar, Columbus, James Cook, George Washington, etc. using the postage stamps. He titled this series Philatelie en Geschiedenis, the length was mostly between 8 and 32 pages. In addition, however, there were also more substantial contributions, at least in terms of scope. A small work on L’Inspiration Chrétienne et la Philatélie was published in France as early as 1926; a book on “Geography and Stamps” published in 1931 was an impressive 330 pages, and a few years later a work on “The portrait postage stamps of Europe” was published in roughly the same size. Only the general study by Wilhelm Schlechtriem was of greater importance: “The postage stamp as a cultural document”, which - very wrongly - is regarded as a kind of “classic” of thematic philately⁽⁷⁾.

One specialization deserves special mention, which in the years before 1914, for obvious reasons, only played a very subordinate role: Aerophilately. The first historian of the new discipline, the chemist Dr. Robert Paganini (1866-1950), the year 1911. The First World War already gave an indication of the future military importance of the aircraft, which was baptized by fire during the siege of Przemyśl in 1914/15. Occasional field airmail transports followed, but functioning airmail connections were only established in the years after 1918, of which only a few initially existed⁽⁸⁾. Regardless of this, the new branch of philately developed extremely quickly and was already an integral part of international exhibitions in the early 1930s, after the aforementioned Dr. Robert Paganini with his “History of Airmail” in 1920, he laid the foundation for an intensive literary study of this interesting field.

In 1919 and 1921, Fred. Melville and Théodore Champion published the first airmail catalogue. However, the philatelic press had drawn attention to airmail and the importance of the Zeppelins in occasional articles since 1915, and Georges Brunel had published an eight-page study in 1920: “Aero Stamp Collecting”, which had two editions⁽⁹⁾. The first collectors’ associations entirely dedicated to airmail were also formed in the early 1920s - a pioneer had been founded in the USA as early as 1913 - and the first special albums came onto the market around 1930.

Figure 60: Dr. Robert Paganini (1866-1950)
The father of aerophilately

Figure 61: Fred J. Melville (1882-1940)
Founded the Junior (later: National) Philatelic Society, and was arguably the most prolific philatelic writer of all time.

In the 1930s there were already several dealers specializing in airmail, among them Nicolas Sanabria (1889-1945) in New York, who also edited one of the most famous airmail catalogues⁽¹⁰⁾, Frank Muller - Paris, the last survivor of the old guard the great airmail connoisseur as early as the 1920s, and finally - last but not least - the Englishman Francis J. Field, one of the great names in airmail research and founder of the Aero-Field published since 1926, the oldest specialist journals published by these people. Even if numerous airmail and almost all Zeppelin issues were inspired by philatelists and the trade and speculators unfortunately had their fingers in the game from the start, it remains undisputed that the transport of mail by air opened a new era in postal history and the collection of corresponding documents one valuable means of enriching philately.

The general specialization had very beneficial consequences for philately: instead of collecting in the broad, people were now collecting tremendously “in depth”, i.e. they put more weight on things that had only been of marginal interest up to then. The whole letter came into focus more strongly than before, even letters without stamps suddenly became collectable, but know that the senior of the German auctioneers, Hans Grobe, who dismissively remarked about none other than Heinrich Köhler in the 1920s in a review of the Grobeshcher auction catalogue, in which some old letters were also offered, that he did not even know that the young man from Hanover also deals in waste paper.

Table III: The oldest airmail stamp in the world from 1917 is one of the cheap issues (No. 1), New Guinea’s £ 5 value (No. 2) is believed to be the highest face value of an airmail stamp. The upside-down plane of the American 24-cent stamp (so-called Investered Center) is probably the most famous and most expensive airmail misprint of the world (No. 3). Also the other issues of Newfoundland and Italy are the great rarities of aerophilately.

Table IV: Made in 1928 on the French steamer “Ille de France” the 10-franc overprint stamps on the occasion of the first catapult flight are today Famous rarities, although of course they too when they appeared had been condemned to the ground by the philatelic press and undoubtedly owe their creation to a philatelic initiative. The two letters shown, each franked with a block of four - each of these blocks which also shows the different distances between the overprints - are of course clearly of philatelic origin.

Figure 62: A. v. Kumpf-Mikuli (1879-1968) One of the fathers of collecting old letters and founder of the SAVO. (photo from 1966)

In order to get the job of the former K. u. K. professional officer Anton v. Kumpf-Mikuli (1879-1968) founded Vienna SAVO - a somewhat forced abbreviation for International Association of Collectors of Pre-Philatelic Letters and Postal Documents - the friends and collectors of old letters were grouped together and thus inaugurated the serious study of Postal History, begun by v. Kumpf-Mikuli in 1933 with a series of articles in the Postmarke: “New letters about old ones”, which then appeared as an separate publication, a kind of “classic” and at the same time created a valuable introduction. He can therefore rightly be regarded as the father of old letter studies as a special discipline.

In England Robson Lowe had campaigned vigorously for Postal History around the same time. The Postal History Society was founded in 1936. Melville’s 1935 definition: Postal history is a part, not the whole of philately, was immediately contradicted by (Sir) J (ohn) W (ilson): Stamps are a part of postal history and thus put things right again. In this essay he deals with Some modern trends in Philately which specifically meant Postal History. Of course, he unreservedly recognizes the historical significance of the new trend, his objections are more of a technical nature: postal history collections are space-consuming, prices are largely set arbitrarily and such collections are unsuitable for exhibition purposes.

He immediately found a contradiction in Robson Lowe, who stated in a letter to The London Philatelist: Postal history is not a trend of Philately ... the highest rank to which Philately can aspire is that of the eldest son of postal history. He also contradicts Wilson regarding the arbitrariness of prices and refers to already existing catalogues. Samuel Chapman also contributed a few new points of view: for him the word “Philately” is by no means limited to collecting postage stamps - Wilson and Lowe were pretty much in agreement on this point - but means the entirety of the postal system, which of course is a quite idiosyncratic proposition. He emphasizes that pre-stamp covers have not been hoarded by dealers and are therefore less prone to speculative manoeuvres. As for exhibitions, Chapman advocates a sensible selection of evidence⁽¹¹⁾.

The suitability of postal history collections for exhibition purposes has long been proven and further debate is no longer necessary, even if nobody denies that postal history collections - compared with a purely stamp collection - take up more space. In contrast, despite the objections of Robson Lowe, I still believe that a certain arbitrariness in setting prices has not been completely overcome. It is interesting, incidentally, that Wilson justified the decline of postal stationery collecting - the collecting of stationery has almost entirely ceased to exist - with the fact that it required too much space, which certainly does not apply in this absolute sense. Chapman blames dealers and catalogue makers in particular for the decline in postal stationery collecting, which is a not inconsiderable point of view. In any case, it should be noted that the deepening of the individual collecting areas, which ultimately resulted in a historicalisation of philately, enriched it immensely, and actually made it a historical-scientific discipline in the first place.

At the end of this page, which is mainly dedicated to the new ways of collecting, I will give the floor to one of the great philatelists of the “old school”: Carl Lindenberg. He had largely withdrawn from the hustle and bustle of the shops and the vanity fair - to go hunting would have been undignified for a man of his rank anyway - and took part in philatelic events as an attentive and critical observer. In 1926 he wrote an article “New ways of collecting”, in which he laid down his view of the modern development of philately⁽¹²⁾. The wisdom of old age speaks - Lindenberg wrote this article at the age of 76 - when he states: “We older collectors believed we were at the peak of collecting decades ago” and continues: “Anyone who would have told us forty years ago that one day the blocks, Strips, edge pieces would play such an important role as is the case now that the consideration and study of the postmarks would come to the fore, but on the other hand the postal stationery, which many regarded as the quintessence of all collectibles, would almost find no more attention, he would have been mocked and laughed at”.

Lindenberg sees the most important innovation as collecting on a whole letter, which he warmly welcomes. He rightly recommends collecting modern letters that also get old: The stamps from the War and post-war period may one day become very rare on entire letters. He then breaks a lance for his beloved postal stationery, which was blatantly neglected in the 1920s, and notices that the so-called specialised collecting in philately has achieved an importance that will never be contested again; he warns against exaggerating specialization and overestimating the “pieces of letters”.

His relationship to stamp collecting is ambivalent; he doesn't refuse it, even praises the research in this area, but he's not that sure about the matter: the collector looks at the stamp with one eye, the postmark with the other and doesn't quite know what to prefer... This is a bad state of affairs (!). He is skeptical of "collecting air mail" and says that it seems (read: apparently) is not quite up to par. He sees the reason in the fact that, from the very beginning, they cooked themselves up like on no other: Gimmicks, Speculations and Swindles. Finally, he dedicates a few more sentences to a movement that ... aims to ensure that the collector systematically organizes and relates the images on the stamps. Lindenberg thinks that if you do this, as you did at the 1923 didactic exhibition in Vienna, you can accept it. But the real stamp collector goes astray if he collects according to such principles.

It would be cheap to put your finger on Lindenberg's "errors", especially since much of what he wrote in 1926 is still valid today. A few weeks later, the Düsseldorf lawyer Dr. Wilhelm Schlechtriem published a "reply" under the same title that is worth mentioning⁽¹³⁾. The hinges praised by Lindenberg, he says, seems ... to be about to go down. There is collecting with a fear of hinging... and they keep unused stamps free of hinges in a slip-in album. He adds: This solution is certainly not ideal, but compared to the hinging system it represents an extraordinary step forward. Slechtriem is unreservedly in favor of collecting "cancellations" - he does not like the term "cancellations" - and emphasizes: If you collect used or even only used - and that is the trend of time (!) - then the cancellation is just as important as the stamp. He defends the letter piece against Lindenberg and has as little time left for postal stationery as almost all collectors of the 1920s.

His attitude towards covers - he too affirms collecting covers - is not determined by postal history, but entirely by aesthetic points of view. "Aesthetic considerations" - the words are missing in Lindenberg's vocabulary - play the decisive role for Slechtriem anyway, but he considers it a mistake to make the postmark into a means of object teaching, which is a clear rejection of the "motivational philately" of his time. He emphasizes, however, that this aside was by no means taken by the collectors, but by the modern postal administrations. He has something completely different in mind, namely how a certain world phenomenon (sic), for example a lion, an eagle or a sailing ship from different times and nations has been brought into the stamp image. You just have to get it right, and that's not easy. This strongly aesthetic, in some respects almost art-historical approach had a predecessor as early as the 19th century, and only six years before Slechtriem, Max Osborn had published a very remarkable little book on "The stamp as a work of art"⁽¹⁴⁾, but this direction naturally remained isolated.

The lawyer Lindenberg would only have shrugged his shoulders for the ideals of the lawyer Slechtriem. Lindenberg was the "great old man" of German philately and Slechtriem was undoubtedly an outsider. Still, some of his thoughts deserve attention. I don't mean his aesthetic consideration of "world phenomena", but the emphasis on aesthetics or, let's put it more simply: the good taste, the optical impression as a philatelic category. That man collects with his eyes has been put back into perspective by him. His advocacy of the "devaluations" was also meritorious.

His remarks on the style of collecting are revealing: "one" collects mostly used, but unused stamps are kept by many in stock books for the sake of the original gum. The fear over the original gum, which was mostly a marginal issue before the First World War, is older than one is generally inclined to assume. For Alex S. Juliard, the mint mania began as early as the First World War, when some stamps in Europe assumed the character of hard currency; in the Second World War this trend would only have generalized. Incidentally, the impeccable preservation of the stamp has meanwhile become a matter of course, which one does not talk about further. The trade journals scourge - one might almost say routinely - the “exaggerated” quality demands of financially strong collectors, because collecting “loses its inner meaning” and degenerates into a hunt for “abnormalities and curiosities⁽¹⁵⁾. The traders, on the other hand, have given up whining and acted instead: Quality means money, even a lot of money.

As the quintessence of the new style of collecting we can state: increased specialisation, emphasis on covers and stamps, at the same time quality-conscious collecting and appreciation of units; Aerophilately appears as a new area of collecting. In general, there is a tendency towards postal-historical statements and the scientification of philately. At the major international exhibitions between the two world wars, the trend towards the scientification of the Philately was evident. At the major international exhibitions between the two world wars, however, the trend towards scientification initially lagged behind the great “material battles” that culminated in 1926 in New York during the confrontation between Lichtenstein and Hind, although the New York exhibition had already clearly made a mark in favor of research in philately. The world economic crisis of 1929 did the rest, and the IPOSTA in Berlin in 1930 and the WIPA in Vienna in 1933 brought the breakthrough in the direction of a more strongly postal history-oriented philately.

Incidentally, with IPOSTA it became common practice to give international exhibitions a memorable short name as a kind of trademark; only a few countries have not made use of it since then⁽¹⁶⁾. The importance of international exhibitions has increased since the FIP (Fédération Internationale de Philatélie), which was founded in 1926, first issued fixed regulations for international exhibitions in 1928, which have been modified several times and are still valid today. The founding of the FIP, decided in the spirit of the League of Nations - before the Second World War it was called FIP - which initially had only a dozen national associations and which initially met with fierce resistance and criticism, also makes it clear that now in the organizational field in Philately a certain degree of agreement has been reached.

The philatelic literature took a big boom, although the 20s were actually not very literature-friendly at all. No major new magazines were founded, with the exception of the Collectors Club Philatelist, first published in 1922, the magazine of the New York Association of that name, which quickly gained a leading position in the United States and has maintained it to this day. On the other hand, a large number of important monographs appeared, which of course are not listed here in detail; only a few distinguished authors are mentioned here: Dr. C. Chase, H. Griebert, Dr. F. Kalckhoff, E. Mueller, Dr. H. Munk, Ch. Nissen, Ch. L. Pack, A. Séfi, A. M. Tracey Woodward, the brothers A. and P. de Worms and many others⁽¹⁷⁾;

Figure 63: a) A Christmas and New Years greeting from Th. E. Steinway from 1937.
b) A Christmas card from B. H. Herman Jr. from 1940.

from the older generation of those who had already worked in literature before the First World War, E. D. Bacon, Dr. E. Diena and C. Lindenberg should be mentioned. The greatest journalistic talent of these years was undoubtedly Fred Melville (1882-1940), a knowledgeable philatelist of unusual productivity, whose gift of easy presentation of philately won many friends. His bibliography comprises 64 pages⁽¹⁸⁾ (Figure 61).

Generally speaking, philately in the 20s and 30s had a remarkable effect, which was also reflected in the so-called mass media. A whole series of leading newspapers from the Old and New World regularly brought news reports, reported in detail on sensational events such as the Ferrary auctions, and had even set up regular columns for philately since around 1930, such as the Hamburger Fremdblatt, the Peipziger Neuesten Nachrichten, the Berliner Allgemeine Zeitung, the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Times and many more⁽¹⁹⁾. But even the latest technical achievement, the radio, was not on the sidelines. As early as February 1924, the first philatelic broadcast went on the air in the USA. Well-known philatelist Eustace B. Powers chatted about “Hidden fortunes in postage stamps”. The success was phenomenal: E. B. Powers, “The Radio Philatelist”, received over 11,000 letters in two months and 1,128 people replied directly to the broadcast. This was the reason for the broadcasting company WJZ to statistically record all reactions received to its broadcasts. In Germany, Major H. v. Rudolphi, H. Rosen and P. Lindenberg 1926-1928 on the Berlin transmitter every Sunday gave radio lectures under the title “hour of the stamp collector”, which were even included in the “educational courses” of the transmitter⁽²⁰⁾. Similar broadcasts took place in other countries.

Philately also tried to gain a foothold in the academic field. In 1925 an unspecified “professor of philately” was established at the “Maryland Academy of Sciences”, which went to a certain H. A. Wilhelm, who later played a role in American association life, but from whom nothing else is to be reported. Like this one, many other attempts to make philately at home at the university have failed, while numismatics is established as a respected “auxiliary science” at least at some universities. At no point has philately been able to compete with the scientific reputation of numismatics; it is, after all, to a much greater extent a community of collectors - and unfortunately also of speculators - instead of researchers; we shall speak of this later. However, it should not be forgotten that numismatics also has a large lead in time: coin collectors have been around since the 14th-15th centuries. Centuries attested; Numismatics is recognized at the university, but is only concerned to a small extent (especially in ancient studies) and is also known as a so-called “Auxiliary science” was only established well in the late 19th century, even though it can count a Th. Mommsen among its scientific ancestors. So patience is necessary, and it should therefore come as no surprise that philately in Germany is initially cultivated to a modest extent at the level of general educational events, specifically at elementary schools.

So the philatelists created their own research bodies and “academies”. In France, as a result of a readers’ vote in 1928, the “Académie de Philatélie”, which celebrated its 50th anniversary a few years ago, was an occasion for which the French Post even issued a commemorative stamp (Michel 2121). There was really no shortage of newly-created philatelic awards in the years between the two world wars, which is to be understood as an indirect consequence of the First World War. The Berlin Club continued to award the Lindenberg Medal until 1943, which remained one of the most coveted awards in philately, but its exclusivity was called into question by the First World War. In the states of the “Entente” they looked for their own ways to get away from this German award. In 1921 the “British Philatelic Federation” created the “Roll of Distinguished Philatelists”, which soon didn’t lag behind the Lindenberg Medal in rank and reputation, although every year several Persons are invited to sign the “Roll”. The Royal Philatelic Society has been awarding the Crawford, Tapling and Tilleard Medals since 1920, although the decision to create them had already been made in 1914. But that was by no means the only awards, and by the outbreak of war in 1939 they had reached well over a dozen medals⁽²¹⁾.

There is nothing exciting to report about the philatelic resources of this period. The albums seemed to have found their shape once and for all; the main difference to earlier was that you no longer bought a “Whole World” album - that was the appropriate version for children - but “Europe” or mostly just “Germany” with or without “territories”. The hinges looked like they always looked, only a little thinner and with less glue. The fear of damaging the original glue gave birth to the idea of a “Schonfalzes” (pre-folded hinge) in 1939. It could be removed from the stamp without leaving any traces. That seemed to be Columbus’ egg - but it wasn’t, as it turned out about ten years later. The hinges leave behind bright “windows” on the stamp, which today has become a profession to remove. Millions in denominations have been destroyed in this way.

The catalogues got thicker and thicker; the leading catalogues all had to appear in two volumes. The world catalogues Stanley Gibbons, Scott, Senf and Yvert & Tellier already mentioned in the previous chapter were joined by the Michel catalog, which soon passed “mustard” in importance, and in Switzerland the Zumstein as a European catalog. Both introduced before 1914, they only gained their real importance in the 1920s. Of course, special catalogues such as airmail, war stamps - these are only temporary -, colonies, country special processing, etc. an essential role⁽²²⁾.

Unfortunately, politicians now also reached out for the catalogues: there were politically undesirable issues that should be suppressed, especially in times of war. When Luxemburg issued its “Intellectual Series” in 1935, which was primarily intended to support Jewish intellectuals, the Michel catalogue initially took it up, but then had to delete it again under pressure from the government and now “dropped” the numbers. After the war, the issue was reinstated in its old position. Here the state had a hand in it, and Philately had to put up with that, like it or not.

It is worse when the philatelists let themselves be carried away with such follies, however honorable the motives may be. In the preface to its 1917 catalog, Stanley Gibbons announced that it no longer intended to catalogue German war stamps and that it had also set the prices for old German stamps lower in order to express its disdain for Germanness. It is quite strange what stupidities one believes in times of mass hysteria to have to prove one’s national sentiments, which are definitely something worthy of praise. This course of action - which of course was immediately imitated in France - was rightly criticized in neutral foreign countries, but fortunately it did not meet with unanimous approval even in England⁽²³⁾.

Trade experienced ups and downs between the two world wars. First, of course, there was an enormous boom; one speculated in the so-called. “War stamps” that were very fashionable. The tireless Fred Melville - always up to date - wrote a book The Postage Stamp in War as early as 1915, which really fueled the new wave. But the collapse was inevitable and cost Fred Melville’s fortune, amongst others. Notwithstanding this, business was fine and speculation continued to flourish. Hardly any of the charity or commemorative issues of the 20s and 30s that are now almost “classic”, such as Manzoni, Cardinal Mercier, Orval, Madonna of Montserrat, Vaduz-sheet, to name just a few names that were not manipulated from the start. If you don’t forget almost all of the “good” airmail issues, because - unfortunately Lindenberg has to agree with this - aerophilately was a favorite playground of speculators all over the world (Tables I, III-IV).

Some new names have to be added to the names of top companies already mentioned in the previous chapter, some of which, however, had opened their trade well before the First World War; I mention W. Balasse - Brussels, G. Behr - Paris, R. Borek - Brunswick, W. H. Colson - Boston, F. Godden - London, H. Grobe - Hanover, H. E. Harris - Boston, H. Köhler - Berlin, R. Llach - Barcelona, R. Lowe - London, J. Minkus - New York, L. Sassone - Rome, H. E. Sieger - Lorch. Some of these companies such as W. Balasse, H. Grobe, H. Köhler and R. Lowe held auctions at the same time, which underlines the increased importance of this branch of the trade, in which the houses of Harmer, Rooke & Co., and H. R. Harmer in London were the industry leaders.

The main event of the 1920s was undoubtedly the auction of the largest collection of all time sequestered in France, that of Ph. La Renotière de Ferrary (†1917). The auctions in Paris dragged on from 1921 to 1925 and produced total proceeds of over 27 million francs, i.e. almost ten million dollars from the 1920s. Everything went well up to the famous “Black Friday” of 1929, but the difficult years of the Depression that followed left deep traces on the stamp trade and auction houses. World rarities at the Hind auctions in 1933/35 brought at best the same price, but mostly barely half of what A. Hind had paid ten or twenty years earlier.

In retail you had to look out for new sales methods. The companies Borek and Sieger operated an intensive dispatch of new issues, which proved to be largely crisis-proof. In the USA, H. E. Harris sold branded packages in Boston department store chains such as Woolworth and others, while J. Minkus opened a postage stamp shop in the New York department store Gimbels and had an unusual success with it. Still, things were far from rosy, and the malaise lasted until the war began. When Baron Alfons de Rothschild, who had fled from Hitler, had his fantastic collection of old German letters auctioned off at Harmer in London in 1939, they sold for barely 3% of what would be paid today. The war years initially only brought about an apparent recovery, as the excess purchasing power in all countries was directed to non-quota goods, i.e. including postage stamps. That did not mean a positive forecast for later peacetime, but then everything would turn out very differently.

If one tries to characterize the gloomy epoch 1914-1945 in a few sentences, one will have to start from the flood of stamps that was never thought possible in 1910 and which in every respect determined the development of the 20s and 30s. In the collecting style it brought about an increased specialisation, in the trade a trend towards the manipulation of many issues and increased speculation. The number of collectors continued to grow despite everything, although the financial strength of the individual was generally lower than before 1914. The quality of the collections had risen, as had the scientification of philately, with the risk of a split in philately in the future.

Notes to Chapter 5

1. L. N. & M. Williams, p. 210, The essay by Brunel appeared in: L'Écho de la Timbrologie, (1940) Volume 54, No. 1053, pp.6-7, especially p.6. On the book by Lyon see above p.116.
2. Friendly note from F. W. Blecher - Essen; see also Colonel Souchart: Les débuts de la Journée du Timbre, in: Documents Philatéliques, (1974) Volume 12, No. 62, pp.165-167.

3. The London Philatelist (1924) Volume 33, No. 388, p.81.
4. H. C. v. der Gabelentz (sic): Vom Untergang der Philatelie, Die sammler-Woche, (1926) Volume 9, No. 12, p.144.
5. Das Postwertzeichen, (1928) Volume 2, No. 7, p.52.
6. Dr. Herbert Munk: "The International Postage Stamp Exhibition in New York York", Die Postmarke-Sammlerwoche, (1926) Volume 9, No. 133-34, pp.291-296, especially pp.293-294; ibid p.293 the photo of the jury with Dr. E. Diena, B. Goodfellow, Th. W. Hall, A. Lichtenstein, J. N. Luff (President), F. J. Melville, Dr. H. Munk, W. Ricketts et al.; see also the report by Heinrich Köhler: Köhlers Philatelistisches Magazin, (March 1927) No. 5, pp.4-14.
7. Potsdam 1920, 55 pages in 8° (Collection of Philatelic Treatises, No. 7). Schlechtriem's study is in no way an investigation into the history of thematics in the contemporary sense; see below p.157 with Note 14. From the genre of thematic tracts I mention Joseph Ward: Ship stamps of the world, Portland, MA (1920); James H. Lyons: Natural history as shown on postage stamps, Boston 1916 &c.; see also V. Gisquierre-St. Strowski: L'Inspiration chrétienne et la philatélie, Amiens 1926, 42 pages in large 8° (Blanc, No. 599); a Dutch translation appeared in Amsterdam that same year; the work was later continued in essays by St. Strowski in: L'Écho de la Timbrologie 52-55 (1938-41); Kent B. Stiles: Geography and Stamps, New York 1931, 330 pages in 8°; Bertrand Du Val: The portrait stamps of Europe, Luxembourg 1936, 340 pages in uppercase 8°. See also below, chapter 15, pp.559-560.
8. Paganini, pp.10-12 and ibid. pp.14 ff., Especially pp.21, 22, 23, 25-26, etc.
9. Paganini, pp.4-5, Georges Brunel: La voie postale aérienne, Paris, 1920 (Blanc, No. 220), Fred J. Melville: Aero stamp Collecting, London 1923⁽¹⁾, 56 pages; 1924⁽²⁾, 62 pages in 12°. For the first airmail catalogues, see Chapter 17, p.669 with Note 135-137.
10. Harry L. Lindquist: Nicolas Sanabria. The Headquarters for Airmails, Stamps, (1934) Volume 6, No. 76, pp.261-262. See below chapter 17, pp.671-672 with notes 148-149; see also below chapter 23, p.1063 and Note 35.
11. Anton Kumpf-Mikuli: New letters over old ones: I. Die Poststempel, Vienna 1933, 242 pages in 8° (reprint: Soest, 1978). Fred Melville in: The Regent Encyclopaedia of Empire Postage Stamps (London 1936⁽³⁾) p.31: on the other hand, J. W.: Observations and Queries concerning some Modern Trends in Philately, The London Philatelist (1937) Volume 46, No. 542, pp.25-27, especially pp.26-27 and on this Robson Lowe: ibid. No. 543, pp.58-59; Samuel Chapman: ibid. No. 544, pp.84-85.
12. Die Postmarke (1926), Volume 9, No. 125-126, pp.189-191.
13. New ways of collecting, Die Postmarke-Sammlerwoche, (1926), Volume 9, No. 128, pp.223-225.
14. Result of the competition for postage stamp designs with a preface by Max Osborn, Berlin 1920; The archive publishing house in Braunschweig organized a reprint of the 88 pages in 12° booklet in 1982. See also Gustav E. Pazaurek: The beauty of postage stamps, Stuttgart, 1920, 28 pages in 4°. For the older side see (J.-B. Moens): Les timbres-poste envisages au point de vue artistique, Le Timbre Poste, (1863) Volume 1, pp. 20-21 (of the reprint edition) and Dr. Hugo Meyer-Brehm: The postage stamp as an art object, Ill. Briefmarken-Journal, (1891), Volume 18, No. 11, pp.163-165 as well as Ernst Vicenz: The art in the picture of the postage stamp (lecture at the 22nd German Philatelist Day in Kiel ... 1910), Deutsch Briefmarken Zeitung, (1910), Volume 21, Appendix, pp. 5-12. This "aesthetic", or better: artistic and stylistic approach has only found successors in very isolated cases; see especially below chapter 7, p.251 and Note

4. However, this has nothing to do with thematic philately or thematic collecting. Schlechtriem expressly rejected both directions.
15. See Die Postmarke-Sammlerwoche (1926), Volume 9, No. 128, pp.224-225. On the mint question in the 1920s, see Alex S. Juliard: The Collectors Club Philatelist, (1968), Volume 47, No. 5, p.270; No. 6, p.336 (answer to Ernest A. Kehr).
16. It is not correct if Köth-Springer, pp.13, 37, etc. designate the Vienna Exhibition of 1881 as a WIPA; this name was first used in 1933 and may not be used on older exhibitions that have taken place in Vienna. See also below chapter 15, p.519.
17. To Dr. Carroll Chase and Edwin Mueller see previous chapters 21, pp.5, 7; see also below chapter 20, pp.903, 906ff. &c.
18. A "Melville" Bibliography being a catalog of the separate philatelic works, written, compiled, edited or published by Fred J. Melville by L. N. & M. Williams, London 1941 (corrected and supplemented reprint after first publication in: The Stamp Lover, (1940/41) Volume 33, No. 8, pp.151-156, 160-161; No. 9, pp.178-180, 184; No. 10, pp.207-210; No. 11, pp.231-234; No. 12, pp.252-253. On Melville, see L. N. & M. Williams, pp.106-112 and below, chapter 19, p.808 with note 92.
19. See Kehr, pp.47-48 and: Die Philatelistische Literatur (1934) Volume 3, No. 1.
20. Harry L. Lindquist: Broadcasting Philately, The Collectors Club Philatelist (1924) Volume 3, No. 2, pp.75-77; ibid. pp.76-77 the wording of the first philatelic chat over the ether. Compare still Kehr, p.49; Das Postwertzeichen, (1926), Volume 1, No. 8, p.62.
21. See below chapter 24, p.1112 ff.; Chapter. 25, p.1132 ff.
22. See below chapter 17, pp.661 ff., 669 ff., 679 ff.
23. See, for example, the carefully considered remarks: Post Bellum Relations, The London Philatelist (1917) Volume 26, No. 302, pp.25-26 and ibid. p.35; See also: Schweizer Briefmarken-Zeitung, (1917), Volume 30, No. 5, pp.65-66 and especially ibid. No. 7, pp.101-104.

CHAPTER 6 THE GREAT COLLECTORS

In this chapter the great collectors of the past hundred years are presented, although the great collectors of the “pioneer years” before 1878 are deliberately excluded and collectors are only included who did not necessarily begin their collections until after 1878, but had in each case only reached the peak of their collecting activities after this time. Here too as in Chapter 3, I was spoiled for choice⁽¹⁾. Beyond this debate are Ferrary, George V as the Royal collector, Lichtenstein and Burrus. Breitfuss presents himself as a typical representative of the “old guard”. One might also have thought of Paul Mirabaud (1848-1908) or Ch. L. Pack (1857-1937), of A. Hind (1856-1933), A. Caspary (1877-1955) or Th. Champion (1873-1954), but I was limited. The best representative of the living “greats” seems to me to be John R. Boker Jr., also in view of his general contributions to philately.

1. The note at the bottom suggests considering for comparison some great collectors in general: Leroy, p.148 ff; Haas, Lehrbuch, pp.515 ff; Melville, Chats, pp. 263 ff; Phillips, Stamp Collecting, pp.105 ff; Kehr, pp.225 ff; Doberer, Kulturgeschichte, pp.182 ff; Jakubek, pp.255 ff; and lastly Bierman, except for Ferrary and Burrus, all the above it should be noted were anglosaxon collectors.

1. Philipp la Renotière von Ferrary

Figure 64 The well-known photograph of Ferrary which Phillips described as the closest to him in the later years of his life, but dates from the late 80s (before 1899).

No name is as well known in philately as that of Ferrary⁽¹⁾, and about no other philatelist has so much been written. There are countless legends about him, and so nowadays it is almost impossible to distinguish between fact and fiction. Where Ferrary is concerned, judgments vary from laudatory praise to downright disparagement: “his historical image is distorted by hate and favour” as Schiller might have said. Georges Brunel made him out as a simple-minded dandy without any genuine interest. Charles J. Phillips and W. H. Colson, both of whom knew Ferrary well, regarded him as a blameless gentleman and a basically good human being⁽²⁾. Peter Bohr wrote about him almost in the form of a historical novel⁽³⁾. The petty hatred of Brunel is explained by the fact that Ferrary abhorred France, the country in which he spent the greater part of his life, with all his heart and soul. His portrayal is therefore dominated by obdurate nationalism. If Ferrary had donated his collection to France, then Brunel would have written a three-volume hymn of praise about him. The highly favourable picture painted by Phillips and Colson has the disadvantage of being that of dealers who counted Ferrary among their best customers. At least, one should not withhold the suspicion that business interests might have been uppermost here.

The De Ferraris are a well-known Genovese patrician family. The Marchese Raffaele De Ferrari (1803-1876) was a successful banker, co-founder of the “Crédit Mobilier” in Paris and financier of many railway lines in Italy and France. He lived mostly in Paris; in 1828 in his hometown of Genoa he married the very young Maria Joséphine Françoise Brignole Sale (1811-1888), who was also of Genovese patrician ancestry; she was a daughter of the Marchese Antonio Brignole Sale (1786-1863) who had been very active in politics. A prefect under Napoleon I in his youth, from 1836 to 1848 he was the Sardinian Ambassador in Paris, briefly in 1849 ambassador in Vienna and in his later years an opponent of Cavour, being a supporter of the Conservative-Catholic circle of Sardinian-Piedmontese nobility, who for example totally rejected the annexation of the Papal States, and who wanted closer contacts with the Austrian Imperial house and the French monarchy - not the Republic!⁽⁴⁾

Figure 65: The City of Genoa even erected a statue to its benefactor, the Marchese de Ferrari, Duke of Galliera.

In 1837 the Marchese De Ferrari acquired, through purchase, the feudal tenure of Galliera, which Napoleon I had established as a duchy in 1813 from his private domains around Bologna, as the dowry of the eldest daughter of his stepson Eugène de Beauharnais, and which after 1814 had been returned to the restored Papal States⁽⁵⁾. With this purchase De Ferrari also acquired the title Duke of Galliera while the Italian king during his lifetime had bestowed on him Prince of Lucedio and Senator of the Kingdom in gratitude for the endowment of 20 million lire (= 16 million reichsmarks) in 1875 for the expansion of the harbour at Genoa. From his marriage to Maria Brignole Sale a son, Andrea, was born but he died in March 1847 at the age of only 15⁽⁶⁾.

However, on 11 January 1850 in Paris the 38 year-old duchess gave birth to another son, whose birth was entered in the register with the forenames Louis Philippe Antoine Marie Augustin

Raoul⁽⁷⁾. The name Arnold, which was often used by Ferrary, was not included, and we will see below how he came to use this forename. Without doubt his place of birth was Paris, but this did not prevent Ferrary in later life giving Heidelberg as his birthplace (as he did in Vienna in about 1906), or Berzona, in the Ticino canton of Switzerland (as on his death certificate). The forenames Louis Philippe gave rise to the oft-quoted supposition that Louis-Philippe, the “citizens’ king” (who died on the 26th August 1850 in Claremont, England) might have been his godfather by proxy, but there is no actual evidence of this⁽⁸⁾.

The legitimacy of this second son has often been questioned⁽⁹⁾, apparently even during his father’s lifetime⁽¹⁰⁾. Quite aside from the “gutter press” who often too willingly confuse fact and fiction, we must study this aspect more closely because this question played a significant part in Ferrary’s life. It is an undisputed fact that Ferrary never used his titles of Duke of Galliera and Prince of Lucedio, and in fact on the death of his father in Genoa on the 23rd November 1876 he formally renounced the titles. Ferrary was therefore in accord with the true position that these titles did not pass to him after 1876, and so he did not use them.

Although he occasionally exaggerates, he explains that these titles were never held by him; on his birth certificate the family name is given clearly as de Ferrari de Galliera. In this regard Ferrary shows a revealing over-sensitivity. When in 1883 Der Philatelist referred to him in a report from Paris as “the young Duke of Galliera” he immediately protested strongly; his reply was not printed by the editor, even though he was a member of the International Philatelists’ Club of Dresden. The following year he was referred to in the same series of articles quite correctly as “the son of the Duchess of Galliera”, which nevertheless still provoked fierce opposition from Ferrary, who published a sharply worded “Protest” in the Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung, edited by Fouré, which made waves as far away as England. Ferrary took this opportunity to make abundantly clear his dislike of these Italian titles, depending from a nationality which never was mine and originating from a country which from my earliest years I felt a repulsion for, as against Austria’s bitter foe. There then followed heartfelt praise of Austria and Germany: Austria’s black and yellow flag, closely united with Germany’s colours, sheltered my infancy and shelters my manhood. May it someday shelter my tomb and shelter my memory. And may the Union Jack, which in my heart waves near Austria’s and Germany’s glorious eagles, not disdain to protect me against injurious insinuations. In conclusion, he conjures up the spirit of the Battle of Waterloo⁽¹¹⁾.

This downright hysterical reaction to what was basically a harmless report shows that we must look for a key to Ferrary’s shattered relationship with his father, about whom he never spoke. Ferrary never gave any further clues, even to his innermost circle of friends. “What were his reasons nobody knows” said the Spanish Infanta Maria Eulalia (1864-1958), who as a young princess had known the Duchess of Galliera, and whose husband Anton Maria Ludwig Philipp - all of these also forenames of Ferrary - Prince of Orléans (1866-1930) had, since 1895, also held the title of Duke of Galliera. The income of the “Duchy”, amounting to 30,000 pounds, had been given by the Duchess of Galliera to the Duke of Montpensier during his lifetime⁽¹²⁾.

It is also undisputed that, probably in September 1886 - that is, during the lifetime of his mother who died in Paris on 9 December 1888 - he was adopted by a former Austrian officer, Emanuel La Renotière (not de La Renotière!), Imperial Knight of KRIEGSFELD (1825-1888), after which he resolutely shunned the name Ferrary. In his later letters, so far as I am aware, he always used the name Philipp La Renotière. When making his will he signed it with the name Philipp Arnold La Renotière. It is quite clear that Ferrary wanted to have nothing to do with his father's name and family, even though he was his only surviving child and his only heir.

It has usually been assumed that the origin of this attitude lay in the fact that Emanuel La Renotière Von Kriegsfeld - the family is of Huguenot ancestry and in 1782 was ennobled into the so-called military nobility - was his biological father⁽¹³⁾, which is unlikely, as at the same time as Ferrary he also adopted his bosom friend Timotée Marie Édouard Boulanger, who had been born in Paris on the 24th February 1849. On the 5th October 1886 they were both allowed by the Vienna District Court to add La Renotière (but not Knight of Kriegsfeld!) to their names⁽¹⁴⁾.

Figure 66: The decree of the Vienna District Court of 5th October 1886, by which Ferrary and Boulanger were allowed to use the name La Renotière in addition to their former surnames.

Another member of the La Renotière family was the Imperial and Royal high official Hermann La Renotière, Knight of Kriegsfeld (1857 - "after 1925") who in 1909 was a judge at the international exhibition in Amsterdam, and in 1911 was President of the international exhibition in Vienna⁽¹⁵⁾. Hermann's father was, however, Lieutenant-Colonel Franz La Renotière, and so Hermann may well have been Emanuel's nephew. Emanuel La Renotière had, like almost all the male members of his family, pursued a career as an army officer and had become a cadet in 1840 at the age of 15. In 1844 he joined the 43rd Regiment, of which his father was colonel in command; he became a second lieutenant in 1847 and a first lieutenant in 1849. He saw action in Upper Italy in 1848-49, was wounded and for a short time was also a prisoner of the Italians. However he resigned his commission, surprisingly, "for family reasons" on the 31st January 1851. This cannot possibly be due to his alleged liaison with the Duchess of Galliera of which, in any case, nothing is known. In order to prove this, it must at least be shown that (1) the Duchess of Galliera had been in Italy in the chaos of war and, to make matters worse, (2) she had been in close proximity to the fighting, when she really had no reason to be there. Her family, and that of her husband came from Genoa. It is extremely unlikely that the De Ferraris had estates in Lombardy and that the duchess visited these properties in the middle of a war.

A male affair, which forced him to simply take his leave is more likely in the case of a youth educated in the Cadet Corps. He entered the civil service and was a ministerial official until his retirement, but also did not achieve much advancement: according to modern German administrative terminology he was a member of the "upscale" service. Emanuel La Renotière was, indeed, married - further details of this are lacking - but the marriage remained childless, and in later years he lived apart from his wife⁽¹⁶⁾. His adoption of Ferrary - and at the same time that of his close friend É. Boulanger - took place at the advanced age of 61. If my guess as to the homophilic tendencies of Emanuel La Renotière is correct, then this explains the adoption of both Ferrary and Boulanger, by which he was legally able to live with them both⁽¹⁷⁾. Certainly, Ferrary royally rewarded this help from a like-minded person.

I indicated above my basis for not believing in the supposed illegitimacy of Ferrary. The registration of the birth was carried out by four professors of the faculty of medicine at the University of Paris. The godfather of the child was most likely King Louis Philippe, and the father would hardly have requested this honour if he had been in the slightest doubt as to the legitimacy of the child. Also, in his will he made his son the sole beneficiary of his estate; his wife had access to only one-quarter of the assets of her husband, though she was very wealthy in her own right. Ferrary also did not simply turn down the inheritance, as is often claimed, rather he made an arrangement with his mother, whereby she was ceded control of an amount in excess of about 200 million.

Ferrary's mother named her son as her sole beneficiary in her will dated the 7th October 1884. However, the adoption of Ferrary by Em. La Renotière was too much for this long-suffering woman: by a codicil to her will dated the 26th December 1886 she specified that after the fulfilment of all donations, bequests, etc., the remaining assets should be divided into two equal parts, of which one was to go to her son and the other to the German Crown Princess Victoria (who at the time of probate had become Empress Dowager). Separate codicils provided for, firstly, the city of Genoa, secondly, the Grand Duke of Sachsen-Weimar and thirdly, the Imperial government (regarding her residence at 57 rue de Varenne, with the right of abode for her son).

All these provisions gained legal force, but in May 1891 one of the beneficiaries refused the inheritance. I have, unfortunately, not been able to establish who this was. The city of Genoa and the Imperial government certainly accepted the legacies intended for them. Ferrary is also eliminated, and so the waiver was most likely made on the part of the Empress Victoria, especially as the share of the estate due to the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar was very small⁽¹⁸⁾. The mother therefore did not in any way disinherit her son. In Ferrary's will, in which his mother is not mentioned by name - he refers to providing for such a dear, blessed person to whom with gratitude I owe my existence and my entire nourishment (sic) - it emerges that Ferrary only received the interest on the majority of his mother's assets and it is likely that he would only have had discretion over this. After all, she had responded to her son's incredibly bad taste with a change in her will, which was probably ineffective

We have a literary 'portrait' of November 1876 of the young Ferrary, from the pen of Xavier Marmier, a friend of the House of Galliera and a member of the "Académie Française". Marmier writes: The Duke of Galliera left only one son, who is the strangest creature you can imagine: awkward, though quite good looking with eyes that can see nobody and (given to) wild gestures. He has a good intellect and is well educated, but he is full of muddled thoughts: quite sensible in some respects, completely foolish in others. One might think that his brain is divided into two parts: one half is well-ordered, the other totally confused. This son of a millionaire 100 times over definitely has, without inhibition and in a shameful way at every opportunity expressed his deep disdain for his father and says that he doesn't want his father's fortune and that one should live by one's own work. Yes, and in the meantime he was actually able, by his persuasive eloquence, to obtain a position as tutor at the "Collège Stanislas" [his old school], which exempts him from military service, and which is what really mattered to him. [Unlikely, as Ferrary was never a French citizen]. He earned 100 francs per month in this employment. But he lived with his parents in the most beautiful palace in Paris [the "Palais Matignon"]. He had at his disposal the best chef, carriage and horses as well as the 2000 francs per month that his father allowed him for his minor pleasures. Under these circumstances many people would have been delighted to "live by one's own work". This grandson of the noble, pious and venerable Marquis de Brignole affirmed his intense hatred of priests and monks, his deep contempt for the honest and peaceful people who were regarded as conservative [not the least of whom would have been Marmier himself] and his tendency towards democracy [in this regard he was disgusted by Marmier] to the extent of sympathy with the “Communards” [supporters of the Paris “Commune” of 1871]. Therefore the republican press was favourable to him! If, with his millions, they had his support, what an opportunity that would have been!

What seems to be certain is that this creature, who resembles nothing and nobody, will never be conquered by a woman. He is 26 years old, he seems well formed [bien constitué], but so far no woman has aroused his slightest interest. I have seen him sitting at table with the most beautiful ladies, and he never gave them so much as a single glance. On the other hand he has a passion, a real passion, for the son of a hat maker who was a school friend of his. He cannot exist for a day without him. He introduces him to his parents and would like him to reside in the palace for an extended period. Recently he married him and gave him 150,000 francs. [This is the E. Boulanger who in 1886 was adopted with him] ... I cannot see him [that is, Ferrary] without feeling outrage. Others flatter him, to please his mother. May it bring him good fortune! His mother is a woman of good heart [un âme d'élite], generous, tender, well-bred. But to this son who, while appearing to be of stoic virtue, covers his father's name with shame - I cannot extend my hand when I meet him⁽¹⁹⁾.

It cannot escape anyone's notice that Ferrary at this time was an emotionally vulnerable person. His almost pathological hatred of his father is difficult to explain; any political differences are in any event not sufficient for this, especially as Ferrary apparently indulged in anti-clerical 'socialist' talk just to deepen even more the contrast with his father. Later he bequeathed his assets to the church, and we do not hear of any socialist tendencies from the period after the death of his father. He was simply too intelligent for this. It could be that his father had accused him of having a lack of realism and business acumen, but this also is not enough to explain this total rift. I think it most likely that the father had commented in abusive terms on Ferrary's relationship with E. Boulanger and the homophile inclinations of his son, and it was this that was the cause of such implacable hatred. Just as irrational is Ferrary's hatred of France, although many of the people he trusted [P. Mahé, his son Edouard, not least his “brothers”] were French, and Ferrary left them all large sums in his will.

Figure 67: Ferrary's Vienna registration form of 1906: born in Heidelberg on the 1st May 1868. The name Ferrary has disappeared. The forenames of his two “brothers” Boulanger and Fillatraud have been added to his own. For his occupation, the then 56 year-old states “law student”.

As Phillips reports, “relatives” had filed an application for guardianship against Ferrary, who wanted to have the claim that he was mentally confused refuted by successfully studying law for the prescribed minimum time. In his will Ferrary refers to his happy student years at Belgian (!) universities, which can relate only to this law school, but he could hardly have begun this in the years before the death of his mother. In 1906-1909 Ferrary lived in Vienna, and on his registration form he stated his occupation as “law student”, but he did not register as a student and did not take any examinations. Who else could have made the guardianship application? Certainly not his mother, at best a relative on his father's side could be considered. The matter remains mysterious and perhaps is an invention of Ferrary's⁽²⁰⁾.

Figure 68: Maria Brignole-Sale, Duchess of Galliera (1811-1888). Ferrary's mother. (A photo from the time of her widowhood).

Figure 69: The young Ferrary. (Photo probably from the late 1870s).

In a letter to Ch. Phillips in the wartime year of 1915, Ferrary laments the war between England and Germany and continues: As for the French, I suffered too much from them in my health, my fortune and in my honour (!), to feel towards them anything else than the most justified dislike and the sincerest antipathy⁽²⁰⁾. Phillips attributes Ferrary's dislike of the French to "family troubles" after the death of his mother, but the hatred as well as the trouble with the family are, as we have seen, much older. Why did Ferrary feel aggrieved, not only in his health and his wealth, but also in his honour by France, and by some French people? The guardianship application, if it were ever filed, cannot have played a part. I rather suspect that at some time - but apparently very early on - he had been in conflict with the vice squad, and so he would have a police record, which Ferrary most likely would regard as an affront to his honour.

In any event, it seems to me totally inconceivable that Ferrary could have been an illegitimate son of the Duchess of Galliera, especially as this does not fit in with what we otherwise know of her status as a noble lady, but he felt deeply wounded by this family dispute. He would never talk about his youth; if it ever came up in conversation he would quickly change the subject. Moschkau's request for a biographical sketch was roundly rejected. Ferrary's family undoubtedly had caused him much suffering, and so to him the adoption was in the end an act of inner liberation.

As a boy FERRARY was of delicate health, often ailing, highly intelligent but hypersensitive: The torment of his mother all her life⁽²¹⁾. Top of his class and, to cap it all, immensely rich, he was always teased by his classmates. Being so timid it was easy to scare him with a table fork or by making silly faces⁽²²⁾. It was therefore with a sense of relief that his mother noticed his interest in stamps, in any event she strongly encouraged this interest, which was not difficult for her. Authors often repeat the anecdote - I do not know where first it appeared - about the dying Duke giving his wife the keys to his private library, which until then only he himself had been allowed to enter. After the death of her husband the Duchess went to the library and found that it contained 300 leather-bound volumes, each of which contained 1,000 banknotes with a value of 1,000 francs each, therefore a total of 300 million francs, which nowadays would be the equivalent of at least 3 billion German marks. The story is certainly fictitious, but there is no doubt that the Duchess had such a fortune at her disposal⁽²³⁾.

She lived in what is now the "Palais Matignon", 57 rue de Varenne. The City of Paris gave her a stately villa not far from the "Arc de Triomphe", which is now the "Musée Galliera". It was intended to house the art collection of the duchess, which after some minor harassment from the Republican city council she then gave to her home city of Genoa⁽²⁴⁾. Her charity knew no bounds, but she could easily be misled: In the course of her life and her charitable acts she was often deceived, she was a person who could easily be abused, in the judgement of Maxime Du Camp in her warm appreciation of her personality⁽²⁵⁾. She founded a home for 100 elderly people in Clamart, and in Meudon an orphanage for 350 children and a rest home for clergy, at a total cost of 25 million francs (20 million reichsmarks). Her political views were liberal, however there were limits to this, for Du Camp remarks that she was no advocate of press freedom, universal suffrage and similar democratic excesses.

She was a committed royalist, closely connected with the Royal House of Bourbon, opposed to Napoleon III and especially to the Republic by which she, who had done so much good, had of course been very shabbily treated⁽²⁶⁾. After the death of the Count of Chambord (pretender to the throne) she placed her residence in the “rue de Varenne” at the disposal of the Count of Paris for his political negotiations, and she bequeathed the palace after her death to the Austrian State which established its embassy there. She stipulated that her son Philipp was to have the right of abode in a side wing of the palace during his lifetime⁽²⁷⁾. The fact that Ferrary lived at the Austro-Hungarian embassy soon gave rise to the myth that he was an Austrian diplomat and attaché in Paris, which could not possibly have been the case.

Ferrary never took up an actual career. He spent part of his youth in Camberwell, as we see from the letter, previously mentioned⁽²⁰⁾, from Ferrary to Phillips, but he lived primarily in Paris, where from 1860 to 1864 he was a pupil at the “Collège Stanislas”, at which Burrus was also a pupil some three decades later, as well as the famous “Lycée Louis-le-Grand”; later he was at France’s elite school, the “École Normale Supérieure” and earned a “Licencié ès lettres” degree at the university. This is certainly incorrect, at least regarding the “Ecole Normale Supérieure”, as such a young man of his rank - his father was still alive! - would never have troubled himself by attending such a democratic institution. In fact his name is missing from all the lists of former pupils of the “Normale”. As a young man he was provisionally engaged as a tutor at the “Collège Stanislas”, then as a free teacher (“professeur libre”) at the “École des Sciences Politiques”. As such he taught there in the mid-1870s and into the early 1880s, as “Professeur de Ferrari” in the membership list of the “Société Française de Timbrologie” and also at the Congress of 1878, in which he took part. But this was only a temporary employment.

Figure 70: The frontage of the “Palais Matignon” (57 rue de Varenne). Ferrary’s collection was accommodated here in a side wing. Until 1915 Ferrary lived in this palace, which his mother bequeathed to the Austrian State and which until the First World War housed the Austro-Hungarian Embassy in Paris.

From about the mid-1880s he spent his time mainly travelling in search of his beloved stamps and coins. He could write and speak fluent German, English, French, Italian and Spanish; he could also make himself well understood and follow a conversation in Dutch, Portuguese and Serbian. Incidentally, on his travels Ferrary did not only purchase stamps but also, as already mentioned, coins; he was an experienced numismatist and had a wonderful collection of German thalers, gold coins of the whole world, old French, Spanish and English coins etc. This collection, which he bequeathed in his will to three individuals - among whom were his dear “brother” Albert Arnold - and the Königliches Münzkabinett “Royal Coin Cabinet” in Hanover, the University of Belgrade and the “Museum in Hamburg”, was also auctioned after his death in eight sales in Paris, Amsterdam and London (anonymously at Sothebys in 1922).

Much has been written about Ferrary’s character, and sometimes even his common sense has been doubted. He was certainly very eccentric, especially in his early life, as can be seen from Marmier’s description quoted above⁽¹⁹⁾. In his later years he introduced himself as “Monsieur Arnold”, which in fact was the name of his “brother”. The sailor’s cap with three gold stars, which he also wore indoors - he never wore a hat; in his time in Switzerland he was sometimes known as the Käpplimann or “cap man” - was just as famous as his aversion to the female sex - he would not do any business if women were serving him - but Phillips, who first met him in 1886 (that is, just ten years after Marmier’s crushing caricature) as Ferrary approached 40, did not remark, or did not wish to remark on this; he only mentioned his unusual methodology.

It seems as if Ferrary regarded his estrangement from the De Ferrari family that had just occurred in this year, 1886, as a release from a heavy burden.

Like his mother, he was a very kind and helpful man. To one of his school friends, who in those terrible times had stood by him, he later gave a substantial sum, which enabled the friend to pursue an illustrious academic career⁽²⁸⁾. He remembered about 50 people in his will with handsome legacies. He wanted to help the needy wherever he could - provided that his help remained anonymous. Phillips refers to several examples of his willing and always generous helpfulness, which sometimes manifested itself in his purchases as he often acquired, for good money, poor material or even forgeries, in order to help the seller. People who envied him would often put this down to his philatelic ignorance, of which more will be said later.

His - certainly unjustified but wide-ranging - dislike of France has already been mentioned. Hand in hand with this was a manifest love of Germany and England. When Moschkau asked him for an autobiography he refused this request, but by way of reply he wrote a glowing portrayal of Germany: from the most tender years of my childhood my soul was filled with ardent love of my German fatherland (sic) and burned with bitter hatred of Germany's enemies, later: my beloved Germany, ... my dearly beloved Austria and finally in the blissful joy that God gave to me when on the fields of Wörth and Sedan the high spirits of the French were shattered, to which enthusiastic commentary Moschkau added *a German from top to bottom - that is Herr Ferrary⁽²⁹⁾. In later years this son of Italian parents, born in Paris would give Heidelberg as his place of birth; in his will he named Heidelberg rather more carefully as his place of residence, and the Serbian town of Kladovo as his home municipality.

Figure 71: Ferrary with his famous cap.
(The photo could have been taken in ca.1880).

His letter to Phillips from the year 1915, referred to above, includes a kind of political credo: in my soul since my first and tender babyhood I always was accustomed and shall ever remain accustomed to unite in the same love my original German country and my Englisch home. Blücher and Wellington, the glorious heroes of Leipzig and Waterloo ... such will be, in spite of all wars, in spite of temporary hatreds, which my heart will never understand nor admit, my distinct and deepest feeling until my last breath, and after a few more sentences: The anniversary of Waterloo is near; do not forget that on that day the united forces of my two beloved kin-related countries, Germany and England saved Europe and the world from the most unbearable tyranny by their combined heroism⁽²⁰⁾. He then repeats the wording of his will of this same year 1915 that ends: God grant my German fatherland strength and victory in battle, moderation and wisdom in victory, and well-being, happiness and blessings to its own and to humanity as a whole.

Thoughts such as those expressed in letters to Phillips in 1915 were not popular in England or Germany, but they reflect with certainty his deepest political beliefs. For a European in the best sense of the word, which Ferrary was, the First World War was a human tragedy: This war cuts my poor heart in two, and acts upon my physical and moral health most perniciously he wrote to Phillips, and that was the absolute truth; Ferrary had, in his own words, close friends in both Belgium and Serbia - he himself referred to relations, which to me, however, is very doubtful - and he wanted nothing more earnestly than not only peace, but the friendship ... restored between my dear Germany and my no less dear England, so that my heart may no longer be torn to pieces by that painful and useless struggle. Ferrary's wish went unheeded, and the hatred between the nations increased constantly.

The outbreak of war had found Ferrary in Holland; he remained there for a time and then returned to Paris. This was possible, because Ferrary had had Swiss nationality since 1908. In early 1915 he travelled from Paris to Vienna (!) where he had previously lived from 1906 to 1909 and had also spent most of 1911. He remained for about a year in Vienna and also at his beloved villa on the Attersee lake, and he then travelled to Switzerland. The French government refused to allow him to re-enter France; he remained in Switzerland and died on the 20th May 1917 as Philipp Édouard Arnold in Lausanne, although he had mostly lived in Ticino, especially in Lugano and Berzona which appears on his death certificate, wrongly, but apparently based on his own information, as his place of birth⁽³⁰⁾.

Figure 72 Two pages from Ferrary's Testament of the 30th January 1915. The pages shown contain his provisions regarding his final resting place and the disposal of the stamp collection.

While he was in Vienna Ferrary wrote, in his own hand on the 30th January 1915, an eight-page will, to which on the 21st January 1917, that is only a few months before his death, he added two codicils. When he died the will was found in Ferrary's Geneva apartment, where it was supposedly found on the 30th July (but in fact probably on the 30th June) it was found by his executor, the Swiss federal judge Dr Agostino Soldati. The formal reading of the will took place on the 23rd July 1917 in the "Pretura" (magistrates' court) at Lugano⁽³¹⁾. The will begins with the sentence: Now that I am enjoying here in my native Austria a spiritual and human peace of mind, which in other countries under terrifying circumstances has not been equally granted to me, I write down my last testamentary dispositions.

Ferrary made a bequest to the Capuchin monastery at Bludenz; in case of rejection the Archbishop of Vienna, the German national church of Santa Maria dell'Anima in Rome and the Archbishop of Breslau (Wrocław) in this order. All the named institutions refused the bequest, probably due to the likely complications and court cases, as the bulk of the assets were in France. Ferrary remembered in his will approximately 50 individuals, eleven parishes, six religious institutions, the "Philatelic Society London" and the "Turkish Red Crescent" with individual bequests. Although these mostly took the form of lifetime annuities, they were also often transferable to the wife or children, either in full or at half their value. It is not worthwhile to enumerate them individually here. The total of all the individual donations was approx. 1,200,000 kronen and that of the lifetime annuities approx. 380,000 kronen per year. (In 1914 one krone was approx. 0.85 reichsmark) These sums alone enable the size of the assets to be estimated; at the time of Ferrary's death his estate could have been valued at approximately 100 million francs which, however, is not clear from the Will.

Ferrary's main legacy is of particular interest: he left to his good and dearest brother Albert Arnold Fillatraud, known as Albert Arnold, domiciled in Lugano [where Ferrary also lived] and currently in Paris, 66 rue de Rivoli an individual capital sum of 800,000 kronen, large parts of his coin collection and one-third of the balance of my entire estate after the payment of legacies, endowments and taxes for his lifetime. In no biography of Ferrary, even that of Bohr who must have read the will, is this name mentioned. Ferrary refers to him as his "brother" as he had the now-deceased Édouard Boulanger and he stresses elsewhere in the will that he does not make him his sole heir, so as to protect him from any embarrassment, juridical difficulties or attempts to contest (!) the will. Ferrary continues: I further advise him always to think of his good, blessed mother, who brought him up in the Christian faith, to remain good and pious, and in remembrance of me, his beloved brother, just as we made a solemn oath to each other in the Attersee chapel, to remain truly and adamantly loyal to the soul of Germany and German steadfastness as, to my inner joy, he has remained during the present crisis [he means the World War].

There cannot be any doubt that it is from Albert Arnold that Ferrary took the forename Arnold, and it is therefore inadmissible to attribute this name to his boyhood, as for example Bohr does. The relationship with Fillatraud, of the origin of which we know nothing, must have come about after the death of his “brother” Boulanger, therefore around 1890 at the earliest, and by 1905 at the latest. In 1915 Fillatraud was engaged to a certain Bertha Palliet, to whom Ferrary left a lifetime annuity of 10,000 kronen, together with her mother and her brother Hector, all of whom lived at 66 rue de Rivoli in Paris. (It will be recalled that Ferrary also married Boulanger and paid him a substantial dowry). Ferrary’s identification with “Arnold” was so close that he died under this name and probably also adopted his year of birth. There must, however, have been an - unknown to me - legal document, or perhaps an adoption, that enabled Ferrary to refer in his will to his “brother” and to sign the will as Philipp Arnold La Renotière.

Ferrary’s instructions regarding his stamp collection are naturally of particular interest to philatelists. It is generally known that with proud joy he bequeathed it to the German nation. However, nowhere is it mentioned that the “Great Britain and Colonies” section was intended for the British Museum, to complete the Tapling collection, in particular so that the unique item “British Guiana One Cent 1856” would remain in Great Britain. Because of England’s entry into the war, which ... forces upon us a repugnant, unexpected war that is contrary to nature, he distanced himself from this: despite amending my primitive intentions to give the appearance of a bitter sense of hatred against England, and to give this country, which I firmly trust, ... a favourable memory of me, he left the “Philatelic Society London” an annual allowance in perpetuity of 6000 kronen for research into British colonial stamps.

Regarding his bequest to the German nation - this is the beneficiary, not the postal museum - he specified that for three years after his death the collection should be made available to the public under the name “The Arnold stamp collection” (!) It should also not be incorporated into the existing postal museum collection but exhibited in a separate room. Ferrary emphasised for private, family reasons that neither the bequest that I have made to the German nation nor my identity should be reported in any newspaper or philatelic journal. For the “maintenance and completion of the collection” he established a perpetual annual income of 30,000 kronen and in addition to this a further 6000 kronen for its management.

He also made preparations for his final resting place: It is my earnest wish not to rest outside my dearest German Austria, especially not on French territory, if I should happen to die in France. My grave should be plain and simple: under a cross there should only be my name Philipp Arnold (!) on a marble tablet and under this on a second line the date of my decease. I forbid any more detailed inscription and any more data ... It is also my sincere wish that my brother Albert should rest beside me in the same place. In a codicil of the 21st January 1917 he altered his original request to be buried at the Capuchin monastery at Bludenz, specifying the Attersee if possible in or near the Woodland Chapel - here he and Arnold had made their sacred oath - or in Weittenbach or in the cemetery at Steinbach.

Figure. 73: The “Woodland Chapel”, endowed by Ferrary, which he intended to be his last resting place and where he made a “blood brotherhood” with Albert Arnold Fillatraud.

Figure 74: This is what remains of Ferrary’s grave. The grave plate is attached to the side entrance of the chapel.

These provisions in the will were at least partly carried out, though Ferrary’s grave no longer exists. The little marble tablet with the inscription (translated) “Here rests Philipp Arnold, died in May 1917 at Lausanne” is now “in an inconspicuous position attached to the church outer wall”. Moreover, Ferrary’s will is striking testimony to the old (German) saying “Man thinks and God directs”. Not one legacy, not one annuity was actually paid out, and the inflation in Austria did not help. In France, Ferrary’s instructions regarding his collections were disregarded in the most awful manner: all the collections went under the hammer. The rejection of the inheritance gave rise to some guesswork throughout. I have given above the most likely reason for this rejection. Italian relations appeared, to whom the inheritance was eventually awarded⁽³²⁾. “Sic transit gloria mundi” one might say: the immense assets were wasted on the third generation.

After this rather more detailed than usual account of the life of Ferrary the man, which despite all his wealth was more a life of suffering than of enjoyment, it is now the time to talk of Ferrary the philatelist, and of his collection. It is universally agreed that Ferrary had the largest stamp collection that any mortal has ever put together and, I would like to add, will ever be assembled. It was when he was about ten years old, that is around 1860, that during a visit to Germany he began to collect; the basis of his collection consisted of stamps of Hanover, whose army was defeated at Langensalza⁽²⁹⁾. In any event, this is Ferrary’s own description, though the question remains open as to whether he hadn’t also here - as so often - allowed wishful thinking to replace reality, as it is much more likely that he began collecting them in Paris, but he would not want to admit this.

He soon became a good customer of the Paris dealers, and it is clear that his larger purchases were financed by his mother. However, he did not only make purchases in Paris: very soon J.-B. Moens in Brussels, Stafford Smith in Brighton and Stanley Gibbons, at that time in Plymouth, were among the dealers who supplied the young Ferrary, whose idols - “my gods” as he himself put it - were Pierre Mahé and J.-B. Moens. They, however, couldn’t stand each other and were in constant dispute with each other in their respective journals. His good relationship with Moens remained unaffected, and in fact in 1891 he supported him in the “Parisot affair”⁽³³⁾.

The young man occupied himself with his philatelic treasures and in 1865 - when just 15 years old - he published two articles in Mahé’s journal, on the stamps of the Cape of Good Hope and on the Pony Express⁽³⁴⁾, but this was to be his last literary work on a philatelic topic for quite a long time, after Maury in 1866 greatly shortened, against his will, an article that was of a somewhat political nature⁽³⁵⁾. A reply to the Timbre-Post about the first issue of Hawaii appeared in 1874, and a short essay on the first and second issues of Kashmir two years later in Mahé's Gazette des Timbres⁽³⁶⁾.

At about this time (ca.1874) Ferrary appointed Pierre Mahé as his philatelic secretary and curator of his collection, and this was probably the first time in the history of philately that someone was paid to take care of a stamp collection. Mahé held this position until his death in 1913; he was succeeded by his son Édouard, whom Ferrary, however, names in his will as Magloire Mahé. Ferrary later entrusted Schmidt de Wilde with the arrangement of his postal stationery, as assistant to P. Mahé. Ferrary left both of them an annuity of 8000 kronen in his will in recognition of the good and honest management of my stamp collection and as a token of true personal friendship.

The collection was housed in the right-hand wing of the palace in the "rue de Varenne" which he occupied, on the first floor, where two rooms were devoted to the stamp collection. (The coins were directly over the stamps on the floor above). Phillips gave an exact description of the furnishing of the rooms and the storage of the stamps (not in albums!) that is all the more valuable as it was a privilege granted to only a few people to see Ferrary's philatelic treasures with their own eyes in his lifetime. He also vouched for the oft-repeated story about Ferrary's financial manager Progin, who every Monday would supply the money for purchasing stamps to the value of 50,000 francs, in the form of banknotes of various denominations which were pinned to a board behind P. Mahé's desk⁽³⁷⁾. It is not that 50,000 francs were spent every week, as has sometimes been claimed - that would have been impossible in practice - but this sum was the maximum amount available for purchasing stamps in one week. All the same it is a fantastically high amount, when one considers that at that time the annual budget of the "Bibliothèque Historique de la Ville de Paris" was 40,000 francs, and this was regarded as a particularly generous budget⁽³⁸⁾.

As early as the 1870s Ferrary's collection was already quite extensive; since the mid-1880s it had certainly been the best and largest, and he constantly endeavoured to expand and complete it. To this end he constantly toured Europe, every year he visited with great regularity and almost always at exactly the same time as in the previous year England, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Serbia, Romania and Italy. He was in contact with all the main dealers of his time in Europe and in the U.S.A. and was a customer of J.-B. Moens, P. Mahé, V. Robert, Ph. Kosack, E. Stock, Stanley Gibbons Ltd. (Ch. Phillips), W. H. Colson, the Calman brothers (Scott & Co.), S. Friedl, E. Zumstein, W. S. Peckitt and innumerable other dealers, among whom there were also companies of dubious reputation, with whom he often had problems. Phillips told him of a specific case in which he accused a very questionable company of dealing in forgeries, but he said that he would prefer to buy a hundred forgeries, if he could also acquire a particular speciality that could only be purchased from this dealer.

Phillips perhaps referred to the firm of Benjamin & Sarpy, who since 1888 in London had conducted a thriving trade in forgeries at 1 Cullum Street, and who gave their business card to "trusted" people stating "forgeries of all kinds supplied in the shortest time". Fred Melville told of a visit that Ferrary made to Sarpy, about which Sarpy, who had a great sense of humour, apparently told him personally. I am not inclined, however, to vouch for the authenticity of the story, but it is so amusing that it should not be withheld from the reader⁽³⁹⁾. Ferrary enters the shop "Good morning, Mr Sarpy." - "Good morning, Mr Ferrary.". "Do you have anything for me?" - Sarpy thinks it over: "I think we have a Straits Settlements with inverted overprint". Then in a louder voice over his shoulder "Do you hear me, Ben, I said that somewhere we have a Straits Settlements with inverted overprint. Mr Ferrary would like to see it". Rumbblings in the background, then "I think you are right, I will see". A few minutes later the forgery, straight from the press, is shown to Ferrary, who purchases it. Sarpy: "Say, Ben, don't we have one with double overprint, one inverted"? - Ben (in the back room): "But of course, just wait a minute and I will look for it". This forgery is also promptly produced and sold to Ferrary. As the Italians say about such stories "Si non è vero, è ben trovato" (If it isn't true, it is well invented). It is also possible that the famous Georges Fouré gained Ferrary's trust and slyly deceived him, as a faithful buyer of Fouré's creations⁽⁴⁰⁾.

But however much Ferrary also bought from the dealers, his collection would never have achieved the unchallenged top position if the opportunity had not presented itself to him to purchase en bloc some of the leading collections of his time. The best buy he ever made was doubtless the Philbrick collection which he bought in 1882 for an impressive £8,000 (at that time 160,000 RM). The reader will remember that it was Judge Philbrick who in 1866 had purchased the collection of G. Herpin. Mahé, who must have known of this, once mentioned to Phillips that the Philbrick collection exceeded everything that Ferrary had owned in his collection until that time; it constituted the actual basis of the famous Ferrary collection. However, this was not the only important collection that he purchased intact.

About the years later, in 1893, Baron Arthur de Rothschild (1852-1903), one of the founders and until 1880 President of the Société Française de la Timbrologie decided to part with his 145-volume collection, which also fell into Ferrary's hands for the relatively low price of 150,000 gold francs = 120,000 RM. The purchase was such a closely guarded secret that The London Philatelist, in its obituary of Rothschild, assumed that the collection probably still remained in the family's possession. Both the Philbrick collection and also that of Rothschild included the 2d. Blue "Post Office" Mauritius. He also purchased in addition some important "specialised collections": as early as 1878 the Australia collection of Sir Daniel Cooper, who had lived for many years in high positions in Australia, for the then enormous sum of £3,000 (60,000 RM), in later years another Australia collection, that of the London philatelist W. B. Thornhill, in 1890 the Japan collection of E. D. Bacon and others⁽⁴¹⁾.

The most important individual item that he was able to add to his collection were the famous British Guiana One Cent carmine in 1878, the 3 skilling error of colour of Sweden in 1894, and at about the same time the Baden 9 kreuzer green error of colour. For the British Guiana, which Thomas Ridpath of Liverpool sold to him, he paid the unheard-of record price at that time for an individual stamp of about £150; he purchased the Swedish 3 skilling banco yellow and also the damaged sheet of the red "Sachsen-Dreier" from S. Friedl in Vienna. Ferrary never sold a single stamp in his whole life, also he never gave duplicates in payment; even the number of his exchange partners was restricted to a very small circle, such as T. K. Tapling, to whom he gave an unused 2d. Blue "Post Office" Mauritius in exchange for a stamp of Afghanistan (!) that was missing from his collection, and which we now know was a forgery⁽⁴²⁾; Ferrary twice exchanged used "Post Office" Mauritius stamps for American "postmaster" stamps - in this case his partner was W. H. Colson -, so that at the time of his death, from the original seven "Post Office" Mauritius stamps "only" four were in his collection.

It would be pointless to list all the rarities that FERRARY owned. In this regard it is very instructive to study the 14 auction catalogues, although unfortunately these catalogues were rather carelessly edited, as the object was the fastest possible realisation of the “enemy assets”. And so many rarities disappeared into anonymous lots. Suffice it to say that within a mixed lot of “Uruguay” that Lichtenstein purchased in a Ferrary auction there was a famous collection that won the “Grand Prix” at New York in 1936.

But with all the wonderment associated with the richness of this collection, one should not forget that the Ferrary collection was also a child of its time and should not be judged according to modern standards. Naturally, it was much more comprehensive than the Tapling collection, that nowadays one can marvel at in the “British Museum”, but it was of exactly the same type: it was the individual stamp that was dominant in all its possible variations - Ferrary was particularly interested in errors and varieties of all kinds -, multiples were few in number, in any event they were not systematically collected. Here is a typical example of this: in the late 1880s Henry Calman had an opportunity to purchase an unused pair of the famous Canada 12 pence black. He offered it to FERRARY, who promptly replied that he did not want a pair, one stamp would be enough for him. As a result of this the pair was split: Ferrary and another customer each received a single copy⁽⁴³⁾!

It was no better with covers: Ferrary collected only the American “postmaster” stamps on cover as well as stamps with overprints whose genuineness would otherwise be difficult to establish; Hugo Griebert (1868-1924), the major London dealer and philatelist, who had been Hind’s agent at the Ferrary auctions, himself told Sir John Wilson that he had sold Ferrary an 80 cent stamp of the Modena provisional issue on cover (catalogue price today: 45 million lire). Ferrary took the cover, tore off the corner with the stamp and threw the rest into the waste paper basket; he just wanted to have the stamp (catalogue value today: exactly 10% of the price on cover)⁽⁴⁴⁾. Rare postage rates, multiple frankings, the rarity of particular frankings, colourful and mixed frankings etc. - all these did not interest him, to say nothing of rare postmarks and the cancelling of stamps in general.

The condition also did not conform to modern standards, because Ferrary had begun to collect when quality played a very minor role and he was never able completely to free himself from the philatelic ideas of his youth. If his collection were to be viewed today, as it should have been according to Ferrary’s last Will, then everyone would admire the abundance of material and some outstanding rarities, but the leading philatelists of our time would be, I am sure, disappointed in their hearts because with the Ferrary and also the Tapling collections the postal history aspect of philately was not only neglected but is completely absent.

This leads us to the much-discussed question as to whether Ferrary may be regarded as a great philatelist at all, or just a “purchaser from boredom” who was unable to give up this trait, but who was unable inwardly to associate himself with his treasures. The second possibility, which Brunel in particular wrote about in the literature and which one might easily consider, is that wealth indicates a lack of character and one might not think that very wealthy people are able to maintain real interests. It is clear to all learned, envious people that for all his wealth, Ferrary cannot have been a “real” philatelist at all. We are trying to find “sine ira et studio” (without anger and fondness) an answer to this question. It may be self-evident that the above criticism does not apply to Ferrary, but underlines only today’s view, which is very different from almost a century ago. Ferrary is to be judged according to the standards of his time, and in this there cannot really be any doubt that to his contemporaries he was the greatest philatelist.

Not so, naturally, Brunel, who paints a picture of a boorish, insecure neurotic with homosexual tendencies, a “maniac” who was neither interested in stamps nor had any clue about them⁽⁴⁵⁾. For Brunel, it is clear that Ferrary was not intellectually capable of creating such a collection, in outward appearance he was only a buyer who dutifully paid the bills, but in a sense was “remote controlled” by Mahé who in fact was the regulating and directing spirit “behind the scenes”. Under these circumstances, to bequeath the collection to the Reichspostmuseum was nothing more than an act of sheer ingratitude, as it was actually put together by a Frenchman. The seizure of the greater part of the collection - of a Swiss national! - would therefore seem to be an act of restorative justice.

Ferrary's former school friends were of a completely different opinion, as without exception they ascribed to him the highest intellectual abilities. This opinion was also shared by C. Phillips and W. H. Colson who, unlike Brunel, had known Ferrary personally: both of them regarded Ferrary not only as having a sound knowledge of stamps, but also as an unusually agreeable character. Brunel would naturally protest that the two dealers counted Ferrary among their best customers, and that they therefore had every interest in painting a flattering picture of him. Given these contrasting opinions, I thought it was appropriate to ask for the opinion of a distinguished lady graphologist, to whom I showed a letter from Ferrary that was written in English, without a signature or date. Needless to say, this expert had never heard of the name Ferrary and she is not a philatelist. Here is her opinion:

The writer gives a highly intelligent, versatile impression. It corresponds with a marked sensitivity that may extend as far as touchiness and vulnerability, so that he is very careful and cautious in his personal relationships: with regard to his ability to relate to people he is never extrovert. The basis of his character is a strong expression of intellect. ... He has achieved an above-average level in the makeup of his personality; he is well-formed, stable and imperturbable. The healthy determination is well controlled by a uniform, not very strong but clear resolve. In view of his very independent, individual nature the writer can only with difficulty be a subordinate: it is unbearable for him to be subject to any form of “spoon-feeding” whatsoever; in both his private and professional life he needs a high degree of freedom. ... Summary: The writer is a gifted, personally discreet and sympathetic man, above average level by far. A definite problem lies in his sensitivity⁽⁴⁶⁾.

As you can see, this evaluation matches so precisely that of Phillips and Colson, as well as with the assessment given here, that further comment is unnecessary. Completely unaffected by this is the fact that Ferrary, for reasons that nowadays we are only able to guess rather than ascertain, was decidedly neurotic, which in his later years sometimes bordered on paranoia⁽⁴⁷⁾.

Figure 75: This is Ferrary's letter to Colson of the 1st June 1914, which (without the date and signature) was used as the basis for the graphological expert opinion.

A genuine interest in philately is also not to be doubted. Through S. Friedl he took a keen interest in the establishment of the “International Postage Stamp Museum” in Vienna, and made generous donations to the museum which led to him, in June 1887, being named as its “founder”⁽⁴⁸⁾. He also visited the “Postage Stamp Museum” of E. Petritz in the Striesen district of Dresden. He was particularly impressed by a visit to the Reichspostmuseum in Berlin, under the very able management of C. Lindenberg, who also introduced him to the Secretary of State H. von Stephan. The structure and arrangement of the museum, which was excellent for that time, together with the psychological approach to Ferrary of von Stephan and Lindenberg was to Ferrary the decisive factor in leaving his collection to the museum in his will, after it had been whispered, around 1895, that it would one day be on view in the “Musée Galliera”, founded by his mother⁽⁴⁹⁾.

The fact that Ferrary did not often appear in public was due to his shy, timid nature. After all, he was one of the eleven founding members of the “Société Française de Timbrologie”, of whose committee he was a member in 1877-78, 1880-81 and 1882-83. In 1880 and 1882 he had at times preside over meetings of the Society, and he was also a member of the International Philatelists’ Club of Dresden and the (later Royal) Philatelic Society London⁽⁵⁰⁾ - the only philatelic society which he remembered in his will, with an annuity of 6000 kronen. He never acted as a juror - unlike his secretary Pierre Mahé - but at the Paris exhibition of 1892 he was described as a member of the “Société Française de Timbrologie” and was at least on the “Comité de l’Exposition”. Although asked repeatedly, he always firmly refused to exhibit, and during his lifetime few people could boast of having seen his collection; whoever received this rare privilege was obliged to maintain strict silence about it⁽⁵¹⁾.

Also in literature, after his early years he made little comment on philatelic matters: his “Patriotic-Philatelic Reflections” of 1884⁽⁵²⁾ are informative regarding his relationship with German Austria, which have already been mentioned, but regarding philately they are meaningless. In the ‘Jubilee’ volume of Le Timbre-Post in 1887 he wrote a short essay on the two types of the Bavaria 6 kreuzer stamp (Michel 4 I-II), which may well have been his last literary work⁽⁵³⁾.

That Ferrary sometimes purchased forgeries is undisputed. The somewhat tetchy Hanciau spoke particularly about “Ferrarités” produced for Ferrary, which is at least witty, if rather concocted. Such “Ferrarities” in the form of imitations and “custom-made” items are also well-known to numismatists and there were numerous examples in his coin collection. It may be, and in fact it is likely that Ferrary did not recognise some of these forgeries as such. This could happen even nowadays. That he often remained silent about knowing the true facts regarding an item is just as true. Ignoring all petty jealousies, it seems to me essential to reflect on the words of W. H. Colson: Denying himself many comforts unnecessarily, always generous and helpful to others, kindly to all. To those who really knew the man, his memory will ever be a blessing and an abiding place for Love⁽⁵⁴⁾.

The special postmark issued by the Austrian Post Office in 1967.

In 1968 Liechtenstein issued a commemorative stamp in his honour (Michel 504). In the U.S.A., more specifically in Pleasant Valley in New York State there is a society that carries his name (the Ferrary Society) and on the 50th anniversary of his death the Austrian post office dedicated a special postmark to him at his final place of rest, Steinbach am Attersee.

Notes to Chapter 6, Number 1: Ph. de Ferrary

1. As in the headline, Ferrary himself signed his picture; see Stamps 1 (1932) No. 2, p.45 and Fig. 64. The correct Italian spelling would of course be Ferrari with i, but it seems that Ferrary wanted to distance himself from it in later years by using the y; in his youth he wrote his name with an i; see below: 14, 17, 34 and 36 as well as p.171. Translation

- by Bohr: below note 3, chosen form of name: Philippe-Arnold from Ferrari de la Renotière is wrong in several respects; Swoboda was also wrong (below at. 3) pp.99, 104-05; the late Ferrary always spelled his name with a y.
2. Brunel; pp.12-15; Charles J. Phillips: Philipp La Renotière von Ferrary, The Collectors Club Philatelist (1923), Volume 2, No. 1, pp.10-15: literally identical to the article in Stamps (1932) Volume 1, No. 2, pp.45-47 & 61. Cf. already the obituary by Ch. J. Phillips: The London Philatelist (1917), Volume 26, No. 305, pp.117-120. A positive judgment about Ferrary also in Kehr, pp.189-191; L. N. & M. Williams, pp.58-64; see also de Rothschild, pp.46-49. All of these representations contain serious historical errors just like Bierman, pp.22-55, which is why I no longer refer to this compilation, which is brimming with gross errors. I didn't see Nils Strandell: Ferrari. Ett excentriskt levnadsode hans person och hans samlinger, Stockholm 1922, 10 pages, and Gustav Detjen Jr.: The Fabulous Ferrary, Pleasant Valley, N.Y., no date, 4 pages 8° (The Ferrary Society).
 3. Peter Bohr: "The Stamp King. Philipp Arnold de Ferrari's secret life", Dransfeld, undated, 69 pages in Klein-8° (Prien/Chiemsee 1982³, 79 pages). This novel-like representation is full of inaccuracies and lacks any critical sense. A French Translation by Bohr after the 1st edition: La vie mystérieuse du roi des philatelistes, Philippe-Arnold von Ferrari de la Renotière, published in: Balasse Magazin, No. 104 (February 1956) - No. 118 (June 1958) with exception of No. 114. I am quoting from the 1st edition, since the content of the 3rd is unchanged. The "gross factual blunders" for which Bohr reprimanded Helmut Swoboda: The King of Philatelists, in: 60 Years of the Danube Stamp Collectors Association. Festschrift (Vienna 1980) pp.99-109, especially p.100, whose own presentation, however, is also not free from errors.
 4. Dizionario biografico degli Italiani (1972) Volume 14 pp.283-291; on Maria Brignole Sale see ibid. pp. 197-199; See also Paul de Pauribar: Le Musée Galliera et la vie douloureuse de sa fondatrice, Bulletin de la Soc. Hist. d'Auteuil et de Passy, (1913-15), Volume 8, pp.94-99. In addition to blatant errors, this article also contains interesting details from an apparently well-informed source. Bohr, op. Cit., Pp. 7-8, incorrectly speaks of "Amélie" Brignole Sale and completely confuses the chronology; see also Swoboda, loc. cit., pp.101-102.
 5. De Lauribar, op. Cit., p.94 note 1 and then Brunel, p.12, note 1 (of course without citing the source). For the De Ferrari see provisionally Vittorio Spreti inter alia: Enciclopedia storico-nobiliare italiana, Part III (Bologna [1940]) pp.128-129.
 6. This important fact is not mentioned in any Ferrary biography; see for example: L'Intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux, 84 (1921) No. 1546, col. 205-06. The birth of a second son was obviously the parents' reaction to the stroke of fate of 1847, and this fact alone refutes the presumption of an illegitimate birth, which in my opinion would also be alien to the Duchess of Galliera. Cf. also Xavier Marmier: Journal (1848-1890), Part II (Genève 1968) p.390, which speaks of the death of a 17 year old son. Swoboda (above note 3) p.102, incorrectly claims that the marriage of Maria Brignole Sale was childless and then speaks of a younger son Paul, who he does not believe in himself.
 7. The "Reconstitution des actes de l'état civil" of. April 21st 1885 was before me. (All civil status documents before 1870 were burned in the fire of the Paris City Hall during the reign of terror of the "Commune".) The often-read year of birth 1848 is therefore incorrect; but see e.g. Brunel, p.12; Kehr, p.289 and L. N. & M. Williams, p.58; see also Swoboda, loc. cit., pp.100-101.

8. So de Lauribar (above note 4) p.94, who also states that the young Maria Brignole Sale was brought up together with the children of Louis Philippe, for which I do not know any other evidence, she indeed grew up in France. Brunel, p.12, copied de Lauribar again, but made a stupid comment. Louis Philippe naturally had himself represented as godfather, as was customary with monarchs; therefore also misses Swoboda, op. cit., p.102, who erroneously considers personal presence at baptism to be necessary.
9. In a particularly tasteless way by Brunel, p.12, Bohr (above note 3) p.12-13, turns it into a novel; in the same way also Swoboda, op. cit., pp.100-103. See note 13 below.
10. In the vacations of his classmates in the 1860s the rumor circulated that he was a son of the Emperor of Austria: L'Intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux 84 (1921) No. 1548, col. 306; see ibid. 85 (1922) No. 1552, col. 66.
11. Der Philatelist (1883) Volume 4, No. 11, p.103 and ibid. (1884) Volume 5, No. 9, p.112 and on this: The Philatelic Record (1883) Volume 5 No. 53, pp.199-200; No. 60, p.227 and ibid. (1884) Volume 6, No. 69, p.177; No. 70, pp.200-201. See also Swoboda, op. Cit., p.104 as well as note 20 below and especially note 35 below.
12. Kies reports Xavier Marmier, de I; Académie Française, in his diary for the year 1879: Journal (above note 6) Part II, p. 390. The quote from Infanta Maria Eulalia in: The London Philatelist (1917) Volume 26, No. 305, pp.117-118. See Genealogical Handbook of the Nobility. Princely houses, Part VIII (Limbourg/L. 1968) p.213.
13. This thesis is mainly defended by Bohr: (above note 3) pp.68-69, and Swoboda (above note 3) pp.102-03, while Brunel, p.12, does not agree with the statement “fils adultérin”. The discreet Phillips only speaks of the mother and does not go into a single word about the father, including the adoption, which Ferrary himself mentioned several times; See note 29 below. In: Philatelic Classics, No. 3 (May 1927) p. 15, he suddenly claims that Knight La Renotière of Ferrary (sic) was the second husband of the Duchess of Galliera, which is out of thin air and is nonsense.
14. Austrian State Archives Vienna. General administrative archive (aristocratic files): Letter from the Long Court for Civil Law Matters in Vienna dated 5 October 1886 (Z. 72174/21); PD. Dr. P. Csendes: Note 16 below, I would particularly like to thank him for his lengthy efforts to bring this file to light; it is mentioned in Bohr, op. cit., p.69, who draws completely wrong conclusions from it. Please note that the permission of the Vienna Regional Court only applies to the use of the surname La Renotière, but of course not to the use of the nobility title “Ritter von Kriegsfeld”. For this purpose, it would have needed the approval of the Most High, which was hopeless to be obtained and also of no importance to Ferrary. Haas, textbook, p.516, speaks in 1905 of “Philippe La Renotière in Paris”, who “was formerly called Ferrari”. The “Société Française de Timbrologie” initially called him “de Ferrari”, from 1891 “von Ferrari” and only from 1893 erroneously Philippe de La Renotière; see Bulletin de la Soc. Française de Timbrologie (1887-94) Volume 4, No. 53, p.142; No. 63, pp.319-320; ibid. (1895) Volume 5, No. 67, p.10.
15. In 1902 he was chairman of the “Vindobona” and from 1906-1908 also a member of the Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888; During these years he also played a leading role at the German Philatelic Days and was a member of the “Permanent Executive Committee” for several years. After the Vienna Exhibition of 1911, the Kaiser awarded him the Golden Cross of Merit.
16. For all information on the “La Renotière von Kriegsfeld” family, I am we owe our sincere thanks to Dr. P. Csendes, the deputy director of the Vienna City Archives. His

- information is mainly based on archival documents in the aristocratic and army archives. Something about the La Renotière family can also be found in Swoboda (above note 3) p.102.
17. In a letter dated 18. XI. (1893) to the director of the “Journal de Débats”, which had erroneously reported his death, as so often he found himself to be called “Ferrari”: “vous m’appelez M. Ferrari quand je m’appelle Philippe La Renotière de Ferrary”; he recalls that his adoptive father fought at Novara and Magenta and died a few days after the death “de ma mère bien-aimée” (on November 26th 1888). He continues: “Mon frère (!) Et moi sommes trop fiers de porter son nom... pour ne pas attacher un grand prix à cette rectification”; see L’Intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux 85 (1922) No. 1561, col. 594. This “brother” was, of course, E. Boulanger, who was adopted with him; See note 14 above. This letter also shows how Ferrary corrects reality according to his ideas. One has the impression that this Mr. La Renotière was an immensely important personality, while in truth he was just a little man whom the Duchess of Galliera would hardly have received. To think of a liaison between the two of them is utterly nonsensical.
 18. Through the mediation of French friends, I was able to inspect the inheritance documents both in the “succession Raphael de Ferrari, marquis de Ferrari, duc de Galliera” as well as in that of the Duchess. I would like to thank my colleague Michel Fleury, President of the “Ecole pratique des Hautes-Etudes” in Paris, and Mr. José Lothe - Paris, for his letters of 25th October 1980 and 18th July 1981 for his efforts. The question of inheritance is mostly erroneous. See for example: L’intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux 84 (1921) No. 1543, col. 65; de Lauribar (above note 4) p.96; Swoboda, loc. Cit., pp.102, 104 et al.; additionally see Marmier (above note 6) Part II, p.390.
 19. Marmier, op. Cit., Part II, pp.373-374. The comments in square brackets are explanations by the translator (C. Brühl). Note that these are diary entries made by a long-time friend of the family, which were not intended for publication and were only published in 1968. Even with all the rejection of the young Ferrary, it does not occur to Marmier to question his legitimacy. Of course, he was not interested in philately.
 20. Phillips (supra note 2), p.14; ibid. p.13 of the report on the incapacitation affair, which is based on a personal story by Ferrary, but therefore by no means has to be correct. My colleague PD Dr. P. Czendes: above note 16, attentive; see Fig. 67. On Ferrary’s state of mind see below pp.195-196 with note 46. Swoboda, op. cit., p.106, considers Ch. Philipps to be a “British collector friend”; he was the head of Stanley Gibbons Ltd.; on the same page Swoboda refers to the Belgian Hanciau, the partner of J.-B. Moens, as a “French expert”.
 21. De Lauribar (supra note 4) p.95; see ibid. p.96.
 22. L’Intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux 84 (1921) No. 1546, col. 207-08; ibid. col. 206 he is referred to as “germanophile, socialist, plein d’antipathie pour sa famille”. As early as the 1860s (!) He is said to have tried to change his name to “Ferrarich”; see also ibid. 84 (1921) No. 1548, col. 306 and above pp.171-172.
 23. As a fact, of course, she tells Bohr (above note 3) pp.19-20. Marmier (above note 6) Part II, p.390, puts the Duchess’ fortune at around 200 million francs. See above p.175-on Note 18.
 24. De Lauribar, loc. cit., pp.97-99. Swoboda, op. cit., p.104, lets Ferrary be born in the “Palais Galliera”; this only applies to the naming at the time. This has nothing to do - with today's "Musée Galliera". The "Palais Galliera" from 1850 is today's "Palais Matignon".

25. Maxime Du Camp: Une femme de bien, Revue des Deux Mondes (1890) Volume 97, pp.545-582, esp. p.552 and ibid. p.582. A warm appreciation of the Duchess of Galliera also in Marmier, loc. cit., Part II, pp.390-391 m. Note 1. Cf. also de Lauribar, op. cit., p.96. Misses Swoboda, op. cit., p.104, who speaks quite inappropriately of "active repentance".
 26. Du Camp, loc. cit., pp.548-549. It is peculiar that Maxime Du Camp does not mention her son Philipp at all and only reports on the death of the first son and the severe nervous crisis of the mother that followed: ibid. p.547; see also Marmier, op. cit., Part II, p.390: "Dès ce jour (i.e. The death of the first son), la pauvre mère a eu dans le cœur un déchirement qui jamais ne s'est guéri".
 27. See de Rothschild, p.46 with note 1; see also Marmier, op. cit., Part II, p.391, note 1 and Bohr (above note 3) pp.25-27. Where did Bohr get information about an [ang. ?] I do not know of any change in the will of the Duchess of Galliera related to the affair of the Count of Paris.
 28. L'Intermédiaire des Chercheurs et Curieux 84 (1921) No. 1548, col. 306.
 29. Ill. Briefmarken-Zeitung (1888) Volume 1, No. 15, pp.217-218. Here, by the way, Ferrary describes himself as the "adopted child of a brave Austrian officer", but withholds the fact that his adoptive father had already quit military service for 35 years at the time of adoption and was only a minor ministerial official.
 30. See Swoboda, loc. cit., pp.101, 108. Colleague Prof. Dr. A. Dubois - Lausanne, who I sincerely thank for his efforts, had informed me that the Ferrary's name did not appear in the Lausanne death registers. That is also true. From the excerpt from the death register submitted when the Will was opened, it is clear that he died under the name Philipp Edouard (the first name of his deceased "brother" Edouard Boulanger) Arnold (the first name of his "brother" Fillatraud). To make matters worse, the date of birth on the death certificate was May 1st 1868. It could have been the birthday of his "brother", I couldn't give another explanation. Incidentally, there cannot be an error in the Lausanne death register: Ferrary himself gave this wrong date in 1906 on his registration form in Vienna! See note 20 above.
 31. The following is based on the certified copy of the original Will dated July 23rd 1917 available to me, which is in the "Ufficio Dei Registri" in the "Pretura" of Lugano. I thank the "Ufficio dei Registri" for sending a photocopy of the file; see also Figure 72. Thank you very much to my colleague Prof. D. Dr. H. Swoboda - Vienna, who put me on the track, and Mr. Arch. Fr. Lösch - Schörfling am Attersee, who generously provided me with a copy of the Will before I received the photocopy from Lugano, Bohr (above note 3) pp.65-66, seems to have known the wording of the Will, but has not evaluated it sufficiently.
 32. Edgar Troimaux: La succession Galliera, L'Echo de Paris (1921) Volume 38, No. 13.488 of July 22nd 1921.
 33. Le Timbre-Poste (1891) Volume 29, No. 344, pp.93-94; see also Swoboda, op. cit., p.107, on the "Friedl affair"; see also Bohr (above note 3) pp.31-32. Friedl's son Otto had received an annual pension of 15,000 crowns from Ferrary in his will.
 34. Philippe de Ferrari: Les timbres du Cap de Bonne Espérance, and: Sur les Pony-Express, in: Le Timbrophile (1865) Volume 1, No. 11, pp.86-87, 89-90. Moens (read: Hanciau) did not miss the opportunity to make a correction: ibid. No. 12, pp.99-100 (only for the Cape of Good Hope).

35. Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste, (1866) Volume 3, No. 19, pp.150-151. Maury writes: "Vous ignorez, Monsieur, que la politique doit être tout à fait étrangère à ma petite feuille, et, en eût-il été autrement, je me serais bien gardé de publier les phrases que vous regrettez, parce qu'elles auraient été peu goûtées les Français et des Italiens! "The aversion to France and Italy is therefore already alive in the boy in 1865/66". See p.172 above, note 11. Ferrary would have protested vehemently had he seen that he was claimed to be an "Italian" in Italy in 1976: Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica (1976), Volume 32, No. 19, p.10.
36. Les timbres Hawaïens de la première émission, Le Timbre-Poste, (1874), Volume 12, No. 134, pp.11-12; Timbres de Kashmir, La Gazette des Timbres, (1876), Volume 4, No. 1, pp.1-3. Incidentally, in both essays he wrote his name with i.
37. Phillips (supra note 2) pp.10-11; see L. N. & M. Williams, p.61. See note 20 above.
38. Freundl. Information from M. Jean Dérens, librarian at this library.
39. L. N. & M. Williams, pp.139-140 (after Melville). For more on Ferrary's buying habits, see Bohr (above note 3) pp.37-38, 64-65 and Jakubek, p.256.
40. See Ton, p.66; Tyler, p.14. See below chapter 13, p.467, 470-on Notes 43-44 and ibid. pp.464-466.
41. On the collection of Baron Arthur de Rothschild see especially de Rothschild, pp.49-53, with interesting details. See The London Philatelist, (1904), Volume 13, No. 140, p.40; also Haas, Lehrbuch, p.515 In 1905 did not yet know that the collection was in the possession of Ferrary. As early as 1884 it had been estimated at a value of 200,000 francs: Der Philatelist, (1884), Volume 5, No. 9, pp.112-113. It seems to me a mistake to use Swoboda, op. cit., p.105, to relocate the beginning of the "decisive collecting activity" to the years after the father's death. On the other hand, Mahé's employment as a philatelic Secretary, which took place before his father's death, speaks against this. On Mahé see Ch. J. Phillips: Pierre-Marie Mahé. One of the earliest French Dealers and Secretary to Philip La Renotière von Ferrary, Stamps, (1933), Volume 4, No. 49, pp.261-262.
42. This stamp could be seen at WIPA '81 at the same time as the Mauritius, 2 pence, Post Office, for which Ferrary had exchanged it. The Afghanistan stamp is now in the H. Dietrich collection.
43. This is reported by Ch. Phillips: The Calmans, Henry Lincoln Calman, Stamps, (1934), Volume 6, No. 72, p.117, to whom Calman himself told this. Hence Bohr's assertion (above note 3) p.46 that Ferrary was one of the first to collect blocks of four or eight is nonsensical. That is exactly what he did not do; the few pieces in his collection are the exceptions that prove the rule.
44. See Maurice Burrus in: Sélection, No. 14 (April 1954) p.21; Wilson, p.50.
45. Brunel, pp.13-14.
46. Expert opinion of the handwriting expert Silvia Schuster - Braunschweig, from. 5th January 1980.
47. Swoboda (above note 3) p.100 also considers him a neurotic, but not a psychopath. The judgment made in the text is based on an interview with Dr. N. Tzavaras from the Geissen University Psychiatric Clinic, with whom I had the opportunity to discuss the Ferrary case.
48. Die Weltpost, (1887), Volume 12, No. 14, p.129; see ibid. No. 12, p.105; No. 16, p.145; No. 17, p.153, On the occasion of his visit in September 1887, he donated the essays and proofs from the Philbrick collection to the museum; see above p.84 and below chapter 16, pp.592, 594-on Note 8.

49. DBZ. (1894/95), Volume 5, No. 8, p.121, cf. above p.179 with note 24.
50. Bulletin de la Soc. Française de Timbrologie, (1875-77), Volume 1 No. 2, p.67; (1878-82), Volume 2, No. 13, p.97; No. 20, pp.293, 299, etc.; The Royal Philatelic Society, pp. 34 139-40.
51. Cf. for example Bohr (above note 3) pp.43-45, but I am unable to say what is based on concrete facts in this novel-like narrative. The Austrian Major Baier, who is mentioned here, is in any case historical: it is the future Czech Colonel Baier who was still a juror in Paris in 1925; see Figs. 214 and 216.
52. Deutsche Philatelisten-Zeitung, (1884), Volume 6 and thereafter: Die Weltpost, (1887), Volume 12, No. 12, pp.105-107.
53. Le 6 Kreuzer 1849 de Bavière, Le Timbre-Poste, (1887), Volume 25, Numéro Jubilaire, pp.XIII-XIV.
54. Colson of Boston - His Stamps., (Boston 1926) p.15. See also the appraisal in Swoboda, op. cit., pp.108-109.

2 Friedrich Breitfuss

Figure 76 Friedrich Breitfuss (1851-1911), St. Petersburg. (Photograph from about the year 1900.)

Friedrich Andreas Breitfuss was a contemporary of Ferrary: only eighteen months younger than him - he was born on the 15th September 1851 in St. Petersburg - and died six years before Ferrary, on the 7th September 1911 in Karlovy Vary. He died shortly before his 60th birthday⁽¹⁾. The Breitfuss family was from the Salzburg area, from where they were expelled in 1732 because of their Protestant faith; they found refuge in East Prussia. Soon after 1800 the grandfather Heinrich Ludwig Breitfuss (1786-1844) moved to St. Petersburg, where in 1827 he was “Master” of the Goldsmiths guild. His son Karl Gottlieb (1820-1868) was also a goldsmith and jeweller to the Tsar. The family was very wealthy.

Friedrich Breitfuss did not follow the example of his father and grandfather, but became a merchant. As a young man he spent several years in Marseilles (1872-73) and London (1873-75), lived from 1875 to 1877 in Odessa, but then returned to St. Petersburg where he took over the management of Bruno Saenger & Co. In St. Petersburg he married in 1888 Charlotte Riza-Porta, the daughter of an immigrant from the Grisons (The Swiss Canton of Graubünden or Grisons), a Swiss confectioner, who bore him five children, all of whom remained in the Soviet Union and were either victim of the Stalinist “purges” or of the German persecution in the Second World War⁽²⁾. Breitfuss was a successful businessman, who spoke at least five languages, traveled a lot and moved in the highest echelons of St. Petersburg society. He often visited Germany and England; he died in Carlsbad, at the Spa, following two operations on a frostbitten foot.

Breitfuss had begun stamp collecting as a student around 1864. His father supported his son's collecting enthusiasm by all ordering all of the stamps available priced at 10 Sgr. (= 1 RM of 1875) and below from the Leipzig firm E. P. Wuttig. The total price came to around RM 900, but without knowing it, Breitfuss, the father, had made one of the best business deals of his life, since among these stamps were, for example, the provisionals of the British Guiana 1 and 2 cents. His son was constantly striving to expand and improve his collection, which was easy, as there were few financial constraints. Since he was already an avid buyer in the 1870s and early 1880s, he was able to buy the greatest rarities, at by today's standards, ridiculously low prices.

Charles Phillips was able to see some of the purchase prices, as Breitfuss had the habit of noting the price, seller, and year to the hinge with which he placed the stamp in the album. So in 1879 he acquired from Dr. P. Kloss the ½ Ngr. blue Saxony error of colour for 60 RM, a “Sachsen Dreier” unused 1881 from Dauth in Frankfurt am Main for 10 RM; an unused pair of Zurich 4 cents, bought in the same year for 80 RM; the same price he paid, also in 1881, for an unused Tuscany 60 Crazie from Dauth, and a Tuscany 3 lire, with full original gum from Moens in Brussels for 120 RM; from Moens he also acquired an unused pair of Spain, 12 centavos rose/blue of the 1865 issue with frame inverted for only 5 RM, but it is virtually certain that the inverted frame had been overlooked. This is perhaps true also of the block of four Romania 1876 10 Bani blue, used, cancelled “Folticeni November 18, 1879”, from Moens in November 1880 for 4 RM delivered, as one stamp in the block was the 5 Bani error of colour.

The list could go on for pages; it is not only the rapid price movements in the last hundred years, but also the extraordinary richness of the Breitfuss collection, which gave him third place in the “World Ranking” after Ferrary and Tapling. Like Ferrary, Breitfuss was also lucky enough to be able to greatly improve his collection through the purchase of important collections of the time: for collection of the Prince Galitzine-Ostermann he paid about 15,000 Roubles in 1887 (= 30,000 RM), for the excellent collection of the St. Petersburg banker Theodor Notthafft (d. 1898), which included many items from the Ayer Collection, he paid more than 70,000 Roubles (= 140,000 RM).

Figure 77 A rare photograph of the young Late Grand Duke Alexis Michaelovich (1875-1895), that he gave to J.-B. Moens in 1893. The Grand Duke had decided to purchase the Breitfuss collection to donate it as the Russian National Collection to establish a Postal Museum. The plan was thwarted by the death of the Grand Duke.

It is no longer possible to reconstruct the full scope of the collection, since it was not sold by auction, but was purchased directly by Stanley Gibbons Ltd. Charles Phillips tells how he travelled to St. Petersburg in May 1907, accompanied by G. Hamilton Smith to browse through the material for ten days. No agreement could be reached on the valuation of the postal stationery, Russia, Finland and Russian Local Post Stamps, and Breitfuss also wished to keep a few countries, so as not to lose contact with philately, and chose Central America. The rest Phillips bought outright for about £30,000, i.e. about 600,000 RM of 1907⁽³⁾. An offer for around 650,000 RM for the complete collection that a group of Russian collectors had made several years earlier had been rejected by Breitfuss. In previous years Grand Duke Alexis Mikhailovich - who had exhibited in 1894 at the 25th anniversary of the “London Philatelic Society” in London⁽⁴⁾, had the intention of acquiring the collection to bestow on one of the great St. Petersburg Museums, and to provide them with Breitfuss as curator. This was undoubtedly inspired by the donation of the Tapling collection to the British Museum, but the plan was not carried out because the young Grand Duke died during the negotiations (d. February 18th 1895).

What we know about the scope and content of the Breitfuss collection is based solely on the information Charles Phillips set out in his two articles about Breitfuss. Based on this, he collected on the broadest possible basis, that is from the inclusion of essays, proofs, postal forgeries, local stamps, etc., to postal stationery of all kinds. He liked to deal with stamps that were plateable, such as those of New South Wales, Victoria, Tasmania, Mauritius, etc. Basically, he collected used and unused, but did not disregard beautiful covers, which were more richly present in his collection than in Ferrary's. Among the European countries, Switzerland, France and the German States were especially represented in particularly high quality. A highlight of his collection was the famous Baden letter with three copies of the 12 Kreutzer Landpost, plus four 1, and one 3 Kreutzer⁽⁵⁾. Breitfuss seems to have considered condition to be important from the beginning. Phillips reported that the Senf Company, in 1874 (!), had sent a cut-to-shape Moldova 27 Parale to Breitfuss who lived in London at that time. However, he did not like the item, which is why he allowed Sir Daniel Cooper to buy it for £2/10. When Philbrick learned of this transaction he commented: Oh, if stamp collectors will pay such prices, collecting will be impossible, and that will be the end of philately⁽⁶⁾. The prediction of the end of philately has become a popular sport since then.

Like Ferrary, Breitfuss was a member of the major philatelic societies of his time: as early as 1874, during his stay in London, he joined the “London Philatelic Society” at that brought him into contact with the UK’s leading collectors; Breitfuss was one of the selected foreign collectors allowed to contribute to the “Wedding Album” for the Duke of York, later George V; the Russian local post office stamps, which still exist today, are likely to have come from him⁽⁷⁾. In 1875 he was a member of the “Societe Française de Timbrologie”, but he took no active part in their work⁽⁸⁾. He belonged to the Dresden “International Association” from its beginning⁽⁹⁾, and was the first chairman, of the St. Petersburg section of the club founded in 1883. He was also a member of the “Berliner Philatelisten-Klub von 1888” from 1898 until his death. In contrast to Ferrary he was a juror at international exhibitions such as in London in 1897, Manchester in 1899 and Berlin 1904. In 1900 he was invited to Paris but did not attend.

In the early 1880s he also worked on literature, albeit on a modest scale. He wrote in Timbre-Poste mainly about the stamps and postal stationery of Russia⁽¹⁰⁾, and also contributed to its Jubilee number⁽¹¹⁾ which published his essay on the postage stamps of Persia, which was even reprinted in The Philatelic Record⁽¹²⁾. In later years he was until his death a collaborator with the Deutschen Briefmarken Zeitung of Dr. H. Brendicke, but, to the best of my knowledge, there is no signed article. So it repays the effort to bring the almost forgotten name Breitfuss back to mind. In addition to the rather exalted and eccentric Ferrary, while being less glamorous, more modest, and rock solid, Breitfuss was one of the leading collectors in the period before the First World War.

Notes to Chapter 6, Number 2: Friedrich Breitfuss

1. For Friedrich Breitfuss see the obituaries in: DBZ. 22 (1911) No. 10, p.165 and: The London Philatelist 20 (1911) No. 237, pp.234-235 and Charles J. Phillips in: Philatelic Classics, No. 6 (October 1927) pp.11-15 and almost unchanged: Frederic Breitfuss. The Greatest Russian Collector, in: Stamps 4 (1933) No. 54, pp.441-442.
2. I owe the information on family history to the kindness of my Giessen colleague Prof. Dr. Erik Amburger, who has what is probably the most comprehensive file on the history of the Germans in Russia. All Breitfuss before Friedrich Andreas were married to women from the German colony in St. Petersburg.
3. cf. Phillips (above note 1) pp. 441-442, where however nothing is said about the purchase price; but see: The London Philatelist 16 (1907) No. 187, pp.159 & 167. In later years the firm of Stanley Gibbons Ltd. quote the purchase price at around £50,000; see Chapter 9/§1 p.316 below.
4. The London Philatelist 3 (1894) No. 29, pp.112-113. The Grand Duke was himself a member of the “Society”; he died of consumption in San Remo, only 20 years old: The London Philatelist 4 (1895) No. 39, pp.61-62.
5. This letter is missing from Ewald Müller-Mark’s work: Old Germany under the magnifying glass, part I ⁵⁻⁶ (Berlin 1966) pp.28-29.
6. Phillips (above note 1) p.441.

7. The Royal Philatelic Society, p.22; Wilson, pp.7, 65; See below §3, p.212m. Note 4. See also: The late Mr. F. Breitfuss and the Royal Philatelic Society, in: The London Philatelist 20 (1911) No. 238, pp.243-245.
8. Bulletin de la Soc. Française de Timbrologie 1 (1875-1878) No. 2, p.68.
9. His photo is included in the commemorative volume for the 10th anniversary of the club in 1887.
10. Projects for stamped envelopes for the Caucasus and Russia, in: Le Timbre-Poste 19 (1881) No. 220, pp.35-38; The 2nd type of envelope 30 kopeks 1868, in: ibid No. 223, p.71; St. Petersburg and Moscow envelopes, in: ibid No. 224, pp.81-83; No. 225, pp.93-96; Envelopes from Russia 1848-59, in: Le Timbre-Poste 20 (1882) No. 230, pp.19-20; No. 233, pp.53-55; Unexpected discovery of a Russian stamp, in: ibid No. 233, pp.51-52; Notes on the rural stamps of Russia, in: Le Timbre-Poste 21 (1883) No. 242, p.16; No. 248, pp.61-62; 22 (1884) No. 260, p.68 (not signed) Several of these articles also appeared in German, see. Suppantchitsch, History, pp.630, 720.
11. Information on the first envelopes and stamps of Russia, in: Les Timbre-Poste 25 (1888) Jubilee Number, pp.II-IV.
12. Les timbres de la Perse, in: Le Timbre-Poste 22 (1884) No. 262, pp.84-88; No. 263, pp.95-96; 23 (1885) No. 265, p.8; No. 266, pp.17-18; No. 267, pp.29-31 = The Stamps of Persia, in: the Philatelic Record 7 (1885) No. 77, pp.95-98; No. 78, pp.115-119; No. 79, pp.134-36; No. 81, pp.162-165.

3. King George V of Great Britain

Figure 78 His Majesty King George V. (1865-1936) in a portrait by E. O. Hoppe in the Stamp Room at Buckingham Palace.

In philatelic literature, royal collectors are often mentioned and often mostly wrongly. Only two or three kings can really be described as philatelists in the full sense of the word: King George V of Great Britain, King Alfonso XIII of Spain (1886-1941; King 1902-1931) and King Carol II of Romania (1893-1953; King 1930-1940), of whom however King George was by far the most experienced and knowledgeable philatelist. He is therefore also the one dedicated to the following pages, whereby it goes without saying that it is not the monarch whose work belongs to history that should be honored, but only the philatelist⁽¹⁾. In contrast to all the other personalities dealt with in this chapter, the curriculum vitae of King George is only briefly outlined.

George Frederick Ernest Albert was born on 3rd June 1865 at Marlborough House in London, the second son of Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, who ascended the throne of Great Britain in 1901 as Edward VII. His mother, Princess Alexandra, was a daughter of King Christian IX of Denmark. He was a first cousin of both the German Kaiser Wilhelm II and the Russian Tsar Nicholas II. As the second son of the heir to the throne, he was first appointed a naval officer and embraced this career with enthusiasm, despite suffering from seasickness all his life suffering that befell him on every voyage - a trait he shared with Lord Nelson. When his elder brother Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, died unexpectedly on 14th January 1892, he became second in line to the throne after his father; Queen Victoria (1837-1901) bestowed the title of Duke of York on him that same year. On 6th July 1893, he married Princess Maria von Teck, who had once been his brother's fiancée. When his father finally became king in 1901, he proclaimed him Prince of Wales on 9th November 1901. He succeeded his father to the throne on 6th May 1910 and ruled Great Britain for over a quarter of a century. He died on 20th January 1936.

It appears that the Young Prince was inspired to collect by his uncle Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh and (since 1893) reigning Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, second-born son of Queen Victoria. The Duke owned a fine collection and was Honorary President of the London Philatelic Society 1890-1900. His brother, who later became King Edward VII, acquired this collection shortly before the Duke's death in 1900 and gave it to his son, the then Duke of York⁽²⁾. It was also Duke Alfred who, on the occasion of the opening of the London Exhibition of 1890, first introduced his nephew to the public as a stamp collector⁽³⁾. Prince George was then a general collector, as was common practice. In 1893 he joined the London Philatelic Society, which immediately elected him Honorary Vice-President. On the occasion of his marriage, which was celebrated in the same year, the "Society" gave him an album to which almost all members had contributed with selected pieces, including Breitfuss, Ferrary and of course all the prominent British collectors. The album contained a total of over 1500 stamps and is still in the "Royal Collection" as a souvenir, but almost all of the stamps have been removed⁽⁴⁾.

The Duke paid a visit to De Le Rue the printers in March 1894 to learn about the printing process used for the British stamps. In the same year, the Philatelic Society, London celebrated its 25th anniversary with an important exhibition, in which Prince George also took part with a large exhibit; it was the only time he also publicly showed non-British stamps⁽⁵⁾. In preparation for his future duties as King, his father had asked the constitutional lawyer Tanner to give the Duke private lectures on English constitutional history and constitutional law. From March 1894 these lectures took place regularly in York House, the London residence of Duke George. Harold Nicolson comments with slight irony: It must be admitted that the visits of Mr. Tanner to York House are recorded with less frequency than those of Mr. Tilleard, the Philatelist⁽¹⁾. J. A. Tilleard, then Honorary Secretary (since March 1894) of the London Philatelic Society, was the most important philatelic advisor to the Duke and later King until his death.

In 1896 he was offered the effective Presidency of the London Philatelic Society, which he accepted and held until his accession to the throne in 1910. This was undoubtedly a sign of his genuine interest in philately: a man in his position really did not need to bother about honorary posts. Of course, he was not able to chair the Society's meetings on a regular basis, but he did occasionally – as in the years 1904 and 1908 – make displays and was happy to make his collection available to the members for study purposes. He has always felt a close affinity to the society; It was not least thanks to his influence that King Edward VII gave it the name of "Royal Philatelic Society, London" in 1906.

He also showed a keen interest in exhibitions: for the international exhibition organized by the "London Philatelic Society" in 1897, he donated a gold and a silver medal for the ladies' class and participated "hors concours" in the class of rarities. He attended the opening ceremony with his wife and then visited the exhibition twice more, once with his father, the Prince of Wales, whom he was unable to convert to philately. Also in 1906 the "Society" organized an international exhibition in London, in which he - now himself the Prince of Wales - took an active part in the competition class: he received two silver medals (one for Mauritius and one for Hong Kong) and one bronze (for his British essays). These awards honor the Prince and the assessing jury alike. This was the only time that Prince George took part in an exhibition in the competition class. Again he donated a gold and a silver medal for the women's class and visited the exhibition twice more after the opening. In 1906 he made the decisive decision for the future of his collection to specialize by confining himself entirely to the stamps of the British Empire. He exchanged all non-British stamps for ones from his sphere of interest and now concentrated exclusively on this - still enormously large - collecting area.

After his accession to the throne in 1910 he resigned the Presidency of the Society, but immediately assumed the patronage and continued to be closely associated with it. Until the end of his life, he regularly paid his annual contribution as a simple member and made a sizeable donation when it came to buying premises for the Society. He also continued to make his collection available for the work of the Society's Expert Committee. From 1919 to 1935 - with the sole exception of 1924 - the Royal Philatelic Society enjoyed the privilege of having its inaugural session based on material from the Royal collection, a custom which has continued to this day⁽⁶⁾.

In 1910 he appointed his longtime philatelic adviser J. A. Tilleard (1850-1913) to be in charge of his collection with the title of "Philatelist to His Majesty". When Tilleard died in 1913, he entrusted Edward Denny Bacon (1860-1938) with the office of "Curator of HM the King's Philatelic Collection" and elevated him to the personal nobility in 1932⁽⁷⁾. As before, he made material from his collection available for displays. It had been the norm for many years that he regularly spent a few hours a week in his palace's "Stamp Room". As King, he would visit the Stamp Room three afternoons a week when curator, Bacon was in the habit of working there. Of course, this was impossible during the war, but the biographer of his private life, John Gore, notes that it was precisely the preoccupation with his stamp collection that gave him occasional hours of leisure and oblivion during those difficult years⁽⁸⁾.

On the occasion of the 1923 International Exhibition, the King invited around 100 Fellows and members of the Royal Philatelic Society, as well as a few outstanding collectors from abroad, to Buckingham Palace and personally displayed pages from his collection, from which 150 albums were laid out. Among those invited was Arthur Hind (1856-1933), who was considered one of the leading collectors at the time. Hind was a rich parvenu, uncouth and without the faintest sense of tact. Whatever a collector brought him, Hind claimed to own it better or in a larger unit. When the king showed him his truly stunning example of the blue Mauritius Post Office, he is said to have presumed to claim that he owned a pair! Sir John Wilson, to whom this was reported by American collectors who were present at the reception, says skittishly: This statement is probably too unkind to be true⁽⁹⁾, but it aptly characterizes Hind's mental attitude. When the "Roll of Distinguished Philatelists" was created in 1921, it was understood that King George V would sign first as the "Premier Philatelist of the World and first signatory to the Roll"⁽¹⁰⁾.

King George primarily collected "unused" and had a particular fondness for blocks of four. Letters, frankings, especially postmarks, interested him little or not at all. He shared this dislike with his philatelic consultants Tilleard and Bacon; However, it also had objective reasons: when King George died, the collection comprised 325 volumes. If the king had also systematically collected "used" items, possibly with single frankings, special stamps, etc., the collection would have reached an unmanageable size. On the other hand, he was very interested in stamp printing, plate errors, retouching and especially plating, whereby he particularly valued the research of Leslie R. Hausburg (1872-1917) and the American Charles L. Pack. Although he did not plate himself, he always endeavored to complete and improve the plates in his collection. He also assiduously collected original drafts, essays, imprimaturs, etc., in short, everything related to the stamp itself and its creation.

In matters of preservation, King George followed a healthy middle line: he desired to have clean and perfect specimens, while not succumbing to the luxury hysteria of our day. His philatelic tastes had been very much shaped by the London Exhibition of 1906, at which Lord Crawford, a personal friend of his and who, at his request, succeeded him as President of the Royal Philatelic Society, won the Grand Prize. Lord Crawford, who came to philately late - around 1890 - greatly influenced the Prince of Wales' style of collecting, and the King has essentially maintained it. King George possessed a solid and rich knowledge of philatelic affairs, which, however, could not rival that of his advisers Tilleard or Bacon. He simply didn't have the time to do that; however, he regularly read The London Philatelist and was familiar with the standard literature⁽¹¹⁾. He far surpassed a Hind or Caspary in philatelic knowledge, he was hardly inferior to a Lichtenstein. George V loved his stamps and nowhere did he find better rest and respite from the pressures of government than in the Stamp Room at Buckingham Palace, when contemplating his collection with his friend Sir Edward Bacon.

King George owned by far the largest British Empire collection ever assembled; at the moment of his death it contained 325 albums bound in red Morocco leather, which is why it is known as “The Red Collection”. It should be noted that it primarily contains unused stamps. Thanks to the careful study by Sir John Wilson, it is possible to trace the genesis of the Royal Collection over the decades like probably no other case⁽¹²⁾. Of course, this is less about the acquisition of individual pieces than of entire collections, whereby it should be noted that King (Prince) George only ever acquired items from a specific special area, such as a colony. To enumerate them all in detail would be tiresome and would probably not tell the reader much.

I shall therefore confine myself to a few outstanding collections that deserve attention simply because of the person who built them up. The Earl of Crawford sold King George his collection of essays, proofs and telegraph stamps (1913), Major E. B. Evans his famous collection of Mulready covers (1917)⁽¹³⁾, J. R. W. Purves a large Australian Commonwealth collection (1930), L. L. Hausburg his India collection (1916)⁽¹⁴⁾, proofs of New South Wales (1917) and a collection of Victoria (also 1917), C. J. Daun, his Zanzibar collection (1918), R. B. Yardley a highly specialized study collection of Griqualand West (1916), Ch. J. Phillips the Fiji Islands (ca. 1910/12)⁽¹⁵⁾, Ch. L. Pack his splendid collection of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia (1912); there were also collections from Egypt, the Bahamas, Barbados, Heligoland, St. Helena, the Transvaal and many more.

Of course, the King did not disdain important individual pieces. Since E. D. Bacon was not very familiar with market prices - it was difficult for him to part with the price expectations of his youth - the well-known dealer and important philatelist Charles J. Nissen (1880-1944) acted as the King's auction agent⁽¹⁶⁾. One of the most important acquisitions was that of the by far most beautiful mint copy of the Mauritius, Post Office, 2 pence, at the then record price of £1450 in January 1904 - the underbidder was, of all things, the Berlin Reichspostmuseum⁽¹⁷⁾. The sum of £1450 remained the highest price paid for a single stamp until the Ferrary auctions. When his large collections were liquidated, King George naturally had the “first pick”; he was thus able to acquire important pieces from the Duveen collection, and he secured almost all the pieces important to him from the Ferrary auctions. The rumor was then spread that Hind had bought the famous British Guiana, One Cent, against King George. We now know that the opponent was Maurice Burrus, who wanted to teach Hind a lesson⁽¹⁸⁾. King George wasn't very interested in the stamp - which only speaks to his good taste. Nor did he buy it when, after Hind's death in London, it was offered again at a Harmer auction but not sold.

Figure 79: A look inside Buckingham Palace's “Stamp Room” today, which, however, is not identical to that from the time of King George V.

The Royal Collection was continued after the death of King George V, although the interest of his successor, King George VI, is no longer as strong as that of the collection's founder. It is now bound in blue leather and is therefore called “The Blue Collection”. It includes all stamps from his reign including all designs, color proofs, proofs etc. After the death of King George V the collection was housed in other rooms of the palace.

Figure 80: A shelf with volumes from the “Blue” and “Red” collections, so named after the color of the leather bindings. Only the “Red Collection” is that of King George V.

The previous curator Sir Edward D. Bacon died in 1938; his successor was Sir John Wilson, Bart. Appointed to hold the office of Keeper of the Royal Philatelic Collections until 1969.

Sir John Wilson (1898-1975) was one of the most prominent figures in British philately. President of the Royal Philatelic Society 1934-1940 and again 1949-1950, he was a member of its Expert Committee, first as a member and later as Chairman for no less than 48 years. He was a member of almost all juries of the major international exhibitions since the WIPA in 1933, but especially after the Second World War, and had a significant influence on their activities (Figure 87). However, his greatest achievement as keeper of the Royal Collection was undoubtedly the publication in 1952 of the monumental catalog of King George V's collection: a folio bound in rich red leather - the binding alone is a masterpiece - offers up Approx. 420 pages with twelve color plates and 40 photo plates of the most important pieces as well as 16 photo pages on the history of the collection, is a unique documentation and is an imperishable monument to the philatelist George V⁽¹⁹⁾. This is probably the most elaborate philatelic work that has appeared to this day. In 1969, Mr. John B. Marriott, MVO, was appointed as Sir John Wilson's successor, whose high level of professional competence guarantees the continuity of the Royal Collection.

Comments on § 3: King George V

1. The sensitive book by the well-known diplomat and writer Sir Harold Nicolson is dedicated to the public effectiveness of King George V: King George V., London 1952, often.
2. The Royal Philatelic Society, p.111.
3. On George V as a philatelist: The Royal Philatelic Society, pp.112-14 and especially. Wilson, pp.5-17 and ibid. pp.18-32; See last Bierman, pp.65-78 (essentially after Sir John Wilson).
4. It only contains a few local postage stamps from Russia; see Wilson, p.7 and ibid. Figure before p.15. See p.207 above with note 7.
5. The Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the London Philatelic Society. Exhibition of rare stamps, in: the London Philatelist 3 (1894) No. 29, pp.110-128, with a detailed description of all exhibits; that of the Duke on p.128. Also exhibiting were: Grand Duke Alexis Mikhailovich, W. B. Avery, M. P. Castle, R. Ehrenbach, Major E. B. Evans, D. Garth, the Earl of Kingston, E. J. Nankivell, F. A. Philbrick, Dr. C. W. Viner, W. T. Wilson et al.
6. See John Marriott: Displays from the Royal Philatelic Collection, in: The London Philatelist 79 (1970) No. 932/933, pp.176-182. The essay also lists all participations in international exhibitions from Bern in 1910 to Sydney (ANPEX) in 1970.
7. See Wilson, p.59. For Sir Edward D. Bacon see in detail under chap. 21/§4, pp.959-965.
8. John Gore: King George V. A Private Memoir (London 1941) p.296 (on the year 1915): "The impression gained from reading his diary is of his difficulty in escaping from his thoughts. The frequent reference to an hour snatched with Mr. Bacon and his stamp collection confirms that it was in this hobby that he found the most effective means of forgetfulness". Incidentally, Gore nowhere in his book goes into more detail about George V as a philatelist, which is surprising in a "private memoir" and can be regarded as a falsification of the personal interests of the monarch.

9. Wilson, p.27. On this occasion Hind presented the king with a color reproduction of his British Guiana, One Cent: "It is a very poor illustration", comments Wilson, op. cit., but the original is no better.
10. The Royal Philatelic Society, pp.113-14.
11. Wilson, pp.11-12 & 15-17.
12. Wilson, pp. 18-32: The Growth of the Royal Collection.
13. It was from this collection that E. B. Evans wrote his seminal work on the Mulreadies. See below chap. 19, pp. 804-805. note 85; Chapter 20, p.899 with note 53.
14. This collection had also provided the material for a standard work by Leslie L. R. Hausburg: below chapter 20, p.899 with note 52.
15. For this see below chapter 9/§ 1, p.315
16. He is the author of the famous book on the plating of the Penny Black: The Plating of the Penny Black Stamps of Great Britain 1840, London 1922 (together with Bertram MacGowan), XX+122 pages in 4° with 40 photo plates in slipcase. See below chapter 20, p.906 on. Note 81: Chap. 25, p.1132 with note 18.
17. See Wilson, p.12 and orally. Information from Mr. J. Marriott, current curator of the Royal Collection. See also below chapter 16, pp.586-587 with note 2.
18. Below § 5, p.229 with note 3.
19. The Royal Philatelic Collection by Sir John Wilson Bt., Keeper of the Royal Philatelic Collection. Editor Clarence Winchester. Published by Viscount Kemsley at The Dropmore Press Ltd., London, England, (1952) in folio.

4. Alfred F. Lichtenstein

Figure 81 Alfred F. Lichtenstein (1876-1947) the “Patron of American Philately”.
(A photograph from the last years of his life.)

Alfred F. Lichtenstein was born on the 6th August 1876 in Brooklyn, in the heart of New York, into a southern German immigrant family. The parents lived in modest circumstances, but were still able to send their son to study chemistry at the Polytechnic Institute in Brooklyn, which he completed in 1896. He deepened his knowledge through supplementary studies at the University of Berlin. After completing his studies, he joined a chemical company in a junior position, but after a few years he became self-employed and founded his own company in Switzerland, specializing in the manufacture of synthetic paints and chemicals. Lichtenstein was the first to recognise the extraordinary importance of this sector, in which the USA was almost entirely dependent on imports from Germany and Switzerland. In this way he was able to expand his company, especially during the First World War, into one of the leading chemical companies and at the same time lay the foundation for a considerable fortune.

In 1921 his company became the property of the Basel-based “Gesellschaft für Chemische Industrie”, which was renamed CIBA-Geigy. Lichtenstein became “President” of the company until he handed over the management of his company to younger hands in 1946 and retired as chairman of the supervisory board. He was married to Anne Boyd Lichtenstein, by whom he had a daughter Louise, who followed in her father's footsteps and became a well-known philatelist as Mrs. L. Boyd Dale⁽¹⁾. It goes without saying that a man of his stature - this also applies physically: he was a giant of a man; in the photos of international juries he is at least half a head taller than his fellow judges (cf. Fig. 216-217) – had been appointed to many honorary posts; he was on the board of directors of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, where he had studied, a hospital in Long Branch/N. J. and many more Lichtenstein started collecting when he was just ten years old, and his love for stamps has stayed with him throughout his life. He was already one of America's leading collectors before World War I, but he took the crucial step to the top when he bought most of the Worthington collection for $445,000, a fabulous price for the time. We are indebted to Alvin Good, Worthington's philatelic secretary, for a detailed account of the negotiations at that time and the conclusion of the sale⁽²⁾. Lichtenstein kept only British North America, Mauritius, Cape of Good Hope, Switzerland, Uruguay, Argentina and large parts of Chile and Peru; J. C. Morgenthau sold the rest in several auctions in 1917/18; the $321,000 from his collection was considered the highest auction result before the Ferrary auctions of the early 1920's⁽³⁾.

On this, too, Lichtenstein appeared as one of the leading buyers alongside King George V, Hind and Burrus. In the mid-1920s he owned what is probably the largest collection in the world and won the “Grand Prix” at the major international exhibition in New York in a tough battle with his arch-rival Hind. It was the last time that members of the jury, including Lichtenstein and Dr. E. Diena, at the same time exhibited in the competition, which, however, in no way affected the correctness of the jury's judgments⁽⁴⁾. In later years, Lichtenstein exhibited out of competition in the Court of Honor.

Lichtenstein owned one of the greatest collections of classic stamps in the whole world, also of exquisite quality, up until around 1870. However, this only applies to a limited extent for the USA, since he only collected this country on letters: the wonderful US material from the Worthington collection he did not keep, but let it be auctioned off! Particular strengths were British North America, Mauritius, Uruguay and Argentina, but all other countries were also well represented. It is not without interest that Lichtenstein was no more interested in the famous British Guiana, One Cent, than were King George V or Burrus. This could not have been a financial issue for any of those named! As a special hobby, he collected in an old Lallier album The Whole World completely in the best quality⁽⁵⁾.

A reconstruction of the Lichtenstein collection is impossible, since parts had been sold during his lifetime, parts were auctioned off, other parts were donated to the Philatelic Foundation and, moreover, some are still in the family's possession. For example, in 1937 he sold his excellent Swiss collection for $275,000. The proceeds from the parts of the collection auctioned by Mrs. Louise Boyd Dale (1913-1967) during her lifetime and from the collections put up for auction after her death brought well over three million dollars. It is therefore impossible to say with certainty whether Lichtenstein or Burrus owned the larger collection. If one only looks at the extent, one must probably award the palm to Burrus; in the case of the classic issues, however, Lichtenstein undoubtedly deserves priority, as can be seen, among other things, from Heinrich Köhler's informative report on the 1926 New York Exhibition⁽⁶⁾.

Lichtenstein was a connoisseur of high degrees, far superior in this respect to men like Hind, Caspary, and Burrus. Herbert Bloch tells the well-founded anecdote that the master forger Sperati sent some imperforate Newfoundland stamps to the well-known American dealer and auctioneer Max Ohlman (1881-1957), who presented them at one of his auctions, provided with a certificate from John Klemann. The stamps were offered to Lichtenstein, who returned them after a week as counterfeits! When Ohlman asked Sperati, who was completely unknown to him, for a refund of the amount he had paid, he repaid the sum without hesitation⁽⁷⁾. Lichtenstein had excellent taste, was very concerned about quality, but was enough of a philatelist not to be willing to make concessions on interesting items.

Unfortunately, his great knowledge was never reflected in a publication. Besides King George V, who occupies a special position in view of his high office, Lichtenstein is the only one of the great collectors honored in this chapter who has not published a line about his collections, but this and his knowledge were the inspiration for many important publications. His enormous specialist knowledge also came into its own in international juries, to which he was appointed seven times between 1924 and 1937⁽⁸⁾. Here he consistently championed the conservative English line, which often brought him into conflict with "Continental" jurors.

He was not interested in modern collecting areas, his field was the classic until about 1870; here he knew his way around the world, not just the American continent. But even if he didn't publish anything, he at least commented on his treasures orally. At least once a year he presented parts of his collection in the Collectors Club and gave profound comments. For his Display of the 10th May 1923: The pence Issues of Canada, the Royal awarded him the Tillear Medal in 1924. In 1925 he gave a lecture in the Royal on British Columbia, 1929 on Newfoundland, 1931 again on British Columbia and Vancouver Island. He belonged to the Royal since 1921 and was their representative in the USA until his death⁽⁹⁾.

Lichtenstein was not only a first-class philatelist, he was also an important organizer and generous patron of philately. He always actively supported philatelic research by making his rich material available to anyone who was seriously interested, in a most liberal manner for inspection, but above all by making numerous philatelic works of rank - by no means exclusively on “classical” subjects - with well-known grants to be helped to be published. In particular, thanks to Dr. Herbert Munk he looked after the Kohl-Handbuch with his active help very much; he also acquired the copyright for all English translations for the Collectors Club, making essential parts of the Handbook available in translation to the English-speaking world. He encouraged Edwin Mueller to emigrate to the United States and helped him establish a successful business. He also gave help to many other victims of Nazi racial policy. He resigned from the Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888, of which he was a highly respected member, in protest against this “policy” of the regime.

He felt particularly close to the Collectors Club, of which he had become a member in 1911. His patronage was primarily to ensure that the Club was able to purchase its own house in 1925; He also contributed to the expansion of the library and served the club selflessly in numerous capacities - President 1918/19, member of the Board of Governors, etc. After retiring, he energetically pursued the plan of a major American testing agency, in the style of the Royal's Expert Committee. He was therefore the driving force behind the founding of the Philatelic Foundation in 1945 and its first president as well as Chairman of the Expert Committee to which leading American philatelists such as Theodore E. Steinway and Alfred H. Caspary belonged. He had conceived this Expert Committee as a purely amateur body, which could not be maintained in the long run. When founding the Philatelic Foundation he also had the idea of publishing the Scott catalogue as a catalogue edited by amateurs by the Foundation in order to in this way e.g. block Communist propaganda. Unfortunately, this plan did not materialize⁽¹⁰⁾.

Lichtenstein was particularly active in promoting American exhibitions. He played a key role in all international exhibitions that took place in the USA during his lifetime (1913, 1926, 1936, 1947, all in New York). As early as 1913 he was elected President of the American Association for Stamp Exhibitions and was Chairman of the exhibitions of 1913, 1926 and 1936; In 1947 he was content with the Honorary Presidency, but unfortunately he did not live to see the opening of the exhibition; In 1936 he was also President of the jury and also in 1947 designated to be so. On Lichtenstein's initiative, a novelty was introduced in 1936: the non-competitive Court of Honour, which brings together a few outstanding collections that are shown by invitation⁽¹¹⁾. This example quickly caught on.

It is not surprising that such an eminent philatelist as Lichtenstein received numerous honors. He was an honorary member of the Collectors Club, a Fellow of the Royal and signed the Roll of Distinguished Philatelists in 1927. In 1930 the Académie de Philatélie in Paris chose him as their foreign correspondent member. In the midst of preparations for CIPEX 1947, on the 24th February 1927, he died from a crushing blow while riding a bus down 5th Avenue. The Collectors Club honored the memory of its most distinguished member by endowment of the Alfred F. Lichtenstein Memorial Award, first presented in 1952⁽¹²⁾. This medal - the highest philatelic award in the USA - commemorates a great philatelist and at the same time one of its greatest patrons: the “Patron of American Philately”.

Comments on § 4: A. F. Lichtenstein

1. See Edwin Mueller's obituary in: Die Postmarke Volume 23 (1947) No. 420/21, pp.62-63; see also Harry Lindquist in: Stamps Volume 58 (1947) No. 10, pp.439-441; Kehr, pp.232-238; The Collectors Club Philatelist Volume 31 (1952) No. 5, pp.227 & 238; see most recently Bierman, pp.178-189, especially pp.178, 180 & 184-85.
2. See Good, pp.107-12 and Bierman, pp.108-111; prior to sale to Lichtenstein, Warren H. Colson had already sold from the collection for about $150,000 worth, primarily Postmasters, Transvaal, British Guiana and Australia; see Good, p.106 and below chapter 9 § 2, p.326 with note 6.
3. See below chapter 10, pp.396-397 with note 9; see also Harry L. Lindquist: George H. Worthington. One of America's First Big Collectors, in: Stamps Volume 3 (1933) No. 31, p.103.
4. See below chapter 15, p.575 with note 35.
5. According to information from George Turner, it would have been two albums (for unused and used), but Mueller (above note 1) p.62, speaks of only one Lallier album and J. Boker also believes that it is only one album (oral communication dated 16th February 1985. One would like to know which edition it was. Turner thought he remembered that it was the 1st edition, he was not sure though, since this album never appeared on the market, it's probably still in the family.
6. Köhl's Philatelistisches Magazin, No. 5 (March 1927) pp.4-15, especially pp.9-11.
7. The American Philatelist Volume 94 (1980) No. 9, pp.814-815.
8. Brussels 1924, Paris 1925, New York 1926, Berlin 1930, Vienna 1933, New York 1936 and Paris 1937. He was invited to Monaco 1928 but was prevented from attending. Regarding Lichtenstein's knowledge see also Kehr, pp.235-37.
9. The Royal Philatelic Society London, pp. 60, 61, 64, 65, 79 & 165.
10. According to a written communication from Mr. J. R. Boker dated the 7th November 1980. See below chapter 14, p.483; Chapter. 23, p.1085.
11. The Royal Philatelic Society London, p.69.
12. See below chapter 25, pp.1136-1137.

5. Maurice Burrus

Figure 82 Maurice Burrus (1882-1959).
The most significant European collector of the 20th Century.
(A photograph of him in his 40s.)

Maurice Burrus was born on the 8th March 1882 in the small Alsatian Town of Ste-Croix-aux-Mines i.e. in the famous Reichsland Alsace -Lorraine. His father came from a respected family of tobacco manufacturers; the founder this dynasty, Martin Burrus, had left Ste-Croix-aux-Mines in 1813 and settled in Switzerland, in Boncourt, near the French border, to undermine from there the tobacco monopoly decreed by Napoleon. The business prospered, and three of Martin Burrus' grandsons returned to Ste- Croix, but kept their Swiss citizenship.

Young Maurice completed his high school years at the “Collège Stanislas” in Paris (1894-1899), where he was an external student over the years 1899 and 1900 then Graduated with the famous French “Bac”. The choice of school location was natural even a political choice in favor France and against Germany. In this one respect it makes Burrus the exact counterpart to Ferrary. It was not until 1901/02 that he spent a long time in Hanover, as a bank apprentice to familiarise himself with the German language. Although it is said that within the family not a word of German was spoken. In 1902, Burrus joined the parental family company for which he undertook long journeys that took him to the USA, Canada, Mexico, Cuba, North Africa, Asia Minor and through all of Europe before the first world war

The first World War was for him, whose heart was for France of course, a hard blow. His hometown, in which also the paternal tobacco factory found itself, changed hands in the course of combat operations four times. Because Burrus refused to deliver tobacco products to the German army, he was, due to his anti-german attitude, condemned to eight months in prison and was afterwards Deported to Switzerland where the larger part of the family was resident anyway. After the end of the war he returned of course right away to Ste-Croix-aux-Mines, where he also acquired French citizenship. From 1932 to 1942 he even became an independent MP for Ribeauvillé (Rappoltsweiler) in the “Haut-Rhin” Department of the French national assembly. In June 1940 he gave his support to Pétain, but then withdrew completely from politics and went back to Switzerland, where he spent his last years of his life in Lausanne without moving back to France after 1945, apparently repelled by the narrow-minded “purges” of the Gaullists. In Lausanne, Maurice Burrus like Ferrary before him died on the 8th December, 1959 at the age of almost 78⁽¹⁾.

Maurice Burrus started collecting as a small boy. He himself tells how, as a seven-year-old, he saw letters with Papal State stamps from an uncle who was organizing old correspondence, which deeply impressed him. The uncle gave him a few letters that formed the basis of his first collection, which was expanded in the same year by purchasing additional Papal States stamps from a tobacconist in Baden (Switzerland), where his parents spent a spa vacation⁽²⁾. Strangely enough, his later school years had no significant influence on his passion for collecting; his years at boarding school in Paris even hindered it. It wasn't until 1901 in Hanover, when his father's funds became more plentiful, that serious collecting began. Until the end, Burrus owned the luxury piece of the “Red Three”, which he had purchased in Hanover for 20 marks.

The long journeys that he undertook, especially before the First World War, of course contributed significantly to the expansion of the collection. In the early 1920s, Burrus was, alongside Hind and Lichtenstein, one of the most avid buyers at Ferrary auctions and undoubtedly one of the greatest collectors of his time. According to his own statement, by 1920 he was only missing a few stamps. However, his name remained mostly unknown to the general public, as he always took part in international exhibitions - if at all - anonymously and “hors concours” (most recently in London in 1950), he only acted as a juror once - in 1927 in Strasbourg - and hardly made a name for himself in “organized philately”. Only at the International Exhibition in Strasbourg in 1927 did he take over the office of President of the “Comité exécutif”; Before the Second World War he was honorary president of the French Association for several years. From the beginning, i.e. since 1928, he was an ordinary Member of the “Académie de Philatélie”, and in 1955 he signed the “Roll of Distinguished Philatelists”; But these were probably the only philatelic honors that he received in his life.

Of course, Burrus was also a “classicist”, i.e. his collection primarily included the stamp issues before 1900. In contrast to many other great collectors, however, he also included modern material in his collection - he had a subscription to the world’s new issues in blocks of four - although only a very small part of it was sold at auction when the collection was dispersed. Burrus had a special penchant for units, especially blocks of four; In contrast to older collectors, he also valued entires very much and always referred to them as the “raison d’être du timbre”. His collection spanned the entire world, used and unused, singly and on letters. He was undoubtedly the last of the old guard of general collectors and, next to Ferrary, but certainly before Lichtenstein, the most important.

A collection of this size can no longer be assembled under current conditions. Of course, this collection, which was exceptional in every respect, also had its strengths and weaknesses. Burrus was particularly strong in Old Europe, i.e. old German and old Italian states, classical France, Spain, Switzerland, Moldova, etc., as well as the British Empire in its entirety, while the United States, for example, was weaker in comparison, as was Asia (as far as non-British colonies) and of course the German colonies, which simply didn't interest him. The Burrus collection was seriously endangered during both world wars: in the first because of the hostilities in the Ste-Croix-aux-Mines area, in the second because of the looting of the empty Burrus villa by Nazi agents. In both cases, however, Burrus had managed to bring his treasures to safety; However, the looting after 1940 meant that, in addition to largely worthless stamp material, many philatelic notes and receipts that Burrus had not been able to evacuate were lost.

Incidentally, Burrus was not just a collector of stamps, his interests were much broader: he financed the excavations at Vaison-la-Romaine in Provence, donated valuable works of art to the Colmar museum and collected old books and book bindings; He owned the most beautiful collection of old book bindings that a private individual had assembled in this century, was a connoisseur and collector of miniatures from before 1500 and of porcelain from the old Eastern French (read: Alsace-Lorraine) manufactories. Burrus only began and expanded all of these collections when he was older: But despite all my business pursuits and my other collections, it is always to my stamps that I come back, in the midst of which I find calm and a healthy and restful distraction.

Few philatelists know that Burrus also took a literary stand on philatelic questions in his later years. Unfortunately, he published these articles in a less accessible place in the magazine

Sélection, which the Paris dealer Léon Mirò published as his house magazine for several years in the 1950s. Here he first wrote very interesting memories of the auction of the famous “One Cent British Guiana”, which Burrus declared to be a forgery with interesting reasons and maintained this opinion even after Sir John Wilson contradicted it⁽³⁾. What is particularly interesting is the fact that Hugo Griebert, who bought it at auction on behalf of Arthur Hind for 300,000 francs (+17.5%), was convinced that the stamp was fake. However, Robson Lowe’s latest research seems to speak more for the stamp’s authenticity⁽⁴⁾. Incidentally, it was Burrus himself who pushed Griebert up in price, as he - quite rightly - did not think very highly of Hind in philatelic terms.

After this polemic, Burrus commented on some of the problems with the Greek Hermes Heads of the 1st series⁽⁵⁾. Finally, in 1952, he decided to make fundamental statements about the nature of stamps, which can be seen as a kind of “philatelic testament” by Maurice Burrus, or at least as his philatelic creed: What is a postage stamp?⁽⁶⁾. Burrus’ definition is: A postage stamp is a stamp issued officially and in accordance with regulations by a postal administration without any speculative intention, which is used to frank postal items. In this article, which is worth reading, Burrus explains, among other things, what artificially “made” rarities there are, defines certain types of private postal stamps, and comments on the delicate problem of colour designations, halvings, and unique stamps, which he fundamentally distrusts, and about the varieties and peculiarities that he doesn’t think much of. Of course, everything Burrus says isn’t exactly brand new, but it’s all carefully observed, well thought out, and every line bears witness to the rich experience of a collector’s life spanning well over 50 years.

This age-old wisdom is never more noticeable than here in his comments on The defects of stamps that follow the above-mentioned series⁽⁸⁾. With a lot of good sense Burrus takes a stand against the luxury hysteria of our days, contradicts the silly gum fetishism and even dares to give a kind of negative rating of all conceivable stamp defects, which can only be described as extremely reasonable, especially since he has said this several times. The result is that deductions are not justified⁽⁹⁾. His last two articles on philatelic exhibitions are somewhat disappointing, as they show that this is an area in which Burrus lacked some experience⁽¹⁰⁾. Edwin Mueller’s series of articles, written at almost the same time, makes the difference clear⁽¹¹⁾, but one should not forget that Burrus wrote these articles when he was over 75 years old. In any case, Burrus’ articles prove that he was also an excellent connoisseur, who did not simply buy his incomparable collection with a lot of money - on the contrary, he was a very careful buyer - but rather bought with great expertise, excellent taste and had developed a sense for the right moment.

At the Ferrary auctions, Burrus had repeatedly fallen behind the flashy Hind⁽¹²⁾. After Hind’s death, he bought the pieces he was interested in at the London Hind auction for, in some cases, less than half the prices that Hind had paid in Paris ten years earlier. However, one caveat must be made: Burrus was a connoisseur, but not an proofer; He didn't have a very keen eye, and so there were a number of forgeries in his collection, especially since Burrus - also comparable to Ferrary in this regard - was quite trusting, but this does not diminish his importance as a philatelist.

*Fig 83: A photo of Burrus in the year 1955. The dedication reads:
for Mr. A. Diena in friendly memory from a doyen of philately, who awaits his end amidst his stamps .
(Left Burrus in the armchair, on the sofa A. Diena and Dr. G. Bolaffi)*

Burrus had intended to sell his collection during his lifetime; Around the mid-1950s it was the dream of every big dealer to make a deal with Burrus, but he had a very specific idea of the value of his collection: it should cost the value of two jet planes or, in numerical terms, ten million Dollars (of the 50s!). This asking price turned out to be unrealizable. Even when Burrus went down to eight millions in negotiations with Willy Ballasse⁽¹³⁾, no agreement could be reached. Shortly before his death, Burrus negotiated with the shady Dr. Paul Singer of Shanahan. He sold him his Netherlands and Great Britain collections for over £300,000 and gave him an option on the rest of the collection. However, before the auction took place, Dr. Paul Singer and the Shanahans were arrested; the auction catalogue had already been sent out, but the Shanahan material was not auctioned until 1963 by Robson Lowe⁽¹⁴⁾. Burrus was of course horrified by this turn of events. There were no further negotiations because he died in December.

After his death, the 700-volume collection underwent a tough battle, which finally decided in his favor of a Swiss consortium against American and English competition when it acquired the Burrus collection from his heirs in 1961 for $4,850,000⁽¹⁵⁾. Incidentally, the share of the stamp collection in Burrus' total legacy was less than 5%⁽¹⁶⁾. Only the Alsace-Lorraine collection and the printing plates of the two Mauritius, Post Office stamps that Burrus had acquired from Duveen, remained in the family's possession. Liechtenstein honored his memory in 1968 with a commemorative stamp (Mi 505). [Shown below.]

Comments on § 5: Burrus

1. See: Jean Jolly (Ed.): Dictionary of French Parliamentarians from 1889-1940, Volume I (Paris 1960) p.811.
2. Many details from Burrus' life and all quotes are to the philatelic CV taken from Burrus himself as foreword to the presentation of some old Italian rarities. For Giulio Bolaffi he wrote : My life as a collector, in: Giulio Bolaffi: I francobolli di Maurice Burrus (Turin [1956]) pp.2-4 (Piloni, no. 1934); see most recently Bierman, pp. 251-269.
3. Maurice Burrus: La Tiare de Saitapharnès de la philatélie, in: Sélection, No. 3 (Jan. 1951) pp.1-2; Sir John Wilson: British Guiana: The One Cent of 1856, in: The London Philatelist Volume 60 (1951) No. 702, pp.65-68; Maurice Burrus: Pour en finir avec le One Cent de la Guyane Anglaise, in: Sélection, No. 9 (October 1952) pp.1-3. Detailed in W. A. Townsend & FG Howe: The Postal Stamps and Postal History of British Guiana (London 1970) pp.45-48. See finally Roland Lévêque: The "One Cent" carmin de la Guyane britannique (1856), in: Balasse Magazine, No. 250 (1980) pp.232-235, but to the question of authenticity, no position is taken.
4. See especially Bierman, pp. 254-258.
5. Les Premiers timbres grecs, in: Sélection, No. 6, (December 1951) pp.1-2; Encore les premiers timbres grecs, in: Sélection, No. 15 (October 1954) pp.1-2 and the comments by Dr. Le Tellier of Bayeux and Rear Admiral Constantinidis in: Sélection, No. 9 (October 1952) and No. 13 (December 1953).
6. Sélection, No. 8 (April 1952), Nos. 10-14 (December 1952-April 1954), the two first pages, only No. 10, pp.1-3.
7. "(The postage stamp is) a vignette issued officially and regularly by a Postal Administration and for non- speculative purposes, to frank postal items": Sélection, Nr. 10 (December 1952) p.1; similarly in Nr. 14 (April 1954) p.2.
8. Sélection, No. 16 (January 1955) - No. 20 (November 1956), the two first pages.
9. Sélection, No. 19 (May 1956) p.2.
10. Des expositions philatéliques, in: Sélection, Nos. 21-22 (May 1957-March 1958).
11. International Exhibition problems, in: Mercury Stamp Journal Volume 5 (1960) No. 56, pp.183-186; Volume 5 (1961) No. 57, pp.192-198; No. 58, pp.232-234, No. 59, pp.251-254; No. 60, pp.278-282.
12. On Hind see especially Bierman, pp.152-165.
13. Willy Balasse reports on this himself in the Foreword to his "Catalogue I" of the four Burrus auctions held by him, pp.1-2, Bierman, p.161, speaks of "only" 7 million in the negotiations with R. H. Weill.
14. Both of these parts consequently belonged not to the Amhelca Trust's series of Burrus auctions but also auctioned by Robson Lowe. See Bierman, pp.261-264.
15. The Amhelca Trust in Vaduz, founded by Paul Burrus on the occasion of the auction of the Burrus collection, included Renato Mondolfo, Mario Tommasini and Fred Rich: Bierman, p.264.
16. After oral message from R. Mondolfo – Rome in the year 1981.

6. John R. Boker Jr.

Figure 84 John R. Boker Jr. is undoubtedly the most important collecting personality from the second half of the 20th Century.
(Photograph from the year 1965.)

The biggest collector our days is no doubt the American John R. Boker Jr. Let's take this man's example to show the differences in the collecting style of earlier years in comparison to today's which illustrate them particularly well. But first some words "ad personam".

Born on the 29th January 1913 in New York, John R. Boker Jr., of the German manufacturing family Heinrich Boker, who had in Solingen a Cutlery factory, the "Baumwerk", founded a company in New York as early as 1837 to import the products of the parent company⁽¹⁾. His father, John R. Boker Sr., born in Duisburg in 1871, was from 1914 to his death in 1931 President of H. Böker & Co., Inc. of New York. After schooling and studying at Yale University from 1929-1933, John R. Boker Jr. joined his father's company which since the first world war had expanded beyond the import business to include their own production of cutters and smaller tools. During the second World War, in which he served from 1941-1945, he rose to the rank of Major in the Army Intelligence Corps. In 1947 he became President of H. Boker & Co. Inc. and sold the trading company including the factory in 1965 to the "New Britain Machine", which in turn was merged into "Litton Industries" in 1968. H. Boker & Co. Inc. is today an investment company.

zzzzz

Despite some professional obligations dedicates to John R. Boker, whose sporty Passion for the fold game is, most of his time of philately, given to him far more means as a purely "hobby" now. Zut philately would have him already led the father, with which he 1926 the big international Visited exhibition in New York had where he got the big ones Collections of the Lichtenstein, Hin, Pack aam. admire could. His first collection area were the American ones Advance cancellations that affect the financial possibilities of the pupil and student best corresponded. But the field of youth collecting accompanied Boker all his life: he was there for several years President of the New York Precancel Stamp Club and the Precancel Stamp Society; his collection american Advance cancellations that the largest of its kind __ several hundred thousand brands and over 95% of all known advance cancellations before 1920; alone of New York State he owns more than 100,000 precancels; of the known 2600 types he is missing still three! A research collection this way and in this specialization would a Ferrary, a Hind, a Caspary, a Burrus etc. never came to mind.

To the classic philately came Boker __ as a relatively young man in 1938, but the second world war soon interrupted all intensive collecting activities, so that the actual construction of the large Boker collections only started after to the between world war dated. Here he was sine close Friendship with such significant philatelists such as Edwin Mueller, Herbert J. Bloch, George B. Sloane and WB Hoover, dem biggest experts on the Territory of advance cancellations, a size help. Like all big ones Collector Boker has also compiled collections from a wide variety of countries but differs from Ferrary, Lichtenstein and Burrus himself his way of collecting basically in that soe doe, a;s aif the whole world aligned, im rest but very a lot of was more systematic than that of its predecessors. Boker has extraordinary in this way Collections of such different areas created how Local mail from Buenos Aires, the Wendish district, the Spanish Philippines, Australian states etc. His collection "United __ states" with one fabulous Department of Postmaster 's, Carrier's and Locals' Stamps. The complete photographic Documentation of this part of the collection condition itself at the Collectors Club New York, at the Royal Philatelic Society – London, and at the Smithsonian Institution Washington DC

The most significant collection but , which Boker has built up and with which his name will last forever dogged stay is , his collection is the old German States from Baden to Württemberg , as in this one completeness and quality still never has given and - this can confidently nice today established become – too never more give will . To the Success of this tiny company carried various factors at : one downright general staff Preparation and planning , the possibility of use high mean in rights moment and – one Not to underestimating factor - the favorable circumstances of the time, which allowed Boker , not only the best pieces from the collections of Caspary, Lichtenstien , Burrus and others for your own collection to acquire , but also in Germany during the years of a strong dollar and a weak mark important pieces to buy that today the ten – or twentyfold mission require would . The result this focused efforts is the public unfortunately just very fragmentary known become . Every single one old German state represented a “ Big Gold Medal Collection ” at international level, areas as Bergedorf of Hanover would be doubtless awarded a “Grand Prix” . been . John Boker 's resolution , sine collection , beginning with the year 1985, on which auction route in Germany sell , will unquestionably the return many Top pieces of old Germany philately to Germany , what the explained intention Boker sist. About that out become the catalogues this Auctions - they are at least eight seen - the imperishable monument of this unique collection form , since after the will of the owner all pieces of his collection the way about the auction go and no Private sold become .

Certainly there are several countries more extensive Individual collections , like e.g. from Bade, Braunschweig, Sachsen, Thurn und Taxis and Württemberg , just to this to call , yes none second collection achieved even just away such a high one Average level for all states . Absolute top of the collection are primarily the northern German states: In addition to the already mentioned Bergedorf (with about fifty letters) and Hanover above all the Hanseatic cities , both Mexico , Oldenburg and Prussia . Who ever the privilege granted was , from owner personally parts of the collection shown to get that will Not only the stupendous quality it shown but _ also the profound philatelic knowledge impressed have that yourself at the meeting of each leaf manifests . It proves true yourself like that always the old one again experience that _ to build unique collections certainly even size to hum required sing, more important however sin philatelic Connoisseurship and experience without which too _ with biggest means no really significant philatelic object created will can .

Stronger than his Ferrary or Burrus, stronger himself as Lichtenstein has organized himself in the service of Boker philately asked . His activity in the organizations of collectors of advance cancellations would already mentioned . In 1963/64 he was President of the Collectors Club - New York, whose Board of Governors he served for over a quarter of a century belonged . For several years he was also Chairman of the Expert Committee of the Philatelic Foundation. He is associated with the Royal Philatelic Society – London as a Fellow . As an exhibitor , like almost everyone else, John R. Boker is whole huge collector not been a “ medal hunter ” and not often featured internationally . Unforgettable the exhibition of Bergedorf and Mecklenburg-Strelitz remains in the Court of Honor of the WIPA 1965. Multiple since 1956, Boker has served as a juror at international exhibitions cast . In London in 1960 and 1970, in Vienna in 1965 he was Vice President of the Jury, at SIPEX 1966 in Washington and at INTERPHIL 1976 in Philadelphia active president of the jury ; appointed the jury of the CAPEX 1978 in Toronto him to the honorary member . He was chairman of the Collectors Club dating from 1971 On the occasion of the 75 year existence organized salons ANPHILEX, for which he one excellent Catalog wrote .

It was not his only one Literary Work: For many years he was the editor of the New York State portion of the Official Precancel Catalogue. In 1946 he briefly edited The New York Journal of Precancels ², published in essential of his own contributions lived. Of course, Boker has contributed several articles to the Collectors Club's in-house magazine, the "Collectors Club Philatelist", about Bergedorf, US Locals and others ³. His most important contribution was – probably the complete one Revision of classic US philately (Postmasters, Carriers, Locals, Confederate States) in Scott's US Specialized Catalog of the 1950s. About that He also collaborated on Edwin Mueller's Catalog of the Imperforate Postal Stamps of Europe (1958) and Edwin Mueller on material from his Altdeutschland collection to whose articles in the "Mercury Stamp Journal" disposal asked.

Of course it has been profiled in such a way Philatelic life of honors Not missing. In 1961 he became a foreign correspond. Elected member of the Paris "Académie de Philatélie" and in 1964 he added his name to the "Roll of Distinguished Philatelists" win; awarded in 1965 him the "Royal" the Tilleard Medal for his great, totally free held lecture about the American Postmaster's stamps, which he first showed in London ⁴. In 1967 he received the Lichtenstein Award, in 1970 the Medal of the "Collectors Club" and in 1978 the Luff Award of the "American Philatelic Society". In 1981 he was in the first group of six Philatelists who have been awarded the Lindenberg Medal, newly donated in 1978 were. Of all the "greats" of philately in this Chapter appreciated were, is John R. Boker jr. undoubtedly the finest philatelic connoisseur and the only one on whom area of research Literary with his brand treasures has dealt with it should no coincidence that he is the youngest among the ones here treated is.

Comments to § 6: Boker

1. The information in this section are based on one six-sided handwritten. Curriculum vitae that Mr. Boker sent to me disposal asked as well as on several personal. conversations I have with lead him to New York could; cf. – also the short one Outline of life in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 46 (1967) No. 2, pp. 80-82, on the occasion of the award of the Lichtenstein Medal.
2. Smith, No. 17450, 19 numbers appeared from 1940-46. Because of lacking employee Boker had to take the magazine set in Nov. 1946.
3. The Stamps and Postal History of Bergedorf, in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 31 (1952) No. 6, pp. 277-97 (with 22 ills.).
4. John R. Boker nf.: United States Postmaster, Carrier and Local Stamps, in: The London Philatelist 75 (1966) Nr. 881, S. 87-109 mit 10 Tafeln. Vgl. auch: The Royal Philatelic Society, S. 102.

7 Quo vadis philately ? Philately in our time (1945-1985)

The period after 1945 most of us have actually witnessed. Straight therefore should our Verdict particularly be careful and balanced , runs but the opinion of those who help shape a time have always been in danger of being “ distorted from the parties and favor ” .

Already in the “Looking for new Because of ” dedicated 5th capital had we one excessive spending policy of almost everyone states in the years between the two world wars to complain had . An increase seemed barely still possible , yes Exactly this entered ain. Reason there was once the big one number news self-employed states Before especially in Africa, however also in Asia , which immediately one enormous productivity ouch to the brand sector unfolded , to others one irresponsible spending policy of all Eastern Bloc countries since 1945 the collectors every year with countless expenditure showered . To the better understanding mine There is very little to be said here expenditure statistics driven . The world power Great Britain , the motherland of postage stamps , issued a total of 220 different stamps from 1840 to 1940 , with Naturally Perforation , paper, color variants etc. _ Not expected are . the little one Albania , whose first Stamp issue dated 1913 , issued 2065 stamps and 71 blocks up to 1980 , of which 1685 stamps and 68 blocks were after 1945. The other countries of the socialist camp stand to the Not after .

But there also the western ones States in their spending policy Not straight reserved are , flood thousands every year new brands enter the market without that see an end would be . According to information from the company H. Sieger-Lorch, appears currently every 68 minutes one new postal stamp ; other even calculate one still lesser Time interval , but what interval even always : the result is equally catastrophic . Regard we things in single : for one summary In 1914 , James Lyon “ only ” needed 132 pages to depict the commemorative stamps of the whole world , Prescott H. Thorp 20 years later already their 512. But in 1947 Max G. Johl dealt with “The United States Commemorative Stamps of the Twentieth Century” – i.e. the commemorative stamps just of a country and for one period of yet Not once 50 years – in two volumes with together 738 pages! Even if one considers that Johl 's individual brands are essential in more detail appreciates than Lyon or Thorpe, the page numbers speak still always one clear language .

Revealing is even an expenditure statistic ¹ : I put side by side the number of spent Definitive stamps and blocks in the years 1930-1940 and 1945-1980 as well still once separately in the Decade 1970-1980. Table I includes ten representative states Western Europe , Table IA to Add the six sucked . Dwarf states , of which Luxembourg is the one with Distance largest is and also postal as only one old tradition . _ Table II summarizes the eight “ people's democracies ” of the European eastern blocks together , Table III ten countries of South, Central and North America , Table IV ten states the end to the Middle and Far East, Table V finally ten african States .

Some States in Tables IV and V were 1930-1940 still Not as self-employed nations existing; in these cases I have either given the number of brands in brackets that the Respective colonial power in this Period has brought out , or the column had to – how eg in the case of the two Koreas – remain empty . At some newer founding of states could also the full one Period 1945-1980 not exploited be , since the concerned States only gained independence after 1945 won ; here finds itself a Note on the country name . it understands It goes without saying that the numbers given are only want to be approximations , especially since the different Catalogs , doe for the tables to use were , not after uniform criteria edited were .

These numbers speak probably for himself : who less in the years 1945-1980 has spent more than 1000 stamps may already highest to claim seriousness for themselves Take , and numbers around 500-600 work almost poor . _ that is but still always around triple _ of what Britain in one full Century of innovations to the switches brought .

The stamp has naturally a change of her function gone through that in its meaning barely overrated will can . Her original function as Receipt about prepaid postage is in always higher Dimensions taken over from franking machines (franking machines) , which soon after 1900 in various countries patented and used been were used on a large scale only since the early 1920s 2 . _ The postal Importance of the postage stamp was so unquestionable dropped , yes had its value as a means of idealological propaganda to the same extent increased . Also these Development did not start until 1945 , they dated at least since the late 1920s, yes since to the widths world war are the propagandistic-ideological ones Aspects of brand production in the sheer unbearable increased been . This Finding applies in principle to all states , throughout particularly but for the dictatorships of the east that are on the Territory of ideological propaganda yes anyway leading are “ forerunners ” were Indeed also the fascist Italy and Hitler's Germany; the years 1933-1945 became therefore specifically in brackets in Table I reported .

Naturally are a purer Comparison of numbers in tabular form on many questions just insufficient or none at all information . That 's how it looks them eg not which _ states lots surcharge stamps bring out how eg the Federal Republic of Germany or Belgium , and which ones darauj as good as fully renounce how _ eg France (since 1970) or the USA. The term "block" was closely taken and relates the so-called sheetlets Not a , which causes _ about Canada appears in virginal innocence , although this country has been zealously participating in that for years Sheetfed hype involved is . Also, for example , in the USA in recent years popular se-tenants different brands in the arch, which then each a block of four form , could Not taken into account become . The figures for Hungary are still a lot of to low since the commercial published cut expenditure none full numbers to have etc .

The stats built Indeed even Insights into the development of the emission policy of the individual countries; you leaves eg realize that _ states how UK , Canada and Sweden just to name a few this to call , only in last Decade on the “ inclined plane”, pardon: too a “ modern ” emissions policy passed are that the stamp output is 1970-1980 at 50-60% of all Issues of the period 1945-1980. The opposite is the proportion of novelties Panama's 1970/80 at only 16.5%, as is well known heavy , one battered Call to restore .

The importance of airmail stamps has fallen sharply since the leading nations long ago from this one genus come off are . Today will you Before all of the new ones francophone states Africa maintained ; look in South America are after 1945 still countless airmail stamps spent been so that their absolute number the from to the Period 1914-1945 nevertheless clear exceeds . Remain at the forefront of issuance of blocks undisputed Paraguay with 359 (!) blocks (since 1954) and South Korea with 311 blocks (since 1051); Besides the European ones work record holder Hungary and the USSR between 1945 and 1980 “ only ” 142 and 142 respectively . 140 blocks to the counters brought , downright modest . To the Comparison : all European states together spent between 1923 and 1939 a total of 97 blocks, all summarized in Table I western european states in the Period 1945-1980 still always only 104! The purely numerical dubious countries in Western Europe (Belgium , France and Spain) . far Behind everyone so-called “ people's democracies ”, such as the dictatorships of the East in one characteristic pleonasm to to name like . The European dwarf states are with Exception of Monaco and San Marina which is one irresponsible spending policy operate , better as you reputation , too if Naturally difficult to see is why Luxembourg and the Vatican 1945-1980 more new hits spend had to as UK .

From the young asian and african States those of the collectors Europe and America initially met with great interest became – in the African states even there is none significant Willingness to collect - is unfortunately Not a lot of good to . _ The mostly of philatelic agencies steered and only to clear solely on the cupping of the collector directed Emissions policies of most young states ³ have that initially Lively interest often turns into annoyance and outright departure turn over let . The baddest example uninhibited policy of exploitation by philatelic agencies form the so-called United Arab Emirates, inn collector's jargon short sheikhdoms called . Between 1963/65 and 1972, so not in once ten years _ on behalf of these emirates, whose total population at about a million lies – of it at least 80% illiterate -, from the most ridiculous occasions over 5000 so-called Postage stamps have become theirs on the market alleged countries of origin Naturally never seen had . separated in 1973 the Emirates in the interest of their reputation from their “ advisors ” and operate since one exemplary solid Spending policy , but the reputation was ruined , meanwhile the gentlemen agents you Sheep into the dry brought had .

You have to admit that there are these Agencies of ingenuity Not missing . There are Olympic champions , famous ones Soccer Player , painting great master, of course even Nudes (in one strict Islamic land!), Sputniks, Apollos, and whatever else \ berz coveted , too admire and of course the collectors of animals and flowers will not forget ; occasionally you still sprinkle some real “ golden ”, postage stamps to corresponding prices a , and of course The collectors of block, “ cut ” and perforated – may not to short come . The "Brands" are most of time large format in multicolor printing made and nice to look at . The motto is: stand out at any price. Is the subject of the image Not too interesting , then must just the format or shape of the marks catches the eye draw . Triangular marks are already there old hat , too rhombic or on the top standing squares.

Especially the ones in pacific ocean located Tonga Islands develop in this respect a lot of creative Fantasy : solve there itself round , heart , star , bottle , and banana shaped “tags” from next to some geometric absolutely undefinable formations . Amazingly he is _ otherwise so popular original rubber still not “ discovered ” : green / red spotted original rubber with woodruff and raspberry flavor - that would be but something _ new . The fact that brands can also “ smell ” occurred to the agents of the Himalayan kingdom of Bhutan ; there there is also a “brand” as a mini record with pressed piece of music and even three-dimensional brands has truly creative agency of this state already on the market ; the glory of Bhutan left the People's Republic North Korea Not rest , in turn one three-dimensional series for 1980 Olympiad submitted while Bhutan round _ coin tokens invented . The latest hits are brands made of – wood! on these glorious thoughts expired to the Alternation the African state of Gabon , 1982 on the occasion of the 22 year (!) Independence a block out to the native Okume wood spent . Truly : there is nothing it is not there , and at least the philatelic ones agencies have thoroughly learned the wisdom of old Ben Akiba refuted .

That the " Watchdog Commission " of the "American Philatelic Society" such "stamps" mostly with to the Ban Ray occupies and this on internatioanllen exhibitions Not shown will allowed , disturbs the manufacturers heartfelt little . Anyway had to itself the end to the fact of the always continue increased flood of brands inevitable Consequences for the forms of collecting result . The specialization is in the meantime one Matter of course , no words more needs ; stubborn remains just the extent . Many don't collect now more a whole country, in particular then not if it is _ how eg . in the case of Germany or Great Britain around countries with many Dependencies , Colonies etc . acts , but restrict on one _ specific period. The English special catalog of the company Stanley Gibbons to the already bill by dividing into four chronologically articulated volumes assigned is : Queen Victoria, The Four Kings and Queen Elizabeth (2 vols .). are in Germany eg Inflation period (1920-1923) and “Germany after to the second World War (1945-1949)” popular specialties . one collects even Not more global “ airmail ” but Pioneer flights , Zeppelin mail , Scadta , Do X, Lufthansa, disaster mail etc

In particular but has the postal history Collect since 1945 more and more attention _ drawn and the entire philately immensely fertilized . Hand in hand with that went one unexpected Appreciation of the whole letter and also again the many decades through on a fringe existence thrown back postal stationery , while the average loose stamp is significantly more important lost . Of course , the unbranded letter in particular also has the pre- stamp period essential in importance won . “ Postal History ” limited itself however by no means to the so-called “ pre-philately ”, she is even Not identical with the “ collecting after Special aspects ”, although sic hunter this section on the international exhibitions most of time postal history collections hide . The postal history has long since also the classics country collections captures what is today one country collection without Consideration of postal stationery , of postage rates as well as single , multiple and mixed franking etc. ? a good one country collection is today anyway simultaneously one postal history Collection like this Horst Knapp using the example of his unsurpassable Saxony collection probably as first shown had .

Special postal history collections mean primarily collections __ from the pre- stamp period , like eg “ Departments conquis ”, Kingdom of Westphalia, Repubblica Cisalpina , Venice u.ä.m ., stamp collections firmly outlined areas or certain Stamp types (e.g horseshoe stamp), ship mail (e.g Donaudampfschiffahrtsgesellschaft , Transatlantikpost etc.), field post all times , certain postal particularities how eg Postal receipts , registered letters , return letters , censored mail etc . You can see the number of possibilities is practical unlimited so that next to the country collections old styles , before everything those of the post-classic period (after 1870 or after 1900) , have already fallen behind . as one Special form of postal history collections may they before especially in Germany popular “ homeland collections ” apply to those before especially in Germany popular “ homeland collections ” apply to postal history one single place or one clearly defined area (district, department ua) turn off ; it was a matter of course also the pre-mark time with to include .

This way are _ nice very lovely postal-philatelic collections built up been , in particular if the chosen place by some political-postal meaning is . This restriction should Before everything those consider the im contest exhibit the one with the postal history of Posemuckel is already national, let alone international, no plant pot to win while _ postal history , collections how such as “Berlin”, “London”, “Milan”, “Paris” or similar . nice almost closed again big are and chronological limitation require . So received eg at the PHILEXFRANCE 1982 the collection of CF Bridoux one gold medal with speedwell who who Postal conditions in Paris between January 1 , 1849 and June 30 , 1854 .

Next to that postal history oriented Collect is after 1945 though even a Collecting area came into fashion , which until then was purely marginal, not to to to say a shadowy existence has led : motif philately . Carefully to divorce this one collection direction are in the tradition of Schlechtriem standing Efforts by Josef Bender to stylistic Classification of the brand flood of the last hundred years and the art historical Appreciation of the Austrian postage stamps by Walther Maria Neuwirth as well how general investigations to subjects like the postage stamp as graphic artwork or as a means of war propaganda ⁴ . The first beginnings of the actual Motif philately I above detailed shown got , reach into the years soon after the turn of the century back , as some states move away from the classic “ motifs ” head, coat of arms , number, especially overseas began had ; but the motif collectors were still in the 1930s one vanishing , meaningless minority .

This changed itself thoroughly in the years following the Second World War : the number of motif collectors took constant to , and since the early 60s forms the motif - and thematic philately one own class on international exhibitions after _ the first in 1950 pure Motif exhibition in Philadelphia, 1951 the first European in Vienna (ÖMA) and 1952 the first international in Saarbrücken (IMOSA) under to the Patronage of FIPCO has taken place had . Also within the motif philately has already a “ specialization ” developed on the actual one Motif - and the “ thematic ” philately , a Distinction within the motif - philately _ to partial fierce discussions occasion gave ⁵ .

Already before to the second World War was – mainly in the French -speaking countries – one new collection direction , the so - called . maximaphilia , in appearance kicked that maybe as one – from the motif philatelists by the way little cherished – side branch of motif gathering be valid can . it works this collection direction about the correspondence between the stamp and the postcard motif . The first “ special catalog ” appeared already in 1937 ⁶ , meanwhile deliver some postal administrations the “ Maximumkaren ” to of their own production even with . In 1980 , FIP even became maximaphilia as self-employed Commission sanctioned , and the attempt more insightful national associations , undo this nonsense to make , is unfortunately failed .

All of these directions is in common that not that actually Philatelic collecting agent is , but just the motive , be it now a religious , sporting , botanical , zoological , technical or what else even always .

Edwin Mueller had as early as 1961 the “topical collecting”, as in the English -speaking countries called becomes , the status of a ordinary collective branch agreed within the scope of regular philately . Motive collecting appeared him as a bastard: His mother is philately, but it has many fathers, botany, zoology, geography, biography, history and countless more; he saw - very rightly so, I think – a complete split between classical and topical collecting and recommended even separate catalogs for both Collector Groups . His view , which is in essence points with that of myself represented position covers ⁷ , met course on scharge criticism ⁸ , remains but in my opinion unchanged valid . The reference to the large number of motif collectors is no argument for correctness this Collection way : finally has yes even still nobody claims that the production of billions of cigarettes a proof of theirs wholesomeness .

The main responsibility for this unwanted development tgrg the postal administrations all States - the one more , the others less - whose unrestrained Photo production – from postage stamps you can at best will not speak – the new one collecting trend Yes downright inevitably develop let the collectors became tired of them _ possibly still sent to the house by postal subscription pictures simply just under to the Country names in the pre-printed album plug in . nothing is more understandable than that; even can the reaction of collectors actually Not wonder , the instinctive felt you that _ this more political-commercial as postal Products not the claim raise can , as full postage stamp classified to become , and so became the end to the A trickle of motif philately from the 20s and 30s, which before everything didactic purposes pursued , the wide Motive stream of the 50s, which continues to this day Not subsided is , although it is about motif philately , if I am right see , in recent years something calmer has become ⁹ .

All that would be well and good if the motif philately some modesty practiced and yourself than what they gave _ really is , viz as a nice , not too demanding pastime , a by-path, a side path just , the one with philately in the full sense of the word only marginally involved is . But far missing : not just claim the motif collectors on the international exhibitions Gold medals for collections whose value is often lost Not once 10% of the value one collection in each any other class - not at all only the classic – that makes up for it and we even take it as ang. “ Advantage ” of motif philately to claim , especially since this Gold medals sic hunter none Circumstances of those so unequal a lot of heavier to acquiring Distinguish medals of the remaining classes may - no , one also wants to otherwise are considered “ equivalent ” and used to lofty for this purpose terms like “ research in motif philately ”, which really are embarrassed ¹⁰ .

Now of course also for motif philately a “ distinguishedum is ”. In addition to the “ common ” motifs from the fields of art, religion, sport and the like . – I restrict me on one rough Direction indication - there is also more demanding subjects whose _ editing upscale Claims to the intellectual Recording and structuring of the topic provides and in particular even not , at least Not exclusively , with to the modern Video material from the last 30 years disputed will be able how eg League of Nations , Red Cross, Universal Postal Union , International Courts of Justice etc. , whereby straight postal history relevant subjects attention also pages of “ traditional ” philately earn . Am I correct , that's how it is even a certain trend towards the difficult ones subjects determine what was also in the ratings of the motivational judges his precipitation finds .

In the states of the Eastern Bloc stands the motif philately naturally held in high esteem and favored by the regimes there you but in particular Dimensions prone to propaganda – the life of Lenin or the “building of socialism ” on postage stamps ! – and carries to the dissemination of their own picture production at . Man allowed namely Not forget that in these _ countries collecting motifs practically the only alternative to schematic country collections means den in countries where free trade is stalled and the state instead some of totally uninterested government employees directed picture sales offices as sucked . stamp shops has set up in such countries designed the structure _ more demanding postal history or even classic postal history collections extremely difficult .

Of course this applies not for the west where itself nice early insightful Voices raised the one before warned the flood of the as postage stamps disguised communist propaganda material as full brands too treat and through those regimes even help to finance their purchase ¹¹ . After all like so many warnings became even these beaten in the wind . It should after all even to the most fanatical Motif pendant to think give that _ itself communist states about your cultural attachés at one leading booty company inquire which “motives” in the Federal Republic straight common are .

Naturally finds itself irresponsible emissions policy as well in the west – prime examples are Paraguay or the former . Sheikhdoms - yes here is missing mostly the political one Accent : it works pure and simple about revenue for the state treasury or . for the philatelic agency, i.e. to exploit the collector , where Not be a secret that this thumbnails partly . typographical and graphic masterpieces are , only just None postage stamps . Man consider that the sheikdoms unfortunate commemoration in the few years of her philatelic existence alone to the topic “ space travel ” one such Countless brands issued that _ therefor a self-employed catalog volume to appear could . we are in the meantime so far that the ATA, the “American Topical Association ”, since some years the ones appearing per year representations on sucked . postage stamps from the computer alphabetically after subjects put in order lets : 1980 were the computer about 6000 pictures , pardon: postage stamps to the grub accused , meaning fed ¹² . As can be seen , the philatelic progress Not to stop .

Now it will be objected that everyone _ at liberty stay Must to collect what and how it him popular . that is Of course fully right , and it stands each free to spend his funds as he pleases falls . In doing so nobody deny want that < ptovsa „ ; im eomem have less appeal can . The reason a motif collection to create or one thematic collection to buck , should never the striving after Profit or short-term be speculation than Rather, the actual joy of collecting , the design of the stamps and the meaning of the issue. Responsible stamp companies emphasize because of this at their Suggestions for motif - and thematic collections deliberately not the eventual Profit increase , i.e. the speculative element, as rather the joy and satisfaction that the chosen subject area convey can . who so only yourself guided by the “ joy of joy” . lets , will at the Motif Collecting none disappointment experience , in particular then not if he only has his means gently begins and between reasonable , “ reasonable ” and purely speculative expenditure distinguishes .

so little as on others areas of philately should a collector even at Motive - or thematic Collections in anticipation one rash and light speculative profit invest , the disappointment is then downright preprogrammed . Such thinking would stand Yes even in the outside contrast to to the actual meaning of motif philately , which is nevertheless ideal values of collecting stressed and thinking in list prices condemned . Man so none is allowed motif collection with the goal of rapid sale create . Yet will previously or later the thought or also the need to the Sale to the collector approach . In this case he should be on one possible fair market exploitation of his collection be careful .

Concrete spoken does that mean that the otherwise usual ways of sale , auction or sale to one dealer , not recommended are whom the auctioneer turns primarily aimed at the collectors __ more classic Rarities , that is, to one group of buyers under which naturally barely motif collector located . So he does n't have the right one clientele to good bids to get . auctions are hence not the right forum for the sale of motif collections . who this Understanding Not observed , may itself about a disappointing result Not wonder who he sells Not fair market . The same is true - even more so still higher dimensions – at one Selling to a store or even one Wholesalers , too this have for one such collection not the right one customers and pay accordingly – if at all – usually none reasonable prices . A motif collection should sensibly always to one bodyguard sold be made up for the subject in question motive interested in what is Indeed frequently as very difficult prove will . it is hence very to welcome that _ different companies one mediation service operate , who wants to sell , who previously a questionnaire to complete must , in direct Contact with one potential interested persons brings – without entitled to any commission or fees on the part of the intermediary .

For investors , investors and speculators are Motive stamps and thematic expenditure not the right one Territory : one can here don't make a quick buck and plays become that already after with a short notice big Profit sold will can . Because of this should itself every philatelist – especially but the little one Collectors - be aware that you have one Motif collection only then creates and a thematic Collection only builds up if one collects out of joy in the motif , out of joy in the subject and not thereon reliant is that kind of built up collection In the short term again for sale ¹³ . who height hum into one motif collection invested , should itself at least even about the risk in the be clear i want with this Remarks not the impression awaken as _ if financial risks alone a Privilege of the motif collector be , whole certainly not . Any form of collecting and of course also collecting stamps holds your Risks : on the level of risk it matters All that sounds terrible materialistic and could appear _ awaken as _ if Philately is purely a matter of investment and profit . that is they – hopefully – not ; you should but even no “ barrel without bottom”, no “ penny grave ” or similar . being. Whether you as collector make money with philately _ can , is questionable , at least not the rule; one should but in any case even no assets with philately _ lose , the term “ fortune ” being well known relative is . If you want to speculate at any price , try your luck on the stock exchange, yes he remembers the words Mephisto in "Faust":

*I'll tell you: a guy who speculates is how an animal on arid heath, from one evil spirit led around in circles ,
and all around lies lovely green pasture.*

Instead of the many idealistic dressed up gossip that one on so many collector days hear , seems to me enlightenment about the real ones Risks in philately – and that means just not that forever Boy fake problem , it means even Not only the risks in motif philately – one urgent necessity .

After this “ materialistic ” digression , which itself in a History of Philately Not absence was allowed , still seem to me some word about the collection style appropriate in our day . The dominance of the entire piece (letter, postal stationery , postal slip etc .), the sunken meaning of the loose mark, were nice above stressed . Size units on the other hand have theirs – also in loose form attractiveness as well preserved such as stamps and special features of all kinds framework of postal history collecting could n't _ stay away that now too fancy frankings and eg also collecting _ after Destination countries , in particular letters after – for European Terms – exotic countries always more bibhave find .

The real crux of our time is and remains but the quality problem . The ones from the collectors specially to the above hundred - year - old material Expectations are so exorbitant that you each reasonable measure exceed ; just as unreasonable are however, the required ones discounts at ridiculous small mistakes . This development can not _ go on ; it must Indeed conceded be that the quality hysteria – different you ca n't do not call p in all countries even makes waves : in the Anglo -Saxon countries , but also in France , take the collectors one more moderate attitude a ls im German-speaking countries or in Italy .

So that the collectors modern material does not to short come , have they invented the mint fad that turned out to one true scourge of philately has grown : already the hint of one fingerprint on it beloved Original rubber is considered depreciating what the state of the “ rubber artist ” whose clarity nothing to to wish left over leaving View one in each magazine Find can , brings carefree days . What was still around 1900 parodic caricature could , which is after in time to the first world war slow as threat began to emerge today oppressive reality . i hold nothing of the prophecies of doom of the eternal naysayer , yes can i get the impression Not fight back that here some unteachable hard at work on the tree of philately sawing : Hubris still has to Sinking Led ¹⁴ .

Naturally __ even among the big ones collectors a change of generations has taken place : with demi m the previous one Chapter honored Maurice Burrus sank in 1959 the last size General collector to the grave. collector like the Swiss Peter Brodtbeck or the Frenchman Léon Dubus own or owned that is still extensive General collections , yet the collecting style of a burrus irrevocable past . there is even today still

*Fig. 85: Such To sue to appear every month in the philatelic magazines Germany . What's that supposed to mean?
hypocritical indignation about repairmen and aftergum ?*

a Collector who has been the “Whole World” since at least 1945 “ mint never hinged complete ” in about 1200 albums ; this is the Hamburg businessman Hermann Schnabel, who also works “ on the side ” . collects Austria and wants to slowly “ collect back ” until about 1920 . the biggest collector of our days, a John R. Boker nr., a Gerhard R. Gumpert, a Dieter Jaretzky , a Kiroyuki Kanai, a Renato Mondolfo , a ME de Bustamante, a Ryohei Ishikawa and others are none general collector more , but Specialists for a number of collection areas , Boker eg for the American Postmaster editions, the old German ones States and American advance ratings ua, Gumpert for Old German and Old Italian states such as classic Switzerland etc. _

the collecting is moreover international become : came earlier the big ones collector personalities almost without exception the end Central Europe and the US, so are after 1945 too collector from Turkey, Iran _ _ _ south and Central America, in particular but from Japan to the international top class advanced. The greatest Mauritius collection that has ever existed is owned to the Japanese Kanei; the most fantastic USA collection ever assembled was, has 1981 in Vienna the Japanese Ishikawa for the first time shown. In general, the trend towards Specialization the philatelic level of the collections significant raised, woven the international exhibitions eloquent transcript put down, too if not all exhibitions so unusual quality collections unite could like "London 1980", which is what the pinnacle of cutting -edge material as far as, probably unmatched for a long time stay will. the high one Specialization has in the work of the juries very much made more difficult because the term "rarity" is not more identical is with "expensive brand", but a philatelic expertise presupposes that earlier Not needed became.

But not just collecting _ is international become, but also the organization of philately. The FIP that before to the second world fri still no 20 national associations belonged, is in the meantime to one all continents comprehensive representative Representation of philately become, of practically all states, in the philately Weight have, belong, however unfortunately even those that don't have any Weight have. Since the statutes of the FIP do not include a "Security Council". right of veto provides, is such a Majorization of the leading nations by meaningless "newcomer" kenkbar what to one danger one healthy philatelic development to lead could.

From the myriad of club reasons be after 1945 just two highlighted : the "Collector's Club of Chicago" founded in 1945, contrast to his famous New York namesake stressed exclusive is : the members must live in the Chicago area and are currently limited to 60. A similar Limitation – here to 100 members – filt even for the "Associazione, founded in 1966 italiana the story postale" (AISP) operating in Italy nice after the few years of her passing has the same rank like the "Royal" in England or the New York "Collectors Club" in the USA. More important but than the clubs whose _ area of responsibility himself in the last decades barely has changed are the "working groups", "study groups" or how always one them wants to call : Associations of collectors that are not by the random spatial near, but through the common interest in one certain collection area found each other have and themselves therefore frequently about national limits out spread.

To the big ones international Honors "Roll", Crawford and Lindenberg Medal now came one fourth : the Lichtenstein Award donated by the "Collectors Club" in 1952, while the Lindenberg Medal following the events of the war not since 1943 more awarded, only newly donated in 1978 and in 1981 for the first time again awarded was so that from 1945-1980 the inclusion in the "Roll" was the highest honor was given to one philatelists granted will could. after _ The "Académie de Philatélie de Belgique" was created in Belgium in 1966, following the example of the French academy in the meantime already a has made a respected name ; Further academies are followed, only the "American Academy of Philately" could enter into it set expectations Not fulfill. On the other hand, the "Philatelic Foundation" founded by Alfred F. Lichtenstein in 1945 has done good work ¹⁵.

In the years after to the second world war could philately _ your popularity still continue increase, though in the meantime photography for a long time become the No. 1 hobby is. The number of collectors only in Germany one has - in obvious Exaggeration - estimated at 5-6 million ¹⁶, likely worldwide you but with security at 15-20 million lie ; Indeed the US Postal Administration estimated the number of collectors in 1980 alone in the United States already on 20 million, yet even this 20 million still has nobody counted. Serious Collector ie _ Not only on novelties subscribed “occasional collectors”, there are after the competent Estimate by B. Hennig in US only about a million. At everyone dubiousness such Estimates, at where it is on a or also on several millions Not arrives, these are _ right impressive numbers. In the Anglo-Saxon countries, but also in South America, were after 1945 several times Try to register, the philately closer to the university or after all at least get them into college, yes Rare with satisfying success. Anyway show this continuous Efforts that the Philately to their _ recognition as scientific discipline engaged remains and herein as in 1971 at the University of Sussex occasional successes to recorded. It must itself albeit in philately change some things yourself before starting with the permanent Anchoring Philately _ about also on continental European ones universities expected will can.

He understands himself that _ philately a long time ago also in the so-called . mass media penetrated is . the big ones Daily newspapers of almost all cultured states to report detailed about important philatelic events how international Exhibitions, important auctions etc., too bring you most of time still supplementary, regular appearing philatelic Posts that though about banal news reports etc. _ Rare go out. The “Day of the Stamp”, which is now celebrated almost all over the world, offers additional Attraction to philatelic considerations. However, one is in the USA nice since at least 1949 in execution with the one held in November national ASDA Stamp Exhibition passed to a “National Stamp Collecting Week” which was extended in 1981 by the “Council of Philatelic Organizations” (COPO) to “Stamp Collecting Month” in October ¹⁷, while in Japan since 1947 one remained at the “Week of Philately”. is.

Fig. 88: In the USA people are content Not with the “Day of the Stamp” but commits already National “Stamp Collecting Month”.

Ever since the postage stamp discovered as an “investment paper”. they search from magazines like “Capital” more occasionally attention appreciated, and the “rainbow press” is waiting with third-rate “disclosure stories”. worldwide attention excited the American in 1954 Magazine “Life” with a well-crafted report on the world's rarest stamps, which undoubtedly one Not to underestimating Advertisement for philately represented. Of course takes itself also the broadcasting of philately in current notifications and reports on, yes are specific philatelic Specialist broadcasts, such as you such as Pierre Seguy in Saarland radio offers, relatively rare become.

Even the youngest among the mass media, television, has philately a long time ago discovered; even here are there before everything current occasions how auctions, fairs or Exhibitions that too reports Reason give. In France brings Jacqueline Caurat your Program “Philatélie Club” however since now already 20 years once per month for a full 30 minutes in the 1st program of the French “Télévision” and above out weekly three minute Brief information on the radio. Also the Austrian TV shine once a week one short program “From the World of Postage Stamps”. In Italy, where private television stations a pleasing boom taken have and there are, the stupid state television in the favor of the subscribers to displace, offer already over 20 working at regional level institutions regularly informative, by professionals designed philatelic programs ¹⁸.

Few words would be still to philatelic literature and resources __ to say. Among the numerous startups philatelic Magazines from all over the world from the period after 1945 can be found thumb one requirement at an international level raise. laudable exceptions form so far Italian Magazines: the luxurious equipped “Filatelia” (since 1962), but unfortunately has declined sharply in recent years , and their last number before appeared five years ago (1980) . is , as well as the “Nuovo Corriere Filatelico ” (since 1975). Both magazines deal with itself naturally in the first place, but after all Not exclusively with subjects of italian philately . The international catalogues are to multi-volume tomes swollen , for which hardly still a real Requirement exists , so that lately one has to do it more and more passed is , catalogs for individual countries or _ Groups of countries (e.g. Benelux, Scandinavia , etc.) to be published .

in the rest specialization triumphs _ even here : for almost all countries, exist Special catalogs that a big philatelic knowledge _ convey able are . The modern trend towards colourfulness following , appears today one Plenty of catalogues with colored Pictures what maybe prettier looks , philatelic but so long meaningless remains , like the exact hue a mark with the current ones Reproduction methods (not yet) . met will can . A new form of catalogue , both only nor the review pages annual exchanged are brought onto the market by the Borek company in 1980 . Similar is the LIPSIA catalogue however nice some time earlier arranged been . The Album Market was revolutionized in the 50s by the appearance of the hingeless albums , which today are dominant ¹⁹ .

The philatelic literature was in the years after to the second world war by one large number of important works enriched . On the naming of authors you , as it is mostly living ones acts , renounces ²⁰ , but also applies here that the geographical _ scattering very a lot of wider is as earlier , whereby turn to Japan as its new center to name would be . Daneden has the yach pressure wave also the classics of philatelic Record literature ²¹ . nervous to will deserves the fact that _ the literature _ to the motif philately despite the erratic increasing number of collectors in this area still always on one truly poor level moved : needy Compilations of around a specific motive to grouping marks, mostly without mention of the to this motive belonging Special cancellation , without closer philatelic and mostly even without thematic explanations ²² – a more impressive contribution on the topic “ Research in motif philately ”. Some some more extensive works how usual the sport or christian motives dedicated , yes it is _ here , too, essentially for simplicity Compilations of the Imagery with easy comprehensible text ²³ . appears really once a serious too dawdling work, then it is - what a coincidence - a postal history theme ²⁴ .

Finally be still short to the state of trade and that bites to the market situation position taken . The trade had since the mid-1950s maybe biggest boom in the history of philately to list ; the prices climbed into unimagined Gohen , what too then still applies if you certainly do n't insignificant devaluation in all countries considered . Simultaneously is however a more profound structural change occurred , which was at the expense of the retail trade . This one was n't more able to camp on the scale to hold that necessary would be to the wishes one demanding customers to satisfy . The Retail misplaced itself hence always stronger on novelty subscriptions and issues after 1945, during classic material and better Issues up to approx. 1954 completely overwhelmingly about auctions implemented become like the big ones auction houses today anyway dominant are . The centers of the auction market lying – in this Order – Germany , USA, Switzerland and UK .

Besides to have - mainly in Germany and the USA Novelties - and brand mail order companies Established who serve tens of thousands of customers : remembered you only to the Kauflaus chain by J. Minkus, to HE Harris - Boston, R. Borek - Braunschweig or WH Sieger - Lorch. Naturally are even prey still significant dealer active : in addition to the names mentioned in Chapter 5 , all of them except for Colson and Sassone active are and after how Before to top group count , for the period after 1945 would still be the Zanaria brothers in Milan, B. Behr and J. Robineau in Paris and so on call . The most significant rarity dealer those years were unquestionably the brothers Roger G. and Raymond H. Weill - New Orleans, Paul Morgoulis - Geneva -Paris and Renato Mondolfo in Rome, who himself Indeed since cut from the business has withdrawn .

one not to underestimating share of the beutiary market have the as Distribution for certain postal administrations acting so-called “ philatelic Agencies ”; the biggest novelty dealer are our rage however, the postal administrations himself that out to the direct sale of their Novelties to collectors – mostly by way of subscription – considerable revenue achieve , the zT . far above the sales of the largest Trading houses are ²⁵ .

Fig. 89: The house of the Weill Brothers in the make New Orleans French Quarter. in the Store window is no brand too see .

The estimated total sales the German market alone in 1979 about 1.5 billion marks without the income of the federal post office and the yes anyway Not detectable private barter and purchase transactions ²⁶ . On that since 1976 in biennial Distance taking place Essenes Stamp Fair , which is undoubtedly the largest of their kind in the world Turnovers in the range of 10-20 million DM . A certain stagnation in recent years has ahead everything at modern material too noticeable price declines led and at least causes that _ none Further Increase in absolute numbers, rather even a lighter decline to register is .

The Try one summary appreciation of this period falls heavy . positive stands that extraordinary increased level of collections thanks to a deepened post-historical point of view to book that with one accordingly high level of philatelic Research goes hand in hand . negative I rate the unbearable Flood of novelties , the abuse of the postage stamp to political propaganda purposes , the unrestrained Commercialization of Philately , Eventually even their “ bureaucratization ” thanks to the increased influence one Functionary caste that only to easy forgets that quantity usually comes at the expense of quality goes .

Remarks to the 7th chapter :

1. The following figures were largely calculated according to the MICHEL catalogs 1984/85 ; the count other catalogues gives way from that partly . off, yes it only depends on the relations , which are always the same .
2. Cf. , most recently Heiner DÜRST: The stories of machine franking , in: DZB. 57 (1982) No. 18, pp. 3217-20; No. 19, pp.3423-26; No. 20, pp. 3610-12; No. 21, pp. 3798-3800.
3. Cf. _ Edwin MUELLER in: Mercury Stamp Journal 5 (1959/61) No. 54, p. 125; No. 56, pp. 171-72; cf. _ also TRONDLE, pp. 52-53
4. Josef BENDER: The postage stamp as art of small form. The development of the pictorial form of the European postage stamps , diss, phil. Bonn 1974 (printed : 1977) 659 sides in 8°; ibid . P. 13-24 wine useful Literature review , in de but the name Schlechtriems of all things missing ; DERS.: Thoughts to the scientific Character of Philately , in: Yearbook of the Germans Bundespost 1978 (1979) pp. 295-375; see above p. 157 with note . 14; cf. _ nor Hans Rudolf JOHANNSEN: The postage stamp as graphic Artwork , Nuremberg 1969, 192 pages in 4° with 12 plates and one afterword ; William FINLAY: An illustrated history of stamp design, London 1974, 187 pages in large 8° and des. Walter Maria NEUWIRTH: Small art history of the Austrian Brier stamp 1945-1968, Vienna 1968, 143 pages in 8°; See also Joachim HOSANG: Serrated War propaganda , 4 parts , Sölligen 1954-57; general cf. _ nor Carlos

STOETZER: Postage Stamps as Propaganda, Washington/DC 1953, 27 pages in 8°.

5. To this , the laymen difficult understand difference cf. _ such as the remarks by SCHLUNEGGER, p. 251ff.; LIPS (below note _ 10) p. 3091 and thereto again V. VILICKY: Thematically or documentary , in: Philatelie 33 (1981) No. 136, pp. 22-25. A useful one introduction offers Frans de TOYER: La philatélie thématique , Bruxelles 1975, 102 pages in 8°. cf. _ even below pp. 254-55.

6. Théophile WITHAEGHS: Catalogue universel de cartes-vues dites "maximum", Deurne-Sud (Belgium) 1937, 46 pages; A. DELUCHEY: Catalog des cartes maximum de France, Dieppe 1943, 56 pages (BLANC, no. 1368, 402). Both catalogues appeared in 8°.

7. Edwin MUELLER: The Future of the General Natalog , in: Mercury Stamp Journal 5 (1959/61) No. 60, pp. 265-71, esp . pp. 268-69; Carlrichard BRÜHL: Philately yesterday and today . A historical one Reminiscence , Festortrag ... in the 1912th meeting (of the Berlin Philatelic Club of 1888) on September 30, 1978 ... (private printing : Bremerhaven 1978) p. (7-8).

8. Ira SEEBACHER: Keep ' en Ignorant, in: The Collector Club Philatelist 41 (1962), No. 4, pp. 160-62, sees in the motif collector a kind of super philatelist who a) masters the entire field of philately and b) his "topical" . should : one touchingly naïve view , diue through the facts refuted will . cf. _ already Kerek PALMER: Keep ' em ignorant, in: ibid . No. 6, pp. 267-68.

9. Cf. _ also the remarks by Kurt WILK in: DZB. 57 (1982) No. 20, pp. 3585-86 and Friedrich KUGLER: Where is motif philately ? In: Rapport 2 (1984) No. 1, pp. 74-75. The pedagogical element dominated by the way still all clearly with the spiritual father of FIPCO , the Alsatian Studienrat (" Professeur ") Abbé Lucien Braun; cf. _ SCHLUNEGGER, pp. 196-97. On the development of motif philately after to the second world war cf. _ George GRIFFENHAGEN: Topical exhibiting: a brief history, in: The Stamp Collector 50 (1977) No. 32, pp. 34-35 and esp . SCHLUNEGGER, p. 12ff., who, however , combines the history of FIPCO with the history of motif philately confused ; cf. _ still below chap. 23, pp. 1063-64 with note . 36

10. That there is no philatelic Research in motif philately give then , i put in my Lecture : Research in philately , shown at the 4th Soest Talks in 1975 : four years later at the 5th Soest Talks in 1979 Counter-presentation by Dr. W. Lippens has me Not convinced , yes would one detailed confrontation with this Lecture at this point _ far lead ; cf. _ Walter LIPPENS: Groschung in motif philatlie , in: DZB 55 (1980) No. 17, pp. 3089-93. I hold my position, like you search in the demo ben Anm . 7 quote . Lecture and in the discussion in Soest on Expression came , full upright : cf. _ still below p. 264-65m. note 22 and chap. 20, p. 887 m. note . 2-3

11. (HDS HAVERBECK): Philately behind the Iron Curtain, in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 31 (1952) No. 6, pp.298-300, especially p. 300; "But by far the greatest lesson to be learned is that stamp collectors are being victimized for the benefit of the Communist treasury". Haverdeck warns moreover , not reprints of old plates used by the Soviets as originals dropped in the west become . cf. _ also KEHR, pp. 72-76.

12. DZB. 55 (1980) No. 19, p.34676. cf. _ still below chapter 9/ § 3, p.341 note . 15

13. -SCHLUNEGGER, pp. 172-73, formulated very careful and stressed ibid . p. 173 expressly , one sole none Motif collection " invest for investment reasons ; _ cf. _ also Walter MÖNKEMAYER: collect stamps connoisseurs different ... (Gottingen 1981) p. 71. On the possibilities marketable exploitation of motif collections made me , Consul HW STEGER, in a report held in Lorch on 14. X. 1982 conversation attentive for what also good at this point thanked .

14. Cf. _ such as Henry M. GOODKIND: Philately, Bottom's Up! in: The Collectors Club Philatelist 47 (1968) No. 3, pp. 140-41, who defied the battle all compelling counterarguments nice back then as lost denoted ; see last the balanced ones Comments by Marcel KOTTELAT: The rubber problem – and its Objectification , in: DZB. 58 (1983) No. 5, pp. 859-61 (first printed in: Berner Briefmarken - Zeitung 1982, No. 7-8). The lit this topic _ always same tenor, yet has changed _ never something . cf. _ also TRÖNDLE, p. 123 and ibid . p. 115ff. To the beginnings this mania cf. _ above pp. 132-33 with note . 36-37, pp. 157-58 m. Note . 15

15. Vgl. unten Kap. 24, S. 1115ff.; Kap. 25, S. 1130, 1136-37.

16. DZB. 55 (1980) Nr. 7, S. 1174.

17. ASDA-Bulletin. 50th Anniversary Issue (1964) S. 23-24 und: Celebrate October: Stamp Collecting Month, in: The American Philatelist 95 (1981) Nr. 10 (1969) S. 936-37.

18. “Dove, come, quando e chi”, in: Cronaca Filatelica 10 (1980) No. 39, pp. 30-33. To publications philatelic Content in magazines , magazines etc. _ cf. _ eg : “Stamp Album worth $1,000,000. For the first time, “Life” brings world's classics together”, in: “Life” from . 2nd V. 1954, pp. 88-96, 98, 100, 102; cf. _ bierzu JAKUBEK, p. 225-26. Furthermore: “The wondrous multiplication of money with brands”, in: Capital. The German business magazine 1967, No. 9; “ Stamps (I) – Not every speculation goes up” , in: Wirtschaftswoche 1971, No. 33; “ Stamps (II) – Illusions on 'Michel prices ' , in: ibid . No. 34: “ Money investment – refined with rubber ”, in: Der Spiegel. The German News Magazine 1979, No. 16; “ Desired : Post horn movements and Beuss heads ”, in: Expertise. Medical Journal for Collecting , Art and Culture 1979, No. 1. “ Who nothing covets who lives wrong ”, and: “ Zahne seigen ”, in: Frankfurter Allgemeine. Magazine , H. 61 of 30. IV. 1981, pp. 3, 22-27. Linn's Almanac 1982, pp. 707-09 one over 50 names comprehensive List of "Stamp Columnists" working in American daily newspapers fixed , mostly weekly appearing posts publish .

19. Cf. _ below chap. 17, p. 665, 678 ff.; Cape. 18, pp. 736ff.; Cape. 19, pp. 846-47.

20. Cf. _ but below chap. 20, p. 919ff.: Chap. 21/ §§ 6-10, p. 975ff.

21. Cf. _ already Edwin MUELLER: The Conservation of Philatelic Libraries, in: Mercury Stamp Journal 6 (1962) No. 62, pp. 27-28. Before especially in the US one has to take care of such reprints effort , in Europe is relatively little in this Direction happen .

22. Cf. _ about the “ simplicity ” hardly to outperforming ATA manuals of which nice over 100 appeared are . excerpts from the known catalogues in the regard to a specific motive can even a average gifted high school student strengthen ; one expects after all at least still one List of on the respective motive regarding postal stationery , the special and machine stamp etc ., such as the Belgian “ Editions Évhophil ” offer . A compilation newer motivational literature in SCHLUNEGGER, p. 323ff.

23. As examples of this genre I cite André GOULY - Henry LEROY: L'art religieux dans la philatélie , Paris 1952, 200 pages in 8°; Carl Olof ENHAGEN: Sports on Stamps, London 1961, 275 pages in 8°; Gerhard SCHMIDT - Günter SCHNEIDER: Sports and stamps .

Handbook of sports philately , Coburg 1958, 300 pages in 8° and others

24. Meant is the book by Hans PAIKERT: The UPU study. Philatelic documents on the subject of the Universal Postal Union , Cologne 1979, 332 pages in 4° (UNOP Handbook 79).

25. Cf. _ below chap. 11, p. 421ff.

26. Cf. _ DZB. 55 (1980) No. 7, p. 1174, where 1.7-2 billion including the philatelic supplies called become .

Chapter 8

FROM CORNER SHOP TO EXPORT HOUSE

THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE TRADE FROM 1860 TO TODAY

It is not by chance that the first chapter of this book devoted to a special topic deals with trade, since the dealer, not the society, is the most important partner of the collector, since only the dealer can supply the collector with the material he still needs and cannot obtain any other way, e.g. by exchange. Only very naive - or very stupid - people can seriously think it possible to build up a quality collection simply by exchange and the diligent clipping of stamps from correspondence. This idea was as absurd a hundred years ago as it is today. A few years ago when an aged collector at a Grade III exhibition claimed never to have bought a stamp in his life but got everything by 'pure collecting', the jury's dry comment was "that's obvious".

Obviously, everyone is free to collect like this man if he wishes - and the number who share his view is not small - but he must be quite clear that he will never in this way put together a collection that will satisfy on a more demanding level. Anyone who collects stamps in a cigar box or is satisfied with a subscription at a post office can in fact turn his back on trade: however anyone who wants to build up a collection worthy of the name, that will be an object of interest and value, will very quickly come to realize that this is not possible without commerce.

However, we must begin by defining what we mean in this chapter by the term "commerce" and "dealer". They relate to professional philatelists who make their living by honourable dealing in stamps, and as the symbol of honourable dealing, pay taxes. This "definition" has deliberately been made provocative. I do not think I exaggerate when I say that of five philatelists who make their living from philately, more exactly by buying and selling stamps, i.e. by dealing, three of them at most are "official" dealers (with licences, tax records etc); the others are "black" dealers. The proportion of "black" trade is higher in philately than in practically any other branch of commerce. This fact, which does considerable damage to the reputation of the legitimate trade, will only be mentioned here; in what follows we shall deal exclusively with the legitimate trade in the strict sense.

However, this reference to the importance of the black trade also helps us to understand why it is so difficult to draw a clear distinction between "collector" and "dealer". Of course there have been and still are dealers who carry on their trade with as much interest as they would show in selling jam or umbrellas, but their number is not large. Most dealers - at all events the good ones - feel themselves to be engaged philatelists, who generally have considerable collections of their own. Conversely there is no collector who has been active for years who can truly say that he has never in his life sold a stamp. Obviously the occasional sale of duplicates, surplus items etc do not make him into a dealer, but the boundary is fluid, and many "collectors" are much "sharper" about prices than serious dealers. I can say from my own experience that my negative experiences in buying stamps have been almost exclusively with so-called collectors. This aspect of "commerce" also deserves a mention.

When it comes to the interaction between collectors and dealers, we must wonder how hostile are the feelings with which one side talks to the other. For many collectors the word "dealer" is synonymous with "swindler" against whom one must be on guard,

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

2

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

but against whom anything is permitted. On the other hand there are dealers who look on collectors as principally objects for exploitation, who can be fleeced at will. Both these attitudes are rarely found in a pure form; these feelings are a ground-swell but a very extensive one unfortunately, and one which is today stronger rather than weaker, since the personal contact between dealer and collector which once led to mutual understanding is not nearly so widespread now as it used to be.

The reason for this development must now be discussed. Dealers who look on their customers as idiots to be fooled as far as possible are fortunately rare, since most dealers have been and remain collectors themselves. The lack of respect, indeed contempt, with which certain dealers speak about their customers relates to the often really boundless naivete, to use no harder word, with which many collectors allow themselves to be hoaxed. The inconsiderate way in which these gentlemen exploit the gullibility of their customers contributes greatly to the miserable image that many collectors have of dealers. It is usually forgotten, though, that the boundless frivolity of many collectors make it possible for these "sharks" to operate as they do

One can of course avoid these "black sheep", but this is, not enough to get rid of mistrust. There are dealers' associations (2) in all philatelically relevant countries, but they can only take action when a dealer contravenes existing laws. They are more or less impotent in the grey area of "dodginess", but this is just where the most damage is done. In fact the reason for this poor reputation lie deeper, to some extent, in philately itself. Anyone who goes into a baker's shop will get his bread at a predetermined price and knows it has been made by a skilful baker. Anyone who goes to a lawyer knows he will be dealing with a trained jurist who has passed two state examinations and will charge at fixed rates.

The stamp trade is different. There are no prescribed courses of study - 95% of all dealers have no training - although training is available in Germany at least - and there are absolutely no predetermined prices, though this applies equally to the coin and fine-art trades, i.e. the amateur ones. Collectors come from all strata of the community, from general labourers to managing directors, from lowly officials to ministers, so naturally dealers too come from all strata. Many - surprisingly many - of them felt drawn towards stamp dealing in their early youth, even when they were minors; others came to it later after following the most varied callings: artisans, officials, academics etc.

It is in the nature of things and cannot be avoided that people who have failed in other directions are drawn towards the stamp trade, not because they like philately or have any special knowledge of either philately or commerce, but because after 99 failures they decide to try their luck in this sector as well. Of course it ought to be obvious there is no "royal road". However unwelcome such elements are to the established trade, there is very little they can do. The term "professional philatelist" is not protected, and anyone can go into the trade. Thus, respectable dealers have to live with these undesirable "colleagues". They can only protect themselves by asking collectors to be careful, which they have done for years to no avail. So it seems to be the fate of the trade to have to live with a bad reputation, due not least to the frivolous thoughtlessness and gullibility of collectors.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

3

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

After these general considerations, the following pages will give a short sketch of the history of the trade. This is not going to be an endless lists of prominent firms with their dates of foundation, nor do I want to give melancholy list of prices of 100 years ago, or lament over the good deals that were once available. My main interest is in the general line of development.

I will use outstanding examples of given types of commerce in the next chapter, but this chapter will go into the history of some prominent firms. It is self-evident that a stamp trade in the full sense can only arise when there are enough collectors willing to give money for their missing stamps. Thus the existence of a trade presupposes not just collecting, but a somewhat advanced form of collecting.

Now, we saw above that serious collecting on a large scale did not exist before 1860. Hence, the alleged foundation of some firms before that date is quite improbable. In all these cases there can only have been a quite insignificant occasional trade. Thus it is not surprising that the probable oldest advert from a dealer dates to November 1861: H. Barber, 44 Douglas Street, Deptford, SE., wishes to announce that he has above 400 foreign stamps, many of them duplicates. This does not actually mention sale, but the fact that this advert appeared monthly in "Beeton's Boy's Own Magazine" from then on, with particular stamps occasionally mentioned, raises well-founded doubts about the amateur status of Mr BARBER, who otherwise remained true to philately and was accepted into the "London Philatelic Society" in 1881. Dealers' adverts began to appear with a certain regularity first in the year 1862 (3).

From 1862 the number of dealers in England and France rose rapidly, as can be seen from both adverts and directories (4). A total of 20 dealers advertised in the first number of the "Stamp Collector's Magazine" of 1st February 1863. A year later, in the first number of the second volume, there were already about 100 with 5 of them from abroad. Price lists circulated in Great Britain as early as 1862, which also point to a rising interest in the commercial possibilities of stamps.

Such lists appear on the "Continent" the following year, and not till 1864 in the USA (5). The oldest price list known to date, that of EDWARD C. HULL, dates from May 1862, and is thus only five months younger than the first printed catalogue from POTIQUET; more price lists of this type appeared in England in 1862, and they can hardly be counted after 1863 (6).

The earliest commerce was probably that of Jean-Baptiste MOENS in Brussels, who described himself as a "stamp merchant" as early as 1858. The first in Paris was the self-willed Edard de LAPLANTE, who announced his intention of setting up in trade in a letter to MOENS of May 1861 (7).

After him, A. MAURY (1862), P. MAHE (1863) and A. BAILLEU (1863) were amongst the earliest dealers. One of the oldest and equally important English dealers of the early period was Edward Loines PEMBERTON, whom we came across from 1862, at which time Stanley GIBBONS began a very modest trade without issuing a single advert. After him the predominant firm was that of the brothers Alfred and Stafford SMITH in Bath, who ended their partnership in 1866. Alfred SMITH (1837-1880) remained in Bath, whereas Stafford SMITH (1843-1903) moved to Brighton. A fusion of the firms of D. YOUNG and R. STOCKALL in Liverpool in 1864 gave rise to perhaps the outstanding English firm of the 60s. Pages 269-299 + 300-307

4

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

In Germany too there were a few dealers as early as 1862. The best known being the coin dealers Zschiesche & Koeder in Leipzig. In 1866 Sigmund FRIEDL started his well-known Viennese stamp firm. In the USA, we find a few small dealers in New York during 1862/63.

They were not really shops, just stalls in the open air, like that of John BAILEY, who stuck his stamps to wooden boards with tapestry needles to stop them blowing away. Another dealer, William BROWN, SCOTT'S instructor, showed his wares in boxes, in which stamps could be freely chosen from 1,2,3,4, or 5 cents (Fig 91, No. 14). J. W. SCOTT ran such a stand originally (s). The stamp trade was limited essentially to Central Europe and North America, but there was already one stamp dealer in Madrid during the 60s.

All the dealers had it in common that stamps were a secondary trade, along with tobacco and papers, or with coins on a higher level. Only a very few dealers handled stamps alone during 1862/63: Arthur MAURY, Edward L. PEMBERTON, Stanley GIBBONS, I cannot name any more at this first try. The leading dealer of the 19th century, J.-B MOENS, never gave up his publishing business during his lifetime; well into the 70s, purely stamp dealing was the great exception. For the great majority, stamp dealing was just a desirable, sometimes very lucrative, sideline.

The form of the offers was still very primitive: the stamps were stuck - in the full sense of the word - to sheets and hung up, but by the middle of the 60s, stamps packets were all the rage in England, and sight packets were also sent out (9). The firm of Stafford Smith & Smith set up in January 1864 had 13 "foreign stamp depots" in London and 52 in the rest of Great Britain.

By February there were 135, and in December 1864 no fewer than 173, ten of which were abroad (7 in the USA, 2 in Australia and one in Canada). These were shops provided by Smith & Smith with hanging displays for retail trade. By the end of 1869 Alfred Smith & Co. had 15 "branch depots" overseas (3 in the USA, 3 in Canada, others in France, Argentina, Australia, South Africa, Russia, Turkey etc), but only 131 in Greater London and Great Britain, a sign of the stagnation of the 70s.

Like Stafford SMITH, Georg ZECHMEIER of Nuremberg was an active stamp dealer from about 1863 and expanded during the late 60s and early 70s.

By the end of the 70s, the firm of R. SENF founded in Leipzig in 1872 had 150 dealers on commission, and employed 12 people directly.

Quite soon, large quantities of stamps became necessary to fill the packets and stock the little commission shops. In April 1865 R. JOHNSTONE offered 100,000 stamps, and in July of the same year R. BORNHEIM of Hamburg had a stock of 500,000 "mixed Continental stamps". We may now look for the start of large-scale commerce, which obviously was not at that time separable from individual enterprise

0). In many price lists and adverts the stamps are offered in lots of 1, 12 or also 100, i.e. for further sale. We see with a certain sadness that in Munich in 1864, Louis BAUER offered one "black single" free with every two Thalers, and Heinrich LOW of Lemberg offered the 1866 yellow Mercury with every 50 to 20 Thalers, with the single piece at one Thaler. In all these cases of course we know nothing about the conditions - or genuineness - of the stamps.

In the 60s and early 70s there were dealers' exchanges - not to be confused with the Tuilerien Exchange in Paris and Birch Lane in London - in Paris (Palais Royal) and elsewhere. The first German exchange seems to have been founded in Mainz on 15th May 1863. Similar exchanges

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

5

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

were known in Kaufbeuren, Frankfurt-am-Main and so on. However only the Hamburg Exchange was of commercial importance round the middle 70s (11).

However, there was still a lack of knowledge about how and where to buy stamps. In particular the addresses of foreign dealers were looked on as secrets: as much as two Thalers were asked (!) and obtained for the address of one American firm, one English address cost 40 pfennings, and 50 for a second sale⁽¹²⁾. It was thus a great thing when in Leipzig at the end of 1864 an "Address Book of European Stamp Dealers", naturally not at all complete, was put on the market by Christian MANN Jnr(13). This type of literature soon had a great success: in 1873 "Address Book of the Most Important Dealer of the Entire World" by H. LEHMANN contained 625 addresses (14). The "underage young fellow" Chr. MANN Jnr. was also the first person to my knowledge to advertise for a job in philately. "I seek a position in philately for a young man with a basic understanding of the stamp trade"⁽¹⁵⁾. The "young man" was Chr. MANN himself.

Supplement No 24 to the Magazine für Briefmarken-Sammler

An Explanation

Herr Chr. Mann, who is still under age, who works for the imaginary firm "Chr. Mann Junior" has offered in many journals stamps at up to 50% less than our price, or those of Messrs Zschiesche & Koder, in order to clear (?) his stock. To check this we ordered a batch of mainly quite ordinary stamps, which must be always available in a shop with the slightest pretension. In fact, we got as good as none, and what we did get were for the most part well over 100% higher than our prices.

It is obvious from this just what Herr M's clamour amounts to, and obviously he is trying to throw dust into gullible people's eyes by boasting.

We will say here and now that Herr M. has sold and is trying to sell "false" stamps of a kind which every dealer must immediately recognise however weak his intellectual capacity, and is doing so

Under guarantee of authenticity. Whether selling or trying to sell.

THE LITERARY MUSEUM OF LEIPZIG

Fig. 93. Even in the 60s there was plenty of room for jealousy and methods of argument did not correspond to our present-day notions of fairness.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

6

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

Even in the early days, the number of businesses should not be underestimated. I mentioned above that one Parisian dealer of the early 60s showed the door to any customer who was not ready to spend at least 30 - 40 francs. Edard de LAPLANTE (1820-1881), who was probably the person concerned, gave up the stamp trade in 1869 and settled down in Algeria as a vine-grower and landowner ⁽¹⁶⁾. In 1867 another Parisian dealer - not MAURY - had a customer list with about 3,000 names. This may have been Alexandre BAILLEU (1842-1899), who must be ranked as the leading Parisian dealer of the early days after Edard de LAPLANTE, Arthur MAURY and Pierre MAHE. One of the best transactions is reported by P. MAHE: BAILLEU sent the sum of 125 francs to 25 French consuls in the English colonies and various American states, with the request that they would send a selection of stamps from their host countries. Not one of them refused to do this, and everything they sent was welcomed by BAILLEU, who thus at one blow got the best-stocked business of all the Parisian dealers ⁽¹⁷⁾. These are only a few examples of how the business was not on the penny scale even in the early days, nor should it be forgotten that Paris was by no means the only centre of the stamp trade.

The undisputed leading dealer of the years 1860-1900, J.-B. MOENS, resided in Brussels. English dealers of the standing of Stafford Smith & Smith in Brighton, Young & Stockall in Liverpool, W. Lincoln and Clarke & Rawll in London, D. Dean & Co. in Manchester, and of course Stanley Gibbons & Co. of Plymouth, later London, to name only a few, fell by no means behind their Parisian colleagues. It just happened that the trade in France was concentrated on Paris - which is still the case today with a few exceptions - whereas it is spread throughout the whole country in England, and naturally the same was true for Germany as well. As early as the 70s, some dealers had quite distinctive premises in which to carry on their trade. In 1877 the "Illustrierte Briefmarken-Journal" published pictures of the offices of the then five-year-old firm of Serif Brothers. The same was done for J. W. SCOTT in 1876 in the "American Journal of Philately" in New York (18) (Figs. 43-44). The wily businessman Arthur MAURY was much more modern in his approach: from 1869 he had an office in the most aristocratic quarter of Paris as he himself claimed, namely in the "Rue St Lazare". In 1874 (!) he decided to have his business photographed: the operation was very successful, and MAURY hastened to sell the photos for 75 centimes each. These were without doubt the oldest photos of a stamp business. MAURY wrote at the time: We think our magazine is the only one in the whole world devoted for years to the trade in postage stamps (19). This was not actually the case, but it does illustrate how narrow the trade in postage stamps was even by the middle of the 70s.

The high period of the stamp trade began with the 80s. Until then the trade was essentially concentrated in a few cities: Brussels, Leipzig, Liverpool, London, Paris, Vienna etc. all were the European centres, Boston and New York in the USA. Berlin was completely unimportant, Italy had only dealers of the third category, and Russia and the Balkans were "Tabula rasa": P. Oskar SIMIC reports that in Zagreb - a city of the Imperial and Royal Monarchy - had in the year 1878 a single "dealer" with an annual turnover of 2-3 gulden ⁽²⁰⁾, whereas J. TSCHAKIDJII founded the oldest stamp business in Constantinople (Istanbul), Turkey in 1875.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

7

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

F. KALCKHOFF reports that there was only a single dealer in Berlin at the beginning of the 70s - Aug. HOCH - whose business was later taken over by P. LIETZOW ⁽²¹⁾

. G. LUBLIN first "took the plunge" in the middle of the 80s, and obtained a large shop at 66 Friedrichstrasse; his list of offers ran to well over 100 pages. In 1889 Ernst STOCK founded an important firm in Berlin, and Phillip KOSACK followed suit in 1890. Heinrich KOHLER followed in 1913, and Berlin then consolidated its leading place in Germany. However, Friedrichstrasse in Berlin was not the trade centre of Berlin, as were the "Rue Drouot" in Paris, The "Rue du Midi" in Brussels, the "Strand" in London, or "Nassau Street" in New York before the First World War. The last named has completely lost its importance since.

The scale of business increases rapidly. In 1895 Stanley Gibbons Ltd had a weekly turnover of ^1000, sold some 22,000 albums and 20,000 catalogues a year. The firm employed 27 people: this number had been doubled ten years later. PhXOSACK said that in the year 1905 he had spent over half a million Reichsmarks in buying collections, and in 1904 Serif Brothers already had 76 employees (22) i.e. two more than the "Scott Stamp and Coin Co. had in 1934 ⁽²³⁾. A "leading Paris dealer" who must naturally have been Arthur MAURY, sold as many as 30,000 albums in 1884(!), and about two million stamps; round 1900, Stanley Gibbons put out about 30,000 packets of stamps. At the 7th German Philatelic Meeting in 1895, the turnover was estimated to be about 140,000 RM for the dealers and 250,000 RM for the collectors. When the Moens stamp business was liquidated in 1899/1900, the firm realized over a million RM; the remainder stock was bought by the Copenhagen dealer Edvard M. RUBIN, in partnership with Ph KOSACK, for 800,000 francs.

In 1909 the London dealer W. PECKITT bought the Avery collection for ^24,500 and paid cash ⁽²⁴⁾. All this shows that the stamp trade had developed into a significant economic factor, and that the best dealers had considerable capital available. Business trips were already the order of the day. Gustavo GELLI belonged to the well-known firm of Gelli & Tani, which in 1890 had branches in Florence, Ohrdruf (Gotha) and Paris, and soon afterwards opened one in Brussels. He made regular business trips through Europe, and W. H. COLSON began his yearly trips through London before 1914. Obviously, there are no precise figures for the total turnover of the stamps trade in that year, but it was certainly in the eighth or ninth place.

The trend to specialization since the 80s naturally had its effect on the trade as well. Ernst STOCK began to advertise from 1891 as a specialist in old German "entires", which of course included stamps. The London dealer M. GIWELD announced in the same year that he was "the worlds' major dealer in rarities". The "Black Einser" on a letter cost 10 RM from him. Also, about 1900 the firm of Serif put out regular offers of "Stamps on Letters". Maintaining stock called for attention even before the First World War. The average dealer could not compete with the specialist in rarities such as W. H. COLSON, who dealt with a few well-informed customers using exclusively first-class material from the period before 1880.

The big houses like Stanley Gibbons Ltd, Scott Stamps & Coin Co., A Maury, Ph Kosack, R. Senf and so on claimed to deal with the whole spectrum of the entire world, but even before the end of the century many dealers had decided to restrict themselves to one continent, and particularly to their own country. In Germany the trend was towards Europe and the German Reich, including the old German states, the

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

8

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

colonies and overseas post offices. On the whole, the packet trade flourished afterwards as before. People not restricted to a particular place could be catered for by the sight packets that were already common by the 60s, and working on lists of wants. The number of smaller stamp dealers supplied with hanging sheets by firms like Senf became steadily fewer, without ever quite disappearing. The institution of "travellers in postage stamps" visiting small dealers, newsagents and tobacconists were obviously affected in the first place. These people were often not popular with their customers, since they tended to favour their private clients and only after them the dealers, who thereby lost a good deal of custom ^(2s)

An important part of the trade - then as now - was the supply of new issues. It was much more important then than it is today, since postal undertakings had not yet gone into the business. Some people, as for instance Zdenkr J. PALLAUSCH at the 14th German Philatelic Meeting in Vienna (26) suggested supplying new issues centrally via the societies, but this was not accepted and was in fact unrealistic. Hence, the trade had in this a specially important field of activity. One of the first to seize the opportunity was Charles WHITFIELD KING of Ipswich (1885-1930) who carried on an outstanding trade in stamps in his home town from about 1875 onwards. From the 80s onwards he specialized in importing new issues. In an interview that he gave in 1892 he said:

What I pride myself on is my system of 'foreign Correspondents' - I have a better organization for this than almost any dealer in the United Kingdom. Whenever a new issue comes out, I am usually first in the field with it - in fact, a great part of my best business is done in new issues and provisionals ⁽²⁷⁾

It is open to doubt whether WHITFIELD KING could then supply practically all the new issues from a country or group of countries. I have not been able to find out definitely when the present system of subscriptions was introduced; the "New Issue Department" founded by Stanley Gibbons Ltd in 1906 certainly used it. This would supply new issues for a subscription of 10% above face value, and in 1909 W PECKITT offered a similar new issue service for the British Colonies. Ch. PHILLIPS was not backward in offering this service. But did not claim it to be a new one, and so, we may perhaps accept the Whitefield King firm as the originator of this system - and that well before the end of the century. Besides, Stanley Gibbons Ltd only kept its new issues service going for a short while, since the then usual margin of 10% was obviously not enough. In 1913 the important firm of W. PECKITT was absorbed by Stanley Gibbons Ltd in 1913, and PECKITT'S well-liked and efficient new issues service was discontinued by the new management in the following year ^(2g)

Despite a mild recession in the late 90s, which lasted to about 1901/02, the trade enjoyed on the whole a continuous upswing in the years leading to the First World War, and this is reflected in the advertising. It is today an entertaining, but also very instructive pastime to study the numerous adverts in the major philatelic journals before the First World War. For many things, such as philatelic wants, the adverts in the magazines are often our only source (29). The language is often very aggressive, and does not at all correspond to that used today. Even personal feuds were occasionally carried on in the form of adverts; warnings of real or imagined swindles, details of slow payers and similar friendly advice were the order of the day - with names named and full addresses given. The adverts in a single issue of one journal

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

9

Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

from the years 1890-1910 would keep half a dozen lawyers busy for an entire year today.

Bottom of page 288

W. SELLSCHOPP, HAMBURG. Notice of removal and Business Development

1899 Came from San Francisco to Europe, hired a young man and contact with the European market from ROSTOCK.

1901 Now 8 employees, moved to Hamburg and opened at ARTUSHOF at 49, Gr. Bleichen.

1904 Because of noteworthy expansion, moved to 55a Gr. Bleichen.

1906 18th April, San Francisco Earthquake spared most things, but the San Francisco business was burned out and so transferred to Hamburg. 1907 Further expansion necessary, and a large workroom rented at the back of the building.

1910 Further expansion absolutely necessary, and as no further space was available at ARTHUSHOF, the firm moved to completely new premises designed to its own specification in what was then the recently completed largest commercial building in Hamburg, The BARKHOF. The move took place on 23rd August, it was made necessary by the number of employees rising to 24.

The new address reads:

W. SELLSCHOPP, HAMBURG 11 Spitalerstrasse, (Barkhof).

It is 3 minutes from the main station on the direct line to the centre of Hamburg, the Rathausmarkt. Frequent visits from philatelists passing through are eagerly anticipated.

Fig. 103. A name that is still well-known today: W. Sellschopp - Hamburg.

However, the law held good then as it does today: the more strident the advert, the more dubious the firm. Bela SZEKULA was a notoriously shifty dealer in Budapest (30) who staggered from one scandal to another.

His adverts are a characteristic illustration of this. Obviously illustrations were used in pre-war advertising, but photos were rare. A very early, perhaps the earliest example of a photo advert may be quoted here; the prominent Parisian dealer Ch. ROUSSIN offered in 1889 a 2 pence Mauritius Post Office on a letter at the price of 4,000 francs (3,200 RM). Anyone interested could have a photo of it for 50 centimes postage^(3Z). Photography became common in the journals only after the end of the century.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 1 o Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

Page 289

Public Explanation and Correction!

In an "open letter" in several magazine the dealer Richard Schuh, Vienna VII, has maliciously published the completely untrue statement that I have recently "taken up the dishonourable practice" of reporting collectors to the tax authorities.

I thus find myself obliged to state publicly that this claim is not true and would be in direct opposition to my calling. I have reported two people only, Richard Schuh and the railway official Emil Heger, both of Vienna, to the trade association (not, as was stupidly claimed, to the tax authorities). For months the first of these has been advertising a "general collection" for sale in the "Neuen Wiener Tagblatte" without giving his name, making him self available to sell stamp from 6 in the evening and from 2 in the afternoon on Sundays. The second put out selection packets, and repeatedly asked me for information as to the creditworthiness of suppliers.

The above facts are sufficient to show that they are not collectors selling genuine stamps, but underhand dealers prepared to harm conscientious dealers by operating on the statutory Sunday rest-day, and I have decided to make an example of these detestable personages, to put a stop to their doings. The general warning that I have given to the authorities is thus completely out in the open. I see no need for an answer to this "open letter", and would add that the "Society of Austrian Stamp Dealers", of which I am a member, had nothing to do with these adverts, and has not blamed me, but looks on all this as purely my affair. I thus free it from any responsibility.

GUSTAV BREYER,

Editor of the "Universal Anzeigers", 6 Josfmengasse, Vienna II

Fig. 104: What could be said right out before the First World War would be the subject of years of litigation now. People were not so "soft" then.

Page 290

Vienna, End of June 1911.

To Herr GUSTAV BREYER,

Kiloware dealer, Universal Advertiser and Editor of the "Universal - Anzeiger"

VIENNA.

You have had the bad taste to call me in various "explanations" a trade auxiliary. The same title could be applied to the agent or manager of an international firm.

You also call me an underhand dealer, because I have sold part of my collection after years of costly effort and did not advertise the sale in your paper in spite of your repeated energetic canvassing. According to your notions, every collector not in the trade can buy in bulk and then retail it via your paper. He will only become an underhand dealer if he stops advertising

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

1 1 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter R

with you. You will then say "this man is trying to harm my business", turn to the authorities, and give rein to your well known passion for showing off. I assure you that in spite of everything I shall not advertise with you.

Would you now like to say, dear Breyer, to what category of dealer you belong yourself you claimed in your paper that you were neither a dealer or a collector, so as to give the philatelic work the impression that you alone were completely impartial. However you demonstrably deal in *Kilowares, birthday stamps and every other possible type of stamp. I find it hard not to call you a liar. At any event, I will express my total lack of respect for you. For other reasons as well.

You make slanderous statements in your paper, but I have the necessary proof in hand and can bring you before a court to prove your claims are wrong and you cannot prove them. Such things happen in the ordinary course of the law.

Your claim that the Vienna Dealers' Society distances itself from your adverts is rather dubious. You sounded out this Society before you started advertising, and were advised to go ahead. After you had started, you were notified by the Society that your adverts did not meet the conditions of the Vienna Dealers' Society. When the teacher says to a schoolboy "'aren't you ashamed to criticise anyone, you stupid lad", this is an offence, even if the word offence is not uttered. Just the same, it is easy to think of the two demonstrations of the Dealers' Society as offensive, even if this word is not explicitly used.

I must congratulate you especially on describing your adverts with expressions "private dealings". This expression is very happily chosen, and characterizes you better than the many articles against you from highly respected sources.

RICHARD SHUH, Member: Vinbobona, Gossnitz, Pontoise. Board member: Vienna Stamp Market.

The dealer - collector relationship was still a very personal one as a rule. The dealer often understood his customers' collections better than they did themselves, were concerned to fill the gaps, and over and above that acted as philatelic advisers and "father confessors". People looked on "their" dealers as pals, made friends of them, and dropped in "en passant" to look at new issues or have a "chinwag". This idyll could often turn into a burden for the dealer - before 1914 English dealers complained about customers who would visit the shop over 200 times without once spending a pound. The same thing still happened occasionally in the first years after the Second World War, but has as good as disappeared today for reasons we will discuss.

The personal relationship between dealer and collector, which was first clouded after the new quality rules came in about 1905, nevertheless usually means that the trade as such is a personal one. Apart from the inescapable requirement of commercial and technical knowledge, it also calls for love of the subject, which one either has or has Can't find this in any directory. Not sure what all this means.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 12 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

not. A "mere dealer" without the least interest in philately will be avoided by collectors and will not "get on". A person like this can probably carry on an anonymous exchange trade and supply new issues on subscription; but he will have no chance at running a shop, particularly as a dealer in rarities, as the collector will sense whether or not the trader is really meeting him on the basis of a common interest, or is simply out for profit.

This implies that a stamp business is not so easily bequeathed as a normal commercial undertaking. When an undertaking like Stanley Gibbons Ltd refers to its foundation about 1860

- officially 1856 - it must be pointed out that since then no bearer of that name has been employed there. What goes on is the externals of the firm; the only link with the original founder is the name. The firm of Ernst ZUMSTEIN (1880-1918) founded in 1905, which has put out a well-known catalogue, also changed owners on the death of its founder. After Arthur HERTSCH (1884-1973), his son Max HERTSCH now heads the best-known dealership in Switzerland (33). The American firm of Earl P. APFELBAUM has already reached the 4th generation, although it was only founded in 1930 and is thus numbered amongst the recent firms.

The oldest firm still in family hands is that of the important business founded in 1885 in Genoa by Italo GHIGLIONE, and still existing there. It has passed in a straight-line father - son - grandson, and is run today by Piero GHIGLIONE. The firm of K. PIROTH is in the 3rd generation today; it was founded in Amsterdam in 1908, but has been located in Frankfurt-am-Main for several decades. The firm of Willy BALASSE has served three generations of philatelists, but the head of the firm is still Willy BALASSE. The firm of George BEHR was founded in 1920, and is active today in the 3rd generation; it is headed today by Bernard BEHR. Three of the major firms active in philately have reached the 3rd generation today: Alberto Bolaffi - Turin, Richard Borek - Brunswick and Hermann Sieger - Lorch. The last of these will be dealt with in the next chapter ⁽³⁴⁾, a brief account will be given here of the history of the first two firms, which were founded in the last decade of the past century.

The Bolaffi family comes from Gibraltar and the founder of the firm Alberto BOLAFFI Sen. (1874-1944) had a British passport to the day of his death, he was the nephew of the leading dealer in brilliants and ostrich feathers in the Mediterranean region, Jonathan BOLAFFI, whose immense capabilities were successfully used by Alberto's father so that Alberto had to begin again practically at zero (35). The young BOLAFFI had two passions, cycling and philately, which united him with another major dealer of the time, Theodore CHAMPION (1873-1954) in Paris (Fig. 87). Like BOLAFFI, he was a racing cyclist in his youth, and was good at languages. He began in the stamp trade in 1890, but for some years he was representative for the "Ormonde" bicycle, and it can be seen from some notices in "Il Francobollo" from the year 1895 that Alberto BOLAFFI would take collections and large parcels of stamps in payment for his cycles. Finally however stamps won out over cycles, a decision which Alberto never had to regret.

Long before the firm put out its own catalogue, which only happened after the Second World War (36), Alberto BOLAFFI put out more than 40 editions of his price lists for stamps from the entire world. These also contained his "Notes for beginners", which influenced a whole generation of Italian philatelists, and his firm rapidly developed into the leading Italian house. However amidst all this commercial success, Albero BOLAFFI remained an ardent philatelist and collector. His Sardinia collection gained the highest prize at international exhibitions; from Geneva in 1922 to WIPA in 1933 he was many times a member of international juries, and in 1936 he signed the "Roll of Distinguished Philatelists" ⁽³⁷⁾. Alongside this he was active as a philatelic author, and in conjunction with Enrico MARCHESI he put out a fundamental work on the stamps and cancellations of the Kingdom of Sardinia from 1851-1863 ⁽³⁸⁾. He was also a member of the commission responsible for the distinguished "Historical-descriptive catalogue of the Stamps of Italy" of 1923.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 13 Phil at Trans

57 H Chapter 8

The last years of his life were overshadowed by the anti-Semitic action that took place in Italy also during the Second World war; he had to flee to the mountains, where he died on 20th September 1944 just two months before his 70th birthday. The inheritance passed to his son Dr. Giulio, born in 1902, who further stabilized and extended the position of the house of BOLAFFI; like his father, he was invited to sign the "Roll of Distinguished Philatelists" in 1981. As well as the ancestral house in Turin, he had branches in Milan and Rome, and in 1945 he began a philatelic journal "Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica", which has one of the highest circulations in Italy: the "Catalogo Bolaffi", which has appeared since 1950 (only for Italy and its regions) is one of the three Italian standard catalogues.

The firm produced philatelic accessories such as albums and pockets ("Canguro"); along with J. MINKUS he was one of the first philatelic agents for foreign postal undertakings. In particular however Bolaffi expanded into the publishing sector, including numerous non-philatelic sectors such as modern art, lifestyle culture, etc. etc. (39). Of the then 150 employees of the firm, only 50 were active in the strictly philatelic area, another 50 took care of philatelic publications, and 50 with non-philatelic publications. The firm also found a foothold in the art trade. Alberto Jnr, born in 1936, joined his father in 1956 and has taken the leading part in the firm for some years. The extent of the Bolaffi firm's turnover can be appreciated from the fact that in 1980 the tax on their turnover was greater than the official turnover of the next largest firm: Bolaffi has been the unchallenged No. 1 in Italy for many years.

As the name suggests, the Borek family originated in Bohemia ⁽⁴⁰⁾. The founder of the firm was Richard BOREK; his father Anton BOREK was a master furrier, who moved to Brunswick in 1870, and along with hides made principally hats and caps, especially uniform caps for the Brunswick militia. The second oldest of the four sons of his marriage with Emma LAMBRECHT was Richard BOREK (1874-1947), who in June 1893 on the advice of his mother hung up a sheet of stamps in his father's shop. The stamps were quickly sold, the profit was 5 RM, but this was the foundation stone of a world-wide firm. At the beginning, Richard BOREK also carried on a small trade in valentines and picture postcards, but he soon realized where his best chance lay. The stamp trade expanded rapidly, and by 1907 was able to open his own stamp shop at 4 Demplatz, which is still in the family's possession. In spite of strong competition he managed to build up a considerable business well before the First World War.

This was due not least to a sort of "rediscovery" of a type of collecting that had been almost forgotten at least in Germany. This was the collecting of "unissued". Richard BOREK promoted this tirelessly from 1907 by means of a new issues subscription and his "New Issues Price List", in which he was a pioneer in Germany. The introduction of a new issues subscription about 1908 was a first for Continental Europe ⁽⁴¹⁾. Another pillar of the business was sight packets; in 1911 the supply was extended by the Borek albums, which were as popular as the 'Borek Europe List' that appeared for the first time in 1923, and the Borek catalogue grew out of these after the Second World War (42), in November 1918, just on the political collapse of the Imperial Reich, Richard BOREK founded his own printing works, which was to be of great importance for the future of the firm. As it took outside commissions after a few years, it rapidly became a major component of the undertaking, and in conjunction with the firm of Wilhelm E. Pigge that the family also owned; it employed over 200 people at that time.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 14 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

The inflation years were weathered by the Borek firm better than many others, and were followed by years of upturn; turnover rose, and the firm soon reached the peak of the export trade in Europe. Then from 1926 to 1947 auctions were held, mainly in the form of "remote auctions", i.e. only written bids were accepted. The present head of the firm, Richard BOREK Jnr, born 1911, entered the family firm in 1931. The years of the "3rd Reich" were not favourable to a stamp trade which specialized particularly in international new issues. On the outbreak of war in 1939 the firm of Borek still had 75 workers however, though 30 of these were in the print works. They practically had to start afresh from new after the Second World War: The years of an unsound apparent boom in worthless Reichsmarks from 1946-1948 ended abruptly with the reform of the currency, after which no-one wanted to buy postage stamps. The hardest years for the firm were those from 1948-1950, which were only survived thanks to the printing works.

Then came the years of the "economic miracle", which brought an enormous upturn in the stamp sector as well. As an indicator of this, a little advertising booklet "Little breviary of stamp collectors" appeared in an issue of 220,000 copies in three years around 1960. The pre-war strength of the business, sharply reduced after 1945 was regained shortly afterwards and even exceeded; the issue of the "Borek Reports" exceeded the 50,000 limit, and the turnover reached record heights. Numismatics were now added to philately, the production of albums was adapted to the new wave of unfolded albums, the old Serif numbers were replaced by Michel numbers in the Borek catalogues at the end of the 60s, the philatelic publishing programme was much extended, and the classical sector has been given more prominence in recent years alongside the traditional stress on the new issues service. The two sons of the owner, Richard (born 1943) and Henning (born 1949) have been active in the firm since 1964 and 1976. Richard BOREK Jnr, has been more or less responsible for running the firm since 1978. New premises for the printing works and the firm were secured in 1970 and 1976. The total area occupied by the firm (minus the printing works) is about 7,000 M², the number of employees (again without the printing works) is over 600, the turnover (including the print works) is some 200 million DM. This definitely puts the firm of Borek amongst the leading firms in the international stamp trade, even though there has been a distinct decline in recent years because of the depressed state of the market.

With this brief sketch of the history of two of the outstanding European dealers, which had the advantage of traditions going back to the last century, I have anticipated the historical development by some decades. The First World War enlivened the stamp market with an enormous increase in stamp issues, in the form of occupation stamps and provisionals of all sorts, but also increased the problems of average and small dealers in keeping up adequate stocks. The inflation in Middle Europe had quite a positive effect in the West because they had more favourable possibilities of purchasing with their hard currencies. The big craze was for what were called war stamps, which were the subject of artificial speculation; when the bubble burst, a lot of dealers went bankrupt, amongst them the well-known philatelic publicist Fred MELVILLE, who lost his money in this speculation,

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 15 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

On the whole, the "golden twenties" had a noteworthy boom, which ended abruptly on the notorious "Black Friday" of the year 1929, and for a large number of dealers on both side of the Atlantic. Prices went right down to the cellar, and even selected basic material could hardly reach half the price it made at the beginning of the 20s ⁽⁴²⁾

. However trade picked up in all countries during the otherwise so difficult 30s, and was better than many pessimists expected. Paradoxically some of the present giants like H. E. HARRIS and J. MINKUS began their careers during these years of general depression, and Willy BALASSE and Robson LOWE also began their auctioneering activities.

However, most dealers had to compensate for the general lack of ready money by a drastic reduction of their stocks. Hence, specialization had to make a virtue of necessity. People specialized either in a specific country or groups of countries, or a specific topic such as airmail; anyone who could not fix on either of these had to hold back for the older materials so as to concentrate on the new. The only exceptions were a few comparatively large firms; but which German dealer in the 30s could claim to have ample stocks of the older issues from South America or Asia?

Both the first and the second World Wars initially had an invigorating effect on the market. Spare cash flowed so readily into philately that not only dealers but also many collectors could hope to make easy profits. The widely expected crash failed to appear, and large profits were made with the war and propaganda stamps that were often printed in large numbers - with a few exceptions, that only began to appear gradually. The special situation in Germany in the years 1945-50 were illustrated above by the example of the firm of Borek; this was not typical of the world market, which preferred to buy in, as during the inflation period. Former international firms such as Ph. Kosack - Berlin, which had "arisen" so quickly in 1935, and R. Serif of Leipzig came to an undeservedly inglorious end during these years. The state of the international market during the years 1945-53 is best described in musical terms as "allegro ma non troppo".

The prices obtained at the 1956-1958 Caspary auctions were at first called "one-off" and "never to be repeated", but they were in fact the signal for the start of a "boom". This has persisted to the present day with only occasional levelling-off periods but with no real "crash", in spite of a deflationary tendency during the last few years. This however has affected mainly the ordinary modern trade goods, not the true rarities, for which there has been a very lively market then as now. The real problem for the trade was the incredible flow of stamps after 1945, which plagued collectors and the trade alike, and led at length to the complete restructuring of the latter. Before the Second World War, the trade related to classic issues and outstanding material, and was in the hands of a few specialist dealers and powerful firms. As a rule, this market relied on auctions, which were almost the only point of exchange for high-grade philatelic material. The history of these auctions will be given in another place ⁽⁴³⁾, but the new role of auctions in the market since the 50s must be dealt with here.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 16 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

One special case was the undertaking of the Hamburg stamp dealer Wolfgang BODEN (WOBO); his was not the usual trade, but a 'round-robin' circle - which covered most of the world - dealt with high-value stamps and obtained a perfectly extraordinary success in the years after the Second World War. The yearly exchange of WOBO amounted to over 6 million DM at the time. It could be said in general that, apart from a few praiseworthy exceptions, the stamp dealer of old has become the "new issue distributor" of today, whose stock covered all the period from 1945 onwards, probably after the 60s when stocks became quite high. When a firm like that of Frank WARNER in the USA claimed to have 95% of all issues since 1920 in stock, we are already - if this claim is true - up against something exceptional.

Naturally this development was a burden on the level of philately in commerce, about which instructive - and unfortunately true - stories are in circulation. The role of the dealer as mentor and adviser of the collector has decayed, the dealer - collector relationship has become steadily more impersonal, and the two no longer have anything to say to one another; there can be simply no dialogue between a collector who wants to know something and a dealer who knows nothing. Dealers of this kind, who would really be better of dealing with cement or potatoes, are a danger to philately since they lower the standard on the collectors' side as well. When we get statements like this, whose authenticity I will answer for, from dealers, we can have little optimism for the future: "Guaranteed new, has been three times under the hammer", "Not in Michel, hence cannot be *classified", "You must be joking. How should I know what a registered letter cost in 1950", "What does this mean, in circulation? The letter has been cancelled, that makes everything clear", etc. Philately can also be harmed without supplying 'post-,glued wares' as new.

Of course not all dealers changed overnight into distributors of cheap new issues; now as before they included people with a high degree of knowledge, and there are still dealers with huge stocks like B. BEHR in Paris, but they have become rare, and the trend is obviously in the wrong direction. The falling level of dealership is definitely helping to widen the gap between collectors and dealers still further. Today, the big collector has hardly any dialogue with a dealer, apart from a few who deal in rarities and a few firms with an international reputation. The auctioneer has frequently taken the place of the dealer, even though the Guild of Auctioneers simply does not consist of major experts.

Nothing can be deduced from the pure number of transactions. The small dealers hardly know what their turnover is, but the exchange trade is blossoming. A relatively new form of commerce takes the form of stamp fairs, such as have been usual for a long time in, e.g., Italy (Riccione, Venice, Verona etc.) or the USA ("International Philatelic Fair" in Chicago since 1973). They came later to Germany,

Not good, but you will no doubt know what is meant and have a better term. " Literally: given a niche.

'Again, literal.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 17 Philat Trans

57 H Chapter 8

but have since really taken off. The "International Stamp Fair" started by F. W. BLECHER and H. PAIKERT has taken place in Essen every two years since 1976. The number of visitors reached 80-10,000 in the week of it opening, and transactions-really carried out there, not just prepared for the future - amounted to some 15-20 million DM. In 1980, 133 stamps dealers from home and overseas, plus 69 postal undertakings, appeared at the Fair. By 1984 the number of postal undertakings had reached 122, though it should be noted that the "Crown Agents" alone had not less than 41 exhibits, and the "Former house of Theodore Champion" of Paris represented 19 postal undertakings (44). The number of visitors to the Fair fell to 60 and 40,000 in the years 1982 and 1984, which points not only to a certain Fair fatigue, but also to the increasing reluctance of some collectors to buy. The German trade alone organized a fair in Frankfurt-am-Main in autumn of 1981, another in Hanover in 1982, in Dusseldorf in 1983, in Stuttgart in 1984. These cannot really be compared with the Essen fair, but must have contributed largely to the overfeeding of collectors with commercial fairs.

Such fairs are also often combined with exhibitions, such as the 25 years of STAMPEX in London, or the many shows organized since 1949 by A.S.D.A., the American dealers' union. To these we may add the INTERPEX shows organized yearly since 1958 by H. ROSEN, which were also taken over by A.S.D.A. in 1972⁽⁴⁵⁾

. Naturally there was also regular regional or national dealers' shows in various countries. These pass more or less unregarded, are often open only to members of the organizing body, and are often more important for trade than the open fairs. This does not affect the clear trend towards the big shipping houses and the major shows such as Chicago or Essen. 'Aunt Emma says: the small stamp dealer has also served his time in philately.

Mention was made several times in the last section of trade organizations. Something more should be said about them to conclude this section. The need for a permanent organization of stamp dealers is obvious right away, so I must wonder why they did not appear till relatively late - some two decades after the first stamp collectors' societies - on 1st December 1885 in Berlin in the form of the "International Union of Stamp Dealers" (IPHV). On foundation it had 12 members; however when it celebrated its silver jubilee on 21st January 1911 the membership had risen to 265; it also had a better right to the proud title of "International Union" than on its foundation. The IPHV was definitely the leading dealers' organization before the First World War and the most important German, English and French dealers of the time belonged to it (146). The 1st International Dealers' Congress also took place very late, not till 1913, in connection with the International Exhibition in Paris.

When the silver jubilee was celebrated in Berlin in 1911 over 200 people were present; Arthur WULBERN (1869-1926) did the honours, and no less a person than LINDENBERG conveyed the good wishes of the collectors' society. LINDENBERG moreover was the only collector who had published since 1886, under different names, "Reports of meetings" or "Communications" of the IPHV. The "Communications" appeared till 1926, but were not the oldest dealer periodical; from January to March 1879 a certain P. KLIEWER of Danzig published three 'Perhaps a German equivalent of "Confucius he say"

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 18 Philat Trans
57 H Chapter 8

numbers of a "Briefmarkenhandler. "Organ für die Interessen der Briefmarkenhandler". A German language journal with the same aims, the "Internationale Marken-Börse" from Albert von DEGEN in Baltimore, USA, appeared for only a single issue on 15th January 1879 ⁽⁴⁷⁾

. The First World War brought this positive development to an abrupt end. The English and French dealers obviously left the IPHV at once, and thus gave it its death-blow. Understandably, the international union was replaced by dealers' societies on the national level in most countries, and these cannot be dealt with here in detail. Individual national societies that had existed before the First World War, like that of Austria since 1908, kept on going ⁽⁴⁸⁾. However, the idea of an international union remained alive. 1923 saw the foundation, at the instance of the French trade, of a "Corporation internationale des ndgociants en timbres-poste" with headquarters in Brussels. However this met with little success: By 1934 it had members from only 13 countries; only Brazil from overseas, only Greece from the Balkans, and not a single dealer from Scandinavia.

The obvious next step was to re-found the old IPHV. A new start was made in Berlin in 1927; it was discussed several times (e.g. in Leghorn 1931, Vienna 1933), however its constitution was not decided till 1935 at OSTROPA in Konigsberg. The Presidium included familiar names: J. M. BARTELS - New York, A. BOCK - Berlin (President), H. R. HARMER - London, V. KNEITSCHER - Buenos Aires, etc. The IPHV really fulfilled the idea of an "international corporation", and had representatives even in China and Japan. It published its own magazine, the IPHV Courier, from 1935 (to 1941) ⁽⁴⁹⁾. Once again, the Second World War put an end to this painfully attained condition.

After the Second World War there was no immediate attempt to re-found the IPHV. The times were not in favour of international organizations for individuals. The law of the functionary had struck for commerce as well. Hence it was only logical that after preliminary talks in 1949 in connection with the 1950 London "International", an International Federation of Stamp Dealer Associations (IFSFA) was set up. However it did not accept individual members, only national societies ⁽⁵⁰⁾. Over 6,000 firms were organized into the IFSFA in this manner. Thus, after a 25-year delay, the FIP had found its counterpart in trade, after all philatelically relevant countries had set up the corresponding national societies.

Amongst the oldest and also most important national associations is the "American Stamp Dealers' Association" (A.S.D.A.). This was founded in December 1914 after a first announcement in "Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News" of 18th May 1912. Originally it has 26 or 28 dealer members; today the A.S.D.A. has a clear 1300 members, some of them outside the U.S.A. Since 1915 it has published an eight-page "Bulletin", which is today the second-oldest philatelic "periodical" in the U.S.A. The "Stamp Shows" organized by the A.S.D.A. all over the American continent have already been mentioned (51). The journal "Stamp Trade International" has appeared in Larchmont/N.Y. since 1979, and has found a positive echo in the U.S.A. The German "Allgemeine Postwertzeichen-Handler-Verband" (APHV) (General Stamp Dealers Society)- in the old traditional name of IPHV, the I has merely been replaced by an A "Stamp Dealers organ for the interests of stamp dealers.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307 19 Philat'rtrans

57 H Chapter 8

- was formed in 1947 in Frankfurt-am-Main by the fusion of the "Gemeinschaft der Briefmarkenhandler" founder in 1946, and the "Briefmarken-Handler-Verband" (BHV) from the English and American occupation zones. The long-term president was the major Heidelberg dealer P. HARTUNG. In 1969 the APHV was renamed "Bundesverband des Deutschen Briefmakenhandels" (Federal Union of the German Stamp Trade), but retained its "trademark" APHV. The APHV has numerous foreign members, who use their membership in the APHV with its rules and codes to support their commerce in Germany X⁵²>.

The membership of a dealer in a national professional organization assures the collector that he can expect this dealer to respect certain ethical standards. Many dealers, who also carry on trade abroad, therefore take membership of several professional organizations, which is an additional guarantee for the collector. However it should not be forgotten that the organization can only be appealed to when actual offences against their statutes can be proved.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307

Notes to chapter 8

1 See below, Chapter 13, p. 473 and note 53.

2 See also p. 303-305 below.

- 3 See ANDERSON-SMITH, p. 9-10, and above p.5, also p.9, p.18.
- 4 London Stamp Dealers in the Post Office Directory (1871-1913), in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society 6 (1913) No. 2, p.20-23; Paris Stamp Dealers in Annuaire du Commerce (1863-1913), in: esp. No. 3, p. 33-36.
- 5 The oldest price list in the USA came from James Brennan in New York and A.C. Kline in Philadelphia: Crawford Catalogue, col.58,213. See also Chapter 17 below, p. 623-24.
- 6 Cf. ANDERSON-SMITH, Appendix B: Price lists of 1862-1865, p. 54-96, esp. p. 70: After the May list, a second appeared in November 1862, a third in June 1863 and a fourth and last in August 1864. For further price lists from the year 1862, see ibid, pp. 57, 62, 92, 93-94.
- 7 See above, p. 9, note 9. MAHE p. 13-16, p. 41, 99-100.
- 8 The growth of Philately in America: The Philatelist 2 (1868) No. 18, p. 108-09. The author recalls "a poor man standing at the end of the City Hall park" in Autumn 1860 offering stamps tacked to a board for 5 cents apiece: see also Charles PHILLIPS: Ferdinand Marie Trifet. One of the earliest stamp dealers in U.S.A., in Stamps 5 (1933) No. 59, p. 133. See above p.89.
- 9 See: Magazin fur Briefmarken-Sammler 2 (1864-65), No. 19, p. 148 (November 1864): Alex Rosenberg - Vienna, offers exchange packets; in February 1864 Young & Stockall were already offering various packets from 6 pence to 5 shillings.
- 10 SUPPANTSCHITSCH, Fundamentals, p. 305 and: Stamp Collector's Magazine 2 (1864) No. 12, No. 13 and No. 23 (in unpaid adverts section): Magazin fur Briefmarken-Sammler 2 (1864/65), No. 24; 3 (1865/66) No. 27 (Supplement).
- 11 Cf. MOSCHKAU, History, p. 64-65 and BERGRATH, p. 20: See also Magazin fur Briefmarken-Sammler 2 (1864/65), No. 16 p. 127 (August 1864); 4 (1866/67) No. 44, p. 350 (December 1866). 12 SUPPANTSCHITSCH, History p.35.
- 13 Leipzig 1864: not in Crawford Catalogue! First mentioned in January 1865 in : Magazin fur Briefmarken-Sammler 2 (1864/65), No. 21, p. 165. Cf. SUPPANTSCHITSCH, History p. 31. A list of a round dozen "Address books" to 1878 is in MOSCHKAU, History p. 48.
- 14 Berlin, 1873, 24 pages: Crawford Catalogue col. 225. These "directories" played a much more important part in the English-speaking countries.
- 15 Magazin fur Briefmarken-Sammler 1 (1863/64) No. 10, p. 80.
- 16 MAHE, p. 11, see above p. 3 ff, and above p. 36, p. 273 and note 7.
- 17 MAHE p. 101 also above p. 99 ff. see also Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste 4 (1867) No. 33, p.346..
- 18 MOSCHKAU, History p. 64, mentions this with surprise.
- 19 Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste 1874, No. 45, p. 414-15.

20 Memoires du Congres international des Timbrophiles (Neuilly 1889) Sixieme seance, p. 346.

21 KALCKHOFF, Jugenderinnerungen, p. 8.

Pages 269-299 + 300-307
57 H Chapter 8

21

Philat Trans

22 DBZ. 5 (1894/93) No. 7 p. 103 and PHILLIPS, History p. 167: 32 ladies and 24 gentlemen were helpers from time to time in the year 1906: Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung 2 (1906), No. 9 p. 200: DBZ 15 (1904) no. 9, p. 132. On the firm's silver jubilee in 1897 it had 42 employees: Ill Briefmarken-Journal 24 (1897), No. 8, p. 116-118 (with detailed account of the jubilee celebrations).

23 Zur "Scott Stamp and Coin Co" vgl H. L. LINDQUIST: The Scott Stamp and Coin Co. celebrate their 75th year in business with a Diamond jubilee, in: Stamps 6 (1934) No. 74, p. 189-90; auch Charles PHILLIPS: The Calmans, in: Stamps 6 (1934) No. 71, p. 81; No. 72, p. 117-18.

24 Der Philatelist 5 (1884) No. 8, p. 97: PHILLIPS, History, p.176: DBZ. 5 (1894/95) No. 11, p. 172 and above No. 57, p. 72 also below Chap. 10, p. 395-96.

25 From the world of dealers, in:III Briefmarken-Journal 13 (1886) No. 11, p. 131-32.

26 DBZ. 13 (1902) No. 9, p.107-08.

27 See Charles PHILLIPS: The Whitfield Kings, in: Stamps 3 (1933) No. 33, p. 153-54, esp. p. 153, see Fred MELVILLE: Then and Now, London1937 (unfortunately not seen).

28 Peckitt's new issues service far outdistanced that of Stanley Gibbons Ltd: Cf. Stamp Collecting 1 (1913/14) No. 18, p. 287,288. Cf, also PHILLIPS, History p. 145, 147. Stanley Gibbons supplied new issues at intervals of two weeks or a month, however they only seem to have kept up this service for a year or two.

29 Cf. below Chap. 18, p. 709-10.

30 Cf. below Chap. 13, p. 470-71.

31 This letter is the one listed as no. V in N.-M. WILLIAMS: Famous Stamps (London 1949); p. 50, als Nr. V according to P. Mirabaud and G. Worthington 1917 this was in the collection of A. F. Lichtenstein. Cf. also KANAI, p.29.

32 Allgemeiner Briefmarken-Anzeiger 13 (1889) No. 81, p. 5.

33 HERTSCH, p 161, 165, 168-69, also p. 180-81. See also chapter 17 below, p. 650 and note 89, p. 655, p. 678 et seg; chapter 18, p. 735, chapter 19, p. 819 and note 123.

34 Chapter 9 below, Section 3, p. 333-41.

35 This is from Alberto DIENA: Memoir of Alberto Bolaffi. On the 75th anniversary of the foundation of his firm. In: Il Collezionista-Italia Filatelica 22 (1966) No. 1, p. 20-21, and from a communication from Alberto BOLAFFI JNR. in Rome in the year 1980, for which I now express my best thanks here.

36 See below Chapter 17, p. 680 and p. 664.

37 See yearbook 1980, p. 22 which refers to Alberto Bolaffi, Italy. This is correct of course but as mentioned earlier he never gave up his British citizenship.

38 The stamps and cancellations of the Sardinian States used during the period 1851-1863, Turin 1935, 175 pages in 8° (PILONI, No. 1932). An English translation by Dante BOLAFFI appeared in New York, 1948, 150 pages in 8° (PILONI, No. 1933). The English translation appeared in an edition of 300 copies.

39 The 32 page "General Catalogue of 1980 editions" includes amongst other things the journal "Bolaffi Arte" (since 1970), catalogues, reference works and monographs on old and modern art (predominantly the latter), porcelain almanacs, works on interior decoration, the Italian film etc. The "Catalogo generale della produzione filatelica GBE" of 1979 runs to another 56 pages and tends very heavily towards albums, finally the "Catalogo generale della edizioni SCOT 1979" has 16 pages and surveys the catalogue output of the firm of Bolaffi.

- 40 This is from Richard BOREK: The history of the firm of Richard Borek, Brunswick (Brunswick 1968), with supplementary information from the firm's management.
- 41 See below Chapter 17, p. 666, Chapter 18, p. 732 and Fig. 275.
- 42 This result was obtained by comparing Ferrary's results with those of the Hind auctions; Cf. below, chapter 10, p. 400 and Note 13. although auctions are not covered in this chapter. These results strike me as typifying the overall state of the market, and enable conclusions to be drawn as to the prices for average items: see also what is said in the text. 43 Chapter 10, p. 351 fbelow.
- 44 Cf the reports by Hans ROLAND in ; Briefmarkenwelt 4 (1981) No. 1, p. 4-8 and 10-11, also by Kurt WILK in: DZB 55 (1980) No. 24, p. 4677-79; on 7th November 1980 the DZB published a special issue on this. The 1984 numbers are from the exhibition catalogue.
- 45 Linn's Almanac 1982, p. 448.
- 46 Die Post 18 (1911) No. 4, p. 63.
- 47 Crawford Catalogue , col 476, 597,598-99; SUPPANTSCHITSCH, Geschichte, p. 188, No. 33, p. 133, No. 150, 145-46, No. 240-44 (SMITH, No. 12, 600).
- 48 LOUIS SENF: Die Entwicklung des Briefmarkenhandels , in: Die Post 16 (1908) No. 8, p. 116-18; No. 10, p. 153-54; No. 12, p. 183-86, esp. p. 186.
- 49 The IPHV and its aims in: IPHV Courier 2 (1936) No. 4, pp 33,35,37, esp 35,37. The "Corporation internationale des negociants en timbres-poste a Bruxelles" published its own "Monthly Bulletin" from 1925-1946. 50 Linn's Almanac 1982, p. 575-80, esp. 578-79, 580 for some national dealers' societies outside the USA.
- 51 Highlights of the history of the American Stamp Dealers' Association, in: ASDA Bulletin. 50th Anniversary Issue (1964) p. 9-27; also: ASDA Membership Directory 1981 and: Linn's Almanac 1982, p. 569-78. See also p. 303 m. Note 45.
- 52 From a friendly communication from Paul HARTUNG - Heidelberg, from the year 1979.

CHAPTER 17

In the Beginning was the Catalogue

Philatelic literature is - very unfairly and to the detriment of collectors - the stepchild of philately. It has always been that way and, I fear, that will not change in the coming decades. But every stamp collector - I deliberately do not say every philatelist - makes one exception: the catalogue. Every year he buys "his" catalogue, possibly even two or three, in order to be informed about the "market", or more precisely: to read whether the value of his treasures has increased or - horribile dictu - fallen in the opinion of the catalogue experts. The average collector does not want to know anything more than prices from the catalogue. Information about paper and watermarks, colour and perforation, printing technology and printing company, but also about the subject of the picture are tolerated; the only interesting thing is information about printing errors, colour variations and other abnormalities that one hopes to find among the duplicates or in the unsuspecting trading partner. But this is the end of the "literary" study of stamps. It borders on "research" when the catalogue is used to identify a stamp, which is usually a matter for young idealists. The "expert" is not the philatelic expert, but the man who knows the "status" of as many stamps as possible.

No one should object that this is a purely distorted picture of the collecting world; it is a linguistically deliberately caricatured but otherwise absolutely accurate description of the reality of the overwhelming idiosyncrasy of stamp collectors; I fear that it covers about 70-80%, which is still a conservative estimate. Every true philatelist will regret this state of affairs, but he cannot change it. This is precisely why the average collector is so incredibly easy to deceive: apart from the catalogue prices, he knows nothing about his collecting area; another undesirable consequence of this dangerous ignorance, which does not stop at many so-called dealers, is the complete overload of the examiners [experts], who are burdened with silly questions. It is not out of joy in the bon mot, but a sober observation, when I say that the collector becomes a philatelist to the extent that he emancipates himself from the standard catalogue and the pre-printed album.

Blind trust in the catalogue is in many ways detrimental to the collector and to collecting. The well-known saying: "Quod non est in actis, non est in mundo" [What is not kept in the records, does not exist] can be modified for philately to mean that what is not in the catalogue is not collected. Yet, as S. Chapman once aptly observed, the current catalogues are largely products of chance: certain variants, colour variants in particular, are listed because they found favour in the eyes of a catalogue maker at some point, while others, much clearer, are missing: it is not at all clear how the arbitrary lines in our catalogues are drawn, says Chapman⁽¹⁾, and one can only agree with him wholeheartedly.

However, I would be completely misunderstood if one interpreted these lines as a diatribe against catalogues in general. The catalogues are an indispensable tool for every collector, who nowadays can find the right catalogue for pretty much every stage of his philatelic development - from the complete beginner to the seasoned specialist. He just has to use it correctly and he has to know when to move on to a "higher" catalogue. Here is an instructive example: The beginners' catalogue by Stanley Gibbons Collect British Stamps requires exactly two lines for the first two English stamps, the 1 penny black and the 2 pence blue. In the specialised catalogue for the period 1840-1901 ("Queen Victoria"), the treatment of these two stamps requires almost 70 pages⁽²⁾. It is therefore entirely up to the collector himself to prepare himself properly: for the young collector, the special catalogue is an imposition - and probably also a source of discouragement! - for the specialist the beginner's catalogue. "Ultra posse nemo cogatur" [No one is obligated to do more than they know], says the Roman lawyer: the catalogue publishers can do no more than offer the collector a wide range of products; the collector himself must choose the catalogue that is most suitable for him.

The oldest philatelic printed works were catalogues, which alone sufficiently characterizes their importance. It was the year 1861 when the Strasbourg printing house owner and publisher François Georges Oscar Berger-Levrault (9th May 1826 – 24th September 1903)⁽³⁾ – after the war of 1870/71 he moved to Nancy, where the printing house founded in 1675 still flourishes today – came up with the idea of creating a list of all of the stamps he owned or of which he had certain knowledge. It was a twelve-page, handwritten list containing 973 stamps, which he lithographically reproduced without any heading and sent 2-3 copies to about a dozen friends with the request that they compare this list with their own stocks and let him know of any additions. This happened on the 17th September 1861, and it is the oldest philatelic printed product of which we have knowledge. The edition, which could not be purchased, was only about 40-50 copies, of which probably four have survived to us⁽⁴⁾. In December 1861, Berger-Levrault followed up with a “2nd edition”, and in June 1862 with a third, which was printed for the first time by typesetting and bore the laconic heading Timbres-Poste. In 1864, these private printings appeared for the last time in the 9th and 10th editions⁽⁵⁾. In their later editions, they were used to prepare a separate catalogue for sale, which we will deal with later.

Figure 234: This is what the first philatelic printed work looked like: two sheets from the lithographically reproduced catalogue by O. Berger-Levrault, which was only circulated privately and was not commercially available. Four copies of the first edition from September 1861 are still known. (Original format 26.1 x 17.6cm)

Figure 235: The small work by A. Potiquet, which came onto the market in December 1861, was the first publicly available printed catalogue; it was written by a stamp collector. (Original format 17.8 x 10.6cm)

O. Berger-Levrault's correspondence flourished in secret; only his personal acquaintances received these lists, they could not be purchased. More important for the further development of philately was therefore the publication of the first printed and commercially available catalogue by Alfred Potiquet on the 21st December 1861: Catalogue des timbres-poste créés dans les divers états du globe⁽⁶⁾. Potiquet used the two private prints by Berger-Levrault as a template, but he expanded them to 1080 stamps and 130 items of postal stationery. The second, only slightly expanded edition followed in March 1862⁽⁷⁾. Before that, however, J.-B. Moens published his own catalogue in January 1862 under the title Manuel du Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste ou nomenclature Générale de tous les timbres adoptés dans les divers pays de l'univers, which quickly outstripped the Potiquet. It had already been announced on the 4th January 1862 [actually, June 1861] in the magazine L'Étoile Belge under the title Manuel du Timbromane (sic) as “sous presse”⁽⁸⁾.

Figure 236: The Manuel by Moens from January 1862 was the oldest dealer's catalogue; the copy shown here once belonged to E. L. Pemberton. (Original format 14 x 11cm)

A dispute over priority soon arose between Moens and Potiquet: in the 2nd edition, Potiquet had indirectly accused Moens of plagiarism by mentioning in the preface to his 2nd edition deux petites brochures that had appeared in the meantime – one in Brussels, one in Paris – both à peu près copies sur le travail de M. Alfred Potiquet. [Both pretty much copies of the work by Mr. Alfred Potiquet] Moens rejected this firmly in the 2nd edition of the Manuel and emphasized that he had announced his catalogue in June 1861. This is probably true, but there are differences of opinion as the first editions of both catalogues show quite remarkable similarities, so that a firm judgement is hardly possible⁽⁹⁾.

Figure 237: The first English catalogue: Booty's Aids to Stamp Collectors, which appeared in April 1862. (Original format 16.3 x 10.2cm)

Even before the wide circulation of the Potiquet, two other catalogues had been published in Paris: one, published anonymously under the title Timbres-Poste, was by Edard de Laplante and was in fact nothing more than his slightly revised and restructured Potiquet, while the second, written by François Valette, was his Petit Manuel de l'Amateur des Timbres-Poste créés chez les Différents Peuples de la Terre, which we have already discussed⁽¹⁰⁾.

In April 1862 the first English catalogue appeared: the work of a schoolboy, Frederick Booty, whose name was not initially mentioned: Aids to Stamp Collectors; being a list of English and Foreign Postage Stamps in circulation since 1840, by A Stamp Collector. The year 1862 saw two more editions, but only the third mentioned Booty's name⁽¹¹⁾.

Figure 238: The most widespread English catalogue of the early period was that of Mount Brown: its first edition, shown here as a "Presentation Copy", dated May 1862. (Original format 13.2 x 9.8cm)

Figure 239: The young Frederick Booty's Stamp Collectors Guide, published in July 1862, was the first illustrated catalogue; it was reproduced lithographically. (Original format 18.8 x 12.3cm)

Figure 240: Title pages of the 1st and 3rd editions of Dr. Gray's catalogue. (Original format 17 x 10.5 cm)

As early as May 1862, Mount Brown published a catalogue: Catalogue of British, Colonial and Foreign Postage Stamps, which also had two further editions in 1862. Mount Brown (1837-1919) was a well-known dealer in the early days who unfortunately gave up philately for good in 1870. The Royal made him an honorary member in 1916⁽¹²⁾. Mount Brown's catalogue served as a practically unchanged template for John W. Kline's first American catalogue⁽¹³⁾. Dr. Gray described both catalogues - Booty and Mount Brown as little more than translations of "Potiquet" and the "Belgian catalogue", i.e. of Moens, which is essentially correct⁽¹⁴⁾.

Figure 241: Four catalogue writers of the '60s.
A. Dr. John Edward Gray (1800-1875). (Photo from 1870)
B. Mount Brown (1837-1919). (Photo from 1890)
C. Frederick W. Booty (Photo from 1905)
D. Oscar Berger-Levrault (1826-1903) (Photo from the year 187 during the siege of Strasburg.)

Figure 242: The 1st edition of the catalogue of Dr. Gray appeared in November 1862; The catalogue was thoroughly revised, but contained many innovations that pointed to the future. (Original format 16.6 x 10.3cm)

Figure 243: The 6th edition of Gray's catalogue prepared by Overy Taylor was practically a new work and probably the leading catalogue of the '70s. (Original format 17.5 x 12.5cm)

Finally, in July Frederick Booty published – this time under his own name – his Stamp

Collector's Guide: being a list of English and Foreign Stamps with 100 facsimile drawings. The 98-page volume was the first to feature hand-drawn illustrations by Booty, which had been reproduced lithographically, including the handwritten text⁽¹⁵⁾. Dr. Gray commented favorably: They are not first rate as works of art, but they are sufficiently good to be always recognisable⁽¹⁶⁾. He could not have known that these drawings were by a talented student who had given up collecting in around 1864 and who wrote to B. T. K. Smith four decades later: When I see the catalogues published of a later date I am somewhat amused at my boyish effort, for I was only a boy at the time⁽¹⁷⁾.

So far only independent publications have been discussed, but it should not be overlooked that since 1862 several illustrated family magazines have published catalogue-like series of articles on the stamps of the various countries of the world over a period of several years⁽¹⁸⁾. One of these series had been published in Young England from June 1862 by Dr. J. E. Gray⁽¹⁹⁾. In only slightly modified form, this resulted in A Hand Catalogue of Postage Stamps for the Use of Collectors, the first edition of which was published in November 1862⁽²⁰⁾ and went through three further editions supervised by Dr. Gray⁽²¹⁾. Gray's catalogue was published only two months before Edward A. Oppen's Oppen's Postage Stamp Catalogue and Collector's Guide, which was probably the most widely distributed of all early English catalogues, as the catalogue also served as the basis for the oldest English album; From the 3rd edition (December 1863) onwards, supervised by H. Whymper, from the 8th edition (1866) onwards by Dr. Ch. Viner, the catalogue reached no less than 30 editions by 1891⁽²²⁾.

In France, the catalogues of Potiquet, Laplanche and Valette were quickly out of date; the Manuel of Moens/Hanciau was the only one to dominate until two new catalogues began to compete with Moens; both were written by respected Parisian dealers: the Guide de l'amateur de timbres-poste by Alexandre Bailleu⁽²³⁾ and the Guide-Manuel du collectionneur de timbres-Poste by Pierre Mahé⁽²⁴⁾. In this context, a mysterious quotation must be discussed which, to my knowledge, has not yet been noticed anywhere. In the first edition of his catalogue, Dr. Gray provided a kind of "bibliography" of the philatelic literature up to the end of 1862⁽²⁵⁾. Gray's catalogue was known to have been available by the end of November 1862 at the latest and contains the following bibliographical information: "Bailleu – Le Manuel du Collectionneur de Timbres-poste ... Paris 1861". This work is not mentioned anywhere else. The year 1861 is certainly a misprint⁽²⁶⁾: the title does not correspond in the least with that of the first edition of Bailleu's catalogue, so that confusion seems impossible. Bailleu's address is given correctly; moreover, Dr. Gray was anything but a dreamer. Are we dealing with a "lost work"? I fear not. The title of the work quoted by Gray is identical with Moens' Manuel, and this is where the mystery lies: of both editions of Moens' Manuel, there is an edition with Bailleu's name and address on the title page⁽²⁷⁾ and Gray confused co-publisher Bailleu with the author (see Fig. 236).

Figure 244: One of the oldest German catalogs is that of the company Zschiesche & Köder in Leipzig, which also published the oldest philatelic magazine in German. (Original format 16 x 11cm)

Finally, Germany is now joining the group of countries that publish catalogues. However, there is not all that much to offer. At the end of 1862, the Zschiesche & Köder coin dealership published an Overview of all known Franco stamps (Timbres-Poste – Postage Stamps) issued between 1849 and 1862, which are usually available in large numbers and are available for purchase to stamp collectors. A price section to be filled in by hand was included. The "catalogue" comprised a full eight pages and could perhaps have been published in December 1862. This "Overview", including the 1849 printing error, was then adopted as a catalogue price list in 1840 with only minor additions by the Tramburg's Erben company in Hamburg⁽²⁸⁾.

This is certainly not the first German catalogue, as Suppantisch once thought in his joy of discovery⁽²⁹⁾, because Tramburg's price list can hardly have appeared before January 1863.

However, it is very questionable whether the “Overview” by Zschiesche & Koeder can really be considered the oldest German catalogue⁽³⁰⁾. The “bibliography” by Dr. Gray mentioned above contains a second curiosity, to which E. D. Bacon had already drawn attention – albeit unnoticed: Gray quotes the Handbook for stamp collectors. Instructions for the most practical arrangement of stamp collections, together with a complete overview and description of all stamps issued to date, Leipzig 1863 published by Dürr'schen Buchhandlung⁽³¹⁾. Here, an error by Gray is completely ruled out, even the year 1863 is correct. This can only mean that, despite the year 1863, the Handbook must have been available at the end of 1862, and in any case before November 22nd, but probably as early as October⁽³²⁾, which means that this Handbook is the oldest German catalogue and thus also the first philatelic printed product in German. Its circulation must have been very low, because it is missing from Lord Crawford's library, while the catalogue of the Collectors Club Library lists two copies of the booklet - so Suppantisch had it - but unfortunately it could not be found there during my visits.

There remains to be mentioned the catalogue by C. Beyfuss, which can probably be dated to the first quarter of 1863, since it does not record a single stamp from 1863, the first philatelic printed work in Dutch, the Vademecum published by W. F. Dannenfelser in Utrecht, which is nothing more than his translation of the second edition of Moens' Manuel into Dutch, and the second American catalogue by George Dexter, which was published in June 1863⁽³³⁾. This should cover all the catalogues and catalogue price lists from the years 1862-1863, and an attempt may therefore be made to list these catalogues in chronological order in table form up to the end of 1863, although it goes without saying that in the case of catalogues without a month, the chronological order can only claim a more or less high degree of probability. However, if the square brackets contain information about the month, these are not explicitly recorded but can be considered certain for other reasons.

Figure 245: Two old German catalogues: that of Tramburg's Erben was long considered the oldest philatelic printed work in Germany (a); This honorary title actually belongs to the Handbuch für Briefmarkensammler of the Dürr'schen Verlagsbuchhandlung (b), which was already on the market in the fall of 1862. (Original format (a) 21 x 16cm and (b) 17.8 x 11.8cm)

Table on page 618

Of these 36 catalogues, 18 were published in English, 9 in French, 8 in German and one (as a translation from French) in Dutch; 15 editions were published in Great Britain, 8 in Germany, 6 in France, 3 each in Belgium and the USA, and 1 in Holland. Nine catalogues were published anonymously (Nos. 3-4, 6, 8, 14, 21-22, 28, 30), but only the author of the Handbook and the Catalogue Price List of Tramburg's Erben remains unknown to this day, the latter being practically written off by Zschiesche & Köder anyway. Of the 20 authors, only four, namely A. Potiquet, F. Booty, G. Dexter and Dr. J. E. Gray, can claim stamp collector status; all the rest are dealers and trading companies. If we go by the numbers alone, then the English-language catalogues dominate, but the numbers are deceptive: in terms of quality, the French catalogues are undoubtedly the best, and it is no coincidence that the five oldest ones come exclusively from France and Belgium. Of all the authors, only Potiquet, Moens/Hanciau, Vallete, Dr. Gray, Dexter, the author of the Handbook, Mahé and Bailleu can claim intellectual independence. All the others are mere compilers or even plagiarists.

All these efforts ultimately culminated in Oscar Berger-Levrault's catalogue: Description of the stamps known to date (more than 2200 types) with notes on the reprinted stamps and a guide to the creation of stamp collections, Strasbourg, 1864, 103 pages in 12°. He had waited a long time, tirelessly sending out his private lists, until he finally presented a catalogue that far surpassed all its predecessors in terms of accuracy and scope of information. The Guide to the creation of collections announced in the title gives an excellent insight into the state of philately in the mid-1860s⁽³⁴⁾. The Alsatian Berger-Levrault had published his catalogue in German in 1864; three years later, in May 1867, he presented the revised 2nd edition of his work in French: Les Timbres-poste. Catalogue méthodique et descriptive de tous les timbres-poste connus. Première partie: Timbres-poste proprement dits, Paris-Strasbourg, 1867, 147 pages in 12°. As the title suggests, a second part was planned - probably for the essays, reprints, telegraph and local stamps - which never appeared, since Berger-Levrault had completely given up collecting when he moved to Nancy after the annexation of Alsace. His catalogue can rightly be considered the leading one of the 1860s, and Suppantshitsch aptly observes: This handbook was an admirable, exemplary achievement for that time⁽³⁵⁾.

As a result, it will naturally no longer be possible to try to record all the catalogues: their number is growing to infinity. Only the leading catalogues and those that are notable for some historical or philatelic reason can be mentioned. For example, the small catalogues by C. Brecker in Florence and W. Georg in Basel - both published in 1864 - are extremely poorly elaborated works, but they are the oldest philatelic printed works in Italy and Switzerland respectively⁽³⁶⁾; also in Spain, more precisely; in Barcelona, José Maria Vergés de Cardona published a catalogue (with prices) in 1864: Manual del coleccionista de sellos de correos, of which Dr. Thebussem had not been able to find a complete copy by 1876⁽³⁷⁾.

Figure 246: By far the best catalogue of the 1860s was that of O. Berger-Levrault, which appeared in German in 1864 and in French in 1867. (Original format 17.6 x 11.3cm)

Figure 247: The oldest or - more probably - second oldest Italian catalogue. (Original format 14 x 10cm)

Figure 248: How pictures are similar: the catalogue of the “underaged boy” Chr. Mann Jr. (b) was identical to that of the Literarischen Museums by G. Bauschke (a) except for the title page. Such practices were common in the ‘60s and ‘70s. (Original format (a) 12.5 x 9cm and (b) 13 x 9.5cm)

Figure 249: The 4th edition of the well-known Guide-Manuel by P. Mahé, which enjoyed great popularity. (Original format 18.5 x 12cm)

Above all, it should be stressed that we are only talking about catalogues here, not simple dealer price lists. These existed very early on: at least since May 1862, and their number increased significantly faster than that of catalogues. In the early days, the difference between a catalogue and a price list was usually defined as the price list stating prices, but the catalogue did not. This is only partially true: some dealers published catalogues and added the prices of the stamps in stock by hand, such as Zschiesche & Köder or Tramburg’s Erben, others such as Bailieu even printed them and only omitted the price information for stamps that were still valid for postage or for particularly rare stamps.

Figure 250: The price lists of the large trading houses also occasionally contained illustrations as a “Supplement”, as here for the 4th edition of the Price Catalogue by Stafford Smith & Smith from 1864. It is a folding sheet with a total length of 61cm. Most catalogues from the 1860s, however, appeared without illustrations.

Figure 251: An advertisement from the year 1870 for the price list of the company Alfred Smith, which exceeded many a catalogue in terms of meaning and scope.

The publisher's intention seems to me to be crucial: if he wants to include all the stamps he knows, then - however unsatisfactory the result - it is a catalogue, regardless of whether prices are given or not; but if he only wants to offer stamps that are in stock, then it is a price list, regardless of how extensive the range is. Large trading firms – “large” of course in the sense of the time - such as Stafford Smith & Smith in Bath or Young & Stockall in Liverpool had “price lists” that were far more extensive than many a “catalogue”, but they were sales lists, which were nevertheless published with great regularity: those of Young & Stockall, for example, were published monthly from July 1865 to January 1868 with only two exceptions (September 1865 and July 1866). Between August 1864 and November 1870 the company published 51(!) price lists⁽³⁸⁾.

It is a completely different question whether “price lists” can eventually become real catalogues; this has actually happened quite frequently, and famous catalogues such as those by Maury, Stanley Gibbons and Scott were created in this way. Arthur Maury published a single-sided folio as early as 1863: Liste de timbres-poste, avec les prix auxquels on peut se les procurer chez Maury Fils, which went through at least two editions, but his Catalogue complet des timbres-poste avec leurs prix de vente pour les collections did not appear until 1865⁽³⁹⁾. Similar folio sheets – today first-class bibliophile rarities – were published by J. W. Scott between June 1867 and August 1868 as “Monthly Price-Lists”; Unlike Maury, however, he counted each one as an “edition”, so that the first real catalogue from September 1868: A Descriptive Catalogue of American and Foreign Postage Stamps issued from 1840 to date, was counted as the 16th edition! No complete set of the first 15 “editions” exists. Lord Crawford and George Turner each had four of them - and the same editions! - and were thus the undisputed leaders⁽⁴⁰⁾.

Notes on Chapter 17:

1. Samuel Chapman: The London Philatelist, Volume 46, 1937, Whole number 544, p.84, with some nice examples.
2. Great Britain, Specialised Stamp Catalogue., Volume 1: Queen Victoria (London, 1983), pp.18-87 & 192-196.
3. See the obituary in: DBZ, Volume 14, 1903, No.10, pp.131-132.
4. See Suppantchitsch: Entstehung., pp.9-10: Also: The oldest known philatelic printed work on earth, in: Die Post, Volume 2, 1895, No.8, pp.63-64; No.9, p.73. The estimate of the number of copies still in existence goes back to G. T. Turner.
5. Listed individually in: the Crawford Catalogue, column 45 (inadequate: Blanc, No.103). A supplement was also published to the 4th, 7th and 8th editions. See below p.619 with notes 34-35; Illustrations of the 1st and 3rd editions appear in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.4, Plate VIII, before p.67.
6. Crawford Catalogue, column 317 (Blanc, No.1116): 43 pages in 12^o; the cover bears the year 1862. The publishers were Eugène Lacroix and Edard de Laplante. The selling price was initially 1.25 francs, then 2 francs. cf. Mahé, pp.307-26 (with facsimile) and McCoy, p.47.
7. It contained 1085 stamps and 165 entires; cf. Mahé, pp.327-344 (with facsimile); Brunel, p.18. The volume was now 48 pages (Blanc, No.1117).
8. Crawford-Catalogue, column 168 (Blanc, No.976; Leclercq-Waroquiers, p.13 no. 1-

- 2a). The reference to the Etoile Belge and the originally intended title is in Alex Leclercq in: Biographie Nationale Belge, Volume 41, 1980, column 556, where the publication date of the 1st edition of the Manuel is incorrectly given as March 1862.
9. See Mahé, pp.302-305 and: Early Publications, p.6; see also: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1912, No. 2, Plate III and ibid. No. 4, Plate VIII: illustrations of the various editions; McCoy, p.47, speaks of two “pirated editions” in Paris and Brussels and does not know the name of Moens. See also below pp.613 & 615 with note 27, also p. 632 with note 52.
 10. Crawford Catalogue, columns 222 & 401 (Blanc, Nos.777, 1328); see Mahé, pp.21-38 & 73-90 (with facsimiles). These two works also had the usual small format in 12° (Valette) and 16° (Leplante). The Valette catalogue can be found on pages 31-55 of the “Petit manuel”; McCoy, p.49, mentions Laplane and Valette as “not unlike the Potiquet”, which is in no way true for the Valette. See, for example, p.31 above with note 36.
 11. Crawford Catalogue, column 54. An illustration of the title page of the 3rd edition in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1913, No. 1, Plate II. The first 32 pages of the 2nd edition are identical to the first: the 2nd edition, however, contains two additional pages of “Errata” and six pages of “Additions”, which are incorporated into the 3rd edition. See Anderson-Smith, p.18 and below pp.609 & 613 with notes 15-16 and the table: below p.618.
 12. Crawford Catalogue, column 61. The 1st edition offered 1200, the 2nd “nearly thirteen hundred”, the 3rd almost 1700 “varieties”; further editions: 1863 (4th) 1864 (5th) (upwards of 2400 varieties). All Mount Brown catalogues are in 16°, illustrations of all editions in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1913, No.3, Plate V and especially ibid. Volume 7, 1914, No.2, Plates V-VI. On Mount Brown see especially F. Melville: The Stamp Lover’s Library, in: The Stamp Lover, Volume 1, 1908, No.1, pp.5-8, especially pp.5-6; see also Anderson-Smith, pp.19-20. For a pirated print of Mount Brown by W. H. Wright see Crawford-Catalogue, column 417 and Anderson-Smith, p.21; an illustration of this anonymously published catalogue is in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 1, 1908, No.3, before p.31. See also the table: below p.618.
 13. A. C. Kline: The Stamp Collectors Manual. Being a complete guide to the collectors of American and foreign postage and despatch stamps...Comprising upwards 1500 varieties., Philadelphia, 1862 in 16°: Crawford-Catalogue, column 213 (1863 2nd edition, 1865 3rd edition). Illustration of all three editions in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.4, Plate VII before p.67. It is practically a copy of the 1st edition of Mount Brown, which was only improved in the part concerning the USA; cf. Anderson-Smith, pp.20-21; see also McCoy, p.49. Kline’s initials were J. W., whereas A. C. were those of his wife. (Note from George Turner, who intended to devote an essay to this question.)
 14. On Postage-Stamp Catalogues., in: The Stamp Collector’s Magazine, Volume 1, 1863, No.3, pp.41-43, especially p.41.
 15. Crawford-Catalogue, column 54. Due to the manufacturing process, the sheets are only printed on one side; see also Anderson-Smith, p.18. Further illustration: above note 11, Plate II. See also below p.632 with note 51.
 16. Dr. Gray (above note 14) p.43. McCoy, p.51, incomprehensibly treats Booty under the category “handbooks”.
 17. Bertram T. K. Smith: The earliest English stamp catalogue, in: The Philatelic Record, Volume 27, 1905, No.5, pp.110-116, especially p.116 (letter dated December 1904).
 18. See below chapter 19, p.770 with notes 7-8.
 19. Anderson-Smith, pp.11-12; see also Melville, Catalogues, p.44.
 20. According to Melville: Catalogues, p.44, it would not have been published until

- December, but a copy in the library of the “Royal” shows an owner’s entry dated November 22, 1862. See also Crawford-Catalogue, column 147.
21. Melville: Catalogues, p.48 and the table; below p.618. The 1st edition was reviewed thoroughly; cf. A. R. Butler: Dr. John Edward Gray, F.R.S., E.L.S., E.Z. S. etc., The London Philatelist, Volume 75, 1966, No.886, pp.198-99; see also Anderson-Smith, pp.12-13. See below pp.629, 630 with note 46, 631 with note 50, 632, 637, 638 with note 63 & 642 with note 73. Illustrations of the covers of the first three editions are in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1913, No.1, following p.6.
 22. Crawford Catalogue, columns 297, 406-407 & 413. With the exception of the years 1868 and 1890, the catalogue appeared annually from 1864, but in 1864 and 1867 three editions each were published, and in 1871 two editions; see Anderson-Smith, p.42 and below p.642 with note 71 and chapter 18, p.713 with note 6. An illustration of the 4th edition (1864) appears in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 3, 1910, No.1, after p.6.
 23. 1863 (1st edition), 1863 (2nd), 1865 (3rd) in 12^o: Crawford-Catalogue, column 37 (Blanc, No.57). See especially Mahé, p.107ff. with facsimiles ibid. After pp.108 & 126. See also note 27 below.
 24. 1863 in 12^o: the 2nd edition appeared in 1865 under the title: Memento du Collectionneur., the 3rd in the same year as Nouveau Guide-Manuel, each in 12^o; then 1867 (4th) And a Supplément to the 4th edition in 1870: Crawford-Catalogue, column 247 (Blanc, Nos.870 & 872). An illustration of the 1st edition appeared in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.2, p.27 (without any commentary).
 25. Dr. John Edward Gray: A Hand Catalogue of Postage Stamps., (London 1862) Introduction, pp.XV-XVI; reprinted under the title: The Earliest Philatelic Bibliography., in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.2, p.27 (without any commentary).
 26. In the very next line, the catalogue by Laplane – Gray writes: La Plante – is also erroneously dated 1861.
 27. Early Publications., p.6: cf. the illustration in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1913, No.2, Plate III, following p.20.
 28. Crawford-Catalogue, columns 427 & 383; cf. Moschkau: History, pp.43-44, who prints the title of the Zschiesche & Köder catalogue more precisely than Bacon; cf. below note 30, an illustration of the “Overview” of Tramburg’s Erben in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 2, 1909, No.1, before p.11 and figure 245a.
 29. Suppantisch: History, pp.26 & 85; The same, Basics, p.208, but no longer the same, Origin, p.14.
 30. Also under the title Overview of all known Franco stamps..., but with the corrected year 1840 instead of 1849, the two catalogue price lists by Georg Wuttig in Leipzig and Leopold Priebatsch in Breslau appeared in September 1863: Crawford Catalogue, columns 418 & 318. Wuttig’s list states: “New revised print”; the “third, revised and supplemented print” is dated August 1st, 1864, the date of the first is unknown; Moschkau: Geschichte, p.47, does not know it either. Illustrations of both catalogues are in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.4, Plate VI, before p.67.
 31. 1863 (1st edition), 56 pages: 1863 (2nd), 64 pages in 12^o: Crawford Catalogue, column 106 with Bacon’s note; cf. Gray (above note 25) p.XVI. See also Suppantisch, History, p.86. The 2nd edition appeared in 1863; cf. the table: below p.618. An illustration in original size appears in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.2, Plate IV, before p.31 and figure 245b.
 32. The work was undoubtedly in Dr. Gray’s possession; it must have been sent from Leipzig to London after he had learned of it, etc.; moreover, 22nd November is not a certain first day, but only “terminus ante quem” [The date before which a document must have been written].

33. Crawford Catalogue, columns 50, 91, 98 & 352. There is still 1865 (2nd edition) of the catalogue by Beyfuss. The American catalogue was published anonymously, the printing company was called Sever and Francis; the catalogue therefore appears under this name, for example, in McCoy, p.49. An illustration of the catalogues by Beyfuss and Dannenfelser appear in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 1, 1908, No.3, before p.31; Volume 2, 1909, No.1, before p.11; Volume 5, 1912, No.4, Plate VI, after p.66.
34. Berger-Levault: Description, pp.V-X (Foreword).
35. History p.86; cf. Suppantisch: Basics, p.309; The same, Entstehung, p.15 and Crawford Catalogue, column 46 (Blanc, No.102). See also above p.19 with note 7.
36. C. Brecker: Guida di tutti i francobolli emesi dal 1840 alle fine di giugno 1864., Florence, 1864, 36 pages in 16° (Piloni, No.1851); an illustration in Piloni, Tav. [Table?] XV, after p.304; Wilhelm Georg: Catalogue of all stamps issued from 1840 to 1864, Basel-Geneva 1864, 99 pages in 16°: Crawford Catalogue, columns 57 & 129. For Italy, however, Brecker's birthright is doubtful, since the Guida manual per far collezione di francobolli. Descrizione dettagliata delle emissioni i 1475 varietà di francobolli di ogni stato del mondo. (Piloni, No.1871) may have been older. The author was Ulisse Franchi, who did not identify himself; this catalogue was also set up for the handwritten entry of prices. Illustrations of both catalogues are in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 2, 1909, No.2, before p.31 and illustration 247 (Brecker only). An illustration of the catalogue by Georg appears in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 6, 1913, No.3, Plate VI, before p.35.
37. Nathan-Gahl, p.107 No.206. See Dr. Thebussem: Literatura philatélica en España. Apuntes para la redacción de un catálogo., (Sevilla 1876) p.22 No.100: Crawford-Catalogue, column 378 (Nathan-Gahl, p.117 No.280). Thebussem knew of a single copy, which, to make matters worse, was missing the first four pages; he believed it was a translation from English or French. Verges was a coin dealer who had started trading in stamps in the same year, 1864; see also Linares Castilla, p.37. An illustration of the catalogue in original size (in 12°) appears in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 5, 1912, No.2, Plate III, after p.30. The author's name is not written out on the title page; it simply says “por D. J. M. V. de C.”.
38. According to the Crawford Catalogue, columns 420-422. The last list is dated May 1874. The question arises whether the list in the Crawford Catalogue is really complete.
39. Crawford Catalogue, column 253 (Blanc, Nos.917 & 902): see below p.639 with note 67. An illustration of the 1863 sheet appears in: The Journal of the Philatelic Literature Society, Volume 9, 1916, No.3, Plate V, after p.40.
40. Crawford Catalogue, column 344: see McCoy p.49 and especially Turner: Catalogues, p.215 with figures 1-2 on pp.213-214. It is striking that there are several copies of each of the “editions” that have been handed down. Could old Scott have put aside a few months, but still counted them? That would be something we can easily believe. In 1971, Scott Publishing reprinted the first real catalogue from September 1868 (21 pages in 8°); there is no edition number on the title page or inside the catalogue.

CHAPTER 19

CURRENT INFORMATION - THE MAGAZINES

The most important link between the collector and current happenings in philately is not the society, but the philatelic magazine. It is no accident that the oldest philatelic magazines appeared only a short time after the first catalogues and even before the albums. The importance of magazines for the spread of philately can hardly be overestimated; hence I shall give a few general remarks before going on to the historical survey.

Every philatelist must have thought at least once about how his ideal philatelic magazine would be: it should appear at least six, preferably twelve times a year, be printed on good art paper, be copiously illustrated (in colour as far as possible), give preference to articles on his own field of interest, but not contain too many useless adverts, give trustworthy reports on auctions (not written by the firms involved), and give detailed accounts of important philatelic events such as the major exhibitions, congresses etc., whereas announcements of new issues and the like interest the advanced philatelist either very little or not at all. However this at once brings us up against problems, since the beginner and the average collector place a high value on reports of new issues, special cancellations, inaugural flights etc., wish to hear about exchange agencies, are very interested in kiloware tests, and above all want the opportunity to study many, many dealers' announcements.

Obviously, such divergent interests cannot be reduced to a common denomination. Furthermore, even if it were only a question of the "advanced collector", this very vague term obscures the fact that the "advanced" aerophilatelist has totally different interests from a classicist, a colonial collector, a ships' post specialist and so on. Moreover the term "classicist" is also far too general, since not even old Germany or old Italy can be counted as a single field of collection. The logical outcome of this line of thinking would be every collector having his own magazine, an idea on which we need waste no further words. Thus, compromise solutions must be sought, but what form will they take? Before we can attempt to answer this, it would perhaps be helpful to divide the magazines into categories. A. R. Butler for example, divided the 1971 philatelic press into three groups on the basis of type: Society journals; House journals and Independent journals⁽¹⁾. Each of these groups deserves particular attention.

As classic examples of society journals we may cite the London Philatelist (organ of the Royal Philatelic Society, London since 1892), the Stamp Lover (organ of the National Philatelic Society since 1908), the Collectors Club Philatelist (organ of the Collectors Club of New York since 1922) and so on. These represent the peak productions in this category so far as genuine society journals are concerned. The most recent shoot on the branch of society journals is Cursores, which since 1981 has been the journal of the Associazione Italiana di Storia Postale (A.I.S.P.), which unfortunately only managed two years of existence. Cursores however is an isolated case amongst the specialised journals of associations or specialist societies, which must naturally be included in this category along with the periodical publications of national societies such as Philatelie, La Philatélie Française, and The American Philatelist (organ of the American Philatelic Society since 1886) or the Canadian Philatelist (organ of the "Royal" of Canada since 1950).

This group thus loses its homogeneity; Butler gives the publication figures for society journals as 2000 at most, which can apply simply and solely to the first group such as the London Philatelist, etc., and not to the organs of national societies such as Philatelie, the organ of the BDPh, with a circulation of about 65,000 or The American Philatelist with about 55,000, whereas the news-sheets of many associations (often only hectographed) sometimes do not even reach three figures. The amount of advertising also varies very greatly: Documents Philatéliques, the journal of the Académie de Philatélie lacks advertising entirely; the magazines of large societies such as the London Philatelist keep it within narrow limits, not as deliberate policy but because of their restricted circulation. An opposite example is The American Philatelist, which can have an extensive advertising section because of its wide circulation. All this makes it obvious why the circulars and newsletters from associations practically never include advertisements.

The level of the contributions in this category is on the whole high, and this applies to the majority, yet many society magazines are absolutely valueless as regards philately, and many of the articles even in the organs of specialist associations, study circles etc. are better not described. In this and the following chapter we shall constantly have to deal with the problem of quality and quantity. The only really important thing that all the magazines in this group have in common is that none of them rely on commercial considerations: most of them are entirely subsidised and are financed by members' contributions, so that getting the journal is often the most important "raison d'être" for paying the membership subscription.

The second, and most disparate, group is that of the house journals i.e. the magazines published by stamp dealers. The best known of these are Timbre-Poste from Moens in Belgium, Senf's Illustriertes Briefmarken-Journal in Germany, the Écho de la Timbrologie from Yvert & Tellier in France, Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal in Great Britain, and Scott's American Journal of Philately in the USA. Of these, only the Écho still appears regularly, but has long since ceased to be a house journal. All the same, all the magazines listed above did manage to have an uncommonly long life. This fact proves that the category of house journals has been of vital importance to philately for a long time. The great pioneering journals of the 1860's were practically all issued by dealers: their part in the expansion of philately, and in the first developments of philatelic science, can hardly be overestimated.

We may also include in this group the journals put out by catalogue publishers (not themselves stamp dealers), such as for example the Michel-Rundschau, Scott's Monthly Stamp Journal or the already-mentioned Écho de la Timbrologie which as stated has been for some decades an independent undertaking restricted to the publication of the journal and catalogues, with no links to a firm of dealers. Some of the big dealers such as Stanley Gibbons Ltd., Bolaffi, Borek, Minkus, etc. have entrusted their magazine and catalogue production to a separate publishing enterprise, so that stamp dealing and publishing are legally distinct. Nevertheless, magazines such as Gibbons' Stamp Monthly, Borek's Briefmarken-Welt, Bolaffi's Collezionista-Francobolli, or the Minkus Stamp Journal cannot be put into the category of independent journals, since the relationship of these magazines to the total undertaking is as close now as ever. However, these magazines do form a sort of intermediate group which can only be classified with difficulty⁽²⁾.

Butler takes this second category as being characterised by an issue of up to 5,000, advertising usually restricted to the parent firm and being the main reason for the journal's existence, so that the income from subscriptions does not necessarily have to cover the cost of production⁽¹⁾. However, these criteria apply in their entirety to only a small number of the magazines in this group. They apply when the circulation is 5,000, a level not generally found even in the 1900's. The most widely circulated house journal at the moment is the Sieger Post, at over 100,000. And this is only the most obvious example. All the other titles in the "intermediate group" as defined above have circulations of 30,000 or more. They cannot be too low because of the publicity desired; low runs of the sort not infrequently found with society publications are not in question here. Circulations of under 2,000 ought thus to be distinct exceptions, and the number 5,000 strikes me as an acceptable lower mean value.

It is also a fact with advertising: in many house journals it is restricted to the firm concerned, as in for example Sieger-Post, Philatelist and PJGB (Robson Lowe), Minkus Stamp and Coin Journal, Michel-Rundschau, Balasse Magazine, to name just a few of the current journals. Others such as Briefmarken-Welt, Stamp Monthly, etc. will take outside advertising if it does not conflict with the interests of the parent firm, and the same was true even before the First World War. It is rare to find a firm's magazine with the minimal advertising that used to appear in the Mercury Stamp Journal. Most of the magazines in this category are supplied on subscription, with the cover price generally intended to recoup the cost rather than make a profit. Some magazines with a not very large circulation are or were given free to customers of the house, for example Philatelic Classics by Ch. Phillips, Sélection by L. Miro and the Mercury Stamp Journal by E. Mueller. Still others, such as Stamp Monthly are even obtainable on news-stands.

However, the basic question is that of the level of the contributions. According to a widely-held prejudice, this is not likely to be very high in the case of the philatelic contributions in dealers' journals. This cannot be denied for many of them, but we should guard against generalised verdicts: in earlier days there were house journals which contributed to the development of philately and took the first steps towards scientific philately. For later days we need only remember a paper like Stanley Gibbons Monthly Journal, which has occupied a leading position for decades, and this is not the only case. Kosack's Berliner Briefmarken-Zeitung, Scott's American Journal of Philately, more recently the Belgian Balasse Magazine, the Philatelic Journal of Great Britain from the firm of Robson Lowe the Berner Briefmarken-Zeitung from Zumstein or the short-lived Sélection from the Parisian dealer Leon Miro, are only some of the many names that could be mentioned. However, outstanding above all is the Mercury Stamp Journal, which Edwin Mueller has written all on his own in New York for 15 years, and which is certainly one of the best philatelic magazines of all time. The third group consists of what are called the independent journals, and this automatically leads to the question: independent of what? Obviously it means independent of the trade, which suggests or postulates a higher intellectual independence, since in reality these independents are the most dependent of all, depending on the advertisements without which none of these journals could survive even for a day: their life-blood is advertising revenue, is Butler's pertinent remark, and he goes on: independent journals cease to be published when they cease to be profitable⁽³⁾. Here comes the rub: the countless ephemera that have appeared on the philatelic magazine market and which we have covered from the statistical viewpoint were all independent. Much too independent, one might say, since exactly what they lacked was a financial backer who could have kept them going for at least an initial period. Moreover their ostensible independence of the trade is also a pure fiction: who pays for all the big advertisements in these magazines. The big dealers and auction firms without exception. Thus we may say that the independents are not controlled by a given commercial firm: this makes them all the more heavily dependent on "the trade" as such, since without their advertisements it is "no go". Even if such a journal does not close down the day after its first deficit, there is no backer ready to subsidise it "ad infinitum" and the end cannot be very long delayed.

Independent journals need a relatively high, usually a five-figure, circulation to be profitable. The minimum for existence in Germany is about 10,000. The level of circulation is also important for bringing in advertisements, since firms naturally want their announcements to be seen as widely as possible. Many magazines are available almost exclusively on subscription direct to the home - the best known example in Germany for a long time has been the DBZ (Deutsche Briefmarken-Zeitung), which has recently been available at railway kiosks, etc. as well - whereas others are available mainly at kiosks and newspaper shops. Examples here are Briefmarken-Spiegel and Sammler-Dienst. These are the best-known magazines of this group from Germany. The leading titles in Great Britain till a short time ago were Stamp Magazine and Stamp Collecting, but these have recently been merged into Stamp News. (Translator's note: Not so; it was the Philatelic Magazine and Stamp Collecting, Stamp Magazine continues to be independent.) From France we might mention Le Monde des Philatélistes, from Italy, Italia Filatelica and Cronaca Filatelica; in the USA, Stamp Collector, Linn's Stamp News and Stamps are amongst the most popular magazines of this type. The majority of these journals have a circulation of 30,000, or well over. Most of them appear monthly, some fortnightly, and the American ones mentioned, even weekly. However, the most important question is that of content.

It was immediately obvious that the adverts take up to half, or even more, of the space in any one issue. Since this section requires no study, the reader is at liberty just to leaf through it. But what about the philatelic contributions? We might expect a University Professor to give us a biting critique of the wretched level of these magazines, the poverty of the articles, the primitive nature of the information, etc. A severe critic like Butler wrote as early as 1971 "The independent journals and the commercial interests that support them ride the wave of young and inexperienced collectors, but neither their articles nor their editorial policy do anything to convert these novices into serious collectors and philatelists." This is indeed the most important problem, to which we shall now address ourselves. Of course it would be easy to repeat the above pointed criticism, but it strikes me as unfair to do that. Nobody expects the popular press with a circulation of millions - there is no need to name any names - to give carefully composed reports - least of all the reader. Sensations are what are required, blood must flow and world politics come far behind the news of some third-rate film starlet getting a divorce. Nobody can deny that papers like these have their place: their best justification is their million-high issue, of which the "serious" press can only enviously dream.

The parallel is obvious. A philatelic magazine with a circulation of 50,000 or 80,000 is a mass-circulation paper just like the tabloid press. Anyone who expects serious research in this type of paper is out of touch with the real world. It is enough if deeper and more extensive articles on classical areas of collecting appear now and then. This must be appreciated when these papers carry news from the auction world, which is usually well outside the range of what are called small collectors. What in fact can these papers do except advise the inexperienced collector to join a society? It is not the magazines but the societies in the first place which have the job of converting the beginner into a philatelist: the magazines can give a certain amount of help, and I am willing to concede they could often do more than they actually achieve. Basically, however, I fully agree with D. Armstrong when he writes as follows in the Jubilee issue for the 25th anniversary of Stamp Collecting in 1938 "...at no time has Stamp Collecting aspired to the classification of a scientific journal and is content to leave erudite papers to the more academic reviews"⁽⁴⁾. This sort of "division of labour" strikes me as not only useful, but absolutely necessary.

We might as well mention the negative aspect of the things which the "mass papers" - to retain this useful title - cannot be expected to print: research and education. However, since every medal admittedly has two sides, let us now talk about the positive aspect of these papers: what do they give their readers, what brings them their wide circulation? The answer is: up-to-date information (on new issues, special cancellations, exhibitions, auctions, exchange days etc.) and philatelic light entertainment (market analyses, reports on current events such as major exhibitions and fairs, philatelists' days, etc., as well as on such general topics as rare stamps and their history, introduction to special collections, and comparisons between catalogues: kiloware tests, etc. also belong here).

I am well aware of all this, and have no polemical or ironical intentions in referring to it as philatelic “light entertainment”. This term has - in Germany particularly - a slightly disparaging flavour. Of course, light entertainment is not the same as a symphony concert, but whereas the latter is only accessible to a few, a light-entertainment concert brings pleasure and refreshment to thousands. In terms of philately, this means that “serious” philately in the meaning of the scientific study and compilation of the material, i.e. research., will interest perhaps 5% of all collectors at the most generous estimate - and this figure is very likely much too high. The other 95% want recreation and relaxation from their stamps and care not a jot for such refinements as plates and plate flaws, cancellations, postal stages, postal law or postal history. They are delighted with their first-day covers or inaugural-flight covers, their blocks or strips of attractive commemoratives, etc. These people are happy with what they collect: they want to be neither educated nor instructed, and attach not the slightest importance to “promotion” from stamp collector to philatelist.

It should be obvious that this numerically overwhelming majority needs literary servicing just as much as the group of philatelic researchers. This fact leads us to a fresh classification of the periodical literature: the one just described was based on the publisher and thus gave us three categories: the new one is based on the readership, and can be divided into two: magazines for the philatelic researcher (in the widest sense) and those relating to stamp-collecting as a hobby and spare-time occupation. The first of these will include most of the titles in Group 1 above plus a considerable part - I should not like to guess at a percentage - of the second. The second will include the remaining magazines from these two groups, plus the whole of Group 3. It should be unnecessary to say that the circulation figures for this second category of the philatelic hobby press are very much higher than those for the research-orientated journals, though the first category includes the greater number of titles.

In evaluating a philatelic journal, we must always ask which of these two categories it falls into: only thus can we avoid crass errors of judgement, as it simply will not do to evaluate each and everything on the basis of an often questionable contribution to “research”. Doubtless research is the central task of a scientifically orientated philately: it need not be said that it lies much closer to the heart of the writer of these lines than does spare-time philately: but philately cannot consist only of research, there must be room for the straightforward pleasures of collecting and discovering, and these too must find a voice. Everything that has been said here about the present state of the philatelic periodical literature will - mutatis mutandis [with things changed that should be changed] - naturally also apply to the past, and it is now time for me to give a historical survey.

The publishing of philatelic magazines goes back to the year 1862, but it did not begin right away with independent magazines. Rather, young peoples’ and family magazines began in that year to deal with the new fashion - stamp collecting was naturally looked on as that initially - by publishing long series of articles, sometimes extending over several years, in order to bring their readers up to date with the new fad. Series like this appeared almost simultaneously in Germany, France and Great Britain, and can thus be looked on as the “harbingers” of both the catalogues and the philatelic journals.

In the June 1862 issue of the monthly Young England, Dr. J. E. Gray, a familiar name to readers, began a series of articles under the title The Postage Stamps of the World. This ran every month until October of the same year, and then appeared in November as an independent catalogue⁽⁵⁾. On the 21st June 1862 the Parisian weekly Le Magazin Pittoresque, then in its 30th year, published the first contribution on The Postage Stamps of all countries of the Globe from the pen of Natalis Rondot. The last article in the series appeared on 8 December 1866 after four and a half years, and in all the series totalled 53 articles with 457 illustrations⁽⁶⁾; a Belgian published all the articles relating to Europe as a special item in 1935⁽⁷⁾. Only about a month after Le Magazin Pittoresque, on the 26th July 1862, the English weekly Cassell's Illustrated Family Paper began an even longer series of articles with the straightforward title Postage Stamps, the author of which is unfortunately not known. It ran until the 2nd February 1867, with 74 articles but “only” 446 illustrations. On the other hand, the 23 articles by an anonymous contributor that appeared between the 1st October 1862 and 16th March 1864 in the Berlin Bazar, with their 213 illustrations, are of only secondary importance⁽⁸⁾.

Thus, the time for specialist journals had gradually arrived. In September 1862 in Birmingham, a certain William Macmillan published the first number of the Monthly Intelligencer; this paper was not orientated purely toward philately, but its reading matter was aimed principally at philatelists; it ceased to appear in July 1863 after only ten numbers⁽⁹⁾. As early as July 1862 an amateur, T. W. Kitt had the idea of publishing a philatelic magazine, but most of the people he consulted advised him against it, so that the plan was eventually allowed to drop⁽¹⁰⁾.

Thus it was on 15 December 1862 in Liverpool that the publishing house of Edw. Moore & Co. published the first purely philatelic magazine under the editorship of A. Perris. It was first called The Monthly Advertiser, then for the next number the title was altered to The Stamp Collector's Monthly Advertiser, then with No. 3 the final title was arrived at: The Stamp Collector's Review and Monthly Advertiser. The most important contributor, and from the 1st January 1864 also formally the editor, was E. L. Pemberton. Unfortunately the Advertiser ceased with the issue for June 1864 “through the folly of the proprietors”, as Pemberton, who had already prepared the July issue, bitterly wrote in 1872⁽¹¹⁾. Contributors from the beginning included Dr. J. E. Gray, T. W. Kitt, and the schoolboy Thornton Lewes, and it should be noted that during the first year a certain W. H. published an article on English Postal Obliterating Marks, which could very well be the oldest contribution on the science of postal cancellations⁽¹²⁾.

From the year 1863 onwards philatelic magazines began to spring up like mushrooms from the ground and it would be a pointless, as well as a very long-winded, undertaking to try and deal with them all separately: for the years 1863 to 1865 alone Anderson-Smith counted no fewer than 25 new titles, including not a few that only survived for one or two numbers⁽¹³⁾. Naturally these are today bibliophilic rarities of the first rank: however from the historical viewpoint they can be ignored with no loss. Our interest will be directed not so much towards the rarities as towards those journals which were disseminated widely enough to make an essential contribution to philately and this criteria, which will be strictly adhered to from now on, will be applied not only to Great Britain but to all countries relevant to philately. From this stand point, only two journals published in Great Britain during the 1860s are worthy of mention: the Stamp Collector's Magazine and the Philatelist.

The Stamp Collector's Magazine was published in Bath by Stafford Smith & Smith - from 1866 Alfred Smith & Co. The first number appeared on the 1st February 1863: it is thus the second oldest philatelic journal in the world, and also the oldest “House journal” in terms of the typology given above (Fig. 6). The Magazine appeared until the 1st December 1874 in twelve volumes with a total of 2,296 pages. It was indisputably the leading English journal, in which all the great names from English philately of the early period published articles, from Dr. J. E. Gray to E. L. Pemberton and O. Taylor to Dr. Ch. Viner and W. A. S. Westoby, not forgetting the combative “Fenton” (Lucy Adelaide Fenton), the first lady philatelist to appear in print, and many others. It has been said with reason that the twelve volumes of the Magazine constitute the largest contribution to English philatelic science in the first two decades of its history⁽¹⁴⁾.

When the brothers Alfred and Stafford Smith divided their commercial interests in 1866, the younger brother Stafford moved to Brighton. He was the driving force behind the publication of the Magazine - at that time 20 years old - and went on to found a new magazine in Brighton, The Philatelist, which lasted until 1876. The editor of the Magazine till then, Dr. Ch. Viner (1812-1906), went over to the Philatelist, whilst Overy Taylor (1845-1904) edited the Magazine. The Philatelist appeared monthly, and the first number was issued in December 1866, so that the first volume consisted of thirteen issues instead of the usual twelve. The great days of the Philatelist were the years until 1874 when the Magazine and the Philatelist were appearing side by side and contending for the same readership, and Butler was justified in writing that the collectors of those years had a service given to them “which has rarely if ever been matched since”⁽¹⁵⁾. (Fig. 91, no. 3-4)

Great Britain produced the first philatelic journals and both the Stamp Collector's Magazine and the Philatelist were high-quality papers without rival today so far as philatelic information for the reader is concerned. However, leading journals of the 1860's were also published in Brussels and Paris. Le Timbre-Poste, published by J. -B. Moens⁽¹⁶⁾ comes first in age and importance, since it became without doubt the leading philatelic journal of the 19th century. The first number appeared on the 15th February 1863, i.e. only 14 days after the Stamp Collectors Magazine, the last (No.456) in December 1900 to complete its 38th year. Le Timbre-Poste did not cease to appear because of a shortage of subscribers, but by the voluntary decision of the publisher, who got rid of his stamp dealing business in the same year.

The official publisher was J. -B. Moens, but the actual editor was Louis Hanciau, and this was very obvious from the style of the journal, since Moens believed in conciliation and compromise, whereas Hanciau was both obstinate and quarrelsome, which led all too often to articles being written in a very lively but unnecessarily caustic and even offensive tone⁽¹⁷⁾. The eternal quarrels with Mahé, who had also not drunk the milk of human kindness in the literary sense, were amusing at first, but in the long run became tiresome and unpleasant to read about: his unrestrained attack on Dr. Legrand cost the magazine its most prolific contributor, but all this aside, Le Timbre-Poste was the philatelic journal of the exciting years up to 1900, and its importance to the successful development of philately over these decades can hardly be overestimated.

The actual impetus for the foundation of the journal was described by Moens (or was it Hanciau?) in the jubilee number for the 25th anniversary in 1887. At the beginning of the year 1862 Moens wanted to issue a price list, and do it reasonably cheaply. However, publications of that sort had to carry a tax stamp, which was not required for a magazine. The idea thus arose of starting a periodical, the chief aim of which was simply to put out Moens' firm's price list. With a minimum of four sides, two could be devoted to the price list, one to announcements and one to entertaining the readers. The first issue naturally had to carry a sort of basic declaration of the purpose of the magazine: the article had to be called “Aim of this Paper”; more than 25 times Moens dipped his pen into the ink and left only these few words on the paper, since, as Moens explained with disarming honesty The fact is we had no idea what the aim ought to be⁽¹⁸⁾. There was nothing to add to that.

Figure 301: The renowned folio-issue of Timbre-Poste was printed in 35 x 25cm format only for the first volume. The original issue of the 15th February 1863.

Figure 302: Reprint of the first issue, produced in July 1863.

Figures 303-304: The second reprint of the first year (numbers 1-12) was in the handy octavo-format (14.8 x 10.2cm). The continuous numbering of the issues was retained until the end of the periodical in 1900.

Le Timbre-Poste appeared at first in standard newspaper format, i.e. in folio, which was naturally highly inconvenient. As early as No.4 (May 1863) he reported that No.1 was sold out, and only a few copies of No.2 were still available: the following issue advertised a reprint of the first two numbers, to be available in July 1863. This reprint of Numbers 1 and 2 retained the folio format, but was printed by Van Buggenhoudt (22, Rue de l'Orangerie), whereas the originals were printed by Poot (31, Vieille Halle au Blé). The complete first year of twelve issues - to make up the dozen, two appeared in December 1863- covered 48 folio sides, a good 75% of which were advertising. Even so the paper found a ready sale, which stresses the hunger of collectors for information and a slightly more intellectual approach.

From Volume 2 onwards, i.e. from January 1864, the magazine was converted to the handier octavo format which it retained for the subsequent 37 years. In 1867 Moens announced a not-quite-complete reprint of the entire first volume in octavo form, but including only the articles, not the advertisements. Further reprints of scarce issues of the year 1864 followed in the years 1869, 1875 and 1876⁽¹⁹⁾. It should be stressed though that the original folio edition is a bibliographical rarity of the first importance. (See Figures 301-304.) It may be noted as a curiosity that the individual numbers of Timbres-Poste in the years 1866-1873 were printed on coloured paper (blue, yellow, grey, green, pink, violet etc., and so was the 1867 reprint). An index to Timbre-Poste compiled by Bertram T. K. Smith, the son of Stafford Smith, was published in Brussels in 1926⁽²⁰⁾.

Figure 305: The first three numbers of Maury's Collectionneur were produced like Moens' Le Timbre-Poste in Folio and are classed with the great philatelic Cimelien [Rarities] of early times. This also applies to the reprint of the first three issues in Quarto, which Maury prepared under the date 15, IX, 1864 for 1864 year end, in order to provide the first issues in the same format as issue 4 onward.

Since Timbre-Poste was published in French, there was no initial need for another French paper. This is why the first philatelic journal did not appear in France till relatively late - in the Summer of 1864. On the 15th July of that year the 20-year old author Arthur Maury published the first number of Le Collectionneur de Timbres-Poste. He made the same initial mistake as Moens in using the oversized folio format, but went down to quarto after three issues and also republished the first three in the altered size. Maury's journal, which is known to have coined and propagated the term philately appeared regularly to the end of 1867, only sporadically from December 1867 to October 1874 (ten issues in all), then came to life again with No. 50 on the 15th January 1885. Its great period covered the years before the First World War, but it managed to survive the Second as well though without ever managing to recapture its old brilliance. The magazine then ran into difficulties, the interval between the individual numbers became steadily greater, and the end finally came with No. 734 of July-October 1969⁽²¹⁾. It would hardly be permissible to reckon the life of the Collectionneur from 1864 - this would ignore the more than ten years' break - but even so the "respectable" working life was more than 70 years, which places it in the category of a "classic" of philatelic literature. (See Figure 305.)

Figure 306: Mahé's Timbrophile was undoubtedly the most important philatelic periodical of the 1860's.

Figure 307: The earliest German stamp magazine, the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler of the Leipzig coin dealer Zschiesche & Köder first appeared on the 1st May 1863. The four years of this paper have contributed significantly to the spread of philately in Germany.

The second French journal was only slightly younger than the Collectionneur: on the 15th November 1864 appeared the first issue of Le Timbrophile: Journal de la Collection Timbro-Postale (et Fiscale) from Pierre Mahé. To a much greater extent than Maury, Mahé succeeded in getting the best-known philatelists of the day, with Dr. A. Legrand at their head, as regular contributors, thus putting Le Timbrophile amongst the leading periodicals of the 1860's. Almost all philatelic problems of the early days were dealt with here, if not for the first time, at least most thoroughly and basically. An article in Le Timbrophile gave rise to the first independent publication not devoted to forgeries: the pamphlet on watermarks by Dr. A. Legrand. Unfortunately this outstanding periodical only lasted for seven years of twelve issues each, which were paged consecutively and reached a total of 606 pages. (See Figure 306.) In December 1871 the best magazine of the pioneering years of philately came to a much too early end⁽²²⁾.

As well as England and France, Germany belongs to the countries which had risen to philatelic magazines in the 1860's. The Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler published by the Leipzig firm of Zschiesche & Köder is one of the oldest, since its first number appeared as early as the 1st May 1863, only three months after the Stamp Collector's Magazine, whose title it simply translated into German. (See Figure 307.) This was typical of the whole paper; compared with its English namesake, with Timbre-Poste or even Le Timbrophile it was worthy but totally provincial. However, it cannot be ignored in the history of German philately and it did pioneer work in spreading and popularising philately in Germany. Suppantschitsch has described it with slight exaggeration as the "scientific foster-mother of the German collector". The four years to April 1867 (48 numbers in all) join the catalogues as the oldest witness to a literary approach to philately in Germany⁽²³⁾.

This was moreover not the only imitator of the English model. The then 15 year old Cornelius van Rinsum published in February 1869 in Holland an imitation of the Magazine down to its format, calling it the Continental Philatelic Magazine - note that the title is in English, this lasted for eight numbers till January 1870⁽²⁴⁾. The paper was written in bad English, following the model in this respect also: however it could not reach the same level, as this did not depend on the format and the language. Nevertheless it was the earliest philatelic magazine in Holland. Now back to Germany: the Börsenblatt für den Briefmarkenhandel published in Kaufbeuren in January 1864 and transferred to Coburg in July that year under the title Allgemeine Deutsche Briefmarkenzeitung would hardly be worth a mention if it could not be reckoned as the oldest paper devoted to the needs of the trade. Its life was restricted to the year 1864⁽²⁵⁾ (Fig. 94).

From January 1866 the Magazin appeared side by side with a new paper edited by Gustav Bauschke in Leipzig. It was Der Briefmarken-Sammler. Since the Magazin ceased publication with the April number for 1867, the Briefmarken-Sammler was in practice the only German specialist paper till the war of 1870/71 put an end to it. Moreover it did not appear every month but had a break in the Summer, so that there were only ten numbers a year (and only eight in 1866). In 1868 Bauschke sold his firm, the Literarische Museum to J. Kümmel., who took over the editorship from Number 24 (June 1868). There were only three issues in 1871 to March, (the last being a double number, 51-52). In 1869 Bauschke published six numbers of a new journal in Aussig and called it Der Deutsche Briefmarken-Sammler, but it had no particular success⁽²⁶⁾. Nevertheless this paper does have the glory of being the oldest philatelic journal in Austria, though this title is claimed by the next one on purely formal grounds.

This is a curiosity, nothing more, which Suppantschitsch claims as the oldest specialist magazine in Austria for purely formal reasons: Der Briefmarken-Anzeiger, Organ zur Belebung und Erleichterung des Verkehrs zwischen Timbrophilen. Insertionsorgan. [The Stamp messenger for the promotion and encouragement of commerce between stamp lovers.] Advertisement owner and publisher Carl Von Cardona of Trieste, Editor Johann Arich. Everything seems in order so far: the first issue appeared on the 20th June 1866, and was also the last. The appearance of the second already prepared number was prevented by a very angry and strict Papa, since son Carl - the “owner and publisher” was only 13 years old at the time⁽²⁷⁾. Finally, an honourable mention is due to Der Bazar für Briefmarken-Sammler, eleven numbers of which were published between the 1st July 1869 and 15th May 1870 by the Heidelberg student Wilhelm Faber. The Bazar was not a Society journal in the strict sense, but its editor, a law student was the chairman of the Süddeutschen Philatelisten-Vereins, which was founded about the same time and used the Bazar as its Society journal from Number 2 onwards. From No.7 it gave itself the proud title of “Centralorgan der deutschen Philatelisten-Vereine”, since there were already two existing in Germany⁽²⁸⁾.

Philatelic journals were initially found overseas only in the USA and present-day Canada. The oldest appeared in Montreal in February 1864, published by the notorious S. A. Taylor (Fig. 178) – “that rascal”, George Turner called him - but the Stamp Collector's Record only came to two numbers. From December 1864 he published the Record in Albany, N.Y., so that the same magazine accomplished the feat of being the earliest in both the USA and Canada⁽²⁹⁾. The Record lasted in the USA until October 1876, but only 42 numbers were published in its twelve years of life, regularly for the first three years and after that only at wide intervals⁽³⁰⁾. The number of philatelic magazines in the USA during the 1860's was not very high, only about 20 up to 1869⁽³¹⁾, and only a few are worth mentioning, such as, for example E. Mason's Coin & Stamp Collectors' Magazine that came out from April 1867 to December 1871⁽³²⁾, or Ferdinand Trifet's American Stamp Mercury which appeared from October 1867 to March 1871⁽³³⁾ (Fig. 91, No. 12).

However, the single publication of note was The American Journal of Philately, published by J. W. Scott, which also acted in the first year of its life as the Society magazine of the New York Philatelic Society. The first twelve numbers appeared under their impress, and it is thus the oldest Society journal in the world to be designated as such. The “First Series” included twelve volumes (1868-1878) with 156 numbers, whose format and make-up depended very strongly on the Stamp Collector's Magazine. From Volume 3 onwards there were coloured illustrations - naturally only one colour, usually red or blue - which was an innovation in philatelic literature. One curiosity is what is marked as Volume VI: this actually belongs to Volume III (Volumes V and VII follow one another chronologically), and the sixth volume is actually a continuation of the third from the 3rd September – 19th November 1870, when the Journal appeared weekly: these twelve numbers included only 96 pages⁽³⁴⁾. (See Figures 308-309.)

Figures 308-309: The first series of The American Journal of Philately. The volume constantly changed its appearance. However, this did not change the fact that this publication by Scott was the first serious philatelic magazine overseas.

From 1879-1886 the paper changed its name to The American Journal of Philately and Coin Advertiser: it then had a larger format but a reduced content: it was nominally a quarterly but came out irregularly and went on for only 29 issues (Nos.157-185). After Scott's firm had been sold to the Calman brothers, the new Scott Stamp and Coin Co. resumed the old title. The larger format was retained, and the “Second Series” started in February 1888. J. W. Scott was editor at first, and Henry L. Calman took over from Volume 3. The journal was well edited, and was published monthly with great regularity by the Scott Stamp & Coin Co.: 228 numbers in 19 volumes appeared from February 1888 to December 1906. Over a period of eleven years the Journal published in continuation the most important catalogue of the period before 1914, the Catalogue for Advanced Collectors. Apart from Le Timbre-Poste this is the only journal from the 1860's that survived, with the relatively short interruption of two years, to the next century. It was distinguished by a gold medal at the Paris Exhibition in 1900⁽³⁵⁾.

The Canadian magazines cannot compare with the American ones in number, but they still include some very old and respected papers. I have already mentioned that the first two numbers of the Stamp Collector's Record were issued in Montreal. Two journals that deserve an honourable mention were published at the same time in St. John, the capital of New Brunswick: The Stamp Collector's Monthly Gazette from June 1865 to May 1867, and The Postman's Knock - what a poetical name - from May 1866 to March 1870, so that the Gazette lasted nearly two full years, and the Knock only one: after that it went on appearing at irregular intervals from Summer 1867 onwards⁽³⁶⁾.

I have given the pioneering journals from the years 1862-1869 far more attention than would be justified for most of them on the grounds of their contents alone, but Suppantchitsch was right in saying that the centre of gravity of the philatelic literature during this period- meaning the years 1862-1878 - lay in the periodicals. It would have been impossible to deal individually with the more than 70 specialist magazines published during this period of time - 40 or so in Great Britain alone. In most cases it would be - with all due respect to the pioneering spirit of their founders - an out-and-out waste of time, and only half a dozen of them were really important, Stamp Collector's Magazine and The Philatelist in England, Le Timbre Poste in Belgium, Le Timbrophile in France, the Magazin für Briefmarken-Sammler in Germany, and the American Journal of Philately in the USA⁽³⁸⁾. These journals all share the characteristic of "trail-blazing", and Suppantchitsch may be quoted once more when he says we need only look at the last year or so.. to be convinced that so many of the ideas now (1890!) put forward as new have been described already, and that many of the discoveries over which a fuss is made today were already known twenty or more years ago⁽³⁷⁾. This could have been written yesterday!

It strikes me as worth noting that practically all the philatelic magazines of the 1860s were written in one of three languages: English, French and German; we might expect to have at least Spanish and Italian, but there is nothing apart from a few totally insignificant catalogues, only Scandinavia provides an exception: in August 1867 K. Lund published the Nordisk Frimærketidende in Copenhagen. This is the oldest philatelic journal in Scandinavia, in Danish naturally, and it managed to appear for almost a whole year (till June 1868). The C. van Rinsum paper already mentioned published in addition to his Continental Magazine in English another one in Dutch called the Timbrophilist. The first issue came out in July 1869, but it too had to strike sail in March 1870 after only nine issues⁽³⁹⁾.

Practically all the magazines from this period fall into the category of "House journals", i.e. they were published by a dealer or stamp firm. This applies without exception to all the leading journals of the time: a few, including the two oldest, the Monthly Intelligencer and the Monthly Advertiser, could be graded as "Independents". This group includes in particular all the journals that met with no success of which only a few issues were ever published. Obviously nothing can yet be said about Society journals in a period in which the number of societies could still be counted on the fingers of one hand⁽⁴⁰⁾. This makes it all the more remarkable that at least the first volume of the American Journal of Philately could appear as the official organ of the New York Philatelic Society.

For subsequent decades we must use more rigorous standards for selecting the journals worth a mention than we did for the first decade, otherwise the sheer mass of publications will cloud our gaze of the essential ones. After the somewhat unsound boom of the 1860's, the decade 1870 - 1879 initially showed a distinct falling off in interest, to which the Franco-German war of 1870/71 made an essential contribution in Central Europe.

Even in Great Britain, which was not affected by the war upheavals on the Continent, there was a falling-off in development. The Stamp Collector's Magazine ended its glorious existence in December 1874. The publisher Alfred Smith went on to start a new journal in January 1875, Alfred Smith and Sons' Monthly Circular, which "lasted" an amazingly long time - until 1920!, though in spite of such illustrious names as Overy Taylor (till 1878) W. A. S. Westoby (to 1899) and Bertram T. K. Smith as editors-in-chief, it never reached the importance of the Magazine, and was never much more than a "new issue guide and a price list" as Butler pertinently remarked. As a rule the paper only contained 2 - 4 pages of text and a further 4 - 12 pages of announcements. B. T. K. Smith again produced an index for the years 1875-1910 (Nos.529-35) and then the paper was taken over by A. H. Harris, who retained the old numbering and went on issuing it as Stamp Collector's Monthly Circular (1920/21) and Stamp Collector's Monthly Journal even into 1922⁽⁴¹⁾.

Something quite different happened to The Philatelic Journal started by Edward L. Pemberton in 1872. Because of his poor health, it only lasted a year: a fresh start-up in 1875 floundered for the same reason⁽⁴²⁾. This was without question a great loss to philately, since in the few issues it attained 16 in all - the Philatelic Journal cast everything else on the market into the shade. It was devoted above all to philatelists above a certain level of experience. The same applies to The Philatelic Quarterly and Miscellaneous Advertiser, which Stafford Smith published as a successor to The Philatelist from January 1877 - July 1879. The editor was again Dr. Ch. Viner and each issue contained between 42 and 80 pages, in sharp contrast to the skimpier Monthly Circular from Alfred Smith, but the life of the substantial journal was only 2½ years, whereas the Circular with all its deficiencies went on for nearly 50 years.

The English Journal of Philately edited by John D. Hamlyn also failed to survive for very long. Nominally a monthly since 1877, Nos.14 - 21 (1879) actually consisted of only three issues, after which the end soon came. Much longer-lived, even though not so valuable, was The Philatelic Monthly (from 1892 The Philatelic Monthly and World), which with a compass of only 4 - 8 sides per number appeared every month for a good 25 years (1875 - 1899). In 1901 two straggler issues appeared, so that a total of 302 numbers were published⁽⁴³⁾. The Stamp Collectors' Journal published from November 1878 by C. H. Nunn also aimed at a wider readership. This must have been the first "Independent" journal that also achieved some commercial success, since it did not cease publication till 1901 after 243 issues. From the philatelic standpoint it had little to offer, but not much was to be expected when the price was only one penny per issue - even the Circular cost around four pence⁽⁴⁴⁾.

The most important paper of the decade 1870 - 1880 was however without doubt The Philatelic Record. Edward Loines Pemberton had the idea for it, but the first number of February 1879 could only print his obituary. The Record ran to 36 volumes, and appeared for the last time in December 1914: it too did not manage to get by without gladdening the hearts of bibliographers by the ritual change in format: in 1896 (Volume 18) it went from its previous octavo to a quarto format. The first 16 volumes had the photograph (!) of a well-known philatelist at the front, and so many of the illustrations in the present book are taken from the Philatelic Record. The Record was without doubt the leading British journal of the 1880's and early 1890's, and one of the world's most important philatelic periodical publications, in the striking words of L. N. Williams. The first editor was Maitland Burnett, who at the same time filled the post of Honorary Secretary of the London (later Royal) Philatelic Society; from Volumes 8 - 17 it was edited by W. A. S. Westoby (Figure 16), from Volumes 18 - 23 by E. J. Nankivell, and finally it passed into the hands of W. Dorning Beckton (Figure 217), all famous names in British philately⁽⁴⁵⁾.

The close connection of Maitland with the London Philatelic Society explains why the Record also acted as a sort of “House journal” for the Society, on whose meetings it reported fully and regularly. Its list of authors reads, according to Butler, like a “Roll of distinguished philatelists” for those years: Bacon, Castle, Diena, Earée, Evans, Philbrick, Tapling, etc. In 1890 the English dealer Th. Buhl - he was naturally of German descent - bought the firm of Pemberton, Wilson & Co., and with it the Record for £13,500. This led to problems, since Buhl had been publishing his own monthly The Stamp News since 1882, and kept it going alongside the Record for a time, but finally closed it down in 1895⁽⁴⁶⁾. With the appearance of Gibbons Stamp Monthly and the London Philatelist the Record lost some of its importance, but during the 1880’s it was the undisputed flagship of British philately. At the Paris Exhibition of 1889, the Record was awarded the highest distinction given in the literature section: a vermeil medal.

There was very little going on in France during the 1870’s. The best French magazine, the Timbrophile from Pierre Mahé, had to furl its sails in December 1871. Very soon afterwards Mahé started a new one, La Gazette des Timbres, which however never reached the same level as Timbrophile. The first issue appeared in July 1872: at first it was lucky to have the vigorous co-operation of Dr. A. Legrand, who took over the editorship officially in 1873 and raised the Gazette to a high level, but at the end of 1874 he withdrew from the Gazette to devote himself to editing the Bulletin de la Société Française de Timbrologie and after that the quality of the magazine fell off rapidly, since Mahé obviously could not find the time for intensive editorial work. The size per issue was reduced from 8 to 4 pages, and the contents were restricted essentially to a “chronicle of new issues”. Numbers 9 - 12 of the fourth volume actually consisted of a single 8 page issue, so that its end in December 1876 was a happy release⁽⁴⁷⁾. The magazine L’Ami des Timbres has already been mentioned in the chapter on catalogues, since up to half of it (4 pages) listed new issues, and the other half was a catalogue in continuations that were always being started afresh: this enterprise lasted almost 30 years, from January 1874 to July 1902⁽⁴⁸⁾.

